Leiden Indo-European Etymological Dictionary Series

Edited by Alexander Lubotsky

VOLUME 10/1

Etymological Dictionary of Greek

By

Robert Beekes

With the assistance of

Lucien van Beek

VOLUME ONE

BRILL

LEIDEN • BOSTON
2010

This publication has been made possible by the financial support of the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO).

This book is printed on acid-free paper.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Beekes, R. S. P. (Robert Stephen Paul) Etymological dictionary of Greek / by Robert Beekes ; with the assistance of Lucien van Beek.
p. cm. — (Leiden Indo-European etymological dictionary series ; v. 10/1-2) Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 978-90-04-17418-4 (hardback : alk. paper) 1. Greek language—Etymology—Dictionaries. I. Beek, Lucien van. II. Title.
PA422.B44 2010
482.03—dc22
2009036652

ISSN: 1574-3586
ISBN Set: 978 90 04 17418 4
ISBN Volume One: 978 90 04 17420 7

PRINTED IN THE NETHERLANDS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

VOLUME ONE

VOLUME TWO

PREFACE

Whoever takes up the task of writing a new etymological dictionary of Greek, has to depart from the existing dictionaries. The present dictionary, too, owes a great deal to previous work in the field, especially to the excellent dictionaries of Hjalmar Frisk and Pierre Chantraine.

Apart from compiling the first comprehensive etymological dictionary of Greek in the English language and incorporating the most recent scholarly literature on Greek etymology, there were a number of other reasons why a new dictionary seemed to be a desideratum. In the preface to his dictionary, Frisk expressed doubts on three points: 1. the laryngeal theory; 2. Mycenaean; and 3. the Pelasgian theory on the Greek substrate language. Ironically, it is precisely on these three points that substantial progress has been made in the last decades, so that we can now be much more confident in these areas.

1. Frisk felt uneasy about the laryngeals. In the preface (p. vi) he wrote: "Für die griechische Etymologie fällt sowieso die Laryngaltheorie (...) nicht schwer ins Gewicht". I have been acquainted with the problems of the laryngeal theory since the start of my academic career (see my dissertation, Beekes 1969), and I vividly remember how the chaotic spectrum of theories and hypotheses discouraged many people in the beginning.

Since the 1980's, the situation has changed dramatically. When Bammesberger's Die Laryngaltheorie appeared (Bammesberger (ed.) 1988), there had already been general consensus on the main rules of development of the laryngeals in Greek and in other Indo-European languages. It is absolutely clear now that the development of the laryngeals is essential for understanding Greek etymology. Chantraine's Dictionnaire étymologique de la langue grecque (DELG) often does not give reconstructions with laryngeals either; as a consequence, many of the etymologies still defended in his dictionary are clearly untenable within the framework of the laryngeal theory. It must be admitted, however, that many of these deficiencies have been remedied in the Supplement (DELG Supp.), which often contains very helpful contributions.

2. The study of Mycenaean has by now become an integral part of Greek studies. The Mycenaean material was already accepted by Chantraine and incorporated into DELG. I have tried to include all Mycenaean data with a reasonably certain interpretation, provided that these data have a bearing on the etymological interpretation of classical Greek. Personal names are generally excluded from the discussion, as their interpretation is often too uncertain to base any conclusions on.

The task of incorporating Mycenaean data was not too difficult, since we have the excellent Diccionario Micénico (1985-1993) by Aura Jorro at our disposal. Although the Mycenaean material is limited, it is of great importance and should always be taken ito account. The exact attestations of the Mycenaean words are usually not cited, as they can easily be traced in Aura Jorro's dictionary.

3. It is now clear that the Pelasgian theory, which started from the assumption that there was an Indo-European substrate in Greek, has been a completely unfruitful and wrong approach. Although Frisk doubted this theory, he nevertheless consistently referred to Pelasgian throughout the dictionary. This is a pity, because the theory has yielded no positive results. Chantraine often used the vague terms 'achéen' or 'mediterranéen', without clearly identifying Greek substrate words in this way.

In the present dictionary, no reference to the Pelasgian theory is made anymore. Instead, I have extensively used Furnée's 1972 book, who meticulously studied the substrate material and concluded that we are dealing with loanwords from a single non-Indo-European language. Unfortunately, this work has been neglected or rejected by most scholars without due argumentation. In order to explain the principles of Furnée's work and to present his conclusions, as well as my own findings from recent years, I have written a special introduction to Pre-Greek (as I call the substrate language), see pp. xiii-xlii. Throughout the dictionary, much attention is paid to the Pre-Greek material, and one of my main goals was to generate a collection of substrate words which would be as complete as possible. I intend to publish a separate work, containing all certain or probable Pre-Greek etyma, in the coming years.

The dictionaries of Frisk and Chantraine are different in their orientation. Whereas Chantraine is more oriented towards the philological study of Greek (as follows from the subtitle Histoire des mots), Frisk focuses on the Indo-European side of Greek etymology. In fact, it may be fair to say that Frisk to some extent tried to produce not an etymological dictionary of Greek only, but of Greek and Indo-European at the same time. The main focus of the present dictionary is also etymology, rather than philology.

I started working on the project in 2002. At first, the idea was to produce an updated English translation of Frisk in the framework of the Indo-European Etymological Dictionary project. While largely maintaining the philological part of the entries, I modernized old reconstructions, added new ones from the literature, and rejected older etymologies in the light of the substrate theory. Furthermore, many new entries have been incorporated, most of them glosses by Hesychius, which were gleaned from DELG, from Furnée's book and from the new 2005 edition of Hesychius (part III, Π-Σ).

Gradually, I have come to the conclusion that a much more rigorous approach was necessary: there is simply too much irrelevant and dated literature in Frisk's dictionary, and many of his pre-laryngealist reconstructions are now useless. Also, research interest in Indo-European studies has shifted considerably over the course of decades. It was therefore decided to completely reorganize the etymological treatment of the entries.

The rigorous editing of the etymological sections of the dictionary was done by Lucien van Beek. He integrated my own views with traditional etymologies and recent insights. In those cases where a word can now be proven to be of Pre-Greek origin, part of the old reasoning has sometimes been retained in order to illustrate the flaws in the traditional approach, according to which practically every word is bound to have an Indo-European etymology.

Structure of the entry

After the lemma, grammatical information is given between square brackets, for instance, δύρομαι [v.] 'to lament, bewail', or ἔγκατα [n.pl.] 'intestines'. If it is unknown (for instance, in a gloss), this may be indicated with a query.

The grammatical information is followed by the meaning of the word. For most of the glosses, an English translation has been provided. Although this is a major break with tradition in Classical Studies, I consider it to be convenient for specialists in other Indo-European languages than Greek. Of course, in many cases a gloss can be ambiguous, but I hope to have been sufficiently prudent in the translations.

At the end of the first paragraph, I give the origin of the word (in abbreviated form) between two arrowheads. The abbreviations must be understood as follows:

◂IE▸ There is a good Indo-European (IE) etymology. The IE root is reconstructed, and in most cases also the formation represented by the Greek etymon. If there are no cognates, but the Greek word looks Indo-European, a reconstruction has sometimes been proposed, too.
◂IE?▸ An Indo-European etymology exists for the entry concerned, but it is not entirely convincing.
◂GR▸ The word was coined in the more recent (pre)history of Greek, and consists of one or more (possibly) inherited elements; however, the formation as a whole was certainly not inherited from IE.
◂PG▸ The word certainly belongs to the Pre-Greek substrate language. The reason for this decision may be indicated with (V), which means that there are formal variants, or with (S) if the word contains a suffix characteristic for Pre-Greek.
◂PG?▸ The word may be Pre-Greek (see above on (V) and (S)).
◂LW▸ A loanword. The donor language is indicated in abbreviated form, e.g.
◂LW Sem.▸ = a loanword from Semitic.
◂EUR▸ A loanword from (one of) the European substrate language(s). Such words are not reconstructible for PIE, but share similarities with words from other European language families (Germanic, Italo-Celtic, Balto-Slavic) that must be due to substrate influence.
◂ONOM▸ An onomatopoeic word.
◂?▸ No good etymology exists, or the etymology is unknown.

The philological information is subdivided into sections in order to make the presentation more transparent:

•VAR Inflectional forms and phonological variants.
•DIAL Dialectal forms. Mycenaean is mostly given in the (approximate) phonological transcription.
•COMP Compounds (only the most common or etymologically relevant compounds are given).
•DER Derivatives.
•ETYM Etymological discussion.

The Proto-Indo-European reconstructions

The reconstructions in this book follow some conventions which deviate from common usage. Let me mention the most important ones:

a) PIE had no phoneme *a. Whenever *a appears in a reconstruction, the stage of language should always be understood as post-PIE.

b) In IE reconstructions, vocalization of resonants and laryngeals is as a rule not indicated, since the consonantal and vocalic allophones were not phonologized in the proto-language. Thus, for the PIE pre-form of βαίνω, I write *g^{w}m-ie/o-. Whenever vocalization is indicated, i.e. *g^{w}m̥-i̯e/o-, this is understood to be a post-PIE development.

c) I follow Kortlandt's theory of Balto-Slavic accentuation, and adopted his reconstruction of (pre-)glottalized consonants for PIE (see, for instance, on ἑκατόν and πεντήκοντα).

d) It should be noted that the term 'prothetic vowel' is used in this dictionary to indicate the vowel (mostly a-) that may or may not be present in Pre-Greek substrate words. In inherited words, a facultative prothetic vowel is not reconstructed any more since it contradicts the laryngeal theory.

Bibliographical references

Within the limited amount of time available for this project, it proved impossible to modernize all references and to check all reference works. It was necessary, therefore, to make certain strategic choices. It was decided to concentrate on the etymologically relevant publications and to adjust the philological treatment of the material only sporadically.

The second editions of reference works, such as Lejeune's Phonétique historique (1972) and Risch's Wortbildung (1974) have been systematically consulted. I have generally maintained references to Chantraine Formation, as this book contains a very concise and precise overview of the different suffixed nominal formations in Greek.

In contrast to Frisk's dictionary, references to works on specific morphological topics have been left out. For instance, for a derivation in -σύνη, Frisk often refers to Wyss's 1954 book. Other such works, to which the reader can refer, are: Redard 1949 (-ίτης), Boßhardt 1942 (-εύς), Fraenkel 1910 (agent nouns), Benveniste 1948 (agent and action nouns), and, more recently, Leukart 1994 (suffix -τᾱς, -ᾱς).

Furthermore, references to the dictionaries of individual languages have largely been omitted. Most references to Walde-Hoffmann (Latin), Vasmer (Russian), Fraenkel (Lithuanian), etc. are superfluous in a Greek etymological dictionary. It is understood that the reader who wants to know more about the cognates in a given branch will find his way to the relevant dictionaries. References to Mayrhofer's KEWA have been retained in some instances, because it often contains more details than the EWAia. The LIV^2 has proven to be a very important work of reference for all verbal roots, even if I very often disagree with details of their analysis.

References to Strömberg's Pflanzennamen and Fischnamen have been maintained, as well as to Thompson's Glossary of Greek fishes. Unfortunately, it has not been possible to adjust all references concerning Greek religion to recent works such as Burkert 1985.

Regarding the epigraphic material, no systematic check has been made of the SEG.

Acknowledgements

A new etymological dictionary of a language like Greek cannot be written in a few years by just one person, without the help of others. Many people helped me on various stages of the project.

First of all, I am greatly indebted to Lucien van Beek for editing, correcting and proofreading the whole volume containing about 7500 entries over the course of more than two years. Several others assisted him in this work, sacrificing many weeks of their spare time: Alwin Kloekhorst, Guus Kroonen, Michael Peyrot, Tijmen Pronk, and especially Michiel de Vaan. Needless to say, it is I who remain responsible for all views expressed in this dictionary, and for any mistakes in it.

I am very grateful to Alexander Lubotsky, who proofread a large part of the dictionary, and spent a lot of time and effort in formatting the manuscript. Dr. Velizar Sadovsky (Vienna) has been so kind to write many macros for generating indices and bibliography and to proofread some parts of the manuscript. I am indebted to Dr. Thomas Olander (Copenhagen) for solving various font problems.

I would like to thank the students of our department – Kristen de Joseph, Marijn van Putten, Simon Mulder and Alain Corbeau – for technical assistance. Kristen de Joseph further copy-edited the manuscript. Marijn van Putten and Simon Mulder helped compiling the bibliography.

PRE-GREEK LOANWORDS IN GREEK

Contents:

A. Introduction

The substrate language of Greek will be called 'Pre-Greek' in this dictionary; this is a translation of the German term 'das Vorgriechische'. No written texts exist in this language, but it is known from a considerable number of loanwords in Greek.

The study of Pre-Greek has had an unfortunate history. In the past century, it was called 'Pelasgian' and considered a dialect of Indo-European. This idea fascinated scholars, and research concentrated on this proposal. But the whole idea was clearly wrong, and by now, it is generally agreed that the substrate was non-Indo-European. Therefore, the term 'Pelasgian' can no longer be used. Frisk already had strong doubts about the Pelasgian theory, but nevertheless, he often mentioned the proposals of its adherents. Since all work following this line has turned out to be useless, I decided to make no mention of the theory anymore in the dictionary.

When Frisk completed his dictionary in 1972, Furnée's book 'Die wichtigsten konsonantischen Erscheinungen des Vorgriechischen', which was his dissertation written under the supervision of F.B.J. Kuiper, had just appeared. It was an elaboration of Kuiper's 1956 study on Greek substrate words, which opened a new chapter in the research of the field. Furnée rejected the Pelasgian theory, too (see especially op. cit. pp. 40-55).

Furnée's book met with fierce criticism and was largely neglected. In my view, this was a major mistake in Greek scholarship. True, some of his identifications are improbable, and his repeated claim that certain forms were expressive leads nowhere. What remains, however, is that he studied a great number of relevant forms and drew obvious conclusions from them. Pre-Greek words often show a type of variation which is not found in inherited words. It is self-evident that this variation must be studied, and this is what Furnée did. It has turned out (as Kuiper had already shown) that this variation shows certain recurrent patterns and can be used to recognize Pre-Greek elements.

Furnée's book is not easy to use: every form is discussed at three or four places, each time in a different context, so that it may be difficult to find out what his point really is. On the other hand, his treatment is very careful, and there hardly any obvious mistakes. I found a number of cases which he had not recognized (e.g. πτωχός), but this does not change the fact that his book was the best collection at the time. Furnée worked on it for twenty years, and even now it is the only hand-book on the subject. The short overview which follows below is based on Furnée's material and on my own research of more than thirty years.[1]

Furnée went astray in two respects. First, he considered almost all variation to be of an expressive character, which is certainly wrong: it is evident that the variation found is due to the adaptation of words (or phonemes) of a foreign language to Greek. We shall see below that many variants can be understood in this way. Secondly, Furnée was sometimes overzealous in his search for inner-Greek correspondences. Many of Furnée's discoveries are brilliant (see s.v. δορύκνιον for an example), but sometimes he went too far: not every alternation necessarily points to Pre-Greek origin. The author can hardly be blamed for his enthusiasm. He was exploring new ground, and it can only be expected that he sometimes overplayed his hand.

[1] Since Kuiper was my supervisor as well, I was acquainted with the book from the very beginning (see my review in Lingua 36, 1975).

Several scholars were baffled by Furnée's proposals and hence rejected the whole book altogether. His method, however, was correct and I have only filtered out the improbable suggestions. In many cases, of course, we cannot be absolutely certain, but this cannot be an objection. Except for a very small number of cases, Furnée's material does consist of Pre-Greek words. His index contains 4400 words, and taking into account that many of these words concern derivatives and variants, as well as a few Indo-European words, I estimate that Furnée's book discusses some 1000 Pre-Greek etyma.[2]

In general, I have given only a few personal names and toponyms, and no material of this kind from outside Greece and Asia Minor. The comparison with Basque or Caucasian languages has not been considered in this dictionary, as this is not my competence; it is likely that there are such connections, but this must be left to other scholars.

My suggested reconstructions are not essential. One may ignore them and just consider the variation itself. These variants are often explained as incidental phenomena (assimilation, influence of other words, etc.), and such explanations may be sometimes correct, but if we know that some variants frequently occur, we will have to consider Pre-Greek origin. Existing etymological dictionaries often seem to avoid the conclusion that a word is a substrate element. It is remarkable that Chantraine was quite aware of the problem in his Formation, but in his dictionary he often withdrew his earlier evaluation (which in my view was correct). It looks as if substrate elements were not welcome there.

The relationship with Anatolian languages is a separate problem. A Greek word is often called a loan from an Anatolian language, while it may just as well be borrowed from the Pre-Greek substrate. It is generally accepted, on the basis of toponyms, that there was a language which was once spoken both in Greece and in western Asia Minor.[3] In most cases, however, it is impossible to distinguish between substrate words and loans from Asia Minor (the latter are from a later date). A word may have been adopted through commerce, as often happens between two neighboring countries, or starting from the time when Greeks settled in Asia Minor, probably as early as the 15th century. From a methodological point of view, I think it is better to consider such words as Pre-Greek, and to define them as loanwords from an Anatolian language only when there is reason to do so. Still, it is clear that we may often make mistakes here. A case in point is τολύπη 'clew, ball of wool ready for spinning'. The word is clearly related to Luwian and Hitt. taluppa/i- 'lump, clod'. The Greek word is typical of Pre-Greek words: the structure CaC-up- (with a appearing as o before u) and the absence of an Indo-European etymology (Melchert Orpheus 8 (1998): 47-51 is not convincing) imply that the word is Pre-Greek or Pre-Anatolian. On the other hand, 'clew' is not a word that is easily brought from overseas; it is an everyday word that the speakers of Greek and Anatolian must have picked up not far from home. I completely agree with Furnée's interpretation (35[33]) that the word was brought to Greece by settlers from Anatolia who spoke the language, which, from another perspective, we call Pre-Greek. In other words, τολύπη is a loan from an Anatolian language, but this (probably non-Indo-European) language was also spoken in large parts of Greece before the Greeks (speaking an Indo-European language) arrived there.

[2] Note that Furnée often adduces new material that is not mentioned in the current etymological dictionaries, mostly glosses from Hesychius.

[3] A point for further study is to establish how far to the east such related names can be found. It is my impression that these names can be found as far south as Cilicia.

It is essential to realize that substrate words are a frequent phenomenon. One may regret this (for instance, from the Indo-Europeanist point of view), but this is irrelevant; the existence of Pre-Greek words is simply a fact that has to be accepted. To me, it is fascinating that in this way we can learn something about the oldest language of Europe (including Anatolia), of which we otherwise have no evidence.

The 'Pelasgian' theory has done much harm, and it is time to forget it. The latest attempt was Heubeck's 'Minoisch-Mykenisch' (discussed by Furnée 55-66), where the material was reduced to some ten words; the theory has by now been tacitly abandoned.

B. Phonology

1. The phonemic system of Pre-Greek

Voiceless, voiced and aspirated stops may interchange in Pre-Greek words, without any apparent conditioning factors. This fact shows that voice and aspiration were not distinctive features in Pre-Greek.[4] On the other hand, the Linear B signs (graphemes) for rjo, rja and tja show that palatalization probably was distinctive. This is confirmed by the sign pte (e.g. in ra-pte-re /ʰrapteres/ with the agent suffix -ter-), which must go back to an earlier p^ye. In the Pre-Greek material, such a phoneme may underlie examples like θάπτα. One may wonder whether κροσσόφθον points to $p^y > pt$, which was realized with aspiration. Further, the signs two, twe, dwo, dwe, nwa, swa, swi, point to labialization as a distinctive feature, i.e. t^wo, t^we, d^wo, d^we, n^wa, s^wa, s^wi. Note that palatal and labial forms of graphemes are found both with resonants and stops, which is a phenomenon alien to Indo-European languages. The existence of labiovelars is confirmed by qa-si-re-u = βασιλεύς, etc. (see further Beekes Glotta 73 (1995/6): 12f.). We may thus posit the following system[5]:

p	p^y	p^w
t	t^y	t^w
k	k^y	k^w
s	s^y	s^w
r	r^y	r^w
l	l^y	l^w
m	m^y	m^w
n	n^y	n^w

[4] Of course, it could be due to the fact that a different distinction was present in Pre-Greek (like fortis / lenis, found in most Anatolian languages), but no obvious distribution pointing in this direction can be discerned in the material.

[5] Note that I distinguish between palatals of Pre-Greek origin, which are indicated by a superscript y (e.g. k^y), and palatovelars of Indo-European origin.

Of course, it is possible that one or more of the posited phonemes did not occur in Pre-Greek (e.g., m^y is a rare sound in the languages of the world).

We can now use this insight in explaining the surfacing Greek forms. Thus, δάφνη / δαυχν(α)- can now be explained from a Pre-Greek form *dak^wn-.[6] In the former form, the labiovelar yields a labial stop φ. In the latter, it is rendered by -υχ-, with anticipation of the labial feature, while the labiovelar turns up as a velar, possibly by dissimilation from uk^w. Again, note that aspiration is not phonemic in Pre-Greek. It is very important to note that we cannot predict how a Pre-Greek form will surface in Greek: sometimes a stop turns up as an aspirate, sometimes as a voiced stop (e.g. αἰπύς / ἄφαρ, see B 5.1. below). As a consequence, it may happen that there is a large number of variants, but it may also be that there are no variants at all.

As a second example, we may also understand αὐχήν / Lesb. ἄμφην from a pre-form *$ank^w\bar{e}n$. The latter form is directly understandable, with φ from the labiovelar. The first form went through *$an^wk\bar{e}n$ or *$a^wnk\bar{e}n$, giving αὐχήν with loss of the nasal (a development known from Armenian). Perhaps, a scenario *$ak^w\bar{e}n$ > αὐχήν is also possible, with a prenasalized form *$ank^w\bar{e}n$ (> ἄμφην) beside *$ak^w\bar{e}n$.[7] Such interpretations may be wrong in individual cases, but this is no reason not to try. On the other hand, variation that is strange from an exclusively Indo-European point of view becomes understandable in this way, starting as we do from a limited set of assumptions.

The existence of palatalized phonemes in Pre-Greek may explain a number of other developments. Thus, I assume that a geminate λλ may continue Pre-Greek *l^y. We know that IE *ly gave λλ in Greek, but if a variant with single λ coexists, we are warned. For example, the name Ἀχιλλεύς has a variant Ἀχιλεύς with one λ. And although the latter only occurs in Homer, this fact points to Pre-Greek origin. The variant was preserved because it was metrically convenient, it was not created for metrical purposes. Of course, the fact that there was more variation at an earlier date is what we expect. As far as the other palatalized resonants are concerned, an^y may have given αιν, ar^y may have given αιρ (or also ειρ with coloring of the vowel, see section C2 below on the suffixes), etc. We have -αιρ-, -αιν- but no *-αιλ- in Pre-Greek words. This is confirmed by the fact that geminate λλ is very frequent (Fur. 387), whereas geminate ρρ, νν and μμ are much less frequent, or even rare.

In a similar fashion, *as^y may have yielded either -αισ- or -ασ-, cf. κάβαισος, which has a v.l. κάβασος. In rendering such a foreign word, the palatalization may have been represented at one time, and may have been neglected at another. This phenomenon was the main cause of variation in Pre-Greek forms. The interpretation is further confirmed by the parallel development of labialized consonants. Thus, I suppose that ar^{w} resulted in -α(υ)ρ- (see the section on the suffixes). In this way, we may understand καλαῦροψ beside κολόροβον from a pre-form kalar^{w}-op-. Another form which shows the remarkable interchange α/αυ is ἀρασχάδες / αὐροσχάς. Here one might assume a pre-form ar*^{w}ask-at-. Note that the labial element would at the same time explain the o as a variant of a in both cases. A similar mechanism must be at the basis of the etymon ἄλοξ, αὖλαξ, ὦλαξ, εὐλάκᾱ, which is hopeless from an Indo-European point of view. I assume that all forms go back on Pre-Greek al*^{w}-ak-. It gives αὐλακ- through anticipation, ἄλοκ- through coloring. In this way, the first two forms, which are best attested, are directly clear. Further, αυ/ευ/ω interchange frequently, which explains ὦλαξ and εὐλάκα; ὀλοκ- is not problematic either, as both /a/'s were colored to [o] by the labialized resonant. Only the Homeric accusative ὦλκα is hopeless: it is the only form that has no vowel between λ and κ, and therefore may be due to some accident of the tradition. This is a problem that has not been solved yet.

[6] Although I assume that voice was not distinctive in Pre-Greek, I do write d- in this case, because only δ- surfaces in Greek. We must avoid losing information present in the Greek forms. Thus, my notation of Pre-Greek forms is heuristic to a certain degree, and not always consistent with the phonemic system I tentatively reconstruct here.

[7] On prenasalization, see B5.2. below. As an alternative, an Indo-European etymology starting with the root *h_2emg^h- 'to tie, betroth', can be offered; see the dictionary (although I prefer the analysis given here).

I do not know whether a diphthong is allowed in suffixes of the structure VC, cf. the forms in -αιϝος. Structurally, one could think of -ay^{w}-, or even -aw^{y}-, but such sounds are rather rare in the languages of the world. An instance of -αι- due to a palatalized consonant is ἐξαίφνης / ἐξαπίνης / ἄφνω (a brilliant combination by Fur. 158, etc.), which must contain -ap^{y}- (the palatalization was ignored in the last form). Comparable to the development in ἐξαπίνης is κνώψ / κινώπετον, from k^{y}n- with ι representing palatalization, cf. Beekes 2008. Likewise, I assume that πινυτός beside πνυτός points to p*^{y}nut-. Perhaps, we must interpret σιωπάω as s*^{y}ōp- because of εὐσωπία. An interesting case is λίμινθες· ἕλμινθες, for which I assume l*^{y}m- beside al*^{y}m- with prothetic a (see B3 below on the prothetic vowel).

A palatalized consonant could color a to e. A good example is κύπαρος, κύπαιρος, but also κύπερος, κύπειρος, where we have all possible variants due to the palatalized consonant. Compare further Κάβαρνοι next to Κάβειροι. Likewise, we have ζακελτίς next to ζεκελτίς 'κολόκυνται', where the interchange occurs after ζ from earlier palatalized t^{y}. διφθέρα beside διψάρα may have had -pt^{y}-; ἔλ(λ)οψ next to ἀλ(λ)άβης goes back to al*^{y}ap-, with the common variation a / o before a labial. A clear example is λασιτός with, next to it, λεσιτός and λάσται, λάσταυρος. It may be interpreted as representing PG las*^{y}t-.

Kuiper Lingua 21 (1968): 269-277 pointed out that the substrate language had labiovelars. He especially pointed to θαλυκρός next to ἐθάλυψα, θάλπω. I added a few remarks in Beekes Glotta 73 (1995/6): 12f. From Mycenaean, we have a-to-ro-qo (ἄνθρωπος) and qe-to (πίθος), Mo-qo-so (Μόψος), qi-si-pe-e (the dual of ξίφος). Further there is A-i-ti-jo-qo (gen. Αἰθίοπος), ὀφθαλμός with the variants ὄκταλλος and ὀπτίλ(λ)ος, which cannot be explained from Indo-European. Instead of ξίφος, we would perhaps expect ψίφος. So the developments are largely as those of Greek, but not completely.

Pre-Greek probably had a /y/ and a /w/. Initial ya- presumably often lost its y-, but it may sometimes be represented by ἰα- as in ἴαμβος, Ἰᾱ́σων. The ending -υια may have been -uy-a (a Pre-Greek y may have had a different development from y in inherited words). In the same way, -αια may derive from PG -ay-a* with a variant -εια, cf. Πηνελόπεια. Perhaps, the y disappeared in some cases, giving γαῖα beside γᾶ (see below on the suffix -αι- / -ε(ι)-).

Initial w- was often lost (ἄναξ), but wa- may also have been rendered by οα-, as in Ὀαξός beside Cret. ϝαξός. The same holds for Ὀϊλεύς, which has been considered to be identical with the root of Ἶλος). We find υα- (which became ὑα-) in ὑάκινθος, Cret. ϝάκινθος. Fur. 377 assumes a prothetic υ- in the latter word, but this seems improbable to me. Another example may be ὕα/ελος. The differences are probably due to the date at which the word was borrowed and depend on whether the Greek dialect concerned still had a ϝ at that time. Another treatment can be found in the word for 'truffle', for which we find οὔιτον, οἴδνον (also -τν-), ὕδνον (also -τν-), or ἴτον. These are probably all renderings of wit-. (Fur. 184 again assumes a prothetic vowel, ϝιτ- / ὀϝιτ-, which does not seem to be the right solution. He further assumes a variation wit- / wut-, which also seems improbable to me, though the variation ι / υ is attested.) Rather, υ- is a form of οι-, with the -ο- changed under influence of the -ι- (cf. Lejeune 1972: 174, and note that Greek did not allow -υι- before consonants; of course, οι became υ in Boeotian in the 3rd c. BC; variation οι / υ is found in more Pre-Greek words). This case nicely shows that variation in Pre-Greek words is due to different rendering of the sounds of a foreign language, and therefore has to be taken seriously. βράκαλον· ῥόπαλον (H.) probably attests a development wrak-* > βρακ- (as Fur. 147 remarks on καλαῦροψ: "Die landläufige Etymologie <connecting> ῥέπω ... ist wohl ohne weiteres aufzugeben."). σορόα· παλιούρου εἶδος 'sorb-apple' (H.) continues sorw-* (cf. Lat. sorbus, Fr. sorbier, Fur. 230).

It seems that there was no initial aspiration in Pre-Greek. Furnée has a few words with ἁ-, ἑ- (one or two with ἱ-; none with ὁ-, ἡ-, ὡ-). Several of these are doubtful; best is αἱμασιά (αἱμοί). One might conclude that the language had no h. This would agree with the fact that aspiration is not a distinctive feature in the stops. However, this conclusion is remarkable for ἥρως, Ἕλληνες and Ἥφαιστος, which we expect to be Pre-Greek words (but note that Myc. a-pa-i-ti-jo does not have a$_2$-). Of course, aspiration may have been added secondarily in Greek in individual cases, cf. the variation in ἄφθα / ἅφθα and ἐλεδώνη / ἑλεδώνη, which is a variant of δελεδώνη. However, Prof. Ruijgh pointed out to me that Mycenaean had toponyms (a$_2$-ra-tu-wa) and personal names (a$_2$-ku-mi-jo) with initial h-; it also occurs in inlaut (pi-a$_2$-la, ko-ri-a$_2$-da-na); cf. further e-ma-a$_2$ (/Hermāhās/ 'Hermes').

Originally, I thought that Pre-Greek only had three vowels: a, i, u. The Greek words concerned often have ε and ο, but this would not be surprising, as the three vowels have a wide phonetic range, and the phoneme /a/ may have sounded like [e] or [o] in many environments. The main reason for me to assume this simple three-vowel system was the fact that the system of suffixes has a, i, u, but not e, o. We have -αγ-, -ιγ-, -υγ-; prenasalized -αγγ-, -ιγγ-, -υγγ-; likewise -αθ-, -ιθ-, -υθ-; and prenasalized -ανθ-, -ινθ-, -υνθ-, but no forms with -εγ(γ)-, -ογ(γ)-, etc. The only cases I noticed are Ῥήσκονθος and ὄλονθος (but as a variant of ὄλυνθος), and μηλολόνθη with a variant μηλ(ολ)άνθη.

Recently, I have become more inclined to assume a system with the usual five vowels, because there seems to be a distinction between the two variations α / ε and α / ο, on the one hand, and a stable, not interchanging α, on the other. This would point to a system with a, e and o. On the other hand, it is difficult to explain why the suffixes do not show the same variation that we find in the root vowels.

It is essential that the palatalized and labialized consonants colored an adjacent α to ε and ο, respectively. On the effects of palatalized consonants see Beekes 2008: 46-55. Fur. 340 has a rule α > ο before ο, ω, υ (e.g. καλυβός / κολυβός); this can now be understood as the o-like realization of /a/ before high rounded vowels in the following syllable (see 15.3.2).

So, e and o originally were variants of the phoneme /a/. It is difficult to establish whether they had already become full phonemes in Pre-Greek. A good illustration of the case is the name of Apollo. In Hittite, Appaliunas renders Apollon- (see Beekes JANER 3, 2003). We know that Greek originally had Ἀπελλ-, with -ε- arising from -a- before the palatalized lʸ. The -o- developed only later in Greek, but I assume that the Hittite form still shows the -a-. The Pre-Greek form was Apalʸun-.

I have long doubted (and still doubt) whether there was phonemic vowel length in Pre-Greek. Greek substrate words quite often only have a form with a long vowel. Vacillation is sometimes found, as in θρινάκη beside θρῖναξ (see B 6.2), and note ὄβριμος beside βρῖμός, βρῖμη. Quite a different argument is the following: ἄχυρον and πίτῡρον both mean 'chaff'; it is therefore probable that they contain the same suffix -υρ-; but in the first word the u is short, while it is long in the second.

Note that η often represents ᾱ (γᾱθυλλίς / γηθ-), and as our knowledge of the relevant dialects is rather limited, we often simply do not know whether η represents an older a or e. If we had not had Dor. σίδᾱρος, we would not have known that it contains an old ā. Also, Λῆμνος represents Λᾶμνος. There are well-known Pre-Greek words with η < *ē, like σπήλαιον.

I assume two diphthongs, ai and au. If there were no e and o, we do not expect other diphthongs. A diphthong ευ is rare (Fur. 353 Anm. 5; I found some 12 instances in the whole of Furnée's material); it interchanges with αυ. Fur. 339 Anm. 2) calls ει "(in mehreren Fällen) nur eine Nebenform von αι". Also, οι is rather rare, and we may find ου more often, but mostly interchanging with other vowels (see the remark on the suffix -ουρ-). See further section B6.1 on vowel variation.

Regarding the accentuation, I noted vacillation in: ἄβραμις / -μίς; αἰγώλιος / -ιός; ἄχυρος / -ός; ἄχωρ / ἀχώρ; κόρυδος / κορυδός; κορύδαλος / κορυδαλλός; μέδιμνος / μεδιμνός; σίκυος / σικυός; ὕρισχος / ὑρισσός. Note also the almost identical forms such as λυκαψός / λύκοψος. This does not imply that the language had no clear stress: the Greeks who adopted a word could simply have been uncertain about it. The phenomenon may, however, be important heuristically: such variation is very rare in inherited words.

2a. Characteristic sounds and sound groups

In Pre-Greek words, we find some sounds or clusters that are rare in PIE words. In brackets, I give the variants.

1. αυ: Of course, αυ does occur in PIE words, but only when it derives from h₂eu* (mostly in initial position) or eh₂u. Examples: βλαῦδες, βραύκας, γραύκαλας, κάναυστρον, κασαύρα, τραυξάνα; Λαβραυνδός.

2. β: As is well known, b* was rare in PIE. In Pre-Greek words, it seems to occur relatively often. Examples: ἄβλαροι, ἀβύρβηλος, ἀρβύλη, ἀτάρβακτος, βάρβιλος, θόρυβος, κίβαλος. It is frequently found word-initially. Of course, β may also go back to a Pre-Greek labiovelar (i.e. labialized velar): e.g. βασιλεύς, Myc. qa-si-re-u.

3. βδ: The cluster is possible in PIE words, but it is rare (see on β sub 2. above). Examples: ἄβδελλον, ἄβδηρα, ἄβδης, ἴβδης, αὐτο-κάβδαλος, κίβδηλος, κυβάβδα; Κομβδιλιπια.

4. γδ: Cf. Fur. 318[5]. There is nothing against PIE gd*, but it is infrequent. Of course, the group is reminiscent of βδ. Examples: ἄγδυς, ἀμυγδάλη, γδουπέω (cf. κτυπέω), ἴγδη, κρίγδανον, λύγδη.

5. γν: Example: ἰγνύς (ἰκνύς). On χν, φν, see the section on the suffixes.

6. δν: The sequence is rare in IE words. Examples: ἀκιδνός, ἀλαπαδνός, ἀράχιδνα, λεπαδνός (λα-), σίπυδνος; 'Αριάδνη.

7. κτ: The group is regular in PIE, but in Pre-Greek it is found with variants; see B5.5. Examples: ἀβίυκτον, βάκται, δίκτυ.

8. κχ: The group can hardly be of IE origin, but it is not frequent. I noted βάκχαρ, λάκχα, σάκχαρ, συκχάς; Βάκχος, Βρίακχος, Βύκχις. The group -κχ- is the geminate of χ. Cf. on πφ, τθ.

9. μν: The group is certainly possible in PIE words, but it is also frequent in Pre-Greek. Examples: ἀμφι-κέλεμνον, ϝεδιμνος, ἴαμνος, βασυμνιάτης, κρημνός, λάμνα, λωρυμνόν, μέριμνα, ῥόδαμνος, σίγυμνον, σίδριμνον; Ἀτύμνιος.

10. ου: The diphthong is perfectly IE, but it is found several times in Pre-Greek. I do not think that Pre-Greek had a diphthong -ou-, but it may have arisen from e.g. -arʷ-, which often surfaces as -ουρ-. Examples: σενδούκη, σκίουρος, στρουθός, τάγχουρος, τοῦφος, φάνδουρος, φοῦσκος, χλούνης.

11. πφ: The group can hardly be of PIE origin, but it is rare in Pre-Greek words, too. Like in the case of κχ, it is the geminate of φ. Examples: ἀρχιζάπφης (?); Σαπφώ (Ψαπφώ).

12. ρδ: On a morpheme boundary, the group is possible in PIE. Examples from Pre-Greek: ἀγέρδα, καπαρδεῦσαι, καρδαμάλη.

13. ρκν: A rare group, perhaps there is even no reason to speak of a group. Examples: ἄβαρκνα, βερκνίς.

14. ρν (variants ρδ, νδ): Examples: κίσιρνις (-νδ-), ἀχέρδα (-να), σκαπέρδα. See the section on the suffixes.

15. A σ occurs both word-initially and between vowels, where it has disappeared in most inherited words. Initial: σάρυττα, σαγύριον, σάναπτιν, σάνδαλον, σαρρυφθεῖν, σεκούα, σιβύνη, σίγυμνον. Intervocalic: ἀγασυλλίς, ἄγχουσα (ἔγχ-), αἴθουσ(σ)α, αἱμασιά, αἴσακος, ἄλεισον, δρόσος. After resonant: ἄλσος, βάλσαμον, γελσόν, γένσιμος, μάρσιππος (-υπιτος).

16. σβ: The group is hardly known from inherited words (σβέννυμι is problematic). Examples: ἄσβολος, θίσβη, Ἄσβετος. -σβ- may continue Pre-Greek -sg^w-: Myc. ti-qa-jo may stand for /thisg^{w}aios/ Θισβαῖος.

17. σγ: Again, this group is hardly known from IE words. It may sometimes continue -t^{y}g-, as in ἀμυσγέλᾱ, Ἀσγελάτας (see 5.5). Examples: ἀλισγέω, ὑσγίνη, φάσγανον, ἀσγάνδης, πισγίς.

18. σκ, στ: These groups are well known from IE, but mostly in word initial position. See section B5.5. Examples: βέσκεροι, βύσταξ, κύστεροι, λασταγεῖ.

19. στλ: Though the cluster contains nothing that could not be IE, it occurs more often in substrate words. Examples: ἄστλιγγες, στλεγγίς.

20. τθ: The group can hardly be of PIE origin. In Pre-Greek, it is a variant of ττ and σσ (see 5.5). Sometimes, it is clearly the geminate of θ: Ἀτθίς beside Ἀθήνη. Further examples: ἰτθέλα, κότθυβος, Πετθαλοί.

21. φθ: The cluster is possible in inherited words. Example: νάσκαφθον.

22. χμ, χν: Rather rare in IE; Fur. 110 assumes that the nasal caused the aspiration. Examples: δαυχμός, δαυχνα-, σαυχμόν.

23. Frisk gives some seventy lemmas with ψ-. Many words are clearly Pre-Greek, and there are no convincing Indo-European etymologies. That many of these words are of substrate origin is also clear from the fact that there are variants with σ-. Apparently, Pre-Greek did not have any difficulty with ps-, as Greek has so many words with ψ-. Originally, I thought that all words with ψ- were Pre-Greek, but this thesis cannot be maintained. Among the non-substrate words, ψύλλα originally did not have ps-*, and ψ- for φθ- is secondary (see Lejeune 1972: 39); the verb ψήω may well be non-IE.

24. ω: Of course, ω is perfectly IE, but it also occurs in Pre-Greek words. Examples: ἀμακρῶτις, ἄνθρωπος, ἀνωνίς, ἀποφώλιος, ἀρρωδέω, ἀσκαλώπας, ϝασκώνδας, ἀσμωλεῖν, βαλλωτή, κασσωρίς, λωρυμνόν.

25. Geminates (see also B5.8 on single / geminated consonants): Indo-European had no geminates. Of course, geminates arose in Greek, but they are not very frequent. I doubt whether Pre-Greek had geminates, but several occur in Pre-Greek words (Brixhe 1976: 95 states that there were no geminates in this language). As Pre-Greek had palatalized phonemes, I wonder whether l^y was (often) represented by λλ in Greek. In a similar vein, perhaps n^y might be represented as νν, and r^y as ρρ, but this needs further investigation. For σσ and ττ see B5.5. Unclear are δδ, κκ, ππ, and μμ (a palatalized m^y is a rare sound). Some further examples:

Stops[8]: δδ: ἄδδαι, ἄδδιξ κκ: ἀκκαλος, βέλεκκος, λάκκος(?)
ππ: ἄγριππος, λούππις ττ: βίττακος, λάττα, κάττος, μάτταβος, μέττες, μίττος; Πιττακός.

Liquids: λλ: ἀλλάβης, ἀλλοπίης, ἀμίλλακαν, βαλλωτή, βδέλλα, βίλλιν, πάτελλα μμ: κλεμμύς
νν: ἀγάννα, βλέννος, γίννος, λαχάννα; Δίκτυννα

[8] We also have to recall the instances of κχ, πφ, τθ (see above).

ρρ: ἀρράβακα, βίρρη, βίρροξ, καρρόν

Sibilant σσ: αἴθουσ(σ)α, ἄφρισσα, γίσσα.

2b. How to recognize words as Pre-Greek?

This appears to be relatively easy. A first indication is that a given word has no IE etymology. Often, there is variation which is impossible to explain in Indo-European terms. Therefore, the discussion of these variants is essential. Then, there are numerous suffixes that are typical for Pre-Greek (see the list below). The meaning may also provide an indication. The words concerned are often names of plants or animals, or part of viticulture. Frequently, the words are sexual terms.

If we have some of the above features, it is quite clear that we are dealing with a Pre-Greek word. The origin of the word is then indicated ◂PG▸ in the dictionary. In many cases, we do not have enough data and can only suspect that the word might be Pre-Greek (the origin is then indicated as ◂PG?▸).

3. Prothetic vowel

Pre-Greek had a prothetic vowel, e.g. ἀσκάλαφος beside κάλαφος. In most cases, the vowel is ἀ-. The numbers (Fur. 368ff.) are as follows: α ± 90, ο 10, ε 5, ι 3, υ ø, η 6, αι 2. Note that, generally speaking, α may interchange with ο, ε, and αι. Indeed, we have cases where prothetic ο interchanges with α, and the same holds for ε (e.g. εἰκλ- / αἰκλ-, ἐψία / ἀψία). Although not all other cases can be explained away, it seems that the phenomenon originally only concerned α. Examples: ἀγασυλλίς / γηθυλλίς; ἀκιρίς / κίρρις; ἀκορνοί / κόρνοψ; ἀχραδαμύλα / χραμαδοῖλαι; ἀναρίτης / νηρίτης; ἀσκάλαβος / (σ)καλαβώτης; ἀχύνωψ / κύνωψ.

4. s-mobile

A large number of words shows an initial σ- before a consonant, which is absent in practically identical variants. It occurs before a stop or m (so not before r, l, n); the stop is mostly voiceless, sometimes aspirated; see Fur. 390f. Examples: γέλενος / σχέλινος, (σ)κιδάφη, κίκερος / σκίγκος, (σ)κορδῦλη, βάταλος / σπ-, πέλεθος / σπ-, φαττάγης / σπ-, θριγκός (τριγχός) / στρίγχός, τοπεῖον / στυππεῖον, (σ)μήρινθος, (σ)μύραινα. A prothetic vowel may appear before an s-mobile (Fur. 390[8]): ἀσκάλαβος / σκαλαβώτης / καλαβάς, ἀσφάραγος / σφάραγος / φάραγξ, ἀσκάλαφος / κάλαφος.

5. Consonant variation

5.1 Voiceless / voiced / aspirated stop

Furnée's conclusion was that 'Pre-Greek' was a non-Indo-European language, with no recognizable cognates. This implies that the phonemic system may have been different from that of Indo-European. Thus, he found that the stops show variation between voiced, voiceless and aspirated, so that there presumably was no phonemic distinction between voice and aspiration in the language. As there is no reason to assume that this is a recent phenomenon, it strongly suggests that the language was non-Indo-European. For example, πτωχός belongs to a root ptāk- / ptōk- also seen in πτώξ, -κός. Since such a variation is hardly understandable in Indo-European terms, the word must be Pre-Greek. Furnée's discussion of this variation runs from p. 115 till p. 200. Even if we allow for some mistakes, it is clear that there is abundant evidence for this phenomenon.

5.2 Prenasalization

Before a stop, a nasal may be present or not in Pre-Greek words. E.g. κάχρυς / καγχρυς, κορυφή / κόρυμβος, σαλάβη / σαλάμβη, etc. The phenomenon is extremely frequent, but its precise origin is not known (prenasalized consonants?).

5.3 Nasalization

A consonant is replaced by a homorganic nasal: κιδαφεύειν / κιναφεύειν, φληδῶντα / φλήναφος.

5.4. Labial stops / m / u̯

There are three interchanges: labial stop / μ, labial stop / ϝ and μ / ϝ.

Labial stop / μ (Fur. 203-227). Examples: ἀρβύλη / ἄρμυλα n.pl.; βάρβιτος / βάρμιτος; κύμινδις / κύβινδις; λυκάβας / λυκάμας; μύσταξ / βύσταξ; σκόλυμος / σκόλυβος; φάρμακον / φόρβαντα; σφάραγος / σμάραγος.

Labial stop / ϝ (Fur. 228-242). Examples: τέθηπα, θάπος / θαῦμα; κόβαλος / καυαλός; κασσαβάς / κασαύρα; κράμβος / κραῦρος.

μ / ϝ (Fur. 242-247). A difficulty here is that Greek did not preserve a ϝ in most cases, so that we often just find zero, and the ϝ can only be reconstructed. This gives rise to a certain degree of uncertainty. Perhaps, we have to reckon with the possibility of a development u̯ > b. Examples: βασυμνι-άτης / βασυν-ίας; κρίμνον / κρίνον; μέδιμνος / ϝεδιμνος; σίγυμνος / σίγῦνος (also σίγυννος). The evidence comprises 8 or 9 words in -μνος. It is found six times word-initially: e.g. μῆλον / ἦλον; μονθυλεύω / ὀνθυλεύω; note μέροψ / ἀέροψ (εἴροψ), where the latter forms could continue *ἀ-ϝεροψ / *ἐ-ϝεροψ with a prothetic vowel. Note further κύαμος / κύμηχα, which perhaps continues *κυϝ-αμ-, *κυμ-ηκ-.

5.5 Stops interchanging with σ(σ), with stop + σ/τ or with σ + stop

This kind of variation is quite complicated. I distinguished no less than 10 (or even 15) different types[9]. They may be represented as follows (C = consonant):

	a. labials	b. velars
1. C / Ct	π / πτ	κ / κτ
2. C / Cs	π / ψ
3. C / sC	(π / σπ)	κ / σκ
4. Ct / Cs	πτ / ψ	κτ / ξ
5. Ct / sC		κτ / σκ
6. Cs / sC	(ψ / σπ)	(ξ / σκ)
7. Cs / ss	ξ / σσ
8. sC / ss		σκ / σσ

[9] Since the word ψιττάκιον / πιστάκιον 'pistachio' is probably an oriental loanword, there are no good examples for an interchange σσ / στ.

8c. C / ss		κ / σσ
	dentals
9. t / ss	τ / σσ
10. t / st	τ / στ

The analysis of these variants is not easy, and I mainly present the data here. A question that needs to be explained is why exactly s or t are involved in the given variation.

The most complicated instance is 5b, where we find κτ/σκ. In fact, the most complicated phenomenon contains most information, and can be solved best. In this case, one expects a cluster with k, i.e. a consonant before or after the k. One of the two expected clusters must have undergone metathesis. As Greek did undergo a metathesis τκ > κτ (and no metathesis of σκ or ξ), we may assume that precisely this phenomenon was operative here. Thus, for an earlier stage we may reconstruct an interchange σκ/τκ. This interchange can be easily explained by assuming a consonant, probably unknown to Greek, which resulted either in σ or in τ. In my interpretation, this must have been a palatalized dental, i.e. /t^y/. For instance, ἀμυσγέλα / ἀμυγδάλη was probably amut*^{y}gala, represented first as amusgala* or amudgala*, the latter yielding amugdala*. A less clear example is Asklepios, who was called Ἀ(ι)σκλαπιός or Ἀ(ι)γλαπιός. It could be that the name was At*^{y}klap-, giving A(i)sklap-* or A(i)dglap-. In the latter form, metathesis did not operate because Agdlap- was not tolerated in Greek; the dental was then simply lost. Needless to say, it often happens that only one variant is found. The strange feature or phoneme may also be dismissed altogether, as in δικεῖν next to δίσκος and δίκτυον.

One might suppose that all variants in this group are due to a palatalized dental, but this is not evident, as consonant clusters are rather rare, and as there are no suffixes beginning with a consonant (except n, r, etc.). We may be unable to determine what exactly happened in each case.

Type 4 is treated by Fur. 263[3]. Since Pre-Greek did not distinguish voice and aspiration in stops, these often vary; so if we speak of kt or κτ, this also includes realization as χθ, such as in μόροχθος below. If we consider the variation with labials, as in pt/ps, it is clear that we are dealing with a labial followed by a dental. The dental could also appear as s, so it is clear that the phoneme concerned was a palatalized dental, which I note /t^y/. This means that we are dealing with a group pt^{y}. In the same way, with a velar we have kt^{y}.

The example διφθέρα next to διψάρα is well-known and clear. Furnée further gives γναμπτούς· χαλινούς (H.) beside γλαμψοί· χαλινοὶ στόματος (H.) and compares πτίλον with Dor. ψίλον. His example ὀπτός 'cooked' next to ὄψον is less evident.

Among the forms with a velar, there is no problem with μόροχθος / μόροξος. The best known example is Ἐρεχθεύς (also Ἐριχθεύς) next to Ερεχσες on Attic vases. I have no opinion on Ἐριχθόνιος; it may be a Graecisized form, and in this case it is unimportant for Pre-Greek. See further the ethnonyms Δατύλε-πτοι, Δηλό-πτης, Γαλη-ψοί, Λαδέ-ψοί and Τρανι-ψοί. Other forms are less clear.

There may have been series with three forms, with kt / ks, pt / ps and also k or p. I can only mention Ἄραχθος / Ἀράξης next to Ἄραγος, and perhaps, next to διφθέρα / διψάρα, the verb δέφω (together with δεψ-), for both cf. Fur. 263.

Above, we assumed that a labial or a velar could be followed by a palatalized dental /t^y/. If this is right, we can also postulate that this consonant (labial or velar) was followed by a normal dental. Of course, this yielded pt and kt. I assume that the second consonant of this group (the dental) could have been dropped, which yielded single p or k. This explains the type π(τ)ολεμος (Fur. §50) and βρόγχος (with prenasalization) beside βρόχθος (Fur. §51).

I will shortly review the 10 (15) types (I call the labials 1a, etc., the velars 1b, etc.).

1a. πτ may represent a single phoneme p^y, as we saw in B1. Examples: (Fur. 315ff.): γνυπ- / γνυπτ- (γνυπετ-); κολύμβαινα / κολύβδαινα; κίβαλος / κίβδης; λύπη / λύπτα; without variants note κρόσσοφθον, σαρρυφθεῖν.

1b. κτ is most probably explained like 5b, discussed above (so 1b is a part of 5b). Examples (Fur. 319ff.): ἄρακις / ἀράκτην; μογέω / μοχθέω; πελεκάν / σπέλεκτος; ἀκακία / κάκτος.

2a. ψ may result from $*pt^y$. It is remarkable that there is no 2b. κ / ξ, as ξ is unproblematic in Greek.[10]

3a. π / σπ, b. κ / σκ: Both may represent $*t^yp$, t^yk. Examples: θίσβη / θίβις (Fur. 292[2]), βέκος / βέσκεροι; ἴχλα / ἴσκλαι; μάκελλα / μάσκη (βάσκη); μῦκος / μύσκος; φάκελον / φάσκωλος (Fur. 295ff.).

4a. πτ / ψ, b. κτ / ξ were discussed above and may continue $*pt^y$, kt^y; they may belong together with 2a. Examples: διφθέρα / διψάρα (Fur. 263 Anm. 3); χαλυβδικός / Χάλυψος (Fur. 318, 324); μόροχθος / μόροξος (Fur. 263 Anm. 3).

5b. κτ / σκ was discussed above. Examples: ἀμυσγέλα / ἀμυγδάλη (Fur. 301 Anm. 2); δίσκος / δίκτυ(ον) (Fur. 279, 319).

6a. ψ / σπ, b. ξ / σκ. Fur. 393 simply considered the interchange as due to metathesis, which, of course, is possible. sp*, sk* may represent $*t^yp$, t^yk. Examples (Fur. 393): ἀσπίνθιον / ἀψίνθιον; ὀσφῦς / ψύαι; ἰσχίον / ἰξῦς; φοῦσκος / φοξός.

7b. ξ / σσ. If ξ represents $*kt^y$, the k may have disappeared in other cases (which did not give ξ) after which $*t^y$ became σσ. Examples: κριξός / κρισσός (Fur. 130[59]); σίβδα / ξίμβα (Fur. 317); τραύξανα, τρώξανον / τραύσανον (Fur. 286[72]); ἰξάλη / ἰσάλη (ἰσσέλα, ἰτθέλα); Οὐλίξης / Ὀδυσσεύς.

8b. σκ / σσ can be explained parallel to 7b: $*t^yk$ > σκ or, with loss of the k, $*t^y$ > σσ. Example (Fur. 300): ὕρισχος / ὑρίσσος.

9a. τ / σσ. This is the well-known element that yielded σσ / ττ. Furnée does not discuss it under this heading, because he gives only one phoneme ('letter') and its variants; for instance, he discusses σκ / κτ under κ / κτ. The situation is also different here, as we are able to discern a distribution among the Greek dialects, and attribute the different renderings of these loanwords to dialectal developments. Still, the fact remains that a foreign element was rendered in different ways, as with all other phenomena discussed here. Fur. 253 has the heading τ, δ, θ / σ(σ), ζ. I think this should be reformulated as τ (δ, θ), ττ (τθ) / σ (ζ), σσ, i.e. τ with its usual variants δ, θ; or the geminated ττ (with its expected variant τθ, which is the Greek form of geminated θθ), interchanging with σ or σσ. If the ζ was [sd], it does not fit in well. As to its interpretation, it could represent single $*t^y$, which was rendered ττ or σσ, or single σ, τ (the variant ζ would then fit in, but one would also expect a variant στ). Examples (Fur. 253ff.): κιττός / κισσός, κρότιον / κρόσσοφθον, μύρτίνη / μυρσίνη, τεῦτλον / σεῦτλον, τίλφη / σίλφη, γάδος / γάζας, ἀσμωλεῖν / ἀδμωλή.

¹⁰ I have some difficulty with Furnée's section XI (Fur. 323-329). My conclusion is that a variation C / Cσ cannot be proven, although some instances remain difficult to explain otherwise.

I think that the phoneme rendered by σσ, Att. ττ (called the foreign phoneme or Fremdphonem) was a palatalized velar, which I write as k^y, cf. Beekes JIES 37 (2009): 191-197. This would be parallel to the development of inherited velar + yod, which gave σσ, Att. ττ, as in φυλάσσω, φυλάττω. This interpretation is confirmed by θάλασσα, θάλαττα, where we have a variant δαλάγχαν· θάλασσαν (H.). Here we see that after the nasal (prenasalization is well known in Pre-Greek), the palatal feature of the consonant was dropped. This resulted in a velar (here realized as an aspirate). The variant shows that we may be dealing with a velar in cases of σσ / ττ. We can also compare κολύμβαινα beside κολύβδαινα, which had p^y; again we see that the palatal feature was lost after the inserted nasal.

There is a third representation. We know that the name of Odysseus was Ὀλυσσευ-, Ὀλυττευ-. This means that it probably had a palatalized velar, $*k^y$. But we also find Οὐλιξεύς (Ibyc. apud Diom. Gr. p. 321 K, Hdn. Gr., Plut.), a form which was at the basis of Latin Ulixes. This form was taken from a Western Greek dialect, probably Doric. Therefore, a third representation of the foreign phoneme is -ξ-.

10a. τ / στ may be from $*t^yt$ giving στ or, with loss of the t, $*t^y$ > σσ. Examples (Fur. 301ff.): βαλλωτή / βαλλαύστιον; μάτρυλλος / μάστρυλλος; μύτις / μύσταξ; πατίλη / παστίλη.

As we saw, it is very difficult to determine what exactly happened in each case; on the other hand, it is clear that almost all variation can be understood if we start from just a few assumptions.

5.6 Velar / labial / dental stops: labiovelars

There is limited evidence for variation between velar and labial, between velar and dental, and between labial and dental, and between all the three classes (Fur. 388ff.). We find:

κ / π, β	κ / τ, δ	π / τ
γ / β	γ / δ	β / δ	γ / β / δ
χ / φ	φ / θ	χ / φ / θ

It is remarkable that the variants mostly agree in voice / aspiration. Since examples of this phenomenon are not particularly numerous, this may be an indication that the words concerned are not of Pre-Greek origin, but due to borrowing from a different substrate, for instance. Examples:

κ / π: κλάνιον / πλανίς
γ / β: βράκαλον / ῥόπαλον; γλέπω / βλέπω; χάλις / φαλικρόν κ / τ: ἀσκάνδης / ἀστάνδης

γ / δ: γάλατμον / ἀδαλτόμον π / τ: βαπαίνει / βαταίνει β / δ: σάμβαλον / σάνδαλον φ / θ: γνυφαί / γνύθος
γ / β / δ: γέφυρα / βέφυρα / δέφυρα.

It is tempting to assume labiovelars to explain these cases, but some cases may have a different origin (thus, βράκαλον / ῥόπαλον could be due to dissimilation in the first variant). On the existence of labiovelars in Pre-Greek, see above on the phonemic system.

5.7. Dentals / liquids
There are some instances of variation between dentals (including n) and liquids (l, r). This variation is incidental. Examples (Fur. 387f.):

a. δ / λ: ἄβλαρος / βδαροί (Fur. 330[27]), δάφνη / λάφνη, Ὀδυσσεύς / Ὀλυσσεύς. Cf. Myc. gen. da-pu$_2$-ri-to-jo /dap^{h}urint^{h}oio/ / λαβύρινθος, καλάμινθα / Myc. ka-da-mi-ta. The interchange δ / λ and the fact that Linear B has signs for da, de, di, etc. (which Lejeune explained by assuming a specific, unusual sound đ) might point to a dental fricative ƛ.
θ / λ: θάπτα / λάττα
ν / λ: νίτρον / λίτρον

b. δ / ρ: σίβδα / ξίμβραι
ν / ρ: βλῆχνον / βλῆχρον

c. λ / ρ: ἀζηρίς / ἀζηλίς, κρίβανος / κλίβανος, κρῶμαξ / κλῶμαξ.

5.8. Simple / geminate Except for a few isolated cases, we find this interchange in ν / νν, but more notably in λ / λλ. On τ / ττ and σ / σσ see above sub 5.5. Cf. Fur. 386f. Examples:

ν / νν: ἄνηθον (also τ) / ἄννηθον (also τ); τημενίς / τήβεννα. In this context, note the suffix -υνν-.

λ / λλ: βαλ(λ)ήν; θυλίς / θυλλίς; σπέλεθος / σπέλληξι dat.pl.; μακέλη / μάκελλα (this probably derives from PG *-al^{y}a-). Note γεῖσ(σ)ον, σάρῖσα / σάρισσα, and the case of Ἀθήνη / Ἀτθίς / Ἀττικός.

5.9. σ- / zero
We discussed σ / zero before consonant under s-mobile above, section B4.

An -s- from Pre-Greek is normally maintained. The only instances that I know of, where it may have disappeared, are (cf. Fur. 241): σύριχος, σύρισσος / ὑριχός (also -ίσκος, -ίσχος, -ίσσος); συβάλλας / ὑβάλλης; σαγήνη / Cypr. ἀγάνα; σιπύη / ἰπύα. Perhaps Ἑλλάς beside Σελλοί belongs here, too. Another instance could be ἄπιον, which is cognate with Lat. pirum which points to -pis-.

5.10. K-, T- / zero
There are instances where a velar or a dental may be absent in initial position (Fur. 391, and 131[59]). Dentals may also be absent in inlaut. Examples:

κ / zero: κάνδαρος / ἄνθραξ, καλινδέομαι / ἀλίνδω, κόγχναι / ὄγχναι, κανθήλιον / ἀνθήλιον.
γ / zero: γίννος / ἰννός, but this form may be a late development. As an explanation, one could think of a uvular q.
τ / zero: τάγχουρος / ἄγχουρος, τήγανον / ἤγανον, τίφυον / ἴφυον (with ῑ in LSJ);
δ / zero: δελεδώνη / ἐλεδώνη (also ἐ-).

Loss of a dental in inlaut: νέτωπον / νίωπον, ἰθουλίς / ἰουλίς, ἀσίδαρος / ἀσίαρος.

5.11. ν-, λ- / zero
ν- and λ- can also be absent (Fur. 391f): νάφθα / ἄφθα (also ἅ-). λαιψηρός / αἰψηρός, λαμπήνη / ἀπήνη, λατμενεία / ἀτμήν. Perhaps, it concerns palatalized n^{y}, l^{y}, which are pronounced very 'light'.

5.12. Metathesis, shift of aspiration
There are instances of metathesis. It mostly concerns ρ, sometimes λ. The consonant jumps to the other side of the vowel or the consonant: κιρσός / κρισσός, κριξός; τέρμινθος / τρέμιθος. Cf. Τερμίλαι / Τρεμίλαι; ἄρπιξ / ἀπρίξ; κέδροπα / κέρδοπα; νάθραξ / νάρθηξ. In most cases, it cannot be determined what the original configuration was. In a case like ἔρβως / εὔρως, where β may stand for (or continue) ϝ, I would think that the ϝ was anticipated. It may concern an original r^{w}.

The cases of σπ / ψ and σκ / ξ are discussed in 5.5 above.

Shift of aspiration is found in some cases: θριγκός / τριγχός, ἀθραγένη / ἀνδράχνη. In the case of φάτνη / πάθνη the metathesis seems to have occurred in the later history of Greek (Beekes 2003).

5.13 Secondary phonetic developments
1. We may assume secondary phonetic developments, either in Greek or perhaps already in the original language. One might consider:

βδ- > βλ-: βδαροί / ἄβλαροι. For this case, cf. 5.7b δ / λ.
βδ > βρ: βδέλλιον / βρέλλιον (Fur. 308) γδ- > δ-: γδοῦπος / δοῦπος δν- > γν-: δνόφος / γνόφος κμ- > μ-: κμέλεθρον / μέλαθρον ψ- > σπ-: ψενδυλ- / σπονδύλη? See 5.5.6 above.
ψ- > σ-: ψέφας / σεῖφα; ψίττακος / σίττακος; cf. Ψαπφώ, Σαπφώ.

2. α > ο before υ in the following syllable. The a was probably pronounced a little higher before the u, and was realized as [å], which resulted in o. Examples: ἀξουγγία > ὀξύγγιον, καλύβη > κόλυβος, *σκαραβ- (κάραβος) > σκορόβυλος, δορύκνιον for *δ(α)ρυκν-.

5.14 Other variation
There are a few instances of isolated and puzzling variation. I mention just one, the word for 'night', where we have ψέφας, κνέφας, δνόφος, ζόφος. I think that in some of these cases, the solution may be found in a cluster. Carian, for example, allows an initial cluster kbd-. Such clusters would have been simplified in Greek. In an inherited word, we have the parallel of Lat. pecten, Gr. κτείς, which is supposed to continue pkt-. If we assume a cluster kdn- in our example, it may have been reduced to kn- or, with loss of the first consonant, to dn-. Thus, the process is the same as the reduction γδ- > δ-, see 5.13 above. Such variant simplifications are typical for loanwords. In this way, we could connect two of the words; but I see no way to connect the other two.

6. Vowel variation

6.1 Single vowels (timbre)
The vowels show many variants. I will discuss them in the following order: first a, then e and o; and within each of these groups first the short vowel, then the diphthongs, then the long vowel (and the long diphthongs, but these hardly occur). Note that a variation x / y is not repeated under y.

1. the vowel α.
1a. α / ε has 80 occurrences in Furnée's material (347). Examples: ἄγχουσα / ἔγχουσα, ἄρυσος / ἔρυσος, γάλινθοι / γέλινθοι, ζακελτίς / ζεκελτίς, καίατα / καιέτας, κάμπος / κέμπορ, κάχρυς / κέγχρος, σάνδυξ / σενδούκη.
1b. α / ο. This interchange also occurs frequently. Fur. 339 mentions that he found 80 instances. Examples: ἀξουγγία / ὀξύγγιον, ἀρρωδέω / ὀρρωδέω, γράβιον / γοβρίαι, ἠπίαλος / ἠπίολος, κάβαξ / κόβακτρα, καλύβη / κόλυβος, λυκαψός / λύκοψος.
1c. α / αι (Fur. 336ff.). Examples: ἀκραιφνής / ἀκραπνής, ἀσύφηλος / αἰσύφιος, λάγματα / λαίγματα. The ι here is due to the following palatalized consonant.
1d. α / αυ (Fur. 302[37]). Examples: καναύστρον / κάναστρον, μνάσιον / μναύσιον; ἄλοξ / αὖλαξ. In the last example, the υ is probably due to the following labialized phoneme l^w.
1e. α / ω: κλάδος / κλῶναξ.
1f. αι / ει (Fur. 352 Anm. 4, 339 Anm. 2). Examples: καιρία / κειρία, κύπαιρος / κύπειρος, λαιαί / λεῖαι. Both αι and ει are due to the following palatalized consonant.
1g. αυ / ευ (Fur. 353 Anm. 5). Examples: λαυκανίη / λευκανίη, πέταυρον / πέτευρον; αὖλαξ / εὐλάκα.
1h. αυ / ω, ο (Fur. 301[32]). Examples: κασαύρα(ς) / κασωρίς, θαῦμα / θῶμα, σαῦσαξ / σώσικες, βαύκαλον / βῶκος, καλαῦροψ / κολλώροβον / κολλόροβον.
1i. ᾱ / αι (Fur. 338). Examples: λήθαργος / λαίθαργος, ληκάω / λαικάζω, πήγανον / φαίκανον.
1j. ᾳ / ᾱ. Examples: λᾳδος (λῄδιον) / λᾶδος (λήδιον).

2. the vowel ε.
2a. ε / α: see under α.
2b. ε / ι (Fur. 355ff.). Examples: βλίτυξ / βλέτυες, ἐβίσκος / ἰβίσκος, δέπας / Myc. dipa, ἔντυβον / ἴντυβος, κελλόν / κίλλιξ, κιλλίβας / κελλίβας, κύτεσος / κύτισος, λέσφος / λίσπος (φ). The e was not phonologically distinguished from i, and they were phonetically close.
2c. ε / ι / υ (Fur. 354[55]). Example: κεχράμος / κίχραμος (κιγκράμας) / κύχραμος.

2d. ε / ευ (Fur. 115). Example: ἄργετος / ἄρκευθος.
2e. ει / αι: see αι.
2f. ει / η (Fur. 339 Anm. 2). Examples: κείθιον (χείτιον) / κήθιον, χειραμός / χηραμός.
2g. ευ / ε: see ε / ευ.
2h. ευ / αυ: see αυ.
2i. ε / η (Fur. 358[42]). Examples: ἔνυστρον / ἤνυστρον, μέρμερος / μέρμηρα, ψάκελον / βάκηλον, μήδεα / μέδεα (μέζεα); Πηλαγόνες / Πελαγόνες.
2j. η / ι (Fur. 171[114]). Examples: βλῆτον / βλίτον, σκῆνος / σκίναρ, ψημύθιον / ψιμύθιον.

3. the vowel ο.
3a. ο / α: see α.
3b. ο / ι (Fur. 191[37]). Examples: ἄκονος / ἄκινος, ἰβρίκαλοι / ὀβρίκαλα, Ὄνογλιν / ὄνιγλιν.
3c. ο / υ (Fur. 358ff.). Examples: ὄλονθος / ὄλυνθος, σκολοβρέω / σκολυβρός, σκύτη / -κόττα, κυδώνιον / κοδώνεα, κυρσέας / κορσίς, πρύτανις / πρότανις, τοπεῖον / στυππεῖον. ο and υ were phonetically very close, and not distinguished phonologic-ally (cf. on ε / ι).
3d. ο / ου (Fur. 359). Examples: βρόκος / βροῦκος, κολοτέα / κολούτεα (also -λυ-, -λω-).
3e. ο / ω (Fur. 279). Examples: γνοτέρα / γνωτέρα, κολλώροβον / κολλόροβον, φασίωλος / φασίολος (also -ουλος), ὤρυγγες / ὄρυξ, -γος; ὠσχοί / ὄσχη.
3f. οι / υ (Fur. 127). Example: χραμαδοῖλαι / ἀχραδαμύλα (ἀκραμύλα).
3g. οι / ου (Fur. 358). Examples: κολουτία / κολοιτία (κολοτέα), ψούδιον / ψοίθης?
3h. ου / υ (Fur. 120[29]). Examples: κτύπος / γδουπέω, κροῦναι / γρῡνός.
3i. ου / ω (Fur. 133). Examples: μωκάομαι / μουκήζει; λούπης / λώβηξ (Fur. 148).
3j. ω / η. Example: θρῶναξ / ἀνθρήνη.
3k. ω / υ (Fur. 302[35]). Examples: ζώγιος / ζύγγιος, ὕσσωπος / ἰσσύπος, λωβεύω / λυβάζειν.
3l. ο / ε. Example: γοργυρα / γεργυρα

4. ι / υ. There is some variation between ι and υ, but I do not know how to interpret it. Examples (Fur. 364ff.): αἰσυμνάω / αἰσιμνάω; ἀνθρίσκος / ἄνθρυσκον; βίδην / βυδοί; βρικός / βρυκός; ζύγαστρον / σίγιστρον; κινώπετον / κυνοῦπες; κύβεσις / κίβισις; μάρσιππος / μάρυππος.

5. υ / ε. Example: γυργαθός / γεργαθος.

The behavior of the diphthongs may be summarized as follows:

αι / ει	and (vice versa)	ει / αι
αυ / ευ, ω		ευ / αυ
οι / υ, ου
ου / υ, οι, ω

All this variation is understandable in terms of adaptation of a three-vowel system.

6.2. Long / short:
One may doubt whether Pre-Greek had a distinction of long and short vowels (see B1). We do find η and ω, however, but not very often, and the latter has several variants. On the other hand, the variations ω / ο and η / ε are not very frequent (although in this case also the difference in timbre may have been important, depending on the Greek dialect). Variation between long en short ι and υ is frequent, especially in suffixes: γήθυον / γάθια, κύβεσις / κίβησις, θῖβις / θίβις, κρίμνον / κρῖμνον, θρῖναξ / θρινάκη; ψημύθιον / ψιμῦθιον, σπον κᾱ́ραβος / καράμβιος (cf. κηραφίς), φενᾱκίζω / πηνηκίζω 'deceive'; Ὠγην(-) / Ὠγεν(-); γνοτέρα / γνωτέρα.

There is some evidence for short vowel + CC alternating with long vowel + C: e.g. μῦκος / μύσκος; Λάρῑσα / Λάρισσα; see B 1 on -ιξ, -υξ.

6.3. Single vowel / diphthong:
There are several instances where a diphthong varies with a single vowel. They can be found above (6.1). Most frequent is α / αι, but this is due to the effect of a following palatalized consonant. We further find α / αυ, ε / ευ, and ου / υ and οι / υ. In two cases we find diphthong alternating with a long vowel: αι / ᾱ, ει / η. Examples were given above.

6.4. Rising diphthongs?
Relatively frequent in Pre-Greek words are sequences of a more closed vowel followed by a more open one, sequences that are not found in IE. They would be rising diphthongs if they formed one syllable, but in fact we may have to do with two syllables. Examples are:
-εα-: σεᾱγών (σι-, συ-)
-ια-: βατιάκη, θίασος, θρίαμβος, σίαλον, φιάλη, φιαρός. Note σιᾱγών (σε-, συ-)
-ιυ-: ἰυγή
-υα-: βρυαλίζων, γύαλον (γυε-), κύαμιος, πύαλος, πύανον, συαγρίς
-υε-: γυέλιον (γύαλον), πύελος (πυα-)

Remarkable, too, is the sequence -ωυ- in πῶυ(γ)ξ, μωύς.

6.5. Secondary vowels (or elision)
Sometimes, words show a vowel that is absent in nearly identical forms. It mostly concerns vowels between a stop and a resonant. It is often not clear whether the presence or the absence of a vowel is secondary. See Fur. 378-385. Examples: βράγχια / βαράγχια; δορύκνιον for *δρυκν- in στρυχν-; σκέρβολος / σκέραφος; κνύζα / (σ)κόνυζα; σκόροδον / σκόρδον; τονθορύζω / τονθρύζω; Ἀρεπυία / Ἅρπυια; κνώψ / κινώπετον / κυνοῦπες; Κορύβαντες / Κύρβαντες.

C. Morphology

1. Reduplication
Some forms seem to have reduplication, though we often cannot demonstrate this. Most frequent is partial reduplication, where only the first consonant and a vowel are repeated. The vowel is mostly ε or ι.

Examples: βέβραξ; βέ(μ)βρος; γάγγαμον; γαγγλίον; γαγγραίνα; γίγαρτον; γίγγλυμος; κίκυβος; σέσυφος / Σίσυφος (cf. σόφος); μεμαίκυλον (also μι-); νενίηλος; σέσελι(ς); σίσυρα (also -υρνα); μεμβράς(?); perhaps κίκυμος; κίχραμος (also κε-, κυ-, κιγκ-); δενδρύω. Also the names Κέκροψ; Πεπάρηθος; Τιταρήσιος; Λέλεγες. With prenasalization we find τενθρηδών, τενθρήνη (cf. ἀνθρηδών, θρῶναξ). In these examples, I neglect the fact that there may (or may not) be prenasalization.

Other reduplication vowels are found in: λάλαμις (cf. λαῖλαψ), κοκρύς, perhaps also γιηγῆλιξ.

Intensive reduplication in: μόρμορος (μορμυραία), μαρμαρυγη.

More difficult to judge are γέλγις next to ἀγλῖς (perhaps from *γε-γλ-, ἀ-γλ-), κέρκα next to ἄκρις (if from *κε-κρ-, ἀ-κρ-). Also Μεμβλίαρος beside Βλίαρος (cf. μεμβράς), Μεμβλίς = Μέλος, also Μιμαλλίς.

A completely different type is perhaps found in ἀμάμαξυς (cf. ἀμαξίς), and perhaps also ἀμαμιθάδες.

2. Suffixes
2.1 Introduction
It appears that most suffixes have the same structure. They contain a consonant; if this is a stop, it can be prenasalized, i.e. -β- or -μβ-, -θ- or -νθ-, etc. The stop has its usual variants, like β / π / φ, etc., although mostly one of these is predominant. The suffix usually starts with one of the vowels of the language, mostly α, ι, υ (we find ε or ο only rarely, e.g. ὄλονθος beside ὄλυνθος). Thus, we may find e.g. αγγ – ιγγ – υγγ; ανθ – ινθ – υνθ, etc.

A different structure is present in suffixes containing -ν- (mostly followed by a vowel) directly after the root-final consonant: e.g. κύδνος, πισάκνα, μόλυχνον, φενακνίς, σαταρνίς. In this way, the groups -ρν-, -δν-, -κν-, -μν- in Pre-Greek words probably originated. In the case of -μν-, we often find a vowel again: -αμιν-, -ιμν-, -υμν-. The groups -μν- and -ρν- are especially frequent. They are very important, as they are found in Etruscan, which for the rest shows little agreement with Pre-Greek; -μν- is found as far as in Cappadocian (see Beekes BiOr 59 (2002): 441f.). Perhaps, the groups -αννν-, -ιννν-, -υνν- arose in this way, too.

Other consonants are found in suffix-initial position, too: e.g., -ρ-, -δ-, -γ-, rarely -λ-. Examples: ψυδρός, κύριθρα, παναγρίς, φάλακρος; σκαπέρδα; λάθαργος; ὄνιγλιν.

It is often possible to determine to which series the Pre-Greek consonant belonged. Thus, -αιν- could render -an^{y}-, while -al^{y}- seems to have resulted in -αλλ- (or -ελλ- with coloring of the vowel). Likewise, -ειρ- could represent -ar^{y}-. This thesis would be nicely supported by the segment -αυρ-, if this represents -ar^{w}- (e.g. αὐροσχάδες beside ἀρασχάδες, if this form had *-ar^{w}-). Cf. B1 above.

Another type of suffix has σ followed by a dental: κάνασθον (-στρον), λαιστρόν or another stop ἔνθρυσκον, αὐροσχάς, κανναβίσκα; these forms may have been partly adapted to Greek suffixes (-τρον). See below on the suffix -στ-.

A form such as -ευτ- is deviating; we do not often find a diphthong before the consonant. Does it stand for -aut-* from -at^w? Cf. -ai̯- in ἔλαιον, where we may suspect ay^w or aw^y (but it may be part of the root). See further section B1.

Not seldom do we find a long and a short vowel with a suffix (= consonant), e.g. ιθ – ῑθ, υκ – ῡκ. In the case of ῦρ, one might again think of ur^y > uir, although r^y is a rare phoneme (like m^y).

2.2 Survey of the suffixes

In principle, we find one of the three vowels of the language followed by a (prenasalized) consonant: a, i, u + $^{(m)}$P, $^{(n)}$T, $^{(n)}$K. The groups actually found are, in Greek letters (forms in brackets are rare or less frequent):

	1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.
aNC		αμβ		(αντ)	ανδ	ανθ		αγγ
iNC					ινδ	ινθ		ιγγ
uNC		υμβ		(υντ)	υνδ	(υνθ)		υγγ

So, we do not find: 1. VNπ and 3. VNφ, 7. VNκ, 9. VNχ (except for δαλαγχαν).

In the same way, we find vowel + C. The consonant may have the normal variation: plain, voiced, aspirated. A palatalized consonant could color a preceding and/or a following /a/ to [ε], which may also appear as ει. This phenomenon is often seen in languages with palatalized consonants, such as Russian and Irish. Thus, we find -ar^y- represented as -αιρ- (-ειρ- is also possible). A palatalized -l^y- may be rendered as a geminate -λλ-.

If a labialized consonant followed or preceded an α, this vowel may have been perceived as (an allophone of) /o/. For example, -ar^w- may be represented as -αυρ-, with anticipation of the labial element, but also as -ουρ-, in which case the α was colored.

The suffixal consonant may be geminated; as there is frequent variation between single and geminated consonants in the language, there possibly was no opposition.

Vowels could be either short or long; in suffixes, a long vowel was quite frequent. A long ū was sometimes represented as ω.

2.3 The material

The examples are mostly taken from Furnée, to whom I refer for details. Words can also be checked in the present dictionary. Variants are given in brackets. I added geographical names (TN) from Fick 1905, and some more material, with references.

1. -αβ-(ο-) (Fur. 107): ἀγράκαβος, ἀλ(λ)άβης, ἀσκάλαβος, ἀττέλε/αβος, κάνναβος, κόλλαβος, μέσ(σ)αβον, λατραβός, μάτταβος. TN Καττάβιος (Rhodes, Fick 47), Κάσταβος (Caria).
2. -αγ-: ἅρπαγ- (cf. Chantraine 1933: 397ff.), λάταξ, οὔραξ.
3. -αγγ-ο-: σφάραγγος.
3a. -αγχ-: δαλάγχαν.

4. -αδ-: ἀρασχάδες, μεμβράς, σπυράδ-.
5. -αθ-ο-: ἀσπάλαθος, γυργαθός, σπύραθοι. TN Ὑρνάθιον (Epidauros).
6. -αι-/-ε(ι)- before a vowel: There are words in -αια / -ε(ι)α, such as γρυμέα / γρυμεία (also γρυμεῖα) / γρυμαία (note the hesitation in the accentuation). I suggest that the suffix was -ay-(a), which was pronounced as [-æya] or [-eya] (we saw that ει often varies with αι). The speakers of Greek identified the suffix with Gr. -αι- or -ει-, but the -y- could also be lost. In this way the three variant forms can be explained. Further examples are κολοιτέα / κολ(ο)υτέα, κορχυρέα (κορκόδρυα in H. is probably an error); κώδεια / κώδεα (note the short α), beside κώδυια / κωδία (these are not entirely clear to me, but cf. Ἀμάθυια / Ἀμάθεια).
   Furthermore, -ay-a* is likely to be the same suffix as -ειᾰ which makes feminine names, e.g. Ἀμάλθεια, Πηνελόπεια, Ἰφιμέδεια (note that in Myc. Ipemedeja, the -j- is preserved, cf. Ruijgh 1957: 155[3]). Of course, many place names end in -εια: Καδμεία, Καλαύρεια, Κερύνεια, Μίδεια, Σκελερδεία, Λεβάδεια, etc.
   The final was often adapted to -αίᾰ after the dominant type, which is derived from the adjectives in -αῖος (see Chantraine, Form. 91): type ἀναγκαίη; cf. βρυκταία, διρκαία, σιβαία.
   We also find -εία used in nouns: δαυρεία, ζαλεία, κουλυβάτεια.
   Nouns with -εο- are very rare; we find: γωλεός, εἰλεός, κολεόν, νικύλεον, συφεός(?), φωλεός. It may further be found in Ὠκέανος < -kay-an-*, note the by-forms Ὠγην, Ὠγεν-.
   Beside -αια, -εια, we may expect thematic -αι-ο-; we find it e.g. in δίρκαιον, σπήλαιον, ψιφαῖον; γραψαῖος, *σκαραβαιος (reconstructed by Fur. 169).
7. -αι(ϝ)-ο- (see Fur. 233[22], 255[32]): Partly from -αιϝο-; it is often impossible to establish whether a form had a -ϝ- or not. See also 6. above. Examples: ἀκυλαῖον, ἀραιός, βαγαῖος, βαλαιόν, δίρκαιον, ἔλαιον (Myc. era_3 / rawo), μάταιος, μεσσαῖον, σίραιον; Ἀχαιϝός. TN Ἀστυπάλαια (Fick: 58).
8. -αιβ-ο-: TN Περραιβοί (Thess.).
9. -αιθ-: TN Σύμαιθα (Thess.), Περαιθεῖς (Arc. deme), Κελαιθεῖς (Thess. deme), Κυναιθεῖς (Arc. deme).
10. -αιν- (Fur. 171[117]): ἄκαινα, -ον, βολίταινα, γάγγραινα, κολύβδαινα (also -υμβ-), κορύφαινα, μύραινα, σμύραινα, τρίαινα.
11. -αιρ-(ο-) represents -ar^y-: κύπαιρος (also -ειρον, -ηρις, -ερος), μάχαιρα.
12. -ακ- (Fur. 158[64]): ἀβυρτάκη, αὖλαξ, βατιάκη, δόναξ / δῶναξ / δοῦναξ, θρινάκη (θρῖναξ), θώραξ (also -ηξ, -ᾱκος), καυνάκη, θῡλάκη, πιστάκη, φάρμακον. TN Ζάρᾱξ, -ηξ (Lac.).
13. -αλ(λ)-ο- (Fur. 254[28], Beekes 2008): ἀρύβαλλος, αἰγίθαλ(λ)ος, κορύδαλ(λ)ος (also -ός), πάρδαλος. TN Κασταλία (Phoc. source), Φάρσᾱλος, Στύμφᾱλος (Arc.).
14. -αμβ-ο- (Fur. 184): διθύραμβος, θρίαμβος, ἴαμβος, καράμβας, σήραμβος.
15. -αμν-ο-: δίκταμνον, ῥάδαμνος, σφένδαμνος. TN Σέδαμνος (Crete).
15. -αμ-ο-: ἄρταμος. TN Κίσ(σ)αμος (Cos), Πέργαμον, Κώγαμος (Lydia), Κύαμον (Kydon.), Ὕδραμος (Kydon.).

16. -αν-ο-: TN Ἰάρδανος (HN Crete, Elis), Ἀπιδανός (HN Thess.), Ἠριδανός (HN), Ἄνδανος (Fick: 18).
17. -ᾱν-: γεντιανή.
18. -ανδ-: ἀσγάνδης.
19. -ανδρ-: γελανδρόν. TN Τήλανδρος (Fick 51), Τύμανδ(ρ)ος (Pamph.), Μυίανδ(ρ)ος (Fick: 53), Φολέγανδρος.
20. -ανθ/τ- (Fur. 191[35]; 216[71], -αντ- unless otherwise stated): ἀλίβας, ἀσκάνθης (σκάνθας), κιλλίβας (but κελλίβατ-), ὀκρίβας, φάλανθ/τος, Ἄβαντες (Fick: 69, etc.), Μέλανθ/τ-, Πείρανθ/τ-, Γίγαντες, Κορύβαντες. TN Βαβράντιον (Chios).
21. -αννν-: τύραννος.
22. -αξ- (cf. -ιξ-, -οξ-): ἄμαξα, ἀτράφαξυς, σαβάξας (also -κτ-), TN Κυρτάρπαξον (Crete).
23. -απ-ο- (Fur. 235[31]): ἄρναπος, γαυσαπός, μόναπος. TN Μεσσαπιος (Crete, Fick: 24).
24. -αρ (Fur. 134[75]), mostly neuters: ἴκταρ, κύδαρ, νέκταρ, σκίναρ, σῦφαρ; adj. μάκαρ; anim. ὄαρ, δάμαρ (gen. -ρτος), cf. Myc. dama beside duma.
25. -αρ- (Fur. 257[36]): ἄσκαρος, βασσάρα, γάδαρος, γίγγλαρος, κίσθαρος, κύσσαρος, λεσχάρα, φάλαρα. Also σίδᾱρος? TN Ἄπταρα (Crete, Lycia), Πάταρα (Lycia), Μέγαρα (Fick: 75), Ἀλλαρία (Crete).
26. -ασ-α/ο- (Fur. 157[57]): κάρπασος, καμασός (κάβαισος), πάγασα. TN Κύρβασα (Crete), Πήδασα (Mess.), Παγασαί (Thess.).
27. -ασσ-ο-: TN Ῥυτιασσός (Crete), Κρυασσός (Crete), Μυκάλησσός, Ταφιασσός (Fick: 32).
28. -ατ-: ἀπάτη, ἠλακάτη. TN Καίρατος (Crete), Μίλατος (Crete, Fick: 27).
29. -αυρ-α/ο- (this may continue -ar^{w}-): (ἀ)φαῦρος, φλαῦρος, (ἀ)μαυρός, ἄγλαυρος, θησαυρός, κασαύρα (-ας), λάσταυρος, πέταυρον (ευ). TN Ἐπίδαυρος.
30. -αχ-: βότραχος, κύμβαχος, σελάχος.
30a. -αψ-: λυκαψός, σκινδαψός.
31. -γδ-: perhaps ἄπριγδα [adv.].
32. -γρ- (cf. on -ρ-): παναγρίς, συαγρίς.
33. -εδ-: TN Τένεδος, Λέβεδος, perhaps in Λακεδαίμων.
34. -εζ-α: see below sub 73. on -ισ-.
35. -ειρ-ο- (may continue -er^{y}-, -ar^{y}-): αἴγειρος, κύπειρον, σάβειρος (σαπέρδης); Κάβειροι.
36. -ελ-α/ο- (cf. the next): ἀμυσγέλα, ἀσφόδελος, βρίκελος, δρύψελα, (ἐπι)ζάφελος, ἰτθέλα, κύβελα, perhaps δυσπεμπελος.
37. -ελλ-α/ο- (cf. 36.): ἀκρόσπελλος, βάτελλα, βδέλλα, πάτελλα, πέλλα.
38. -εμ-ο- (Fur. 151[42]): ἰάλεμος, κοάλεμος, π(τ)όλεμος (if not IE), θελεμόν.
39. -εμν-(ο-) (Fur. 151[44]): ἀμφι-κέλεμνον, Καρτεμνίδες. TN Σέλεμνος (Fick: 95).
40. -εννν-α (I wonder whether n^{y} could give νν): τήβεννα. Cf. βλέννος. Cf. Lat. (from Etruscan) (doss-)ennus, Porsenna.
41. -ερ-α/ο-: διφθέρα, ἀσκέρα (also -ηρα), κασσίτερος. TN Ὤλερος (Crete).
42. -ετ-ο- (Fur. 115[4]): καιετός, καίπετος, μάσπετον, νέπετος, τηλύγετος? TN Ξυπέτη (Att.), Ταΰγετος.

42a. -ευ- as in nom. -εύς: βασιλεύς; several PNs like Ἀχιλ(λ)εύς, Ὀδυσσεύς.
43. -ευρ-: see -αυρ-.
44. -ευτ- (Fur. 173, 181[7]): βασκευταί, κρατευταί.
45. -ηβ-α/ο-: κύρηβος. TN Κάνδηβα, Τένδηβα, Τορρηβός (all in Lydia).
46. -ηθ-(ο-): TN Πεπάρηθος, Σεσάρηθος (Fick 67), Κικύνηθος (Pagas.), Πάρνης, -ηθ- (Att.). Cf. -αθ-.
47. -ηκ-, -ηχ- (Fur. 199, 245[70]): βήρηξ, δάνδηξ, λώβηξ, πήληξ, τράφηξ, φήληξ; κύμηξ / κύμηχα.
48. -ηλ-ο- (Fur. 115[5]): ἀβρόκηλος, ἀβύρβηλος, ἀσύφηλος, βάκηλος, κάβηλος, κίβδηλος, νενίηλος, τράχηλος, φάσηλος.
49. -ήν (Fur. 172[118]): ἀτμήν, ἀτταγήν, αὐχήν (ἄμφην), βαλ(λ)ήν, δοθιήν, ἐσσήν, καμασήν (-ασός), κυφήν, σειρήν, σωλήν, ταγήν, τιβήν, perhaps ἀδήν. TN Θηρήν (Crete, Fick: 25), Τροιζήν, Ἀραδήν (Crete).
50. -ην-: γλαβρήνη.
51. -ηρ: σπίνθηρ; Αἰγλάηρ? TN Ποθηρεύς (Crete), Κύθηρα.
52. -ηρ- (Fur. 204[10]): ἄβδηρα, ἄνδηρα, αἰψηρός, ἀσκάληρον, ἀσκηρά (-έρα); ἰμβηρις, κύπηρις, λεβηρίς.
53. -ησ(σ)-α/ο- (cf. -ασσ-): TN Μάρπησσα (M Paros), Μυκαλησσός (Boeotian, Fick 80); Ἀρδηττός (Att.), Ὑμηττός (Att.).
54. -ητ-(ο-) (Fur. 172[118]): ἀλ(λ)άβης, κάνης, λέβης, μάσθλης, τάπης (Myc. tepa). Perhaps also ἄν(ν)ητον (also -θον, -σον)? TN Μᾱ́σητα (Fick 71).
55. -ηττ-: see -ησσ-.
56. -ηψ-ο-: TN Αἴδηψός (Euboea), Γαληψός (Thracia).
57. -θ-ο- (see Chantraine 1933: 368, and cf. -νθος): βρένθος, κανθός, σπέλεθος, μίνθος.
58. -θρ-α/ο-: κύριθρα, μάραθρον; HN Λίβηθρα. On -αθρον see Fur. 303[39]: κάν(ν)αθρον, σπάλαθρον. Cf. on -στρ-ον.
59. -ῑβ-: ἐρυθῖβη.
60. -ῑγ-: μαστῑγ-, πεμφιγ-.
61. -ιγγ/κ/χ-: ἄστλιγγας, βρυτιγγοί, ἕλμιγγος, θρίγγος (also -ιγκ-, -ιγχ-), θῶμιγξ, -γγος, ὄλιγγος.
62. -ῑδ- (cf. -ινδ-, Fur. 324[7]): βαλβίς, γελγίς, κηλίς, κρηπίς, σφρᾱγίς.
63. -ιδ-να (probably a combination of two suffixes, cf. on -ν-): ἀράχιδνα (cf. ἄρακος, -χ-).
64. -ῑθ-, -ιθ- (cf. -ινδ-): ἄγλις, -ῑθ-, αἰγιθαλος, αἴγιθος, γάλιθοι, ἠλίθιος, κάλιθος.
65. -ικ- (cf. -ιχ-, Fur. 226[102]): κάλικον, κύρνικα, λέ(ί)κρικα, μυρίκη (later ῑ), νώρικον, σώσικες.
65a -ῑκ-: Φοίνικες.
66. -ιλ-, -ῑλ-: αἰγίλωψ, κονῖλη, μέσπιλον, μαρίλη, μυστῖλη, (σ)πατίλη (-ῑλ-) = παστίλη, στρόβῑλος. TN Σκανδίλη (Cos).
67. -ιλλ-α/ο-: ἄργιλλος, ἄμιλλα, ἄριλλα, ἄσιλλα, ῥόβιλλος.
68. -ιμν-α/ο- (Fur. 246[71]): μέδιμνος (also -ί-), μέριμνα, σίδριμνον.
69. -ιν-α/ο-: ἄκινος, ἀπόλινον, (βα)βάκινον, γοσσύπινον, κότινος, ὀξίνα. TN Μύρινα (Lemnos), Σίκινος (Cyclades).

70. -ῑν-(ο-): κύμινον, πυτίνη, ῥητίνη, σέλινον, φοξῖνος, φορίνη. TN Σαλαμῖν-.
71. -ινδ- (cf. -ινθ- and -ιδ-, -ιτ-): κύβινδις, ἄλινδον. TN Κραυσίνδων (R), Πύρινδος (Caria).
72. -ινθ-(ο-) (cf. -ινδ-): αἴγινθος, ἀσπίνθιον, λαβύρινθος, λίμινθες. TN Κήρινθος (Euboea), Κόρινθος (Fick 74).
72a. -ιξ-: κοτίξις, κυνίξεις, σόρνιξα.
72b. -ῑπ-ο-: TN Εὔρῖπος.
73. -ισ-α/ο-: ἄρπισα (-εζα), κύτισος. TN Λάρισα, Κεδρισός, Κηφισός (-ῖσος = -ισσος, Fick 25, 61).
73a. -ισκ-ο-: ἀλθίσκον, ἴβισκος, μαρίσκος, ὑρίσκος (and variants).
74. -ιτ-α/ο- (cf. -ιδ-, -ιθ-, Fur. 163): βάρβιτος, βόλ(β)ιτον, πόρφιτον. TN Σύβριτα (Crete).
75. -ιχ- (cf. -ικ-): ἄρσιχος.
76. -κν- (probably a combination of -ν- with a preceding consonant; see sub 78 on -ν-): ἄβαρκνα, δορύκνιον, πισάκνα, φιδάκνη.
77. -μ-: TN Λάτμος (Caria), Πάτμος.
78. -ν- (Fur. 132[65]), where a preceding velar may become aspirated: ἀράχνη, δαυχνα-, κέρκνος, κύδνος, κυλίχνιον, πελίχνη, σαταρνίς, ὕτνον / ὕδνον, ψύδνος; Κάβαρνος. TN Κύθνος (Cyclades).
79 -οξ- (cf. -ιξ-): μοροξός (also -χθ-).
80. -οπ- (Fur. 107), often there is a variant with -αβ-: ἔλ(λ)οψ, καλαῦροψ, -πος (-όφις), κόλλοψ, σκάλοψ. TN Κορόπη (Thess.), Κασσιόπη (Corc.).
81. -ορ- (see also the section on word end): ἄχορα (-υρα), λέπορις.
82. -οσσ-α, -οττ-α: TN Ἑρμώνοσσα (Chios), Ἀζιοττηνος (Lydia).
83. -ουλ-: φασίουλος (-ωλος)?
84. -ουρ- (may contine -arʷ-): ἴνδουρος, κάβουρος, λιγγούριον (also λο-, λυ-), παλίουρος, πάνδουρα, σάγουρον, τάγχουρος. TN Λυκόσουρα (Arc., the oldest town of all; Fick: 93).
85. -ουσ(σ)- (Fur. 197[55]): ἄγχουσα (also ἔ-), αἴθουσ(σ)α (also αἴδωσσα), κάδουσα. TN Ἀκίδουσα, Κηλοῦσα (M Κήλωσσα).
86. -πν- (this may rather be a suffix -ν- after a root): θεράπνη, ὄμπνη.
87. -πτ- (this suffix probably consisted of one phoneme p^y): μαρυπτόν, πέσσυ(μ)πτον, σάναπτιν.
88. -ρ- (Fur. 124[37]; 215[62]): βάλαγρος, γήλιγρος, σίγραι; Ἴδαγρος (= Lyc. idākre?). See also the suffixes -ρν-, -ργ- and -γρ-.
89. -ργ-: λάθαργος (also -αι-, -η-).
90. -ρδ-: TN Κύαρδα (Caria).
91. -ρν- (Fur. 48[126], 215[62]): ἀκαρνάν (ἀκάρναξ), κυβερνάω, λιπερνέω (also λιφ-), σκέπαρνος. We also find variants without -ν-: σίσυρνα / σίσυρα, κυβερνάω / κυμερῆναι, σαταρνίδες / σαταρίδες, κίσιρνις / κίσσιρις. Therefore, the cluster probably arose by addition of the suffix -ν-. Note that -rn- is found in Etruscan and already in Cappadocian (Fur. 48[126]). See also the suffix -ρ-. TN Φαλάσαρνα (Crete), Λέρνα, Ἀλίκυρνα (Aet.).

92. -σα: There are several words in -σα: δέψα, δίψα, κόψα (κοψία), κάψα (κάμψα), perhaps λάψα.
93. -σκ-: ὑρίσκος (-χ-, -σσ-).
94. -σ- (Fur. 254[27], in several cases this does not seem to be a suffix, but rather the end of a root; cf. on -ασ-, -ισ-, -υσ-): ἄλσος, κάβαισος (also -ασ-), μύσος, πῖσος, φάρσος. TN Πρίανσος (Crete).
95. -σσ-: κύπασσις, κυπάρισσος, σάρισσα.
96. -στ-: ἀλάβαστος, θεμιστ- (cf. Myc. temitija / timitija), λεπαστή, πλατάνιστος. TN Κάρυστος, Φαιστός.
97. -στρ- (cf. -θρ-): ἀλάβαστρον, δέπαστρον (also λ-), ἔνυστρον (also ἤ-), ζύγαστρον, λαι(σ)τρόν, σίγιστρον.
98. -τ-: ἄσφαλτος, ἄτρακτος, ἄφλαστον.
99. -ττ- (see 5.5 on ττ / σσ): κυριττοί, προκόττα; Φέρεφαττα.
100. -υβ-: ἔντυβον, θόρυβος, ἴντυβος (also -ουβ-), σίλλυβος, σκόλυβος (also -μ-), σκολύβρα (-οβ-); cf. ὀχθοιβός.
101. -υγγ-: λάρυγξ, πίσυγγος, σπῆλυγγ-, φάρυγξ.
102. -υδ-: ἀμύς, -δος, ἐμύς, κορυδός, πηλαμύς, χλαμύς.
103. -υδνα: TN Καλυδνά (Cos).
104. -υθ-, -ῡθ-: ἀγνῦς, λήκυθος.
105. -υι-α: ἄγυια, κώδυια; Ἅρπυια. TN Κινδυία (Crete, also Κινδύη, Fick 18, 24).
106. -υκ-: ἄμπυξ, ἴδυξ, σκαρδάμυκτος. TN Νᾶρυξ (Locris).
107. -ῡκ-: δοῖδυξ, κῆρυξ, -υκος, καρύκ(κ)η, σάνδυξ.
108. -υλ- (Fur. 205[14]): ἀρβύλη, δάκτυλος, κανθύλη, κρωβύλη, μιμαίκυλον (also με-), σφόνδυλος (also σπ-).
109. -ῡλ-: (σ)κορδύλη, σφονδύλη (also σπ-). TN Καρδαμύλη (Mess.).
110. -υλλ-: Σίβυλλα.
111. -υμ-: γέρσυμον, γίγγλυμος, -θέλυμνος. TN Κάρυμαι (Crete).
112. -υμβ-: ἴθυμβος, κόλυμβος.
113. -υμν- (cf. Fur. 243[66] on -umn- in Etruscan and Cappadocian): αἰσυμνάω, σίγυμνος. TN Ῥίτ/θυμνα (Crete), Λάρυμνα (Locr.).
114. -ῡν- (see also the suffix -υνν-): βόθυνος, σιγύνη (cf. -υνν-), λάγυνος. TN Γόρτυν (Crete).
115. -υνν-: σίγυννος, Δίκτυννα. Cf. on -ῡν-.
116. -υνδ- (cf. -υνθ / τ-): Βερεκύνδαι. TN Καμύνδιος (Rhodes).
117. -υνθ/τ-: βόλυνθον, ὄλυνθος; Βερεκύνθ/ται. TN Ζάκυνθος (+88), Τίρυνς.
118. -υξ-: TN Ὀλόφυξος (Athos).
119. -υπ-: ἴσσυπος (older ὕσσωπος), μάρσυππος, οἰσύπη, τολύπη.
120. -υρ-: ἀήσυρος, ἄχυρα (also -ορα), ζέφυρος, μαυκυρόν, λάθυρος, ὀνυρίζεται, σατύρος. TN Ἔλυρος (Crete), Τέγυρα (Boeotia), Νίσυρος (Cos).
121. -ῡρ-: ἄγκυρα, ἀνάγυρος (also ὀνό-), γέφῡρα, λάφυρον, πλημυρίς, πίτυρον.
122. -υσ- (on -υστρον see -στρον): ἄρυσος.
123. -υτ-: πινυτός, νηπύτιος. TN Λαγινάπυτον (Crete), Κολλυτός (Crete).
124. -υφ-: κέλῡφος.
125. -υχ-: βό(σ)τρυχος. TN Μόσυχλον (Lemnos).

126. -φθ-: κροσσόφθον, λάκαφθον, μόλοφθος, νά(σ)καφθον, σαρρυφθεῖν.
127. -φ- (on -αφ-ο- see Chantraine Form. 263): ἀργέλοφοι (also -ιλ-), μαστροφός (also -πός), σέριφος, σέσυφος.
128. -ωκ-: TN Κοθωκίδαι (Att., Fick 70).
129. -ωλ-: ἀποφώλιος (?), φάσκωλος. TN Κίμωλος (Cyclades).
130. -ωμ-: βάρωμος.
131. -ων- (Fur. 303[39]): ἀλκυών, ἠϊών, σανδών, σινδών, σχαδών.
132. -ωπ- (a variant is -ουπ-): θυμαλωψ, αἰγίλωπ-, κινώπετον (κυνοῦπες). TN Εὐρωπός / α (Crete), Κασσώπη (Epirus).
133. -ωρ- (Fur. 211[50]): ἀχώρ, ἀμάνωρ, βιάτωρ, ἰχώρ, λείτωρ. TN Πίλωρος (Chalc., Fick 22).
134. -ωσσ (see -ουσ(σ)-): TN Διρφωσσός (Euboea), Πιδωσσός (Caria, Fick 26).
135. -ωτ- (Fur. 283[83]; 384[132]): ἀσκαλαβώτης, -καυδωτόν, κῖβωτός, κράμβωτον, οἰσπώτη. TN Θεσπρωτοί.

3. Word end

Word end provides an interesting situation, as some original finals of the Pre-Greek language may have been preserved. Of course, Greek endings must be removed, notably -ος, -ον. Thus, -ιον, -υον may often continue original -ι, -υ: cf. Myc. dunijo next to duni. The words in -νθος have replaced almost all of those in -νθ- (as in Τίρυνθ-).

3.1. words ending in a vowel

a. -α. A short -α can only come from -ya < -ih$_2$ in inherited Greek words. In all other cases, we may be dealing with a Pre-Greek ending -a that was originally short. It is often difficult to see whether -α is short or long; the material requires further study. Examples: ἄβαρκνα, ἀγάννα, ἀγέρδα, ἄδαλτα (?), αἴκουδα, ἄβδηρα, ἄκαρα, ἄκορ-να, ἀκόστιλα, ἀκτάρα, ἄλαρα, ἀμουχρά, ἄρδα, ἀσταγάνα, ἄφθα, βρούκα, γόδα, γόλα, δάξα, δάρδα, δαλάγχα, θάπτα, μόδα, ῥόμιξα, σάττα, σόρνιξα, σοῦα, κέδροπα (also χ-), etc. Note forms in -υα, like ἄρυα, and in -εννα. Note, further, σαλαμάνδρα, σκολόπενδρα.

For words ending in -σα, see the list of suffixes.

b. -ι. IE words (neuters) in -ι are very rare in Greek. Examples of Pre-Greek words in -ι: ζάκτι, κόρι, σίναπι, τάγυρι (ταγύριον), ἀκαρί. We may assume that many words ending in -ιον, -υον originally ended in -ι, -υ. Final -ις is frequent, too.

c. -υ. ἀβαρύ, κόνδυ, μῶλυ. For -υον, see the foregoing. Final -υς is also found several times: ἄγδυς, ἄρπυς, ἀτράφαξυς, βίθυν, βλέτυς, -μένδυς, μίμαρκυς, μωύς, πηλαμύς, ῥάπυς.

d. -ευς. Though the ending may also be inherited from IE, in many words it is clearly of Pre-Greek origin, e.g. βασιλεύς (Myc. qa-si-re-u), Ἀχιλ(λ)εύς. I withdraw my considerations in FS Kortlandt on this point.

e. -ω. κοθώ, κόρθω, μοτώ, τῖτώ, Γελλώ. The suffix also makes feminine names in -ώ: Λητώ, Σαπφώ. It is usually assumed that the original inflection of all words in -ώ derives from stems in -oi-; I assume that Pre-Greek words secondarily joined this inflection. Words in -ως are masculine: ἀχαρνώ(ς), ἥρως; Μίνως, Τάλως.

3.2. words ending in -ρ

a. -αρ. ἄσαρ(ον)?, ἀκχάνταρ, βάκαρ, ἐλίμαρ, κύδαρ, νέκταρ, νῶκαρ, σελίαρ.

b. -ορ. Examples: ἀδιγόρ, ἀκκόρ, κακκόρ, κέμμορ (also -μπ-), πίσορ.

c. -υρ. Examples: ψίθυρ, (Dor.) μάρτυρ.

d. -ωρ. Examples: ἄχωρ, ἰχώρ, κέλωρ, ψόθωρ.

3.3. words with a nom. in -ξ or -ψ.

a. -ξ (stem in -κ-) is found quite often:
-αξ: ἄβαξ, ἀκάρναξ, ἄμβαξ, ἀνδράφαξ, ἄνθραξ, βύσταξ, μάλβαξ, σαῦσαξ. ἄναξ has a stem in -κτ-.
-ᾱξ: φέναξ, ῥάξ, σφήξ
-ηξ: δάνδηξ, βήρηξ
-ιξ: ἄδδιξ, ἀνθέριξ, ἀπρίξ, κόλιξ, ἄρπιξ
-οξ: βέβροξ, βίρροξ
-ουξ: βρούξ
-υξ: βλίτυξ, γόρτυξ; Πνύξ, Στύξ.
Note acc. βάλλεκα; acc. βρίγκα.

b. -ψ: λάτραψ, λαῖλαψ, ἄλιψ, κόριψ, αἰγίποψ, κόλλοψ, μέροψ, γύψ, μόνωψ. Monosyllabic: χρέμψ.

4. words in -ν: βαλλήν, καρβάν; Ωγήν. κίνδυν, μόσσυν, ῥώθυνες.

5. words ending in -ας (ᾱ-stems): ἀβάς, ἄβλας, ἄθρας(?), ἀμφίας, ἀσκαλώπας, ἀσκωνδας, ἀτταγᾶς, βαδάς (βατᾶς), βασκᾶς, βύας, καλαβάς, κασᾶς; Ἀθάμας, Ἀσγελατας.

With a stem in -αντ-: ἀλίβας (-ντ-), λυκάβας (-ντ-) etc.; see the suffix section.
With stem in αδ-: ἀχράς, βουνιάς, πρημνάς; see the suffix section.

D. The unity of Pre-Greek

The material itself shows that we are largely dealing with one language, or a group of closely related dialects or languages. Of course, we cannot demonstrate in each and every case that the words that are non-Greek belong to this same language. The bulk of the known non-Greek words, however, seem to fit the general picture of the Pre-Greek substrate. For example, κότθυβος / κόσυμβος does not only show the element σσ / τθ, well-known from geographical names, but also the suffix -υβ- with prenasalization. The pair κρόσσιον / κρότιον also shows the element σσ / τ, but κρόσσοφθον has a suffix added that is also typical for this language. The word δαλάγχαν next to θάλασσα (-ττα) again has the suffix σσ / ττ, but also prenasalization. ἄστλιγξ / ὄστλιγξ has both the typical (prenasalized) suffix -ιγγ- and variation α / ο. In μήρινθος / σμήρινθος we have the 's-mobile' and the well known suffix, while μέρμις, -ιθος has the variant without prenasalization, and σμήριγγες has a different Pre-Greek suffix. In ἄ(μ)βρυττοι / βρύττος (βρύσσος) we have a combination of a prothetic vowel and prenasalization.

Other languages may well have existed in the area. Thus, it is not certain that Hieroglyphic Minoan reproduces the same language as Linear A. Further, Eteocretan has not yet been connected with other elements and seems isolated.

Another matter is that (non-Indo-European) loanwords from old Europe may have entered Greece, cf. Beekes 2000: 21-31. Moreover, these may have already been adopted in Pre-Greek, as is suggested by ἐρέβινθος, which has a Pre-Greek suffix, but a root which is attested (with some variation) in other European languages. Sometimes, elements from other IE languages may also have been adopted at a very early date, such as πέλεκυς.

However, I think that it is methodologically more sound to start from the assumption that non-Greek words are Pre-Greek. Only when there is reason to assume that they have a different origin, should we consider this option.

E. Pre-Greek is non-Indo-European

Our knowledge of Indo-European has expanded so much, especially in the last thirty years (notably because of the laryngeal theory) that in some cases we can say almost with certainty that an Indo-European reconstruction is impossible. A good example is the word γνάθος. In order to explain the -a- of this word, we need to introduce a h_2. However, a preform gnh_2d^h- would have given Gr. *γνᾱθ-. One might think that assuming h_2e would remedy the problem, but gnh_2ed^h- would yield *γαναθ-. The conclusion is that no Indo-European proto-form can be reconstructed, and that the word cannot be of Indo-European origin. Another example is the word κρημνός 'overhanging bank', for which a connection with κρέμαμαι 'to hang (up)' used to be evident. However, we now know that most long vowels go back to a short vowel plus a laryngeal, and that long vowels cannot be postulated at random. In this particular case, there are simply no conceivable formations that would contain a long root vowel. This morphological objection is strengthened by the fact that there is no trace of the expected root-final -α- < *-h_2- (as in κρεμαμαι < $kremh_2$-). Positively, one can say that landscape terms are frequently borrowed from a substrate language. The inevitable conclusion is that the word is Pre-Greek.

ABBREVIATIONS AND SYMBOLS

A. LANGUAGES

Aegin.	Aeginetan
Aeol.	Aeolic
Aetol.	Aetolian
Alb.	Albanian
Arc.	Arcadian
Arc.-Cypr.	Arcado-Cyprian
Arg.	Argive
Arm.	Classical Armenian
Att.	Attic
Av.	Avestan
AV	Atharvavedic
Balt.	Baltic
Bel.	Belorussian
Boeot.	Boeotian
Bret.	Breton
BSl.	Balto-Slavic
Bulg.	Bulgarian
CLuw.	Cuneiform Luwian
Co.	Cornish
Corcyr.	Corcyrean
Cret.	Cretan
CS	Church Slavic
Cypr.	Cyprian
Cyren.	Cyrenaean
Cz.	Czech
Dan.	Danish
Delph.	Delphian
Dor.	Doric
El.	Elean
ep.	epic
Epid.	Epidaurian
Etr.	Etruscan
Fal.	Faliscan
Gaul.	Gaulish
gloss.	in glosses
Gm.	Germanic
Go.	Gothic
Gr.	Greek
H.	Hesychius
Heracl.	Heraclean
Hitt.	Hittite
HLuw.	Hieroglyphic Luwian
IA	Ionic-Attic
IE	Indo-European
IIr.	Indo-Iranian
Ion.	Ionic
Ir.	Irish
It.	Italic
Khot.	Khotanese
Lac.	Laconian
Lat.	Latin
Latv.	Latvian
Lesb.	Lesbian
Lith.	Lithuanian
LG	Low German
Locr.	Locrian
Luw.	Luwian
Lyc.	Lycian
Lyd.	Lydian
MBret.	Middle Breton
MCo.	Middle Cornish
MDu.	Middle Dutch
ME	Middle English
Meg.	Megarian
Mess.	Messenian
MHG	Middle High German
MIr.	Middle Irish
MLG	Middle Low German
MoDu.	Modern Dutch
MoE	Modern English

MoFr.	Modern French
MoHG	Modern High German
MoIr.	Modern Irish
MoNw.	Modern Norwegian
MoP	Modern Persian
MoSw.	Modern Swedish
MP	Middle Persian
MW	Middle Welsh
Myc.	Mycenaean
NPhr.	New Phrygian
NWGr.	North-West Greek
Osc.	Oscan
OAlb.	Old Albanian
OAv.	Old Avestan
OBret.	Old Breton
OCo.	Old Cornish
OCS	Old Church Slavonic
OCz.	Old Czech
OE	Old English
OFr.	Old Frisian
OHG	Old High German
OIc.	Old Icelandic
OIr.	Old Irish
OLat.	Old Latin
OLFr.	Old Low Franconian
OLG	Old Low German
OLith.	Old Lithuanian
OP	Old Persian
OPhr.	Old Phrygian
OPo.	Old Polish
OPr.	Old Prussian
ORu.	Old Russian
OS	Old Saxon
Oss.	Ossetic
OSw.	Old Swedish
OW	Old Welsh
Pael.	Paelignian
Pal.	Palaic
PAlb.	Proto-Albanian
Pamph.	Pamphylian
PAnat.	Proto-Anatolian
PCl.	Proto-Celtic
PGm.	Proto-Germanic
Phoc.	Phocian
Phryg.	Phrygian
PIA	Proto-Ionic-Attic
PIAr.	Proto-Indo-Aryan
PIE	Proto-Indo-European
PIr.	Proto-Iranian
PIt.	Proto-Italic
Pol.	Polish
PSl.	Proto-Slavic
PTo.	Proto-Tocharian
QIE	Quasi-Indo-European
Rhod.	Rhodian
Ru.	Russian
RuCS	Russian Church Slavic
RV	Rigvedic
SCr.	Serbo-Croatian
Sicil.	Sicilian
Skt.	Sanskrit
Sln.	Slovene
Sogd.	Sogdian
Sw.	Swedish
Swi.	Swiss German
Thess.	Thessalian
ToA	Tocharian A
ToAB	Tocharian A and B
ToB	Tocharian B
U	Umbrian
Ukr.	Ukranian
Ven.	Venetic
VLat.	Vulgar Latin
W	Welsh
WGm.	West-Germanic
YAv.	Young Avestan

B. RECONSTRUCTION, GRAMMAR AND TEXT

abl.	ablative
acc.	accusative
acc. to	according to
act.	active
AD	anno domini
adj.	adjective
adv.	adverb
aor.	aorist
athem.	athematic
BC	before Christ
c.	century
cf.	compare coll.	collective compar.	comparative
conj.	1. conjecture
	2. conjunction
dat.	dative
desid.	desiderative
dial.	dialectal
DN	theonym
du.	dual
e.g.	for example
EN	ethnonym
encl.	enclitic
et al.	and others
f.	feminine
fthc.	forthcoming
fut.	future
gen.	genitive
H	any PIE laryngeal
HN	hydronym
id.	idem
ind.	indicative
indecl.	indeclinable
inj.	injunctive
ins.	instrumental
inscr.	inscription(s)
interr.	interrogative
intr.	intransitive
ipf.	imperfect
ipv.	imperative
irr.	irregular
lit.	literally
litt.	literature
loc.	locative
m.	masculine
med.	middle
n.	neuter
neg.	negative
nom.	nominative
num.	numeral
obl.	oblique
opt.	optative
p.	page
p.c.	personal communication
pcl.	particle
perf.	perfect
pers.	personal
pl.	plural
PN	personal name
postpos.	postposition
ppp.	passive past particple
pres.	present
pref.	prefix
prep.	preposition
pret.	preterite
prev.	preverb
pron.	pronoun
pass.	passive
ptc.	participle
rel.	relative
subj.	subjunctive
sg.	singular
superl.	superlative
s.v.	sub voce
them.	thematic
TN	toponym
trans.	transitive
v.	verb
var.	variant
vel sim.	or similarly
viz.	namely, to wit
voc.	vocative

C. AUTHORS AND WORKS

Only the most common authors and works are mentioned here. Please refer to LSJ for a complete list.

A. = Aeschylus
AB = Anecdota Graeca, v. I
A.D. = Apollonius Dyscolus
A.R. = Apollonius Rhodius
Aesch. Alex. = Aeschylus Alexandrinus
Agath. = Agathias
Alc. = Alcaeus
Alcm. = Alcman
Amm. Marc. = Ammianus Marcellinus
And. = Andocides
Ant. Diog. = Antonius Diogenes
Ant. Lib. = Antoninus Liberalis
Antip. = Antipater Antiph. = Antiphanes
Ap. Ty. = Apollonius Tyanensis
Apollon. = Apollonius
App. = Appianus
Ar. = Aristophanes
Ar. Did. = Arius Didymus
Arc. = Arcadius
Arch. = Archias
Arist. = Aristoteles
Ascl. = Asclepiodotus or Asclepius
Asclep. = Asclepiades
Asp. = Aspasius
Ath. = Athenaeus
Aus. = Ausonius
B. = Bacchylides
Bacch. = Bacchius
Call. = Callimachus
Call. Com. = Callias Comicus
Call. Hist. = Callias Historicus
Callin. = Callinus
Cerc. = Cercidas
Cercop. = Cercopes
Com. = Comedy, Comic
D. = Demosthenes
D. C. = Dio Cassius
D. Chr. = Dio Chrysostomus
D. H. = Dionysius Halicarnassensis
D. L. = Diogenes Laertius
D. P. = Dionysius Periegeta
D. S. = Diodorus Siculus
D. T. = Dionysius Thrax Dam. = Damascius
Din. = Dinarchus
Diog. = Diogenes
Dioph. = Diophantus
Dsc. = Dioscorides Medicus
E. = Euripides EM = Etymologicum Magnum
Ep. = in the Epic dialect
Epic. = Epicus
Epig. = Epigenes
Epin. = Epinicus
Et. Gen. = Etymologicum Genuinum
Et. Gud. = Etymologicum Gudianum
Eub. = Eubulus
Euc. = Euclides
Eup. = Eupolis
Euph. = Euphorio
Eust. = Eustathius
Eustr. = Eustratius
Foed. = Foedus
Gal. = Galenus
Gramm. = Grammarians
h. Ap., etc. = Hymnus ad Apollinem, etc.
h. Hom. = hymni Homerici
H. = Hesychius
Halic. = Halicarnassus
Hdn. = Herodianus
Hdt. = Herodotus
Heracl. = Heraclas
Herod. = Herodas
Herod. Med. = Herodotus Medicus
Hes. = Hesiodus
Hld. = Heliodorus, Scriptor Eroticus
Hom. = Homer
Hp. = Hippocrates
Hsch. = Hesychius

Hymn. = Hymnus, Hymni
Il. = Iliad
Is. = Isaeus
J. = Josephus
Leon. = Leonidas (two epigrammatists)
Leonid. = Leonidas Medicus
Lyc. = Lycophron
Lyr. = Lyricus, Lyric poetry
Lys. = Lysias
Lysim. = Lysimachus
Mel. = Meleager
Meliss. = Melissus
Men. = Menander
Moer. = Moeris
Mosch. = Moschus
NT = Novum Testamentum
Nic. = Nicander or Nicias
Nic. Dam. = Nicolaus Damascenus
Od. = Odyssey
Orac. = Oraculum
Oratt. = Oratores Attici
Orchom. = Orchomenus
Pall. = Palladius or Palladas
Parm. = Parmenides
Ph. = Philo
Phan. = Phanias
Phil. = Philippus Epigrammaticus
Philet. = Philetas
Philipp. Com. = Philippus Comicus
Philol. = Philolaus
Philonid. = Philonides
Phld. = Philodemus Philosophus
Phlp. = Philoponus
Phoen. = Phoenix
Pi. = Pindarus
Pl. = Plato
Plb. = Polybius
Plin. = Pliny
Poet. = Poeta, poetica post-Hom. = post-Homeric Prisc. = Priscus Historicus Quint. = Quintilianus
Rhet. = Rhetorical, Rhetoric
Ruf. = Rufus
S. = Sophocles
S. E. = Sextus Empiricus
Sext. = Sextus Philosophus
Sm. = Symmachus
St. Byz. = Stephanus Byzantius
Str. = Strabo
Tab. Heracl. = Tabulae Heracleenses
Th. = Thucydides
Them. = Themistius Themist. = Themistocles
Theo Sm. = Theon Smyrnaeus
Theoc. = Theocritus
Theod. = Theodorus
Thgn. = Theognis
Thphr. = Theophrastus
Ti. Locr. = Timaeus Locrus
Tim. = Timotheus Lyricus
Tim. Com. = Timotheus Comicus
Tim. Gaz. = Timotheus Gazaeus
Tim. Lex. = Timaeus Grammaticus
Trag. = Tragic, Tragedy
Tryph. = Tryphiodorus
X. = Xenophon
Xenoph. = Xenophanes
Zen. = Zenobius
Zon. = Zonas

D. SYMBOLS

>	becomes by regular phonological development
<	reflects by regular phonological development
>>	is replaced by way of analogy
<<	replaces by way of analogy
◄XX►	the origin of the word (see preface above)
⇒	see also the entry
►	see s.v.
(?)	meaning uncertain or appurtenance uncertain
*X	a reconstructed item of a proto-stage
<X>	spelled with the symbol X
/X/	the phoneme X
[X]	phonetically pronounced as X

A

ἀ- 1 copulative prefix (ἀ ἀθροιστικόν). ◄IE sm-*►

•VAR E.g. in ἅπαξ; by Grassmann's dissimilation or by psilosis also ἀ-, which was analogically extended: ἄλοχος, ἀδελφός; ἄπεδος 'even', ἄβιος 'rich'. A form like Hom. ἄκοιτις was not aspirated because the Attic redactors of the text did not know the word, so they followed the Ionic pronunciation (cf. ἥλιος next to ἠέλιος).

•ETYM From IE sm-* in Skt. sa- (sá-nāman- 'with the same name'), Lat. sem-, sim- (sim-plex), from PIE sm̥-, a zero grade to sem in Skt. sám 'together', ►εἷς. Within Greek, cf. also ►ὁμός, ►ἅμα. From the meaning 'together, provided with', the so-called ἀ ἐπιτατικόν (intensive) developed, e.g. ἄ-εδνον· πολύφερνον 'with much dowry' (H.), cf. ►ἕδνα. It has been supposed that in some cases a comparable ἀ- arose from n̥-* (the zero grade of *h_1en 'in'), e.g. ἀλέγω (Seiler KZ 75 (1957): 1-23), but the alleged instances are probably all wrong.

ἀ- 2 privative prefix (ἀ στερητικόν). ◄IE n-*►

•VAR Prevocalic ἀν-.

•ETYM The antevocalic form ἀν- arose because of a following laryngeal (Indo-European roots always started with a consonant), which led to vocalization of the nasal: n̥-HV-* > anV-. In Greek, the loss of initial consonants (u̯-, s-*) disturbed the original distribution: thus ἄισος (< *ἀ-ϝισος) next to the reshaped ἄνισος. Sometimes this led to analogical forms, like ἄ-οζος next to original ἄν-οζος. In the Myc. PN a-u-po-no /Ahupnos/, the a- stands before h-, like in classical ἄυπνος. In ἀόριστος (to ὅρος < worwo-), we see that the initial ϝ- was originally retained before o as well.

If the second member began with laryngeal + cons., this yielded Greek νη-, νᾱ-, νω- like in νήγρετος, νωδός < *$n\text{-}h_1gr$-, *$n\text{-}h_3d$-. These adjectives were later reshaped, e.g. into ἀνώνυμος (see Beekes 1969: 98-113) In ἀνάεδος, ἀνά-ελπτος and ἀνάπνευστος, which seem to show ἀνα- 'un-', the last two are analogical, and the first may stand for ἀν-εεδν-. On pleonastic ἀ(ν)-, cf. ►ἀβέλτερος.

ἀ(ν)- was originally limited to verbal adjectives and bahuvrīhis, both in Greek and in other IE languages; see Frisk 1941: 4ff., 44ff., Frisk 1948: 8ff., Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 284ff., Wackernagel 1920-1924(1): 282f., and Moorhouse 1959. In other languages, we have e.g. Skt. a(n)-, Lat. in-, Go. un-, all from PIE n̥-. The sentence negative was ne, in Lat. ne-scio, ne-fas, etc., but this use is not attested for Greek (not in ►νέποδες).

ἀ- 3 ◄PG(V)►

•ETYM In Pre-Greek substrate words, a "prothetic vowel" occurs, e.g. ἄσταχυς next to στάχυς. In other words, the prothetic vowel may be present in the reflex of a substrate word or not.
Without a doubt, a phonetic process was at the origin of these variations. It is rather frequent, see Fur.: 368-378. The vowel was almost always ἀ- (only very few exceptions can be recorded, see Pre-Greek).

ἀ- 4 in Anatolian place names, e.g. Ἀπαισός / Παισός, Ἄθυμβρα / Θύμβρα. ◁LW▷ •ETYM The origin of the phenomenon is unknown, and could be different from that of the Pre-Greek prothetic vowel. It is probably due to adaptation from a non-IE language.

ἆ 5 interjection (Il.). ◁ONOM▷ •DER ἄζω [v.] 'to sigh, groan'.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic; see Schwyzer: 716.

ἀάατος Mg. unknown. In νῦν μοι ὄμοσσον ἀ. Στυγὸς ὕδωρ (Ξ 271) 'inviolable'?, ἄεθλος ἀ. (φ 91, χ 5) 'infallible'?, κάρτος ἀ. (A. R. 2, 77) 'invincible'? ◁?▷
•VAR For the varying length of the vowel, see LfgrE s.v.
•ETYM Comparable to ►ἄτη and ►ἀάω 'to damage'. Cf. perhaps ἀάβακτοι· ἀβλαβεῖς 'undamaged' (H.). Note that the privative prefix is ἀ-, not ἀν-.

ἄαδα · ἔνδεια. Λάκωνες 'want, lack (Lacon.)' (H.). ◁?▷
•DER ἀαδεῖν· ἀπορεῖσθαι, ἀσιτεῖν 'to be in distress, abstain from food' (H.), see on ►ἄδην. We also find ἀαδεῖν· ὀχλεῖν, λυπεῖσθαι, ἀδικεῖν 'to disturb, be vexed, be wronged' (s.v. ►ἁνδάνω, ►ἡδύς).
•ETYM The forms and meanings are uncertain; see DELG for an uncertain suggestion by Frisk. Latte assumes ἄδδ = ἄζα, contrary to the alphabetical order.

ἀάζω [v.] 'to breathe with the mouth wide open' (Arist.). ◁ONOM▷ •DER ἀασμός (Arist.).
•ETYM Probably onomatopoeic. Another suggestion by Solmsen 1901: 284 relates it to ►ἄημι. Cf. perhaps ►ἄζω 2, from ►ἆ.

ἀάνθα [f.] · εἶδος ἐνωτίου παρὰ Ἀλκμᾶνι ὡς Ἀριστοφάνης 'a kind of earring in Alcm., acc. to Ar.' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Schulze 1892: 38 explained it as *αὐσ-ανθα to the root of οὖς < *h_2*ous*-, but since the suffix is unclear (cf. οἰνάνθη), this analysis cannot be substantiated. Cf. also Bechtel 1921, 2: 366.

ἄαπτος [adj.] In χεῖρες ἄαπτοι (Hom., Hes.), later of κῆτος (Opp.), perhaps 'invincible'. ◁?▷ •ETYM Aristophanes read *ἀέπτους, which is also unclear. Meier-Brügger's explanation of ►ἀπτοεπής does not convince me. Cf. ►ἄεπτος and ►ἑάφθη.

ἄ(α)τος ⇒ ἄητος.

ἀάσχετος ⇒ ἔχω.

ἀάω [v.] 'to damage', med. 'act in blindness' (Il.). ◁IE? *h_2euh_2-▷ •VAR Beside pres. ἀᾶται (Τ 91 = 129) < *ἀϝᾰέται only aor. ἄασα (contracted ἆσα) < *ἄϝᾰσα, med. -άμην, pass. ἀάσθην. With -σκ-: ἀάσκει· φθείρει, βλάπτει 'destroys, damages' (H.); difficult κατέβασκε· κατέβλαψεν 'damaged' (H.), for *κατ-αβασκε?
•COMP ἀεσίφρων (wrong for ἀασι-) 'damaged in mind' (Il.), cf. ἀασιφόρος· βλάβην φέρων 'bringing damage' (H.); ἀνατ(ε)ί 'without harm, with impunity' (A.).
•ETYM For PGr. awa-je/o-*, we may mechanically reconstruct an IE root h_2euh_2-, but there are no known cognates. A verbal noun awá-teh$_2$-, with which compare αὐάτα (Alc.), yields ►ἄτη 'damage, guilt, delusion'. Not connected to ►ὠτειλή.

ἄβα · τροχὸς ἢ βοή 'wheel or screaming' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM In the sense of 'screaming', Specht compared ἄβα with Hom. αὖε [ipf.] 'called'. See further the glosses ἀβήρει· ᾄδει 'sings' and ἀβέσσει· ἐπιποθεῖ, θορυβεῖ 'yearns for, makes noise' (both H.); lastly also ἄβωρ with the meaning βοή. See ►αὐδή, ►ἀείδω.

ἄβαγνα · ῥόδα Μακεδόνες 'roses (Maced.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM See Kalléris 1954: 66-73; Belardi Ric. ling. 4 (1958): 196.

ἀβακής [adj.]◁?▷
•VAR Only Aeol. ἀβάκην φρένα [acc.sg.] (Sapph.), explained as ἡσύχιον καὶ πρᾷον 'quiet and gentle' (EM).
•DER ἀβάκησαν (δ 249) 'ἡσύχασαν' (?) and ἀβακιζόμενος 'quiet' (Anacr.). Further ἀβακήμων· ἄλαλος, ἀσύνετος 'unspoken, not understood' (H.), and ἀβάκητος· ἀνεπίφθονος 'without reproach' (H.).
•ETYM Perhaps it belongs to ►βάζω (βέβακται, βάξις) 'to speak'.

ἀβακλή ⇒ ἄμαξα.

ἀβαλῆ · ἀχρεῖον, Λάκωνες 'useless, foolish (Lacon.)'. οἱ δὲ νωθρὸν 'bastard' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Fur.: 167, 348 compares ἄβελλον· ταπεινόν 'vile, low' (H., Cyr.) and ἄβαλις· μοχθηρὰ ἐλαία 'worthless olive tree' (H.), but not ►ἀφελής.

ἄβαλις ⇒ ἀβαλῆ.

ἀβάντασιν · ἀνάβασιν 'mounting' (H.). ◁GR?▷
•ETYM For earlier *ἀ(μ)βάντασσιν [dat.pl.]? See Schwyzer: 50.

ἄβαξ, -κος [m.] 'board for calculating or drawing' (Cratin., Arist.). ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM Etymology unknown. The assumption of a loan from Hebr. 'ābāq 'sand, dust' (Lewy 1895: 173) is semantically weak (rejected by E. Masson 1967: 97). On the meaning, cf. Bruneau REGr. 80 (1967): 325-330; see also Kratzsch WZHalle 23 (1973): 126, who defends the connection with Hebrew. Borrowed as Lat. abacus. Kuiper compared ἀμάκιον· ἄβαξ. Λάκωνες (H.), but Fur.: 221 doubts this. Yet, if the comparison is correct, the word is Pre-Greek (variation β/μ).

ἀβαριστάν · γυναικιζομένην, καθαιρομένην καταμηνίοις. Κύπριοι 'being made to play a womanly role, being cleansed or purified during the menses (Cypr.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Related to ►σαβαρίχις, with Cyprian loss of s-?

ἄβαρκνα [f.] · λιμός 'hunger' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Fur.: 122 connects it to μαργός 'mad, gluttonous', which is not convincing. The formation with -να after -κ- suggests Pre-Greek origin.

ἀβαρταί ⇒ ἀφαρεύς.

ἄβαρτος · ἄπληστος 'greedy', οἱ δὲ ἄμαργος 'greedy' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR ἀβαρτία. ἀπληστία 'greediness' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 217 connects it to μάργος, which seems difficult formally; or do we have to read *ἄβαργος? If so, the word clearly shows a prothetic vowel, which points to substrate origin.

ἀβαρύ [n.] · ὀρίγανον <τὸ ἐν> Μακεδονίᾳ (or Μακεδονίας?) 'oregano (Maced.)' (H.). ◂LW▸ •ETYM Related to ἀμάρακον 'origanum', acc. to Fur.: 210. Cf. also βαρύ· τινὲς μέν φασι θυμίαμα εὐῶδες 'acc. to some, an odoriferous incense' (H.); see Latte. The suggestion of Kalléris 1954: 75f., who assumes connection with βαρύς as 'having a strong (heavy) odor' (with prothetic α), is untenable.

ἄβδελλον [adj.] · ταπεινόν 'low, abased' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Hesychius also has ἄβελλον with the same mg.; Latte rejects it as a corruption of the other form, which is unnecessary.
•ETYM See Fur.: 167. If the variation βδ / β is real, it is a Pre-Greek word, which is likely anyway for a form with βδ.

ἄβδηρα [f.] · καὶ ἄβδια ἡ θάλασσα (EM 3, 8). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Fur.: 309 connects it with the TN Ἄβδηρα.

ἄβδης [m., f.] · μάστιξ παρ' Ἱππώνακτι 'whip (Hippon.)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Probably a foreign word in Hipponax; see O. Masson 1962: 170 (fr. 130). Fur.: 388 convincingly compares ἀβριστήν· μάστιγα (H.). The word is Pre-Greek because of the cluster βδ (see ibid.: 318), with -βρ- perhaps representing earlier -βδ-.

ἄβεις · ἔχεις 'vipers; you have' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Perhaps Illyrian, with β from IE $*g^{wh}$, as in νίβα· χιόνα. It is unlikely, however, that ἔχις should be reconstructed as h_1eg^{wh}-i-. Maybe the gloss is just Lat. habēs (see Pisani Paideia 10 (1955): 279).

ἄβελλον ⇒ ἀβαλη, ἄβδελλον.

ἀβέλτερος [adj.] 'simple, stupid' (Ar.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Wackernagel GGN (1902): 745ff. connected it with βέλτερος, assuming that an original mg. 'morally good' developed into 'too good, simple', with an unclear prefix. This is unlikely; see Osthoff MU 6 (1910): 177 and Hatzidakis Glotta 11 (1921): 175f for different analyses.

ἀβέρβηλον [adj.] · πολύ, ἐπαχθές, μέγα, βαρύ, ἀχάιστον, μάταιον 'much, heavy or burdensome, great, empty, rash' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἀβύβηλον (H.) is glossed in the same way; also -ητος (EM).

•ETYM The variation points to a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 374 compares MoGr. βύρβηλο 'abundance'.

ἀβήρ [m./f.]? · οἴκημα στοὰς ἔχον, ταμεῖον. Λάκωνες 'house provided with store-houses, treasury (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Not identical with ►ἀήρ 'air' (as in Frisk, who compares MoSw. vind 1. 'wind' 2. 'bottom').

ἀβίλλιον ⇒ ἀμίλλακαν.

ἄβιν [acc.m./f.] · ἐλάτην, οἱ δὲ πεύκην 'silver fir; pine' (H.). ◂LW?▸ •ETYM Comparing Lat. abiēs, Mayer KZ 66 (1939): 96f. assumed that PIE ab-* 'tree' occurs in several Illyrian and Iranian names, such as Ἄβαι, Ἄβροι, Ἀβική = Ὑλαία (St. Byz.). If this is the case, is the root from a non-IE language in Europe?

ἀβιτώριον [n.] 'latrine' (IGR I, 599, Istropolis, Scythia Minor). ◂LW Lat.▸
•ETYM From an unknown Lat. abitōrium* 'latrine', in turn from abire (DELG Supp.): a case in which a Latin word is known only from Greek.

ἀβλαδέως [adv.] · ἡδέως 'sweet' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM A connection with *βλαδύς 'powerless' leaves the initial vowel unexplained (see on ►βλαδεῖς); the semantic development is also problematic. Connection with ►ἀμαλδύνω 'to make weak' would point to h_2mld- (with -αλ- analogically after the full grade *ἀμελδ-), but in this case one would expect *ἀμβλαδ- for our word; there is yet no etymology.

ἄβλαροι [m.] · ξύλα 'wood' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 370 compares βδαροί· δρύες, δένδρα 'trees' (H.); the word is Pre-Greek (with prothetic vowel and βδ alternating with βλ). It is less probable that ►βάρυες also belongs here.

ἀβληχρός ⇒ βληχρός.

ἀβλοπές [adj.] · ἀβλαβές. Κρῆτες 'sound, undamaged (Cret.)' (H.). ⇒ βλάπτω.

ἀβολεῖς [m./f.] · περιβολαὶ ὑπὸ Σικελῶν 'garments (Sicilian)' (H.).
•ETYM Probably related to ►ἀβόλλης.

ἀβολέω [v.] 'meet' (A. R., Call.), = ἀντιβολέω. ◂GR?▸
•VAR ἀβολῆσαι· ἀπαντῆσαι 'to encounter' (H.).
•DER ἀβολητύς 'meeting' (H.).
•ETYM Cf. ἤβολον ἦμαρ· καθ' ὅ ἀπαντῶσιν εἰς ταὐτόν, ἢ εὔκαιρον, ἱερόν (H.), which may have its length for metrical reasons, or alternatively have arisen by decomposition; cf. ►ἐπήβολος. The ἀ- could be copulative (see ►ἀ- 1).

ἀβόλλης [m.] 'kind of coat' (imperial period). ◂LW▸ •VAR Also ἀβολλα (Peripl. M. Rubr.).
•ETYM LW from Lat. abolla (Varro). Cf. ►ἀβολεῖς.

ἀβραμίς a fish, a kind of mullet (Opp.). ◂LW? Eg.▸

•VAR Also ἄβραμις, ἀβραβίς (PLond. ined., III^p).
•ETYM The fish was salted in Egypt (Ath. 7, 312b). Fur.: 220 thinks that the form with β is due to a recent assimilation. It is either Pre-Greek, or a loan from Egyptian.

ἀβριστήν ⇒ ἄβδης.

ἀβρός [adj.] 'graceful, delicate, pretty' (Hes.); mostly of young girls and women. ◂?▸
•VAR Fem. ἅβρα 'favorite slave' (not a Semitic loan, E. Masson 1967: 98).
•DER ἁβρότης 'splendor, luxury', ἁβροσύνη 'id.'; denominative ἁβρύνομαι [v.] 'to live a delicate life', act. 'to treat soft-heartedly'.
•ETYM No etymology. Not related to ἥβη 'youthful power', which has η- < *ē (< *eh_1). On the feminine substantive, see Francis Glotta 53 (1975): 43-66.

ἀβροτάζω [v.] 'to miss'. ◂GR▸ •VAR Only in ἀβροτάξομεν [aor.subj.] (K 65).
•DER ἀβρόταξις (H., Eust.).
•ETYM Perhaps formed on the basis of ἤμβροτον, the aorist of ► ἁμαρτάνω. Could it be an artificial archaism of the Doloneia (DELG)? On -βρ- instead of -μβρ-, see Schwyzer: 277. Is it metrically conditioned?

ἀβρότονον [n.] 'wormwood' (Thphr.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἁ-.
•ETYM Unknown; probably a loanword, perhaps from the Greek substrate. Connected with ἁβρός by folk etymology. From Akk. (a)murdennu 'flower with thorns', acc. to Bailey TPS 1955: 82.

ἄβρυνα [n.pl.] 'mulberries' (Parth. apud Ath.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἁ-.
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀβρυτοί [m.] · ἐχίνων θαλασσίων εἶδος 'kind of sea urchin' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἀμβρυττοι· εἶδος ἐχίνων θαλασσίων 'id.', βρύττος (Ar.), βρύσσος (Arist.).
•ETYM The formal variation (prothetic vowel and prenasalization) is typical of Pre-Greek substrate words.

ἀβυδόν [adj.] · βαθύ 'deep' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM von Blumenthal IF 49 (1931): 175 considers it to have an Illyrian origin ("bottomless", related to βυθός). If the connection with βυθός is correct, it is not necessarily Illyrian, but could also be a substrate word with prothetic ἀ-. See ► βυθός.

ἀβύρβηλος ⇒ ἀβέρβηλος.

ἀβυρτάκη [f.] a sauce of leek, cress and pomegranate seeds (Pherecr.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Defined as ὑπότριμμα βαρβαρικόν 'a foreign dish' (Suid.). Theopompus wrote: ἥξει δὲ Μήδων γαῖαν, ἔνθα ποιεῖται ἀβυρτάκη 'he will arrive in Media, where the ἀ. is made' (Suid. 17 Kock), so perhaps it is an Iranian loan. But the structure ἀ-βυρτ-ακ-η is reminiscent of Pre-Greek words; for the suffix, cf. βατιάκη, καυνάκη, πιστάκη. See also Fur.: 158[64].

ἄβυσσος ⇒ βυθός.

ἀγα- intensifying prefix, e.g. ἀγα-κλεής 'of great renown'. ◂IE *meǵ-h_2- 'great'▸ •DER Verbs: ἄγαμαι [v.] 'to admire, envy', ἀγάομαι (Hes.), ἀγαίομαι (Od.), ἀγάζω 'to have too much' (A. Supp. 1061). Nominal derivatives: ἄγη 'admiration, envy' (Il.), ἀγάσματα (S. Fr. 885), ἄγα(σ)σις (H., EM). See also ► ἄγᾱν.
•ETYM The same stem as μέγα-, continuing a PIE zero grade *m̥ǵh_2-. It has a counterpart in Av. aš-, e.g. aš-aojah- 'with great strength' (from a zero grade *m̥ǵs-); see Schindler 1987: 345. See ► ἀγάλλομαι, ► ἄγᾱν, ► ἀγανακτέω, ► ἀγαυός, ► μέγας.

ἀγαθίς 1, -ίδος [f.] 'ball of thread, clew' (Pherecyd.). ◂?▸
•ETYM No etymology. Under ἀγαθός, Frisk connects Skt. gadhya- 'was festzuhalten ist'. Cf. ► ἀγαθίς 2.

ἀγαθίς 2, -ίδος = σησαμίς H.; σησαμίς = σησαμῆ 'a mixture of sesame seeds, roasted and pounded with honey', an Athenian delicacy given to guests at a wedding. Note the expression ἀγαθῶν ἀγαθίδες 'quantities of goods'. ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Belardi Ric. ling. 4 (1958): 196 compared γάθια. ἀλλάντια 'sausages (vel sim.)' (H.); see ► ἀλλᾶς. If this is correct, the word is Pre-Greek, because of the prothetic vowel. Fur.: 370 also compares ► γήθυον.

ἀγαθός [adj.] 'good, fit, noble' (Il.). ◂IE?, LW?▸
•VAR ἀκαθόν· ἀγαθόν 'good' (H.); χάσιος· χρηστός 'good, useful' (H.). Dor. χάϊος 'noble, good' (long ᾱ).
•DIAL Cypr. ἀζαθος must probably be read ἀγαθος, see Egetmeyer Kadmos 32 (1993): 145-155.
•ETYM The older comparison with Gm. forms like Go. goþs, MoHG gut, MLG gaden 'to fit' etc., and Slavic words like OCS godьnъ 'pleasant', goditi 'be pleasant' and Ru. gódnyj 'useful' should be forgotten, as these require a root *g^hed^h- (LIV[2] s.v.), from which Skt. gadh- 'to take, seize' derives. ἀγαθός is considered to be from a European substrate by Beekes KZ 109 (1996). An Indo-European attempt by Pinault MSS 38 (1979): 165-170, who derives the word from *m̥ǵh_2-d^hh_1-o- 'made great', or 'whose deeds are great' (Ruijgh 1991b). I find this semantic development difficult. Moreover, as Pinault admits, a suffix -d^ho- is rare (see Chantraine 1933: 366). Finally, there are forms like ἀκαθόν and χάσιος; if these variants are reliable, the word could be Pre-Greek.

ἄγαιος [adj.] epithet of a sacrificial calf in the Labyadai inscr. (Schwyzer: 323). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown. Connected with ► ἀγα-, based on comparison with ἀγαῖον· ἐπίφθονον 'liable to envy' (H.); see Buck 1955: 245.

ἀγαλλίς [f.] 'dwarf iris, Iris attica' (h. Dem.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also msc. (H.). On Nic. fr. 74, 31 see DELG.
•DER ἀγαλλίς· ὑάκινθος ἢ θρυαλλίς, ἢ ἀναγαλλίς 'hyacinth, plantain, pimpernel' (H.).
•ETYM No etymology; see DELG, André 1956 s.v. anagallis and Strömberg 1940: 78.

ἀγάλλομαι [v.] 'to be proud, exult in' (Il.). ◂?▸

•DER ἄγαλμα 'glory, delight, honor; statue'. In later language, ἀγάλλομαι is replaced by ἀγαλλιάομαι, -ιάω after the verbs in -ιάω; thence ἀγαλλίασις, -ίαμα. ἀγάλλιος· λοίδορος 'slandering' (H.), ἀγαλλιάζομαι· λοιδορεῖσθαι, Ταραντῖνοι 'to slander (Tarent.)' (H.); Fur.: 370 compares γαρριώμεθα, but there is no support for this. The plant name ἀγαλλίς (h. Cer., Nic.) probably does not belong to ἀγάλλομαι.
•ETYM Looks like a denominative of *ἀγαλός, but such a form is unknown.

ἀγάλοχον [n.] 'eagle-wood, Aquilaria malacensis' (Dsc.). ◄LW► •ETYM One suspects an Oriental loanword; cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917: 39f. On Pahlavi 'wlwg < agalūk*, see Henning BSOAS 11 (1943-1946): 728.

ἄγαμαι ⇒ ἀγα-.

Ἀγαμέμνων [m.] the Greek commander before Troy (Il.). ◄GR►
•VAR Att. vases Ἀγαμέσμων, also Ἀγαμέμμων, -μέν(ν)ων (Nachmanson Glotta 4 (1913): 246).
•ETYM Since Prellwitz BB 17 (1891): 171f., a pre-form *Αγα-μέδ-μων has been assumed, with the root of μέδομαι. The development -δμ- > -νμ- > -μν- is known in various Greek dialects (other examples in Lejeune 1972: 77[5], where also on the development to -σμ-).
Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 330f. connected the second part with μένος and μένειν (which von Kamptz 1982: 181 and 209 finds improbable), explaining -σμ- as a kind of popular assimilation.

ἄγᾱν [adv.] 'much, too much' (Pi.). ◄IE mǵ-eh$_2$-m► •DIAL Aeolic or Doric in origin, which explains the long α.
•ETYM The old accusative of the adjective ► μέγας. The form is important, as it points to the type nom. CeC-C*, acc. CC-eC-m*, which I assume is the original hysterodynamic inflection in Indo-European (see Beekes 1985: 103f.). Cf. also ► ἀγα-.

ἀγανακτέω [v.] 'be indignant or irritated' (Hp.). ◄GR?►
•ETYM Expressive formation in -ακτέω like ὑλακτέω (to ὑλάω), so from original *ἀγανάω? Cf. ἀγάνημαι· ἀσχάλλω, ἀγανακτῶ (H.). Pinault RPh. 65 (1991 [1993]): 196-198 derives it from *ἀγα-νακτος 'pressed too much', from ► νάσσω. Uncertain.

ἀγάννα ⇒ ἀχάνη.

ἀγανός [adj.] 'mild, gentle' (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM No etymology. The connection with ἄγαμαι or γάνος [n.] 'splendor' (Bechtel 1914) is semantically unconvincing.

ἀγαπάω [v.] 'to receive with friendship; to like, love' (Il.). ◄IE?►
•VAR Also ἀγαπάζω (Il.). Retrograde ἀγάπη '(Christian) love' (late, especially LXX and NT).
•ETYM Pinault RPh. 65 (1991 [1993]): 199-216 assumes it derives from *ἀγα-πᾱ- 'to protect greatly', referring to similar expressions in Sanskrit; cf. ► ἐμπάζομαι. The Christian use may have been influenced by Hebr. '^{a}hābā 'love'; see Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 306.

ἀγαρικόν [n.] name of several mushrooms (Dsc.). ◄GR► •ETYM Perhaps from the TN Ἀγαρία (Sarmatia)? See André 1956 s.v. agaricum and Strömberg 1940: 122.

ἀγασυλλίς [f.] plant that produces ἀμμωνιακόν, Fecula marmarica (Dsc.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 254 connects it with ► γηθυλλίς (Dor. γᾰ-), which is Pre-Greek. Comparing the latter with ἀγασυλλίς, we note the prothetic vowel and the interchange θ/σ. See André 1956 s.v. agasyllis.

ἀγαυός [adj.] 'admirable, noble' (Il.). ◄?► •ETYM Acc. to Schwyzer IF 30 (1912): 430ff., Aeolic = ἀγα-ϝός; perhaps related to ► ἄγαμαι. An expressive gemination of the ϝ has been proposed (e.g. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970)). But since a suffix -u̯o- is doubtful in Greek (cf. Chantraine 1933: 124: "le suffixe était mort en grec"), the word may rather be Pre-Greek.

ἀγαυρός [adj.] not quite certain, perhaps 'proud' (Hes., Hdt.; rare). ◄?► •ETYM Was ► γαῦρος reshaped after ἀγαυός? A pre-Greek origin should also be considered.

ἄγγαρος [m.] 'Persian mounted courier' (X.). ◄LW► •VAR Rarely as an adjective, e.g. ἄγγαρον πῦρ 'signal fire' (A. Ag. 282).
•DER ἀγγαρήϊος = ἄγγαρος (Hdt.), substantivized ἀγγαρήϊον 'institution of the ἄγγαροι' (Hdt. 8, 98, with a description of it). Denominative ἀγγαρεύω [v.] 'press into service' (Ev. Matt., pap., inscr.); thence ἀγγαρευτής 'impressed laborer' (pap. VI^p) and ἀγγαρεία 'service' (pap., inscr.), plur. ἀγγαρεῖαι 'cursus publicus' (inscr. III^p); ἀγγαρικός (pap.). Hell. and late by-forms are ἐγγαρεύω, -έω, -ία, by folk-etymology after the preverb ἐν-.
•ETYM The exact source is unknown. Not from Akk. agru 'hired man'; see Eilers IIJ 5 (1962): 225; Happ Glotta 40 (1962): 201. On the realia see Rostowzew Klio 6 (1906): 249ff. and R. Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 97-100 (who defends an Iranian origin). Mancini Glotta 73 (1995): 210-222 reconstructs a form OP angarā-* > *ἀγγαρη- as the basis of ἀγγαρήιον (Hdt. 8, 98), which must be the oldest Greek form. Extensively on this word Brust 2005: 17ff.

ἄγγελος [m.] 'messenger' (Il.). ◄LW► •DIAL Perhaps Myc. a-ke-ro.
•DER Denominative ἀγγέλλω [v.] 'to convey a message'. Did ἀγγελίης [m.] 'messenger' (Hom.) arise from a false interpretation of the genitive (τῆς) ἀγγελίης? See Leumann 1950: 168ff. Thence ἡ ἀγγελίη 'female messenger' (Hes. Th. 781). From ἀγγελία: ἀγγελιώτης, -ῶτις '(female) messenger' (h. Merc. 296); from ἄγγελος: ἀγγελικός 'of a messenger' (late); from ἀγγέλλω: ἄγγελμα 'announcement' (E., Th.), ἀγγελτικός 'premonitory' (late), ἀγγέλτειρα 'female messenger' (Orph. H. 78, 3; not certain).
•ETYM The connection with Skt. áṅgiras-, name of mythical beings, has now been abandoned. Perhaps an Oriental loan, like ► ἄγγαρος.

ἀγγεράκομον ⇒ ἀγερράκαβος.

ἀγγοπηνία [n.pl.] · τὰ τῶν μελισσῶν κηρία 'honeycombs' (H.). ◄LW► •ETYM From Iranian angupēn, see Bailey BSOAS 20 (1957): 51 (does not belong to ►ἄγγος).

ἄγγος [n.] 'vessel' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•DIAL Probably Myc. a-ke-ha [pl.].
•ETYM Possibly a Mediterranean loanword (cf. Chantraine 1933: 418), as kitchen utensils are often borrowed. Fur.: 275, 307[2] compares ἄγδυς· ἄγγος Κρητικόν, which is quite tempting.

ἄγγουρα [f.] · ῥάξ, σταφυλή 'grape, bunch of grapes' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Cf. MoGr. ἄγωρος, ἄγουρος 'unripe, green, young man' and ἀγουρίδα 'unripe grape', from ἄ-ωρος 'unripe, green', with the spirant as a transitional sound; secondary nasalization as in MoGr. Cret. ἄγγουρος 'young, youngster' and ἀγγούρι 'gherkin'. The MGr. and MoGr. word was borrowed as MP angūr 'grape' and Eg.-Arab. aǵǵūr 'gherkin'. See Kretschmer Glotta 20 (1932): 239f.; also Cocco Arch. glott. ital. 54 (1969): 98.

ἄγγουρος 'cake'. ⇒γοῦρος.

ἀγείρω [v.] 'to gather' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$ger- 'gather'► •DIAL Myc. a-ke-re, a-ko-ra /agorā/, a-ma-ko-to me-no /ʰam-agortō mēnos/ 'in the month of the Assembly'? See Taillardat REGr. 97 (1984): 365-373.
•COMP ὁμηγερής 'gathered together' (Il.), νεφεληγερέτα 'cloud-gatherer' (Il.).
•DER ►ἀγορά s.v.; ἄγορος 'gathering' (E.). Often ἀγυρ- (cf. Schwyzer: 351): ἄγυρις 'gathering, mass' (Il.), with πανήγυρις 'gathering of all' (Arc. πανάγορσις, παναγορία); ἀγύρτης 'beggar', denominative ἀγυρτάζω 'to beg', ἀγυρτεύω (Str.), whence ἀγυρτεία, adjective ἀγυρτικός (Str., Plu.). Also ἀγυρτήρ 'beggar', ἀγύρτρια 'beggar-woman' (A. Ag. 1273). Also ἀγυρμός 'gathering' and ἄγυρμα 'anything collected'. The formations in ἀγερ- kept the connection with the verb: ἄγερσις 'gathering, inspection of the army' (Hdt.), ἀγερμός 'gathering of funds, troops, etc.' (inscr., Arist.), ἀγερμοσύνη (Opp.), ἀγέρτας 'collector' (IG 14, 423: I 35 [Taurom.]). ἄγαρ- is found in ἄγαρρις 'meeting' (IG 14, 759: 12 [Naples]); also ἄγορρις· ἀγορά, ἄθροισις 'gathering' (H.) which may be Aeolic, see Chantraine 1933: 280.
•ETYM No direct cognates, but the reconstruction $h_2$ger- is unproblematic. See further ►γέργερα · πολλά 'lots, often' (H.) and τὰ ►γάργαρα 'heaps, lots'. ἠγερέθονται and -το have a present suffix -θ- (cf. Schwyzer: 703); ἠγερέθονται (Γ 231) and ἠγερέθεσθαι (K 127, Aristarchus) have an unexpected long vowel; the forms were built on frequent ἠγερέθοντο.

ἀγέλη [f.] 'herd, troop' (Il.). ◄IE h_2eǵ- 'drive'► •ETYM From ►ἄγω, with a suffix -l-. Comparison with Lat. agilis, Skt. ajirá- 'mobile, quick' and Lat. agolum 'staff of a shepherd' makes little sense; the formations are probably independent.

ἀγέρδα ⇒ἄχερδος.

ἀγερρακάβος [m.] · σταφυλή 'bunch of grapes' (H.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR ἀγγεράκομον· σταφυλήν 'id.'; ἀγράκαβος· σταφυλή 'id.' (both H.).
•ETYM Latte rejects two of these forms (how to decide which?), followed by Fur.: 221. I think this is indefensible. The word is Pre-Greek in any case, like so many words concerning wine (e.g. ἀρασχάδες). Note the element -αβ-. The -ε- is a prop vowel (see Fur.: 378ff.); variation α/ο and β/μ are also well-known in Pre-Greek (which means all the glosses are real); the γγ may represent a prenasalized consonant, one of the clearest characteristics of Pre-Greek words.

ἀγέρωχος [adj.] 'magnanimous, proud' (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἀγερωχία 'magnanimity' (LXX, Plb.). Uncertain is Dor. γερωχία (Ar. Lys. 980).
•ETYM No etymology.

ἀγέτρια [f.] · μαῖα. Ταραντῖνοι 'midwife (Tarent.)' (H.); ἀναγέτρια· ἡ ταῖς τικτούσαις ὑπηρετοῦσα γυνὴ παρὰ Ταραντίνοις 'woman who watches over the midwives in Tarent.' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM McKenzie Class. Quart. 15 (1921): 48 assumes that it stands for earlier *ἀγρέτρια, from ►ἀγρέω with a suffix -τρία and subsequent dissimilation. This seems quite improbable semantically.

ἄγη ⇒ἀγα-.

ἀγήνωρ [adj.] epithet of θυμός of uncertain mg.; perhaps 'proud' (Il.). ◄IE h_2eǵ- 'drive'► •VAR PN Ἀγήνωρ.
•DER ἀγηνορίη (Hom.), whence ἀγηνορέω (Nonnos).
•ETYM First part probably related to ἄγω (Risch IF 59 (1949): 39f), rather than to ἀγα- (Sommer 1948: 169f.); cf. also Kuiper MKNAW 14: 5 (1951): 5 : 207. On the evolution of the meaning, see DELG.

ἀγήρατον [n.] a plant, 'Origanum onites' (Dsc.). ◄?► •ETYM Assuming an original meaning 'unaging', it can be connected to γηράσκω, γῆρας. Semantic parallels are given by Strömberg 1940: 103; these are uncompelling.

ἀγήρατος [m.] stone used to polish women's shoes (Gal.). ◄?►
•ETYM A connection with the word for 'age' does not seem appropriate. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 641-75 proposes ἀγ-ήρατος 'very lovely', which is not much better.

ἀγήτωρ ⇒ἡγέομαι.

ἅγιος [adj.] 'holy' (Hdt.). ◄IE Hieh₂ǵ-► •DER Yod-present ἅζομαι [v.] 'to honor' (Il.), from *ἅγι̯ομαι. Late nouns ἁγιότης and ἁγιωσύνη (LXX), verbs ἁγίζω 'to consecrate, dedicate' (Pi., S.) and ἁγιάζω 'id.' (LXX), whence ἁγισμός 'offering to the dead' (D. S.), ἁγιασμός 'consecration' (LXX, NT), ἁγίασμα 'id., sanctuary' (LXX); ἁγιστήριον 'holy vessel' (Inscr. Perg. 255, 9), ἁγιαστήριον 'sanctuary' (LXX) and ἁγιστύς 'ceremony' (Call.). ἁγιστεύω [v.] 'be holy, be pure; consecrate' (Pl., E.) also presupposes a nominal form in -στ- (ἁγιστός only in Et. Gud. s.v. ἁγιστεία); thence ἁγίστευμα 'sanctuary' (Procop.) and ἁγιστεία 'ritual, service' (Isoc.).

•ETYM The connection with Skt. yájati 'honor with sacrifice and prayer' is semantically unobjectionable and formally explained by Lubotsky's rule (Lubotsky MSS (1981): 133-8), i.e. in Hieh$_2$ǵ-, the glottal element of the pre-glottalized ǵ was lost before a consonant. This means that it is unnecessary to assume a-vocalism for this root in PIE, as is done by many scholars (e.g. LIV² s.v. Hi̯aǵ-). The primary noun ἅγιος seems to have a suffix -iHo-. A different formation is found in ►ἁγνός.

ἀγκύλος [adj.] 'curved, bent' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$enk-* 'bend'► •COMP ἀγκυλομήτης 'who thinks crooked thoughts' (Il.), from an old verb *μη-μι (cf. Skt. mā́ti), see Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 306.
•DER Denominatives ἀγκύλλω [v.] 'to bend backwards' (Aret.) and ἀγκυλόω [v.] 'to bend' (Ar.); from the latter ἀγκύλωμα 'loop' (Gal.), -ωσις medical term, name of various lame or stiff conditions (Gal.); ἀγκύλη 'strap, loop, hook, hinge of a door, etc.' (B., Hp., S., E.). Thence ἀγκυλητός 'provided with ἀγκύλαι' (A.), ἀγκυλίς [f.] 'hook' (Opp.), to which ἀγκυλιδωτός 'provided with a loop' (Hp. apud Gal.), ἀγκύλιον 'loop, etc.' (medic.).
Many derivatives built on the root $h_2$enk-* with a different suffix:
a) With -l-*: ἀγκάλη [f.] 'curved arm, armful' (Archil.), mostly plur.; diminutive ἀγκαλίς, mostly plur. -ίδες (Il.), which is more frequent in the epic for metrical reasons. ἄγκαλον [acc.sg.] 'armful, sheaf' (h. Merc. 82) is not entirely certain. Denominative ἀγκαλίζομαι [v.] 'to embrace' (Semon.), action nouns ἀγκάλισμα (Tim. Pers.), ἀγκαλισμός (pap.). A derivation in -l-* without suffixal vowel is found in ἀγκλόν· σκολιόν 'curved, bent, crooked' (H.), provided that the gloss is correct.
b) With -n-*: ἀγκών, -ῶνος [m.] 'elbow' (Il.), dat.pl. ἀγκάσι (Opp.), said of many protruding objects; cf. ἀγκάς below. Late diminutives ἀγκώνιον, -ίσκος, -ίσκιον; denominative ἀγκωνίζω [v.] 'to lean on the elbows' (Com. Adesp., gloss.), whence ἀγκωνισμός (Eust.). Further ἄγκοιναι [f.pl.] 'arms' (Il.), enlargement with -ι̯α. An old e-grade may be found in ἐπ-ηγκενίδες 'long planks on a ship' (see Bechtel 1914).
c) With -s-*: ἄγκος [n.] 'mountain glen' (Il.), formally comparable with Skt. áṅkas- [n.] 'curve'.
d) With -tro-*: ἄγκιστρον 'hook' (Od.; from *ἀγκίζω), the formation of which is unclear (see Chantraine 1933: 333f.); thence ἀγκίστριον, ἀγκιστρεύω, ἀγκιστρευτικός and ἀγκιστρεία (only marginal attestations).
Unclear is the formation of ἀγκάς· ἀγκάλας 'armful, sheaf' (H., see Bechtel 1914). Adverbs ἄγκαθεν [adv.] 'in(to) the arms, on the elbows' (A.), ἀγκάς 'into the arms' (Il., only antevocalic except in Ψ 711), probably the elided dat.pl. with a zero grade suffix belonging to ἀγκών; thence ἀγκάζομαι [v.] 'to lift up in the arms' (Il.).
•ETYM All forms derive from a widespread IE root $h_2$enk-*, found in e.g. Skt. áñcati 'to bend, curve' and ácati 'id.'. Not connected with this group of words is Hitt. ḫai(n)k-ᵗᵗᵃ 'to bestow', med. 'to bow' (see Kloekhorst 2008). In Greek, we also find ►ὄγκος 'barb' continuing $h_2$onk-o-*. For the stem in -u-, cf. Skt. aṅku-rá- 'hook' (note the operation of Wheeler's Law in Greek). The l-suffix is found in OHG angul 'fishhook', ON ól [f.] 'belt' (perhaps an old formation; cf. ἀγκύλη), óll 'germ' etc.

One generally connects it with ►ἄγκῡρα 'anchor' (Alc.), but I suggest that this is a substrate word.

ἀγκάλη •VAR ἀγκών, ἄγκος, etc. ⇒ ἀγκύλος.

ἄγκῡρα [f.] 'anchor' (Alc.).
•DER Dervatives are scarce: ἀγκυρωτός 'anchor-shaped' (Ph. Bel.), ἀγκύριον (Ph. Bel.), ἀγκυρίζω [v.] 'to make sbd. stumble' (old com.).
•ETYM The suffix -ῡρα is typically Pre-Greek, as in γέφῡρα, γόργῡρα; it therefore does not continue an inherited formation -ur-i̯a-*. Borrowed as Lat. ancora.

ἀγλαός [adj.] 'splendid, beautiful, famous' (Il.); formulary epithet, e.g. of υἱός. ◄?►
•VAR The Cretan and Cyprian gloss ἀγλαόν· γλαφυρόν 'hollow(ed), polished' are due to misunderstanding of the Homeric usage, acc. to Leumann 1950: 272[18].
•DER ἀγλαΐα 'splendor, beauty' (Il.), also PN; ἀγλαΐζω [v.] 'to embellish, glorify', med. 'to take delight in'.
•ETYM Probably from *ἀγλαϝός. Connected with γαλήνη, ἀγάλλομαι (cf. Szemerényi 1964: 155), or to ►ἀγανός, ►ἀγαυός. The connection with ἀγάλλομαι enjoys a certain popularity.

ἀγλίς ⇒ *αἰγλίς.

ἄγλῑς, -ιθος [f.] 'clove of garlic' (Ar.). ◄PG(V)►
•DER ἀγλίδιον in: ἀγλίδια· σκόροδα 'garlic' (H.), with interchange θ/ δ (Fur.: 194).
•ETYM Fur.: 127, 282 connects it with ►γέλγις, -ιθος, -ιδος as γελ-γ-: ἀ-γλ-, for which cf. κέρ-κ-α: ἀ-κρ-ίς. This seems quite possible.

ἀγλύεσθαι [v.] · βλάπτεσθαι 'to be hindered, damaged' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM von Blumenthal IF 49 (1931): 176 thinks it is Hyllaean or rather Messapian, connecting it with Go. agls. Quite uncertain.

ἁγνός [adj.] '(ritually) pure, holy' (Od., mostly poet.). ◄IE (H)ih$_2$ǵ-no-* 'holy'► •DER ἁγνότης 'purity' (NT, etc.). Verbal derivations: 1. ἁγνεύω [v.] 'to consider holy, be pure, purify' (IA), whence ἁγνεία 'purification', ἅγνευμα, ἁγνευτήριος, ἁγνευτικός; 2. ἁγνίζω [v.] 'to purify, consecrate' (poetic), whence ἅγνισμα, -ισμός, -ιστικός, etc., ἁγνίτης 'purifier' (Lyc.) after nouns in -ίτης, cf. Redard 1949: 11.
•ETYM Related to ►ἅγιος; it may be the same formation as Skt. yajñá- 'sacrifice'.

ἄγνος [f., m.] tree name: 'withy', 'Vitex agnus castus' (h. Merc.), = λύγος. The name probably also denotes a fish and a bird, see DELG s.v. ◄EUR?, PG?►
•VAR Also ἄγονος; cf. ἄγονον = μυρσίνη ἀγρία 'wild myrtle' (Fur.: 381).
•ETYM Comparable with OCS jagnędъ 'black poplar' (Lidén IF 18 (1905-1906): 506); if this is correct, it is perhaps a European substrate word (on which phenomenon, see Beekes 2000). On the folk-etymological connection with the notion of chastity (ἁγνότης), see Strömberg 1940: 154.

ἄγνυμι [v.] 'to break' (Il.). ◄IE u̯eh$_2$ǵ-* 'break'► •VAR Fut. ἄξω, aor. ἔαξα or ἦξα, perf. ἔᾱγα, pass. aor. ἄγην or ἐάγην (on verse-final ἐᾱ́γη Λ 559 see Wackernagel 1916: 141, Chantraine 1942: 18).

•COMP Mostly in κατᾱ́γνυμι, with ᾱ from -α-ϝαγ- (Björck 1950: 42, 147).
•DER ἀγή 'fragment' (A., E.), long ᾱ- certainly in A. R. 1, 554; 4, 941; further ἰωγή < *ϝι-ϝωγ-ή 'shelter', if originally 'breaking of the wind' (ξ 533), also in composition ἐπιωγαί, -ή 'place of shelter' (ε 404), perhaps dissimilated from *ἐπι-ϝιϝωγαί (but see Bechtel 1914). Further ἀγμός 'fracture, cleft' (Hp., E.), ἄγμα 'fragment' (late); ἄξος = ἀγμός (Crete), but hardly from the σ-aor.; appurtenance of the TN Ὀάξος (Hdt. 4, 154) as ϝάξος is uncertain. Cf. also γακτός (= ϝ-)· κλάσμα 'fragment' (H.). On ϝαγανο- (Thespiae), see CEG 6, and Taillardat RPh. sér. 3: 40 (1966): 76. Also ἄγανος [adj.] 'broken' (S. fr. 231).
•ETYM From *ϝάγνυμι (the ϝ is clearly visible in Homer) < uh$_2$ǵ-n(eu)-, belonging to ToB wāk- 'to go apart', caus. 'to split' and perhaps also to Hitt. u̯āk-^{i} / u̯akk- 'to bite' (cf. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). A palatovelar is best reconstructed based on Skt. vájra- 'thunderbolt' and its Indo-Iranian cognates. Greek -ϝωγ- is from uoh$_2$ǵ-. Perhaps Lat. vāgīna is also related; cf. MoHG Scheide 'id.' related to scheiden 'to separate'.

ἀγνύς [f.] 'weaving stones' (Plu.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR -ῦθες [pl.].
•ETYM See Chantraine 1933: 366. Probably a substrate word; suffixes of the type -ῡθ- are typical of Pre-Greek.

ἀγορά [f.] 'gathering, assembly, market, trade, traffic' (Hom.).
•DER ἀγορητής 'speaker' (epic), which perhaps rather derives from ἀγοράομαι (Fraenkel 1910: 25f.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἀγοράομαι 'to speak (in public, in the assembly)' (epic Ion., poet.), only in isolated forms; ἀγορητύς 'eloquence' (epic), ἀγορατρός 'speaker' (inscr. Delphi, cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 151); 2. ἀγορεύω 'id.' (Hom.), as a simplex rare in Attic (Wackernagel 1916: 220ff., Fournier 1946: 41ff.), whence ἀγορευτής 'speaker', -τήριον 'podium', -σις 'speech' (all rare and late); 3. ἀγοράζω 'to be on the market, do shoppings' (IA); thence ἀγόρασις 'purchase' (Pl.), Boeot. ἀγόρασσις (Holt 1941: 49f.), ἀγορασία 'id.', ἀγορασμός 'id.' (LXX), -ασμα, usually plur. ἀγοράσματα 'purchased wares' (D.); agent noun ἀγοραστής 'purchaser' (X.), fem. ἀγοράστρια (pap.), ἀγοραστικός 'pertaining to trade' (Pl.).
•ETYM Verbal noun related to ►ἀγείρω.

ἄγος [n.] 'pollution, guilt; expiation' (Hdt., A., Th.); the word denotes the notion of 'sacredness' in ἄγεα· τεμένη 'consecrated piece of land' (H.), for which Bechtel 1921, 1: 115 suggests Lesbian origin, and also in S. Ant. 775, A. Ch. 155, etc. ◂IE? (H)ieh$_2$ǵ- 'sacred'▸ •COMP ἐν-αγής 'under a curse or pollution' (Hdt., S.), whence ἐναγίζω [v.] 'to sacrifice to the dead', ἐναγισμός, -ισμα. Rare and late ἐνάγιος [adj.] (after ἅγιος), ἐναγικός. The opposite εὐ-αγής 'immaculate' (Parm., S.) is found as Εὐhαγης (IG 12(9), 56 [Styra V^a]); the simplex ἁγής (of the sun, Emp. 47) is clearly secondary.
•ETYM Formerly connected with Skt. ā́gas- [n.] 'fault, sin', but the long vowel of Sanskrit cannot be accounted for. DELG s.v. explains it as a psilotic form of *ἅγος belonging with ►ἅγιος (cf. Chantraine and Masson 1954: 85-107), which certainly fits the attested meaning 'sacredness' well. As Chantraine remarks, all forms can easily be derived from the root hag- 'sacred', except for ἄγος, the psilosis of which has not received a convincing explanation. At any rate, it did not serve to distinguish the word from ἅγιος (per DELG).

ἀγοστός [m.] in Homer only in the formula ἕλε γαῖαν ἀγοστῷ, which is usually taken to mean 'with the hand (bent like a claw)' (Λ 425). Taken by Hell. imitative poets (A. R., Theoc.) as 'arm, elbow'. ◂?▸
•ETYM Solmsen 1909: 1ff. proposed an original *ἀγορ-στος "collector", derived from ►ἀγείρω 'to gather' with a suffix *-st- found in semantically close παλαστή 'flat hand, breadth of four fingers', Skt. hásta- 'hand', MoHG Faust 'fist', OCS grъstь 'handful' etc. Not really convincing.

ἄγρα [f.] 'hunting, way of catching; prey' (Od.). ◂?, PG?(V)▸ •COMP Instruments: πυράγρα 'fire tongs' (Il.), κρεάγρα 'meat tongs' (Ar.); as medical terms ὀδοντάγρα 'tooth tongs'; diseases: ποδάγρα 'podagra', χειράγρα 'gout in the hand'. Compounds in -άγρετος: παλινάγρετος 'to be taken back' (epic since Il.), αὐτάγρετος 'self-chosen' (Od.). βοάγρια 'what was taken from a cow (= shield)', ἀνδράγριον 'spoils of a slain enemy'. The interpretation of these compounds is debated, see DELG.
•DER ἀγρεύς 'hunter' (Pi., A., etc.), more common is ἀγρεύω [v.] 'to hunt' (Hdt., S., E., X.), whence ἀγρευτής 'hunter' (Sol., S. [lyr.]), ἀγρευτήρ 'id.' (Theoc., Call.), ἄγρευμα 'catch, hunting net' (Sol., A., E., X.,); on the mg. of ἀγρέτης see Redard 1949: 236[58]. Further ἀγρώσσω [v.] 'to catch' (Od.), cf. Schwyzer: 733; ἀγρέω [v.] 'to take, seize' (Il., Sapph., Archil.), in Hom. only ipv. ἄγρει, -τε (see Wackernagel 1916: 166f.), Aeol. κατάγρεντον [ipv.]; aor. ptc. ἀγρέθεντα, -τες, verbal adj. ἀγρεταί (Cos). Agent noun ἀγρέμων (also -μών) 'hunting spear, hunter', etc. (A., H., EM), whence ἀγρέμιον 'catch' (AP).
•ETYM The relation between ἄγρα and ἀγρέω is unclear. Schwyzer: 727[1] pleads against ἀγρέω as a denominative from ἄγρα. McKenzie Class. Quart. 15 (1921): 46f. and 125 separated the two words: ἄγρα and ἀγρεύς would belong to ἀγρός 'field', whereas ἀγρέω would derive from the compounds in -άγρετος, which themselves belong to ►ἀγείρω 'to gather'.
The existence of compounds like αὐτάγρετος beside αὐθαίρετος could indicate that αἱρέω and ἀγρέω were associated, and this may explain formal variants like -αίγρετος. Connection with Indo-Iranian (Skt. ghāsé-ajra-, Av. vəhrkąm azrōdaiδīm, both hapaxes of which the mg. is uncertain) and Celtic words (OW hair, MW aer 'battle' < agrā, OIr. ár [n.] 'defeat' < agro-, Gaul. EN Veragri) is rejected by DELG, where it is remarked that none of these words bear the concrete meaning of 'catching' that is attested in Greek.
Fur.: (see index) thinks that ἀγρέω is a substrate word because of the prenasalized forms (Thess. αγγρε-), the form with αι for α (PN Ἐξαίγρετος on coins from Asia Minor, on which see Vendryes 1938: 331-334; this form can hardly be reliable), the variant ἐγρέω, and the metathesized form αργειτε. See ►ζωγρέω.

ἀγράκαβος ⇒ ἀγερράκαβος.

ἀγρεῖφνα [f.] 'harrow' (AP 6, 297). ◂PG?(V)▸

•DER ἀγρίφη [f.] 'harrow' (Hdn., H.).
•ETYM One compares γριφᾶσθαι· γράφειν. Λάκωνες. οἱ δὲ ξύειν καὶ ἀμύσσειν 'to write (Lacon.), others: to plane and scratch' (H.). The ἀ- would remain unexplained. But note that the attestations are very late. Pre-Greek origin with a prothetic vowel is possible. The form in -να also suggests Pre-Greek, cf. Fur. 132[65].

ἀγρηνόν [n.] · <ἔνδυμα> δικτυοειδὲς ὃ περιτίθενται οἱ βακχεύοντες Διονύσῳ. Ἐρατοσθένης δὲ αὐτὸ καλεῖ [γρῆνυν] ἢ γῆνον 'garment like a net which those possessed by Dionysus put on. Eratosthenes calls it a γ.' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR ἄγρηνα· δίκτυα καὶ ἔνδυμα 'nets and clothing' (H.); cf. ἀγρηνὸν ποικίλον ἐρεοῦν δικτυοειδὲς καὶ ἔνδυμα δὲ ποιόν (EM 14, 2).
•ETYM Does the word have a prothetic vowel? Cf. also γρήνη· ἄνθη συμμικτά 'mixed flowers' (H.), cf. Strömberg 1944: 15. A derivation from ἄγρα (DELG) is quite uncertain. Nilsson 1941(1): 204 says that the net on the Omphalos was called ἀγρηνόν; this statement is ascribed to Hesychius and Pollux (4, 116), but neither author says so: it was only a guess by PW s.v. ("wohl auch"). In fact, Hesychius states that it was called ►γάγγαμον.

ἀγρήσκεται · πικραίνεται 'is made bitter, tastes bitter' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Latte suggested that it stands for ἀγρίσκεται and derives from ἄγριος, comparing ἀλθίσκω / ἀλθήσκω to ►ἀλθαίνω. Semantically not convincing.

ἄγριππος [m.] Laconian name for the wild olive (Zen.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR ἄγριφος· γένος τι ἀγρίας ἐλείας 'species of wild olive' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 158 notes that these words have the variation π/φ, characteristic of Pre-Greek words.

ἀγρός [m.] 'field' (Il.). ◄IE h$_2$eǵ-ro-* 'field'► •VAR Myc. a-ko-ro /agros/; PN a-ko-ro-qo-ro /Agrok^{w}olos/.
•COMP ἄγροικος 'who lives in the country' (ἀγρο-ϝοικ-), ►ἄγρωστις; also ἄγρυπνος "who sleeps outside", which developed into 'sleepless, awake' (IA); cf. ἄγρ-αυλος (Il.) 'who has his bed/lair in the field'.
•DER Thence ἄγριος 'wild', with derivations: ἀγριότης [f.] 'wildness' (Pl., D., X.), ἀγριόομαι, ἀγριόω, ἀγριαίνω [v.] 'to become (make) wild'. ἀγρότης [m.] 'countryman, rustic' (π 218, E.), ἀγροτήρ [m.] (E.) 'id.', also ἀγρώτης (E.) and ἀγρώστης (S., E.), of unclear formation (see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἄγρωστις, but also Meier-Brügger KZ 103 (1990) above).
ἀγροιώτης (Il.) for ἀγρώτης would have arisen at verse end (Risch 1937: 32). On ἀγρέτης see ►ἄγρα. Comp. ἀγρότερος 'wild', cf. ὀρέστερος. 'living in the mountains (as opposed to the fields)'.
•ETYM Old IE word, originally designating the uncultivated field: cf. Skt. ájra-, Lat. ager, Go. akrs and Arm. art. Derivation from h$_2$eg-* 'drive' is probable.

ἄγρυπνος ⇒ ἀγρός.

ἄγρωστις, -ιδος, -εως [f.] 'dog's-tooth grass' (Od.). ◄GR► •ETYM Formerly supposed to be the fem. of ἀγρώστης 'countryman', from ►ἀγρός (Bechtel 1914 s.v., Strömberg 1940: 117). However, Meier-Brügger KZ 103 (1990): 33f. convincingly explained the word as h$_2$eǵro-h$_1$d-ti-* 'Feld-Futter', comparing ►νῆστις for the formation.

ἄγυια [f.] 'street, road' (Il.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Plur. ἀγυιαί.
•DER Ἀγυιεύς [m.] 'guardian of the streets', epithet of Apollo (com., E.), whence the month name Ἀγυίηος (Argos); Ἀγυιάτης [m.] 'id.' (A.), also 'inhabitant of an ἄ.' (Pharsalos), cf. ἀγυιῆται· κωμῆται 'village dwellers' (H.); fem. ἀγυιᾶτις (Pi., E. [lyr.]).
•ETYM Mainly a poetic word. Generally considered to be a perf. ptc. of ►ἄγω 'to drive' without reduplication, but this makes little sense as the formation is without a parallel (save archaic ἰδυῖα); more probably a substrate word in -υια, for which cf. ►κώδυια, see Szemerényi 1964: 203ff. and Beekes 1998: 25f.

ἄγχι [adv., prep.] 'near' (Il.). ◄IE h$_2$emǵ^h-* 'tie, betroth'► •COMP ἀγχέ-μαχος (Il.) probably after τηλέ-μαχος (only as a PN), see Trümpy 1950: 113f.
•DER Further adverbial forms ἀγχό-θι, -θεν; ἀγχοῦ. Comp. ἆσσον, ἀσσοτέρω, superl. ἄγχιστα, -ον, also ἄσσιστα, Elean ασιστα (see Peters 1980a: 288). From the superl. ἀγχιστῖνος 'near each other' (Il.), see Chantraine 1933: 204. On Locr. ἀγχιστεδᾶν = ἀγχιστήδαν see Fraenkel Glotta 20 (1932): 84f. More forms in DELG.
•ETYM Considered to be the locative of a root noun related to ►ἄγχω (Schwyzer: 622), or a direct derivation from ►ἄγχω after πέρι, ἄντι. West Glotta 77 (1999): 118f. suggests reconsidering the reading ἀγχηστῖνοι, -αι for ἀγχιστῖνοι, -αι, which is a v.l. at all Homeric places, and which he interprets as ἄγχι + ἑδ-τι- 'a sitting close together'. More probable is the suggestion by Watkins (apud West l.c.) that the compound contains the root ἡσ- 'to sit'.

ἀγχίλωψ [f.] 'swelling which obstructs the lacrymal duct' (Gal. 19, 438). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Synonym αἰγίλωψ (Cels.).
•ETYM Galen analyzes it as ►ἄγχι and ►ὤψ. Strömberg 1944: 95f. follows this, and explains the -λ- from the synonym αἰγίλωψ. Frisk suggests that the first member is from ►ἄγχω instead. Not very convincing. The synonym points to a Pre-Greek origin, due to variation α/αι and γ/χ and prenasalization. Influence of ἄγχι/ ἄγχω on αἰγίλωψ is improbable. Note that αι before NC is not tolerated in Greek; perhaps the first i derives from a palatalized /g'/. The analysis in terms of Pre-Greek is a(n)g'-il-ōp-*.

ἀγχόνη [f.] = μανδραγόρα 'mandrake' (Ps.-Dsc.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ἄγχουρος 1 [m.] 'gold' (AP, Plu.), presumably the name of the son of Midas (Plu. 2, 306f.). ◄?► •ETYM Fur.: 391 compares τάγχουρος γὰρ ὁ χρυσός, ἡ λέξις Περσική 'τ. means gold in Persian' (sch. Theoc., p. 351 W.) and τάγχαρας 'gold' (Cosmas ad OGI 199). If the word is Pre-Greek, I propose a sequence -arʷ- giving either -αρ- or -ουρ-; see ►ἀγχοῦρος 2 and, most notably, ►ἀρασχάδες.

ἀγχοῦρος 2 [m.] 'dawn' (Call.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀγχοῦρος· ὀρθρός. Κύπριοι. ἢ φωσφόρος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ 'dawn (Cypr.); bringer of light, and what comes with him' (H.). Variant ἄγχαυρος 'near the morning' (AP 4, 111); 'time near dawn' (Call.), see LSJ Supp.
•ETYM Unknown. The interchange ου/αυ is reliable, as both occur in Callimachus (so if αυ is explained from αὔριον, we cannot understand -ουρ-). Perhaps PG -arʷ- yielded variants in -αυρ- (with anticipation of the labial element) and ουρ- (with additional coloring of the vowel); cf. ►ἀρασχάδες.

ἄγχουσα [f.] a plant, 'Anchusa tinctoria' (Thphr., Dsc.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἔγχουσα (Ar.).
•COMP Also κατάγχουσα (Ps.-Dsc.); cf. ψευδάγχουσα (Plin.).
•ETYM The variant ἔγχουσα excludes derivation from ►ἄγχω (which is defended by Strömberg 1940: 64). A typical substrate word; see Fur.: 346 and 197[55] on the suffix -ουσα. Not related to ►ἀγχύνωψ.

ἄγχραν [adj.] · μύωπα. Λοκροί 'short-sighted (Locrian)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Bechtel 1921 compares ἄκαρον· τυφλόν 'blind' (H.). These forms show typical variations of Pre-Greek: κ/χ and prenasalization (see Fur.: 127).

ἄγχω [v.] 'to squeeze, strangle' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_2$emǵʰ- 'narrow, strangle'▸ •DER ἀγχόνη 'hanging, strangling', for the suffix cf. ►περόνη, etc.; Lat. LW angina (Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 205, but see E-M s.v.). Thence ἀγχόνιος 'fit for hanging' (E., Nonn.), ἀγχονάω 'to strangle' (Man.). ἀγκτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'tool for sewing up wounds' (Cels. Med., Plu.).
•ETYM An exact correspondence for the thematic present is found in Lat. angō 'to bind together, strangle'. Hitt. ḫamank-ⁱ, ḫame/ink- has a nasal present *h_2m-(e)n-ǵʰ-. The widespread u-stem adjective *$h_2$emǵʰ-u- in Skt. aṃhú- 'narrow', Go. aggwus, Arm. anju-k, OCS ǫzъ-kъ is not found in Greek. See ►ἄγχι.

ἄγω [v.] 'to drive, lead, bring, carry; to draw, etc.' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2eǵ- 'drive, lead'▸ •VAR Aor. ἤγαγον, perf. ἦχα (Att.); Dor. ἀγήγοχα, whence ἀγήοχα, ἀγέωχα.
•DIAL Myc. a-ke /agei/.
•COMP With ἀπ-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, etc.; στρατηγός 'leader (of the army), commander'. On -αγέτης in compounds (ἀρχηγέτης, etc.) see Fraenkel 1910: 59ff., Sommer 1950: 11f.
•DER ἀγός 'leader' (poet. since Il.), which is formally identical with Skt. ajá- 'driver', but perhaps a parallel formation; ἀγή 'transport' (Chios), 'winding' (Arat.); ἀγών, -ῶνος [m.] 'gathering, rally (to see games)' (Il.), whence ἀγώνιος, ἀγωνία, ἀγωνιάω, ἀγωνιάτης; verb ἀγωνίζομαι 'to contend for a prize, etc.', whence ἀγώνισις, ἀγώνισμα, ἀγωνιστής, ἀγωνιστικός, etc. Further ἄκτωρ, -ορος 'leader' (A.), also a PN (Il.), but Lat. actor may be an independent formation; ἄγμα· κλέμμα 'theft' (H.). Reduplicated nouns: ἀγωγός [m.] 'leader' (IA), ἀγωγή 'carrying away' (IA), formation unclear, whence ἀγωγεύς, ἀγώγιμος, ἀγώγιον, ἀγωγαῖος, ἀγωγικά.

ὤγανον 'spoke' seems unrelated (in spite of Frisk 1938: 17f.). Unclear is the formation of ἀγῑνέμεναι, ἀγινέω 'to lead, carry' (Il.), and the relation with Dor. Aetol. ἀγνέω 'id.'.
Cf. further on ►ἀγέλη, ►ἄξιος, ►ἄξων, ►ὄγμος; also ►ἀγρός. Not here ►ἄγυια.
•ETYM Old thematic present, also found in Skt. ájati, Av. azaiti, Arm. acem, Lat. agō, OIr. -aig, ON aka and ToAB āk-, all 'to drive, lead' vel sim. Originally the verb was present (see LIV[2] s.v. *h_2eǵ-). ►ὄγμος 'furrow, etc.' derives from *h_2oǵ-mo-, neatly corresponding to Skt. ájma- 'trajectory', and proves that the regular reflex of *h_2o in Greek was ο, not α (as was contended by Ruijgh).

ἀδαγμός [m.] · κνησμός 'itch' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also in S. Tr. 770 acc. to Phot. (codd. ὀδαγμός).
•DER Cf. ἀδακτῶ· κνήθομαι 'to itch', ἀδαξῆσαι· κνῆσαι 'to scrape, scratch', ἀδαχᾷ· κνᾷ, κνήθει κεφαλήν. ψηλαφᾷ 'scratches the head, gropes' (H.).
•ETYM The old explanation of ἀδαγμός as assimilated from ὀδα- is due to the desire to reduce everything to Indo-European roots; see Van Beek fthc.b. There is no compelling reason to connect a word for 'scratch' with 'tooth'; the vocalic variation points to PG origin. See ►ὀδάξ.

ἀδαής, -ές ⇒ δαῆναι.

ἀδαλός [m.] · ἄσβολος 'soot' (H.). ◂LW Maced.▸ •ETYM Macedonian for αἴθαλος; see von Blumenthal 1930: 5. See ►ἀδῆ, ►ἄδραια.

ἀδάμας, -αντος [m.] a strong metal, 'steel' (Hes.); 'diamond' (Thphr.). ◂?▸
•VAR PN Ἀδάμας (Hom.).
•DER ἀδαμάντινος (Pi., A.).
•ETYM Both the appellative and the PN are often derived from ►δάμνημι as 'indomitable'; for the formation, cf. ►ἀκάμας and Chantraine 1933: 269. But semantically, the etymology is rather strange. It is rather a loanword that was adapted by folk etymology. Acc. to Troxler 1964: 19-21 and Barb 1969: 66-82, it is a loan from Semitic, comparing Akk. adamu. Lubotsky 1998: 414[3] refers to NPhr. (α)τεαμα 'stone'.

ἀδάρεξα · εἰρήνη 'peace' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 24 compares ἀταραξία and thinks the word is of Illyrian origin. Very uncertain.

ἀδάρκη [f.] 'salt deposit on the herbage of marshes' (Dsc., Gal.). ◂LW Celt.▸
•VAR Also -ης [m.], ἄδαρκος [m.].
•ETYM Like Lat. adarca (Plin.), a loanword from Gaulish: cf. Ir. adarc 'horn', which is from Basque adar 'horn', with a Celt. suffix -k- (Pokorny Zeitschr. f. celt. Phil. 14 (1923): 273; Pokorny Zeitschr. f. celt. Phil. 16 (1927): 112).

ἄδδαυον ⇒ ἄζω 1.

ἄδδιξ, -ιχος [f.] a measure of four choinikes (Ar. fr. 709). ◂?▸

•ETYM Unknown. The suffix is also found in χοῖνιξ (which has -ικ-). Geminated δδ is rare in IA, and names for measures are often borrowed. Cf. κάδδιχος s.v. ►κάδος, which is combined by Fur.: 130[59], who assumes a substrate word with the alternation κ/zero. Cf. also Szemerényi 1969b: 248.

ἀδεαλτωhαιε [3sg.opt.aor.] unknown (inscr. Elis [approx. 350[a]]). ◄?► •ETYM DELG (see s.v. for more details) thinks of δέλτος 'writing tablet', referring to Buck 1955: 263.

ἀδελφεός [m.] 'brother' (Il.). ◄GR►
•VAR Att. ἀδελφός (shortened form); ἀδελφεή 'sister' (Pi. -εά, Att. -φή). Cret. αδευπιος.
•DER ἀδελφιδέος, -δέη (Att. -δοῦς, -δῆ) 'nephew', 'niece'. ἀδελιφήρ· ἀδελφεός, Λάκωνες 'brother (Lacon.)' (H.) is due to contamination with φράτηρ. Diminutive ἀδελφίδιον (Ar.), ἀδελφικός 'brotherly, etc.' (Arist.), ἀδελφότης 'brotherhood' (LXX), ἀδελφίζω [v.] 'to accept as a brother' (Hecat.), ἀδέλφιξις (Hp.).
•ETYM Derived from a word for 'womb' with copulative α < *$s\mathring{m}$-, meaning 'from the same womb'; cf. ἀδελφοί· οἱ ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς δελφύος γεγονότες. δελφὺς γὰρ ἡ μήτρα (H.). However, the -ε- cannot be from -εϝ- because of Cret. -ιος; acc. to Wackernagel 1916: 52f., it must derive from *-eio-, which forms material adjectives. We may also assume a ntr. *δελφός as a base noun, thus ha-g^welp^heh-o-. Att. ἀδελφός is from contracted forms like ἀδελφοῦ < -εοῦ. The inherited word for 'brother', φράτηρ, was primarily used in a religious or political sense (e.g. φράτρα, φρατρία), and could perhaps also be used for other members of the extended family, like nephews. Greek probably introduced the expression *φράτηρ ἀδελφεός 'brother proper', cf. Skt. sagarbhya- and, within Greek, ὁμογαστριος. It has been suggested that the word derived from pre-Greek matrilinear societies (Kretschmer Glotta 2 (1910): 201ff.), but the word may instead point to a society with concubines (παλλακαί); see Gonda Mnem. 15 (1962): 390-2. See ►δελφύς.

ἀδευκής, -ές [adj.] unknown, said of ὄλεθρος, πότμος, φῆμις (Od.). ◄IE? deuk- 'care'?►
•DIAL Perhaps Myc. de-u-ka-ri-jo /Deukaliōn/.
•ETYM Like Πολυ-δεύκης, it presupposes a noun *δεῦκος [n.], for which no cognates can be suggested. Not to Lat. dūco 'to lead', etc., as per Lagercrantz KZ 35 (1899): 276. Cf. δεύκει· φροντίζει 'consider, ponder' (H.), ἐνδυκέως 'careful'; ἀδευκής would then mean 'careless, thoughtless', which fits the meaning very well. In a sch. on A. R. 1, 1027, δεῦκος is glossed as γλεῦκος, which seems most improbable. Is it a mistake for ΓΔΕΥΚΟΣ? The name Δευκαλίων may derive from *Λευκαλίων; see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ►ἀδευκής.

ἀδῆ · οὐρανός. Μακεδόνες 'heaven (Maced.)' (H.). ◄LW Mac.►
•ETYM Identical with ►αἰθήρ, which features the typical Macedonian Lautverschiebung (δ for Gr. θ, etc.).

ἀδηκότες [perf.ptc.nom.pl.] in καμάτῳ ἀδηκότες ἠδὲ καὶ ὕπνῳ (K 98), mg. uncertain. ◄?►

•ETYM Connected with ►ἄδην or ►ἡδύς, and ἀαδεῖν (cf. ►ἄαδα). For discussion, see DELG.

ἀδημονέω [v.] 'to be restless, scared' (Hp., Pl., X.). ◄?►
•VAR With short ἀ- (Nic. fr. 16).
•DER ἀδημονία (Epicur., Plu.), ἀδημοσύνη (Democr., X.).
•ETYM An Ionic word. Allen Class. Rev. 20 (1906): 5 connected it with δαῆναι; Debrunner 1937: 266 assumed a contraction from *ἀδαημονέω; semantically not compelling. Not related to ἡδύς, nor to ἀηδής (Leumann 1950: 309[82]).

ἀδήν, -ένος [f.] 'gland' (Hp.). ◄IE?, PG?►
•VAR Later [m.].
•ETYM One compares Lat. inguen, -inis [n.] 'groin, swelling on the groin' and MoIc. økkr [m.] 'growth, tumor' < PGm. *$enkwa$- < *eng^wo-. However, since PIE had no words beginning with a vowel, this would be reconstructed as *h_1eng^w-, but a zero grade *h_1ng^w-e- would give Gr. *ἐνδε- acc. to Rix' Law (*HRC- > Gr. α/ε/οRC). This implies that the Greek word cannot be cognate with the Germanic one (the latter can be cognate with the Latin word, of course, as *h_1eng^w-, see Schrijver 1991: 58). Greek ἀδήν thus remains isolated. Fur.: 172[118] suggests a substrate origin (words in -ην). For a recent challenge of the validity of Rix's Law, see Nikolaev 2005, and on the present word, p. 50[54].

ἄδην [adv.] 'to one's fill' (Il.). ◄IE *seh_2- 'satiate'► •VAR In epic with psilosis. The α- may undergo metrical lengthening.
•DER ἄδος [m., n.] 'satiety' (Il.), ἀδινός 'crowded, thronging, vehement, etc' (mainly epic), ►ἀδρός. From *ἀδη-: ἀδαῖος 'leading to satiety, unpleasant' (Sophr., H.). Cf. further the glosses ►ἄαδα and ἀαδεῖν (H.), and ►ἀδμωλή and ►ἄση.
•ETYM Old accusative of a noun supposed in the first member of ἀδη-φάγος 'glutton' (but what kind of compound is it?). Often connected with the root *seh_2- 'to satisfy', which is found in several Greek verbal forms: ἄμεναι (Il.), aor. ►ἄσαι, ἄσασθαι (epic) 'to become satiated' and ►ἄατος. ἀδην was analyzed by Frisk as containing a stem ἀδ- and connected with Arm. at-ok' 'full, ripe' (cf. ►ἀδρός); but, as Clackson 1994: 170f. remarks, ἀδην itself may simply contain a suffix -δην. Still, this does not explain the other derivations with -δ-. Other languages have an enlargement in -t(i)-: Lat. satis 'enough', Go. saþs 'satiated', ga-soþjan, Lith. sótis 'satiaty' etc. (see ►ἄσαι).

ἀδίαντον [n.] name of a plant, 'Adiantum' (Thphr.). ◄IE?, GR► •VAR ἀδίαντος [m.].
•ETYM Explained as 'what cannot be irrigated' (►διαίνω); see Strömberg 1940: 74f.

ἀδίκη [f.] 'nettle', = ἀκαλήφη (Ps.-Dsc. 4, 93). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Cf. ►ἑλίκη 'willow'. The connection with OHG nazza, nezzila etc. as $\mathring{n}d$-$ik\bar{a}$ (cf. Frisk) is most improbable; it is rather a substrate word.

ἀδινός ⇒ ἄδην, ἀδρός.

ἄδις [?] · ὡς Ἀπίων, ἀθρόοι, ἢ ἐσχάρα 'in masses, hearth' (H.). ◄LW Mac.►

•ETYM In the meaning ἀθρόοι, probably a mistake for ἅλις; in the sense ἐσχάρα, Macedonian (= Lat. aedēs), acc. to von Blumenthal IF 49 (1931): 179.

ἀδμωλή [f.] · ἀπορία, ὀλιγωρία, ἄγνοια, ἡσυχία 'difficulty, contempt or negligence, ignorance, rest or quiet' (H.); cf. Hdn. Gr.1, 324, etc. ◂?▸
•VAR ἀδμωλία· ἡ ἄγνοια 'ignorance' (Suid., Call. fr. 717 Pf.), ἀδμολίη (EM). Further ἀσμωλεῖν = ἀγνοεῖν (H., EM 155, 33).
•DER ἀδμωλῶ· ἀκηδιῶ 'am careless' (Suid.), ἀδμωλεῖν· ἀγνοεῖν ἢ ἀγνωμονεῖν ἢ ἀκηδιᾶν 'to be ignorant, act or treat unfairly, be careless' (EM). ἀδμωλεί· χωρίς δόλου 'without resource' (Suid.).
•ETYM Frisk derived it from ἄδ- (in ►ἄδην) with "suffixal" -μωλ- (Frisk Eranos 41 (1943): 52), which is highly improbable. Acc. to Fur.: 263[8], the word can hardly be inherited. On the interchange δμ/ σμ, see Schwyzer: 208 (unclear).

ἄδμωνες [pl.] a sea-fish (Opp. Hal. 3, 371). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἄδμωες.
•ETYM Unknown; see Thompson 1947.

ἀδνόν [adj.] · ἁγνόν. Κρῆτες 'holy (Cret.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Is it a hypercorrect form, caused by the development δν > γν? Or just a form invented to explain Ἀριάδνη ? See Bechtel 1921(2): 777.

ἀδολέσχης [m.] 'idle talker' (Ar.). ◂?▸
•VAR On ᾱ see Björck 1950: 142, 41.
•DER Later ἀδόλεσχος; thence ἀδολεσχία, -έω, -ικός.
•ETYM Perhaps from *ἀαδο-λέσχης to ἀαδεῖν· ὀχλεῖν (H.), with λέσχη as a second member in the sense of 'conversation', and a first member *ἀ-σϝαδ- (see ►ἁνδάνω, ►ἡδύς); cf. Schulze 1892: 452f. Quite uncertain. See DELG for more details.

ἀδραία · αἰθρία 'clear weather' (H.). ◂LW Mac.▸ •ETYM Probably Macedonian; see von Blumenthal 1930: 5.

ἀδράφαξυς ⇒ ἀτράφαξυς.

ἀδουσιάσασθαι [v.aor.] 'to accept the membership of', φυλῆς καὶ δήμου καὶ φρατρίας (IG 2^2, 553: 15, LSJ Supp.). ◂GR▸ •DER ἀδούσιον· ἀρεστόν, σύμφωνον 'pleased, harmonious, agreed' (H.), ἀδουσιασά-μενοι· ὁμολογησάμενοι 'who agreed' (H.).
•ETYM Probably connected with ἅδος 'decree' < 'decision'.

ἁδρός [adj.] 'thick, strong, full-grown, ripe' (Hdt.). ◂IE *seh_2- 'satiate'▸ •DER ἁδρότης 'strength' (Hell.); on Hom. ἁ(ν)δροτῆτα [acc.] see ►ἀνήρ. ἁδρύνω [v.] 'to make ripe', med. 'to ripen', whence ἄδρυνσις; sometimes also ἁδρέω, ἁδρόομαι. Plant name ἁδρώδης (Strömberg 1940: 82).
•ETYM From root ἁδ- in ►ἅδην, with a suffix -ρο-.

ἄδρυα · πλοῖα μονόξυλα, Κύπριοι 'ships made out of one piece of wood (Cypr.)'. Λέγονται δὲ καὶ οἱ ἐν τῷ ἀρότρῳ στῦλοι 'the poles in the plough'. Σικελοὶ δὲ ἄδρυα λέγουσι τὰ μῆλα 'apples (Sicilian)', παρὰ δὲ Ἀττικοῖς ἀκρόδρυα 'fruits grown on upper branches of trees (Att.)' (H.). Also ἄδρυα· οἱ στῦλοι ἀρότρου, δι' ὧν ὁ ἱστοβοεὺς ἁρμόζεται 'by which the plough beam is fixed' (H.). ◂IE *dru- 'tree', PG▸ •ETYM In the first gloss, it seems to continue *ἅ-δρυα '(consisting) of one single tree', a compound from ἁ- < *sm̥- and ►δρῦς. This can also be assumed for the second, agricultiral meaning. For the meaning 'one single' of ἁ-, cf. μώνυχες s.v. ►ὄνυξ. But in the third meaning, 'apples', it is probably folk-etymological, as it is a variant of ►μάδρυα, which is non-IE. Compounds with a second member -δρυ- are rare and doubtful; see DELG s.v. δρῦς.

Ἄδωνις, -ιδος [m.] theonym. ◂LW?▸
•VAR Also Ἄδων, -ος.
•ETYM Supposed to be a loan from Semitic (Hebr. ādōn 'Lord'). But no cult connected with this name is known in the Semitic world, nor a myth parallel to that in Greece. See Burkert 1985: 176f., arguing against Kretschmer, e.g. Kretschmer Glotta 7 (1916): 29ff. and Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 235f. Fur.: 328[21] points to the proper name Ἄδων, an Armenian general and a Phrygian flute-player.

ἄεθλος [m.] 'burden, contest, prize of a contest' (Il.). On the mg. Trümpy 1950: 150f. ◂IE? *h_2ued^h- 'contest'?▸
•VAR Also -ον [n.] (Il.).
•DIAL Arc. [ἀ]ϝεθλα (IG 5(2), 75), Att. contr. ἆθλος, -ον.
•DER ἀέθλιον 'id.' (epic), ἀέθλιος 'of the contest' (Thgn., Call.), ἄθλιος 'unhappy' (Att.), ἀθλιότης; ἀ(ε)θλέω, -εύω [v.] 'to contend for', ἀ(ε)θλητήρ, -τής, ἀ(έ)θλημα, -σις, -τικός.
•ETYM The original meaning probably was 'contest for a prize'. Not related to Skt. vāyati 'be tired' (as per Trümpy 1950: 150-151), which is from *h_1ueh_2-. The word looks Indo-European; the form suggests a root reconstruction *h_2ued^h-.

ἀείδω [v.] 'to sing (the praises of)' (Il.). ◂IE? *h_2ueid- 'sing'▸ •DIAL Att. ᾄδω.
•DER ἀοιδή, ᾠδή 'song', whence ἀοίδιμος, ᾠδικός. Agent noun ἀοιδός, ᾠδός 'singer'. Thence, or from ἀοιδή, the verb ἀοιδιάω (epic) = ἀείδω; derived from ᾠδή: Ὠιδεῖον a building in Athens for musical contests. Further ἄεισμα, ᾆσμα [n.] 'song' (IA), ᾀσμάτιον (Pl. Com.); ᾀσμός [m.] 'id.' (Pl. Com.).
•ETYM The ablaut suggests PIE *h_2ueid-, but no cognate outside Greek is known. Older speculations, now dated, are found in Frisk and DELG. Harðarson 1993b: 163 assumed the reconstruction *h_2ue-(h_2)ud-, with loss of the laryngeal (which seems difficult) and dissimilation as in ἔειπον < *h_1e-ue-uk^w-. See ►αὐδή, ►ἀηδών.

ἀείρω 1 [v.] 'to raise' (Il.). ◂IE? *h_2uer- 'raise'?▸ •VAR ἄωρτο 'hung' (Il.), which Tichy 1983: 364f. explains as an injunctive *ἄορτο < PIE *$h_2$ur̥-tó.
•DIAL Att. αἴρω, for which Frisk suggested a recent formation to the Att. fut. ἀρῶ < *ἀερῶ. Improbable is a root *sr̥-, as per Heubeck Orbis 13 (1964): 264-7. Taillardat RPh. 57 (1983): 21-25 convincingly assumes a zero grade verb *awr̥-je/o- > αἴρω.

•COMP ἀερσί-ποδες 'lifting their feet' (Il.); μετήορος '(sth.) in the air', Att. μετέωρος, Aeol. πεδάορος (these are not from ► ἀήρ).
•DER ἄρσις [f.] 'raising' (Arist.); ► ἀρτήρ.
•ETYM Not from ἀήρ 'air' (which has long *ā-). No cognates are known, but the form requires the reconstruction h$_2$uer-. See also ► ἀείρω 2; an important question is whether these are originally the same verb. See ► ἀρτήρ, ► αἰώρα; cf. also ► ἅρμα 2, ► ἠερέθονται.

ἀείρω 2 [v.] 'to bind together, join' (Il.); mostly with συν-. Cf. ξυναίρεται· συνάπτεται 'is attached' (H.). ◄IE? h$_2$uer-? 'bind'► •VAR Note ἄωρτο 'was hanging'; παρηέρθη 'was made to hang beside' Π 341.
•DIAL Perhaps Myc. o-pa-wo-ta /op-āworta/ 'pieces of armor'?
•COMP Nominal stem -αορ- 'band, link' in *τετρ(α)-άορος, τετρᾱ́ορος, contracted τέτρωρος 'which yokes four together' (Od.), whence τετρᾱορία 'four-horse chariot' (Pi.); from συναείρω also συνᾱ́ορος, συνήορος 'coupled together, spouse', Att. συνωρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'two-horse team', to which belongs συνωρικεύεται 'drives with a team of horses' (Ar. Nub. 15), but *συνωρικός is unattested; from συνωρίς also συνωριαστής 'driver of a συνωρίς' (Luc.), which presupposes a verb *συνωριάζειν. Contrasted with συνήορος is παρήορος, παράορος (Il.) '(horse) joined beside', also 'outstretched' and 'reckless' (see Leumann 1950: 222ff.); a verb παραείρω seems to have existed beside συναείρω, but it is attested only in a special use παρηέρθη δὲ κάρη (Π 341) 'the head hung on one side', cf. Leumann loc. cit. Isolated ἀπήορος 'far away'. ἐπήορος 'suspended over', κατήορος 'hanging down', and κατωρίς 'band hanging down' rather belong with μετήορος, μετέωρος, see ► ἀείρω 1.
•DER Action noun ἀορτή *'attaching', 'sth. attached, bag for tying' (Men.), medic. term referring to the bronchi and the hose-like aorta (Hp., Arist.). Agent or instrument noun ἀορτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] *'attacher', 'sword-belt' (Od.), with unclear o-vocalism; also ἀόρτης (pap., H.) and ἀορτεύς (H.). Denominative or deverbative ptc. ἀορτηθείς 'hanged' (AP). ἄορτρα [n.pl.] 'pulmonary lobe' (Hp.), after nouns in -τρον (Chantraine 1933: 331f.). See further ► ἄορ, -ορος [n.] 'sword' (probably unrelated); related is ► ἀρτάω 'to hang'.
•ETYM Solmsen 1901: 289ff. separated it from ► ἀείρω 1 'to raise', but DELG tends to consider the second as a specialization of the first (see extensive discussion in DELG). The present entry is mostly connected with a root uerH- 'to bind, hang on, strick' in Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. virvẽ 'string', OCS obora < ob-vora 'string, twine', Lith. vérti 'to pierce, string', etc., but the exact demarcation from the root Huer- 'to open' is unclear; perhaps it was originally one root. For Greek, the closest connection is with Alb. vjerr 'to hang, suspend'. See ► ἀρτήρ, ► ἀρτάω, ► ἄορ.

ἀεκήλιος [adj.] 'unbearable' (only Σ 77, ἔργα). ◄GR► •ETYM The form was based on the root uek- 'to wish' in ► ἑκών, ► ἕκηλος; see Philipp in LfgrE s.v.

ἀέλιοι [m.pl.] · οἱ ἀδελφὰς γυναῖκας ἐσχηκότες 'who have sisters as wives', i.e. 'brothers-in-law' (H.). ◄IE sue-lo-►

•VAR αἴλιοι· σύγγαμβροι 'the husbands of two sisters' (H.); εἰλίονες in Pollux 3, 32 (οἱ δὲ ἀδελφὰς γήμαντες ὁμόγαμβροι ἢ σύγγαμβροι ἢ μᾶλλον συγκηδεσταὶ καὶ παρὰ τοῖς ποιηταῖς εἰλίονες), with metrical lengthening of *ἐλίονες or *ἑλίονες.
•ETYM αἴλιοι may be an itacistic notation for *ἔλιοι (*ἕλιοι). The ἀ- in ἀέλιοι is taken as a 'copulative' α-. Cognate with ON svilar [m.pl.] 'brothers-in-law, whose wives are sisters', PIE sue-lo-, a derivative in -l- of the reflexive pronoun sue.

ἄελλα [f.] 'storm wind' (Il.). ◄IE? h$_2$uel-► •VAR ἀέλλη (Π 374).
•DIAL Aeol. αὔελλα.
•DER Ἀελλώ, -οῦς [f.] name of a Harpy (Hes.); ἀελλαῖος, also ἀελλάς 'fast like a storm' (S.), ἀελλήεις (Nonn.), ἀελλώδης (sch. Il.). Bird name ἀελλός (H.) and ἄελλον· ταχύ 'quick' (EM). Note ἀελλής (of κονίσαλος Γ 13), perhaps from ► ἀολλής, but rather not after ἄελλα. Verb ἀέλλεται· πνεῖ (EM).
•ETYM Cf. θύελλα. Direct derivation fron the root of ► ἄημι, h$_2$ueh$_1$-, is impossible because of related W awel [f.] 'wind', which requires the reconstruction h$_2$eu-el-. The Greek form can also be derived from *ἀϝελ-ι̯α. The gloss ἀείλη· πνοή 'breath, etc.' (H.) does not fit in. See ► ἀέτμον.

ἄεμμα [n.] 'bow' (Call.). ◄?► •ETYM Assuming an original meaning 'bowstring' (cf. ► νευρά), explained as an artificial form for ἅμμα 'knot, cord' (to ► ἅπτω); this is doubtful.

ἀετμόν ⇒ ἀτμός.

ἀέξω ⇒ αὔξω, αὐξάνω.

ἄεπτος [adj.] of uncertain mg., cf. ἄεπτον· ἰσχυρόν, ἀοίκητον (ἄθικτον) 'strong, uninhabited' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Sometimes we find ► ἄαπτος or ἄελπτος (A. Supp. 908, Ag. 141, etc.).
•ETYM Unknown. See Wackernagel Stud. ital. fil. class. 5 (1897): 27ff.

ἀέροψ [m.] Boeotian name for the bird μέροψ (sch. Ar. Av. 1354). ◄PG? (S, V)► •VAR Also Ἀέροπες· ἔθνος, Τροιζῆνα κατοικοῦντες. καί ἐν Μακεδονιᾳ γένος τι. καί ὄρνεά τινα 'people inhabiting Troezen; lineage in Macedonia; kind of bird' (H.); the gloss ἀεροπός· κοχλίας 'snail' (H.) is corrupted acc. to DELG following Latte. Variants εἴροψ = μέροψ, also Boeotian (Arist.); PN Ἠέροπος.
•ETYM See Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 12-34; it is clearly a substrate element. Chantraine thinks that the α- is long because of Ant. Lib. 18, 3 ἠέροπος. Fur.: 243, 246, 352 assumes the interchange μ/ ϝ and prothesis ἀ-/ ἐ-/ ἠ-: μέροπ- / ἀϝέροπ- / εἴροπ- < *ἐϝεροπ- / ἠϝέροπ- (but this remains uncertain; perhaps ει-, ἠ- are secondary lengthenings). Pre-Greek origin of the bird name and the proper name is probable (cf. the suffix -οπ-). See ► μέροψ, ► πηνέλοψ.

ἄεσα [v.aor.] 'to spend (the night)' (Od.), always with νύκτα(ς). ◄IE h$_2$ues- 'live, dwell, spend the night'► •VAR Secondary pres. ἀέσκω (Hdn., H.).

•ETYM Related to Skt. vásati 'to dwell, live, spend the night', Hitt. ḫuiš-^{zi} 'to live', ToB wäs- [verb] 'to stay, to wait', Go. wisan 'to be', Arm. gom 'I am' (but rejected by Kortlandt AAL 19 (1998): 19f.) etc. There is also an old present ἰαύω < *h_2i-h_2eus-. Not related to ἄστυ, ἑστία.

ἀεσίφρων ⇒ ἀάω.

ἀέσκω ⇒ ἄεσα.

ἄζετον · ἄπιστον. Σικελοί 'not trustworthy (Sicilian)' (H.). ◅?▻
•DER ἀζετόω in ἀζετωθεωντι (Delphi, SGDI 2034, 17), but the mg. 'if they are persuaded' poses difficulties, as it is the opposite of the gloss; see DELG.
•ETYM Unexplained.

ἀζηχής [adj.] 'ἄπαυστος, συνεχής, incessant', of noise, pain (Il.). ◅GR▻ •DER In H. also ἀζαχές and ἀζεχές· ἀδιάλειπτον 'incessant'; ἀζηχές· ἀδιεχές 'unceasing' (Suid.).
•ETYM Probably for *ἀζαεχής, which can be read in all places in Homer, from *ἀ-δια-εχής (cf. συνεχής 'continuous') (Schulze 1892: 471, Bechtel 1914 s.v.). But the contraction *αε > η is irregular in Ionic. DELG therefore suggests the influence of ἠχή and compounds like δυσηχής, but also remarks that *αε > η may be found in Thessalian, Lesbian and Arcado-Cyprian. For the meaning, Bechtel assumes 'der ohne Einhalt etwas tut', but it simply means 'without interrruption'; διέχω means 'to stand apart, be separate'.

ἄζον [adj.] · μέλαν, ὑψηλόν 'black or dark, high' (H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 33 corrects μέλαν to μέγαν. However, his explanation from ag-i̯on (to ἄγαν and μέγας) is quite uncertain.

ἄζομαι ⇒ ἅγιος.

ἄζω 1 [v.] 'to dry' (Il.). ◅IE *h_2ed- 'dry'▻
•VAR Mostly intr. ἄζομαι 'to parch'.
•COMP ἄδδαυον· ξηρόν. Λάκωνες 'dry (Lacon.)' (H.) would be a compound of ἄζα (see below) and αὖος 'dry' (Fraenkel Gnomon 21 (1949): 39, Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 22); improbable; Latte corrects the gloss to *ἄδδανον. Cf. ἀζαυτός· παλαιότης καὶ κόνις 'antiquity, dust' (H.), which remains unclear.
•DER Hell. ἄζα 'dryness, heat', in σάκος ... πεπαλαγμένον ἄζῃ (χ 184) often interpreted as 'shield defiled with mold', which seems unnecessary, cf. ἄζα· ἄσβολος κόνις 'soot, dust or ashes', παλαιότης· κόπρος ἐν ἀγγείῳ ὑπομείνασα 'filth having remained behind in a receptacle' (H.).
Adjective ἀζαλέος 'barren, arid' (Il.), cf. ἰσχαλέος, αὐσταλέος. Verbs ἀζάνομαι (h. Ven.), ἀζαίνω (Nic.) 'to parch', both deverbative.
•ETYM Acc. to Frisk, the nearest cognates are found in Slavic: OPol. ozd 'dried malt', Cz., Sln. ozdíti 'to dry malt' < *h_2esd-. Germanic has a group of words with velars in place of dentals: Go. azgo, OHG asca 'ashes'. However, it is more probable that Gr. ἄζω is comparable to Hitt. ḫāt-^{i} 'to dry up' < *h_2od-ei, and should be reconstructed as *h_2ed-ie/o- (cf. Kloekhorst 2008). What is perhaps originally an extension of the same root, if *h_2eh_1s- < pre-PIE *h_2eds-, is found in Lat. āreō 'to be dry', āra 'altar' (OLat. āsa), Hitt. ḫašša- 'hearth' < *h_2eh_1s-h_2. Skt. ā́sa- [m.] 'ashes, dust' probably continues *h_2eh_1s-o-. Cf. ►αὖος, ►ἀυσταλέος.

ἄζω 2 [v.] 'to cry, groan'. ⇒ ἆ 5.

ἀηδών, -όνος [f.] 'nightingale' (Od.). ◅PG?(S)▻ •VAR Also ἀηδώ, -οῦς [f.] (S.). Also [m.], but rare.
•ETYM From *ἀϝηδών; cf. ἀβηδόνα· ἀηδόνα (H.). Connection with ►ἀείδω and ►αὐδή (which is almost universally accepted) is difficult, since a lengthened grade *$h_2u\bar{e}d$- is improbable. The word could therefore well be Pre-Greek; for the suffix, cf. bird and animals names like ►χελῑδών 'swallow', ►τενθρηδών 'wasp'.

ἄημι [v.] 'to blow' (Il.). ◅IE *h_2ueh_1- 'blow'▻ •VAR Forms in Schwyzer: 680.
•DER ἀήτη [f.], ἀήτης [m.] 'wind'; rare are the verbal nouns ἄημα, ἄησις. A zero grade ἀε- << *h_2uh_1- in ἀετμόν· τὸ πνεῦμα (H.), whence ►ἀτμός. Cf. further ►ἄελλα; ἄος· πνεῦμα ἢ ἄημα (cod. ἴαμα) 'breath, wind' (H.) is an innovation. Unrelated is ►ἀήρ, which has long ᾱ-.
•ETYM An old verbal root *h_2ueh_1- is also reflected in Skt. vā́ti, Go. waian, OHG wāen and OCS 1sg. vě-jǫ, all 'to blow'. The word for 'wind' is (a thematization of) the participle of this root: *h_2ueh_1-nt-o- > Skt. vā́ta- [m.], Av. vāta-, both of which must often be read with three syllables, representing Proto-Indo-Iranian vaHata-*. The same word is found in Lat. ventus, Go. winds, ToA want, ToB yente; Hitt. ḫuu̯ant- is from unthematicized *h_2uh_1-ent-. A form with suffix *-t- has been assumed in in ►ἀήσυρος 'airy, quick (as wind?)' (poet.), for which cf. Skt. vātula- 'windy', but this gives formal problems (tu* > συ is not regular). See ►ἄελλα, ►αὔρα, ►ἀήσυρος, ►ἀτμός.

ᾱ̓ήρ [f.] 'mist, haze, clouds' (Il.), later 'air, atmosphere'. ◅IE *h_2eus-er-▻ •VAR Gen. ἠέρος. The nom. ᾱ̓ήρ (also Att.; thence gen. ᾱ̓έρος) arose by dissimilation; is it an Atticism in Homer? Later Ion. ἠήρ.
•DIAL Aeol. αὖηρ, Dor. ἀβήρ (= αὐήρ) (H.).
•DER Derivatives: ἠερόεις, ἠεροειδής 'dim, cloudy', also ►αὔρα.
•ETYM ἀήρ is not cognate with ἄημι. Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 7ff. assumed an original meaning 'suspension' and derived the word from ἀείρω 'raise'. However, this leaves the length of the initial vowel unexplained. Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 619, 626 derives the word from ausēr*, arguing that related ►αὔρα < *h_2eus-r-h_2 still means 'morning mist' in ε 469. See ►ἠέριος, ►ἦρι.

ἀήσυλος [adj.] in the hapax ἀήσυλα ἔργα (E 876) 'criminal acts'. ◅?, PG?(V)▻ •VAR αἰήσυλον· ἄνομον, κακοποιόν 'lawless, doing ill' (H.).
•ETYM It has been proposed that the word is a modification of αἴσυλος 'unseemly, evil' (αἴσυλα ῥέζειν, E 403, etc.) after ἄημι or ἀήσυρος. Different explanations are found in Bechtel 1914 and Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 53 (1901): 94. Fraenkel Glotta 34 (1955): 307ff proposed *α(ϝ)ισσυλα, connecting it with ἶσος (highly doubtful). Fur.:

253 points to the variant αι- in the gloss, which may imply a substrate origin (comparing ἄητος, which may have a variant αἴητος).

ἀήσυρος [adj.] probably 'light, agile', said of ants (A.). ⊲PG?(S)⊳ •VAR Cf. ἀήσυρον· τὸ λέπτον, τὸ μετέωρον καὶ κοῦφον παρὰ τὸ ἀέρι σύρεσθαι ἐπὶ ὀρνέων 'delicate, elevated, light, after being dragged through the air by birds' (Suda).
•ETYM Connection with ►ἄημι is improbable; rather a substrate word (where the suffix -υρ- is not infrequent).

ἄητος [adj.] in θάρσος ἄητον (Φ 395), mg. uncertain. ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR Cf. also θάρσος ἄᾱτον (Q. S. 1, 217). Also ἄητοι· ἀκόρεστοι, ἄπληστοι 'insatiable, greedy'; ἀήτους· μεγάλας. Αἰσχύλος Ἀθάμαντι 'great (Aesch.)' (H.), ἄητος· ὁ ἀκατάπαυστος 'incessant' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 220).
•ETYM The first explanation connects the word with ἄμεναι, ►ἆσαι 'to satiate', but this would mean that it differs from ἄατος, ἆτος by its long vowel, which is improbable. Perhaps it is the same word as ►αἴητος (in πέλωρ αἴητον Σ 410, said of Hephaistos). If so, the variation α/ αι might point to a substrate word; metrical lengthening is improbable, and α < αι impossible. See Fur.: 253, though his connection with ►ἀήσυλος remains uncertain. Palmer 1963: 339 connects the epithet of Hephaistos with Myc. a-ja-me-no as 'artist'; this is improbable. Not related to ἄημι. See Sabbadini Riv. studi class. 15 (1967): 78-84.

ἀθᾰ́ρη [f.] 'gruel, porridge' (Ar.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also ἀθήρη, -α [f.] (Hell.); influence of ►ἀθήρ?
•DER ἀθαρώδης (Ruf. Med.) and ἀθήρωμα 'kind of ulcer' (Gal.).
•ETYM Unexplained; an Egyptian word according to Pliny (N. H. 22, 121). The final -η in Attic, which is confirmed by Moeris, would lead us to suppose a pre-form *ἀθαρϝᾱ. Connection with ἀθήρ is neither formally nor semantically plausible. Not related to Lat. ador (Hamp TPS (1968): 106), as this belongs to Go. atisk and Iran. ādu 'grain' (Szemerényi 1969a: 968f.).

ἀθελβ- ⇒ ἀθέλγειν.

ἀθέλγειν [v.] · ἀμέλγειν 'to milk' (H., EM), (ἐξ)αθέλγεται (Hp.), explained as παρίεται, διεκλύεται 'lets go, releases' by Galen. Also ἀθέλγηται· θηλάζεται ἢ θλίβηται 'is suckled, compressed' (H.), cf. ἀθέλγηται· Βακχεῖός φησι θηλάζεται ἢ ἐπισπᾶται, καὶ ἐκθλίβηται ὡς καὶ Νίκανδρος 'is suckled, drawn after one; is squeezed (out), crowded' (Erotian. 20, 1; see Hp. De med. off. 11). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Cf. ἀθέλβεται· διηθεῖται 'is strained through' (AB); ἀθελβεῖ· ἕλκει 'draws' (H.) and ἀθελβάζειν· διηθεῖν 'to strain through' (H.); further ἀθέλδεται· διηθεῖται 'id.' (Diocl. Com. fr. 7 Kock, An. Bekk. 350).
•ETYM These verbs, meaning 'to press, draw away, filter', have no etymology. The variation β/ δ/ γ should not be explained from an IE labiovelar (as per Solmsen 1909: 9[1]), as contamination leading to three different forms is improbable. Since Pre-Greek also had labiovelars (cf. βασιλεύς, Myc. qa-si-re-u), substrate origin is most probably the source of the alternations. See Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 12f., and cf. γέφυρα beside δέφυρα, see Fur.: 388, 390.

ἀθελδ- ⇒ ἀθέλγειν.

ἀθερίζω [v.] 'to disparage, neglect' (Il.). Originally always with negation. ⊲?⊳
•DER ἀθέριστος· ἀφρόντιστος (Zonar., A. Fr. 128), cod. -ιτον.
•ETYM Unknown. The glosses ἀθερές· ἀνόητον, ἀνόσιον, ἀκριβές 'stupid, not in order, precise' (H.) and ἀθερής· ὁ σίδηρος ἀτειρὴς ὅταν θερίζῃ, etc. 'indestructible iron when it is heated' (H.) seem unrelated in view of their meaning. An older proposal derives it from *ἄθερος, connecting it with Skt. ádhara- '(be)low' (see Bechtel 1914). Another proposal (DELG) derives it from ►ἀθήρ, as flocci facio. Neither is convincing.

Ἀθήνη [f.] the goddess (Il.), a common Greek goddess dating from Minoan times, protecting the palace, and depicted with a snake. ⊲PG⊳ •DIAL Myc. a-ta-na-po-ti-ni-ja [dat.sg.]? (see Aura Jorro 1985-1993: 112). Dor. (etc.) Ἀθάνα.
•DER The town Ἀθῆναι (Dor. Ἀθᾶναι) contains the same onomastic element; for the suffix cf. Μυκῆναι. Thence Ἀθηναῖος 'Athenian' (Il.), whence fem. Ἀθηναία, -η, which is also used as the name of the goddess (88 times im Hom.). This form gave *Ἀθηνάα (Aeol. 'Αθαναα with short να), which was contracted to Att. Ἀθηνᾶ.
•ETYM Like the goddess itself, the name is pre-Greek. Note the suffix *-ān-. See ►Ἀττικός.

ἀθήρ, -έρος [m.] 'awn', plur. 'chaff, barb of a weapon, spine or prickle of a fish', also 'edge of a weapon' (Hes.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR With a nasal ἀνθέριξ, -ικος, etc.; with suffix -εών: ἀνθερεών, -ῶνος (see below).
•COMP ἀθηρηλοιγός 'winnowing-fan', from 'consumer of chaff' (Od. λ 128 = δ 275), but the two η's are surprising.
•DER ἀθερίνη f., -ῖνος m. 'kind of smelt, Atherina hepsetus' (Arist.), cf. Chantraine 1933: 204, Thompson 1947 s.v. Also ἀθερηΐς, -ίδος [f.] 'prickly' (Nic.), ἀθερώδης (Thphr.).
Variants with nasal: ἀνθέριξ, -ικος [m.] = ἀθήρ, also 'ear' (Il.), ἀνθέρικος [m.] 'stalk of an asphodel, asphodel plant' (Hp.), ἀνθερικώδης (Thphr.). With the suffix of place -εών: ἀνθερεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'chin' (Il.).
•ETYM No etymology. IE ablaut h_2end^h- : h_2nd^h- is impossible, as both forms would give Gr. ἀνθ- acc. to Rix's Law. The nasalized forms could be due to folk etymology, but rather point to Pre-Greek prenasalization. Fur.: 296 further adduces ἀνθερίσκος = ἀνθερικ- with the interchange σκ/ κ; perhaps also ►ἄνθρυσκον / ἐ- 'chervil'. Not related to Lat. ador, both because of the meaning, and because this is kindred with Iran. ādu, Go. atisk; see Szemerényi 1969a: 958f. The word has nothing to do with names of the wasp or forest bee (►ἀνθρήνη, ►ἀνθρηδών), nor with ►ἄνθρωπος.

ἀθραγένη [f.] a plant, 'Clematis vitalba' (Thphr.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM Frisk compares ►ἄθρας 'chariot', which he thinks would fit a climbing plant well, but I don't see what a car has to do with a plant. See Strömberg 1940: 108. Fur.: 288 compares ἀνδράχνη and concludes to a substrate origin (prenasalization), which is probable anyhow.

ἄθρας [m., f.] · ἅρμα. Ῥόδιοι 'chariot (Rhodian)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unexplained. Formerly compared with Skt. vandhúra- [m.] 'wagon-seat', taken as a wicker basket tied upon the wagon, and connected with MoHG winden, etc. (Pok.: 1148) as IE *$uend^h$- : und^h- >(>) Gr. *ϝαθ-. As the formation of the Sanskrit word is unclear, and the root is hardly attested outside Germanic, the connection must be false. Bănăţeanu REIE 3 (1943): 149 calls the word Anatolian. Connection with κάνναθρον is improbable.

ἀθρέω [v.] 'to gaze at, observe' (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἀθρήματα· δῶρα πεμπόμενα παρὰ τῶν συγγενῶν ταῖς γαμουμέναις παρθέναις παρὰ Λεσβίοις 'gifts having been sent by kinsfolk to maidens being given in marriage (Lesbian)' (H.) (Snell Glotta 37 (1959): 282-287, cf. Renehan Glotta 49 (1971): 66).
•ETYM No etymology. One compares ἐνθρεῖν· φυλάσσειν 'to guard' (H.) and θρήσκω· νοῶ 'to perceive' (H.), θρησκεύω 'to observe' etc., but this leaves the ἀ- unexplained. It cannot be the zero grade of ἐν-, since a zero grade *h_1n- would still yield ἐν-. The derivation by Hoffmann 1921: 78f. from a noun *ἄθρος 'directed at a goal', from IE *d^her- 'to hold' and copulative α- (cf. ►ἀθρόος), is most improbable. On the use of ἀθρέω, see Prévot RPh. 61 (1935): 246f.

ἀθρόος [adj.] 'in crowds, gathered together' (Il.). ◄?►
•DIAL Att. ἁθρόος (spiritus asper perhaps restored after ἅπας, ἅμα).
•DER ἀθροίζω (ἁ-) 'to gather together' (Archil.).
•ETYM Compared with Skt. sadhry-añc- 'united' (Brugmann 1894: 14ff.), which was formerly analyzed as containing the root *d^her- 'to hold', but this is no longer maintained by EWAia. It does not belong to ►ἀθρέω, nor to ►θρόνος. It is probable that ἀ- is from *sm̥-, but the further analysis is uncertain. Risch 1937: 179 compares ἀλλό-θροος 'speaking a foreign language', in which case it would mean 'calling together'(?).

ἀθύρω [v.] 'to play, sport' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Only present.
•DER ἄθυρμα 'plaything, toy' (Il.), plur. also 'adornments', diminutive ἀθυρμάτιον. Deverbative ἀθυρεύεσθαι· παίζειν, μιγνύειν, σκιρτᾶν 'to play, intermingle, leap' (H.).
•ETYM From *ἀθυρ-yω. Compared with Lith. padùrmai 'impetuous', Ru. dur' 'foolishness', from PIE *$d^huer(H)$- 'to whirl, rush'. However, ἀ- cannot be the zero grade of *h_1en- 'in' (which would not really make sense semantically anyway), and an initial laryngeal gives the improbable root structure *h_2d^huerH-.

αἴ exclamation of surprise, pain, or sorrow. ◄ONOM► •VAR Also αἰαῖ.
•ETYM Elementary formation, found in many languages.

αἰ 'if'. ⇒εἰ.

αἶα 1 [f.] 'earth' (Il.). ◄?► •ETYM By some considered identical with ►αἶα 2 (Brugmann IF 15 (1903-1904): 94ff., Brugmann IF 29 (1911-1912): 206ff.), in which case it would originally mean 'mother'. The relation with γαῖα and μαῖα is uncertain; cf. Güntert 1914: 126f., Brandenstein 1954b: 80. Van Windekens assumed as-ya from *h_2s- 'dry' (but this root perhaps did not exist; see ►ἄζω). Woodhouse KZ 107 (1994): 99f.) assumes *sausi̯a, but cf. ►αὖος.

αἶα 2 [f.] 'mother, grandmother'? (Il., poet.). ◄?►
•VAR Cf. αἶα· ὑπὸ Κυρηναίων τηθίς καὶ μαῖα καὶ ἀδελφὴ Κρήτης. καὶ φυτόν τι. ἔτι δὲ ὁ κάρπος αὐτῷ ὁμώνυμος (EM 27, 24).
•ETYM Compared with Lat. avia 'grandmother'; uncertain. Elementary word? See ►αἶα 1.

αἰᾱνής [adj.] 'horrible' (Archil.); the mg. 'eternal' (A.) through association with ►αἰεί. ◄?►
•VAR Ion. αἰηνής.
•ETYM There is a speculative hypothesis by Wackernagel 1897: 7, who assumed the reconstruction *σαιϝ-ᾱνής 'with terrifying face' (whence Lat. saevus, the word for 'face' seen in ►ἀπηνής, etc.). See Degani Helikon 2 (1962): 37-56.

αἰβοῖ exclamation of disgust (Ar.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Also αἰβοιβοῖ, of laughter.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic, elementary formation. See Schwyzer: 600.

αἰγανέη [f.] 'hunting spear, javelin' (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. the names of trees and animal skins in -έη, -έα: μηλέη, πτελέη, κυνέη etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 91f.). If named after the material, one compares the word for 'oak' in PGm. aik-*, which is also supposed in ►αἰγίλωψ and Lat. aesculus. Trümpy 1950: 52, 57 explains that the αἰγανέη was thrown by a strap. Laser Gymnasium 60 (1953): 115-121 connected it with PIE *h_2eig- 'to stir, set in movement', in Skt. éjati, to which αἶγες· κύματα (see ►αἴξ) is compared. This is semantically improbable, and if Skt. ej- belongs to iṅg- (see Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 264), then the root contained a labiovelar, which would make the connection impossible. To ►αἰχμή, acc. to Bechtel 1914.

αἴγειρος [f.] 'black poplar' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR αἴγερος (Com. Adesp. 1276, Kock).
•DER αἰγειρών 'poplar grove', αἰγείρινος, αἰγειρίτης 'of the poplar' (all Hell. and late).
•ETYM The connection with ►αἰγίλωψ, ►αἰγανέη is uncertain. Sommer IF 55 (1937): 260 pointed to numerous non-IE words like αἴγιθος and names in Αἰγ- (Αἴγινα, Αἰγαί, etc.), suggesting a Pre-Greek origin. This would be confirmed by the form with -ε-.

αἰγιαλός [adj.] 'sea-shore, beach'; also TN, e.g. the coast of Achaea (Il.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. a_3-ki-a_2-ri-jo probably /aigihalio-/, see Aura Jorro 1985-1993: 134.
•DER αἰγιάλειος, αἰγιαλεύς, αἰγιαλικός, -λίτης, -λώδης all are late derivations. Also Αἰγιαλεῖς name of the inhabitants of the coast of Achaea Hdt.).
•ETYM The Myc. form seems to confirm that the second element is derived from ►ἅλς. For the first member, cf. αἶγες· τὰ κύματα. Δωριεῖς 'waves (Dor.)' (H.) and Artem. 2, 12 καὶ γὰρ τὰ μεγάλα κύματα αἶγας ἐν τῇ συνηθείᾳ λέγομεν 'we usually call large waves αἶγας'. This in turn is comparable with Skt. ej- 'to storm', but see ►αἰγανέη. It is highly improbable that αἶγες in the sense of κύματα is a metaphorical use of αἴξ 'goat' (as per Heubeck IF 68 (1963): 13-21). The word is Pre-Greek acc. to Chantraine 1933: 248, which cannot be excluded, though Chantraine now calls it 'all too easy' in DELG s.v.

αἴγιθος [m.] 'titmouse (Parus)' (Ar.). ◂PG(S,V)▸
•VAR αἴγινθος (Dionys. Av. 1, 12); αἴγινθος μικρός 'parra modica' (gloss.), not mentioned by Frisk or DELG; αἰγίοθος (Arist. v.l.), for *αἴγισθος?
•DER αἰγίθαλλος, -θᾶλος (Ar.).
•ETYM A typical substrate word, discernible from its prenasalization and the suffix -αλ(λ)- with variation λ/ λλ. See Fur.: 267, 288, 254[8], 304, 387, with further literature.

αἰγίλιψ [adj.] 'sheer, steep' (Il.), also as a TN. ◂?▸
•VAR αἰγίλιψ· ὑψηλὴ πέτρα καὶ πόλις καὶ ἰτέα ὑπὸ Θουρίων 'high rock, citadel, willow (Thourian)' (H.).
•ETYM The Ancients explained it as 'abandoned even by goats', which is clearly a folk etymology. In modern times, it is connected with Lith. lìpti 'to clamber' (see Solmsen 1901: 73[1]) as 'what can be climbed only by goats', which is also highly doubtful. The meaning 'clamber' for the root leip-* is secondary to 'stick, cleave', and it is far from certain that Greek underwent the same development as Lithuanian. The formation in αἰγι- is unexplained as well (see ►αἴξ). Cf. also ►ἄλιψ · πέτρα 'rock' (H.), the explanation of which from 'what cannot be climbed' is doubtful too; the gloss λίψ· πέτρα ἀφ' ἧς ὕδωρ στάζει 'rock from which water drips' may be due to later interpretation (Solmsen, cf. Persson 1912(1): 152[1]); Marzullo 1969: 101f thinks it is a mistake for α[ἰγί]λιψ.

αἰγίλωψ, -ωπος [m.] 'kind of oak' (Thphr.), also 'oat-grass' (Thphr.); 'ulcer in the eye, lacrymal fistula', for which see ►ἀγχίλωψ. On the mg. see Strömberg 1940: 87. ◂?▸ •ETYM As the name of a kind of oak, αἰγίλωψ has been connected with the Gm. word for 'oak', PGm. aik-* (Pok.: 13). Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 335 connected -λωψ with λώπη 'cork' (cf. λώψ· χλαμύς 'cloak, mantle' H.), adduced from Pliny (H. N. 16, 6, 13): aegilops fert pannos arentes ... non in cortice modo, verum et e ramis dependentes. Within Greek, it is doubtful whether one can connect it with ►αἰγανέη and ►αἴγειρος. Strömberg 1940: 137 derives αἰγίλωψ in the second meaning from αἴγιλος 'havergrass' (Theoc.), which is certainly correct.

αἰγίς [f.] 'goatskin' (E. Cyc., Hdt. 4, 189), a mantle protecting Zeus and Athena (Il.); later also 'storm wind' (A.); further 'heart-wood of the Corsican pine or the silver fir in Arcadia' (Thphr). Also 'speck in the eye' (Hp.), on which see ►ἀγλίη. ◂GR▸ •DER αἰγίοχος epithet of Zeus (Il.), cf. γαιάϝοχος. With the last mg. ἐπ-αιγίζω 'rush upon' (from a storm wind) (Hom).
•ETYM Probably a goatskin in origin (thus Hdt. 4, 189); formation like νεβρίς 'fawn-skin' (see ►νεβρός), etc. In Homer, gods and men are frightened when it is shaken. For the meaning 'storm wind', see Heubeck IF 68 (1963): 13-21. Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 28, connected it with αἴγλη and αἶγες· τὰ κύματα 'waves' (H.); one might think of Skt. éjati 'to move, set in motion'.

αἰγλίς, -ίδος 'speck in the eye' (Gall.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The form is reconstructed in order to account for αἰγίς and ἀγλίη(ς); cf. also αἰγιαλίδες (H.). See RPh. 73 (1999) 81f. s.v. αἰγίς (derived from αἴγλη). Or should we reconstruct *ἄγλις?

αἴγλη 1 [f.] 'light (of sun or moon), gleam, radiance' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DER αἰγλήεις 'gleaming' (Il.), αἰγλάτας, -ήτης epithet of Apollo (inscr. Anaphe, Thera; A. R.); αἰγλάζω 'to shine, gleam' (Man.).
•ETYM The connection with Skt. éjati 'to move, tremble' (cf. ►αἰγανέη) is rightly rejected by DELG. The epithets Ἀπόλλων ►Ἀσγελάτας (Anaphe) and Ἀπόλλων Αἰγλάτας (Anaphe, Thera) are often compared. In view of the variation αἰγλ- / ἀσγ(ε)λ-, the epithets must be Pre-Greek. The noun may be of Pre-Greek origin too (it has no etymology), but it does not necessarily have the same origin as the epithets; it is methodically incorrect to clarify the formation of the appellative by that of a name.

αἴγλη 2 [f.] 'ring' (deduced from glosses). ◂?▸
•ETYM Lewy KZ 59 (1932) derived it from αἴγλας· ἀμφιδέας καὶ ψέλια 'iron rings, anklets'. τὰ περὶ τὴν ὕνιν τοῦ ἀρότρου 'things around the plowshare' (H.), from αἰγ<ί>λια· δακτυλίδια 'small rings' (H.), and other words attested in lexicons. He explained it as a loan from Hebr. 'āgīl '(ear-)ring', which remains hypothetical. As Frisk remarks, metonymic use of ►αἴγλη 1 'gleam, splendor' is well possible.

αἰγυπιός [m.] 'vulture' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR αἰγίποψ· ἀετός ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων 'eagle (Maced.)' (EM 28, 19).
•ETYM The comparison with Skt. r̥ji-pyá-, epithet of the bird śyená- 'eagle, falcon', Av. ərəzi-fiia- is formally difficult, since we expect *αρC-; influence by αἴξ and γύψ 'vulture' has been assumed, but this seems unlikely. Fur.: 364 compares the gloss αἰγίποψ, which is evidently a variant of the same word. Variation between i and u is well-attested in substrate words (cf. ►μάρσιππος/ μάρσυππος), and -οπ-is a Pre-Greek suffix. ►γύψ itself is no doubt a substrate word as well; it may be a variant of (a)g'up-*, which also gives αἰγυπ-, with prothetic vowel and palatalized /g'/. No conclusion is reached by Meier-Brügger KZ 108 (1995): 50-55.

αἰγωλιός [m.] a kind of owl, 'Stix flammea' (Arist.). ◂?▸ •VAR Also αἰγώλιος.
•ETYM The reading αἰτώλιος (Arist. HA 563[a] 31) is wrong, as evidenced by forms from modern southern Italy (agoléo etc.); see Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 55. Etymology unknown.

ἀΐδηλος [adj.] mg. not quite clear: 'hated; annihilating, destructive; invisible, unseen' (Il.). See the discussion in DELG. ◂GR▸ •ETYM It is difficult to decide what the primary meaning is, but it is rather clear that the word contains a privative α with a form of ἰδεῖν. Ivanov 1999: 283-292 compares

Ru. nevidal' for the semantics and assumes the development 'invisible' > 'strange, dangerous'.

Ἀΐδης, -αο [m.] Hades (Il.). ◂IE n̥-uid-* 'unseen, invisible'▸
•VAR With metathesis of quantity gen. -εω; also gen. Ἄϊδός, dat. -ΐ. Att. Ἅιδης, -ου; Ἀΐδης is found in later Ionic poetry (Semon., Herodas), the Doric form Ἀΐδας, gen. -α in tragedy. An inscription from Thessaly (SEG 16, 380) gives Αϝιδαν.
•DER Ἀϊδωνεύς (Il.), see Risch 1937: 158.
•ETYM Thieme proposed (Thieme 1952: 35-55) that the word derives from sm̥ uid-* (Skt. sám vid-) as 'das Sichzusammenfinden [gathering of the family in the underworld]'. To my mind, this is not correct, as then Ἀιδ- should denote the Underworld, not the God of the Underworld. In Homer, it rather seems to denote the God, e.g. in formulaic δόμον Ἄϊδος εἴσω. The aspiration in Attic is secondary and arose by contraction from ὁ Ἀΐδης (Kamerbeek apud Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 307).
The other explanation, as n̥-uid-*, 'the Unseen', seems the correct one. In Beekes 1998: 17-19, I pointed out that the replacement of a root noun, first in the nominative (here as the final element of a compound), is parallel to the case of φυγή : φύγαδε. The initial A- is sometimes lengthened for metrical reasons: it is not lengthened when it is not necessary or impossible, like in Ἄϊδόσδε.

αἴδομαι [v.] 'to hold back, be ashamed; to honor, respect' (Il.). ◂IE? $h_2$eis-d-* 'honor'▸ •VAR αἴδεο, αἰδόμενος, αἴδετο, see Chantraine 1942: 310f.; more frequent is denominative αἰδέομαι (from aides-je/o-*).
•DER αἰδώς [f.] 'shame, reverence' (Il.), whence 1. αἰδοῖος < -os-jo-* 'inspiring αἰδώς' (Il., epic poet.) substantivized ntr. τὸ αἰδοῖον, usually plur. τὰ αἰδοῖα 'private parts' (Il.), whence αἰδοιώδης and αἰδοϊκός; 2. compound ἀν-αιδής 'shameless' (Il.), ἀναίδεια, etc.; 3. αἰδέομαι < aides-je/o-* 'to hold back, revere', as a legal term also 'to be reconciled' (Hom., IA), fut. αἰδέσομαι. Thence αἴδεσις 'mercy, pardon' (D., Arist.), αἰδεστός 'honorable' (Plu.), αἰδεστικός (sch.); αἰδήμων 'modest' (X., Arist.), αἰδημονικός and -μοσύνη (late and rare). αἰδέσιμος (post-class. prose) 'object of αἰδώς', also αἰδήσιμος (Orph.), whence αἰδεσιμότης (pap.). 4. αἰδοσύνη = αἰδημοσύνη (AB, Phot.).
•ETYM It is formally uncertain that a PIE root $h_2$eisd-*, from which Go. aistan 'to hold back, respect' and Skt. īḍé < PIIr. Hizd-* 'to praise, honor' derive, would give Gr. αἰδ-: we would expect $h_2$eisd-* to appear as Gr. αἰζ- (cf. ἵζω < si-sd-). Of course, the connection is semantically very tempting. Without final -d, the root $h_2$eis-* is found in MoHG Ehre 'honor', ON eir, etc., and in Osc. aisusis [abl.pl.] 'sacrificiis', and perhaps originally in the verb $h_2$is-ske/o-* 'to demand' > Skt. iccháti 'search for', OCS iskati 'to search', etc.

ἀΐδυλος [adj.] · θρασύς 'bold, rash' (H., EM). ◂?▸
•ETYM A mistake for ἀΐδηλος (E 897)? Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 218[4] differs. Fur.: 262f. compares αἴσυλος.

αἴδωσσα [f.] (cod. αἰδῶσσα)· τῆς αὐλῆς τὰ τειχία 'the walls of the court or hall' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 5f. suggested that the word is Illyrian for αἴθουσα. Latte thinks it is a corruption (but on three points?). Fur.: 197 considers it a a substrate word, taking ►αἴθουσα as a variant form, and comparing Κήλωσσα / Κηλοῦσα, a mountain in Sicyon.

αἰεί [adv.] 'always' (Il.) ◂IE $h_2$ei-u-* 'time of living, well-being'▸ •VAR αἰῶ (A. Ch. 350, AB 363), see below.
•DIAL αἰϝεί (Cypr., Locr., Phoc.), ἀεί (Att.), αἰες (Dor.); αἰη (Tarent.).
•DER ἀΐδιος 'eternal' (Hes., IA), whence ἀϊδιότης 'eternity' (Arist., Hell.).
•ETYM From aiwes-i*, the old locative of an s-stem, which is found without ending in Dor. αἰές, and also in the accus. αἰῶ < aiwos-m̥*. Beside the s-stem, Greek had an n-stem in ►αἰών, from which αἰέν derives. The Tarentine form would be an old instrumental $h_2$eiu-eh_1*, but this is unclear. On the accentuation of the Greek forms see Hamp Glotta 67 (1989): 41.
The s- and n-stems derive from the old PIE u-stem $h_2$oi-u-* > Av. āiiu- 'life, time of life', gen. h_2i-eu-s* > OAv. yaoš, thematicized $h_2$ei-u-o-* > Lat. aevum, which in Greek may be found in Aeol. αἶ(ν), ἄϊ(ν) < aiw-i(n)*. As Weiss MSS 55 (1994): 151f. suggested, the zero grade $h_2$iu-* is perhaps found as the first member of Cypr. u-wa-i-se 'forever' < $h_2$iu(u̯)-$h_2$ei-s-* (but see ►ὑ) and of ►ὑγιής. Both the s-stem and the n-stem extensions seem to be found in Sanskrit: ā́yu-n-i [loc.], and ā́yu-ṣ- [n.].

αἰέλουρος [m., f.] probably '(wild) cat' (Hdt., Ar.); domestic cats were not found in the Greek world. ◂?▸
•VAR Also αἴλουρος (Arist.).
•ETYM The explanation as a compound of αἰόλος (< *αἰελος) and οὐρά 'with moving tail' (cf. EM 34, 8: αἴλουρος παρὰ τὸ αἰόλλειν καὶ ἀνάγειν τὴν οὐρὰν καὶ κινεῖν) still seems possible, although the -ε- is problematic. The connection with Lat. vīverra 'ferret' and Lith. vaĩveris 'male of the polecat / pitchew', starting from *ϝαιϝέρουρος (Ehrlich 1912: 128ff.), should be abandoned. Note that the word may well have been adapted by folk etymology, and that from αἰε- we expect an Attic development to ᾱε-, not the loss of -ε-.

αἰέν [adv.] 'always' (epic poet.). ⇒αἰών.

αἰές ⇒αἰεί.

αἰετός [m.] 'eagle' (Il.), also metaph. 'tympanum, pediment'. ◂IE $h_2$eu-i-* 'bird'▸ •VAR Att. ἀετός; αἰβετός· ἀετός, Περγαῖοι (H.), with β = ϝ; αἰητός (Arat. 522), which is artificial (DELG).
•DER ἀετιδεύς [m.] 'young eagle' (Ael., Aesop.), ἀετίτης (λίθος) (Ael.), ἀετώδης (Philostr.), αἰετόεις (Opp.); αἰετιαῖος 'ptng. to the tympanum' (inscr.); ἀέτωμα 'tympanum' (Hp., Att. inscr.), ἀέτωσις 'arched roof of a χελώνη' (Ath. Mech.).
•ETYM From αἰϝετος < awjetó-, cf. Lat. avis. For the suffix -ετο-, cf. νιφετός, πυρετός. The artificial form αἰητός does not allow us to conclude that it is a substrate word, as per Fur.: 115[4]. Not a Semitic word (Astour JAOS 86 (1966): 278B).

αἰζηός [adj.] unknown; 'strong'? (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also αἰζήϊος; αἰζήεις (Theopomp. Col.), αἰζᾶεν· εὐτραφὲς βλάστημα 'well-fed offspring' (H.).
•ETYM Danielsson 1892 gives no definitive answer. The gloss suggested a connection with ἀεί and ζῆν, which may be folk-etymological (DELG). Fur.: 234, who connects it with Αἴσηπος, is incorrect.

αἴητος ⇒ ἄητος.

αἰθάλη [f.] 'soot' (Hp.).
•VAR αἴθαλος [m.] (Hp., E.), also as an adj. = αἰθαλόεις (Nic. Th. 659).
•DER αἰθαλόεις (Il., poet.) 'smoky, dark brown', also of the sheet of lightning (E. Ph. 183 [lyr.]), perhaps 'fiery, burning'; αἰθαλέος 'id.' (A. R., Nic.); αἰθαλίων, -ίωνος (Theoc. 7, 138), epithet of the τέττιγες, probably a color term with verse-final metrical lengthening); αἰθαλώδης 'id.' (Arist., Gal.). Unclear αἰθαλίδας· τὰ ἐν τῷ σίτῳ γινόμενα, ἢ τοὺς ἐν τῷ ὕδατι σταλαγμοὺς τοῦ ἐλαίου 'what is in the food, or drops of olive oil in the water' (H.). Denominative verb αἰθαλόω 'to make sooty', med. -όομαι 'to soot up' (E., Lyc.); αἰθαλώσεις 'clouds of sooty smoke' (Max. Tyr. 41, 4), perhaps directly from αἴθαλος.
•ETYM See ▸αἴθω.

αἰθήρ, -έρος [f., m.] 'clear sky, heaven' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2eid^h- 'kindle, ignite'▸ •COMP On αἰθήρ and αἴθρη as a second member (e.g. in ὑπαίθριος, ὕπαιθρος) see Sommer 1948: 151f.
•DER αἴθρη, -ᾱ 'id.' (Il.); αἰθρίη, -ία 'clear sky, nice weather'; αἴθριος, -ον [adj.] 'of the sky, bright' (IA); the ntr. αἴθριον, diminutive αἰθρίδιον was used in imperial times as a folk-etymological adaptation of Lat. ātrium.
αἶθρος 'fresh, cold air' (ξ 318 αἴθρῳ καὶ καμάτῳ δεδμημένον). Cf. αἰθρεῖ· χειμάζει 'to expose to or pass the winter' (H.), αἰθρινόν· πρωϊνόν 'early' (H.); improbable Bouquiaus-Simon Ant. class. 31 (1962): 25ff.
With full-grade of the suffix αἰθέριος 'in the air, heavenly' (trag.), beside which rare and late αἰθερώδης, αἰθεριώδης, αἰθερίτης, αἰθερόομαι.
ἰθαρός 'cheerful, bright' (Alc.) may contain an old ablauting form of the root. The verb ἰθαίνειν (A. D., H.) could point to an r/n-stem.
•ETYM Generally derived from ▸αἴθω; perhaps the formation was influenced by ἀήρ.

Αἰθίοπες [m.pl.] ethnonym, 'Ethiopians'(?). ◂PG(S)▸
•DIAL Myc. PN a-i-ti-jo-qo /Ait^{h}iok^{w}s/ (or /-ō-/); for the u-stem in Me-to-qe-u, Wo-no-qe-we (/Woinok^{w}ēwei/) cf. Αἰθιοπῆες (Hom.).
•ETYM Since antiquity explained as '(people) with burnt faces'. In Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 12-34, I objected that αἰθ- always means 'burning' in the sense of 'brilliant, emitting light' (cf. αἶθοψ), and never 'burnt'. Also, the -ι- is unexplained, and -οπ- is a typical substrate suffix (as opposed to 'face' = -ωπ-). Therefore, the word must be compared with ethnonyms like Δρύοπες, Δόλοπες and is of Pre-Greek origin.

αἴθουσα [f.] 'portico' (Il.); also a plant, cf. ▸αἴθω. ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR αἴθουσσα (Hdn. Gr. 2, 919).
•ETYM Generally explained as a ptc. of ▸αἴθω meaning 'glowing, place where the sun burns' or 'place where fire can be kindled', which is hardly convincing. A better explanation is that of Fur.: 197[54], who deems it a substrate word, as a technical term of building, because of the form with -σσ-. The form ▸αἰδῶσσα confirms this; it can hardly be a mistake for αἴθουσα (which would imply three mistakes), and it has -σσ-. Of course, a folk-etymological connection with ▸αἴθω is likely.

αἴθω [v.] 'to kindle', intr. med. 'burn (with light)' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2eid^h- 'kindle'▸
•VAR Only present.
•COMP Cf. ▸Αἰθίοπες. On κακ-ιθής see on κέγκει s.v. ▸κάγκανος.
•DER αἶθος [m.] 'burning heat' (E.) = Skt. édha- [m.] 'firewood', OHG eit [m.], OE ād 'blaze, pyre'; αἰθός 'sparkling, glowing', also 'dark-colored'; also αἴθων, -ωνος (Il.) and αἶθοψ (on the mgs. see Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 15-17).
αἶθος [n.] 'fire' (A. R.); αἰθήεις 'sooty' (Nic.), also αἰθής 'burning' (Cratin. 88), if this does not stand for αἰθῆς from αἰθήεις; αἴθινος (H., EM).
Perhaps related is αἰθόλικες 'pustule, pimple' (Hp., Gal.), cf. πομφόλυξ 'bubble' for the formation.
αἰθύσσω 'to stir violently' (Sapph., Pi.), also prefixed with ἀν-, δι-, κατ-, παρ-, is usually considered cognate, but the development of meaning is strange. The verbal noun αἴθυγμα 'spark, glow' (Plb.) did not undergo the metaphorical development of αἰθύσσω, as opposed to αἰθυκτήρ 'stirring violently' (Opp.). But note that these are late derivations. Also καταῖθυξ ὄμβρος· ὁ καταιθύσσων 'which is floating down' (H.); diff. Pisani Paideia 15 (1960): 245f.
αἴθυια [f.] name of a bird (see Thompson 1895 s.v.), also epithet of Athena, see Kock Arch. f. Religionswiss. 18 (1915): 127ff. but also Kretschmer Glotta 9 (1918): 229f., mostly explained as a color term, but rather a substrate word (Szemerényi 1964: 207, Beekes 1998: 25 on the suffix -υια.). On αἴθουσα 'hemlock, Conium maculatum' (Ps.-Dsc.) see CEG 4 (from 'black'). Cf. also ▸αἰθήρ, ▸αἰθάλη, ▸αἴθουσα.
•ETYM Old PIE verbal root, of which the zero grade *h_2id^h- probably appears in ἰθαρός, ἰθαίνω. Sanskrit has the root form idh-, with a nasal present i-n-ddhé 'to kindle'. Thematic αἶθος can be of PIE date, cf. Skt. édha- [m.] 'firewood', OHG eit [m.], OE ād 'glow, funeral pyre'. αἶθος [n.] 'fire' (A. R.) and Skt. édhas- [n.] 'firewood' are independent formations, since the Greek word is late. Remarkable forms in other languages include Av. aēsma- [m.] 'firewood', Lith. íesmė 'id.', Lat. aedēs 'dwelling place, temple', aestās 'summer', aestus 'heat', and several Germanic forms, e.g. OHG eit (see above) and ON eisa [f.] 'burning coals'.

αἰκάζει [v.] · καλεῖ 'calls' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Pisani IF 58 (1942): 243 compared it to Osc. aíkdafed, which he interpreted as 'proclamavit'; this is highly dubious. The connection with Latv. âicinât 'to call' is doubted by Pok.: 15. Is it a mistake for ▸αἰκάλλω?

αἰκάλλω [v.] 'to flatter, fondle' (trag.), especially said of animals. ◂?▸
•VAR Only present.

•DER αἴκαλος· κόλαξ 'flatterer' (H.); αἰκάλη· ἀπάτη 'deceit' (Zonar.).
•ETYM Looks like a denominative of the forms given in the glosses (unless these are based on the verb). Etymology unknown.

ἀϊκής [adj.] 'improper, unseemly'. ◂GR▸ •VAR Att. αἰκής < *ἀ-ϝικ-ής, next to ἀεικής (Ion. poet.).
•DER ἀεικείη, αἰκεία, αἰκία 'unseemly treatment, disrespect'; ἀεικίζω, αἰκίζω, -ομαι 'to maltreat', whence αἴκισμα (trag., Lys.), αἰκισμός (D., LXX). ἀεικέλιος, αἰκέλιος (Hom., poet.) contain an enlargement of synonymous ἀεικής, αἰκής.
•ETYM Privative verbal adjective to ἔοικα, du. ἔϊκτον < we-w(o)ik-*. In ἀεικής, -ει- is probably secondary after εἰκάζω, εἰκών, etc. See ►εἰκάζω, ►ἔοικα.

αἶκλοι · αἱ γωνίαι τοῦ βέλους 'the angles of the missile' (H.). ⇒αἰχμή.

αἶκλον [n.] 'evening meal at Sparta' (Epich.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἄϊκλον; <συν>αιγλία = συναικλία; λυκαιχλίας· ὁ λυκόβρωτος 'eaten by wolves' (-βροτος codd.).
•DER ἀναίκλεια· ἄδειπνα 'supperless' (H.). Also αἶκνον· δεῖπνον 'meal' (H., Suid.); ἐπάϊκλα (Pl.).
•ETYM Fur.: 139 points to εἶκλον· δεῖπνον and εἰκλεῖ· δειπνεῖ (H.), and compares ἰκνεῖαν· τροφεῖα 'nourishment' and ἰκνεῖος· τροφεύς. 'Ῥόδιοι 'feeder (Rhod.)' (H.); he correctly concludes that it is a substrate word. This may be reconstructed as (a)wikl/n-*: for the prothetic vowel, cf. ἀέροπ- / μέροπ-; the interchange between λ and ν may be secondary. A comparison with αἰκάζει· καλεῖ 'calls' (H.) or ►αἰκάλλω is completely uncertain.

αἴλινος [m.] 'song of mourning' (trag.), sometimes as an adj. 'plaintive' (E. Hel. 171). ◂?▸
•VAR αἴλινα [adv.] (Call.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Boisacq's postulation of a Phrygian origin lacks support (cf. ►ἔλεγος). It appears to be derived from the interjection ►αἴ and ►λίνος.

αἴλιοι ⇒ἀέλιοι.

αἷμα [n.] 'blood' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP αἱμακουρίαι 'offerings of blood' to the dead (Pi.); αἱμάλωψ 'mass of blood' (Hp.), see CEG 6.
•DER αἱμάς 'flow of blood' (S.); diminutive αἱμάτιον, also name of a dish (Arr., M. Ant., inscr. Cos, Miletus, etc.), αἱματία 'Spartan blood soop' (Poll.). Derived adjectives: αἱματόεις 'bloody' (epic, poet.); αἱματηρός (poet.), αἱμηρός (Man.); αἱματώδης (Hp., Th., Arist., Hell.), αἱμώδης (Luc.), see on ►αἱμωδέω; αἱματικός (Arist.), αἱμάτινος (Arist.); αἱμαλέος (AP, Nonnos); αἵμων (E.), αἱμώνιος 'red as blood' (Ath.); αἱματίτης 'like blood' (Hp., Thphr.); αἱματωπός (E.), αἱμωπός (Ph.). In a similar meaning compounds like ἔναιμος, ὕφαιμος. Denominative verbs: 1. αἱμάσσω, -άττω 'to make or be bloody' (A.), whence late nouns αἱμαγμός, αἷμαξις, and adjectives αἱμακτός, αἱμακτικός; 2. αἱματόω (IA), αἱμάτωσις (Gal.); 3. αἱματίζω (A., Arist.).

•ETYM αἷμα replaces the old IE word for blood ἔαρ < h_1esh_2-r*. It has no established etymology. The connection with OHG seim 'virgin honey', W hufen from the uncertain PIE root sei-* 'to drip' (Pok. 889) is accepted by Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 31-61, but cannot explain the Greek vocalism. Acc. to Sommer 1905: 29ff., it is related to Skt. iṣ- 'refreshment'. See Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 651; cf. also ►αἰονάω, ►ἰχώρ.

αἱμασιά [f.] 'wall around a terrain', of stone (thus Hdt. 2, 138) or thorns (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR Cf. αἱμοί· δρυμοί. Αἰσχύλος Αἰτναίαις 'copses, thickets (A. Aitnaiai)' (H.).
•ETYM Comparable with Lat. saepēs 'hedge, fence', which has p for m. Fur.: 223 finds the variation in other non-IE loans, e.g. Πενέσται / Μενέσται (Schwyzer: 333), γέφυρα / Arm. kamurǰ. On the accentuation, see Scheller 1951: 87f.; on the meaning, Picard Rev. arch. (1946): 68f.

αἱμύλος [adj.] conventionally translated as 'flattering', mostly said of words (Hes.); acc. to Güntert 1921: 103, it means 'wily'; Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 31-61 points to the semantics of spellbinding, e.g. in αἱμυλίοισι λόγοισι // θέλγει. ◂?▸
•VAR Also αἱμύλιος (Od.).
•ETYM The suffix is also found in στωμύλος 'talkative'. A direct connection with OHG seim 'virgin honey' is impossible (see on ►αἷμα), as this etymon originally denoted a 'thick liquid'. Acc. to Güntert (ibid.), αἱμύλος derives from ►αἵμων in the same way as ἀγκών relates to ἀγκύλος. This idea is integrated by Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 31-61 in his account of ►ἵμερος and ►αἵμων.

αἱμωδέω [v.] 'to be set on edge', of the teeth, as caused by sour stuff (Hp.). ◂?▸
•DER αἱμωδία (Hp., Arist., Dsc.); whence αἱμωδιάω 'to have αἱμωδία' (Hp., Arist.), whence αἱμωδιασμός (H.). αἱμώδης is a back-formation in the sense of 'having αἱμωδία' (Gal.). Further αἱμώδης 'bloody', to ►αἷμα.
•ETYM The second element can hardly be separated from ὀδών 'tooth' (Szemerényi 1964: 81). It is difficult to assume that the first part is from ►αἷμα, as we would expect to see a trace of the suffix -ατ-. Solmsen 1909: 25ff. connected the first member with Gm. sai-ra-* in Go. sair, OHG sēr 'pain', ON sár 'wound', positing *αἱ-μος for Greek.

αἵμων, -ονος [adj.] only in Σκαμάνδριον αἵμονα θήρης (E 49), mg. sometimes glossed as 'skillful', but rather 'eager' (see below). ◂IE seh_2i-mon-* 'bond'▸ •ETYM The word is found in the Thessalian names Ἱππαίμων, Αἵμονος (see Bechtel 1921, 1: 203). Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 31-61 assumes a pre-form seh_2i-mon-, from the root sh_2i- 'to bind' which he also assumes to be present in ►ἵμερος 'longing, love' and in ►αἱμύλος. The fact that the meaning 'eager' fits so well in this passage confirms Weiss's proposal.

αἶνος [m.] 'meaningful words, praise' (Il.), also 'decision' (inscr.). ◂?▸
•VAR αἴνη (Hdt.). Cf. the primary formation in ἀναίνομαι 'to deny, refuse' (Il.), from *ἀνα-αίνομαι (cf. ἀνα-νεύω), acc. to Bechtel 1914.
•DER αἰνέω [v.] 'to approve, praise', also 'to decide' (Il., mainly epic Ion. poet.), fut. -ήσω, secondarily -έσω, etc. (see Wackernagel 1916: 180f.); Att. has ἐπαινέω, Aeol. (Hes.) αἴνημι. From αἰνέω: αἴνεσις 'praise' (LXX, NT), αἴνησις (Ph.). Rare is αἰνίζομαι [v.] 'to praise' (Hom.); usually αἰνίσσομαι (-ττ-) (IA) 'to speak in riddles', from 'to speak words full of content, i.e. difficult to understand'; thence with αἴνιγμα 'dark saying, riddle' (Pi.); thence αἰνιγματώδης, αἰνιγματιστής, αἰνιγματίας, αἰνιγματικός; also αἰνιγμός 'id.' (Att.); αἶνιξις 'id.' (Plot.). αἰνικτήρ 'who speaks in riddles' (S.), αἰνικτής (Timo), αἰνικτηρίως (A.).

•ETYM Etymology unknown. Compared by Pok. 11 with Germanic words for 'oath' (Go. aiþs, OHG eid), which is mostly rejected.

αἰνός [adj.] 'terrible' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR On ἐπαινή see Leumann 1950: 258f.
•COMP Common as the first member of poetic compounds, but no derivatives.
•ETYM No etymology. Connected with Skt. énas 'crime' by Pok. 10. On the expression αἰνόθεν αἰνῶς, see Leumann l.c. See also LfgrE.

αἴνυμαι [v.] 'to take, seize' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$ei- 'give'▸
•VAR Only present.
•DIAL Myc. PN a_3-nu-me-no /Ainumenos/.
•COMP Often with ἐξ-, also in the verbal noun ἔξ-αιτος 'selected' (Il.).
•ETYM The verbal noun *αἶτος is at the base of ▸αἰτέω. The same root is found in ToB ai-, ToA e- 'to give (act.), take (med.)', and it was previously thought to be reflected in Hitt. pai-^{i} 'to give', which was analyzed as pe-ai-*. Recently, however, Kloekhorst 2008 has given a convincing alternative: an i-present to the root h_1p-* 'to seize'. Thus, the present root is eliminated as an example for PIE a*. In nominal form the root is found in Oscan aeteis [gen.sg.] 'part (of a possession)'. YAv. aētahmāiiuš does not contain a noun aēta- 'punishment', but rather the pronoun aēta- 'that'; cf. Fischer and Ritter MSS 52 (1991): 9-13. See ▸αἶσα, ▸αἰτία, ▸δίαιτα.

αἴνω [v.] 'winnow' (Pherecr., Hp.), but see the glosses. ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ἦναι; pres. also ἀνέω (Ar. Fr. 694 (uncertain), Ath.), ἀφανέω (Ar. Eq. 394 v.l.), ἄφηνα· ἔκοψα 'struck', ἀφῆναι· τὸ τὰς ἐπτισμένας κριθὰς χερσὶ τρῖψαι 'rubbing by hand of the winnowed barley-corns' (H.); further αἴνων· πτίσσων 'winnowing', ἥνας· κόψας 'having struck' and γάναι (= ϝᾶναι)· περιπτίσαι 'strip off the husk or skin' (cod. -πτύσαι); see Solmsen 1901: 280.
•DER Bechtel KZ 46 (1914): 374 compares the name of a phratry ϝανίδαι (Argos).
•ETYM Comparable with Lat. vannus 'winnowing-basket', OHG wintōn 'to fan', Go. dis-winþjan 'λικμᾶν, to winnow'. The Germanic words seem to derive from the word for 'wind' (cf. Lat. ventilare 'to fan'), but αἴνω has no trace of the -t-. Derivation of the Greek word from $h_2$ueh$_1$-* seems to be excluded by γάναι, which has no vowel before the ϝ. ἀνέω has been explained from *ἀ-ϝαν-έω (Solmsen 1901: 272), which beside γάναι would imply a non-IE word. Note that the exact meaning of the word is unclear.

αἴξ, αἰγός [f.] 'goat', rarely msc. (Il.). Also a water bird (Janzén 1937: 17, a meteor (Arist.) and a star (Aratos). ◂IE? $h_2$eiǵ-* 'goat'▸ •DIAL Myc. a_3-ki-pa-ta /aigi-pa(s)tās/ (?) 'goatherd'; a_3-ki-po-de, interpretation uncertain.

•COMP αἰπόλος 'goatherd' < *αἰγ-πολος, see ▸πέλω and ▸βουκόλος (cf. Meier-Brügger 1992a: 92); thence αἰπολέω [v.] 'to herd goats' (A., Lys., Theoc.), only present; αἰπόλια [n.pl.] 'herds of goats' (Il.), also -ιον [sg.]; αἰπολικός (Theoc.).
Further αἰγί-βοτος 'browsed by goats' (Od.); unclear the gloss αἰπόλος· κάπηλος παρὰ Κυπρίοις 'peddlar (Cypr.)' (H.), see Leumann 1950: 271ff.; to be rejected is Latte's correction ἀί- = ἀεί.
•DER See ▸αἰγίς 'goatskin'. Diminutive of αἴξ: αἰγίδιον (Pherecr., Antiph.). On αἶγες· τὰ κύματα 'waves'. Δωριεῖς (H.), see on ▸αἰγιαλός. Connection with toponyms like Αἰγαί, Αἰγαῖος, Αἴγινα, etc., is at best folk-etymological.
•ETYM The compounds in -ι- are unexplained (Heubeck IF 69 (1964): 13-21 is unclear); the type αἰπόλος is old in any case. αἴξ is cognate with Arm. ayc 'goat' (i-stem), which is reconstructed as $h_2$eiǵ-ih$_2$* (Clackson 1994: 88-90 after Meillet). The zero grade is often supposed in Av. i̯zaēna- 'of leather', but we do not know if the word referred to the skin of a goat. If the connection is correct, the word could be IE. However, Skt. ajá- 'goat' looks similar, but is formally deviant. This could suggest that Avestan, Greek and Armenian borrowed the word from a common source, perhaps Anatolian. On the distribution, see Mallory & Adams 1997 s.v. Connection with $h_2$eig-* as 'jumper' (Thieme 1953: 571) is rejected by Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 264, since Skt. éjati did not have a palatovelar, nor does it mean 'to jump'. Cf. ▸αἴγιλος, ▸αἰγίλωψ, ▸δίζα.

αἰόλος [adj.] 'agile, glittering, variegated' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DIAL Myc. a_3-wo-ro /Aiwolos/ name of a cow.
•COMP As a second member, e.g. κορυθαίολος 'with glittering (colorful) helmet'.
•DER Denominaitve αἰόλλω [v.] 'to move quickly to and fro' (υ 27), (med.) 'to change color' (Hes. Sc. 399), 'to make colorful' (Nic. Th. 155); αἰολέω = ποικίλλω (Pl. Cra. 409a), αἰόλησις 'rapid movement' (sch. Pi. P. 4, 412); αἰολίζω 'to trick with words' (S. fr. 912), αἰόλισμα 'varied tones' (S. Ichn. 319); αἰολάομαι 'to be restless' (Hp. Mul. 2, 174b, uncertain). αἰολίας [m.] fish name (cf. Strömberg 1943: 23, Thompson 1947 s.v.), αἰόλειος (EM), αἰολίδας· ποικίλους, ταχεῖς 'variegated, quick' (H.). PN Αἴολος, EN Αἰολεῖς.
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Benveniste BSL 38 (1937): 107 connected αἰών, Skt. ā́yu- 'vital force' (formally improbable); Risch Mus. Helv. 29 (1972): 97 argued that the original meaning was a color. On ▸αἰέλουρος, see s.v. For the type Cai-CoR-*, cf. ▸αἰώρα, ▸αἰονάω.

αἰονάω [v.] 'to moisten, bathe (a wound)' (Hp.). ◂?▸
•DER Verbal nouns αἰόνησις and αἰόνημα.
•ETYM Etymology unknown.

αἰπόλος ⇒αἴξ.

αἰπύς [adj.] 'steep, sheer' (Il., mostly epic and poet.) ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR A different stem in αἰπά (αἰπὰ ῥέεθρα Θ 369) and αἰπήν (πόλιν ... αἰπήν γ 130, etc.), maybe a metrical device.

•DER αἰπήεις (Hom.), is an enlargement of αἰπύς, see Schwyzer: 527. Further αἶπος [n.] 'steepness, precipice' (E.), whence αἰπεινός < *αἰπεσ-νός 'steep'.
•ETYM ►αἶψα probably belongs here, too. Furthermore, Fur.: 158 connects it with ἐξαίφνης and ►ἐξαπίνης, as well as ►ἄφνω and ►ἄφαρ, which is highly convincing. Variations shown here include π/φ, labial / ψ (cf. ►δέφω / δέψω and βίττακος / ψιττακός), and anticipation of a palatalized consonant *ap'- as αι-.

αἶρα 1 [f.] 'sledgehammer' (Call. fr. 115, 12), = σφῦρα, ἀξίνη 'hammer, axe-head' (H.), σφῦρα (Et. Gen.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Acc. to Schwyzer: 474, it is from ►αἴρω (improbable).

αἶρα 2 [f.] 'rye-grass, darnel, Lolium temulentum' (Thphr.). ◄?►
•VAR Often plur. αἶραι.
•DER αἴρινος 'of rye-grass' (Dsc.), αἰρώδης 'mixed with rye-grass' (Thphr.). Denominative ἐξ-αιρόομαι [v.] 'to change into rye-grass' (Thphr.).
•ETYM Specht KZ 66 (1939): 12 connected it with Skt. erakā- [f.] a kind of grass, assuming that both languages borrowed the word from an Oriental language; this is rejected by Thieme 1953: 586. Berger WZKSS 3 (1959): 48 thinks that the Sanskrit word is of Austro-Asiatic origin. On erakā-, see now Klaus MSS 57 (1997): 49-64; see ►αἰρόπινον.

αἱρέω [v.] 'to take, grasp, seize', med. 'to take for oneself, choose' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Except for late forms like ἀν-ῄρησα (Q. S.), ►ἑλεῖν is used as a suppletive aorist.
•DIAL Cret. αἰλέω is a contamination of αἱρέω and ἑλεῖν; Pamphyl. ἀγλέσθω from ἀγρέω and ἑλεῖν; for other such forms see Vendryes 1938: 331ff.
•DER αἵρεσις 'capture, choice, party, philosophical school (whence heresy)' (IA), αἱρέσιμος 'pregnable' (X.); αἱρετός 'what can be taken or chosen' (IA), αἱρετικός 'to be chosen, causing schisms' (late); αἱρετής 'who chooses' (Vett. Val.), καθαιρέτης 'destroyer' (Th.), αἱρετίς [f.] 'who chooses' (LXX), back-formation to αἱρετίζω [v.] 'to elect' (Hell.), which is a denominative to αἱρετός. From αἱρετίζω also αἱρετιστής 'adherent' (Plb., D. L.).
•ETYM No etymology.

αἰρόπινον [n.] 'sieve' (Ar. fr. 480). ◄GR?►
•VAR Cf. αἰρόπινον· σκοτεινόν, καὶ κόσκινον ἐν ᾧ πυροὶ σήθονται 'dark, also a sieve through which wheat is sieved'; An. Bk. 359, 24 continues with ὑπὲρ τοῦ τὰς αἶρας διελθεῖν 'because it passes through the rye-grass'; also αἰρόπινον· τὸ ἀραιὸν κόσκινον· παρὰ τὸ τὰς αἶρας ποιεῖν ἀπεῖναι καὶ χωρίζειν ἢ διὰ τὸ αἴρειν τὸν πίνον ὅ ἐστι τὸν ῥύπον 'a porous sieve, after its making the rye-grass go apart; or after its removing the πίνον, i.e. the dirt' (EM 38, 42), the first part of which is clearly folk-etymological.
•ETYM DELG thinks that it consists of αἴρω 'to remove' and πίνος 'filth', like the latter part of the final gloss; for the type of compound, see Schwyzer: 442. Alternatively, it may be a Pre-Greek word reshaped by folk etymology.

αἴρω ⇒ ἀείρω 1.

αἶσα [f.] 'share, destiny, decree' (Il., epic and lyr.). ◄IE *$h_2$ei- 'give, take'► •DIAL Myc. a_3-sa /aisa/; also found in Arc.-Cypr.
•DER αἴσιος 'auspicious, opportune'; also with ἐν-, ἐξ-, κατ-, παρ-, whence αἰσιόομαι [v.] 'to take as a good omen' (Plu., App.); αἴσιμος 'destined, fitting' (Hom.), ἐναίσιμος, ἀναίσιμος (Emp.).
Thence prefixed denominative ἀν-αισιμόω [v.] 'to consume (the apportioned share)' (Ion.), whence ἀναισιμώματα 'expenses' (Hdt.); καταισιμόω [v.] 'to consume entirely' (com.). Adjectival abstract αἰσιμίαι πλούτου 'the due apportionment of wealth' (A. Eu. 996). See on ►αἰσιμνάω, ►αἰσυμνάω, ►αἰσυμνήτης.
Some PNs: Αἴσων, Αἰσίας, etc.
•ETYM αἶσα is from the root seen in αἴνυμαι, derived with -ι̯α from a form in -t- found in Osc. aeteis [gen.sg.] 'part', Gr. *αἶτος (see ►αἰτέω), αἴτιος. An ablauting root shape could be found in ►ἴσσασθαι · κληροῦσθαι. Λέσβιοι (H.).

αἴσακος [?] · ὁ τῆς δάφνης κλάδος, ὅν κατέχοντες ὕμνουν τοὺς θεούς 'the branch of the sweet bay; while grasping these, the gods were praised' (H.). Cf. Plu. Mor. 615b. Acc. to EM 38, 49 it indicates the bird ἐρίθακος. ◄PG(S,O)► •ETYM Etymology unknown. The word is Pre-Greek (or Anatolian), acc. to Nehring Glotta 14 (1925): 183 and Krause KZ 67 (1942): 214[4]. Note the initial αι-, intervocalic -σ-, and the suffix -ακ-. See ►αἰσάλων.

αἰσάλων [m.] kind of falcon (Arist.); see Thompson 1895. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Cf. αἰσάρων· εἶδος ἱέρακος 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 387 gives it as Pre-Greek form with the variation ρ/ λ, of which he has more than 30 examples.

Αἴσηπος [m.] HN in Mysia (Il.); also PN (Il.). ◄PG► •ETYM Fur.: 234 compares αἰζηός. No doubt a Pre-Greek name.

αἰσθάνομαι [v.] 'to perceive, apprehend, note' (IA). ◄IE *$h_2$eu-is- 'perceive'► •VAR Incidentally pres. αἴσθομαι (Th.); aor. αἰσθέσθαι, fut. αἰσθήσεσθαι (IA).
•DER αἴσθησις 'perception, knowledge' (Hp., Pl., etc.), both the act and the object of perception (cf. E. IA 1243, Arist.); αἰσθησίη (Aret.) = αἴσθησις; αἰσθητός 'perceptible' and αἰσθητικός 'able to perceive', both mainly philosophical terms; αἰσθητήριον 'one of the senses' (Arist.), αἰσθητής [m.] 'who perceives' (Pl.).
•ETYM Interpreted as PGr. awis-t^h-, and connected with ►ἀΐω 'to perceive, hear' < awis-je/o-. A similar pre-form is found in Lat. audiō 'to hear' < $h_2$eui-d^hh_1-ie/o-* (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.), oboediō 'to obey'. It is probable that the Greek suffix -θ-, which builds resultative verbal forms, is from *d^hh_1- 'to do, etc.' as well. Further related to Skt. āvís-, Av. āuuiš 'manifestly', OCS (j)avě 'evidently', which are adverbial forms in -is.

ἀΐσθων [ptc.] 'to breathe out, exhale' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Or rather *ἀϊσθών (Π 468), ἄϊσθε (Υ 403), of θυμόν.
•ETYM We can connect it with ἄϊον (= τὸ ἀπέπνεον Eust.) in ἐπεὶ φίλον ἄϊον ἦτορ (Ο 252), but much remains uncertain. See Bechtel 1914 and DELG.

ἀΐσσω [v.] 'to move quickly, dart, rush (upon)' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Pres. ᾄσσω (Pi.), ᾄττω (Att.), fut. ἀΐξω. The ἀ- is always long in Hom., except in ὑπαΐξει (Φ 126), see Chantraine 1942: 110, and in ἀΐξῃ (A. R. 3, 1302); elsewhere it is mostly short.
•COMP As a second member in πολυ-άϊξ, κορυθ-άϊξ; also in ►τριχάϊκες?
•DER ἀϊκή 'rush' (O 709); root noun ἄϊξ in ἀνέμων ἄικας (A. R. 4, 820), or ἀίκας? Both α and ι are long.
•ETYM Unexplained. Comparison with Skt. vevijyáte 'to raise, flee, move quickly' is formally impossible (no trace of a ϝ in Homer, and the long ῑ remains unexplained). Danielsson IF 14 (1903): 386ff. reconstructs *αἰϝ-ῑκ- and compares ►αἰόλος.

αἴσυλος [adj.] 'unseemly, evil' (Hom.), in αἴσυλα ῥέζειν, εἰδέναι, μυθήσασθαι (opposed to αἴσιμα). ◄PG?►
•COMP αἰσυλο-εργός (Max. Astrol.) after αἴσυλα ῥέζειν (Hom.).
•ETYM The overall appearance is Pre-Greek: initial αἰ-, intervocalic -σ-, suffix -υλ-. Cf. ►ἀήσυλος.

αἰσυμνάω [v.] 'to be ruler' (Hom.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR αἰσυμνήτηρ (Ω 347) has a variant αἰσυ(ι)ήτηρ, now preferred by West Glotta 77 (1999): 119f. Also PNs Αἴσυμνος, Αἰσυήτης (Hom.).
•DIAL Meg. αἰσιμνάω.
•DER αἰσυμνητήρ (Ω 347 v.l.), αἰσυμνήτης (αἰσιμνάτας) title of a high magistrate in several towns (inscr., Arist.), in Homer θ 258 a referee of games; fem. αἰσυμνῆτις (Suid.); αἰσυμνητεία 'office of αἰσυμνήτης' (Arist.), Verbal noun αἰσυμνητύς (Miletus). Further αἰσύμνιον = βουλευτήριον in Megara (Paus.), from the verb or from *αἴσυμνος.
•ETYM Previously derived from ►αἶσα, αἴσιμος, *αἴσιμνος by Solmsen 1909: 36ff. and Fraenkel 1910: 172f. However, Chantraine 1933: 216 and von Blumenthal 1930: 33 assume a Pre-Greek origin, which must be correct: it explains the interchanges μ/ ϝ (cf. Fur.: 244) and υ/ ι. The word and its derivations are reminiscent of ►κυβερνάω. Further details are in the LfgrE.
Deroy Ant. class. 26 (1958): 404-410 compares Lat. aerumna 'task, distress'.

αἰσύφιος ⇒ ἀσύφηλος.

αἶσχος [n.] 'shame, ugliness', plur. 'disgraceful deeds' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Comp. αἰσχίων, superl. αἴσχιστος.
•DER αἰσχρός 'dishonoring, ugly', denominative αἰσχύνω 'to dishonor', med. 'to be ashamed' (Il.), back-formation αἰσχύνη 'shame' (IA). PN Αἰσχύλος, perhaps an enlargement of an old u-stem. Further derivatives: 1. from αἰσχρός: αἰσχρότης 'ugliness' (Pl. Gorg. 525a, Ep. Eph. 5, 4), αἰσχροσύνη (Tz.). 2. from αἰσχύνω: αἰσχυντήρ 'violator' (A. Ch. 998), αἰσχυντηλός 'timid, shy', also 'disgraceful' (Pl., Arist.), αἰσχυντηλία (Plu.); it has -τ- from the opposite ἀν-αίσχυντος (Alc., Att.), whence ἀναισχυντία, -τέω, -τημα; secondary αἰσχυντός (Ps. Phoc.). Rare αἰσχυντηρός and αἰσχυντικός.

•ETYM The older comparison with Go. aiwiski [n.] 'αἰσχύνη' is generally abandoned in view of obvious formal difficulties. De Lamberterie 1990: 835-840 plausibly compares ►αἴδομαι, positing aid-sk-* for Greek next to aid-st-* in Go. aistan.

ἀΐτᾱς [m.] 'eromenos' (Ar.), also a fish (pap. Tebt. 701, 44). ◄?►
•VAR Fem. ἀΐτις (Hdn. Gr., Alcm. 34 Page). Also ἀείταν· τὸν ἑταῖρον 'companion'. Ἀριστοφάνης δὲ τὸν ἐρώμενον 'eromenos' (Ar. fr. 738; also Theocr. 12, 14, where it is called Thessalian).
•DIAL A Doric or Thessalian word.
•ETYM Uncertain. From ►ἀΐω 'to hear' acc. to Diels Herm. 31 (1896): 372 and Bechtel 1921, 1: 201; see also Arena Riv. fil. class. 96 (1968): 257f.

αἰτέω [v.] 'to ask, request, beg' (Il.). ◄GR► •COMP Often prefixed with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, παρ-, etc.
•DER 1. αἴτησις 'demand, request' (IA), αἰτήσιμος; 2. αἴτημα 'demand, claim' (Pl., Arist.), αἰτηματικός and αἰτηματώδης; 3. αἰτητής 'requestor' (pap., D. C.); αἰτητικός (Arist., D. L.), 4. αἰτίζω = αἰτέω (epic since Od.).
•ETYM A denominative of *αἶτος; see ►αἴνυμαι, ►αἶσα and ►αἴτιος.

αἴτιος [adj.] 'guilty, responsible' (Il.). ◄GR► •DER Thence (or directly from *αἶτος): αἰτία [f.] 'responsibility, guilt, cause; accusation', also 'disease'; thence denominative αἰτιάομαι 'to accuse, charge with', secondary αἰτιάζομαι (X., D. C.).
To αἰτιάομαι: αἰτίασις (Antipho, Arist.) and αἰτίαμα (A., Th.) 'accusation, charge'; αἰτιατός (Arist., Plot.) 'having a cause' (τὸ αἰτιατόν 'effect' as opposed to τὸ αἴτιον 'cause') is rather directly from αἰτία because of the meaning; from τὸ αἰτιατόν, the grammarians created ἡ αἰτιατικὴ πτῶσις 'accusative case', so properly 'case of what is effectuated' (Wackernagel 1920-1924(1): 19).
From αἰτία (or τὸ αἴτιον): αἰτιώδης 'causal', philosophical term (Hell. and late), likewise αἰτίωμα (pap., Act. Ap.) = αἰτίαμα, and with the same vocalism αἰτίωσις (Eust.) = αἰτίασις.
•ETYM αἴτιος, αἰτία and αἰτέω were derived from αἶτος 'share' (see ►αἴνυμαι, ►αἰτέω), which is semantically understandable. The suffix -ιος may have been added to αἰτ- after the change of ti > σι.

αἴφνης [adv.] 'suddenly' (E. IA 1581, Hp. Int. 39). ◄PG(V)►
•DER More common as well as more archaic is ἐξαίφνης (Hom., Pi., trag., etc.). The adjective αἰφνίδιος (A., Th., Arist.), on the other hand, is more common and more archaic than ἐξαιφνίδιος (Pl., Gal.). Adverbial forms αἰφνηδίς, -δόν (Hdn.).
•ETYM Related to ►αἶψα, s.v., and also to ►ἄφνω, ►ἄφαρ, ►ἐξαπίνης, etc.

αἰχμή [f.] 'point of a spear, spear' (Il.). On its use in Homer, see Trümpy 1950: 52ff. ◄IE $h_2$eiḱ-(s)m-* 'spear'► •DIAL Myc. a_3-ka-sa-ma /aiksmans/.
•COMP αἰχμ-άλωτος 'prisoner of war' (Pi.), whence fem. αἰχμαλωτίς, adj. αἰχμαλωτικός, abstract αἰχμαλωσία. Thence denominative verbs αἰχμαλωτίζω and αἰχμαλωτεύω (Hell. and late); from αἰχμαλωτίζω: αἰχμαλωτιστής and αἰχμαλωτισμός.

•DER αἰχμήεις 'armed with a spear' (A., Opp.); αἰχμητής 'spearman, warrior' (Il.), αἰχμητᾰ́ (E 197), fem. αἴχμητις (EM); with secondary suffix αἰχμητήρ (Opp., Q. S., Nonn.); αἰχμητήριος 'armed with a spear, war-like' (Lyc. 454 verse-final). Denominative αἰχμάζω [v.] 'to throw the spear, to arm with a spear' (Il.).
•ETYM The Mycenaean form proves PGr. *aiksmā. The word is connected with αἶκλοι· αἱ γωνίαι τοῦ βέλους 'points of the arrow' (H.) and with Lith. iẽšmas, OPr. aysmis 'spit' which may derive from *$h_2$eik̑-(s)m-. The original meaning must have been 'point'. Within Greek, we further find Cypr. ἰκμαμένος 'wounded' (Ruijgh 1957: 136), ἰκτέα· ἀκόντιον 'javelin' (H.), and perhaps ►ἴκταρ 'near'. Uncertain is the appurtenance of ἴγδις [f.] (Sol.), ἴγδη (Hp.) 'mortar', but cf. Fur.: 321.

αἶψα [adv.] 'quickly, suddenly' (Il., poet.) ◂PG▸ •DER αἰψηρός 'quick' (Il., Pi.).
•ETYM Sommer IF 11 (1900): 243 connected the word with ►αἰπύς 'steep' as *αἰπ-σ-α; the forms can also be understood in substrate terms (with Fur.: 158) as alternation of a labial with ψ. Furnée further connects it with ἐξαίφνης, ►ἐξαπίνης, ►ἄφαρ, ►ἄφνω, etc.

ἀΐω [v.] 'perceive, hear' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_2$euis- 'perceive'▸ •VAR Ipf. ἄϊον (see below); verbal adj. ἐπ-άϊστος 'perceived, detected' (Hdt.) to ἐπαΐω, ἐπᾴω (Att. prose), whence aor. ἐπῇσα (ἐπήϊσα).
•DIAL Cypr. fut. awiyēsomai.
•ETYM The ipf. ἄϊον was considered by Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 251ff. to be an original aorist, from which a present ἀΐω was formed secondarily. Schulze found traces of an original pres. *ἀείω in ἄει· ἀκούει, ἄετε· ἀκούσατε (H.), and in ἐπ-ᾴειν (E. HF 773), but this is difficult to fit in with the etymology prevailing today: ἄϊον < *awis-e/o- is generally connected with Skt. āvíṣ [adv.] 'evidently, manifestly' and OCS (j)avě 'id.', so the Greek verb is probably a denominative from this adverb. As Kloekhorst recently showed, the Hitt. verb au-^{i} / u- 'to see' (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.) can also be connected with it, since in o-grade forms *$h_2$ou-, the laryngeal would regularly be lost. Noteworthy, though improbable, is the connection by Szemerényi Glotta 38 (1960): 243 with the word for 'ear'. Within Greek, compare aor. ᾐσθόμην, pres. ►αἰσθάνομαι, with -θ- indicating the completion of a process.

αἰῶ ⇒ αἰεί.

αἰών, -ῶνος [m., f.] '(life)time, long period of time, eternity' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_2$ei-u- 'time of living, well-being'▸ •VAR αἰέν [adv.] 'always'.
•DER αἰώνιος 'enduring, eternal' (Pl., Hell., NT), αἰωνιότης 'perpetuitas' (gloss.); αἰωνίζειν 'to make or be eternal' (Dam., Phot., Suid.), αἰώνισμα 'perpetuation, monument' (Ostr.).
•ETYM From *αἰϝών, an n-stem also found in the old locative ►αἰέν 'always', which coexisted with the s-stem in αἰῶ, αἰές, ►αἰεί 'id.'. See also ►οὐ. On the meaning, see Stadtmüller Saeculum 2 (1951): 315ff. A neuter u-stem is found in Skt. ā́yu-, Av. āiiu '(life)time', OAv. gen. yaoš, dat. yauuōi < *$h_2$oi-u, *h_2i-eu-s, *h_2i-eu-ei. Latin has thematicized aevus < *$h_2$ei-u-o-; Gothic has an i-stem aiwins [acc.pl.]. An old derivation is Lat. iuvenis, Skt. yúvan- 'young man' from *$h_2$iu-Hen- with the Hoffmann suffix ('having vital strength'). Derived from this are Lith. jáunas, OCS junъ 'young' and Go. jund 'youth' < *$h_2$iu-Hn-ti-.

αἰώρα [f.] 'swing, hammock, noose, halter' (Pl.). ◂?▸
•DER αἰωρέω 'to raise, hang' (Pi., IA), also -έομαι 'to hand, hover', also prefixed with συν-, ὑπερ-. Thence αἰώρησις (mainly medic.), συν- (Pl.), ὑπερ- (Hp.); αἰώρημα (E. [lyr.], Lyc.).
•ETYM Previously, an intensive (iterative) verb *ϝαι-ϝωρ-έω was reconstructed, from which *ϝαιϝώρα > αἰώρα was a derivation. This type is not accepted anymore. Taillardat RPh. 57 (1983): 21-25 assumes *h_2uōr-eie- > *ἀϝωρέω (formation as in πωλέω, etc. to the root of ἀείρω 'to hang'); reduplication would then have resulted in *ἀϝαϝωρ-, which would have given *αϝαιωρ- > αἰωρ- (like *αϝαιρω > αἴρω). The reduplication with ἀϝ-αϝ- seems uncertain to me, just like the development to *ἀϝαj- and its continuation as (ἀϝ)-αι- before a vowel.

Ἀκάδημος [m.] name of a hero. ◂?▸
•DER Ἀκαδήμεια the gymnasium in Athens where Plato taught, the Platonic school (Ar.), hεκαδημειας (Att. inscr., see LSJ Supp.).
•ETYM Generally identified with the first element of ἑκάεργος (which derives from *uek̑-m); and with the PN Boeot. ϝhεκαδαμος, Thess. ϝεκε-; in Attic this form may have been Ἑκάδημος (D. L., St. Byz.); but see Lejeune 1972: §254[3], who objects that the aspiration was lost.
Fur.: 309 separates it from these words and connects the Lydian TN Ἀκαδαμίς and the Carian PN Ἀκταδημος. Cf. also Ταρκονδημος (Cilicia)? However, the names in Greece seem to have (had) a ϝ-, of which there is no trace in the Anatolian names. The meaning of -δαμ- is unknown. If the word was Pre-Greek, the varying vocalism can be better understood (assimilations are rare in Greek).

ἄκαινα [f.] 'spike, prick, goad' (A. R.), Also 'ten-foot rod' in Thessaly (Bechtel 1921, 1: 116, 204), cf. ἄκαινα δέ ἐστι μέτρον δεκάπουν Θεσσάλων εὕρεμα (sch. A. R. 3, 1323; Call. fr. 24, 6). In Egypt a measure of 100 square ft. (Hero, pap.). ◂GR?, PG?▸
•ETYM Traditionally derived from the n-stem ►ἄκων with the suffix -ια. However, it may also contain the Pre-Greek suffix -αινα (see Fur.: 171[117]) added directly to the stem ἀκ-. The measure is in origin the same word; for the semantics, DELG compares κάλαμος, Lat. pertica, MoFr. perche.

ἀκακαλίς, -ίδος [f.] name of several plants (Dsc.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. ἀκακαλλίς· ἄνθος ναρκίσσου. Κρῆτες 'flower of narcissus (Cret.)' (H.). κακαλίς· νάρκισσος (H.), κακκαλία = στρύχνον ὑπνωτικόν 'sleepy nightshade, Withania somnifera' (Dsc. 4, 72 and 122). Further κάγκανον = κακ(κ)αλία 'Mercurialis tomentosa' (Gal., Paul. Aeg.).

•ETYM Frisk assumes an Oriental origin, possibly Egyptian, but why? Fur.: 371, 277 (see also 138) compares κακαλίς and κάγκανον, variants which prove a Pre-Greek origin. Cf. also ►ἀκακία.

ἀκάκητα [adj.] epithet of Hermes (Il., Hes.) and Prometheus (Hes.), of unknown mg. ◁?▷

•DER ἀκακήσιος (Call.).

•ETYM If the glosses ἀκακίεις· συνίεις and ἀκακιεῖ· συνιεῖ are reliable, the word could mean ʻσυνετόςʼ (Hoffmann BB 17 (1891): 328). DELG rejects the glosses without reason and assumes a meaning ʻbenevolentʼ. Risch 1954: 395f. thinks it was built on ἄκακος, ἀκάκᾱς after μητίετα (which is not easy). See also Fraenkel 1956b: 168, and LfgrE.

ἀκακία [f.] name of a tree or plant, ʻacaciaʼ or ʻGenista acanthocladaʼ (Dsc.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM Probably a substrate word; cf. ►ἀκακαλίς. Fur.: 321 compares κάκτος. There is no reason for an Oriental origin, as DELG assumes. Kramer ZPE 97 (1993): 146 compares Coptic κακε, κεκε, κεκει ʻdarkʼ, the color of the wood of the acacia; the ἀ- would have been taken from ἄκανθος. This is unconvincing.

ἀκαλανθίς •VAR = ἀκανθίς. ⇒ἄκανθα.

ἀκαλαρρείτης [adj.] only in ἐξ ἀκαλαρρείταο βαθυρρόου Ὠκεανοῖο (H 422, τ 434). ◁GR▷

•COMP Similar ἀκαλάρροος (Orph.).

•DER The adverbial first member is only sparsely attested (Hes., Sapph.), and in glosses like ἀκαλόν· ἥσυχον, πρᾶον, μαλακόν ʻquiet, mild, softʼ (H.), ἀκαλῶς [adv.] (Eust.).

•ETYM From ἀκαλα-ρρεϝέ-της, a compound of ἀκαλά and ►ῥέω with suffixal -της. Meier-Brügger Glotta 73 (1995): 9-11, derives the first member from the root *$kelh_2$-, seen in κέλαδος as ʻrauschend dahineilenʼ, and interprets ἀ-καλαρρείτης as ʻkein rauschendes Fliessen habend, still fliessendʼ. See ►ἀκή 2.

ἀκαλήφη [f.] ʻstinging nettle, sea anemoneʼ (Eup.). ◁PG?(V)▷

•VAR Thphr. (HP 7, 7, 2) has ἀκαλύφη.

•ETYM Unknown; cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. There is no reason to suppose the influence of ἄκανθα, etc. (Frisk). Semitic etymology in Lewy 1895: 50. Suffixal -b^h- is quite common in names of trees and plants. The variation υ/ η could point to a Pre-Greek word, although there are no clear parallels to it.

ἄκανθα [f.] ʻthorn, thistleʼ, name of different thorny plants (Strömberg 1940: 17), also ʻbackbone, spineʼ of fish, snake, or man (Od.). ◁PG?▷

•VAR Note ἄκανθος [m.] ʻacanthusʼ (Acanthus mollis).

•DER Many derived adjektives: ἀκάνθινος, ἀκανθώδης, ἀκανθικός, ἀκανθηρός, ἀκανθήεις ʻprovided with thorns, etc.ʼ. Further diminutive ἀκάνθιον; ἀκανθίας kind of shark or grasshopper (cf. Strömberg 1943: 47, Strömberg 1944: 17); ἀκανθίς name of a bird (ʻgoldfinchʼ or ʻlinnetʼ, cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.), also a plant name; ἀκανθυλλίς bird name (Thompson s.v.), ἀκανθίων ʻhedgehogʼ, ἀκανθέα a plant, ἀκανθεών and -θών ʻthorny break, spinetumʼ ἀκανθηλή mg. unknown. Denominative verb ἀκανθόομαι ʻto be thornyʼ (Thphr.).

•ETYM The basic meaning is ʻthornʼ, whence ʻbackbone, spineʼ. Usually, ἄκανος ʻpine-thistleʼ is considered basic, but a connection with ἄνθος (as akan-ant^{h}o-;* see Frisk) is improbable. Analysis as a compound *ἄκ-ανθα ʻsharp flowerʼ (Kretschmer 1896: 403 A. 1) is a type of etymology of the past. Belardi Rend. Acc. Linc. 10 (1955): 309-331 assumes an Indo-Mediterranean substrate word, connecting Skt. kaṇṭ(h)a-, but such combinations with Sanskrit are mostly incorrect, and the Indo-Mediterranean hypothesis is quite doubtful. Most probable is a Pre-Greek substrate element, though in this case there is no positive indication except for the ending in short -α (see Pre-Greek); in this respect, there is no reason to assume a secondary Greek formation (as per DELG). Niedermann Glotta 19 (1931): 8ff. connected it with ἀκαλανθίς = ἀκανθίς (Ar.), by metathesis of *ἀκανθαλίς.

ἄκανος [m.] a thistle, ʻAtractylis gummiferaʼ, ʻdorniger Fruchtkopfʼ (Thphr.). ◁PG?(S)▷

•VAR Also ἄκαν, -νος (LXX).

•DER ἀκανικός, ἀκανώδης, ἀκανίζω (all Thphr.), ἀκάνιον (H.).

•ETYM For the formation, cf. πλάτανος, ῥάφανος, πύανος, etc.; the word is mostly derived from the root ἀκ- ʻsharpʼ, but the suffix -ανος rather points to a non-IE word (words like ἄκων, ἀκόνη confirm that the -α- is foreign).

ἀκαρής, -ές [adj.] ʻsmall, tinyʼ (Ar.). ◁?▷

•VAR Mostly in fixed expressions, e.g. ἐν ἀκαρεῖ (χρόνου), ἀκαρῆ ʻa momentʼ, of time (Ar.); also κατέπεσον ἀκαρὴς τῷ δέει ʻit was a hair-breadth escapeʼ; οὐκ ἀκαρῆ ʻnot at allʼ. A form ἄκαρ is attributed to Antiphon (Taillardat 1962: §248).

•DER ἀκαριαῖος id. (D.), cf. Chantraine 1933: 49.

•ETYM Traditionally derived from κείρω, ἐκάρην ʻto cutʼ as ʻtoo short to cutʼ: τὸ βραχύ, ὅ οὐδὲ κεῖραι οἷόν τε (H.); this is doubtful. Perhaps ʻ(not even a) louseʼ? See ►ἀκαρί.

ἀκαρί [n.] ʻmiteʼ (Arist.). ◁PG?▷

•ETYM Fur.: 371 connects it with κάρνος = φθείρ ʻlouseʼ (H.), which is quite attractive. It is usually connected with ►ἀκαρής, s.v. DELG suggests a contamination of ἀκαρής with κόρις ʻbugʼ. I would rather think that κόρις is cognate, as a substrate word, with prothetic vowel and α/o interchange.

ἄκαρνα [f.] · δάφνη ʻsweet bayʼ (H.). ◁PG?▷

•ETYM The word has been connected with ►ἄκαστος ʻmapleʼ (and further with OHG ahorn), but this must be explained differently. ἄκαρνα is most probably a substrate word (note the sequence -ρν-).

ἀκάρναν ⇒ἀχαρνώς.

ἄκαρον ⇒ἄγχραν.

ἀκαρός [m.]? · σημαίνει τὸν ἐγκέφαλον ἢ τὴν κεφαλήν ʻbrain, headʼ (EM 45, 13). ◁?▷

•ETYM Cf. ἔγκαρος and ἴγκρος, with the same mg., which point to ἐν and κάρη 'head'. It would be the only relatively certain instance of *h_1nC- yielding ἀ-, but Nussbaum 1986: 72f. remains sceptical, as one would expect *ἄκρος instead of ἀκαρός if the form is old.

ἄκασκα ⇒ ἀκή 2.

ἄκαστος [m.] · ἡ σφένδαμνος 'maple' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM We may posit *ἄκαρ-στος and assume that the word is cognate with Lat. acer, -ris 'maple', OHG ahorn (which is sometimes connected with ►ἄκαρνα · δάφνη H., s.v.), and Gallo-Rom. akar(n)os* 'id.' (Hubschmied Rev. celt. 50 (1933): 263f.); see Pok. 20. For the formation, we may compare πλατάνιστος, but the derivation from -id-to-* (cf. Chantraine 1933: 302) may well be wrong. Since plant names are often borrowed, and the formation is unclear, we may envisage a substrate origin. Fur.: 371 compares κάστον· ξύλον. Ἀθαμᾶνες 'wood' (H.), and for the meaning σφένδαμνον· ξύλον (H.), o.c. 164. A further comparison with κόστον 'wooden parts of a wagon' (o.c. 343) is less certain.

ἄκατος [f., m.] 'light vessel' (Thgn.), 'boat-shaped cup' (com.). ◄?►
•DER Diminutives ἀκάτιον, which also denotes a kind of women's shoe (Ar.), and ἀκατηνάριον (Olsson AfP 11 (1935): 219); further ἀκάτειος, τὰ ἀκάτεια (sc. ἱστία) 'small sails' (X.); ἀκατίς [f.] 'millipede' (Steph. Med.), see Strömberg 1944: 11.
•ETYM Probably a technical loanword. Often connected with ἀκ- 'sharp' (see ►ἀκή), but without any obvious reason. Winter 1950: 12 connected it with κητήνη· πλοῖον μέγα ὡς κῆτος (H.), which could perhaps belong with ►κῆτος instead.

ἀκαχίζω ⇒ ἄχομαι.

ἀκαχμένος [perf.ptc.] 'sharpened' (Il.). ◄IE? *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp'► •ETYM From the root *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp'; a reduplicated formation *ἀκ-ακ-σ-μένος has been suggested, which remains speculative.

ἀκέᾱνος [m.] a kind of leguminous vegetable (Pherecr.). ◄?► •ETYM Unexplained. For the overall structure, cf. Ὠκεανός.

ἀκεύει ⇒ ἀκούω.

ἀκέων •VAR Also -έουσα, -έοντε. ⇒ ἀκή 2.

ἀκή 1 [f.] · ἀκμὴ σιδήρου 'point of an iron tool' (Suid., H.), cod. αἰχμή. ◄IE *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'point, sharp'► •VAR A parallel formation is ἀκίς, -ίδος [f.] 'needle, arrow, barb' (Hp.).
•COMP On -ήκης see ►ἠκή.
•DER From ἀκίς: ἀκίδιον 'small barb' (BCH 29, 572), ἀκιδώδης 'pointed' (Thphr.), ἀκιδωτός 'id.' (Paul. Aeg.), also plant names like ἀκιδωτόν (Dsc.), passive verbal adj. ἠκιδωμένος (IG 2, 807), also compounded in ἀκιδοειδής (Procl.). ἀκίσκλων [gen.pl.] (BGU 1028, 12; 16 [II^{p}]), mg. uncertain, was borrowed from Lat. acisculum 'small pointed hammer of a stonemason', cf. Schubart's comment ad loc. Reduplicated form in ►ἀκωκή 'point (of a lance, sword, etc.)' (Hom., Theoc., Opp.), cf. ἀγωγή.

•ETYM Probably from a root noun; see Schwyzer: 465. Derived from a root ἀκ- 'sharp', seen in several other etyma. Not related to ►ἄκαινα, ►ἄκανος. See ►ἄκων, ►ἀκμή, ►ἀκόνη, ►ἄκρος, ►ἀκών.

ἀκή 2 [f.] 'silence, quiet' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Beside the instr. ἀκᾶ, ἀκᾷ (Pi.) only acc. ἀκήν; in Hom. adverbial in ἀκὴν ἐγένοντο σιώπῃ, which shows that the original mg. was 'quiet, calm'; cf. ἀκὴν ἦγες· ἡσυχίαν ἦγες 'were bringing quiet or calm' (H.).
•DER ἀκέων, -έοντε, -έουσα is a ptc.; the form in -ων became indeclinable (Δ 422). The optative ἀκέοις (A. R. 1, 765) is a late creation.
ἀκήνιον· ἥσυχον 'quiet' (EM 48, 1); ἄκασκα = ἡσυχῶς 'quietly' (H., Crat. 126), ἀκασκᾷ (Pi. fr. 28), formation unexplained; ἀκαλά [n.pl., adv.] (Hes. fr. 218, Sappho 43 LP); ἀκαλαν (Sappho 68, 86 LP); ἀκαλόν· ἥσυχον, πρᾶον, μαλακόν 'quiet, mild, soft' (H.); this adverb also in ἀκαλαρρείταο < ἀκαλα-ρεϝε- (Il.).
•ETYM It may be connected with ►ἦκα, assuming ablaut.

ἀκήρατος [adj.] 'undamaged, intact' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀκέραιος 'id.' (Hdt.).
•DER ἀκηράσιος 'pure' (Od.), 'untouched' (h. Merc., AP). Similar formations are ἀκήριος 'undamaged (by the κῆρες)' (Od., epic), ἀκέραιος 'unharmed, undamaged' (IA). From ἀκέραιος: ἀκεραιότης (Plb.), ἀκεραιοσύνη (Suid.), ἀκεραιόομαι (Eust.).
•ETYM An epic and poetic word. It is unnecessary to assume a second, independent word meaning 'pure' (Od.), as Frisk does. DELG pleads for a unified meaning 'intact, pure'. Perhaps, ἀκήρατος (not from κηραίνω, A. Supp. 999) was metrically lengthened from *ἀκέρατος, from the stem of κερα-ΐζω 'to destroy', but influence of κήρ is improbable. In some cases, the meaning may have been influenced by ►κεράννυμι 'to mix'. Lee Glotta 39 (1961): 191-205 connects it with ►κείρω, but this leaves the formation unexplained.

ἀκιδνός [adj.] 'weak, small' (Od.). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἀκιδρός (Cyr.).
•DER ἀκιδρωπάζω· ἀμβλυωπῶ 'to be dim-sighted' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. The element -δν- may point to a substrate word. In view of the variant with -ρ-, Fur.: 388 assumes a substrate word with ν/ ρ, though the interchange is rare (cf. πρόκνις). At 360, he compares σκιδαρόν· ἀραιόν 'thin, slender' (H.), which cannot be considered certain. Frisk also compares ἀκιρός 'weak' (Theoc.); cf. ἀκιρῆ· ἀσθενῆ, οὐκ ἐπιτεταμένα 'weak, not stretched' (H.) and ἀκιρῶς· εὐλαβῶς, ἀτρέμας 'discreet, quiet' (H.); but ἀκιρός· βορρᾶς 'the north wind' (H.) cannot belong here. For the interchange δ/ ρ, Fur.: 388 gives only σίβδα, where it is probably conditioned by the preceding β.

ἀκῑνάκης [m.] 'short sword of Persians and Scythians' (Hdt.). ◄LW Pers.?, PG?►
•VAR κινάκης (S. fr. 1061); the ι was long in Hor. Od. 1, 27, 5.
•ETYM Perhaps an Iranian loan: Benveniste 1940b: 202 compares kyn'k; see further Bailey TPS 1955: 69. However, κινάκης in Sophocles (Belardi 1969: 202) could suggest that the word is Pre-Greek rather than Iranian. It is supposed that ἀκίναγμα = τίναγμα (Lyr. Adesp. 30 B) and ἀκιναγμός· τιναγμός, κίνησις 'stirring, movement' (H.) arose under influence of ἀκινάκης (Mansion 1904: 64).

ἀκιρίς [?] · λύχνος 'lamp' (H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Cf. κίρρις (Lacon.) for λύχνος (EM 515, 17), also κίρις (H.).
•ETYM Unknown, but it may well be Pre-Greek in view of the variations.

ἄκινος [m.] 'wild basil, Calamintha graveolens' (Dsc. 3, 43). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ἄκονος (ibid.).
•ETYM The vowel interchange, though rare, may point to a substrate word. See Fur.: 191.

ἀκιρός ⇒ ἀκιδνός.

ἀκκώ, -οῦς [f.] 'bogey' (Plu. 2, 1040b), acc. to others (Zen. 1, 53) 'vain woman'. ◄PG, ONOM► •DER Also as a PN (Plu.); ἀκκίζομαι [v.] 'to adorn oneself' (Pl.).
•ETYM A 'Lallwort' or nursery word; cf. Lat. Acca (Larentia) and Skt. akkā (gramm.). Cf. also ἀκκώ· γυνὴ ἐπὶ μωρίᾳ διαβαλλομένη, ἥ φασιν ἐνοπτριζομένην τῇ ἰδίᾳ εἰκόνι ὡς ἑτέρᾳ διαλέγεσθαι 'woman slandered to be crazy, etc.' (Suda 1, 87).

ἀκμή [f.] 'point, edge; culminating point, prime, zenith' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2eḱ- 'point, sharp'► •VAR The acc. ἀκμήν is used adverbially in the sense 'as yet, still'.
•DER ἀκμαῖος 'in full bloom, timely' (A.), ἀκμηνός 'full-grown' (ψ 191). Denominative verb ἀκμάζω [v.] 'to be in one's prime' (IA); thence: 1. ἀκμαστής = ἀκμαῖος (Hdn.), οἱ ἀκμασταί name of a gymnastic club in Thyatira (inscr.); 2. ἀκμαστικός = ἀκμαῖος (Hp., Gal.).
•ETYM Derivative in -μή of the root in ► ἀκή, ► ἄκρος, etc.

ἄκμηνος [adj.] 'fasting (from food)' (Il., only in T). ◄IE *ḱemh_2- 'get tired'► •ETYM A scholion on T 163 derives it from Aeol. ἄκμα, which Hesychius explains as νηστεία, ἔνδεια 'fasting, need'. Bechtel 1914 compares κομῶσα· γέμουσα 'filling' (H.), which would point to privative ἀ- and a zero grade -κμη- 'to fill'; this is highly uncertain. Fur.: 369 compares Old Georg. si-q̇mili 'hunger', etc., which is very uncertain too. Blanc 1999: 317-338 proposes a derivation from *ḱemh_2- (κάμνω) in the sense 'to care (for)', which yields 'not properly cared for, neglected' (see also DELG Supp.). This seems attractive (cf. πολύκμητος).

ἄκμων, -ονος [m.] 'anvil' (Il.), also 'meteoric stone' (Hes. Th. 722), = οὐρανός ἢ σίδηρον 'heaven, iron' (H.), = ἀλετρίβανος, Κύπριοι 'pestle (Cypr.)' (H.). ◄IE *h_2eḱ-mon- 'stone, heaven'► •COMP ἀκμό-θετον [n.] (Hom.) 'base of an anvil', with the root of ► τίθημι.
•DER Diminutive ἀκμόνιον (Aisop.).
•ETYM Old word for 'stone', found in several languages: Skt. áśman- [m.] 'stone, heaven', cf. the glosses meaning of ἄκμων as 'heaven'; Av. asman- 'stone, heaven', OP asman- 'heaven'; Lith. akmuõ, -eñs 'stone' (with regular depalatalization before m; ãšmens 'sharp side, edge' with aš- from other positions). The relation of these words to OCS kamy, -ene 'stone' and the Germanic group ON hamarr 'hammer'

(originally made of stone) is much discussed. One supposes the root aḱ- 'sharp' in ► ἀκή, etc. On these questions see the litt. in Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 137, e.g. Maher JIES 1 (1973): 441ff. and Mallory & Adams 1997: 547.

ἄκνηστις [f.] 'backbone' (A. R. 4, 1403: ἐπ' ἄκνηστιν); name of a plant (Nic. Th. 52). ◄GR► •ETYM It is supposed that κατ' ἄκνηστιν stands for older κατὰ κνῆστιν 'rasp' (κ 161), (Wackernagel Glotta 2 (1910): 1, Fraenkel Glotta 4 (1913): 42, Leumann 1950: 49); on κνῆστις see ► -κναίω.

ἀκοιτης, -ου [m.] 'bedfellow, husband' (Il.). ◄IE *ḱei- 'lie, be situated'► •COMP παράκοιτις (Il.).
•ETYM Secondarily built on ἄκοιτις [f.], on which see Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 225f.: the idea that the woman is the one sharing the bed of the man is more natural than the other way around; also, the feminine is more frequent. With copulative ἀ- and κοίτη or κοῖτος 'bed' (Chantraine 1933: 26ff. and 113f.). The psilosis may be analogical after ἄλοχος or dialectal (Lesbian, Ionic). See ► κεῖμαι.

ἄκολος [m.] 'bit, morsel' (ρ 222.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Boeot. acc. to Stratt. 47, 7.
•ETYM Possibly of foreign origin; cf. Phrygian βεκος ακκαλος (Haas 1966: 84). A connection with Skt. aśnā́ti 'to eat' does not explain the formation. A suggestion by Fur.: 371 is to connect it to κόλον, a type of food preserved in pots (pap. III[a]); Ath. 6, 262a and Eust. explain it as ἡ τροφή. Nothing suggests an identity with ἄκυλος 'acorn'.

ἀκόλουθος [adj.] 'following; corresponding' (Att., com.).
•VAR Often substantivized [m., f.] 'follower, companion'.
•DER Diminutive ἀκολουθίσκος (Ptol. Euerg.), abstract ἀκολουθία 'retinue, attendants; sequence, succession, consequence' (S., Pl.), mostly as a philosophical term. Denominative ἀκολουθέω [v.] 'to follow' (Ar.), whence ἀκολούθησις (Arist.) and ἀκολουθητικός [adj.] (Arist.).
•ETYM Derived from ► κέλευθος 'path' with copulative ἀ-. The double ablaut seems surprising, but there are parallels (see Van Beek fthc.b); it does not point to vowel assimilation.

ἀκόνη [f.] 'whetstone' (Pi.). ◄IE *h_2eḱ- 'sharp, point'► •DER ἀκονάω [v.] 'to whet' (IA), nominal derivations ἀκόνησις (H., Suid.), ἀκονητής (Ed. Diocl., Hdn.); further ἀκόνιον name of a medicine for the eye (Dsc.), ἀκονίας fish name (Numen. apud Ath. 17, 326a).
•ETYM Formation in -όνη like περόνη, βελόνη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 207), with ἀκ- as in ► ἀκή, ► ἀκμή, etc. For the suffix -n-, cf. ► ἄκων.

ἀκόνῑτον [n.] the poisonous plant 'Aconitum' (Thphr.), but also other plants, see André 1956. ◄PG?►
•DER ἀκονιτικός (X.).

•ETYM Derived by the ancients from ἀκονιτί 'without dust', i.e. without struggle / fight (ἀκόνιτος· Q. S.), therefore 'invincible', because of its deadly effect. Semantically, this is hardly possible. Cf. Jüthner Glotta 29 (1942): 73ff., Strömberg 1940: 150 A. 1. Fur.: 121 connects it with κονή, κῶνος. A substrate word is in any case probable.

ἄκορνα [f.] 'fish thistle, Cnicus Acarna' (Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR (σ)όρνος, see below.
•ETYM On the final short -α, see Chantraine 1933: 100ff. Strömberg 1944: 17 compares κόρνος· κεντρομυρσίνη, Σικελοί 'butcher's broom (plant name)' (H.) and σκόρνος· κόρνος, μυρσίνη τὸ φυτόν 'myrtle'. It seems possible that ἀκορνός (ὀκορνός) 'grasshopper' derives from ἄκορνα (Strömberg), cf. ἀκανθίας 'grasshopper' beside ἄκανθα 'thorn, thistle'. The ἀ- is a Pre-Greek prothetic vowel, and did not arise by connection with ἀκ- 'sharp'. The variation ἀ-/ σ-/ zero, the cluster -ρν- and the short -α all point to a Pre-Greek word.

ἄκορον [n.] 'yellow flag, Iris Pseudacorus' (Dsc., Gal.). ◂?▸
•ETYM The ancients derived the word from κόρη 'pupil of the eye'; it would be used to care for the pupil. See Strömberg 1940: 98. Fur.: 359 compares κύρα, which would be the Libyan form (Ps.-Dsc. 2, 169).

ἄκος [n.] 'cure, medicine' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DIAL Myc. a_2-ke-te-re /ʰakestēres/, ja-ke-te-re /jakestēres/.
•COMP ἀφ-, ἐφ-ακέομαι (Delph.).
•DER Denominative verb ἀκέομαι 'to cure; repair' (Il.). Thence 1. ἀκέσματα 'remedy' (Il., Pi., A., inscr.); ἀκεσμός 'healing' (Call.), ἀκέσμιον· ἰάσιμον 'healing' (H.); 2. ἄκεσις 'healing' (Hdt., inscr.); ἀκέσιμος 'id.' (Plu.) and ἀκέσιος epithet of Apollo (Paus.), ἀκεσίας· ἰατρός 'healer' (Phot.). 3. ἀκέστωρ epithet of Apollo (E. Andr. 900), fem. ἀκεστορίς (Hp.), abstract ἀκεστορία 'art of healing' (A. R.). 4. ἀκεστήρ 'tranquilizing' (χαλινός, S. OC 714 [lyr.]), ἀκεστήριος 'healing' (App.) and ἀκεστήριον 'tailor's shop' (Lib.); Ἀκεστηρίδης PN (Styra). Feminines ἀκεστρίς 'midwife' (Hp.) and ἀκέστρια 'tailor woman' (Antiph., Luc.). 5. ἀκεστής [m.] 'patcher, tailor' (X., Lyc.), fem. ἀκεστίδες 'bars in furnaces' (Dsc. 5, 74). Instrument nouns: 6. ἀκέστρα [f.] 'darning needle' (Luc., pap.), 7. ἄκεστρον [n.] 'medicine' (S.). Adjectives: ἀκεστός 'curable' (N 115, Hp., Antipho), originally from ἄκος, but interpreted as derived from ἀκέομαι; ἀκεστικὴ τέχνη 'tailor's trade' (Democr., Pl.).
Also ἀκή 'healing' (Hp.), probably from ἀκέομαι. From ἀκή perhaps *ἄκιμος (Cic. Att. 10, 12a, 4), see Arbenz 1933: 93, Thomas 1912: 125ff. Also νήκεστος (Hes.), which (beside ἀνάκεστος, ἀνήκεστος) seems to be from n-h_2k-, but could be analogical in view of the Myc. form with j-. PN Ἐξηκίας (Attica; Pailler Lettre de Pallas 4 (1996): 8).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. The compounds with ἀφ- and ἐφ-, as well as the Myc. form with j-, seem to point to original yod. DELG's reconstruction iēk-/iək-* is impossible, as eh_1/ h_1* would have resulted in ἐκ-. An original root $Hieh_2\acute{k}$- seems possible. It is quite thinkable that the psilotic forms are epicisms or Ionic forms. A connection with OIr. hícc 'healing' has been suggested, but its relation to MW iach 'healthy' is uncertain (Schrijver 1995: 103).

ἀκοστή [f.] 'barley' (Nic. Al. 106). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀγοσταί, -έω (AB 213 [gramm.]).
•DER Denominative verb in the ptc. ἀκοστήσας (Z 506, O 263) 'well-fed', of ἵππος. Unclear is ἀκόστιλα· ἐλάχιστα 'slightest, not at all' (H.). κοσταί = ἀκοστή (H.) may have lost its vowel, see Kuiper 1956: 221.
•ETYM Hesychius calls the word Cyprian; the scholion on Z 506, Thessalian, as a word for food in general (cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 204). It is compared with Lat. acus -eris [n.] 'chaff', Go. ahs and OHG ahir [n.] 'ear (of corn)' (see Frisk), but the analysis, in which a suffix -τή with substantivizing function is added to akos-* (comparing Lat. onus-tus, venus-tus and perhaps locus-ta), is rather weak; an e-grade akes-* would be expected. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1961): 652 proposes ako(n)stā* < akont-tā* 'barbed', from the word for 'javelin', ►ἄκων. However, the forms with -γ- and κοσταί, if these are old, rather point to foreign origin. See ►ἄχνη.

ἀκούω [v.] 'to hear', also 'to obey, be called' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$keus-* 'hear'▸ •VAR Perf. ἀκήκοα. ἀκεύει· τηρεῖ, Κύπριοι 'watches (over), observes (Cypr.)' (H.).
•COMP νηκουστέω < n̥-h_2k-*. Often prefixed: ὑπακούω 'to be obedient', ὑπήκοος, ἐπακούω, ἐπήκοος, κατακούω, κατήκοος, etc.
•DER ἀκουή (Il.), ἀκοή 'hearing, tiding; ear' (with shortening in hiatus) < akǭā* < akǭhā < akowhā* < akowsā*. Diminutive ἀκοΐδιον (gloss.), denominative verb ἀκοάζῃ· ἀκούεις (H.), cf. the discussion on ἀκουάζομαι below, whence ἀκοαστῆρες· ἀρχή τις παρὰ Μεταποντίοις 'kind of magistrature (Metap.)' (H.). 2. ἄκουσις 'hearing', plur. 'sounds' (Arist.), ἀκούσιμος 'fit for hearing' (S.). 3. ἄκουσμα 'sound, rumor, (oral) teachings' (S. OC 518 [lyr.], X., Arist.). Diminutive ἀκουσμάτιον (Ps.-Luc. Philopatr.), ἀκουσματικός (Iamb.). 4. ἀκουστής 'listener, pupil' (Men., D. H., Phld.), ἀκουστήριον 'lecture hall, audience' (Gal., Them., Porph.). 5. ἀκουστός 'audible' (h. Merc., IA), ἀκουστίζω 'to make hear' (LXX); ἀκουστικός 'ptng. to hearing' (Arist., Epic.). Deverbative ἀκουάζομαι [v.] 'to hear, listen' (Hom., Hp.), rarely act. -άζω; formally, this could also derive from ἀκουή. Desiderative ἀκουσείω (S., H.).
•ETYM Related to Go. hausjan 'to hear' as $h_2$kous-ie/o-*. ἀκούω is from *ἀκουσ-yω; cf. ἀκουστός, ἤκουσμαι. The primary verb may be found in the gloss ἀκεύει. The word has often been explained as a compound from ἀκ- 'sharp' and οὖς, but this is not certain. In support of such a compound, ὠτ-ακουστέω 'to eavesdrop' may be compared within Greek. See ►κοέω.

ἀκρᾱής, -ές ⇒ ἄκρος.

ἀκραιφνής, -ές [adj.] 'unmixed, pure, sheer; untouched, inviolate' (E.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 159 compares ἀκραπνής (mss. Lysipp. fr. 9 apud EM 531, 56 = Et. Gud. 338, 15). If this is reliable, it is a substrate word (π/ φ, α/ αι).

ἀκραμύλα ⇒ ἀχραδαμύλα.

ἀκρατίζομαι ⇒ κεράννυμι.

ἀκρᾱ́χολος [adj.] 'raging passionately' (Ar.). ◁IE *k̑erh_2- 'mix'▷ •DER Abstract ἀκρᾱχολία, Ion. ἀκρηχολίη (Hp.); denominative ἀκρᾱχολέω [v.] (Pl.).
•ETYM Literally "with unmixed bile", from *ἀκρᾱ́τ-χολος, with *ἀκρᾱ́ς = ἄκρᾱτος, cf. ἀκρητό-χολος (Hp.) and εὐκρᾱ́ς = εὔκρᾱτος 'well-mixed'. Later, it was changed to ἀκρόχολος (Arist.). Brugmann IF 17 (1904-1905): 174ff. assumes the same first member occurs in ἀκρήπεδος· ἡ ἀγαθὴ (scil. γῆ) (H.). See ►κεράννυμι.

ἀκρεμών, -όνος [m.] 'bough, branch' (Simon.); on the mg. see Strömberg 1937: 141f., 54f. ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Accentuation after Hdn. Gr. 1, 33; the mss. mostly have -έμων.
•ETYM The old etymology with ἄκρος is improbable, as the formation is unclear (see Chantraine 1933: 172f.). It is most improbable that κρεμών (Eratosth.) is due to ►κρεμάννυμι. Like the etymology, it is a desperate attempt to reduce the word to known elements. Fur.: 115 adduces ἀγρεμών· κάμαξ, λαμπάς, δόρυ 'pole, torch, shaft' (H.), which shows that it is a substrate word.

ἀκρῑβής, -ές [adj.] 'exact, precise' (Hp.). ◁GR?▷
•COMP ἀκριβο-λογία (Arist.).
•DER ἀκρίβεια 'precision' (IA); denominatives: 1. ἀκριβόω [v.] 'to investigate accurately, etc.' (Att.), also intr. 'to be exact' (Arist.). Thence ἀκρίβωσις 'exact observance' (J.) and ἀκρίβωμα 'precise account, exact knowledge' (Phld., Epicur.). 2. ἀκριβεύω [v.] 'to use accurately, give precise instructions' (S. E., Did., pap.). 3. ἀκριβάζω [v.] 'to investigate accurately, etc.', also pass. 'to be proud' (LXX, Aq., Thd.), whence ἀκριβασμός, -ασμα 'precise investigation', also 'law, legislation', -αστής 'investigator', also 'legislator'.
•ETYM The explanation by Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 12ff., that the word is from ἄκρος and εἴβω with early itacism, is hardly acceptable. Tichy MSS 36 (1977): 151-172 explains the word from ἄκρις 'mountain top', in the dative-locative in -ῑ, and βῆναι 'to go'.

ἀκρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'grasshopper' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM Hardly related to κρίζω 'creak' (Strömberg 1944: 15ff), which leaves the ἀ- unexplained. Winter 1950: 15 connects it to κέρκα· ἀκρίς (H.); Fur.: 127 accepts this, comparing γέλγις next to ἄγλις for the variation. Of course, a substrate word for a grasshopper is not unexpected. However, Furnée's further comparison with ἄχηρον· ἀκρίδα (H.) (< *ἀχερδον [Bechtel 1921, 2: 671]) is less convincing.

ἄκριστιν · κλέπτριαν, ἀλετρίδα, Φρύγιοι 'female thief, female slave who grinds corn (Phrygian)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 205f. suggested that the suffix -(i)stis is Phrygian; a suffix -st- could be Pre-Greek.

ἀκροάομαι [v.] 'to hearken, obey' (X.), ὁ ἀκροώμενος may secondarily mean 'reader' (Philostr.). ◁GR▷

•DER ἀκρόασις 'hearing, obeying', also 'lecture (hall)' (IA). ἀκρόαμα 'what is heard', e.g. 'rumor, lecture, song' (X., Arist., Plb.), plur. also personified as 'lecturer, singer' (Plb.); thence ἀκροαματικός 'fit (only) for hearing' (Plu.); ἀκροατής 'listener, pupil', also 'reader' (Att., Hell.), whence ἀκροατικός; ἀκροατήριον 'lecture hall, audience' (Act. Ap., Ph., Plu.); ἀκροάζομαι (Epich.).
•ETYM Commonly derived from a univerbation of ►ἄκρος and ►οὖς that denoted the top of the ear, whence 'to prick the ears, be keen to hear' (Frisk GHÅ 56 : 3 (1950): 21); however, cf. Szemerényi SMEA 3 (1967): 69ff. The derivation is straightforward semantically, but some formal difficulties remain.

ἀκροβυστία ⇒ πόσθη.

ἄκρος, -α, -ον [adj.] 'at the farthest point, topmost, outermost' (Il.). ◁IE *$h_2$ek̑- 'sharp, point'▷ •VAR Old substantivized forms ἄκρα [f.], ἄκρον [n.] 'highest or farthest point, headland, cape', Hom. κατ' ἄκρης (πόλιος) 'from the highest point down', hence 'completely, utterly', also κατ' ἄκρηθεν (which became κατὰ κρῆθεν by association with κάρα); see Leumann 1950: 56ff.
•COMP ἀκρόπολις (Od.), the Iliad still has ἄκρη πόλις, see Risch IF 59 (1949): 20; ἀκραής epithet of the wind (β 421, ξ 253, Hes. Op. 594) is often interpreted as 'blowing vehemently', but probably originally 'blowing on/ from the heights'; also adverbial ἀκραεὶ πλεῖν (Arr.).
•DER ἄκρις, -ιος [f.] 'hill-top, mountain peak' (Od.), always plur., see on ►ὄκρις; sing. only Epigr. Gr. 1035, 8. ἀκραῖος 'dwelling on heights', epithet of several gods, also = ἄκρος (Opp.). ἀκρία· ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ ἐν Ἄργει (H.), also name of other goddesses, ἀκρίαι· τὰ ἄκρα τῶν ὀρέων 'mountain-tops' (H.). Substantives: ἀκρότης 'highest point, completion, perfection' (Hp., Arist., Phld.). ἄκρων, -ωνος [m.] 'extremity' (Hippiatr. 7), diminutive ἀκρωνάριον (ibid.), abstract ἀκρωνία (A. Eu. 188), probably 'mutilation' (cf. the discussion on ἀκρωτηριασμός below). ἀκρωτήριον 'projecting part, e.g. promontory, sternpost of a ship, etc.', plur. also 'extremities of the body' (IA), probably directly from ἄκρος, cf. δεσμός: δεσμωτήριον. From ἀκρωτήριον: ἀκρωτηριάζω 'to remove the stern, mutilate, amputate' (IA), cf. ἀκρωτερῆσαι· κόψαι ἢ ἀχρειῶσαι 'to beat, render useless' (H.), also 'to jut out like a promontory' (Plb., Str.). Verbal nouns ἀκρωτηριασμός (Dsc.), ἀκρωτηρίασις (gloss.). Denominative verbs to ἄκρος: ἀκρίζω 'to go on tiptoe' (E.), 'τᾶ ἄκρα ἐσθίειν' (sch. Φ 12); on ἀκρώσσει· ἀκροᾶται, ἑκὼν οὐχ ὑπακούει, προσποιεῖται (H.) see Frisk GHÅ 56 : 3 (1950): 22.
•ETYM The root *$h_2$ek̑- is widespread in IE, and several r-derivatives from it are found: Skt. áśri- [f.] 'corner, sharp side', catur-aśra- 'quadrangular', Lat. ācer, -ris, -re (with unexplained length), Gaul. Aχrotalus PN 'with high forehead', OIr. ér 'high', OLith. aštras, OCS ostrъ 'sharp'. Hitt. ḫekur 'rock sanctuary' is unrelated; cf. Puhvel HED s.v. See further ►ἀκή, ►ἀκμή, and ►ὄκρις. A connection with the root *$h_2$ek̑- has been assumed unjustly for many words, e.g. ►ἀκαλήφη, ►ἀκόστη, and ►ἄκορνα.

ἀκταίνω [v.] 'to erect' (A.), of στάσιν, βάσιν. ◁?▷

•VAR Aor. ἀκταινῶσαι (Anacr.), see Immisch PhW 48 (1928): 908. Unclear are ἀκταίζων· ἀκτᾳζων, προθυμούμενος, ἢ ὁρμῆς πληρῶν, ἢ μετεωρίζων 'willing, full of impulse, or lifting (the spirit)' (H.), ἀκταίνειν· μετεωρίζειν 'to lift (the spirit)' (H.); ὑποακταίνοντο· ἔτρεμον 'were trembling' (H.), as a v.l. for ὑπερικταίνοντο (ψ 3), of πόδες. Also ἀπακταίνων· ὁ κινεῖσθαι μὴ δυνάμενος 'unable to move' (H.).
•ETYM The only suggestion is that it derives from ἄγω through *ἀκτάω or *ἄκτω (cf. Schwyzer: 705f., Schwyzer 1937: 70), but this is doubted by DELG. Cf. Bechtel 1914.

ἀκτέα [f.] 'elder-tree, Sambucus nigra' (Emp.). ◅?▻
•VAR Contracted ἀκτῆ; also ἀκτέος [m.].
•DER ἄκτινος (Thphr.).
•ETYM On the suffix -έα, which forms tree names, see Chantraine 1933: 92 (ἰτέα, πτελέα). Witczak Linguistica Baltica 1 (1992): 201-211) connects it with Arm. hac'i 'ash', which he disassociates from ►ὀξύα. Borrowed from Greek are Lat. acte (Plin.) and OHG atuh, at(t)ah.

ἀκτή 1 [f.] 'promontory, rocky coast, rough shore, edge' (Il.). ◅PG?, IE?▻
•DER ἀκταῖος, -α, -ον 'located at or belonging to the coast' (Th., Hp., Call.); the fem. ἀκταία is also the name of a plant (Plin.); see Strömberg 1940: 115 (also on ἄκτιον and ἀκτίνη). ἄκτιος epithet of Pan (Theoc.) and Apollo (A. R.), ἄκτιον = ἀκτή (Ael.). ἀκτίτης [m.] 'who lives on the coast' (A. P.), ἀκτίτης λίθος 'stone from Piraeus or Argolis' (IG, S.). ἀκτάζω [v.] 'to banquet' (which would derive from *'to banquet on the shore', Plu. 2, 668b) is rather from ►ἀκτή 2.
•ETYM Derivation from ἀκ- 'sharp' is possible acc. to Frisk and DELG, but if Fur.: 127 is right in comparing ὄχθη, -ος 'shore, bank' (which seems quite convincing), it could be a substrate word (variations α/ ο, κτ/ χθ). Cf. ►ἀκτή 2.

ἀκτή 2 [f.] 'corn' (Il.), often Δημήτερος or ἀλφίτου ἀκτή, for which reason it cannot mean 'flour', as DELG rightly points out. Cf. ἀκτή· τροφή 'nourishment' (H.). ◅PG(V)▻ •ETYM There is no trace of initial digamma. Fur.: 127 compares *ὀχθη in ►εὔοχθος; see also ibid. 320 on ὀχή. This evidence cannot be ignored, and ἀκτή 'corn' is a substrate word. Skoda 1993: 275-283 thinks that the word means 'ear (of corn)' and therefore belongs to ἀκ- 'sharp'.

ἀκτηρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'staff' (Achae. 21), 'bar of wood supporting a chariot-pole' (Poll. 10, 157). ◅?▻ •ETYM Unknown. The explanation as a univerbation of ἀκταίνω (*ἀκτάω) and ἐρείδω (Frisk) seems most improbable.

ἀκτίς, -ῖνος [f.] 'ray, beam of light' (Il.), also 'spoke of a wheel' (AP). ◅?▻ •COMP Frequent as a first member.
•DER ἀκτινωτός 'provided with ἀκτῖνες' (inscr. Delos IV[a] Michel 815, Ph.), ἀκτινώδης [adj.] 'like beams' (Philostr.), ἀκτινηδόν [adv.] 'id.' (Luc.).
•ETYM ἀκτίς is built like δελφίς, γλωχίς, and ᾠδίς, and probably derived from a noun. It resembles Skt. aktú-, but the meaning of the latter is very difficult (see Renou 1937: 6; Kuiper Vāk 2 (1953): 81f., 89f.); one meaning seems to be 'night', another has been derived from añj- 'to smear', but Kuiper thinks it means 'ray, light'. This has been connected with *no/ek^wt- 'night', the zero grade of which is also found in Go. uhtwo [f.] < PGm. uŋχtwōn-* < *$\mathring{n}k^wt$-u-n-) 'dawn' (Lith. ankstì 'early' requires an initial laryngeal, which excludes derivation from 'night', as Gr. νύξ shows that there was no laryngeal.) Relation of ἀκτίς to the word for 'night' is excluded, however, as it shows no trace of a labiovelar. Thus it remains without an etymology.

ἄκυλος [m., f.] the edible acorn of the Quercus Ilex (κ 242). ◅PG(S)▻ •ETYM Connection with Skt. aśnā́ti 'eat' or with ►ἄκολος is improbable. It is rather a substrate word (Fur.: 255[32]) because of ἀκυλαῖον, since -υλ- is a frequent Pre-Greek suffix.

ἀκωκή [f.] 'point of a lance or sword, etc.' (Il., Theoc., Opp.). ◅IE *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp, point'▻ •ETYM Reduplicated formation of unknown structure: *$h_2(e)\acute{k}$-$h_2\bar{o}\acute{k}$- or (hardly feasible) *$h_2\acute{k}$-o-$h_2\acute{k}$-, from the root *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp' (see ►ἀκή).

ἄκων, -οντος [m.] 'javelin, dart' (Il.). ◅IE? *$h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp, point'▻ •DER Diminutive ἀκόντιον (h. Merc. 460, Hdt., Pl.), ἀκοντίας [m.] 'kind of snake', also 'meteor', because of its speed (Nic.), ἀκοντίλος [m.] = ἀκοντίας 'id.' (H.). Verb ἀκοντίζω [v.] 'to throw a javelin' (Il.), verbal nouns 1. ἀκοντιστύς 'game of the dart' (Il.); 2. ἀκόντισις 'throwing the javelin' (X.); 3. ἀκοντισμός 'id., shooting (of stars)' (X., Str., Arr.); 4. ἀκόντισμα 'distance of a dart's throw' (X.), 'javelin' (Str., Plu.); 5. ἀκοντισία = ἀκόντισις (SIG 1060, 1062), cf. Chantraine 1933: 86. Agent nouns: ἀκοντιστής [m.] (Il.), cf. Schwyzer: 500α; more recent ἀκοντιστήρ 'id.' (E.); also used as an adjective in Opp. and Nonn.; ἀκοντιστήρ also as 'spring, fountain', see Zingerle Glotta 19 (1931): 72f. Further ἀκοντιστήριον 'ballista' (Agath.); ἀκοντιστικός 'ptng. to throwing the dart' (Pl., X.).
•ETYM ἄκων is considered to be a derivative -n- of the root in ►ἀκή, etc. But there is no proof for this, as ►ἄκαινα need not be a derivation of the stem of ἄκων, so perhaps the -ντ-suffix is original. From other languages, we can compare Skt. aśáni- 'point of an arrow', Lat. agna 'ear (of corn)' (which could be a substrate word, cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v.), Gm., e.g. Go. ahana 'chaff', and ON ǫgn, pl. agnar 'id.'.

ἀλάβα · μέλαν ᾧ γράφομεν 'black [stuff] with which we write' (H.); ἀλάβη· λιγνύς, σποδός, καρκίνος 'soot, embers, crab', ὑπὸ δὲ Κυπρίων μαρίλη 'coal-dust (Cypr.)' (H.); ἀλάβη· ἄνθρακες 'coals' (H.). ◅PG?▻ •ETYM See Petersson IF 34 (1914/1915): 241. Because of its structure, it is probably a Pre-Greek word (note -αβ-).

ἀλάβαστος [m.] 'vase without handles for storing perfumes', often made of alabaster (Hdt.). ◅LW▻ •VAR Later ἀλαβάστρος [m.], -τρον [n.].
•DER Diminutive ἀλαβάστιον (Eub.); further ἀλαβάστριον [n.] and ἀλαβαστρίνη (scil. λιθοτομία) 'alabaster quarry' (pap.); ἀλαβαστρίτης (λίθος) [m.] 'alabaster', ἀλαβαστῖτις πέτρα (Callix.); ἀλαβάστρινος (pap.); ἀλαβαστρών [m.] 'alabaster quarry', ἀλαβαστρωνίτης 'worker in an alabaster quarry' (pap.).

•ETYM Sethe Berl.Ak.Sb. 1933: 888f. explained the form as Egyptian: *ʿ*a-la-baste* 'vase of the goddess Ebáste' (= Bubastis); this is doubtful. Fur.: 329[26] uses the -ρ- as evidence for a substrate word, but it could be analogical. The sequence -st- could be Pre-Greek.

ἀλάβης ⇒ ἀλλάβης.

ἀλαζών, -όνος [m., f.] 'charlatan, quack, braggart, boaster' (Arist.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also as a adjective.
•DER ἀλαζονικός 'boastful' (Hp., X., Arist.), ἀλαζονίας = ἀλαζών (Hdn.), ἀλαζοσύνη 'bragging' (Aq.).
•ETYM ἀλαζών is identical with the Thracian EN Ἀλαζών. Perhaps it simply became an appellative, just like vandal (though with a different meaning). See Burkert RhM 105 (1962): 50f. Of course, this interpretation remains uncertain. Implausible is the connection with Hitt. ḫalzai-ⁱ 'to cry, invoke' by Van Windekens KZ 100 (1987): 307f., which Kloekhorst 2008: 276f. analyses as $h_2$lt-(o)i-.

ἀλαιθερές [adj.] · χλιαρόν, ἡλιοθερές 'warm, warmed in the sun' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀλαλά interjection (Pi.), also personified Ἀλαλά. ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Also ἀλαλαί (Ar.), also as a plur. substantive 'war cry, exultation' (Pi.).
•DER ἀλαλητός [m.] 'cry of war, of fear, of victory' (Il.); improbable Leumann 1950: 211 (connecting ἀλάλημαι 'to wander'). Denominative verb ἀλαλάζω 'to call ἀλαλά' (mainly poetic), whence ἀλαλαγμός (Hdt., E., Arr.), ἀλάλαγμα (Call., Plu.), ἀλαλαγή (S.).
•ETYM An elementary cry, like Skt. alalā-bhávant- (RV, 'making cheerful', of water). See Theander Eranos 15 (1915): 98ff. and Kretschmer Glotta 9 (1918): 228ff. Cf. ►ἐλελεῦ, ►ὀλολύζω.

ἀλάλυγξ, -υγγος [f.] 'gulping, choking' (Nic. Al. 18). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM One suggests contamination of λύγξ 'hiccup' and another word, like ►ἀλύω or ►ἀλάομαι; this is not very convincing. Does it contain ἀλαλά? It is rather a primary onomatopoeic formation (with the Pre-Greek element -υ[γ]γ-).

ἀλάομαι [v.] 'to wander, roam; to be banished' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$elh$_2$- 'wander, roam about'▸ •VAR Aor. ἀλήθην (Hom.), perf. ἀλάλησθαι, ἀλαλήμενος (Hom.) with present mg. (cf. the accent, see Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1914: 117f., Chantraine 1942: 190). Late ἀλαίνω (see Schwyzer: 733).
•DER Deverbal ἄλη (Od., Hp., trag.), whence ἀλεία (AB, H.); ἀλήτης [m.], also [adj.] 'wanderer, rover; vagrant' (Od.), Dor. ἀλάτας, also a PN; ἀλῆτις, -ιδος [f.] 'beggar, refugee; roaming about' (Od., Hdt., trag.), ἀλητικός (D. Chr.). To ἀλήτης denominative ἀλητεύω [v.] 'to roam about (as a beggar or refugee)', thence ἀλητεία, ἀλατεία (A., E. [lyr.]). Rare ἀλητήρ name of a dance (Aristox.), ἀλήτωρ· ἱερεύς 'priest' (H.), perhaps originally "beggar priest", on which see Masson RPh. 89 (1963): 214-218.

Further ἀλήμων 'roving' (Od.), ἀλημοσύνη (Man.). Action nouns: ἀλητύς 'roving' (Call., Man.), ἄλημα· ὁδοιπορία 'journey' (H.). ἀλάλαγξ· ἡ πλάνη 'wandering' (H.) has a strange formation; acc. to Leumann 1950: 211 also ἀλαλητῷ (Π 78), but cf. on ►ἀλαλά.
•ETYM ἀλάομαι is an old intensive verb in -άομαι, which can be compared with Latv. aluôt 'id.' and PIt. ala-* in Lat. ambulō 'to walk', U amb-oltu 'must go around'. LIV[2] reconstructs a root $h_2$elh$_2$- for PIE. See ►ἀλέομαι, ►ἄλιος, ►ἀλύω, ►ἠλάσκω.

ἀλαός [adj.] 'blind' (Il., trag. [lyr.], A. R.). ◂?▸
•VAR Cf. κ 493 = μ 267 μάντιος (-ηος?) ἀλαοῦ, which provides a metrical problem.
•DER Denominative verb ἀλαόω (Od., AP), cf. Wackernagel 1916: 127. Thence ἀλαωτύς (ι 503) 'blinding, blindness'.
•ETYM No etymology. The explanation from ►λάω 'see' is problematic, as a privative formation should have barytone accentuation. A. B. 1095 says that the word was Cypriot, which may mean that it belongs to the Achaean layer in Homer (Ruijgh 1957: 160). The usual word for 'blind' is ►τυφλός.

ἀλαπάζω [v.] 'to drain, plunder, destroy' (Hom.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. ἀλάπαξα, fut. ἀλαπάξω. The future λαπάξειν is found twice in A. (Th. 47, 531; doubtful in Ag. 130); pres. λαπάσσω 'to empty' is used as a medical term. A. Eu. 562 probably has λαπαδνόν (cod. λέπ-) = ἀλαπαδνόν. Cf. further λαπάζειν· ἐκκενοῦν, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ τὸ ὄρυγμα 'to empty out, whence also digging' (H.).
•DER ἀλαπαδνός 'exhausted, feeble' (Hom.), often with negation, and with analogical -δ- (Schwyzer: 489); ἀλαπαδνοσύνη (Q. S.).
•ETYM A connection with Skt. álpa- 'small' and Lith. alpstù 'to faint' is formally impossible. The interchange of the prothetic vowel points to a substrate word. Fur.: 371 compares λαπαρός (like ἀκιδνός : ἀκιρός), which is not evident semantically. The original meaning seems to have been 'to empty'; cf. the compounds with ἐξ-. The word has been compared (but hardly correctly) with λάπαθος, λαπάρη by DELG and Fur.: 371.

ἄλαρα · τὸ τοῦ δόρατος εἰς τὸν αὐλὸν τῆς ἐπιδορατίδος ἐμπῖπτον. ἢ κάρυα Ποντικά. <καὶ δένδρα ἀλαρίαι> ἀφ' ὧν γίνεται τὰ δόρατα (H.), cf. EM 57, 53. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἐλάραι· τὰ ἐν τῷ αὐλῷ τῶν δοράτων ἁρμοζόμενα (H.).
•ETYM The interchange α/ ε clearly points to a substrate word. See Fur.: 347.

ἄλαστος [adj.] uncertain mg. (also of related words), see DELG. Perhaps 'insufferable', as an epithet of πένθος and ἄχος? Perhaps 'accursed' as a vocative (ἄλαστε, e.g. Χ 261)? ◂?▸
•DER Original noun ἀλάστωρ 'avenging spirit' or 'he who does deeds which merit vengeance', either from ἀλαστέω or directly from ἄλαστος; attributively of gods, but also of men; a PN in Hom. Also ἀλάστορος (A., S.); derivative ἀλαστορία (J.). Denominative verb ἀλαστέω (Hom., Call.), ἐπαλαστήσας (α 252), denoting an emotion, perhaps 'full of wrath', or 'distraught'? Also ἀλασταίνω· δυσπαθέω 'to suffer a hard fate' (H.).

•ETYM Uncertain. One connects ►λανθάνω, assuming an original meaning 'one who cannot forget or be forgotten'. Frisk correctly considers it formally impeccable, but hypothetical with regard to the meaning. DELG accepts it. Muller's explanation (Muller in Teeuwen 1929: 649ff., Muller Mnem. 57 (1929): 116ff.), that it is from ►λάω 'to see' with ἀ- from *n̥-, zero grade of ἐν ("invisus, invisor, qui invidendo nocet"), is artificial and formally problematic (*h_1n- giving ἐν-).

ἄλγος [n.] 'pain, grief' (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἀλγεινός 'painful, grievous' (A.) < *ἀλγεσ-νός, ἀλεγεινός (epic), see ►ἀλέγω; ἀλγινόεις 'id.' (poet.), metrical device, see Chantraine 1933: 271; ἀλγηρός 'id.' (LXX) belongs to ἀλγέω (see below); ἀργαλέος 'id.' (Hom.), dissimilated from *ἀλγαλέος; thence ἀργαλεότης (Ph., Eust.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἀλγέω 'to suffer, be worried' (IA), fut. -ήσω. Thence ἄλγησις 'suffering' (S., Ar.) and ἄλγημα 'pain' (Hp., S., E., Men.), further ἀλγηδών 'pain' (Ion. poet., Pl.); on ἀλγηρός see above. 2. ἀλγύνω 'to cause pain', , -ομαι 'to suffer pain' (trag.). Thence ἄλγυνσις (Phlp., Olymp.) and ἀλγυντήρ (Zos.). Primary grades of comparison ἀλγίων and ἄλγιστος (Hom., trag.).
•ETYM The words is often connected with ►ἀλέγω. Although this has a different meaning 'to take care, mind, heed', a development to 'worry, grief' is conceivable (cf. MoDu. zorgen 'to take care' beside MoE sorrow). Cf. Seiler 1950: 85, Seiler Word 11 (1955): 288, and Szemerényi 1964: 148ff, who defends the identity.

ἀλδαίνω [v.] 'to make grow, strengthen' (A.). ◄IE *$h_2$el- 'feed, rear'► •VAR ἤλδανε (σ 70 = ω 368), rather impf. of ἀλδάνω.
•COMP As a second member -αλδής, in ἀναλδής 'infertile' (Hp., Ar., Arat.), νεαλδής (Opp.) and νεοαλδής (H.) 'newly grown', all direct derivations from the verb.
•DER ἀλδήσκω intr. 'grow' (Ψ 599), also trans. (Theoc.), ἀλδισκάνω (Hdn. Gr. 2, 716). Iterative preterite ἀλδήσασκε (Orph. L. 370). Deverbal ἄλδη 'growth' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 311); ἀλδήεις 'growing' (Max.), ἀλδήμιος 'causing growth' (Method. apud EM).
•ETYM ἀλδαίνω, ἤλδανε, and ἀλδήσκω replace an unattested root verb, an extension in -δ- from the root of ►ἄναλτος and ►νεᾶλής; cf. ►ἀλθαίνω. The root *$h_2$el- is found in Lat. alō 'to feed' and Go. alan 'to grow up'.

ἀλέα 1 [f.] 'warmth', specifically of the sun (Hom.). ◄IE *suelH- 'singe, burn'► •VAR Ion. ἀλέη. Perhaps also ἁλέα, cf. on ἀλεαίνειν below.
•COMP See ►ἐπᾶλής.
•DER ἀλεεινός 'exposed to the sun, hot' (Ion., X., Arist.), after φαεινός etc. (Chantraine 1933: 196); ἀλυκρός 'lukewarm' (Nic.), after θαλυκρός or from false split of θ' ἀλυκρός? Cf. ἀλυκτρόν· εὔδινον 'splendid (of weather)' (H.); ἀλεόν· θερμὸν ἢ χλιαρόν 'hot, warm' (H.); ἀλεής (S. Ph. 859), not ἀδεής as per Reiske. Denominative verb: ἀλεαίνω 'to warm (oneself)' (Hp., Archil., Ar., etc.), aspirated ἁλ- in Attic acc. to Eust. 1636. Thence ἀλεαντικός 'fit for warming' (S. E.). 2. ἀλεάζω 'to be warm, warm up' (Arist., Gal., H.).
•ETYM Derived from the verb seen in Germanic and Baltic (OE swelan 'to burn slowly', MoHG schwelen, Lith. svìlti intr. 'to singe'), with a suffix -έα (Chantraine 1933: 91). For *hϝαλ-, this implies a reconstruction *su̯lH-e-, see ►εἵλη. The etymology was rejected by Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 653, who connects it with

MIr. allas 'sweat', Hitt. allani̯i̯a-^{zi} 'to sweat, perspire', as well as Lat. adoleō 'to burn (as an offering)'.

ἀλέα 2 ⇒ἀλέομαι.

ἀλέγω [v.] 'to care for, mind, heed' (Il.), mostly with negation. ◄IE *$h_2$leg- 'care, mind'►
•VAR Only pres.
•COMP δυσ-ηλεγής originally 'who does not care, pitiless', secondarily associated with ἄλγος (Hom.); ἀν-ηλεγής 'id.' (Q. S.), to be read for Hom. τανηλεγής (Bechtel Herm. 39 (1904): 155f., Leumann 1950: 45; cf. ἀνηλεγές· ἀφρόντιστον 'unmindful', probably for older *νηλεγης < *n̥-$h_2$leg-.
•DER Enlargements ἀλεγίζω and ἀλεγύνω, both only pres. and impf.
•ETYM Although there is no etymology, the structure of the word suggests an IE origin. An identity with ἄλγος is semantically improbable. De Lamberterie RPh. 71 (1997): 150 defends the connection with λέγω, which is unacceptable from the perspective of laryngeal theory.

ἄλεισον [n.] 'drinking cup with two handles' (Il.), also 'hip socket' (Marsyas apud Ath. 479c). ◄?►
•VAR ἄλεισος [m.] (Ar.).
•ETYM No etymology; probably a loan.

ἀλείτης [m.] 'offender, criminal' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_2$leit- 'offense' (?)►
•COMP From the stem of the aorist ἀλιτό-ξενος 'offending against a friend' (Pi.), with metrical lengthening, e.g. ἠλιτό-μηνος 'missing the right month', i.e. 'born untimely' (Il.). νηλείτιδες (Od.) to be read *νηλείτεες (Beekes 1969: 108f., 289), cf. νηλείτης Antim. 177W; νηλείτης· ἀναμάρτητος 'blameless' LSJ Supp.; νηλιτέες· ἀναμάρτητοι, ἀναίτιοι, [ἄχρηστοι] 'blameless, guiltless, [useless]' (H.) with νη- < *n̥-$h_2$leit-.
•DER ἀλειτεία· ἡ ἁμαρτία 'fault' (Suid.); ablauting ἀλοίτης 'avenger' (Emp.), Ἀλοῖτις epithet of Athena (Lyc. 936); ἀλοιτός 'criminal' (Lyk. 136); ἀλοιταί· κοιναί, ἁμαρτωλαί, ποιναί 'common, faults, requitals' (H.); ἀλοιτήεσσαν· κοινήν, ἄνανδρον 'common, husbandless' (EM).
Zero grade aor. ἤλιτον, secondary pres. ἀλιταίνω 'to offend against, transgress' (Hom.). From ἀλιτεῖν: ἀλιτήμων 'criminal' but also 'cursed' (Il.), ἀλιτημοσύνη 'crime' (Opp.), ἀλίτημα 'id.' (AP). Also ἀλιτήριος 'breaking the law' (Att.); *ἀλιτήρ is unattested, but is also suggested by ἀλίτρια· ἡ ἁμαρτωλός 'transgressing woman' (Et. Gud. 2) and ἀλιτρός (below); ἀλιτηρός 'id.' (S. OC 371), if not a mistake for -ήριος in ἀλιτηριώδης 'cursed' (Pl., D. C.). From ἀλιταίνω further ἀλιτρός [m.] 'criminal, rogue', also [adj.] (Hom.). Thence ἀλιτραίνω = ἀλιταίνω (epic poet.), also ἀλιτρέω (A. Eu. 316: ἀλιτρῶν codd., but ἀλιτών Dorat). Abstracts ἀλιτρία (S., Ar.), ἀλιτροσύνη (A. R., AP).
•ETYM On the relation of the Greek forms, see Tichy Glotta 55 (1977): 160ff. The ablaut suggests an old IE form. The only cognate proposed is PGm. *laiþa- in OHG leid 'harm' and ON leiðr 'offensive'. On ἀλιτήμων, Keany Glotta 59 (1981): 76-69 is of doubtful value.

ἀλείφω [v.] 'to anoint with oil' (Il.). ◂IE? h$_2$leib^h-* 'ointment', PG?▸
•DIAL Myc. e-na-ri-po-to /en-aliptos/; a-re-pa-te /aleip^{h}atei/; a-re-pa-zo-o /aleip^{h}a-zohos/ 'boiler (ζέω) of unguent'.
•DER 1. ἄλειφαρ, -ατος [n.] 'unguent, anointing oil' (Il.) and ἄλειφα [n.] (> Lat. adeps), with -α perhaps from -n̥t*, Szemerényi SMEA 2 (1967): 23[64]. Thence ἀλειφατίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread baked with oil' (Epich.). 2. ἀλοιφή 'anointing, ointment, grease' (IA), ἀλοιφαῖος [adj.] (Lyc. 579), also ἀλοιφεῖον 'Salbungszimmer' (Eust.), see Chantraine 1933: 60f., and ἀλοιφάω [v.] 'to smear with pitch' (Aq.). 3. ἄλειψις 'anointing' (Ion. Hell.). 4. ἄλειμμα 'ointment, unguent' (IA), ἀλειμμάτιον (Diog. apud D. L.) and ἀλειμματώδης (Hp.); Aeol. ἄλιππα (EM 64, 40). 5. ἀλειφάς [f.] 'spreading [of ointment], shaving' (pap.). 6. ἀλείφιον· ᾧ χρῶνται οἱ ἀλεῖπται 'which is used by anointers' (H.). Agent nouns: ἀλείπτης 'anointer, trainer of athletes' (Arist., Hell.), ἀλειπτικός (Plu.); ἀλειπτήρ 'id.' (Man.), fem. ἀλείπτρια (Lys., com.). Thence, or directly from ἀλείφω, ἀλειπτήριον (Alex. Com.). ἀλειφεύς (inscr. Priene).
•ETYM Generally connected with ▸λίπος 'fat', but this is impossible because of the -p-* and the "prothetic" ἀ-. A connection with ▸ἀλίνω is formally (h$_2$lei(b^h)-*) and semantically easier. The suggestions by Szemerényi Gnomon 42 (1971): 653 are improbable. Semantically close is Skt. limpáti 'smear, stick, adhere' (cf. Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. rep-), but Gr. -φ- makes the comparison impossible (see ▸λίπος); perhaps it is rather related to Go. bileiban 'to stick', etc.? Cf. Pok. 670 (leip-*). In principle, the interchanges observed could also point to substrate origin.

ἀλεκτρυών, -όνος [m., f.] 'cock' (Thgn.). ◂GR?▸
•DIAL Myc. PN a-re-ku-tu-ru-wo /Alektruōn/.
•ETYM The word seems to be built on ἀλέκτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'cock' (Pi.), with the suffix -υων, as in ▸ἀλκυών 'kingfisher'; however, note that the suffix is rare. ἀλέκτωρ itself is an agent noun from ▸ἀλέξω 'to ward off'.

ἀλέξω [v.] 'to ward off, defend' (Il.). ◂IE h$_2$elk-, h$_2$lek-s- 'ward off'▸ •VAR ἀλεξήσω, -ησα (Hom.); without -η- med. aor. ἀλέξασθαι (Hom.), fut. ἀλέξομαι (S.).
•DIAL Myc. A-re-ke-se-u /Alekseus/; a-re-ko-to-re /Alektorei/.
•COMP As a first member ἀλεξ(ι-), e.g. in ἀλεξί-κακος (Hom.); also Ἀλέξανδρος, from which comes the Hittite rendering Alakšanduš. Sommer's view that it is Anatolian in origin (Sommer IF 55 (1937): 187ff., Sommer 1948: 186ff.) is now abandoned.
•DER ἀλέξιον 'medicine' (Nik.), ἄλεξις 'Hilfe, Abwehr' (Aristid., EM). On ἀλέκτωρ, from which ▸ἀλεκτρυών is derived.
From the stem with -η- (cf. ἀλεξήσω): ἀλέξησις 'defense, help' (Ion.), ἀλέξημα 'defense, medicine' (Ion. poet.); ἀλεξητήρ 'defender' (Hom.), fem. ἀλεξήτειρα (AP, Nonn.), derivations ἀλεξητήριος 'helping out', ἀλεξητήριον 'medicine' (Hp., Thphr.); ἀλεξήτωρ (S.); ἀλεξητικός (Alex. Aphr.).
•ETYM ἀλέξ- corresponds exactly with Skt. rákṣati 'to protect'. Besides ἀλεξ-, a stem ἀλκ- exists in Greek; see ▸ἀλκή. These continue h$_2$(e)lk-: h$_2$lek-s-, with a different full-grade slot as in h$_2$eug-: h$_2$ueg-s-. A connection with Lat. ulcīscor 'to avenge' presupposes h$_2$l-* > ol-* (LIV[2] s.v. h$_2$elk-*), and is not likely from the semantic side.

ἀλέομαι [v.] 'to avoid, shun, flee' (Il.). ◂IE? h$_2$leu-* 'escape, ward off' (?)▸ •VAR Also ἀλεύεται (Hom.); aor. ἠλεύατο (Hom.); act. ἀλεύω (trag. [lyr.]).
•COMP νηλεής (Hom.) 'inescapable' < n̥-h$_2$leu-*.
•DER Verbal noun ἀλέα 'avoiding, escape, shelter'; - ἀλεωρή 'escape, shelter' (Il.), dissimilated from *ἀλεϝ-ωλη (Chantraine 1933: 243). Denominative verb ἀλεείνω = ἀλέομαι, from a noun *ἀλεϝ-εν-, perhaps an r/n-stem (cf. ἄλεαρ· ἀλεωρίαν ἢ πολυωρίαν 'ἀ. or consideration' H.), for which one expects h$_2$leu-r̥, gen. h$_2$lu-en-s. ἀλεάζειν· κρύπτειν ἢ προβάλλειν, καὶ εἴργειν, ἀφανίζειν 'hide, ward off, make invisible' (H.) either denominative to ἀλέα or deverbative to ἀλέομαι. A zero grade of the root in ἀλύσκω (epic, trag.) 'to avoid, flee', fut. ἀλύξω with analogical ξ. Enlargements to this are ἀλυσκάζω and ἀλυσκάνω (epic).
•ETYM A connection with ▸ἀλύω is very doubtful because of its deviant mg. 'to be distraught, beside oneself'. LIV[2] s.v. h$_2$leu̯-* 'fernhalten' follows Hackstein 1995: 214-216, who connects it with ToB ālyinträ [subj.] 'they shall keep away'.

ἀλέω [v.] 'to grind' (Od., with κατ-). ◂IE h$_2$elh$_1$-* 'grind'▸ •VAR Aor. ἤλεσα (IA), epic ἄλεσσα, perf. ἀλήλεκα, -ε(σ)μαι.
•DER 1. ἀλέατα 'wheat-groats' (inscr. Milete [VI[a]]) < ἀλέϝατα, also ἀλείατα (Hom.) with metrical lengthening, cf. Schulze 1892: 226 and Hdn. 2, 472, 12, who explains ἄλειαρ from ἄλεαρ. Thematicized in ἄλευρ-ον, mostly plur. ἄλευρα 'flour' (Hdt.). Thence ἀλεύρινος and ἀλευρώδης (medic.), ἀλευρίτης (ἄρτος). 2. ἄλητον, -τα 'flour' (Hp., Sophr.) with η after ἄμητος or as the result of contraction of ἀλεατ-. Thence ἀλήσιον· πᾶν τὸ ἀληλεσμένον 'anything ground' (H.), Lacon. ἀληhιον (with h < s < t* before i). 3. ἀλετός [m.] (Plu.) and ἀλητός (Babr.) 'mealing'. 4. ἄλεσις and ἄλησις 'id.' (Gp.). 5. ἀλεσμός 'id.' (J.) and ἄλεσμα (EM), with secondary -σ-. 6. ἄλημα [n.] 'flour' (S.).
Agent nouns: ὄνος ἀλέτης 'grinder (upper millstone)' (Gortyn, X.), also ὄνος ἀλετών (Alexis). 2. ἀλετρίς 'woman who grinds corn' (Hom.), ἀλετρεύω 'to mill' (ep.). Instrument noun: ἄλεστρον 'fee for milling' (pap.); adj. ἀλετικός 'of milling' (pap.). On ἀλετρίβανος [m.] 'pestle' (Ar.) cf. Schwyzer: 263, 438.
Lengthened verbal stem ἀλήθω (Hp., Thphr.). Unclear ἀλίνω = λεπτύνω 'to crush, pound' (Phot. ex S.); cf. ἀλιν[ν]όν· ἀμυδρόν 'dim' (H.), see Güntert IF 45 (1927): 345.
•ETYM ἀλέω is probably an athematic present ἀλε- < h$_2$elh$_1$- The formation of *ἄλε-ϝαρ may be compared with Arm. aliwr 'flour' < h$_2$leh$_1$-ur̥*. The verb is Arm. ałam. Further cognates are found in Indo-Iranian, e.g. MInd. āṭā 'flour' (+ Hindi, Bengali), MoP ārd 'id.', Av. aša- 'ground' < arta-. Cf. the PIE root melH-, with the same meaning, and ▸μάλευρον.

ἀληθής [adj.] 'true, real' (Il.). ◂IE leh$_2$d^h-* 'be hidden'▸ •DIAL Dor. ἀλᾱθής.
•DER ἀληθείη, -είᾱ 'truth, reality'; younger is ἀλήθειᾰ, Schwyzer: 469. Denominative verb ἀληθεύω 'to speak the truth' (S.), ἀληθίζομαι 'id.' (Hdt.); ἀληθίζω (PHolm.) in the technical meaning 'to dye with genuine purple'. Late derivatives: ἀλήθευσις

'Wahrhaftigkeit' (S. E.) and ἀληθευτής 'who always speaks the truth' (Max. Tyr.); adj. ἀληθευτικός 'truthful, who loves the truth' (Arist.). Enlarged ἀληθινός (IA) and ἀληθικός (Ps.-Callisth.).

•ETYM ἀληθής is a compound with privative ἀ-; the second member is either from *λῆθος (Dor. λᾶθος) or λήθη (Hom.), or from the verb λήθω, λαθ- 'to be hidden, be unknown'. Cf. Luther 1935.

ἁλής [adj.] 'thronged, crowded' (Hdt.). ◂IE *uel- 'press'▸

•VAR Or ἅλής: the spiritus asper is uncertain. It is regular in ἁλής, but not for Dor. ἀλία.

•DER ἁλίζω 'to gather' (Ion. poet.); abstract ἁλίη '(public) assembly' (Dor. ἀλία). From it Dor. ἀλιαία 'id.', Att. ἡλιαία 'tribunal', where the ἡ- must be a false Ionicism of a Doric LW, see Meyer Phil. 48 (1889): 187. Thence ἡλιάζομαι [v.] 'to be seated in the ἡλιαία' (Ar.) with ἡλιαστής (Dor. ἀλ-) 'member of the ἡ.', which may also be derived directly from the noun after δικαστής: δίκη, etc.; adj. ἡλιαστικός. Action nouns: ἡλίασις 'being a member of the ἡ.' (Att.), ἁλίασσις (Tegea) 'meeting'; ἀλίασμα unclear mg. (Gela). ἀλιακτήρ· τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἀθροίζονται οἱ Σικελοί 'place where Sicilians convene' (H.). Cf. the month name Ἀλιαῖος (Dreros), to ἀλία.

•ETYM Aeol. ▸ἀολλής has the same meaning as ἁλής. If the formations are identical, both may go back to *ἁ-ϝαλνής or *ἁ-ϝολνής, with copulative ἁ-, ἀ- < *sm̥- and *wa/oln- < QIE *-ul̥-n-. We may suppose a noun *ϝέλ-νος 'crowd, throng', suffixed like ἔθνος, σμῆνος (Chantraine 1933: 420), which would belong to ▸εἴλω. The expected full grade may be found in the hapax ἀελλής (Γ 13). Finally, ἀλανέως· ὁλοσχερῶς, Ταραντῖνοι 'completely (Tarant.)' (H.) and αϝλανεως (meaning uncertain, Elis) might also be the same word. Cf. ▸ἅλις, ▸ἀολλής.

ἀλθαίνω, -ομαι [v.] 'to cure', med. 'to become whole and sound' (Hp.). ◂IE? *$h_2$el- 'grow'▸ •VAR ἄλθετο (Il.). Fut. ἀλθήσομαι, -σω (Il.). The fut. ἀλθέξομαι (Aret.) was perhaps formed after its opposite πυρέξομαι of πυρέσσω (but DELG comments: "l'hypothèse reste en l'air"); cf. also ἄλθεξις 'healing' (Hp.). On these forms see van Brock 1961: 198-207 ("capricieuses formations", all late).

Note ἀλθεῖν· ὑγιάζειν 'to make sound' (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 76); further presents ἀλθήσκω and ἀλθίσκω (Hp.).

•DER Glosses: ἄλθα· θερμασία ἢ θεραπεία 'warmth or heat, service' (H.); ἄλθος· φάρμακον 'drug' (EM); ἀλθεύς· ἰατρός 'physician' (H.); ἀλθαίνει· αὔξει, θεραπεύει, ὑγιαίνει· φάρμακον γὰρ ἄλθος 'increases, attends to, for ἄλθος means "drug"' (H.).

ἀλθήεις 'curing' (Nic.) was formed directly to the verb. Probably the mythical name Ἀλθαία, also a plant name, a kind of mallow (Thphr.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 81 (partly incorrect); ἀλθίσκος (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. synonymous ἰβίσκος. ἀλθεστήρια 'medicine' (Nic.), cf. χαριστήρια, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 63f.).

On the PN Ἄλθηπος, also Ἄλθηφος, see Bechtel Herm. 56 (1921): 228 and the mythical name Ἀλθαία, see below.

•ETYM Ἀλθαίνω has often been connected to the root of ▸ἄναλτος (Schwyzer: 703 β), *$h_2$el-, seen in Lat. alō 'to rear', Go. alands 'growing up', etc. (see LIV² s.v. and also on ▸ἀλδαίνω).

However, DELG remarks that the word was originally used for the growth of scar tissue, translating ἄλθετο χείρ with "le bras se guérit". The meaning 'to heal' is not evidently connected with ἀλ- 'grow, feed'; the glosses systematically give the meaning 'to heal' etc. θεραπεία may mean 'medical or surgical treatment'; θερμασία is less clear (is it a false reading?), and αὔξει also deviates semantically (is it for ▸ἀλδαίνω?).

The name Ἄλθηπ/φος is clearly Pre-Greek (cf. the river Αἴσηπος), and perhaps the mythical name Ἀλθαία as well (the suffix -αια, -εια is also known in Pre-Greek words); at any rate, we cannot be sure that the names belong to the verb.

An alternative etymology connects it with Skt. r̥dhnóti 'to succeed, accomplish, thrive' (Rix MSS 27 (1970): 88 and Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 118 [taken up in LIV² as *$h_2$eld^h-]).

ἀλίβας, -αντος [m.] 'corpse, dead person' (Pl. Resp. 387c, H.), also of the Styx (S. Fr. 790) and metaph. of wine-vinegar (Hippon.). ◂PG▸

•VAR ἀλίβας· νεκρός ἢ βροῦχος ἢ ποταμός ἢ ὄξος 'corpse, βροῦχος, river, vinegar' (H.); for other glosses see Peiffer ad Call. fr. 216 (v.l. ἁ-; perhaps the vowel is long).

•ETYM The ancient explanation as 'sapless', with privative ἀ- and λιβάς, is based on popular etymology. The conjecture of Immisch Arch. f. Religionswiss. 14 (1911): 449f.) is incorrect. Kretschmer Glotta 28 (1940): 269 connected it with Etr. lupu 'he died' and Lat. Libitina, which is possible but uncertain. The deviant shape of the word, as well as forms like ὀκρίβας, κιλλίβας, λυκάβας and Κορύβαντες (which does not belong to ▸βαίνω), clearly point to a substrate origin.

ἀλιβδύω [v.] 'to sink, submerge into the sea; to hide' (Lyc.). ◂PG▸

•VAR Tzetzes ad Lyc. 351 gives ἀλυβδῆσαι.

•ETYM The ancients connected the word with ἅλς and *βδύω, which is allegedly Aeolic for δύω, but this must be a popular etymology. The strange structure of the word and the group -βδ- make substrate origin almost certain. The elements ἀλι- and -δύω may have been influenced by the Greek words.

ἀλίγκιος [adj.] 'like, resembling' (Il.). ◂?▸

•VAR More frequent is ἐναλίγκιος.

•ETYM Unexplained. The comparison with OCS lice 'face, cheek' etc. is uncertain. The ἀ- has been interpreted as the zero grade of ἐν-, but this is not likely. See Beekes 1969: 25ff. contra Seiler KZ 75 (1957): 11-16. Note that an IE root cannot have the structure *lein(k)-.

ἄλιζα [f.] · ἡ λεύκη τὸ δένδρον (τῶν -ῶν ms.), Μακεδόνες 'Populus alba, abele (Maced.)' (H.). ◂EUR?▸

•ETYM Kretschmer (Kretschmer Glotta 15 (1927): 305f., Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 104f.) compared OHG elira, Go. *alisa in Span. alisa and Ru. ol'xa 'alder', as well as old Germanic TNs and HNs, e.g. Alisa (Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 3 (1951-1952):

165ff.); we may also compare the Thessalian place name Ὀλιζών. Hatzidakis Glotta 23 (1935): 268ff. assumes a loan in Macedonian from a northern language, supposing that the suffix is the same as in ῥίζα, φύζα, κόνυζα. The word seems non-Indo-European. For European substrate words in Greek, see Beekes 2000: 21ff.

ἀλίη · κάπρος, Μακεδόνες 'boar (Maced.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unexplained. E. Maaß's suggestion (Maaß RhM 74 (1925): 472) that it originally means ἀσθενής, ἀδύνατος 'weak', and belongs to ►ἄλιν (= ἠλίθιον, μάταιον, κενόν, ἐλαφρόν [H.], s.v.) makes no sense.

ἀλικάκκαβος [?] plant name, 'Physalis Alkekengi' (Dsc., BGU 1 120, 37). ◄GR► •VAR Also -κάκαβος, -κάκαβον? Cf. ἀλικάκκαβα· ὁ τοῦ λωτοῦ καρπός. καὶ πόας εἶδος 'fruit of various plants; kind of grass' (H.).
•ETYM Plant of which the fruit resembles a κάκκαβος; ἁλι- would mean 'salt', thus 'salt-cellar'? See Amigues Journal des Savants 1984: 151-154.

ἀλικύρκης · φύλλα μήκωνος μετὰ ὄξους λειανθέντα. ἢ ὑπότριμμα ἐκ πλειόνων κρεῶν 'leaves of the poppy pounded with vinegar, dish consisting of various kinds of meat' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM There is no support for Latte's proposal to read -κύκην, which would resemble κυκεών. DELG suggests a connection with κυρκανᾶν 'to mix', which is quite probable.

ἄλιν [adj.] · ἠλίθιον. μάταιον. κενόν. ἐλαφρόν 'vain, empty, idle, light' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Or is it an adverb?
•ETYM Fur.: 391 compares forms with δ-: δαλός = μωρός (Cyr.), as well as δαλής (H., Cyr. acc. to Wendel and Latte), δαλίς (codd.); cf. δαλεῖς = οἱ ἀμαθεῖς (sch. Theocr. 9, 33e). See ►ἀλίη.

ἀλινδέω [v.] 'to roll', med. 'to roll in the dust; roam' (Ar.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also ἀλίνδω; aor. ἤλῖσα.
•DER ἄλινδον· δρόμον ἁρμάτων 'race of chariots' (EM, H.), ἀλίνδησις 'rolling' (in the dust, of athletes; Hp.), ἀλινδήθρα 'place for rolling' (Ar., Phryn.).
•ETYM Formation like ►κυλίνδω, κυλινδέω, which are close in meaning, but the nature of their relationship with ἀλινδέω is uncertain. One connects the latter with ►εἰλέω, ►ἴλλω, etc., comparing ϝάλη (cod. ὑάλη)· σκώληξ 'worm, larva' (H.). DELG assumes the root uel-* which, lengthened with -d-, is seen in OS wealtan, OHG walzan (Pok. 1140). Taillardat REA 58 (1956): 191[3] reconstructs a present ul-n-ed-mi* with anaptyictic -i-. The i-epenthesis is without parallel, and an old nasal present is improbable. The suffix -ind- is rather non-Indo-European; even in this case, however, the root could still be Indo-European. Yet Fur.: 130[59] compares καλινδέομαι 'id.' as a variant with initial k-; several words with variation k/ zero exist among the substrate words.

ἀλίνειν [v.] (cod. -νεῖν)· ἀλείφειν 'to anoint the skin with oil' (H.). ἀλῖναι· ἐπαλεῖψαι 'to smear over' (H.). ἰν-αλαλισμένα 'engraved' (Cyprus). καταλῖναι· καταλεῖψαι 'to pour down' (H.) is now confirmed by an inscr. from Selinous, see RPh. 69 (1995) 128, l. 16. ◄IE h₂lei(H)-* 'smear'► •DER Verbal noun ἄλινσις τοῦ ἐργαστηρίου (Epid.).
•ETYM ἀλίνω, which probably derives from < *ἀλιν-ι̯ω, is cognate with Lat. linō 'to smear, rub', which is originally an n-present; the root is h₂li-* > ἀλι-. One would like to reconstruct h₂li-n-H-*, but Lat. litus has short i (cf. the discussion in De Vaan 2008, as well as LIV² s.v. h₂lei̯H-*, with more forms). Probably the same root as in ►ἀλείφω.

ἄλινον [adj.] · ἀμυδρόν, Κρῆτες 'weak, faint' (Cret.)' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Cf. ἀλινεῖν = λεπτύνω 'to crush' (S. fr. 995).
•ETYM See Güntert IF 45 (1927): 345. DELG mentions the word s.v. ►ἀλέω.

ἄλιξ, -κος [m.] 'groats of rice-wheat' (Chrysipp. Tyan. apud Ath.), also a fish sauce, called hallēc in Latin (Dsc 4, 148). ◄LW?► •ETYM Walde 1910: 25 derived the word from ►ἀλέω; this is unconvincing. The formation is like ἕλιξ, χόλιξ (Chantraine 1933: 382f.). The nature of the connection with Lat. alica is unknown. A loanword from an unknown language.

ἅλιος, -α, -ον [adj.] 'fruitless, idle' (Hom.). ◄?►
•VAR Also [adv.] 'in vain'.
•DER ἁλιόω 'to prevent' (epic, S.).
•ETYM An old term, which was gradually replaced by μάταιος. The connection with ►ἠλίθιος, ►ἠλάσκω, and further to ►ἀλάομαι is correctly rejected by DELG; it does not explain the spiritus asper. There are no traces of ϝ-; cf. Sommer 1905: 98. Schwyzer: 461 points to the expression εἰς ὕδωρ γράφειν, suggesting the word belongs to ἅλς 'sea'. DELG supports this by remarking that the word is often used of βέλος, indicating an arrow that misses its target and falls into the sea – but why would it fall into the sea?

ἅλις [adv.] 'in crowds, enough' (Il.). ◄IE uel-* 'turn, wind'► •VAR The form γάλι· ἱκανόν 'sufficient' (H.) shows initial ϝ-.
•ETYM Connected with ►εἴλω 'to press', ►ἀλής, ►ἀολλής. It could be an old nominative, but the form γάλι rather suggests that the -s is an adverbial marker like in ἄνις, χωρίς (cf. Skt. bahíḥ).

ἀλίσβη [f.] · ἀπάτη 'deceit' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. The sequence -σβ- is hardly Indo-European.

ἀλισγέω [v.] 'to pollute' (LXX). ◄?►
•ETYM Ritual term of unknown origin. Fur.: 298 compares λιγνύς 'smoke, soot', which supposes a prothetic vowel and interchange σ/zero before velar (highly uncertain). Still, the group -σγ- often occurs in substrate words, see Pre-Greek 2a, 17.

ἁλίσκομαι [v.] 'to be caught' (Il.). ◄IE uelh₃-* 'seize, catch'► •VAR Homer only has the aor. ἁλῶναι; further fut. ἁλώσομαι, aor. ἑάλων < *ἠ-ϝαλω- (IA).
•DIAL Thess. ϝαλισσκē̄ται and Arc. ϝαλόντοις prove the initial ϝ-.

•DER ἅλωσις 'capture' (Pi.), ἁλώσιμος 'seizable, etc.'; ἅλωμα = ἀνάλωμα 'expenses' (Boeot. inscr.), cf. ἀναλίσκω. The gloss ἀλωνάκη· ἀνάλωμα. Χαλκιδεῖς (H.) is probably corrupt.
•ETYM The initial aspiration may have been taken from αἱρεῖν, ἑλεῖν. The aor. ἑάλων is from *ἠ-ϝᾱλων. ἁλίσκομαι has the suffix -ισκ-. A root *$uelh_3$- explains all the forms: the zero grade *ulh_3- gives *ϝλω- before a consonant (e.g. 1/2pl. aor.) and *ϝαλ- before a vowel (e.g. 3pl. aor.); contamination then gives *ϝαλω-. Perhaps it is better to assume a passive aorist with -η-: *ulh_3-eh_1- > *ϝαλω- like *$g^w ih_3$-eh_1- > βιω- (defended by Normier KZ 92 (1978): 132ff.; cf. Harðarson 1993a: 208); an objection could be that this form must be terribly old. Cognates are Lat. vellō 'to pluck, tear out', Hitt. u̯alḫ-^{zi} 'to strike', ToA wälläṣtär [3sg.pres.] 'to die' (see LIV² s.v. *$u̯elh_3$-), and perhaps also Go. wilwan 'to rob, plunder', Arm. gołanam 'to steal'. Cf. ►ἀναλίσκω and ►εἵλωτες.

ἅλισμα [n.] 'water-plantain, Alisma Plantago' (Dsc. 3, 152). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM The word does not contain ►ἅλς. See Strömberg 1940: 115.

ἀλίφαλος [?] · γένος δρυός 'species of tree' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Cf. ►ἀλίφλοιος. However, it seems less probable that ἀλίφαλος would be just a corruption of that word (Latte); rather, the word in -φλοιος is a secondary formation.

ἀλίφλοιος [m., f.] 'sea-bark oak, Quercus pseudosuber' (Thphr. HP 3, 8, 2). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Belongs with φλοιός 'bark', but hardly with ἅλις, as suggested by DELG. A different name for ►εὐθύφλοιος. See ►ἀλίφαλος.

ἄλιψ [adj.] · πέτρα 'rock' (H.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •ETYM Beside λίψ· πέτρα (H.), Fur.: 372, 378 also compares ἠλίβατος, which in Homer is always said of πέτρη. Quite possible, but not certain. If ►αἰγίλιψ also belongs here, its second element is certainly non-Indo-European, whereas its first part probably is.

ἀλκή 1 [f.] 'defense, help' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_2elk-, *h_2lek-s- 'ward off, defend'⊳ •VAR Aor. ἀλαλκεῖν (Hom.), late epic forms: fut. ἀλαλκήσω (A. R.), present ἀλάλκω (Q. S.).
•COMP As a second member, after the s-stems, in ἑτερ-αλκής 'helping one side' (epic poet.), etc. Old i-stem in ἄν-αλκις (epic), with ἀναλκείη (epic) after other nouns in -είη.
•DER TN Ἀλαλκομεναί (Boeotia), or is the resemblance fortuitous? Thence Ἀλαλκομενηΐς epithet of Athena 'from Ἀ.' (Il.; the interpretation 'protectress' is probably secondary).
A root noun only in ἄλκ-ι [dat.sg.] (Hom.).
Thence ἀλκήεις 'brave' (h. Hom., Pi.), Dor. ἀλκᾶς, enlarged ἀλκηστής (Opp.) after ἀλφηστής, ὠμηστής; ἀλκαῖος (E. Hel. 1152 [lyr.]).
The basis of ἄλκιμος (poet. since Hom.) is unclear (see Arbenz 1933: 13 and 31. The gloss ἀλκμαῖος· νεανίσκος 'boy' (H.) is probably a mistake for or a contamination with ἀκμαῖος 'in one's prime'.

ἄλκαρ [n.] 'defense' (epic, lyr.).
Agent noun: ἀλκτήρ, -ῆρος 'warden, protector' (Hom., Pi.), ἀλκτήριος 'curing' (Nonn.) and ἀλκτήριον [n.] 'medicine' (Nic.).
Also from ἀλκ-: ἀλκάθω [v.] 'to assist' (A., S. [acc. to gramm.]), cf. ἀμυνάθω; further ἀλκάζω [v.] 'to show strength' (EM), ἠλκάζοντο· ἠμύνοντο 'they warded off' (H.); thence ἀλκάσματα (S.).
PNs: Ἀλκμάν, -μέων (-μαίων, cf. Björck 1950: 111), -μήνη, etc.
•ETYM From the same root as ►ἀλέξω, with *$h_2(e)lk$- beside *h_2lek-s-.

ἄλκη 2 [f.] 'elk' (Paus.). ⊲IE? *h_1el- 'red, brown'⊳ •ETYM Like Lat. alcēs, alcē (Caesar), ἄλκη is a loan from Germanic: ON elgr < PGm. alʒí-, besides which a form PGm. álχ- with initial stress is supposed, from which alcēs and ἄλκη could be traced. West Germanic forms like OHG elahho, OE eolh presuppose the stem PGm. élχa(n)-*, which arose secondarily. Slavic forms like Ru. los' 'elk' presuppose PIE olḱi-*, and are compared with ON elgr. The root is connected with a great number of words for animals, e.g. ►ἔλαφος (s.v.; see Pok. 302), and it is assumed that the root indicated a color. I think that an IE word or root must be doubted; it may well be a loan from a non-Indo-European language.

ἀλκυών, -όνος [f.] 'kingfisher, Alcedo ispida' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳ •VAR Also ἁλκυών (after ἅλς).
•DER Thence ἀλκυονίς 'id.' (A. R.), ἀλκυονίδες (ἡμέραι) 'period of the wintersolstice, when the kingfisher nests' (Ar.), also called ἀλκυόνειοι (Arist.). ἀλκυδών (Hdn. Gr. 2, 285) is after other bird names in -δων (thence Lat. alcēdo).
•ETYM See Thompson 1895 s.v. Origin unknown; probably a loan from a non-IE language (cf. Fur.: 303[39] on substrate words in -ων.) For the suffix, cf. ►ἀλεκτρυών (Ruijgh Minos 9 (1968): 152f.).

ἀλλά [adv.] 'but, however' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_2el-io- 'other'⊳ •DIAL Cypr. αἶλα.
•ETYM The acc.pl. of ἄλλος, used as an adverb. Cf. MoHG übrigens, Lat. ceterum, etc.

ἀλλάβης [f.] 'Nile fish, Labeo Niloticus' (Str.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also ἀλάβης.
•ETYM From Eg. repi or lepi (Thompson 1947 s.v.). Fur.: 145 etc. connects ►ἔλλοψ (with a* realized as e before l^y*) and ἀλλοπίης, and concludes that it is a substrate word. The ἀλλάβης must not be an Egyptian fish.

ἀλλᾶς, -ᾶντος [m.] 'sausage, black pudding' (Hippon.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. Kretschmer Glotta 1 (1909): 323 compared ἄλλην· λάχανον. Ἰταλοί, καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἀρτυνθέντος περικόμματος, ἐξ οὗ ἀλλαντοπώλης (H.), and assumes *ἀλλᾱ-ϝεντ-. This would contain an Oscan word; cf. Lat. ālium 'garlic'. But Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 653 notes that origin in southern Italy is implausible for a word from Hipponax.

ἀλλάσσω, -άττω [v.] 'to change, alter' (Hom.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Aor. ἀλλάξαι.

•DER ἀλλαγή (cf. ἀλλαγῆναι) '(ex)change' (Att.); ἄλλαγμα 'exchange, price' (Hp., LXX), ἀλλαγμός 'id.' (Man.). ἄλλαξις 'exchange, trade' (Arist.), ἀλλάξιμα (pap., gloss.), scil. ἱμάτια, 'changes of raiment'. ἀλλακτικός 'pertaining to exchange' (Pl., Arist.), ἀλλάγδην 'alternating' (Hdn.). Note ἀλλάξ· ἐνηλλαγμένως 'exchanged' (H.), ἐπ-, παρ-, ἀμφ-αλλάξ (Hp., Th., S., X.).
•ETYM ἀλλάσσω is derived from ἄλλος, either through a stem in a velar (for which, compare ἀλλάξ and ἀλλαχοῦ, -χῆ [though direct connection is improbable]) or with a suffix -άσσω.

ἀλλήλους, -ων, -οις [adj.] 'each other' (Il.). ◄IE _*h$_2$el-io-_ 'other'► •ETYM From repeated ἄλλος, i.e. *αλλο-αλλο-, in which the color of the second initial vowel was restored. Cf. Lat. _alius alium_, Skt. _anyo'nyam_. On the single second -λ- see Schwyzer: 260.

ἄλλιξ, -ῖκος [f.] 'men's upper garment' (Euph.), = χλαμύς 'a short mantle', also = ἐμπόρπημα 'garment secured by a brooch' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM For the glosses (_EM_, Suid.), see DELG. Origin unknown. The word is supposed to be Thessalian. Lat. _alicula_ also belongs here.

ἀλλοδαπός [adj.] 'from another land, foreign' (Il.). ◄?► •ETYM Derived from ἄλλος; for the formation, see τηλεδαπός, παντοδαπός, ποδαπός, ἡμεδαπός. It has been explained as ἀλλοδ-απός, preserving the old neuter pronominal marker *-_d_ (Lat. _aliud_); the latter part would be the same as Lat. _-inquus_ < PIE *-_nk^{w}o-_ in _longinquus_, etc. Meillet _BSL_ 28 (1927-1928): 42ff. expresses doubt: -δαπός is an unknown suffix. Moreover, suffixes are not added to case forms like the neutral -_d_.

ἅλλομαι [v.] 'to jump, leap' (Il.). ◄IE _*sel-_ 'jump'► •VAR Hom. has an aor. ἆλτο, of unknown quantity, which could be an unaugmented Aeolic form (Schwyzer: 751^1).
•COMP προαλής (Hom.) 'sloping, rushing forward'
•DER ἅλμα 'jump' (Hom.), ἅλσις 'jumping' (Hp., Arist.); ἁλτήρ (Crates Com.), in sports, 'weights kept in the hands while jumping'.
•ETYM From _*hal-je/o-_. A yod-present is probably also found in Lat. _saliō_, which could perhaps derive from _*sl̥-i̯e/o-_ (LIV^2, who reconstruct a root _*sel-_). A root _*sal-_ is impossible, as PIE had no phoneme _a_, but De Vaan suggests a root _*sh$_2$l-_ in order to account for the Italo-Celtic reflexes like OIr. _saltraid_ 'to trample' < _*sal-tro-_. Also related to Skt. _ásarat_ [3sg.aor.] 'to run, rush' (Narten _MSS_ 26 (1969): 77ff.), ToB _salāte_ [med.pret.] 'jumped'; further forms in LIV^2 s.v. 1. _*sel-_. See ►πάλλομαι.

ἄλλος [adj.] 'other' (Il.). ◄IE _*h$_2$el-io-_ 'other'► •DIAL Cypr. αἶλος.
•COMP ἀλλοπρόσαλλος 'unreliable, fickle' from ἄλλο πρὸς ἄλλον λέγων, Bechtel 1914; ἀλλοφρονέω 'to give no heed, be senseless' with a special development of ἄλλο- (improbable Aeol. ἄλλος = ἠλεός, Bechtel 1914); ἀλλοφάσσω 'to be delirious' (Hp.) with an unclear second element. Cf. s.v. ►ἠλάσκω.

•DER Abstract ἀλλότης [f.] (comm. Arist.); ἀλλοῖος 'of another kind, different' (Hom., IA), an adjectival formation in -οῖος after τοῖος, ποῖος, οἷος; thence ἀλλοιότης 'being different' (Hp., Pl.) and ἀλλοιώδης 'of strange appearance' (Aret., Vett. Val.). Denominative verb ἀλλοιόω 'to change' (IA), ἀλλοίωσις 'change, difference' (Pl., Arist.), ἀλλοίωμα 'id.' (Damox.) and ἀλλοιωτικός (Arist., Gal.). On ►ἀλλάσσω, see s.v.
Several adverbs: ἄλλοθεν, ἀλλαχῇ, etc. On ►ἀλλοδαπός and ►ἀλλήλους, see s.v. From an adverb with -τρ- (cf. Skt. _anyá-tra_ 'elsewhere') comes ἀλλότριος 'alien, strange, belonging to someone else' (Il.). Thence ἀλλοτριότης (Pl., Arist.), ἀλλοτριόω [v.] (IA), whence ἀλλοτρίωσις (Th., Hell.).
•ETYM ἄλλος < _*h$_2$el-io-_ 'other', like in Lat. _alius_, Go. _aljis_, OIr. _aile_, ToB _alyek_, ToA _ālak_ (depalatalized) < _*h$_2$el-io-k-_, Arm. _ayl_. Beside _*h$_2$el-io-_, a similar adjective is reconstructed for IIr. _*Hania-_ > Skt. _anyá-_ 'other', etc., but this form is most probably due to contamination of _*h$_2$elio-_ with the comparative _*h$_2$entero-_.

ἄλμα [n.] '(sacred) grove' (Lyc. 319). ◄?►
•ETYM The word has the same meaning as ►ἄλσος. Is it from the root ἀλ- 'to feed' in ►ἀλδαίνω, etc.?

ἀλοάω 'to thresh'. ⇒ἀλωή.

ἀλόη [f.] 'bitter aloe, Aloe vera' (Dsc.). ◄LW Or.► •ETYM As for ►ἀγάλοχον, an Oriental loanword is suspected (Lewy 1895: 36).

ἄλοξ, -κος [f.] 'furrow' (trag., com.). ◄PG► •VAR Also αὖλαξ (Hes.), ὦλκα [acc.sg.], -ας [acc.pl.] (Hom.), Dor. ὦλαξ (_EM_ 625, 37), also in ὁμ-ώλακες (A. R. 2, 396). Further εὐλάκᾱ 'plough', with Lacon. εὐλαξεῖν [inf.fut.] (Orac. _apud_ Th. 5, 16); αὐλάχα· ἡ ὕννις 'plowshare' (H.) and *ὄλοκες (cod. ὀλοκεύς)· αὔλακες 'furrows' (H.).
•DER ἀλοκίζω [v.] 'to draw furrows, plough' (Ar., Lyc.); αὐλακίζω 'id.' (pap.), verbal noun αὐλακισμός (pap.). Rare and late αὐλακόεις (Max.), αὐλακώδης (Eust.), diminutive αὐλάκιον (schol.).
•ETYM The exact relation between this cluster of forms has always been unclear. Solmsen 1901: 258ff. explained ὦλκα as from *ἄϝολκα (κατὰ ὦλκα N 707 for original *κατ' ἄϝολκα), but it is strange that there are no further traces of this form. The zero grade of *ἀϝολκ- would then give *ἀϝλακ-, seen in αὖλαξ. In laryngealistic terms, a root _*h$_2$uelk-_ has been supposed in Lith. _velkù_, OCS _vlěkǫ_, Av. _varək-_ 'to draw'. This is tempting, but cannot be correct. If the Balto-Slavic words are isolated (there is further only Av. _vərəc-_), the verb may be non-IE. Moreover, for Balto-Slavic and Iranian we would rather reconstruct _*uelk^w-_ with a labiovelar, which is impossible for Greek. Furthermore, there is no trace of the verbal root in Greek, which has ἕλκω 'to draw' < _*selk-_.
Pisani _IF_ 53 (1935): 29 derived αὖλαξ from αὐλός and separated it from ἄλοξ, etc., which is improbable. The variants are strongly reminiscent of substrate words, as Beekes 1969: 40 maintained (withdrawn ibid. 275-7). Variation of prothetic ε/ α/ ο/ αυ/ ευ, and also that of κ and χ (αὐλάχα), are what one often finds in substrate words, so Pre-Greek origin is most probable. The Homeric form is the only one without a vowel between λ and κ, and therefore it is suspect. If we assume labialized phonemes like /l^w/ for Pre-Greek, a reconstruction $al^w ak$- can explain all the different variants: αὖλαξ (by anticipation of the labial feature), which gives ὦλαξ by contraction; ἄλοξ (coloring of the second vowel by the labialized liquid), ὀλοκ- (influence on both vowels; I see no reason not to take the gloss seriously). Cf. ►ἀρασχάδες, etc. The interchange of initial α/ ε (which gave εὐλακ-) is difficult to understand phonetically, but it may be related to plain α/ ε.

ἁλοσύδνη [adj.] epithet of Thetis (Υ 207), of the Nereids (A. R. 4, 1599), name of a sea goddess (δ 404). Mg. unknown. ◄IE? seh_2-l- 'salt', ud-n- 'water', PG?► •DIAL Myc. a_2-ro̦[ ]u̦-do-pi has been interpreted as /halos hudo(t)p^hi/.
•ETYM Connected with ►ἅλς and ►ὕδωρ as "wave of the sea". The glosses ὕδναι· ἔγγονοι, σύντροφοι 'born inside, raised together with (?)' and ὕδνης· εἰδώς, ἔμπειρος 'knowing, experienced' (H.) may have been extracted from ἁλοσύδνη. The relevance of the Myc. words is unclear; cf. DELG. Since the meaning is not very clear, and the structure aCVC-udn- is typically Pre-Greek, we may doubt the traditional interpretation. Chantraine's Καλυδών, -ύδνα (which is typically Pre-Greek) is an example; cf. Καλυκαδνος. Schwyzer: 475, 5 wonders if the nom. was -υδνα, in which case Pre-Greek origin would be even more probable.

ἄλοχος ⇒ λέχεται.

ἄλπνιστος [adj.] see below (Pi. I. 5 (4), 12). ◄?►
•VAR ἔπαλπνος 'amiable' (Pi. P. 8, 84) = ἡδύς, προσηνής 'sweet, gentle' (sch.); ἀλπαλέον· ἀγαπητόν 'amiable' (H.), from which perhaps ἁρπαλέος, by influence of ἁρπάζω; the gloss ἁπάλιμα· ἁρπακτά, προσφιλῆ 'robbed, beloved' shows the double mg.; cf. also ἁρπαλίζομαι· ἀσμένως δέχομαι 'to accept gladly' (H.). Here also the PN Ἀλπονίδης (inscr. Karthaia), see Bechtel 1917a: 5f., from Ἄλπων.
•DIAL Uncertain ἄλπαρ (inscr. Crete).
•ETYM Wackernagel KZ 43 (1910): 377 reads *ἄλπιστος for ἄλπνιστος: a primary superlative formation, which could be attested as a PN in A. Pers. 982 (but the text is uncertain). The assumption of an old r/n-stem, to which the Cretan form would point, is unnecessary. It is doubtful to interpret ἀλπ- as *ϝαλπ-, a zero grade of *ϝελπ- in ►ἔλπομαι, ►ἐλπίς (for wouldn't one expect *ϝλαπ-?).

ἅλς, ἁλός [m.] 'salt' (Il.), very often plur. ◄IE seh_2-l- 'salt'► •VAR As fem. (only sg.) a poetical word for the sea (after θάλασσα, or as a collective?). Since Arist. also ἅλας, -ατος [n.] from the acc.pl., see Leumann 1950: 160f.
•DIAL Myc. o-pi-a_2-ra /opi-hala/ 'coastal regions' cf. ►ἔφαλος; a-pi-a_2-ro /Amp^{h}ihalos/, a_2-ri-e perhaps /haliēn/, see Perpillou 1973: 61², 161.
•COMP ἁλί-πλοος, -πόρφυρος (for ἁλ- after the i-stems, not locatival with Schwyzer: 476 : 5, 1. On ἁλι-μυρήεις see μύρομαι. On ἁλουργός 'who exploits a salt mine' see DELG Supp.

•DER 1. ἅλμη 'seawater, brine' (Od.), whence ἁλμαία 'id.' (Ar., Nic.), ἁλμάς (ἐλαία) 'pickled olive' (com.), ἁλμυρός 'salty, bitter' (Od.), which would stand for *ἁλυρός (Schwyzer: 482: 6); thence ἁλμυρώδης, ἁλμυρότης and verbs ἁλμυρίζω, ἁλμυρόω, further ἁλμυρίς [f.] 'brackish soil, salty liquid', cf. πλημυρίς and ἁλιμυρήεις (see ►μύρομαι); from ἅλμη also ἁλμήεις (A.) and ἁλμεύω 'to pickle' (Dsc.), whence ἅλμευσις, ἁλμευτής.
2. ἅλιος, (-α), -ον 'of the sea' (epic poet.), ἁλιάς [f.] 'fishing boat' (Arist., D. S.). 3. ἁλία [f.] 'salt tub' (com., Hell.). 4. ἅλινος 'consisting of salt' (Hdt., Str.). 5. ἅλιμος 'of the sea' (Trag. Adesp., LXX), ἅλιμον plant name, cf. Strömberg 1940: 97, 114. 6. ἁλίτης 'salty, of the sea'. 7. ἁλίζω 'to salt' (Arist.), ἁλισμός (Sor.), but not ἄλισμα 'Alisma plantago' (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 115, which is unexplained. 8. After ἅλιος, ἅλινος and ἁλι- as a first member for ἁλ-: ἁλιεύς 'fisherman' (Od.), ἁλιεύω [v.] 'to fish' (LXX, NT, Plu.), -εύομαι (also com.), ἁλιευτικός 'belonging to fish(ermen)' (Pl., X., Hell.); from ἁλιεύω: ἁλιευτής 'fisherman' (Cerc.), from ἁλιεύς or ἁλιεύω: ἁλιεία 'fishery' (Arist., Str.), from ἁλιεύω: ἁλίευμα 'id.' (Str.). 9. ἁλι-άδης 'sailor' (S. [lyr.]). 10. ἁλιαρός 'salty' (Eust.). 11. ἁλυκός 'salty' (Hp., Arist.), ἁλυκότης (Arist.), ἁλυκίς [f.] 'salt mine' (Str.), ἁλυκώδης (Hp.; also in Thphr. HP 9, 11, 2 instead of codd. ἁλικώδης), ἁλυκεία 'pickling' (Ptol.). 12. From the neuter τὸ ἅλας, late formations like ἁλάτιον (diminutive), ἁλάτινος, ἁλατίζω and ἁλατικόν 'salarium' (gloss.) are derived.
•ETYM Old word found in most IE languages: Lat. sāl, OIr. salann, Arm. aɫ, Latv. sā̀ls, OCS solь 'salt', as well as OCS slanъ 'salted' < solnъ), ToB salyiye, ToA sāle. An enlargement in -d is found in Germanic (Go. salt), Arm. aɫt, and Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. sald-ùs 'sweet', OCS sladъ-kъ 'id.'. Lith. sólymas is an important form, since it points to seh_2l-, while other languages require sh_2-el. This points to an original paradigm of nom. seh_2-(ō)l, acc. sh_2-el-m, gen. sh_2-l-os. On possible Sanskrit cognates, see Thieme ZDMG 111 (1961): 94ff. ►ἁλοσύδνη.

ἄλσος [n.] 'sacred grove' (Il.). ◄PG?(V)►
•DER ἀλσώδης 'belonging to the grove' (E. [lyr.], Thphr.), ἀλσηΐδες νύμφαι (A. R.), after Νηρηΐδες, etc.; ἄλσωμα and ἀλσών = ἄλσος (Aq.). Further ἀλσίνη a plant (Dsc.), see André 1985, and cf. CEG 6.
•ETYM Ἄλτις [f.], the name of the temple domain in Olympia, would be identical with ἄλσος (see Paus. 5, 10, 1); on this basis one reconstructs ἄλσος as altịos. Fur.: 249, 253 accepts the equation, but interprets it in the context of other instances of an interchange of dental and sibilant in substrate words (ἄννηθον/ ἄνησον). Van Windekens KZ 100 (1987): 308f. connects it with Hitt. alš- 'owe fealty, give allegiance', which is hardly convincing. See ►ἄλμα.

ἄλυζα [f.] · ἄλυπον 'herb terrible, Globularia alypum' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM The hypothesis of von Blumenthal 1930: 34 (from *ἀ-λυγ-ι̯α to λυγρός, λευγαλέος) is doubtful.

ἀλυκ(ρ)όν ⇒ θαλυκρός.

ἀλυκτοπέδη [f.] 'bond' (Hes., A. R., etc.). ◄?►

•ETYM Designation of a shackle. For the formation, we may compare ἱστοπέδη (Od.); see Risch IF 59 (1949): 26. Schulze KZ 28 (1887): 280 connects the first element with Skt. ruj- 'to break', which Risch doubts. The latter assumes the contamination of ἄλυτος and ἄρρηκτος (πέδας ... ἀρρήκτους ἀλύτους N 36f.) under the influence of ἀλύσκω (see on ►ἀλύω). All of this remains highly uncertain.

ἄλυσις [f.] 'chain', also as a woman's ornament (Hdt.). ◄IE uel-* 'wind'► •DER Thence Hell. diminutives ἁλύσιον and ἁλυσίδιον, further ἁλυσιδωτός 'consisting of chains' (Plb., D. S.), ἁλυσηδόν 'in chains' (Man.).
•ETYM Originally 'winding', derived from *ϝάλυ-τις, belonging to *ϝέλυτρον, ►εἰλύω, etc.; see Frisk Eranos 43 (1945): 225ff. However, the α-vocalism remains unexplained, as the root contained no final laryngeal. For the aspiration, cf. ►ἕλιξ.

ἄλυσσον [n.] name of a plant (Dsc.). ◄GR?►
•ETYM With privative α from λύσσα 'rage', because of the curing effect of the seeds (Dsc. 3, 91). Cf. Strömberg 1940: 91.

ἀλύτας [m.] = ῥαβδοφόρος ἢ μαστιγοφόρος (EM 72, 15), policemen in Elis (inscr.). ◄EUR► •COMP ἀλυτάρχης 'commander of the ἀλύται' (inscr., Luc.).
•DER Denominative ἀλυτᾶται (cod. ἀλύταται)· παρατηρεῖ 'observes' (H.).
•ETYM Explained as *ϝαλυ-τᾶς 'staff-bearer' with Go. walus 'staff', ON vǫlr 'id.'; see Bechtel 1921, 2: 863. The Greek word is hardly inherited, in which case it would have to be from ulHu-*. A direct loan from Germanic is improbable, so there may have been a third intermediary source. Krahe Glotta 22 (1954): 123f. supposed an Illyrian origin, but the word may also be non-IE (words with this meaning are very frequently borrowed).

ἀλύω [v.] 'to be distraught, be beside oneself', from pain, anguish, etc. (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR only present, except ἀλαλύσθαι· φοβεῖσθαι, ἀλύειν 'put to flight, scare; be excited' (H.).
•DER Medical terms ἀλυσμός, whence ἀλυσμώδης, ἄλυσις, ἀλύκη 'fear, agitation', see ►ἀλάλυγξ. Backformation ἄλυς 'id.' (Hp.); with -κ-: ἀλύκη 'distress, anguish'; see also ►ἀλάλυγξ.
Verbs: ἀλύσκω (on ἀλυσκάζω and ἀλυσκάνω see ►ἀλέα 2), ἀλύσσω, fut. ἀλύξω = ἀλύω (Hom.), perhaps all from an enlarged stem ἀλυκ-, which is also found in ἀλυκτέω, perf. ἀλαλύκτημαι 'to be afraid' (Hom.), ἀλυκτάζω 'to be afraid, wander' (B., Hdt.), cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀλύω. Further ἀλυστάζω, ἀλυσταίνω (H., EM), cf. perhaps ἀλυσθένεια· ἀσθένεια (EM 70, 45); also ἀλυσθμαίνω 'to be weak' (Call.), ἀλυδμαίνειν· ἀλύειν, ἀπορεῖν 'to be beside oneself' (H.).
•ETYM ἀλύω is considered to be a derivation in -u- from the root ἀλ- in ►ἀλάομαι, and / or from ἀλέομαι. This remains just a guess. Puhvel's connection with Hitt. alu̯anz- 'bewitched' is doubtful (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).

ἄλφα [n.] name of the first letter of the alphabet (Pl.). ◄LW Sem.►
•COMP Collocation ἀλφάβητος [m., f.]; also [n.pl.]? (Irenaeus of Lyon), see Schwyzer KZ 58 (1931): 199ff.

•ETYM From Hebr. 'aleph (see Schwyzer: 140 γ and Schwyzer KZ 58 (1931): 177-183). For the final vowel, cf. βῆτα, from Hebr. bêth. See Einarson Class. Phil. 62 (1967): 1-24 and 262f.

ἀλφάνω [v.] 'to earn, gain' (E.). ◄IE *h_2elg^{wh}- 'earn'► •VAR ἀλφαίνω (H., EM); Aor. ἀλφεῖν (Hom.).
•COMP ἀλφεσίβοιος of girls, 'bringing in (many) oxen'; type τερψίμβροτος, with shortening for *ἀλφησι- as in ἑλκεσίπεπλος.
•DER ἀλφή 'produce, gain' (Lyc.).
•ETYM A counterpart to the thematic aorist ἀλφεῖν is found in the Indo-Iranian present Skt. árhati 'to earn', YAv. arəjaiti 'is worth' < *h_2elg^{wh}-. Further, ἀλφή formally corresponds with Lith. algà 'wages', but they are probably independent formations. From Hittite, one adduces ḫalkuēššar 'supplies for a festival'. The Greek aor. is from the zero grade *h_2lg^{wh}- with Rix's Law. On ἀλφαίνω = ἀμείβω in Aetius, see Benveniste L'année sociologique 5 (1951): 19-20.

ἀλφηστής, -ου [m.] 'grain-eating', in the epic expression ἀνέρες ἀλφησταί (Od.). ◄GR► •DIAL Also a fish name in Dor. ἀλφηστᾱ́ς 'Labrus cinaedus' (Epich.); also called κίναιδος, cf. Strömberg 1943: 56; also Thompson 1947.
•ETYM Clearly from ἄλφι, in opposition to ὠμηστής, plus *h_1ed- 'eat', in the expression ἀνέρες ἀλφησταί. In antiquity, the word was strangely enough not understood; cf. the strange gloss ἀλφηστῆσι· τοῖς εὑρετικοῖς καὶ συνετοῖς 'intelligent' (H.). The -ι- was lost for metrical reasons; see Fraenkel 1910: 38.

ἄλφι [n.] 'barley-groats' (h. Cer. 208). ◄IE? *h_2elb^hi 'barley'► •VAR Plur. ἄλφιτα (Il.), from which the sing. ἄλφιτον, in Hom. only in ἀλφίτου ἀκτή.
•DER ἀλφιτηρός (Antiph., Herod.), ἀλφιτεύς 'miller' (Hyp.), ἀλφιτεύω 'to grind barley' (Hippon.), ἀλφιτεία (Hyp., Poll.) and ἀλφιτεῖον (Poll., AB). Further ἀλφιτισμός 'mixing with barley groats' (inscr. Delos) as if from *ἀλφιτίζειν; ἀλφιτηδόν (Dsc.).
•ETYM One previously assumed an i/n-stem ἄλφι, plur. *ἄλφατα, as in Skt. ásthi, gen. asthnás 'bone', on the basis of ἀλίφατα· ἄλφιτα ἢ ἄλευρα (H.). But i/n-stems are doubtful, and ἀλίφατα has been read as *ἀλήφατα (Latte); cf. DELG, which compares ἀλήφατον ἄνθος ἐλαίης (Peek 1897); the form would have been derived from ἀλέω 'to grind'.
ἄλφι may be identical with Alb. elb, -i 'barley' from *alb^hi; see Demiraj 1997. Further origin is uncertain; perhaps the word is from PIE *$h_2(e)lb^h$-i. Also related is Turc. arpa 'barley', which is perhaps from an Iranian form arbi*; see Vasmer 1921: 16ff. See Mallory & Adams 1997: 51 for Iranian forms.
On the meaning, see Moritz Class. Quart. 43 (1949): 113ff., who connected ἄλφι with ἀλφάνω, but this is judged improbable by DELG. Connection with ►ἀλφός 'leprosy' and Lat. albus 'white' (cf. λεύκ' ἄλφιτα Σ 560) is rejected by Demiraj 1997.

ἀλφός [m.] 'dull-white leprosy' (Hes.). ◄IE *h_2elb^ho- 'white'►

•DER ἀλφώδης 'leprous' (Gal.). As an adjective ἀλφούς· λευκούς 'white' (H.), ἀλωφούς· λευκούς 'id.' (see below). Thence ἀλφινία· ἡ λεύκη. Περραιβοί (H.).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. albus and U alfu 'alba'. Extended forms with PIE *d may be found in the word for 'swan', e.g. OHG albiz, OCS lebedь, but this could also be a European substrate word. The main comparanda are geographical names, especially river-names like Ἀλφειός, Lat. Albula; Lat. Albis = MoHG Elbe; also ON elfr 'river'. On the river names, see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 4 (1953): 40ff. Most of these names, however, are probably of non-IE origin.
The word plays a role in discussions about the existence of PIE *a, since Hittite has alpa- 'cloud'. However, if this is related, it could easily represent thematic *h$_2$olb^{h}o-. IE *b^h is frequent in color terms (e.g. ἄργυφος).
The form ἀλωφός (H.) was compared with Arm. aławni 'pigeon' < IE *alH-b^h-n-, but now there is a different explanation of the word: *pl̥h$_2$-b^h-ni- (see Klingenschmitt 1982: 68[11]). The relation between ἀλφός and ἀλωφός cannot be explained in Indo-European terms; perhaps ἀλωφός is a simple mistake due to misreading of φ as ω?

ἀλωή [f.] 'threshing floor, garden' (Il.), also 'halo' (around sun and moon) (Arat.); also 'disk' of the sun or moon, or of a shield. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also ἅλως, gen. -ω, -ωος or -ωνος; recent ἅλων.
•DIAL Cypr. ἄλουα· κῆποι 'gardens' (H.), probably ntr. plur.; Cypr. gen. alawo, = ἀλϝω? Dor. αλος in Sicily is probably from *alwo-.
•COMP μητρ-αλοίᾱς 'matricide' (A.); Schwyzer 451 : 4.
•DER ἀλωεύς 'farmer' (A. R., Arat.), also PN in Hom.; ἀλωεινός (AP) and ἀλώϊος (Nic.) 'of the threshing floor', Ἀλωιάς epithet of Δηώ (Nonn.). ἀλωνία '(grain on the) threshing floor' (pap., Ath.), diminutive ἀλώνιον (Gp., Hdn.); ἀλωνικός (pap., Ed. Diocl.). Denominative verbs ἀλωνεύομαι (App.), ἀλωνίζω (H.) 'to work at the threshing floor'; further ἀλοάω, ἀλοιάω (Il.) 'to thresh, crush', epic -οι- stands for original length; as a second member in πατρ-αλοίας etc. (Att. and late), see Schwyzer: 451 : 4. Thence ἀλοησμός 'threshing', ἀλοητής 'thresher', ἀλόητρα [pl.] 'wages for threshing', all known from papyri. Auch ἀλοιητήρ 'thresher' (Nonnos, AP), ἀλο(ί)ησις (EM, gloss.).
•ETYM Perhaps from earlier *ἀλωϝη. ἅλως and the Cypr. forms might derive from a hysterodynamic noun of the type πάτρως, with nom. *-ōu-s, acc. -ou-m̥, gen. -u-os; see Beekes Mnem. 24 (1972): 350-2. If MoSw. lō 'threshing floor' is cognate, we might also reconstruct a root *h$_2$(e)l-. The explanation by Schwyzer: 479: 7 (from PIE u̯el(u)- 'to wind', original meaning 'round') must be rejected, as it does not explain the Cyprian forms without initial w-, nor the meaning 'garden'. Semantically, we probably have to think of a small piece of land near the farm, used for growing fruits and vegetables (garden) and for threshing. From threshing-floor, we can understand the development to 'disk' and then to 'halo'; see Ure Class. Quart. 49 (1955): 225-230. The conjecture of Van Windekens KZ 100 (1987): 309f. is to be rejected.

ἀλώπηξ, -εκος [f.] 'fox' (Archil.). ⊲IE *h$_2$lop- 'fox'⊳ •VAR On the gender see DELG. A shortened form is ἀλωπά (Alc.), ἀλωπός (Hdn.); on its origin see Sommer 1948: 5. Denominative ἀλωπεύει· ἀνιχνεύει 'tracks' (H.).

•DER Diminutive ἀλωπέκιον (Ar.); ἀλωπεκέη, -ῆ 'fox-skin' (Hdt.); ἀλωπεκία a disease of the skin (Arist.); also ἀλωπεκίασις (Gal.) in the same meaning; ἀλωπεκίας [m.] 'branded with a fox' (Luc.); ἀλωπεκίς f. = κυναλώπηξ (X.), also 'head-gear of fox-skin' (X.) and 'kind of vine' (Plin.), see details in Strömberg 1940: 139; ἀλωπεκιδεύς [m.] 'young fox' (Ar.); ἀλωπέκειος [adj.] (Gal.), ἀλωπεκώδης (H., EM). Denominative ἀλωπεκίζω [v.] 'to behave like a fox', i.e. 'to be cunning'.
•ETYM ἀλώπηξ may correspond to Arm. ałuēs, gen. -esu 'fox'. Cf. further Lith. lãpė and Latv. lapsa. Schrijver JIES 26 (1998): 421-434 connects it with the Celtic words like W llywarn, etc., which he derives from *lop-erno-, and reconstructs *h$_2$lop-. The Greek long ō is explained from an old nom. *h$_2$lōp-s. (Skt. lopāśá- 'jackal' and MP rōpās 'fox' have an original diphthong in the root and cannot be connected; Lat. volpes 'fox', Lith. vilpišỹs 'wild cat' should also be kept apart; Schrijver starts from a root *ulp-).
The inflection ἀλώπηξ, -εκος is unique in Greek. There is no support for the paradigm -ōk-s, -ek-os assumed by Rix 1976: 143. In the Armenian form, the ē presents difficulties and is probably secondary, the word rather showing old short e; see Clackson 1994: 95.
De Vaan IIJ 43 (2000): 279-293, disassociates the suffix from the Indo-Ir. one (as above the words were disassociated) and doubts that Skt. -āśa- etc. are of IE origin. He follows Chantraine 1933: 376 in assuming that the Greek (and Armenian) suffix -ek- was taken from a non-IE language; Greek would have lengthened the vowel in the nominative. But this does not explain the Greek ablaut: one would expect that the long vowel had been introduced everywhere. Rather, the suffixes are IE, and the long vowel of Sanskrit and the short one of Armenian confirm the Greek ablaut as archaic. See also Blažek Linguistica Baltica 7 (1998): 25-31.

ἅμα [prep., adv.] 'at the same time (with), together (with)' (Il.). ⊲IE *sem- 'one'⊳ •DIAL Dor. ἁμᾶ, originally instrumental, see Schwyzer: 550. ἁμεῖ [loc.] (Delphi). ἁμάκις· ἅπαξ, Κρῆτες 'once (Cret.)' (H.); Tarent. ἁμάτις 'together' (H.).
•COMP ἁμαμηλίς plant growing at the same time as the apple tree, 'medlar', = ἐπιμηλίς.
•DER ἄμυδις (Aeol.) 'together'.
•ETYM Probably the zero grade of the root *sem-, *som- in ► εἷς, ► ὁμός: perhaps from *sm̥h$_2$- (see ► ὁμός). For the adverbial ending -α, see Schwyzer: 622 : 8; on κάρτα, Ruijgh 1980: 189ff. See ► ἀμάομαι 2, ► ἅμαξα.

ἀμάδρυα ⇒ μάδρυα.

ἄμαθος [f.] 'sand' (Il.). ⊲EUR⊳
•DER ἀμαθῖτις [f.] 'living in the sand' (Epich.), of κόγχος; also TN (J.); ἀμαθώδης 'sandy' (Str.); TNs Ἠμαθίη (Il.), Ἀμαθοῦς (Cyprus) < *-οϝεντ-, cf. ἠμαθόεις 'sandy' (Od.). Denominative verb ἀμαθύνω 'to turn into dust, etc.' (epic poet.).
•ETYM It is mostly assumed that ψάμαθος was created from ἄμαθος on the model of ψάμμος, and that ἄμμος was secondarily created to ψάμμος. Beekes 2000: 26 finds these assumptions far from convincing, as they depend on the etymology of ψάμμος. ἄμαθος has been connected with MHG sampt, and a pre-form PIE *samәd^{h}o- was reconstructed. But DELG already warned that the connection does not guarantee IE origin. Kuiper NOWELE 25 (1995): 67 favors European substrate origin because of the a-vocalism and the varying consonantism. On possible Albanian connections, see Çabej 1969: 174f. See ►ἄμμος, ►ψάμαθος, ►ψάμμος.

ἀμαιμάκετος, (-η), -ον [adj.] Homeric epithet of unknown mg. (Il.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. Connections with μακρός, μαιμάω, μάχομαι should probably all be rejected; see discussion in Tichy 1983: 314ff. One might conceive of a Pre-Greek word, a-mai-mak-eto-* (with prothetic vowel and reduplication).

ἀμακρῶτις ⇒ μόκρων.

ἀμαλδύνω [v.] 'to destroy, weaken' (Il.). ◁?▷ •ETYM One assumes that the verb is a denominative from an otherwise unknown pre-form *ἀμαλδύς. The first question is whether the word has the same root as ►βλαδεῖς. The ἀ- must then have been added after the privative formations (which always express some lack), but this is not very probable; influence of ἀμαλός is not very likely either. Connection with μέλδομαι 'to smelt' is not compelling because of the meaning. However, it has a variant ἀμέλδειν, which shows the same problem as in ἀμαλδύνω / βλαδύς, and in this case we are certain of cognate forms with s-, viz. OHG smelzan. Does this point to an old interchange of *h_2*m-*/ sm-? The question has not yet been solved. μαλθακός, μαλακός, ἀμαλός and ἀμβλύς differ too much to be useful. βλέννα and μύλη do not belong here.

ἄμαλλα [f.] 'sheaf' (Soph.). ◁PG?▷
•COMP ἀμαλλοδετήρ 'binder of sheaves' (Il.).
•DER ἀμαλλεύω 'to bind sheaves' (EM) and ἀμαλλεῖον (ἀμάλλιον) (Call. Com., H., Eust.).
•ETYM Considered to be a derivation in -ι̯α from an older l-stem, eventually from the verb ►ἀμάομαι 'to gather'. However, if ἀμάομαι is used primarily for drawing liquids, it can hardly be connected with ἄμαλλα. One might also think of ►ἀμάω 1 'to reap corn'. Words in -λλα may well be Pre-Greek. See ►ἄμη.

ἀμαλογία [f.] see below (v.l. for ὁμο- Alciphr. 4, 18, 10). ◁?▷
•VAR = ἀβδηριτισμός 'foolery', garrulitas (gloss.); ἀμαλόγος· φλύαρος 'id.', garrulus (gloss.).
•ETYM According to Latte Glotta 32 (1953): 37f., it is haplological for *ἀμαλλολογία, which properly meant 'collecting sheaves', then 'the accompanying song' > 'bragging'. This is rightly called "sehr hypothetisch" by Frisk. Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 40 assumed *ἀμαλο-λογία.

ἀμαλός [adj.] 'weak, soft' (epic poet.), said of young animals and men (Il.). ◁PG?▷
•DER Perhaps here ἀμαλ[λ]οῖ· ἀφανίζει 'makes invisible' (H.) and ἀμαλάπτω (S.), which would equal ἀμαλδύνω 'to soften' (H.), after ►βλάπτω, ►δάπτω, see Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 212.
•ETYM Uncertain. Mostly connected with ►ἀμαλδύνω, but this is just a guess. One further connects ἀμβλύς < *ἀμλύς, but this, too, is doubtful. Fur.: 224 connects it with ►ἁπαλός, with the Pre-Greek interchange labial / μ. This is possible, but remains uncertain.

ἀμάμαξυς, -υος [f.] 'vine trained on two poles' (Epich., Sapph.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also gen. -υδος (Sapph.). Acc. to H. = ἄμπελος ἢ γένος σταφυλῆς 'grape-vine or kind of grape-bunch'; σταφυλῆς γένος, οἱ δὲ τὴν ἀναδενδράδα οὕτω καλεῖσθαι 'kind of grape-bunch, thus a vine that grows up trees' (Suid.).
•ETYM Fur.: 212 compares ἀμαξίς· γένος σταφυλῆς ἀπὸ ἀναδενδράδος (H.), which must be correct. It is a typical substrate word, showing reduplication. Furnée's further connection with βῆκα· ἀναδενδράς (H.) is very doubtful; better, though still doubtful, is the comparison with Hitt. māḫla- 'grape-vine' (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). Cf. also Kuiper 1956: 215[15].

ἀμαμηλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'a tree or bush with edible fruits', probably 'medlar, Mespilus germanica' (Hp.). ◁GR▷ •ETYM Description in Ath. 14, 650 c-e; the speakers are uncertain about the plant, and also about the name: we also find ὁμομηλίς 'which resembles the μ.', and ἐπιμηλίς. It should probably be analyzed as 'which blossoms at the same time as the apple tree'. See Strömberg 1944: 32.

ἀμάναν [f.] · ἄμαξαν 'chassis, wagon' (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 34 assumes a loan from an unknown IE language, from sm̥-aks-nā* (cf. ►ἄμαξα); this is highly uncertain. We may compare ►ἀπήνη 'id.' (s.v., cf. also ►καπάνα), with Kuiper 1956: 213 and Fur.: 224. A variation π/ μ is well-known in substrate words. Latte's suggestion of a corruption is therefore gratuitous.

ἀμάνδαλον [adj.] = ἀφανές παρ' Ἀλκαίῳ 'unseen (Alcaeus)' (Hdn.; Et. Gen. A p. 20 Reitzenstein; EM 76, 52). ◁?▷
•DER ἀμανδαλοῖ· ἀφανίζει, βλάπτει 'makes unseen, damages' (H.).
•ETYM Acc. to Hdn. it belongs to ἀμαλδύνω; is it then dissimilated from *ἀμάλδαλος (Schwyzer: 258)? This is doubtful.

ἀμᾱνῖται [m.pl.] 'kind of mushroom' (Nic.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Perhaps derived from a place name, e.g. the mountain Ἄμανος in Asia Minor, but it occurs frequently (Koukoules Ep. Et. Byz. 17 (1948): 75; Chantraine RPh. 91 (1965): 201-3). For the suffix, cf. ἀκονῖτον, βωλίτης. The gloss ἀμάνορες· δοθιῆνες 'small abscess, boil' (H.) may be unrelated.

ἀμάνορες ⇒ ἀμανῖται.

ἅμαξα [f.] 'framework, chassis of a four-wheeled wagon; wagon' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷ •COMP ἁμαξιτός 'practicable for a wagon' (ὁδός, Pi.), mostly substantivized [f.] 'carriage-road' (Il.), from ἰέναι 'to go' and a suffix -το-.
•ETYM Usually derived from ἅμα and ἀξ- (in ►ἄξων) with a suffix -ι̯α, e.g. Adrados Emerita 17: 146f. However, the interpretation as 'one-axler' (Meringer KZ 40 (1907): 217ff.) does not fit the ἅμαξα; one would rather expect 'two-axler' (cf. ►δίφρος). It hardly belongs to ToB amäkṣpänta 'wagon-master' (for which, Adams 1999: 19 reconstructs unclear IE *h_2*em-*), unless as a loan from Greek. Also improbable is Adams KZ 97 (1984): 230-232 ('containing axles'). Finally, Forssman 1966: 8-11 argues that the aspiration is late, which suggests that the word does not contain ἅμα.

Fur.: 221 compares ἀβακλή· ἄμαξα (Cyr.), i.e. the interchange ἀμακ-/ ἀβακ-, from which we must conclude that the etymon is Pre-Greek. Note that Bănăţeanu REIE 3 (1943): 136f. already assumed an Anatolian origin.

ἀμάομαι [v.] 'to draw (milk), gather' (Od.). ◄?►
•VAR The act. ἀμάω occurs late only.
•COMP In compounds with ἐπ-, κατ-, etc.
•DER ἄμη 'shovel' (Ar.), 'hod' (inscr.), 'water-bucket, pail' (Plu.; Lat. hama, Cato), 'spade' (Gp.); probably derived from the verb, not the other way around; from here ἀμίς f. 'chamber-pot' (Hp.).
•ETYM Mostly connected with ἄμη, but even this seems not quite certain (Schulze 1892: 365[3] and Solmsen 1909: 195 separate them). As the basic meaning of the verb and of ἄμη are unclear, the etymology is uncertain. It has further been connected with ►ἀμνίον and ►ἄντλος; a relationship with ►ἅμαλλα has also been suggested; all are uncertain. Cf. Bechtel 1914 and Solmsen 1909: 180ff. Originally, the meaning was no doubt quite specific, so the verb should not be connected with ►ἅμα. Connection with Skt. ámatra- [n.] 'vase' is also quite uncertain (the treatment of Mayrhofer EWAia is unsatisfactory; words for vases mostly have no etymology). One has connected it with Lith. sémti, 1sg. semiù 'to scoop, ladle', sámtis 'ladle' < semH-*, to which perhaps belongs Lat. sentīna 'bilge-water' (see ►ἄντλος). See ►ἀμάω.

ἀμάρα [f.] 'trench, channel' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR ἁμ-? (Frisk); Ion. ἀμάρη. Cf. ἀμάρευμα· ἀθροίσματα βορβόρου 'collection of filth' (H.) and ἡ ἐν τοῖς κήποις ὑδροροή, παρὰ τό ἅμα καί ἴσως καί ὁμαλῶς ῥεῖν, ἤ οἷον ἁμαρόη τις οὖσα 'irrigation in gardens (...)' (H.).
•ETYM The second gloss from Hesychius is a typical example of folk etymology. Formerly connected with δι-, ἐξ-αμᾶν in the meaning 'to dig out', and with ἄμη 'shovel' (Schulze 1892: 365f., Solmsen 1909: 194ff.), which is improbable. Others considered a relationship with Hitt. amii̯ar(a)- 'canal': see Puhvel HED s.v. But note that the words only have initial am- in common. The word could belong to the Greek-Anatolian substrate. A third option is a connection with Alb. amë 'river-bed, source' and river names like Amantia, Amana, Amara, etc.; see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 4 (1953): 52f. and Kuiper NOWELE 25 (1995): 73-5. This comparison is formally better than that with Hittite. See ►ἀμαρία.

ἀμάρᾰκον [n.] 'Origanum Majorana, marjoram' (Pherecr.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also -ᾰρ-, -ος [m.].
•ETYM The long ᾱ in Ionic-Attic points to recent origin; cf. ἄβαρύ· ὀρίγανον <τὸ ἐν> Μακεδονίᾳ (H.). If this is accepted, the variation β/μ points to a Pre-Greek substrate word, which is probable anyhow. Connection with Skt. maruva(ka)- 'id.' must be wrong. See Fur.: 210f., who further compares βᾶρος/ν 'a kind of spice'. From Greek comes Lat. amaracum, -us, MLat. maioracus, maiorana, whence the modern forms.

ἀμαρεῖν [v.] · ἀκολουθεῖν, πείθεσθαι, ἁμαρτάνειν 'to follow, believe, miss the mark' (H.). ◄GR, IE sm-* 'one' and $h_2$er-* 'join'► •ETYM The last explanation of the gloss can hardly be reconciled with the first, so they should be separated. One may compare Ἀμάριος, epithet of Zeus and Athena in Achaia (Aymard 1938: 455-470); the word might mean 'who brings together' (cf. Ὁμαγύριος). Further comparison with ►ἁμαρτῇ, ►ὁμαρτέω and ►ὅμηρος.

ἀμαρία [?] · ὁμοῦ, παραγώγως 'together, by a slight change' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Not understandable. One would think that the meaning belongs to another gloss, as ἀμαρία can hardly be an adverb.

ἁμαρτάνω [v.] 'to miss the mark, fail' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$mert-* 'miss, fail'► •VAR Aor. ἁμαρτεῖν.
•DIAL Aeol. ἤμβροτον (Hom.).
•COMP νημερτής, νᾶμ- (Hom.) 'infallible, unmistakable', Dor. νᾱμέρτεια (S.). Younger ἀναμάρτητος 'without fault'.
•DER ἁμαρτία 'fault' (Att.); ἁμάρτιον (A.), ἁμαρτάς (Ion. and late), ἁμάρτημα (Att., Hell.), ἁμαρτωλή (Thgn.), ἁμαρτωλία (Hp., com.); secondary ἁμαρτωλός 'sinner' (Arist., Hell.), whence ἁμαρτωλός 'erroneous, erring' (Arist.).
•ETYM νημερτής presupposes n̥-$h_2$mert-*, and seems old because of the full grade root (cf. ἀναμάρτητος). Probably, the -αρ- in ἁμαρτάνω replaces -ρα- after the full grade (note that Aeolic has ἀμ[β]ροτ-). The aspiration must be analogical. The word has no known cognates, but the reconstructed root looks perfectly IE. Cf. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 308f.

ἁμαρτῆ [adv.] 'at the same time, together' (Il.). ◄IE sm-$h_2$er-t-*, GR► •VAR -ή in Aristarchus; elsewhere -ῆ, -ῇ, but probably wrongly.
•DER ἁμαρτήδην (sch. Φ 162, H.), which is also a probable reading of N 584 ὁμαρτήδην (Wackernagel 1916: 70).
•ETYM Old instrumental (in -eh_1* > -ή, which also explains the accent) of a verbal adjective *ἅμαρτος 'joined together, meeting' (ἅμα and ἀραρίσκω). Also from here probably comes ἁμαρτέω 'to meet, get together', which is mostly written ►ὁμαρτέω (Il.). See also ►ὅμηρος.

ἀμαρύσσω [v.] 'to sparkle, twinkle' (of the eye) (h. Merc., Hes.). ◄PG►
•VAR Only present.
•DER ἀμαρυγή 'twinkling' (h. Merc.), ἀμάρυγμα 'id.' (Hes., Sappho), with ῡ by metrical lengthening, while Aeolic has -χμα; ἀμάρυγξ 'id.' (Hdn.). Perhaps a nasalized form in Ἀμαρυγκεύς (Ψ 630) and in ἀμαρυγκυσία· βοστρυχία 'curly things' (H.) (rather unclear; mistake?). ἀμαρύττα· τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς 'eyes' (H.); taken as a Cret. dual = ἀμαρύκτα 'the twinkling ones'.
•ETYM Compare with ►μαρμαίρω (s.v.; cf. μαρμαρυγή). As -ύσσω is typically Greek (Schwyzer: 733), a comparison with Lith. mérkti 'to close the eyes, twinkle', etc. is not admissible. The word may well be of Pre-Greek origin, with ἀ- interchanging with reduplication and the suffix -υξ/-υγξ, which is typical of the substrate language and shows prenasalization. See Kuiper 1956: 221.

ἀματα [n.pl.]? disputed; hapax in SIG 421 A 5 and 26 (III[a]). ◂IE *$h_2eh_1(s)$-mōr 'day'▸ •ETYM Leumann 1950: 276 reinstated the view that this form is simply ἤματα 'days', which is no doubt correct.

ἀμαυρός [adj.] 'hardly seen, dim, faint' (Od.); on the mg. see McKinley Ant. class. 26 (1957): 12-39, Neugebauer Ant. class. 27 (1968): 373f. ◂PG?▸
•VAR Rarely μαῦρος or μαυρός (Hdn., Gal., H.), probably from μαυρόομαι, -όω (Hes.).
•DER ἀμαυρότης (Gal.), ἀμαυρία = caligo (gloss.). Denominative verb ἀμαυρόομαι 'to become dim', rarely ἀμαυρόω 'to make dim' (Ion., poet., Hell.). Thence ἀμαύρωσις 'obfuscation' (Hp., Arist.), ἀμαύρωμα 'id.' (Plu.).
•ETYM It is assumed that μαυρόομαι arose through loss of the initial vowel (see the material in Strömberg 1944: 44f.). However, it could also be a case of a prothetic vowel vs. its absence, and therefore a substrate phenomenon. Substrate origin is probable anyhow, as the word has no etymology. It is a Scythian loan acc. to Puhvel 1957: 237: from maurva-.

ἀμάω 1 [v.] 'to reap corn, cut, mow down' (Il.). ◂IE? *h_2meh_1- 'mow'▸ •VAR Homer often has long ἀ-, no doubt metrical (Chantraine 1942: 111).
•COMP Especially in ἀπ-, διαμάω 'to cut off, mow, harvest' (Od.).
•DER ἄμητος [m.] '(time of) harvest' (Hom.), on the accent see LSJ; ἀμητύς [f.] (Hymn. Is.); ἀμητήρ 'reaper' (Il.), ἀμήτειρα [f.] (EM), ἀμητρίς [f.] (Poll. 1, 222). Daneben ἀμητής (Porph.). Instrument noun ἀμητήριον 'sickle' (Max. Tyr.), ἀμητικός [adj.] 'made for cutting'.
•ETYM Connected with OHG māen, OE māwan 'to mow', which means we have a root *h_2meh_1-; ἄμητος could then be identical with MHG māt, OE mæd 'reaping'. The Anatolian form Hitt. ḫamešḫa(nt)- 'spring, time of harvest' is important, as it shows that the *h_1 belonged to the root. ἀμάω probably derives from ἄμη < *h_2mh_1-eh_2-, acc. to Schrijver 1991: 20 (no vowel assimilation from *amē-, as per Peters 1980a: 91[41]). For ἄμη, Morgenstierne Acta orientalia 7 (1929): 200 connects Pashto yūm 'spade' (cf. Pok. 502, but it is doubtful whether a PIE root *ieh_2m- is permissible). The verb δι-αμάω is separated from ἀμάω 'to mow' by Irigoin in the LfgrE. On ►ἄμαλλα 'sheaf' and ►ἀμάρα 'canal', see s.vv.

ἀμάω 2 ⇒ ἀμάομαι.

ἄμβη ⇒ ἄμβων.

ἄμβιξ, -ῖκος [m.] 'spouted vessel' (Ath. 11, 480d), also 'alembic' (Zos. Alch.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἄμβῖκος m. (Posid.).
•ETYM Explained as 'φοξίχειλος κύλιξ' and εἰς ὀξὺ ἀνηγμένη (Ath. 11, 480d); see Diehl on Semon. fr. 24. Statements about these words in the handbooks are unclear. The suffix is no doubt a substrate element, as it is in κύλιξ. It is often connected with ►ἄμβη, ►ἄμβων, but correctly so? Chantraine 1933: 376 calls these words Semitic, but without references. Derivation from ἀναβαίνω seems most improbable.

ἀμβλακίσκω ⇒ ἀμπλακίσκω and ἀμβλίσκω.

ἀμβλίσκω [v.] 'to cause to miscarry' (S.). ◂IE? *h_2mlh_3-▸ •VAR Pres. also (ἐξ-)αμβλόομαι, -όω (IA), -ώω (Max.), -ώσκειν· τὸ ἀτελὲς γεννῆσαι, τὸ φθεῖραι βρέφος 'uneffected birth, miscarriage of a foetus' (Suid.), -ώσσειν· ὠμοτοκεῖν 'to miscarry' (H.); aor. (ἐξ-)αμβλῶσαι.
•DER From ἀμβλόομαι: ἄμβλωσις 'miscarriage' (Lys., Arist.), ἀμβλώσιμος (Max.), ἄμβλωμα (Antipho Soph., Aret.), ἀμβλωσμός (Aret.); instrument noun ἀμβλωτήριον (Orib.), adjective ἀμβλωτικός (Gal.). The formation of ἀμβλωθρίδιον 'abortive child' (Ph.), 'drug causing abortion' (Poll.), also -ίδιος [adj.] (Aret.), looks strange. A secondary suffix -ίδιον was added to -θρο- (Chantraine 1933: 373 and 68ff.).
•ETYM The connection with μύλη as 'miscarriage' (Hp.), recte 'hard formation in a woman's womb', should be given up; Chantraine thinks it may be the same word as 'mill', and Frisk, who gives the suggestion under ἀμβλίσκω, does not mention it s.v. μύλη. Rix MSS 27 (1970): 105[41] considers the root *h_2mlh_3- and a connection with ►ἀμβλύς (but see there).

ἀμβλύς, -εῖα, -ύ [adj.] 'blunt; dim, faint (of sight)' (IA). ◂?▸
•DER ἀμβλύτης 'bluntness, weakness' (Arist., Plu.); denominative verbs: 1. ἀμβλύνω [v.] 'to make blunt, weaken' (IA); ἄμβλυνσις (comm. Arist.), ἀμβλυντήρ (Poeta de herb.), ἀμβλυντικός 'causing weakness' (Dsc.). 2. ἀμβλυώσσω (-ώττω) [v.] 'to be short-sighted' (Hp., Pl.), from *ἀμβλυ-ωψ, cf. ἀμβλυ-ωπός, also ἀμβλωπός, ἀμβλῶψ; Schwyzer: 733 ζ, Sommer 1948: 3ff.
•ETYM ἀμβλύς can be from *ἀμλ-ύς. It cannot be from *h_2mlh_3u-, as per Rix MSS 27 (1970): 90, as this would give *ἀμαλυς. The connection with ἀμαλός is a mere guess and it explains nothing. Perhaps related to ἀμβλ(ακ)ίσκω; there have also been attempts to compare it to ἀμαλδύνω, lastly Nikolaev 2005.

ἀμβρόσιος ⇒ βροτός.

ἄμβων, -ωνος [m.] 'rim or edge of a cup (especially one that curves inwards)' (A.). ◂?▸ •VAR Attic for Ion. ἄμβη 'raised edge, protuberance' (Gal. 18a 340); ἄμβη· ἡ τῆς ἴτυος ὀφρῦς τῶν κυλλῶν ἀσπίδων 'rim of a shield (...)' (H.), 'rim of a wheel' (Democr.). One compares also ἀνάβωνες· βαθμοῦ εἶδος 'kind of step or threshold' (H.).
•ETYM On the formation, see Chantraine 1933: 162 and Schwyzer: 487; on the meaning, Ross Glotta 49 (1971): 244-258. Probably a loanword. Connection with Lat. umbō is quite uncertain; Chantraine (and, tentatively, Frisk) connect it with ►ἄμβιξ.

ἀμέθυστος, -ον [adj.] 'not drunken, not intoxicating' (Plu., Dsc.); substantivized 'remedy against drunkenness' (Plu.), also as the name of a plant, see Strömberg 1940: 91; 'amethyst' (LXX). ◂IE *med^hu 'sweet; honey, wine'▸ •ETYM Compound of privative ἀ- and μέθυ. The stone 'amethyst' was named after its color: the red of wine diluted with water such that it is no longer intoxicating (Clausing Glotta 20 (1932): 292).

ἀμείβω, -ομαι [v.] 'to change, exchange', med. also 'to answer, repay' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2meig^w- 'change'▸ •VAR ἀμείβοντες 'rafters that meet and cross each other' (Ψ 712).

•DER ἀμοιβή 'change, exchange, requital, recompense, answer, etc.', ἀμοιβαῖος 'abwechselnd' (Pi., Emp., Hdt.), ἀμοιβάδιος 'id.' (Opp.); ἀμοιβιμαῖον 'payment, reward' (IGRom., Lydia). ἀμοιβεύς name of Poseidon in Lyc. 617. Adverbs: ἀμοιβηδίς, (ἐπ)αμοιβαδίς (Hom.), cf. Schwyzer 631. Late denominative ἀμοιβάζω [v.] 'to swap' (Men. Prot.). ἄμειψις (Plb., LXX) '(ex)change, etc.', ἀμειπτικός. ἀμοιβός 'one who exchanges' (Il.), also adjective 'in requital' (S.), frequent as a second member.
•ETYM No exact correspondence. It has been compared to Lat. migrare 'to wander' as if from migros* 'changing (place)'. The -β- probably goes back to $g^w$, as b is rare in PIE. Therefore, the root was $*h_2meig^w$-, which may be an extension of $*h_2mei$- 'to change' (as in Skt. máyate and Lat. com-mūnis), but an enlargement -g^w- is rare.

ἀμείνων [adj.] 'better, stronger, more advantageous' (Il.). ◂?▸ •ETYM No etymology. Attic proper names with Ἀμειν- are supposed to show that the -ει- is a real diphthong, so it does not derive from *ἀμενι̯ων. DELG therefore remarks that the word could be an old positive. Seiler 1950: 120 assumed *ἀ-μειν̯ιων, from *μινύς with privative ἀ-; this is improbable. Note that a root $*h_2mein$- would violate the IE root structure constraints, so it would have to be from $*h_2mei$-n-.

ἀμείρω [v.] 'to bereave' (Pi.). ◂?▸
•COMP ἀπαμείρω (ρ 322 v. l., Hes.).
•ETYM Solmsen KZ 29 (1888): 354 took the verb as an innovation for ἀμέρδω to ἀμέρσαι, ἀμερθῆναι. Perhaps related to ▸ἀμέρδω. A reconstruction $*h_2mer$-ie/o- is perfectly possible.

ἀμέλγω [v.] 'milk' (Il.). ◂IE $*h_2melǵ$- 'milk'▸ •COMP ἱππ-ημολγοί 'Mare Milker', name of Scythians and other nomads (N 5, Hes.).
•DER ἄμελξις 'milking' (Pi., LXX); plant name ἀμελξίνη (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 160 (who compares ἀμερσίνη and ἐλξίνη). ἀμελκτῆρα (H.) explaining ἀρακτῆρα.
ἀμολγός, ἀμολγή (Hdn.); ἀμολγεύς and ἀμόλγιον 'milking pail' (Theoc.), ἀμολγάδες βόες 'dairy cows' (S. Ichn. 5). On ἀμολγαῖος, ἀμολγάζει see ▸ἀμολγός.
•ETYM An old verb, also found with full grade root in OHG melchan, OE melcan, Alb. mjel, ToA mālkant [ptc.], Lith. mélžu, with the acute due to the following ǵ* (Winter's Law). The zero grade root appears in OCS mlъzǫ, MIr. bligim, Lat. mulgeō. This points to an old ablauting athematic root present sing. $*h_2mélǵ$-ti, plur. $*h_2mlǵ$-énti. Not connected with Skt. mā́rjmi, mr̥jánti 'to wipe off' (see ▸ὀμόργνυμι).

ἄμεναι [v.] 'to satiate, take one's fill'. ⇒ἆσαι.

ἀμενηνός [adj.] 'without power' (Il.). ◂GR, IE men-s-*▸ •DER ἀμενήνωσεν (N 562).
•ETYM Built on ἀμενής (E.), from μένος, perhaps modelled after ἀκμηνός (Od.).

ἀμέργω [v.] 'to pluck', of flowers (Sapph.), also of olives = 'squeeze out'? (Com. Adesp. 437); ἀμέργω· τὸ ἐκπιέζω 'to press out' (Hdn.). ◂IE?, PG?▸

•DER ἀμόργη 'watery part which runs out when olives are pressed' (Hp.), borrowed as Lat. amurca, amurga; also ἀμόργης, ἄμοργος, ἄμοργις. Agent noun ἀμοργοί· πόλεως ὄλεθροι 'destructions of a city' (Cratin.). ἀμοργεύς 'squeezer of olive oil' (Poll.), ἄμοργμα· σύλλεγμα, ἄρτυμα 'collection, condiment' (H.). Unclear ἀμοργίς, -ίδος [f.] 'stalks of mallow, Malva silvestris' (Ar.); perhaps named after the island Amorgos (Taillardat RPh. 33 (1959): 66; cf. also Taillardat REGr. 64 (1951): 11ff.). Adjective ἀμόργινος epithet of χιτών and other garments (com., Aeschin.), cf. ἀμόργεια· χρώματος εἶδος, ἀπὸ νήσου Ἀμοργοῦντος 'kind of color, from the island of Amorgos' (Suid.).
•ETYM Lat. mergae 'pitchfork' could be related. It seems that the Greek root is related to Skt. marj- (see ▸ὀμόργνυμι), but it is unclear how the initial vocalism could be explained. Although a PIE root $*h_2merg$- is perfectly possible, the word may also be a technical term borrowed from the substrate language.

ἀμέρδω [v.] 'to deprive of' (Il.). ◂IE $*h_2merd$- 'cause injury'▸ •VAR μέρδει· κωλύει, βλάπτει 'hinders, disables' (H.); μερθεῖσα· στερηθεῖσα 'deprived' (H.).
•ETYM If the form without the initial vowel is secondary, the root may have been $*h_2merd$-, which is cognate with Skt. mr̥dnā́ti, mardati 'zerreiben, zerdrücken' (cf. ▸μαραίνω), OAv. mōrəndat̰ 'destroys', Lat. mordeō 'to bite', OE smeortan 'to cause pain' (with initial s- of Germanic origin). Perhaps related to ▸ἀμείρω.

ἀμέσω · ὠμοπλάται 'shoulder blades' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Compare with ▸ὦμος; if this represents Hom(e)s-*, we could assume $*h_2mes$-, but then the language can hardly be Greek, given the preserved intervocalic -σ-. Is it then Macedonian? It can hardly be Phrygian, which does not preserve intervocalic -s- either. The word may have quite a different origin (see Beekes Sprache 18 (1972): 127).

ἀμεύσασθαι [v.] 'to surpass, go beyond' (Pi., Euph.), also 'to trade, exchange' in Cret., cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 778. ◂IE? $*h_2meu(H)$- 'move, push'▸ •VAR διαμευστάς· ἀλαζόνας 'vagrants' (H.); διαμευτής· ψεύστης, ἀπατεών 'liar, cheat' (H.).
•DER ἀμεύσιμος = πορεύσιμος (A. R. 4, 297 after EM 82, 11), cf. ἀμευσίπορος, -επής (Pi.).
•ETYM The meaning 'trade' could derive from 'to go to the other side'. The comparison with ἀμύνω 'to push back', further with Lat. moveō, Lith. máuti, 1sg. máuju 'to tear off', Skt. mī́vati 'move, push' < miH-(e)u-* (the European forms continuing mieu-*), is rather uncertain. If it is Indo-European, the root may be $*h_2meu$-, cf. Heubeck Glotta 65 (1987): 37-44 and s.v. ▸ἀμύμων.

ἄμη ⇒ἀμάομαι.

ἀμήκωα [adj.] · δεινά. Ταραντῖνοι 'fearful (Tarantian)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 14, the word is Messapian. A mere guess.

ἄμης, -ητος [m.] 'cake' (Ar.). ◂?▸

•DER Diminutive ἀμητίσκος 'kind of cake' (com.).
•ETYM Unknown. It has been compared to ►ἄμιθα. The latter word has a reduplicated variant ἀμαμιθάδες, typical of substrate words, but it need not be cognate with ἄμης.

ἀμία [f.] 'kind of tunny which swims up rivers', perhaps 'bonito' (Sotad. Com.). ◄?►
•VAR Also -ίας [m.].
•ETYM Unknown. Thompson 1947 s.v. supposes an Egyptian origin (mehi, mḥit name of a fish). Cf. Strömberg 1943: 128 and De Saint Denis 1947 s.v.

ἄμιθα [f.] · ἔδεσμα ποιόν, καὶ ἄρτυμα ὡς Ἀνακρέων 'kind of meat, condiment' (H.); for Anacr. see 467 Page. ◄PG(V)► •VAR P. Hamb. 90, 18 has an acc. pl. ἄμιθας. Cf. ἀμαμιθάδες· ἥδυσμά τι σκευαστὸν διὰ κρεῶν εἰς μικρὰ κεκομμένων δι' ἀρτυμάτων (Photius 86 R.).
•ETYM The variant with reduplication is typical of substrate words. The word has been connected with ἄμης, but this is quite uncertain.

ἅμιλλα [f.] 'contest' (Pi.). ◄PG(S)►
•DER Denominative verb ἁμιλλάομαι 'to compete' (IA); ἁμιλλητήρ 'competing' (S.), ἁμιλλητήριος 'of the competition' (Philostr., Aristid.); ἁμιλλητικός 'id.' (Pl.); ἁμίλλημα 'competition' (S. [lyr.], inscr. Cyr.).
•ETYM Derived from *ἅμ-ιλ-ι̯α by Frisk (comparing θύελλα, ἄμαλλα), but this is problematic. All words in -ιλλ(α) look non-IE (i.e. Pre-Greek), so an IE suffix of this shape is very doubtful (cf. Benveniste 1935: 41). For the form, cf. ἀμίλλακαν· οἶνον 'wine' (H.).

ἀμίλλακαν [f.]? · οἶνον. Θηβαῖοι 'wine (Theban)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. See Fur.: 221 (also on ►ἀβίλλιον). Cf. ►βῆκα.

ἀμιχθαλόεσσα [adj.] 'rich in almonds', epithet of Lemnos (Ω 753). ◄PG► •ETYM Call. fr. 18, 8 has ἀμιχθαλόεσσαν … ἠέρα, so he connects ὀμίχλη. This must be a folk etymology, since ὀ- comes from *h_3-. Scholion BT on Ω 753 gives = εὐδαίμων, which is no more than a noncommittal guess (*ἀμικτο-θαλοεσσα [Lagercrantz IF 50 (1932): 277-80] is a construct that would hardly have been syncopated to our form). The ancient interpretation as ἀπρόσμικτος 'inhospitable' does not explain the form of the word. The connection with Go. maihstus 'mist' has the objection that the latter word is not known in Greek. Leumann 1950: 214 and 273), accepts the solution of Doederlein, who identified the form with ἀμύγδαλον 'almond'. This explanation fits well and gives no difficulties for the formation. The variation may be confirmed by ἄμυκτο· γλυκύ· οἱ δὲ ἄμικτον (H.) and ἀμυκλίς· γλυκύς, ἡδύς (H.); for κτ/ κλ, cf. ἀράκτη / ἄροκλον etc. See Fur.: 140, 388.

ἀμμά [f.] 'mamma, mother; nurse', τροφός καὶ μήτηρ καθ' ὑποκορισμόν 'rearer and mother (hypocoristic)' (EM 84, 22). ◄ONOM► •VAR ἀμμία (Hdt.).
•ETYM Nursery word. Cf. Lat. amma, and Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-7): 242ff.

ἄμμιξ · συγκομιστὸς ἄρτος, Ταραντῖνοι 'bread of unbolted meal (Tarantian)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Gloss 3662 has ἀμικονιστος, 3702 ἀμμισκομιστον; thus *ἀμι(ς)?

ἄμμος [f.] 'sand' (Pl.). ◄LW► •DER ἀμμώδης (Hp., Arist.), ἄμμινος (Peripl. M. Rubr.), ἀμμίτης [m.] (sc. λίθος), also ἀμμῖτις [f.] 'sandstone' (Plin.).
•ETYM Considered to be a contamination of ►ἄμαθος and ►ψάμμος, but this assumed starting point fails to appreciate that the word is non-Indo-European and, as such, may not have followed the sound laws of IE words. On Ἀμμίτης as a river name, see Redard 1949: 130 etc.

ἄμνᾱμος [m., f.] 'grandchild' (Call.). ◄GR► •VAR Also ἄμναμμος; plur. ἀμνάμονες (Poll. 3, 19). Cf. the gloss cited by DELG.
•DIAL Oros in Reitzenstein 1897: 5: ἄμναμοι· οἱ ἀπόγονοι· κυρίως παρὰ τὴν τῶν Κυρηναίων διάλεκτον οἱ τῶν ἀμνῶν ἀμνοί ἄμναμοι λέγονται· τουτέστιν τῶν ἀρνῶν ἄρνες· (…).
•ETYM Probably a reduplicated form of ἀμνός; cf. παιδόπαις (DELG). See Dobias-Lalou REGr. 111 (1998): 403-417.

ἀμνίον [n.] 'patera, vase to receive the blood of a sacrifice' (γ 444); see Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 357 and 364. ◄?► •ETYM Connection with ἀμάομαι is no more than a guess.

ἀμνός [m., f.] 'lamb' (S.). ◄IE h_2eg^w-n-, h_2og^w-n- 'lamb'► •VAR ἀμνόα· πρόβατον, οἱ δὲ ἀμνός 'cattle, lamb' (H.), unreliable.
•COMP ἀμνοκῶν 'stupid like a sheep' (from κοέω, Taillardat 1962: § 453) ἀμνοκόμος (Latte for -κόπος). ποιμήν 'herdsman' (H.).
•DER Special feminine forms: ἀμνή, -ά (Cos, Gortyn, etc.), ἀμνάς (LXX), ἀμνίς (Theoc.). Adjectives: ἀμνεῖος (Theoc.), ἀμναῖος (pap.) 'made of lambskin'; thence ἀμνεῖον, ἀμνίον, also ἀμνειός, ἄμνιος 'inner membrane surrounding the foetus' (Emp.), also -ός.
•ETYM Identical with Lat. agnus < h_2eg^w-no-, OIr. úan < h_2og^w-no-, OCS agnę < h_2eg^w-n-ent- (with long vowel and acute from Winter's Law). OE ēanian, E yean, Du. oonen < PGm. awnōn* seem to presuppose -g^{wh}-, but see Schrijver 1991: 39, 438.

ἀμο- 'some, someone, somebody', indefinite pronominal stem in οὐδαμός, etc. ◄IE smH-o- 'some'► •VAR Also in ἀμοῦ, ἀμῇ, ἀμοῖ, ἀμωσ-γέ-πως; also μηδαμό-.
•ETYM Identical with Skt. sama- 'someone' and Go. sums 'id'. The Greek and Germanic forms require sm̥H-o-*, and the Skt. form may also go back to this. A similar form is at the basis of OIr. samail and Lat. similis 'like' < semh₂-l-, see on ►ὁμαλός. The forms seem to be an enlargement of sem- 'one' (see ►εἷς), but the exact relation is unclear.

ἄμοινα [?] unknown (only IG 5(2), 4: 22). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ἄμοιος [adj.] · κακός. Σικελοί 'bad (Sicilian)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR μοῖος· σκυθρωπός 'sullen, sad' (H.), see on ►σμοιός = σκυθρωπός (Hdn. Gr. 1, 109), σμοῖος (Theognost.), σμυός (H.).
•ETYM Given the plausible connection with ►σμοιός (see above and s.v.), the initial displays a number of variations, which are typical for Pre-Greek (Fur.: 368). Not related to ►μοῖτος (s.v.; pace von Blumenthal 1930: 15f.).

ἀμολγός [m.] 'darkness'. Only (ἐν) νυκτὸς ἀμολγῷ (Λ 173, Ο 324, Χ 28 and 317, δ 841). ◂?▸
•VAR ὀμολγῷ· ζόφῳ 'in darkness' (H.), where the ms. has ὁμολογῶ. As an adjective (which is probably a secondary, learned development) in E. fr. 104: ἀμολγὸν νύκτα· Εὐριπίδης Ἀλκμήνῃ ζοφερὰν καὶ σκοτεινήν 'dark'. οἱ δὲ μέρος τῆς νυκτὸς καθ' ὅ ἀμέλγουσιν 'part of the night during which they milk' (H.).
•DER ἀμολγαῖος in μάζα ἀμολγαίη 'barley-cake made with milk' (Hes. Op. 590), see below; ἀμολγαῖον μαστὸν ἀνασχόμενος 'who held up a breast full of milk' (AP 7, 657, Leon.). ἀμολγάζει· μεσημβρίζει 'passes the noon' (H.).
•ETYM The meaning had already been lost in antiquity. If a verbal noun of ἀμέλγω, ἀμολγός, it means 'the milking' (and the oxytonesis has to be secondary). The expression μάζα ἀμολγαίη in Hesiod is interpreted by Proclus and in EM s.v. μάζα as ἀκμαία 'at its height, in full bloom': τὸ γὰρ ἀμολγὸν ἐπὶ τοῦ ἀκμαίου τίθεται. Thus also Eustathius on Ο 324: Ἀχαιοὶ δὲ κατὰ τοὺς γλωσσογράφους ἀμολγὸν τὴν ἀκμήν φασι. However, this meaning may have been derived from the text (see Leumann 1950: 274). Nilsson 1920: 35f. took it as the time of milking at the beginning of the night. DELG judges this interpretation to be more probable than that of 'fullness'. Older literature is mentioned in DELG and Frisk; see also Bolling AmJPh. 78 (1958): 165-172; Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 654. Parvulescu Glotta 63 (1985): 152-158 argues that νυκτὸς ἀμολγῷ indicates the evening twilight, and adduces parallels from other languages for an original meaning 'night milking'. Still, if ὁμολογῶ points to *ὀμολγός, the alternation ἀ-/ὀ- could point to a substrate word.

ἀμόρα [f.] 'sweet cake' (Philet.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀμόρα· σεμίδαλις ἑφθὴ σὺν μέλιτι 'fine wheat flour boiled with honey' (H.).
•DER ἀμορίτης ἄρτος (LXX), also written ἀμορβίτης (Ath.) and ἀμοργίτας· πλακοῦντας 'flat cakes' (H.), both = ἀμορϝίτης, with a suffix -ῑτης.
•ETYM From original *ἀμόρϝα. Etymology unknown; perhaps Pre-Greek *(a)mar^{w}-a?

ἀμορβός [m., f.] 'follower, shepherd' (Call.). ◂?▸
•DER Adjective ἀμορβαῖος, said of χαράδραι 'gravel' (Nic. Th. 28, 489), mg. unclear; scholiasts render it with ποιμενικαί 'of herdsmen' or σκοτεινώδεις 'dark' (which may be mere guesses); cf. EM 85, 20: ἀμορβὴς καὶ ἀμορβές· σημαίνει τὸ μεσονύκτιον παρὰ τὴν ὄρφνην ... σημαίνει καὶ τὸν ἀκόλουθον 'the time of midnight; companion'. Denominative verbs ἀμορβέω (Antim.) and ἀμορβεύω (Nic.) 'to accompany'. ἀμορβίτης belongs to ►ἀμόρα.
•ETYM Unknown. Improbable analysis by Pisani RILomb. 77 (1943-44): 541.

ἀμόργη ⇒ἀμέργω.

ἀμοργίς [f.] kind of dress (Cratin. fr. 96). ◂PG▸
•VAR λαμπτῆρες ἀμοργούς (Emp. fr. 84), perhaps lanterns clothed in muslin (cf. Lat. lintea lanterna, Pl. Bacch. 446).
•DER Unclear ἀμοργίς, -ίδος [f.] 'stalks of mallow, Malva silvestris' (Ar.); perhaps named after the island Amorgos (Taillardat RPh. 33 (1959): 66; cf. also Taillardat REGr. 64 (1951): 11ff.). Adjective ἀμόργινος epithet of χιτών and other garments (com., Aeschin.), cf. ἀμόργεια· χρώματος εἶδος, ἀπὸ νήσου Ἀμοργοῦντος 'kind of color, after the island of Amorgos' (Suid.).
•ETYM The name of the island may have been used to designate clothes, cf. MoE jersey, jeans, etc. Cf. Taillardat 1962: section 262.

ἄμοτον [adv.] 'incessantly, without pause' (Il.), especially in the phrase ἄμοτον μεμαώς. ◂IE meh*$_3$- 'get tired'▸ •VAR Thence the adj. ἄμοτος (Theoc.).
•ETYM Uncertain, as the exact meaning is unknown. Seiler KZ 75 (1957): 17-20 assumes zero grade of ἐν + zero grade of μεν-, like in ἐμμεμαώς; yet a zero grade of ἐν is uncertain. Forssman 1986: 329-339 explains it as n̥-mn̥-tom memn̥u̯ōs* as 'Unerstrebtes/-bares erstrebend', with Greek and Sanskrit parallels. This is tempting, but for the oldest formula with Eris (twice at verse end), the proposed meaning does not fit. There, it clearly means 'incessantly, indefatigable', which rather suggests a connection with meh*$_3$-, as seen in ►μῶλος, OHG muojan 'to tire', muodi 'tired', Go. af-mauiþs 'id.' < mō-etos*), Ru. májat', 1sg. máju 'to wear out' (LIV² s.v. meh*$_3$-).

ἄμπελος [f.] 'grape-vine, Vitis vinifera' (Il.). ◂PG?▸ •DER Diminutives: ἀμπέλιον (Ar., Hp.), ἀμπελίς (Ar.), also a bird name = ἀμπελίων, see below.
Adjectives: ἀμπελόεις 'rich in vines' (Il.); ἀμπέλινος 'of the vine' (Hdt., Arist., Plb.), ἀμπελικός 'id.' (Hell.), ἀμπέλιος 'id.' (Ph., Ach. Tat.), ἀμπελώδης 'rich in vines' (Poll., H.). ἀμπελῖτις (γῆ, χέρσος) 'viniculture' (pap.), ἀμπελιτικός (pap.).
ἀμπελών [m.] 'vineyard' (Aeschin. 2, 156 [v.l.], Hell.); ἀμπελεών (Theoc., AP), diminutive ἀμπελωνίδιον (pap.); ἀμπελεία 'id.' (inscr. Cherson.), after φυτεία. ἀμπελίων [m.] name of an unknown bird (Dionys. Av.), see Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM Cannot be explained in IE terms, and generally considered to be a substrate word (although there are no further indications for this).

ἀμπλακίσκω [v.] 'to miss, fail; to be bereft of; to transgress' (Archil.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἀμβλακίσκω; late and rare present to the aor. ἤμπλακον (also ἤμβ-), pass. perf. ἠμπλάκημαι. Note ἀπλακών (E. Alc. 242, IA 124) and ἀναπλάκητος (S. OT 472).
•DIAL Does not occur in Attic.
•DER ἀμπλακία 'fault' (Hp.) with ἀμπλακιῶτις f. = ἱερὰ νόσος (Poet. de herb.). Further ἀμπλάκιον (Pi. P. 11, 26) and ἀμπλάκημα (poet., late prose).
•ETYM Compared with ►ἀμβλίσκω, which DELG rejects for both formal and semantic reasons. are typical for substrate words (see Fur.: 281f.). Blanc 1994: 79-85 connects it with ►πλάζομαι. As Van Beek suggests to me (p.c.), this is quite attractive, provided that πλάζομαι (which has no convincing etymology) is a substrate word. The group would then display a prothetic vowel (which is otherwise rare in verbal forms!), prenasalization, and interchange β/ π (if we include ἀμβλίσκω), and we could reconstruct a Pre-Greek verbal root *(a)^m*pla*^{n}k-.

ἀμπρόν [n.] 'rope for drawing loads' (inscr. V-IV^a). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Accentuation after Et. Gen., H.
•DER ἀμπρεύω [v.] 'to draw along, drag' (E. apud Phot., Call.); ἐξ-αμπρεύω (Ar. Lys. 289), whence a retrograde derivative ἔξαμπρον 'team of oxen' (gloss.); συν-αμπρεύω (Arist.). ἀμπρευτὴς ὄνος (S. apud Phot.).
•ETYM Technical term of unknown origin.

ἄμπυξ, -υκος [f., m.] 'women's diadem; horse's bit; rim of a wheel' (Il.). ⊲PG⊳ •DIAL Myc. a-pu-ke /ampukei/ in a context of horses' harnesses, a-na-pu-ke /an-ampukes/ of ἡνίαι, a-pu-ko-wo-ko /ampuk(o)-worgos/.
•COMP χρυσ-άμπυξ 'with a golden bit' (Il.).
•DER ἀμπυκτῆρες (A.), ἀμπυκτήρια and ἀμπυκώματα (S.) are poetic enlargements. Denominative ἀμπυκάζω [v.] 'to tie up with a headband' (AP, EM).
•ETYM Formerly considered to be a root noun πυξ prefixed with ἀμ- = ἀνα-, belonging to πύκα 'solidly', πυκνός, etc., and cognate with Av. pusā 'diadem' < IE *$pu\acute{k}eh_2$- (Lidén 1932: 148ff.); this is seconded by Benveniste BSL 34 (1933): 41, who adduced further forms and borrowings from Iranian. However, Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 655 points out that ἀνα- would not fit the meaning, as *ἀμφι-πυκ- would be expected. As this form could hardly give ἀμπυκ-, the etymology is doubtful. The notion 'thick, solid' does not seem to fit the objects in question. Szemerényi also doubts the connection with Iranian.
A word for such objects is easily borrowed. If we analyze the word as amp-uk-*, it contains a typical substrate suffix (Beekes 2003: 12-15).

ἄμπωτις [f.] 'ebb' (Hp.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER ἀμπωτίζω 'to ebb' (Ph., Eust.).
•ETYM Variant of ἀνάπωτις (Pi.), a fem. agent noun of ἀναπίνω; ἄμπωτις (θάλασσα) = resorbens unda (Hor.). See Schulze KZ 56 (1929): 287, Schulze KZ 57 (1930): 275, as well as Fraenkel 1910: 116; but see also the critical notes in DELG.

ἀμυγδάλη [f.] 'almond' (Hp.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR ἀμύγδαλον [n.], ἀμύγδαλος [f.] (Luc.). Also ἀμυσγέλα, -υλα (Cyrene).
•DER ἀμυγδαλίς [f.] = ἀμυγδάλη (Philox., Plu.), diminutive ἀμυγδάλιον (Hp.). Adjectives: ἀμυγδάλινος 'made of almond' (X., Thphr.), ἀμυγδάλιος 'almond-shaped' (pap.), ἀμυγδαλόεις 'id.' (Nic.), ἀμυγδαλώδης 'id.' (Thphr.). ἀμυγδαλέα, -ῆ 'almond tree' (Eup., Hp., Arist., Thphr.), ἀμυγδαλίτης 'spurge' (Dsc., Plin.).
•ETYM A typical substrate word (note -γδ-, which interchanges with -σγ-), which is confirmed by the identification with ►ἀμιχθαλόεσσα; on the variation see Pre-Greek. Fur.: 140 further compares ►μύκηρος and Hitt. mitgaimi- 'sweet bread', Luw. mitgaimi- 'sweet(ened)'. Borrowed into Lat. as amygdala; also amiddula, amyndala, amandula, whence OHG mandala.

ἀμυδρός [adj.] 'dim, faint, obscure' (Archil.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR ἀμυδᾶναι· κρύψαι 'hide, cover' (H.).

•DER ἀμυδρήεις 'id.' (Nic.); ἀμυδρότης 'darkness, weakness, etc.' (Ph., Gal., Plot.). Denominative ἀμυδρόομαι 'become dark', -όω 'to make dark' (Ph., comm. Arist.); thence ἀμύδρωσις (comm. Arist.).
•ETYM Unknown. ἀμαυρός is close in meaning and form, but the two cannot be combined in Indo-European terms. Influence of φαιδρός has been proposed, but such contaminations are often rather gratuitous. In principle, ἀμυδ- may continue a root *h_2*mud-. The Slavic root mъd- 'weakness etc.' cannot continue mud-* in view of Winter's Law (so it is from mud*^{h}-).

ἀμύκαρις ⇒ μύκη.

ἄμυλος [m.] 'cake of fine meal' (Ar.). ⊲GR?⊳
•VAR ἄμυλον [n.] 'starch' (Dsc.).
•DER Diminutive ἀμύλιον 1 [n.] 'cake' (Plu.), whence ἀμυλᾶτον 'id.' (sch. Ar. Pax 1195); ἀμύλιον 2 'starch' (Hp., Arist.), whence ἀμυλιδωτόν 'kind of (starched) chiton' (Hermipp.). For the formation cf. ἀλυσιδωτός, χειριδωτός (Chantraine 1933: 305).
•ETYM Starch is made from unground grain, which suggests that ἄμυλος derives from μύλη (cf. ἄμυλον· στερρόν, ἄκλαστον 'firm, unbroken' EM) with privative ἀ-. However, given the form, we expect a basic meaning 'having no mill', not 'unground', which casts some doubts on the etymology. Lat. LW amulum > MoFr. amidon.

ἀμῡ́μων [adj.] 'noble, excellent' (Il.), never of gods. ⊲IE *h_2*meu-*⊳ •VAR ἄμυμος. ἀγαθός, ἀμώμητος, ἄμεμπτος καὶ ἀμύμων 'good, blameless' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally connected with μῦμαρ· αἶσχος, φόβος, ψόγος 'shame, fear, blame' (H.) and μυμαρίζει· γελοιάζει 'jests', which is taken to be Aeolic for μῶμαρ, ►μῶμος 'blame'. ἀμύμων would then originally mean 'without blame', and relate to μῦμαρ as ἀπείρων to πεῖραρ. However, Heubeck Glotta 65 (1987): 37-44 proposed a derivation from ἀμυ- < *h_2*mu-* in ἀμεύσασθαι 'to surpass', i.e. 'who surpasses others' (with metrically lengthened υ in the sequence of three shorts). This seems to be an improvement. The root (Pok. 743) would mean 'to bend the motion, (re)move', found in Lat. moveō and in ἀμύνω 'to ward off', but this is not entirely convincing.

ἀμῡ́νω [v.] 'to ward off, defend, help' (Il.). ⊲?⊳ •VAR Pret. ἠμύναθον (impf. or aor.? See Schwyzer: 703).
•DER ἀμύντωρ 'warden, defender' (Il.), also as a PN; ἀμυντῆρες 'brow tines of a stag's antlers' (Arist.); ἀμυντήριος 'fit for warding off' (Pl., Hell.), ἀμυντήριον (Pl., Hell.); ἀμυντικός 'id.' (Pl., Arist.). ἀμυντρόν (A. apud Phot.), not glossed. ἀμύντης 'defender' (Phot., Hdn.), also PN, cf. κηρ-αμύντης (Lyc.); ἀμυνίας 'id.' (Ar. Eq. 570). ἄμυνα 'defense, revenge', etc. (Theopomp. Com.); retrograde formation, see Schwyzer: 475, Chantraine 1933: 101. χειμ-άμυνα = χλαῖνα παχεῖα (A. fr. and S. fr.).
•ETYM If the nasal is originally a present marker, as in κλίνω, πλύνω, we have a root ἀμυ-, which may be found in ►ἀμεύσασθαι 'to excel, transcend', but the semantics are not quite clear. So a thematicized nasal present *ἀμυ-νϝ-ω?

ἀμύς, -ύδος [f.] 'freshwater turtle', χελώνη λιμναία (Archig. apud Gal.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also ἐμύς (Arist. HA 588a 8, H.).

•ETYM Considered to be a contamination of ἐμύς 'id.' and ἀμία 'tunny' by Strömberg 1943: 81, but this is improbable. The form with ἐ- rather shows a substrate origin; see Fur.: 347. Perhaps found in ►πήλαμυς?

ἀμύσσω [v.] 'to scratch, tear, lacerate' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR ἀμύσχεσθαι. τό ξέειν τὰς σάρκας τοῖς ὄνυξιν 'the laceration of the flesh with claws' (H.).; ἀμυχή 'rent, wound'.
•DER 1. ἀμυχή 'rent, wound' (Hp.), ἀμυχιαῖος mg. uncertain (Pl. Ax. 366a) and ἀμυχώδης 'cracked' (Hp., Thphr.), ἀμυχηδόν 'superficially, lightly' (EM); 2. ἀμυχμός 'id.' (Theoc.), ἀμυγμός (conj. in A. Ch. 24); 3. ἄμυγμα 'rending' (S., E.); 4. ἄμυξις 'scratching' (Orph., Ach. Tat.). Adverb ἀμύξ (ἐμφῦσα Nic.) = μόλις (Euph.); adjective ἀμυκτικός 'scratching, irritating' (Plu., medic.). Also ἀμυκάλαι· αἱ ἀκίδες τῶν βελῶν 'the barbs of arrows' (H., EM), cf. Chantraine 1933: 245ff., Schwyzer: 483. Cf. ἀμύσχεσθαι. τό ξέειν τὰς σάρκας τοῖς ὄνυξιν 'laceration of flesh with claws' (H.).
•ETYM A root ἀμυκ/χ- is assumed, which would continue IE $h_2$muk/g^h-; this is then compared with Lat. mūcrō 'sharp point, sword' (cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v.). Further comparanda include Lith. mùšti 'to beat' and OE gemyscan 'to afflict, tease' (Holthausen IF 48 (1930): 266). This seems a rather small basis for reconstructing an IE root. Fur.: 347 accepts the comparison with Latin, but as a substrate word (though his assimilation rule α- > ε- before υ/ ι [346[33]] seems doubtful to me). The form ἀμυσχ- shows a typical Pre-Greek variation (insertion of -σ- before stop).

ἀμυστί ⇒μύω.

ἀμυσχρός [adj.] 'immaculate, pure' (Parth.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Also ἀμυχρός (S. apud Phot., Suid.) and ἀμυχνός, ἀμυγνός, ἀμύσκαρος (Suid.); ἄμουχα· καθαρεύουσα. Λάκωνες 'clean or pure (Lacon.)' (H.). ἀμυσχῆναι· καθᾶραι, ἁγνίσαι 'to cleanse' (H.).
•ETYM The variations κ/ γ/ χ and σ/ zero suggest a Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 299); perhaps also σκ/ ξ, if Furnée is right in connecting ἀμύξανος· ἀνόσιος 'impure' (H.), with privative α- (cf. Fur.: 393). Also related is μύσκος· μίασμα, κῆδος 'defilement, care' (H.). Not related to ἀπομύσσω (see ►μύσσομαι and μύξα). See ►μύσος.

ἀμύω ⇒ἠμύω.

ἀμφασίη [f.] 'speechlessness' (P 695 = δ 704), of ἐπέων. ◄GR► •ETYM Equivalent of ἀφασίη (E.) from ἄφατος (►φημί), with ἀμ- indicating a long syllable, acc. to Chantraine 1942: 99. Perhaps modelled after ἀμβροσίη.

ἄμφην, -ενος ⇒αὐχήν.

ἀμφί [adv., prep.] 'around, on both sides' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$nt-b^hi* 'on both sides, around'► •VAR Also ἀμφίς [adv.] 'id., apart', more rare as a prep. 'around, outside of' (epic).
•DIAL Myc. a-pi, e.g. in a-pi-qo-ro-i /amp^{h}i-k^{w}oloi^{h}i/ 'servants' [dat.pl.]. Also in PNs, e.g. a-pi-a$_2$-ro /Amp^{h}ihalos/.
•ETYM This old adverb is originally a case form of the word for 'face', as is clearly shown by the cognate ToB āntpi, antapi 'both' < $h_2$ent-b^ho(i)-*; cf. Jasanoff BSL 71 (1976): 123-131 (see ►ἄμφω). Greek ἀμφί and Lat. amb(i)-, am-, an-, continue the instrumental $h_2$nt-b^hi*. Further forms: Alb. mbi 'at', W ambi-, OIr. imb-, OHG umbi 'around', Skt. abhí, OAv. aibī 'towards'. Grassmann's dissimilation law gave ἀμπ- in ἀμπ-έχω etc. The word is important in historical phonology, because it shows that a zero grade h_2n-* (cf. the OHG and IIr. forms) gives ἀν- in Greek (so-called Lex Rix).

ἀμφιάζω [v.] 'to clothe, put on' (Alciphr.). ◄GR► •ETYM Hellenistic innovation for ἀμφιέννυμι beside ἀμφιέζω, which was built on the aor. ἀμφι-έσαι.

ἀμφιᾱς, -ου [m.] name of a mediocre Sicilian wine (com.); cf. Ath. 31e, Suid. ◄GR► •VAR Cf. ἀμφής· οἴνου ἄνθος· οἱ δὲ μέλανα οἶνον 'the flower of the vine; red wine' (H.).
•ETYM -ιας is a suffix used in names of wines. See Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 356; is there a connection with ἀμφί, -ω? Fur.: 341 connects the gloss with ἀμφιάς, and also ►ὄμφαξ 'unripe grape', which is quite possible.

ἀμφίγυος ⇒γύης.

ἀμφιέζω ⇒ἀμφιάζω.

ἀμφικέλεμνον [m., n.] · ἀμφιβαρές· οἱ δὲ τὸν βασταζόμενον ὑπὸ δύο ἀνθρώπων δίφρον, ἄλλοι δὲ ἀμφίκοιλον ξύλον 'chariot-board borne by two men; wood hollowed on both sides' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀμφικελεμνίς· κατ' ὀβελῶν περικρέμασις ἰσορρόπως 'hanging down from a bar in equipoise' (H.).
•DIAL Myc. o-pi-ke-re-mi-ni-ja-pi /opi-kelemniāp^{h}i/ [ins.pl.] part of a chair (connection with κρεμάννυμι, supposing /-krēmn-/, is impossible; see ►κρημνός).
•ETYM Connected with ►κελέοντες by Fur.: 245. This seems quite possible, but he assumes a variation μ/ ϝ, which is unlikely. One might rather assume a suffix -μν- beside another formation.

ἀμφιλαφής ⇒λάφυρα.

ἀμφίον [n.] 'garment' (S.). ◄GR►
•VAR Or ἄμφιον (sch. D. T. 196).
•ETYM Shortened form of ἀμφίεσμα. See Grégoire Byzantion 13 (1938): 396ff.

ἀμφίπολος [f., m.] 'servant, handmaid' (Il.), also 'priest(ess)' (Pi.), i.e. 'one who takes care of the gods'. ◄IE $h_2$mb^{h}i-k^{w}ol(h_1)-o-* 'servant'►
•DIAL Myc. a-pi-qo-ro /amp^{h}i-k^{w}olos/.
•DER ἀμφιπολεῖον 'servant dwelling' (IG 4, 39 [Aigina V^a]), ἀμφιπολία 'servanthood' (D. S.). Denominatives ἀμφιπολεύω [v.] 'to work as a servant, ply, take care of' (epic, Hdt.), ἀμφιπολέω 'id.' (Pi., B.).
•ETYM From $h_2$mbi-k^{w}ol(h_1)-o-*, identical in origin with Lat. anculus 'servant' and Skt. abhicārá- 'witchcraft' (AV+); cf. Lat. anc(u)lāre 'to serve the gods' and Ved. pari-cará- 'servant'. See ►πέλομαι and ►βουκόλος.

ἀμφισβητέω [v.] 'to go asunder, disagree, dispute' (Att., Hdt.). ◄GR► •VAR Also -βᾰτέω (Ion., perhaps also Lesb., Rhod.?).

•DER ἀμφισβήτησις 'dispute, controversy, claim', juridical term (Att.), ἀμφισβητήσιμος 'controversial'; ἀμφισβητητικός 'belonging to the dispute' (Pl.). ἀμφισβήτημα 'dispute' (Pl., Arist.), ἀμφισβητηματικός (Aps.). From ἀμφισβατέω: ἀμφισβασίη (Hdt.).
•ETYM Compounded from ἀμφίς and βαίνειν (βῆναι) 'to go apart', as if from *ἀμφισβήτης or *ἀμφισβάτης 'who goes apart' (cf. ἐμπυριβήτης, παραι-βάτης).

Ἀμφιτρύων [m.] name of a king of Tiryns, later Thebes (Il.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Neumann 1983: 334 rejects the connection with τρύω, and starts from Amphi-tōr*, with a suffix -uōn like in ►ἀλεκτρύων.

ἀμφορεύς [m.] 'jar with two handles', also a measure (Ar., Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Also ἀμφιφορεύς (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. (KN) a-pi-po-re-we /amp^{h}i-p^{h}orēwes/, a-po-re-we /amp^{h}orēwe/ [du.].
•DER ἀμφορίδιον (Ar.), or -είδιον, see Schwyzer 471; ἀμφορίσκος [m.] (D., inscr.); ἀμφόριον (gloss.); unclear ἀμφορείῳ· φορτίῳ 'load' (H.). ἀμφορίτης as an adjective, of ἀγών, 'contest with an ἀ. as a prize', Call. fr. 80); as a substantive of uncertain mg. (PSI 5, 535, 31, see Redard 1949: 106f.; ἀμφορικός (sch.); ἀμφορίξ [adv.] (Eust.), whence a verb ἀμφορίζω was derived (Eust.).
•ETYM From ἀμφι-φορεύς, i.e. 'born on two sides', but with -ευς from the instrument nouns. Borrowed as Lat. amphora, diminutive ampulla.

ἀμφουδίς [adv.] hapax of uncertain mg. (ρ 237): ἀμφουδὶς ἀείρας. ◂?▸
•ETYM Interpreted as if ἀμφωδίς, from *ἀμφωϝαδίς 'by both ears'. Cf. ἐξωβάδια· ἐνώτια. Λάκωνες 'earrings (Lacon.)' (H.). See Bechtel 1914 s.v. and DELG.

ἄμφω [pron.] 'both' (Il.). ◂IE h_2(e)nt-b^{h}oh_1*▸ •VAR Later replaced by ἀμφότερος.
•ETYM Identical with Lat. ambō. The original form of the anlaut is found in ToA āmpi (ToB antapi, āntpi; see ►ἀμφί). Other languages have forms without the nasal: Skt. ubháu, Av. uua; OCS oba, Lith. abù. Germanic has no initial vowel, e.g. Go. bai. There is no overall explanation for the forms, but connection with ἀμφί seems clear.

ἄμωμον [n.] an Indian spice-plant, 'Amomum subulatum' (Hp.). ◂LW India▸ •DER ἀμωμίς [f.] 'false Amomum' (Dsc.), from Armenia; ἀμωμίτης λίβανος (Dsc.).
•ETYM An Oriental loanword; cf. ►κιννάμωμον. See André 1956 s.v. amōmum and E. Masson 1967: 50[3].

ἀμώσας [v.] · κρεμάσας, Ταραντῖνοι 'hung up (Tarantian)' (H.). ◂GR?▸ •ETYM Immisch Leipz. Stud. 8 (1885): 276 thinks this is an allegro-form of ἀνεμώσας. Latte suggests ἅμμωσας from *ἀμμιόω, which would be a denominative from ἅμμα 'something tied'. Possible, but hypothetical.

ἀμωσγέπως 'in some way'.
•ETYM From ἅμως γέ πως. See ►ἀμό-.

ἄμωτον = καστάνειον. ⇒μότα.

ἄν [pcl.] modal particle (IA, Arc.). ◂?▸

•ETYM The identification with the questioning particle Lat. an, Go. an (see Lee AmJPh. 88 (1967): 45ff.) becomes superfluous because of the ingenious connection with κε(ν), which derives from ken*. We have to assume that οὐ καν < Hoi̯u kn̥ was analyzed as οὐκ αν; see Forbes Glotta 37 (1958): 179-182.

ἀνά [prep.] 'up along' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$en-* 'up, on high'▸ •VAR With elision and apocope ἄν, ἀν; adverbial ἄνα.
•DIAL Myc. a-na-ke-e /an-age^{h}en/ [inf.]; perhaps /anō-/, in a-no-qa-si-a /anō-g^{w}asiā/ 'expedition (?)', etc. Lesb., Thess., Arc. and Cypr. have ὀν, giving ὐν- in Arc. and Cypr., cf. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 309.
•DER Adverb ἄνω, whence ἄνωθεν, ἀνωτέρω, ἀνωτάτω; on -ω see Schwyzer: 550.
•ETYM On the use of ἀνά, see DELG. It is an old adverb, also found in Iranian and Germanic: Av. ana, OP anā 'upwards, along'; Go. ana, OHG an(a), OE on 'on, at'. Perhaps also in Lat. an-hēlāre, an-testārī , Arm. am-baṙnam 'to raise', etc. It is doubtful that Skt. ánu 'along' derives from $h_1$enu*.

ἀναγαλλίς, -ίδος ⇒ἀγαλλίς.

ἀνάγκη [f.] 'force, necessity' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀναγκαίη (Il.) cf. Schwyzer: 469
•DER ἀναγκαῖος 'constrained, forced', also 'related by kinship' (since Il.), whence ἀναγκαιότης [f.] 'kinship' (Att., Hell.), also 'necessity' (S. E.); ἀναγκαιώδης 'indispensable' (ἀναγκαιωδέστερα sch.). Denominative verb: ἀναγκάζω [v.] 'to force, compel' (IA, not in Hom.), whence ἀνάγκασμα 'means of coercion' (J.); ἀναγκαστήρ 'coercer' (Amorgos), ἀναγκαστήριος 'compelling' (D. H.); ἀναγκαστικός 'id.' (Pl., Arist.). κατανάγκη kind of vetch, 'Ornithopus compressus', used in making philtres.
•ETYM The word has been compared with Celtic words for 'necessity, fate' (OIr. écen, W angen), which may go back to ank-* < $h_2$enk-*, and also the Germanic group of OHG āhta, MoHG Acht 'outlawry'. However, Matasović 2008 s.v. anku-* reconstructs the Celtic group as belonging to neḱu-* 'violent death'. NPhr. ανανκαι has an uncertain meaning and possibly a Greek loanword. Oettinger 1979: 175f. argued for the connection with Hitt. ḫenkan- 'death' (with ḫe- < h_2ē-* by Eichner's Law), but acc. to Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ḫai(n)k-$^{tta(ri)}$, the -e- must go back to a diphthong.
It is not excluded that ἀνάγκη is a substrate word; for the field of meaning, cf. ►ὕβρις, which has no good etymology either.

ἀνάγυρος [m.] 'stinking bean-trefoil, Anagyris foetida' (Ar.) ◂?▸
•VAR -ις [m.], also ὀνόγυρος (Nic.), where folk etymology after ὄνος (Strömberg 1940: 155) is improbable, as ἀνα- is very common in Greek.
•DER Thence the Attic deme Ἀναγυροῦς (Ar., Pl.).
•ETYM Unknown. The form with ὀνο- might point to a substrate word, as α/ ο is frequent in such words. Amigues RPh. 73 (1999): 147-154 starts from MLat. faba inversa 'inverted bean' and connects it with γυρός (CEG 6).

ἀναίνομαι ⇒αἶνος.

ἀναισιμόω ⇒αἶσα.

ἀνακάρδιον ⇒κάρδαμον.

ἀνακῶς [adv.] 'attentively, heedfully' (Hdt.). ◂GR▸
•VAR Only in ἀνακῶς ἔχειν τινός 'to pay attention to sth.'.
•ETYM From *ἀνακόως, adverb of *ἀνα-κόος, which is a verbal adjective from *ἀνα-κοέω 'to look after'; see ►κοέω. Cf. ἀμνο-κῶν 'simpleton', literally 'sheep-minded' (Ar.) < *ἀμνο-κόων.

ἀνακωχή ⇒ἀνοκωχή.

ἀναλεῖ [v.] · σχολάζει, Ταραντῖνοι 'is at leisure (Tarantian)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Latte corrects it to ἀναλεαίνει 'to brush, crush' (highly uncertain, see DELG).

ἀνᾱλίσκω [v.] 'to use up, spend, consume' (A.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Fut. ἀνᾱλώσω, aor. ἀνήλωσα, new present ἀνᾱλόω.
•DER ἀνᾱ́λωσις 'expenditure, consumption' (Thgn.), ἀνᾱ́λωμα 'id.' (Att.), ἀνήλωμα (pap., inscr.); secondary simplex ἄλωμα (Boeot.), see Fraenkel 1910: 119; diminutive ἀναλωμάτιον (Ph., pap.). ἀναλωτής 'squanderer' (Pl.), whence ἀναλωτικός (Pl., Ph.).
•ETYM From *ἀνα-ϝαλίσκω, originally 'to tear up'; cf. HG verzehren 'to consume'. See ►ἁλίσκομαι.

ἄναλτος [adj.] 'insatiable' (Od.). ◂IE $h_2$el- 'grow; make grow, feed'▸ •VAR Cf. ἄλτρον· μισθός 'reward' (H.); from 'what guarantees food' (DELG)?
•ETYM Negative verbal adjective of the root seen in Lat. alō, OIr. alim, ON ala 'to feed' and Go. alands 'τρεφόμενος, nourished', which in Greek only exists as a verbal root in enlarged form: ►ἀλδαίνω, perhaps ►ἀλθαίνω. Perhaps ►νεᾱλής 'fresh, not tired' is from the same root as well.

ἄναξ, -κτος [m.] 'lord, ruler' (Il.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Voc. ἄνα (Il.); plur. (ϝ)άνακες name of the Dioskouroi (Hom.); fem. (ϝ)άνασσα < wanak(t)-i̯a* 'mistress' (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. wa-na-ka /wanaks/; wa-na-ka-te /wanaktei/; wa-na-ka-te-ro = ϝανάκτερος, -ον, with -τερος indicating opposition like in ἀγρότερος, ὀρέστερος. wa-na-so-i /wanassoiin/ [dat.du.], also wa-na-se-wi-jo /wanass-ēwios/, -e-wi-ja /-ēwia/, of vases.
•COMP Ἀναξαγόρας, etc., Ἱππῶναξ, etc.
•DER ἀναξία 'command, rule' (Pi., A.), which may also derive from ἀνάσσω; adjective ἀνάξιος 'royal' (sch.). From (ϝ)άνακες derives (ϝ)ανάκειον 'temple of the Dioskouroi' (Att., NWGr.), Ἀνάκεια [pl.] festival for the Dioskouroi (Lys.), ἀνακώσιος [adj.] (Rhegion). Denominative ἀνάσσω [v.] 'to be lord, rule' (Il.).
•ETYM No IE etymology, and probably a substrate word. Are OPhr. vanaktei, NPhr. ουανακταν loans from Greek? The word is important for the interpretation of the Myc. signs of the z- and s-series: is wa-na-s° derived from the stem in -kt-, or from the stem in -k-? See Crespo Minos 19 (1985): 91-104, and Viredaz 1993. It is probable that the forms without -t- are younger, but see e.g. Ruijgh 1957: 112 and Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 309ff.

ἀναξυρίδες [f.] 'long, wide trousers', worn by the Persians and other eastern peoples (Hdt.). ◂LW Iran.▸
•ETYM Persian loanword. Cf. R. Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 96.

ἀναξυρίς = ὀξαλίς 'sour wine' (Dsc.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀναρίτης ⇒νηρίτης.

ἀναρριχάομαι [v.] 'to climb with hands and feet' (Ar.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἀρριχάομαι (Hippon.); called obsolete by Lucian; perhaps shortened from ἀναρρ-.
•ETYM Unknown. See Solmsen IF 13 (1902/03): 132ff. and Ehrlich 1912: 53.

ἀνάρσιος [adj., m.] 'incongruous', hence 'strange, hostile' (Il.); equivalent of δυσμενής. ◂GR▸ •DER Cf. ἄρσιον· δίκαιον 'just, lawful' (H.), which is explained as a back-formation to ἀνάρσιος (see Frisk 1941: 7).
•ETYM Generally assumed to be a derivative of ►ἀραρίσκω 'not fitting'.

ἀνασταλύζω [v.] 'to burst into tears' (Anacr. 43, 4). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR ἀστυλάζει· λυπεῖ μετὰ κλαυθμοῦ 'grieves with weeping' (H.) probably stands for *ἀσταλύζει.
•ETYM Cf. ἀσταλύχειν (read -ύζειν?)· ἀνα[β]λύζειν, κλαίειν 'weep' (H.), νεόσταλυξ· νεοδάκρυτος 'who just cried' (H.); cf. also στάλυξ, to be read for στάληξ in Zonar., = σταλαγμός 'drop'. Cf. ►σταλάσσω, -άζω 'to drip, drop'. The suffix is also in other words for 'crying etc.': γρύζω, ἰύζω, ὀλολύζω, ὀτοτύζω. The prothetic ἀ- of ἀσταλυγ- beside στάλυξ could be a prothetic vowel; if so, this points to substrate origin.

ἀναστίδωνος [adj.] · ἀνατεταμένος 'lifted up' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀνασυρτόλις ⇒σύρω.

ἄνατεί ⇒ἀάω.

ἄναυρος [m.] 'torrent' (Mosch.); also a river name in Thessaly (Hes. Sc. 477) and Acarnania. ◂PG▸ •ETYM Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 51ff. interpreted the word as "waterless", from the dried up river-bed in summer, comparing ἄναυρος: ὁ ἐξ ὑετῶν συνιστάμενος ποταμός 'river arising out of heavy showers' (EM); see discussion on χαράδρα s.v. ►χέραδος. It was therefore analyzed as a privative ἀν- and a word for 'water', which is not attested but supposed in ►Ἄγλαυρος (but see there), and further in θησαυρός and Κένταυρος (Kretschmer l.c.). The source name Αὔρα (Nonnos) was also compared, and Krahe IF 48 (1930): 216 connected it with Italic (Illyrian?) HNs like Metaurus, Pisaurus, as well as HNs like Avara, Avantia (Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch.

4 (1953): 49 and 115). Having thus been etymologized, the second element was further compared with Skt. vā̆r(i) and the Gm. group of ON aurr [m.] 'whet, water' (Pok. 80f.), but since that root contains no initial laryngeal, it could never yield Gr. αὐ-. No doubt, the word is non-Greek, and probably non-IE (if the connection with Krahe's river names is correct). The assumption of a privative ἀν- is highly improbable; such assumptions are due to the desire to interpret everything as Greek and as Indo-European as possible, even when all facts point in a different direction. The further comparison with HNs without -r- in Fur.: 230 is doubtful.

ἀνδάνω [v.] 'to please' (Il.); used in a political context as 'it pleased the people (to decide)', hence 'to decide'. ◁IE *sueh$_2$d-▷ •VAR Aor. ἁδεῖν (Aeol. εὔαδον in Hom.), perf. ἕᾱδα. Present also Att. ►ἥδομαι.
•DIAL Dor. ἆδάνω should perhaps be assumed on the basis of ἀδάνοντα· ἀρέσκοντα 'pleasing' (H.); Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 353; cf. ληθάνω.
•COMP αὐθάδης (see s.v.).
•DER ἅδος 'decision, resolution' (Halic., Thasos), ἅδημα· ψήφισμα 'decree, law' (H.); also ϝάδιξις in γάδιξις· ὁμολογία and ἅδιξις· ὁμολογία παρὰ Ταραντίνοις 'agreement (Tarantian)' (H.) (to *ϝαδίζομαι).
•ETYM The initial ϝ- is seen in Aeol. εὔαδε, Cret. ἔϝαδε < PGr. e-swad-e and in Locr. ϝεϝαδηϙότα. The root is that of ►ἥδομαι, ►ἡδύς; see also ►αὐθᾱ́δης. Sanskrit has svádati 'to make savory', which derives from *suh$_2$-n̥-d- acc. to LIV, but is rather from *sueh$_2$d-e- with loss of laryngeal per Lubotsky's Law (Lubotsky MSS 40 (1981): 133). The factitive in Lat. suādeō 'to advise, recommend' is reminiscent of the Greek meaning 'to decide'.

ἄνδηρα [n.pl.] 'raised bank of a river or ditch; dike, border of the sea, seed-bed' (Hyp.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Rarely sing. ἄνδηρον.
•DER ἀνδηρευτής 'workman employed on dikes' (pap.).
•ETYM Neumann 1961: 91 points to the fact that many words connected with irrigation look non-Indo-European: beside ἄνδηρα, he mentions ἄρδω 'to irrigate' and γοργύρα 'underground drain'. Fur.: 204[10] thinks that -ηρον is a non-IE suffix. Ibid. 347, he compares the Thracian place name Ἔνδηρον, but there is little support for this.

ἄνδινος [m.]? · περίπατος (cod. περὶ παντός) 'walking about' (H.); acc. to Hemsterhuis, <παρὰ Ταραντίνοις> from the following line belongs in this gloss too. ◁?▷
•DER ἀνδινίω (cod. ἀναδινίω)· περιπατῶ 'to walk up and down' (H.) is Doric.
•ETYM Uncertain. On Illyrian and Messapian hypotheses, see Frisk s.v. Alternatively, is it from δινέω (s.v. ►δῖνη)? See Forssman 1966: 61f.

ἀνδράποδον [n.] 'prisoner of war sold as a slave, slave' (Il.); on the spread of the word see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 76. ◁GR▷ •DER Diminutive ἀνδραπόδιον (Hyp., Diph., pap.). Adjective ἀνδραποδώδης 'slave-like' (Pl., Arist.), whence ἀνδραποδωδία 'servile attitude' (Arist., Plu.). Denominative verb ἀνδραποδίζω, -ομαι [v.] 'to enslave, sell as slaves' (IA); thence ἀνδραπόδισις 'enslavement' (Xen.), -ισμός 'id.' (Att.). ἀνδραποδιστής 'slave trader' (Att.); ἀνδραποδιστικός 'ptng. to slave trade' (Pl., Eup.); ἀνδραποδιστήριος 'id.' (Tz.).
•ETYM The plural ἀνδράποδα 'of whom only the feet are human' is original; this form was modelled after τετράποδα 'quadruped' and is originally a consonant stem (cf. [dat.pl.] ἀνδραπόδεσσι [H 475]). From ἀνδράποδα, the thematic sing. ἀνδράποδον was derived. See Wackernagel KZ 30 (1890): 298 and Leumann 1950: 157f. On the -α-, see Bader RPh. 43 (1969): 31.

ἀνδράχνη [f.] plant name 'Portulaca oleracea', also 'Sedum stellatum' (Thphr.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR With dissimilation ἀνδράχλη (Thphr.); also ἄνδραχνος [f.] (Paus.).
•ETYM Fur.: 288 compares ἀθραγένη, which is formally quite acceptable, i.e. *(a)^{n}trak(V)n/l-, with metathesis of aspiration (197[2], 393), variation n/ l (388), the common phenomenon of prenasalization, and anaptyxis of ε. Substrate origin is probable anyhow.

ἀνδρεϊφόντῃ [adj.] in Ἐνυαλίῳ ἀ. (B 651). ◁IE *h$_2$nr-g^{wh}on-teh$_2$- 'man-slayer'▷ •ETYM The epithet was changed after ►ἀργεϊφόντης: it should be read as ἀνr̥φοντ- 'slaying men', with an extremely old zero grade of *h$_2$nr̥-. Cf. ►ἀνδροτής, and see R. Schmitt 1967: 124f.

ἀνδριάς ⇒ἀνήρ.

Ἀνδρομάχη [f.] the wife of Hektor (Il.). ◁GR▷
•ETYM Called this way because her husband is a famous warrior. Likewise, Hektor's son has the name Ἀστυάναξ ('ruler, protector of the city'), after his father's deeds. See Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 103.

ἀνδρόμητον · συσπαστόν ἐγχειρίδιον τραγικόν 'stage-dagger (in tragedy)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM A Tarentine gloss; see Latte. DELG derives the word from ἀνά and δρόμος, which seems doubtful; the structure remains unclear.

ἀνδροτής [m.] 'manhood, strength' (Π 857, etc.). ◁IE *h$_2$ner- 'man'▷ •ETYM ἀνδροτῆτα only fits the hexameter if it is read anr̥tāta, with old vocalic *-r̥. Arguments in favor of the antiquity of this epithet are found in Ruijgh 1995: 85-91. Arguments against this interpretation were developed by Berg following Tichy Glotta 59 (1981): 55.

ἄνεμος [m.] 'wind' (Il.). ◁IE *h$_2$enh$_1$-mo- 'wind'▷ •DIAL Myc. (KN) a-ne-mo (i-je-re-ja) /anemōn (^{h}iereiā)/.
•COMP νηνεμίη 'calm' < *n̥-h$_2$n-, see on ►νήνεμος.
•DER ἠνεμόεις 'windy' (epic poet.), metrically lengthened; ἀνεμώλιος 'idle, useless' (Il.), after ἀποφώλιος (Bechtel 1914, Chantraine 1933: 43; Risch 1937: 122 reminds of ἀπατήλιος); see on μεταμώνιος. Further ἀνεμώδης 'windy' (Hp., Arist., Hell.); ἀνεμιαῖος 'windy, vain' (Pl., com., Alciphr.), after adjectives of measure in -ιαῖος? ἀνεμώτας· ὄνος ἄφετος, ἱερός, τοῖς ἀνέμοις θυόμενος ἐν Ταραντίνοις 'a donkey let loose, sacred, being offered to the winds (Tarent.)' (H.); ἀνεμῶτις epithet of Athena

(who calms the wind; Paus.). ἀνεμία 'flatulence' (Hp.); on ►ἀνεμώνη s.v. Denominative verbs: ἀνεμόομαι 'to be(come) inflated' (Hp., Pl.); ἀνεμίζομαι 'to be driven with the wind' (Ep. Jak.).
•ETYM Gr. ἄνεμος agrees with Lat. animus < *anamo-; Skt. ánila- [m.] 'wind, air' has -lo-. Further, Arm. hołm 'wind' arose by dissimilation of n--m and has o-vocalism. This may point to an original m-stem nom. *h_2onh_1-m, obl. *h_2nh_1-em-. The verbal root *h_2enh_1- is present in Skt. ániti 'breathes', OIr. anaid, -ana 'to wait, remain' and in Go. us-anan 'to exhale'; a different present formation is in PTo. *anask- < QIE *h_2enh_1-ske/o-. See ►ἄσθμα, ►ἄνται.

ἀνεμώνη [f.] the plant 'anemone' (Cratin.). ⊲LW?⊳
•DER ἀνεμωνίς [f.] = ἀνεμώνη ἥμερος (Nic.).
•ETYM Derivation from ἄνεμος is supported by Strömberg 1940: 77. An improbable Semitic etymology was proposed by Lewy 1895: 49. It is more likely a loanword, perhaps from the substrate.

ἀνενετεῖ [v.] · ἀρνεῖται 'denies' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 34, we should read *ἀναινετεῖ (cf. ἀναίνομαι); or is it rather misspelled for ἀναίνεται?

ἄνευ [adv.] 'far from, without' (Il.). ⊲IE *sn(H)- 'without'⊳ •DIAL ἄνευν (Epidauros), ἄνευς (Olympia), ἄνις (Megara apud Ar.); cf. χωρίς.
•DER ἄνευθε(ν) (Il.) and ἀπάνευθεν.
•ETYM No exact correspondence exists. ἄνευ looks like the old locative of a u-stem. The comparison with Germanic forms like Go. inu 'without' < *enu and OHG ānu 'id.' < *ēnu cannot explain the Greek ἀ- (the suggestion that the Germanic forms contain a lengthened grade *h_2ēn(e)u- (Nikolaev 2007: 165) is morphologically unwarranted, and Eichner's Law that long vowels are not colored by an adjacent laryngeal is unacceptable).
A better comparison is with Skt. sanutár 'away, off, aside' < *sen(H)u-ter (or *snHu-?), Lat. sine 'without' < *seni < *snH-i, and ToA sne, ToB snai < *snH-i. Thus, the Greek form could be from *snh_1-eu > *saneu. In this case, ἄνευ must be a psilotic form. Within Greek, ►ἄτερ may be cognate, but it would exclude a root-final laryngeal. I have no solution for this problem.

ἀνεψιός [m.] 'cousin' (Il.). ⊲IE *(h_2)nepot- 'grandson'⊳ •DER Secondary fem. ἀνεψιά 'id.' (Isoc., X.). Further ἀνεψιαδοῦς [m.] 'cousin's son' (com., D.), cf. ἀδελφιδοῦς; also ἀνεψιάδης (Pachnemunis, Iamb.), to which ἀνεψιαδῆ 'cousin's daughter' (Ar.). ἀνεψιότης, -ητος [f.] 'cousinhood' (Pl.).
•ETYM Corresponds with Av. naptiia- 'descendant' and OCS netii 'nephew', derived from the word for 'grandson, nephew' seen in Skt. nápāt, Lat. nepōs, etc. The ἀ- can be *h_2-, but possibly represents *sm̥-, expressing the reciprocity of the relation (Benveniste 1969(1): 234). Not related to ►νέποδες.

ἄνεῳ, ἄνεω [adv.] 'silent(ly)' (Il.), a predicate of plural subjects except in ψ 93 ἄνεω ἧστο. ⊲GR?⊳
•VAR Recent ἄνεως· ἄφωνος 'mute' (Gal. Lex. Hp.).

•COMP ἀνεοστασίη· θάμβος 'amazement' (H.).
•ETYM Eust. ad Ψ 93 takes the form as an adverb (perhaps Aristarchus as well, see Buttmann 1825(2): 2); the notation with -ι was supposed to be due to the interpretation as an adjective with plural subjects. Acc. to traditional interpretation (see Chantraine 1942: 249), it is an old instrumental in -ω. However, Peters 1993b: 85ff. asserts that it is an occidental Ionic form continuing *an-āwo- 'without voice' (with quantitative metathesis), for which he compares the gloss ἄβα· βοή. The form ἄνεῳ is the original nom.pl., while ἄνεω arose by reanalysis as an adverb.

ἄνηθον [n.] 'dill, Anethum Graveolens' (Aeol., Att.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also ἄννηθον (Ar.); ἄνητον (Alc.), ἄννητον (Thphr.).
•DER ἀνήθινος 'made of dill' (Theoc., Dsc.), ἀνηθίτης οἶνος (Gp.).
•ETYM Cf. λάπαθον and other plant names in -θον (-θος) (Chantraine 1933: 368). The word is Egyptian, acc. to Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 240. Fur.: 254 compares ►ἄννησον; for the equation, cf. the gloss s.v. ►ἄνθρυσκον. On the gemination, see ibid. 387; for variation θ/σ, see ibid. 253ff.

ἀνήνοθεν [v.] 'gushed forth, mounted up' (Λ 266, ρ 270). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM The relation of this form to ἐπ-εν-ήνοθε and παρ-εν-ήνοθε is unclear, and therefore the etymology uncertain. See ►ἐνθεῖν; not related to ►ἄνθος. Nikolaev 2007: 165[15] assumes a root *h_2ned^h- 'to move/stick out' [not in LIV²], but the Schwebeablaut makes connection with ἄνθος improbable.

ἀνηπελίη ⇒νηπελέω.

ἀνήρ [m.] 'man' (Il.). ⊲IE *$h_2$ner- 'man'⊳
•VAR Gen. ἀνδρός, acc. ἄνδρα (analogical; Hom. has the old form ἀνέρα < *$h_2$ner-m, whence gen. ἀνέρος, etc.).
•DIAL Myc. a-di-ri-ja-te /andriantei/, a-di-ri-ja-pi /andrian(t)p^hi/, A-ta-no (see below on compounds).
•COMP As a first member ἀνδρο-: -κμητος, -κτασία; on ►ἀνδράποδον s.v. As a second member -ήνωρ, e.g. ῥηξ-, φθεισ- (Hom.); in PNs Ἀγ-ήνωρ, Myc. A-ta-no /Antānōr/; fem. ἀντι-άνειρα, κυδι-άνειρα; as a second member -ανδρος in ἄν-ανδρος, ἔλ-ανδρος; PNs especially in Asia Minor and Cyprus: Ἡγήσ-ανδρος, Τέρπ-; Hom. Ἀλέξ-.
•DER Diminutive ἀνδρίον (com.), whence (with an unclear suffix -nt-) ἀνδριάς, -άντος 'statue' (Pi., IA). ἀνδρίς [f.] 'woman' (Sm.); ἀνδρ(ε)ών [m.] 'men's room' (Hdt.), ἀνδρώνιον (Delos) and ἀνδρωνῖτις 'id.' (Lys., X.).
Abstracts: ἀνδρεία (-ηίη, -ία) 'manliness, courage' (A.); ἀνδροτής, -τῆτος 'id.' (Π 857, Ω 6), on which see Ruijgh 1995: 88ff.; ἠνορέη 'id.' (Hom.) for Aeolic ἀνορέα < *-ρία, perhaps from a compound, cf. εὐανορία (Pi.). Thence ἀνόρεος (S.).
Adjectives: ἀνδρεῖος (Ion. ἀνδρήϊος, cf. Chantraine 1933: 52, Schwyzer: 468 : 3) 'manly, courageous', whence ἀνδρειόω [v.] 'to make courageous' (LXX); ἀνδρικός 'of the man, manly' (Att.), ἀνδρόμεος 'human' (Il.), with -μεος = Skt. -maya- (?); ἀνδρώδης 'manly' (Emp.).

Denominative verbs: ἀνδρόομαι [v.] 'to become a man' (Hdt., Hp., E.), -όω 'to turn into a man (trans.)' (Lyc.); ἀνδρύνομαι [v.] 'to become a man' (Ps. Callisth.); ἀνδρίζομαι [v.] 'to become a man, represent a man' (Att.), -ίζω 'to turn into a man (trans.)' (X.).
•ETYM ἀνήρ is identical with Arm. ayr, gen. aṙn 'man', Skt. nā́, obl. nár-, NPhr. αναρ, Italic ner- in Osc. nerum 'virorum', Lat. Nerō (Sabellic), W ner 'chief', and Alb. njerí 'human being, person'. The gloss ► νωρεῖ does not belong here.

ἄνθεμον ⇒ἄνθος.

ἀνθερεών •VAR ἀνθέριξ. ⇒ ἀθήρ.

ἀνθίας, -ου [m.] a fish, 'Labrus anthias' (Anan.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Connected with ἄνθος 'flower' by Strömberg 1943: 26 because of its color; Thompson 1947 s.v. differs on this.

ἄνθος [n.] 'flower' (Il.). ◂IE? *h_2end^h- 'sprout'▸ •DER 1. Substantives. Diminutives ἀνθύλλιον (M. Ant., Dsc.), also a plant, like ἀνθυλλίς (Dsc.) and ἄνθυλλον (Ps.-Dsc.); ἀνθήλιον v.l. for ἀνθύλλιον (Dsc. 3, 156; 4, 121), also = κανθήλιον (Charax); ἀνθάλιον a plant, cf. Chantraine 1933: 74; ἀνθάριον· ἐρύθημα 'redness, blush' (H.).
Further ἀνθήλη 'a crown of flowers' (Thphr.), or from ἀνθέω? Thence ἀνθηλᾶς [m.] 'flower trader' vel sim.; ἀνθεών [m.] 'flowerbed' (Amasia), ἀνθών (gloss.).
ἀνθηδών [f.] 'bee' (cf. ἀνθρηδών and Chantraine 1933: 361), also a plant. ἀνθοσύνη 'Blüte' (AP). On ► ἀνθίας see there. Ἀνθεστήρια [n.pl.] 'spring festival' (IA), see Chantraine 1933: 63, Schwyzer: 470), month name Ἀνθεστηριών.
Independent formation ἄνθεμον [n.] 'flower, rosette' (Sappho); acc. to Frisk, it cannot be a recent back-formation (as per Leumann 1950: 249ff.), as there are many derivatives; for the formation cf. ἄργεμον and Chantraine 1933: 132, Ruijgh 1957: 102f. Thence ἀνθεμώδης 'rich in flowers' (poet. since Sappho), ἀνθεμωτός 'id.' (Attica), ἀνθεμίς plant name, also 'little flower' (Nic.), ἀνθεμίσιον plant name (Alex. Trall.), ἀνθέμιον 'blossom' (X., Thphr.); Hom. PNs Ἀνθεμίων and Ἀνθεμίδης (acc. to Leumann l.c.), TN Ἀνθεμοῦς (Macedonia). Derived poetic verbs ἀνθεμίζομαι and ἐπανθεμίζω (A., S. [lyr.]).
2. Adjectives: ἄνθινος 'made of flowers, variegated' (ι 84, Hp., Arist.); ἀνθηρός 'rich in flowers', metaph. 'fresh, lush' (S., E., Ar., etc.) is rather from ἀνθέω (Chantraine 1933: 232). Other adjectives are isolated and late (see Frisk).
3. Verb ἀνθέω 'to bloom, blossom' (Od., IA), often metaph.; thence ἄνθησις 'blossom' (Thphr., Plu.), ἐξ-ανθέω, ἐξάνθησις (Hp., Th.) and ἐξάνθημα (Hp., Arist.). Backformation ἄνθη 'flowering' (Pl., Nic., Ael.); verbal adj. ἀνθητικός = ἀνθικός (Thphr.). ἀνθίζω 'to cover with flowers, decorate', with several preverbs (Hdt., S., E., Arist.).
•ETYM ἄνθος has been equated with Skt. ándhas- [n.] 'sprout of the soma plant', but see the objections by Burrow Archiv. Linguist. 6 (1954): 61 and Chantraine. Uncertain is the appurtenance of Alb. endë 'flour'; see Meyer 1891: 5. The word is perhaps also related to Arm. and 'field'. The comparison with EFris. åndul 'marsh grass' and its Germanic cognates does not inspire confidence. A connection with ► ἀνήνοθεν (Schwebeablaut *h_2end^h- : h_2nod^h-) is improbable.

ἄνθραξ, -ᾰκος [m.] 'charcoal' (Ar.), metaph. 'carbuncle' (Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Mostly plur. ἄνθρακες.
•DER Many derivatives: diminutive ἀνθράκιον (Thphr.), ἀνθρακιά 'heap of coals' (I 213); ἀνθρακίας "coal-man" (Luc.); ἀνθρακίτης [m.] name of a gem (Plin.), -ῖτις [f.] 'kind of coal' (Plin.); ἀνθρακών [m.] 'heap of coals' (Hdn.), ἀνθράκωμα 'id.' (Dsc.); ἀνθρακάριος· carbonarius (gloss.). Adjectives: ἀνθρακώδης 'like charcoal' (Hp., Arist.), ἀνθρακηρός 'of charcoal' (Alex., Delos), ἀνθράκινος 'of carbuncle' (LXX, pap.).
Denominative verbs: 1. ἀνθρακόομαι 'to be burnt to coals' (A., E., Thphr.), 'to develop an ulcer' (Aët.); thence ἀνθράκωσις 'carbonization' (Dsc.), also 'ulcer' (Paul. Aeg., Gal.). 2. ἀνθρακεύω 'to burn charcoal, carbonize' (Ar., Thphr.); deverbal ἀνθρακεύς 'charcoal burner' (App., Aesop., Them.; φιλανθρακεύς already in Ar.); ἀνθρακευτής 'id.' (And., Ael.), ἀνθρακεία 'carbonization' (Thphr.). 3. ἀνθρακίζω 'to roast on charcoal' (Ar., pap.); back-formation ἀνθρακίδες 'small fish for roasting' (Philyll.); cf. ἐπανθρακίδες 'id.' (Ar.) to ἐπανθρακίζω.
•ETYM One compares Arm. ant'el 'charcoal', and further Georg. nt'* in v-a-nt'-ab 'to kindle' (Vogt NTS 9 (1962/63): 333), but the formations are different. Fur.: 197, 393 compares ἀνδράχλη 'warming-pan, brazier' (Eust.) (cf. ἀνθράκιον 'brazier'), and furter (391) κάνδαρος· ἄνθραξ (H.), with the interchange κ/ zero. Also note the suffix -ακ- (see Pre-Greek). Therefore, a substrate origin is clear; a comparison with Hitt. āant- 'warm' is useless, as it does not explain the formation of the Greek word.

ἀνθρηδών, -όνος [f.] 'hornet' (D. S.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER ἀνθρήνη [f.] 'bee, wasp' (Ar., Arist.); thence ἀνθρήνιον [n.] 'wasps' nest' (Ar.), ἀνθρηνιώδης 'built like a wasps' nest' (Plu.).
ἀνθηδών [f.] 'bee' (Damocr. apud Gal.).
Further ► τενθρηδών [f.] (Arist., Dsc.), ► πεμφρηδών [f.] 'kind of wasp' (Nic.).
•ETYM No doubt a substrate word. Beside ἀνθρηδών, ἀνθρήνη, we find τενθρηδών (Arist.), τενθρήνη (Nic.); τενθρήνιον (Arist.). There are several forms which lack the first nasal: τεθρηνιώδης (Hp.), ἀθρήνη (Suidas, etc.), and forms without reduplication or initial ἀ-, e.g. θρήνη (Eust.) and θρηνώδης (Democr. apud Ael.). Cf. further θρῶναξ· κηφήν. Λάκωνες 'drone (Lacon.)' (H.), though I know of no other cases with the interchange η/ ω. Further note πεμφρηδών [f.] a wasp (Nic.).
In sum, we have a root θρη/ων- with a prothetic vowel or reduplication (cf. κεκρύφαλος, Σίσυφος) and prenasalization; see Kuiper 1956: 221f. We may reconstruct PG (a)Ntrān-, ta-Ntrān-. For the interchange ν/ δ, we may perhaps compare φληναφάω : φληδῶντα. Πεμφρηδών could show that the word had a labiovelar (see Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 12f.). There is no ground to assume that τενθρήνη, τενθρηδών are dissimilated from *τερθρ-; relation to ἀθήρ, ἀνθέριξ is improbable. Needless to say, the connection with ► θρέομαι, ► θόρυβος (Frisk) makes no sense. τεθρηδών· πρωρεύς 'officer in command at the bow' (H.) is a joking formation from the language of sailors, modelled after animal names in -ηδών (see Chantraine 1933: 360f.).

A difficult problem is the relation to Germanic and Balto-Slavic words for 'drone': OS dren, drāno, MoHG Drohne, Lith. trānas; on this, see Kuiper 1956: 222.

ἄνθρυσκον [n.] 'chervil, Scandix australis' (Sapph.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἔνθρυσκον (Pherecr.).
•DER ἀνθρίσκος [m.] (Pollux 6, 106); ἀνθρίσκιον· λάχανον ἔχον ἄνθος, ὡς ἄνηθον, ἢ τὸ ἄννησον 'garden herbs, such as dill' (H.).
•ETYM No etymology. Connected with ἀθήρ, ἀνθέριξ because of the prickly fruits (Frisk). Fur.: 364 points to the interchange ι/ υ; for ε/ α, he considers the assimilation α > ε before ι/ υ, which is doubtful. He rejects θρύσκα· ἄγρια λάχανα 'wild herbs' (H.) as a mistake for ἄνθρυσκα. Because of the variations, a substrate origin seems certain.

ἄνθρωπος [m.] 'man' (Il.). ◂PG(S)▸
•DIAL Myc. a-to-ro-qo /ant^{h}rōk^{w}os/.
•DER Diminutives, usually depreciatory: ἀνθρώπιον (E., com.), ἀνθρωπίσκος (E., Ar., Pl.), ἀνθρωπάριον (com.).
Further derivatives: ἀνθρωπώ· ἡ γυνὴ παρὰ Λάκωσιν 'woman (Lacon.)' (H.); ἀνθρωπέη, -πῆ [f.] 'human skin' (Hdt., Poll.); ἀνθρωπότης [f.] 'humanity' (Ph., S. E.). Adjectives: ἀνθρώπειος 'human' (Ion. etc. -ήϊος), ἀνθρώπινος 'id.' (IA), ἀνθρωπικός 'id.' (Pl., Arist.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἀνθρωπίζομαι 'to behave like a man' (Ar., Luc.); thence ἀνθρωπισμός 'humankind' (Aristipp.); 2. ἀνθρωπεύομαι [v.] 'to behave like a man' (Arist.); 3. ἀνθρωπόομαι 'to be human' (Plu.).
•ETYM ἄνθρωπος resembles Hitt. antuu̯aḫḫaš- / antuḫš- 'man', but it has nothing to do with it, as the latter derives from a compound $h_1$en-d^hu(e)h_2-s- 'having breath/spirit inside' (cf. θυμός < d^huh_2-mó-). As no IE explanation has been found, the word is probably of substrate origin. The occurrence of -oq- in Mycenaean does not prove Indo-European origin, as the substrate language also had labiovelars (e.g. βασιλεύς, Myc. qa-si-re-u). Kuiper had already given a substrate interpretation on the basis of δρώψ (Kuiper 1956: 211f and Kuiper Lingua 21 (1968): 275f., defended by Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 13-15). Rosén KZ 99 (1986): 243f., incorrectly assumes that the laryngeals had an aspirating effect. Improbable suggestions are offered by Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 312 and Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 655f.

ἀνία [f.] 'grief, distress' (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR Att. either ῑ or ῐ; Hom. always -ῑη. ἄνια [n.pl.] 'id.' (A. Pers. [lyr.]) is taken to be a back-formation after e.g. φιλία: φίλιος.
•DIAL Aeol. ὀνία (Sappho 1, 3).
•DER ἀνιαρός, -ηρός (Od., IA) 'uncomfortable, grievous'. Denominative verbs: ἀνιάω 'to grieve, distress' (Od., IA); also ἀνιάζω (epic since Il.).
•ETYM The connection with Skt. ámīvā [f.] 'disease, pain' requires an unwarranted dissimilation m – u̯ > n – u̯, and should be rejected. Kuiper AION 1 (1959): 157ff. assumes a pre-from *an-is-yā < n̥-is-io-, from the root of Skt. iṣ- 'to desire', comparing Skt. an-iṣṭa- 'unwished for'.

As remarked by Nikolaev 2006, derivation from $h_2$eis- 'to search' is semantically not very convincing. He proposes instead to connect the root $h_1$eis(h_2)- 'to refresh, etc.', reconstructing n̥-(h_1)is(h_2)-i̯i̯o- (sic!). The suffix -i̯i̯o- is assumed to explain the length of ῑ, but a collective n-His-ih_2 > PGr. anihja would do better both formally and semantically (the transition to a feminine is trivial).
The reflex of the vocalized nasal in Aeolic is debated: see the discussion by Nikolaev (ibid.: fn. 21), who adduces a suggestion by Bechtel that the PNs Παυσανίας and Λυσανίας contain the genuine Aeolic variant.

ἀνιγρός [adj.] 'unpleasant' (Nic.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀνιγρόν· ἀκάθαρτον, φαῦλον, κακόν, δυσῶδες, ἀσεβές 'foul, mean, bad, malodorous, impure' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Connection with ►νίζω is improbable, as this had a labiovelar -g^w-.

ἄννησον [n.] 'anise, Pimpinella Anisum' (Hp.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἄνησον (v.l. in codd.); ἄνησσον (Dsc.); ἄννησσον (inscr. Delos II^a).
•ETYM Probably the same word as ►ἄνηθον. The variation ν/νν (perhaps also σ/σσ) and the intervocalic -σ- demonstrate substrate origin.

ἀννίς [f.] · μητρὸς ἢ πατρὸς μήτηρ 'mother of one's mother or father' (H.; also IG 7, 3380 [Boeotia]). ◂IE $h_2$en- 'grandmother'▸ •VAR ἀνώ in acc. ἀνών (IG 9(2), 877 [Larisa]).
•ETYM Perhaps an elementary formation, like Hitt. anna- 'mother'. However, Hitt. ḫanna- and Lyc. χñna- 'grandmother' have an initial laryngeal, like Arm. han 'grandmother', Lat. anna 'foster-mother' and OHG ana 'grandmother, ancestor'.

ἀνόκαιον · ὑπερῷον 'upper part of a house'. γράφεται καὶ ἀνώγειον (H.). ⇒ἀνώγαιον.

ἀνοκωχή [f.] 'cessation', especially 'cessation of arms, truce' (Th.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Also ἀνακωχή.
•DER Denominative ἀνοκωχεύω [v.] 'to hold back, hinder' (Hdt., S., etc.), also ἀνακ-; ἀνακωχέω (Hp.).
•ETYM Reduplicated derivative of ἀνέχω, like διοκωχή from διέχω; cf. ►ἀκώκη. The form with ἀνα- was introduced after the formation had become opaque. The formation is clearly recent, as there is no trace of the initial aspiration (root hek^h-). See ►ἔχω.

ἀνόπαια [adv.]? hapax of uncertain mg. (α 320); also the mountain (in the Oeta) and the pass through which the Persians circumvented the pass of Thermopylae (Hdt. 7, 216). ◂GR?▸
•VAR ἀνοπαῖα Hdn. 2, 133; ἀνόπαιος epithet of fire (Emp. 51), perhaps 'up by the hole in the roof'(?).
•ETYM Already unclear in antiquity (see DELG). Bechtel 1914 thinks that it is a hypostasis of ἀνὰ τῇ ὀπῇ 'on high through the hole of the roof'; Chantraine thinks it must be an adverb (ntr.plur.) because of the short -α.

ἄντα [adv.] 'over against, face to face' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$ent- 'face'▸

•VAR Also ἄντην.
•DER ἀντᾱ́εις 'hostile' (Pi.). Denominative verb ἀντάω 'to come towards, meet with' (Il.); ἀπ-αντάω 'to meet' (IA), ἀπάντησις 'encounter' (S., Arist.) and ἀπάντημα 'id.' (E., LXX).
•ETYM The root noun *ἀντ- gave rise to a derivative ἄντομαι 'to meet, implore' (Il.). ἄντα is the accusative of this noun; the locative is ►ἀντί, and the old instrumental $h_2$nt-b^hi is continued in ►ἀμφί; see there for further etymology. ἄντην was perhaps formed after δήν, πλήν, etc.; the case form is still apparent in ἔναντα = ἐν ἄντα, etc. For the meaning, we may compare especially Go. and(a)- 'against', Lith. añt and OLith. antà 'towards'.

ἄνται [f.pl.] · ἄνεμοι 'winds' (H.). ◄IE? $h_2$ueh_1- 'blow'► •VAR ἀντάς· πνοάς 'breezes, breaths' (H.).
•ETYM To be corrected to ἄηται, ἀήτας? Derivation from $h_2$enh_1- 'breathe' (see ►ἄνεμος) is impossible, as this would give *ἄνεται < $h_2$enh_1-t- or *ἄται < h_2n̥h_1-t-). See discussion on ἀήτης s.v. ►ἄημι.

ἀντακαῖος [m.] a kind of sturgeon (Hdt.). ◄LW► •VAR Also adjectival (Antiph.).
•ETYM Unknown. Probably an adapted foreign word; cf. Hdt. 4, 53: κήτεά τε μεγάλα ἀνάκανθα, τὰ ἀντακαίους καλέουσι (the fish is found in the Borysthenes = Dniepr).

ἄνταρ [n.] · ἀετὸς ὑπο Τυρρηνῶν 'eagle (Etruscan)'. Εὐφορίων δὲ δίασμα 'warp' (H.) ◄Etr., GR?► •ETYM These are clearly two glosses. The first is Etruscan; for the second, cf. ἀντίον '(part of the) loom', so it probably derives from ἀντ- in ἀντί etc., with the inanimate suffix -αρ (or from ►ἀραρίσκω?).

ἀντάτας m. 'surety, guarantor (Cretan)'. ◄GR► •ETYM Lit. "who pays (gets the damage, ἄτη) for another"; see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 91.

ἀντήρης [adj.] 'set over against, opposite' (S.). ◄GR► •ETYM From ἀνταείρω 'to raise against', thus *ἀντ(ι)-ᾱϝέρ-ης (cf. *ἡϝελιος > ἥλιος), acc. to Blanc RPh. 66 (1992): 247-254.

ἀντηρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'prop, support' (E.). ◄GR► •VAR ἀντήριος· στήμων, καὶ κανὼν ὁ προσκείμενος τῇ θύρᾳ 'warp; bar placed on a door' (H.).
•ETYM Backformation from ἀντερείδω 'to lean against', with lengthening of the initial root vowel, and reshaping of -ρειδ- after the suffix -ιδ- (as in ἐγκρίς); cf. ἐγκλίς to ἐγκλίνω, ἐμπίς to ἐμπίνω. For the formation in -ιος, cf. παγίς : πάγιος, βωμίς : βώμιος.

ἄντηστις [?] 'confronting', only in κατ' ἄντηστιν θεμένη περικαλλέα δίφρον (υ 387). ◄GR► •ETYM From ἄντην ἵστασθαι, with ἄντη- as a first member. The second member is the zero grade -στ- with suffixal -ι-, cf. ἔξαστις < *ἔξ-αν-στ-ις. See Bechtel 1914 s.v.

ἀντί [prep.] 'opposite, over against; instead of' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$ent- 'front, face'► •DIAL Myc. a-ti-pa-mo /Antip^{h}āmos/, etc.
•COMP ἔναντι, ἀπέναντι, κατέναντι (Dor., Hell.); ἀνάντης 'uphill, steep' (Hdt.); see also ►ἀντιάνειρα.
•DER ἀντίος 'opposite, opposed to' (Il.; Att. prose has ἐναντίος), thence ἀντιάδες [f.pl.] 'tonsils' (medic.). Denominative ἀντιόομαι [v.] 'to oppose' (Hdt.). ἀντιάω 'to come towards, participate, etc.' (epic Ion. poet.) was derived from the ntr.plur. ἀντία [adv.] 'opposite'; post-Homeric is ἀντιάζω.
•ETYM Identical with Skt. ánti 'facing', Lat. ante 'before', and Hitt. ḫanti 'opposite, separate'. It is the old locative of a root noun preserved in Hitt. ḫant- 'front, forehead'. Another case form of the same noun is ►ἄντα.

ἀντιάνειρα [f.] epithet of the Amazons (Il.); further only in Pi. Ol. 12, 16, στάσις ἀντιάνειρα '(faction) in which man is set against man'. ◄GR► •ETYM Cf. κυδι-άνειρα and βωτι-άνειρα. The words is a compound from ἀντί and ἀνήρ, with the original meaning 'a match for men' (cf. ἀντίθεος 'godlike'), but often taken as 'hostile to men'.

ἀντικρύ [adv.] 'right opposite' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Att. ἄντικρυς, καταντικρύ (with stress after ἰθύ?).
•DIAL Att. κατ-, ἀπ-αντροκυ (IG 2², 1672: 25 and 1668: 88) perhaps from *ἀντα-κρυ (see Beekes and Cuypers below).
•ETYM Assuming a compound with ἀντι- does not help much (the connection with ἀντικρούω 'to come into collision' by Kretschmer Glotta 4 (1913): 356 is improbable, as are other attempts). Beekes and Cuypers Mnem. 56 (2003) argue that the -υ is short, but metrically lengthened in Homer.
The Attic form may have developed from ἀντα-κρυ with anticipation of the ρ and assimilation α > ο.

ἄντλος [m.] 'bilge-water' (Od.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. a-ta-ra, a vase, has been interpreted as /antla/, but this may be doubted.
•DER ἀντλία 'bilge-water, hold of a ship' (S., Ar.), 'container' (pap.), ἀντλίον 'id.' (Ar.). Denominative verb ἀντλέω 'to bale out bilge-water, pump' (Hdt.); late verbal nouns ἄντλησις, ἀντλησμός; ἄντλημα 'bucket'.
•ETYM Connection with Lat. sentīna 'bilge-water' (Solmsen 1909: 189; Chantraine 1933: 375), for which preforms *ἄντλος (psilosis) < *ἅμ-θλο- are assumed, is impossible in Indo-European terms, as sm̥- would give ἁ-, not ἀν-. If reliable, the Myc. form would exclude an original s-. Quite convincing is the proposal by Benveniste BSL 50 (1954): 39 to compare Hitt. ḫān-^{i} 'to draw water', although it requires an unusual suffix -τλος (cf. DELG). This is accepted by both Puhvel HED and Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. The comparsion with Lat. sentīna remains tempting, but in this case the word cannot be Indo-European, which seems quite well possible for a technical term.

ἄντομαι ⇒ἄντα.

ἄντομος [m.] 'country road' (Tab. Heracl. 1, 12), probably not 'palisade'. ◄?►

•VAR ἀντόμους· σκόλοπας. Σικελοί 'anything pointed (Sicilian)' (H.).
•ETYM Explained as *ἀνάτομος to ἀνατέμνω 'to cut open', but the semantics are not very convincing. Hardly related to Lat. antemna 'yard' (as per von Blumenthal 1930: 16).

ἄντρον [n.] 'cave' (Od.). ⊲PG?⊳
•DER ἀντρώδης 'with many caves' (X., Arist.), ἀντραῖος 'living in caves' (E.), ἀντριάδες [f.pl.] 'cave nymphs' (AP, Phryn.), cf. κρηνιάδες, ὀρεστιάδες; ἀντρηΐς [f.] 'living in caves' (Antip. Sid.).
•ETYM Derivation of ἄντρον and Arm. ayr 'grotto' from a pre-form antēr* (De Lamberterie BSL 73 (1978): 243f.) is impossible, as was shown by Clackson 1994: 98. Connection with ἄνεμος (Schwyzer: 532) is formally impossible since the root is dissyllabic h_2enh_1-*. Giannakis Glotta 76 (2000): 192-198 incorrectly explains the form as from anti-trh_2-om*, with the root terh_2-* 'to cross'. The disappearance of -ti-* and the loss of the laryngeal are both improbable. Lat. antrum is a loan from Greek. It is best to return to Chantraine 1933: 331 and assume a substrate word.

ἄντυξ, -γος [f.] 'edge, rim of anything round; rail of a chariot' (Il.), cf. Delebecque 1951: 177f. ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Previously explained as ἀνά plus a root noun -τυξ as belonging to τεύχω, τετυκεῖν. However, since these have -χ- or -κ-, the etymology is highly questionable. The word resembles ►ἄμπυξ (gen. -κος), which has no etymology either; see also on ►καταῖτυξ, which is unclear as well.

ἄνυμι [v.] 'to effect, accomplish' (Il.). ⊲IE senH-* 'win, accomplish'⊳ •VAR Thematic ἀνύω, ἀνύω; *ἄνϝω > ἄ̆νω; enlarged with dental ἀνύτω, Att. ἀνύτω (see Schwyzer: 704: 1), aor. ἤνυσα (secondary, see below), ἤνεσα (Strunk, below). Glosses κασάνεις· ἀνύεις, Λάκωνες (H.) < *καθανεις; ἀανές· οὐ τελεσθησόμενον 'not about to be fulfilled' (H.).
•DIAL Myc. a-nu-to /Anutos/; a_2-nu-me-no /^{h}anumenos/.
•DER ἄνυσις 'success, accomplishment' (epic poet., late prose), whence ἀνύσιμος 'successful' (X., Pl.); ἄνυσμα 'id.' (sch.). ἀν-ήνυ(σ)τος 'unfeasible, without end' (Od.); from this ἀνυστός (ἀν-) 'feasible' (E., X.), ἀνυ(σ)τικός 'effective' (X., Arist.). ἀνυτής = Lat. exactor (Just.).
•ETYM ἄνυμι is related to Skt. sanóti 'to win, obtain' < sn̥-n-eu-. Acc. to Strunk 1967: 116, the aorist ἤνεσα < senh_1-s- is old and corresponds to Skt. asāniṣam. If this is correct, Hitt. ša(n)ḫ-^{zi} 'to search, try, mean' < senh_2-* cannot be related. Cf. also the group of OHG sinnan 'to strive for'. See ►αὐθέντης.

ἄνωγα [v.] 'to command, order' (Il.), perf. with present mg. ⊲IE h_1eǵ-* 'say', or h_2eǵ-*⊳ •VAR Plpf. ἠνώγεα; secondary pres. ἀνώγω, aor. -ξα (Schwyzer: 767).
•DIAL An Achaean word, see Ruijgh 1957: 128ff.
•ETYM Originally, a compound ἄν-ωγα 'to proclaim loudly' < -h_1e-h_1oǵ-, ablauting with ἦ 'he said' < h_1e-h_1eǵ-t. Related to Lat. aiō < ăǵ-i̯o-H* (probably from h_1ǵ-*, but the development remains difficult; see Schrijver 1991: 485; adagiō 'proverb' is probably unrelated; see De Vaan 2008 s.v. aiō). Also related to Arm. aṙac 'proverbium', pres. asem 'say' (s < ǵ*); Arm. a- < h_1-* before consonant would be regular. Hackstein 1995: 332-4 assumes initial h_2-* because of ToB ākṣäṃ, but his connection with Gr. ►ἄζω is improbable; this is followed by LIV² s.v. h_2eǵ-* 'sagen'. Cf. ►ἠμί.

ἀνώγαιον [n.] 'anything raised from the ground' (X.), 'prison'. ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Also ἀνάγαιον and ►ἀνόκαιον.
•ETYM Clearly a compound of γῆ with ἄνω. See ►γῆ.

ἀξίνη [f.] 'axe' (Il.), δίστομος πέλεκυς 'two-edged axe' (H.). ⊲LW⊳ •ETYM Compared with Lat. ascia 'axe' and Germanic words for 'axe', Go. aqizi, etc., but this does not lead to an IE reconstruction. Ruijgh BiOrbis 54 (1997): 540[11] notes that -īn- is a typical substrate suffix, and that the sign for a in Linear B is a double axe. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 656 remarks that Akk. haṣṣinu and Aram. ḥaṣṣīnā are so close that they must be the same word. I propose that the Semitic and Greek words are loans from an Anatolian language.

ἄξιος [adj.] 'worth' (Il.). ⊲IE? h_2eǵ-* 'carry'⊳ •DER Abstract ἀξία 'value, wages' (IA). Denominative ἀξιόω, -όομαι [v.] 'to deem worthy, esteem; require' (S., IA); thence ἀξίωμα 'estimation, requirement, decree, etc.' (Att., Hell.), diminutive ἀξιωμάτιον (Arr.), adjective ἀξιωματικός 'high in rank' (Hell.); ἀξίωσις 'valuation, assessment, opinion' (Hdt., Th., E.).
•ETYM Generally assumed to be derived from ἄγω in the sense of 'to weigh' (cf. Lat. agīna), perhaps first from *ἄξις 'weight'. Some doubts remain, as no such derivative in -ti- is known from ἄγω, and the semantics are not really strong.

ἀξουγγία ⇒ὀξύγγιον.

ἄξων, -ονος [m.] 'axle, axis' (Il.). ⊲IE h_2eḱs-*⊳ •DIAL Myc. a-ko-so-ne /aksones/.
•ETYM Old noun, also found in Skt. ákṣa- [m.], Lat. axis, Lith. ašis, OCS osь; OHG ahsa [f.], all 'axle, axis'. Derivatives in -l- are found in ON ǫxull [m.], W echel [f.], Lat. āla 'arm-pit, wing' < aks-lā* (cf. axilla). The word has been connected with ἄγω (Benveniste 1935: 7, 24, 121), but this is uncertain. It is improbable that ἄξων is contained in ►ἅμαξα.

ἄοζος [m.] 'servant (of a god)' (A. Ag. 231 [lyr.], Call. fr. 353, IG 9(1), 976 [Corcyra, metr. inscr.]). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR ἄοζοι· ὑπηρέται, θεράποντες, ἀκόλουθοι 'servants, attendants, followers' (H.); ἄζος = θεράπων or θεράπαινα (Seleucus, gloss. apud Ath. 6, 267c = Eust. 1024, 44 and 1090, 56).
•DIAL Myc. a-o-ze-jo probably does not belong here.
•DER ἀοζία 'service of a god' (epigr.); denominative ἀοζέω [v.] 'to serve' (A. fr. 54, H.).
•ETYM In the same sense as ὄζος in epic ὄζος Ἄρηος, if this means θεράπων; cf. ὀζεία (cod. ὀζειέα)· θεραπεία (H.). This ὄζος has been considered identical with ►ὄζος 'branch' from antiquity onwards: ὁ κλάδος τοῦ πολέμου 'the branch of war' (H.).

Modern scholars have taken it as 'sprout', but DELG notes that ὄζος does not have this meaning. Although DELG accepts the connection with ὄζος < *o-sd-o- (prefix o- and zero grade of sed- 'sit down'), but it is not very convincing semantically. Brugmann IF 19 (1906): 379 argues against Schulze 1892: 498, who explained ἄοζος from *ἀ-σοδ-ι̯ο-ς (to ὁδός), but Frisk and DELG do not reject this.
Fur.: 341 cites the form ἄζος, and concludes from the interchange α/ o that the word is Pre-Greek. He assumes (374, following Frisk) that ἄοζος has a secondary copulative α- under influence of ►ἀοσσέω 'to accompany', but this must remain uncertain, as it could also be a real Pre-Greek prothetic vowel.

ἀολλής, -ες [adj.] 'all together, in throngs' (Il.). ◄IE *uel- 'press'► •DER ἀολλίζω [v.] 'to press together, assemble' (epic poet.) and ἀολλεῖ· συνάγει 'brings together' (H.), whence ἀόλλησις (EM). Adverb ἀολλήδην 'together' (Mosch., Opp.).
•ETYM ἀολλής < *ἀ-ϝολνής is probably the Aeol. form of *ἀ-ϝαλνής; see ►ἀλής.

ἄορ, -ορος [n.] 'sword' (Il.). ◄IE? *n̥s- 'sword'► •VAR For ἄορας [acc.pl.] ρ 222 read ἄορα γ'. See Trümpy 1950: 60ff.
•DIAL Note the tribe of the Ἀορεῖς in Corinth and the Ἀϝοροί on Corcyra.
•COMP χρυσάορος, also χρυσάορ-α, -ι (Il.), epithet of gods and godesses, also of Orpheus, 'with golden sword', but others take it as 'with golden pendant' (below); also PN Χρυσάωρ (Hes.).
•ETYM ἄορ was taken as a root noun related to ἀείρω with the original meaning 'what hangs'; this would fit χρυσάορος well. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 312f. rejected this, assuming *n̥s-r̥, with the o-grade from an Aeolic (or Achaean) zero grade. This would be cognate with Lat. ēnsis 'sword' and Skt. asi- (both from *n̥s-i-), though the Skt. word means 'butcher's knife'. Scholars have also pointed to Pal. hašira- 'dagger', but *$h_2$ns- would have given Gr. *ἀν-. All in all, the etymology remains a bit uncertain.

ἄορον [m.] · μοχλόν, πυλῶνα, θυρωρόν. Κύπριοι 'bar or bolt, gateway, porter (Cypr.)' (H.). ◄IE? *$h_2$uer- 'shut, cover'► •ETYM Comparable forms are OCS za-vorъ 'μοχλός', Ru. za-vór 'passage blocked with bars', related to OCS za-vrěti 'to shut' < earlier *ver-ti, and Lith. su-vérti 'id.', Skt. api-vr̥n̥oti 'to lock', and Lat. operiō 'id.'. Previously, an action noun *sm̥-u̯oro- 'locking' was assumed for the Greek word, but the meaning of *sm̥- would be unclear. Therefore, a root *$h_2$uer- is preferable, which nicely confirms Lubotsky's analysis of Skt. vr̥n̥óti 'to shut' as *Huer- in view of forms like ā́var, ápāvr̥ta-, ápīvr̥ta-, see Lubotsky 2000a: 315-325. The acute in the Balto-Slavic forms is probably secondary.

ἀορτή •VAR ἀορτήρ. ⇒ἀείρω 2.

ἀοσσέω [v.] 'to help, support'. ◄IE *sek^w- 'follow'► •VAR Only aor. ἀοσσῆσαι (Mosch. 4, 110).

•DER ἀοσσητήρ [m.] 'helper, protector' (Il.); cf. ὀσσητῆρα· βοηθόν 'assistant' and ἑοσσητήρ· ἐπίκουρος, τιμωρός, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀοσσητήρ 'ally, avenger (instead of ἀ.)' (H.), but the forms are unexplained.
•ETYM ἀοσσέω is an iterative deverbative or denominative from *ἄοσσος < *sm-sok^w-io- (an old formation, cf. Lat. socius) from the root of ►ἕπομαι, Lat. sequor. On account of the aspiration in Skt. sákhi- 'ally, associate', one often finds the reconstruction *sok^wh_2-i-. Pinault therefore adduced this word as an example for his rule that a laryngeal was lost between consonant and yod in PIE (Pinault 1982: 265-272), but the so-called Lex Pinault is still under debate. See on ►ἕπομαι, ►ὀπάων, and Myc. e-qe-ta.

ἁπαλός [adj.] 'tender, weak' (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἁπαλία 'tenderness' (Gp.) and ἁπαλίας 'sucking-pig' (D. L. 8, 20; uncertain); ἀπάλιον· θῦμα, δελφάκιον 'victim; sucking-pig' (H.) (but the text is doubtful). Denominative verb ἁπαλύνω 'to soften' (X., Hp. usw.), ἁπαλυσμός (Hp.), ἁπαλυντής (Zonar.).
•ETYM Unknown. The formation may be compared with ὁμαλός, ἀταλός, see Chantraine 1933: 245. Fur.: 224 compares ἀμαλός, assuming variation π/ μ; this is possible, but uncertain.

ἀπαντάω ⇒ἄντα.

ἅπαξ [adv.] 'once' (Od.). ◄IE *peh$_2$ǵ- 'firm, solid'► •ETYM From ἀ- < *sm̥- 'one' (cf. ►εἷς) and -παξ, related to ►πήγνυμι 'to fix, coagulate', with adverbial -ς.

ἀπαργία [f.] a plant which has its leaves on the ground (Thphr. HP 7, 8, 3). ◄?► •ETYM Strömberg 1944: 30f. thinks it comes from ἀργός 'brilliant, white' (cf. ►ἄργεμον, ►ἀργεμώνη) because of the color; unfortunately, we know nothing about the latter.

ἀπαρῖνη [f.] the plant 'cleavers, Gallium aparine' (Thphr.). ◄PG?(S)► •ETYM André Latomus 15 (1956): 295 connects it with ἀρήν (?). However, note the suffix -ῑν-, which is typical of the substrate language.

ἅπας [adj.] 'all, whole' (Il.). ◄GR► •ETYM From ἀ- (cf. εἷς) and ►πᾶς, s.v.

ἀπάτη [f.] 'fraud, deceit' (Il.); on the mg. see Luther 1935: 97ff. ◄PG(S,V)► •DER ἀπατηλός 'fraudulent, deceitful' (Il., IA), perhaps from ἀπατάω (Chantraine 1933: 241f.), with the metrical variant ἀπατήλιος (Od.); ἀπατεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'deceiver' (Hp., Democr., Pl.); ἀπάτυλλα (Cerc., POxy. 1082 fr. 39) is found in ἐξαπατύλλω (Ar.), cf. Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 219.
Denominative ἀπατάω [v.] 'to deceive' (Il.). Thence ἀπάτησις 'deception' (LXX, Phld.), ἀπάτημα 'deceit' (Gorg.), ἀπατήμων 'deceitful' (Orac. apud Zos.), ἀπατητικός 'id.' (Pl., Arist.), ἀπατητής 'fraud' (gloss.); ἀπατεύω = ἀπατάω (Xenoph. 11).
•ETYM Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 283 connected ἠπεροπεύς, explaining ἀπάτη as *ἀπγ-τᾱ from an r/n-stem *ἄπαρ, *ἀπνός. This is morphologically unconvincing.

Connection with πόντος, πάτος and Go. finþan as per Pedersen 1926: 65 is improbable.
Fur.: 234f. connected ἄτη < *ἀϝα-τη, with the substrate variation π/ ϝ, which is possible but not compelling either. His comparison with ἀπαφεῖν is attractive (for which the variant ἀποφεῖν shows substrate origin, see ►ἀπαφίσκω), as this has the same meaning. If ἤπερ-οπ-εύω is cognate, note the suffix -οπ-, which is also a substrate element (Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 18-25).

Ἀπατούρια [n.pl.] the festival 'Apatouria'. ◂GR, IE sm-ph₂tor-uo-*▸ •DER As a name of Aphrodite Ἀπατουρία, Ἀπατουριάς, also the back-formation Ἀπατούρη (Troezen, Pantikapaion, Phanagoria); further Ἀπάτουρον 'τὸ τῆς Ἀφροδίτης ἱερόν' (Str. 11, 2, 10). Month name Ἀπατουριών, -εών, also Ἀπατοριών (Amorgos).
•ETYM Old celebration of the Ionians, on the occasion of which new members were accepted to the phratries. It derives from an intermediary adjective *ἀπάτουρος (e.g. Kretschmer Glotta 4 (1913): 336) < *ἀπατορϝος, which consists of copulative α- and the o-grade of πατήρ, so sm-ph₂tor-u-* 'of the same father'. The -ϝ- is compared with Skt. pítr̥vya- 'father's brother', Lat. patruus 'id.', etc. (see on ►μητρυιά). Differently Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 656.

ἀπαφίνιον [n.] · Λάκωνες κάρδοπον λιθίνην (...) 'stone kneading-trough (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. DELG compares ἀφινιάζει, of which the explanation is lost.

ἀπαφίσκω [v.] 'to deceive' (Od.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aor. ἀπαφεῖν, also ἀπαφῆσαι (h. Ap.); ἀποφεῖν· ἀπατῆσαι 'to deceive' (H.).
•ETYM The present was probably built on the aorist. Van Windekens connects it with μέμφομαι, but reduplication of ἀφ- < m̥bʰ-* is highly improbable. The form ἀποφεῖν, if it was not influenced by ἀπό, suggests substrate origin, as assumed by Fur.: 341; he also connects it with ἀπάτη (234). Perhaps here ►ἀποφώλιος.

ἄπαφος [m.] · ἔποψ· τὸ ὄρνεον 'hoopoe, Upupa epops' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Onomatopoeic, with the suffix -αφος frequent in animal names (see Chantraine 1933: 263). The variation with ἔποψ, -πος suggests a substrate word. Cf. Lat. upupa.

ἀπαφουλίστωρ [?] · σταφυλῖνος Λάκωνες 'carrot (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Latte comments: "ἀφ-υλίστωρ cum u.l. ἀπ-"; but the meaning of ἀφυλίζειν 'to strain, filter' does not fit semantically. Could it stand for *σταφουλ-?

ἀπειλή [f.] 'threat', also 'promise' (Il.). ◂IE? h₂pelH-* (?) 'speak publicly'▸ •DER ἀπειλέω [v.] 'to promise, threaten' (Il., IA). ἀπειλητήρ [m.] 'threatener, boaster' (Il., poet.), fem. ἀπειλήτειρα (Nonn.); ἀπειλητής 'id.' (D. S., J.). Adjectives: ἀπειλητήριος 'threatening' (Hdt.) and ἀπειλητικός 'id.' (Pl., X.); agent nouns: ἀπειλήματα 'threats' (S.), ἀπείλησις 'threat' (Phld.).
•ETYM If related to Latv. pel̃t 'to revile', the root would be h₂pel(H)-*. Assuming s-mobile, ἀπειλή has further been compared with the Germanic group of Go. spill [n.] 'fable', and also with Arm. ar̄a-spel 'legend, proverb', in which case the s- would pose difficulties as Armenian also vocalizes the initial laryngeal. LIV² assumes a nasal present (s)pelnH-* with secondary full grade and copulative α-, and compares ToA pällāntär, ToB pällātär 'to praise'. In view of the many additional hypotheses required, this seems rather far-fetched.

ἀπειρέσιος [adv.] 'endless, immense' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR ἀπερείσιος; also ἀπείριτος (Od.).
•ETYM For *ἀπερέσιος, a derivation in -ιο- from *ἀ-περ-ετος, a privative verbal adjective to ►πείρω, with metrical lengthening (Chantraine 1942: 101). ἀπείριτος (κ 195, Hes. Th. 109, etc.), with unclear -ι-, has the same meaning. As Vine 1998: 26ff. remarks, the e-grade root is remarkable in a formation in -etó-*.

ἀπέλλαι [f.pl.] '(people's) assembly' (IG 5(1), 1144: 21, 1146: 41 [Gytheion Iᵃ]). ◂?▸
•VAR = σηκοί, ἐκκλησίαι, ἀρχαιρεσίαι 'precincts, assemblies, elections of magistrates' (H.).
•DIAL Doric.
•DER Ἀπελλαῖος, -αιών Doric month name (Delphi, Epidauros; Tenos); τὰ ἀπελλαῖα 'sacrifice at the apellai' (Delphi); ἀπελλακάς· ἱερῶν κοινωνούς (H.). Denominative ἀπελλάζω, Laconian for ἐκκλησιάζω (Plu., H.).
•ETYM Formally, a connection with IE h₂pel-* would be the most easy solution, but there are no obvious cognates for such a root. In Greek, we find a gloss ἀπέλλειν· ἀποκλείειν, and this may well provide us with the original meaning of ἀπέλλαι, enclosed space, meeting place'. Note that σηκοί in the gloss cited above means 'pen, fold', and compare σάκωσε· ἀπέκλεισεν.
I have argued that the name of Apollo (see on ►Ἀπόλλων) has nothing to do with the ἀπέλλαι (Beekes JANER 3 (2003): 1-21).

ἀπελλόν [n.] · αἴγειρος 'black poplar' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word has been connected with Lat. pōpulus. Although IE origin is improbable, a reconstruction h₂pel-* > ἀπελ- is possible in principle, with po-h₂pel-o- > pōpelo-* > Lat. pōpulus. Does HG Vielbaum also belong here (Kluge and Seebold 1989 s.v. Pappel)?

ἄπελος [n.] 'wound' (Call. fr. 343). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown. A derivation from πέλας 'skin' with privative ἀ-, or from the root of Lat. pellō 'to push', is improbable. Van Windekens Orbis 15 (1966): 256 compared ToB pile, ToA päl 'wound', on which see Adams 1999; highly uncertain.

ἀπεράω [v.] 'to pour out' (A.). ◂GR?▸
•DER ἀπέρασις (Thphr.). Beside it ἐξ-εράω 'pour out, vomit' (Hp.), ἐξέραμα 'spittle, vomit' (NT), ἐξέρασις 'dye extract' (PHolm. 15, 39). Also δι-, κατ-, κατεξ-, μετ-, συν-εράω (Hell.).
•ETYM Acc. to Debrunner IF 48 (1930): 282, the word is a denominative of ἔρα 'earth' (cf. ►ἔραζε), cf. the scholion to Ar. Vesp. 993: ἐξεράσω· εἰς τὴν γῆν μεταβαλῶ· ἔρα γὰρ ἡ γῆ. In this case, ἐξερᾶν originally meant 'to pour out on the earth', which is possible. On MoGr. ξερνῶ, ἐξέρασα, see Grégoire Byzantion 13 (1938): 399f.

ἀπερείσιος ⇒ἀπειρέσιος.

ἀπήνη [f.] 'four-wheeled wagon' (Il.), synonymous with ἅμαξα, see Delebecque 1951: 174f. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR πήνα· ἀπήνη 'four-wheeled wagon' (H.). Myc. a-pe-ne-wo /apēnēwōn/ [gen.pl.] would be an attribute of drawing animals, but ἀπήνη probably had -ᾱνᾱ (see below).
•ETYM The gloss πήνα· ἀπήνη (H.) suggests that the ἀ- is a real prothetic vowel and that the word is Pre-Greek. This excludes a morphological analysis ἀπ-ηνη. Further, there is the synonym καπᾱ́νᾱ (Xenarch. 11, Thess.), with interchange κ-/ zero. Fur.: 224[96] compares γάπος· ὄχημα. Τυρρηνοί 'wagon (Etr.)' (H.), also adducing (285) λαμπήνη 'id.', which has a variant λαπίνη without prenasalization; on variation λ/ zero see Fur.: 392. Further, one has compared ἀμανάν· ἅμαξαν (H.).
Bănăţeanu REIE 3 (1943): 141 thought the word is Anatolian (which amounts to saying that it is a substrate word); Szemerényi JHS 94 (1947): 149f. thought it could be Semitic.
The comparison with καπάνα is the most convincing and shows foreign (substrate) origin, because of the variation κ-/ zero, see Fur.: 391f. This means that some of the other variants adduced by Furnée must be left aside.

ἀπηνής, -ές [adj.] 'unfriendly, harsh' (Il.). ◂IE? $h_2$en-os- 'face'▸ •DER ἀπήνεια [f.] 'harshness' (Thphr., A. R.).
•ETYM Formation like πρᾱνής (πρηνής) and προσηνής (προσᾱνής), from ἀπό (πρό, πρός) with a second element for which ἦνος [n.] 'face' is traditionally assumed. A problem with this analysis is that Skt. ānas- does not exist, and that ā́nana- [n.] 'mouth' is of uncertain interpretation. Blanc CEG 1 connects ►ἀναίνομαι, which is doubtful. So there is no clear etymology.

ἀπηύρων ⇒ἀπούρας.

ἀπινυσσω ⇒πέπνυμαι.

ἄπιον [n.] 'pear' (Pl.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἄπιος [f.] 'pear tree' (Thphr.), but these are not always distinguished, cf. Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 17.
•ETYM Related to Lat. pirum, pirus. Generally considered to be a Mediterranian LW. See Hubschmid 1963: 121. Berger MSS 9 (1956): 15ff compares Burushaski pheṣo, which is improbable. Steinbauer 1989: 68 argues that the word could be from IE $h_2$pis-o-*, which seems even less likely.

ἄπιος [adj.] 'distant, far away' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From ἀπό; for the formation, cf. ἀντίος. The word appears in the formula (τηλόθεν) ἐξ ἀπίης γαίης. In S. OC 1685 it has a long ἀ-, probably under influence of Ἀπία 'Peloponnese'; see ►Ἆπις. See ►ἀπό.

ἄπλετος [adj.] 'boundless, immense' (Emp., S., IA prose), said of the sky, height, time, gold. ◂?▸ •ETYM Privative ἀ- plus an unknown second member; not related to ►πλέθρον, as per DELG.

ἁπλόος [adj.] 'single, simple' (A.). ◂?▸ •VAR Contracted ἁπλοῦς; hapax ἁπλός (An. Ox. 2, 231).
•COMP διπλόος, διπλοῦς 'twofold, double, twice' (since Il.), also διπλός (Opp.).
•DER ἁπλοΐς [f.] (Il.), of χλαῖνα. Diminutive ἁπλοΐδιον (pap.); ἁπλοϊκός 'simple, plain' (Hell.). ἁπλότης [f.] 'simplicity, plainness' (X., Arist.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἁπλόω [v.] 'to develop, unfold', whence ἅπλωσις and ἅπλωμα, ἁπλωτικός (all late); 2. ἁπλοΐζομαι 'to act modestly' (X., D. C.).
•ETYM ἁπλόος is the opposite of διπλόος, διπλοῦς 'twofold, double' (Il.) and late διπλός (Opp.). Direct connection of ἁπλός with Lat. simplus, duplus, and Gm. forms like Go. tweifl [acc.] 'doubt' (assuming a root pel-* 'to fold') is problematic, as Gr. -πλος is late and rare compared to -πλόος. Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 218 considered secondary influence of -πλόϝος 'sailing', related to ►πλέω. Cf. ►διπλάσιος.

ἀπό [prep.] 'far away, away from' (Il.) ◂IE $h_2$epo* 'from'▸ •VAR ἄπο [adv.].
•DIAL Arc.-Cypr., Aeol. ἀπύ. Note Myc. a-pu-do-ke, a-pe-do-ke /apu-dōke/, /ap-edōke/.
•DER Beside ἄπο-θεν also ἄπωθεν 'from afar, far from' (Schwyzer: 628, Lejeune 1939: 332).
•ETYM Old adverb and preverb, identical with Skt. ápa 'away from', Lat. ab, and Go. af 'down'; probably also to Hitt. āppa 'after' (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). From PIE $h_2$épo, which has a variant $h_2$pó-* > OCS po, >> PGm. fana that would also have given ἀπό. See ►ἄπιος.

ἀποδιδράσκω ⇒διδρᾱ́σκω.

ἀπόερσε [v.] 'swept away' (Il.). ◂IE? uer-* 'tear'▸ •VAR Only this form occurs.
•ETYM Formerly interpreted as the s-aorist from a root uer-* or uers-* (Gil Emerita 32 (1964): 181), which was also supposed in ►ἀπούρας, but this probably has a root ur-eh₂-. Forssman 1980: 192 more convincingly reconstructs ἀπόερσε as uert-s- from the root for 'turn', also seen in ►ἔρρω < uert-ie/o-*.

ἀπόθεστος [adj.] 'despised, uncared for', said of Odysseus's dog (ρ 296). ◂GR▸ •ETYM The opposite πολύ-θεστος 'much desired' (Call.) and PNs such as Ἑρμό-θεστος, Boeot. Θιό-φειστος, and ἄ-θεστος (of Ἐρινύς, H.) show that the word belongs to ►θέσσασθαι, root g^{wh}ed^h-*. Incorrect hypothesis (ἀ-πόθεστος) by Leumann 1950: 64f.

ἄποινα [n.pl.] 'ransom, fine' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Sing. ἄποινον (IG 14, 1389: 1; 10).
•ETYM Formerly analyzed as ἀπόποινος with haplology, so derived from ἀποτίνω 'to pay, atone', modelled after ποινή : τίνω. Rather, it is simply from sm̥- in the sense of 'equalizing payment, atonement', see West Glotta 77 (1999): 121.

ἀπόκυνον [n.] plant name 'Cynanchum erectum' or 'Marsdenia erecta' (Dsc.). ◂GR▸

•VAR = μάζα μεμιγμένη φαρμάκῳ πρὸς ἀναίρεσιν κυνῶν 'cake mixed with a drug against the killing of dogs' (H.).
•ETYM Substantivized from an adjective *ἀπόκυνος 'hostile to dogs', acc. to Strömberg 1944: 26.

ἀπολάντιον [n.] probably a herb, in σπάρτα ἀπολαντίου (PMag. Lond. 1, 121, 209 [III^p]). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR παλλάντιον (Hippiatr. 66).
•ETYM The proposal of Strömberg 1944: 27 to connect λέντιον 'linen cloth' is improbable. Fur.: 344 compares παλλάντιον, a kind of grass, which suggests that the words are Pre-Greek.

ἀπολαύω [v.] 'to enjoy' (Ar.), "von Haus aus kein feines Wort" (Wackernagel 1916: 229). ⊲IE? *leh$_2$u- 'seize, capture'⊳ •DER Verbal nouns ἀπόλαυσις (Att.), ἀπόλαυσμα (late) 'enjoyment', adjective ἀπολαυστικός 'producing enjoyment' (Arist., Plb.).
•ETYM Mostly connected with λεία 'booty', Dor. λᾱΐᾱ (< *λᾱϝ-ίᾱ) 'booty', for which an IE root *leh$_2$u- could be assumed. This root is also assumed in Lat. lucrum 'gain', which could be from *luklo- < *lh$_2$u-tló- (Schrijver 1991: 240), and in Go. laun [n.] 'reward' < *leh$_2$u-no-. However, the appurtenance of OCS lovъ 'catch, chase', loviti 'to catch, chase' would require *lh$_2$eu-, which is an improbable formation. Unrelated is Skt. lotra-, lota- 'booty' (lex.), which is from MInd. loptra-, see Wackernagel 1896: 91. The appurtenance of ►λᾱρός 'delicious' is uncertain.
It is best to assume that anteconsonantal *leh$_2$u-C- (e.g. in the s-aorist) yielded *λαυC-, which was generalized to the other tense forms.
See ►λεία.

ἀπολεῖν[α] [?] · ἀποστρέφειν. Λάκωνες 'turn away (Lacon.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM From ἀπο-πολεῖν (Thurneysen Glotta 12 (1922): 145). Cf. ►ἀπυλιῶναι.

Ἀπόλλων, -ωνος [m.] theonym (Il.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•VAR Voc. Ἄπολλον.
•DIAL Ἀπέλλων (Dor.), Ἀπείλων (Cypr.), Ἄπλουν (Thess.). Perhaps in Myc.]pe-rjo[/A]peljo[n-/, see Ruijgh 1967a: 56.
•ETYM Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 327ff. assumed that the vocative Ἄπολλον was assimilated from Ἄπελλον with unaccented ε, and that the other cases (with accented ε) introduced the o analogically. However, such vowel assimilations cannot be assumed so easily in Greek (cf. Van Beek fthc.b). The e-vocalism is found in the PNs Ἀπελλίων, Ἀπελλῆς, etc. Moreover, Cypr. Ἀπείλων points to a pre-form *Ἀπέλ̣ιων for Dor. Ἀπέλλων; Thess. Ἄπλουν perhaps derives from Pre-Greek *Apel^{y}ōn with syncope and -ουν from *-ōn (Ruijgh apud Beekes JANER 3 (2003), see below).
In spite of repeated attempts, there is no IE etymology. As Apollo was assumed to come from Asia Minor, one looked there for a connection. But Lyd. Pλdans Artimuk (see on ►Ἄρτεμις) had initial q-. Burkert's idea that the name was derived from ἀπέλλαι is impossible (see detailed argumentation in Beekes JANER 3 (2003)). The name is probably Pre-Greek, and Hitt. ^{DINGIR}Appaliunaš, mentioned in a treaty between Alaksandus of Wilusa and the Hittite king, may well be the Pre-Greek proto-form Apal^{y}un. The Hittite rendering shows that the oldest Pre-Greek form had *a. This became e before the palatal *l^y. The e was then assimilated (in Pre-Greek) to o by the following -ōn.

ἀπόμελι [n.] kind of mead, made from the water used to wash honeycombs (Dsc.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Derived from μέλι; the prefix has a pejorative meaning (Strömberg 1944: 29f.).

ἀπομύσσω ⇒μύσσομαι.

ἀπούρᾱς [aor.ptc.] 'taking away, depriving' (Il.). ⊲IE? *ureh$_2$- 'draw, tear' (?)⊳ •VAR Ind. root aorist 2sg. ἀπηυρᾱς, 3sg. -ᾱ̆, 1sg. -ων (after the type ἐτίμα : ἐτίμων); fut. ἀπουρήσουσι or -ρισσουσι (X 489); see Strunk Glotta 37 (1958): 118-127. Ptc. med. ἀπουρᾱ́μενος (Hes. Sc. 173), which is analogical since a zero grade -urh$_2$- would have yielded -ϝρᾱ-.
•ETYM For *ἀπο-ϝρᾱς (see Lejeune 1972: 181 and 228), as if from a root *ureh$_2$-, which is not known from other languages. The 3sg. ἀπ-ηύρᾱ is supposed to stand for *ἀπ-η-ϝρᾱ with long augment. The barytonesis is Aeolic (Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1914: 119). See further on ►ἀπόερσε, which is unrelated.

ἀποφράς, -άδος [adj.] 'unlucky, wicked' (Pl.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Mostly fem. (of ἡμέρα), but also msc. (Eup. 309).
•ETYM From φράζω, φραδή, φράδμων, with -φράς after the nouns in -άς (Chantraine 1933: 351, Schwyzer: 507).

ἀποφράση [f.] term for δούλη (Seleuc. apud Ath. 6, 267e). ⊲?⊳
•VAR -φράτη in Eust. 1090, 57.
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀποφώλιος [adj.] 'worthless (?)' (Od.). ⊲GR?⊳
•ETYM Glossed as ἀνεμώλιος, μάταιος 'futile, idle'. Not related to ὄφελος 'use'. Probably connected to ἀποφεῖν· ἀπατῆσαι 'to deceive' (H.), in which case the word originally meant 'deceiving'. For the formation cf. ἁμαρτωλός, see Chantraine 1933: 43. Derivation from *ἀπο-φαϝο-λιος (as per Neitzel Glotta 57 (1979): 1-20), like in παυο-φόροι· Αἰολεῖς ἱέρειαι 'priestesses' (H.), is doubtful. See ►ἀπαφίσκω.

ἀποχειροβίοτος [adj.] 'living from his hands' < 'who obtains his livelihood by his hands' (Hdt.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Also ἀποχειρόβιος (Poll.), not -βίωτος; see Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 55.
•ETYM Compounded of βίοτος and ἀπὸ χειρῶν. ἄππα [m.] 'father' (Call.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •DER ἄππας title of a priest (Magnesia, Lydia); Christian priest; also = τροφεύς 'foster father' (H.).

•ETYM Acc. to EM 167, 32, the word is Macedonian, but this is doubtful. An elementary word, cf. πάππα, ἄττα, ἄπφα, and ToB appa-kke 'father'.

ἄπριγδα [adv.] 'fast, tight; continously' (A. Pers. [lyr.]). ⊲?⊳

•VAR ἀπρίξ 'id.' (S., Pl.).
•DIAL EM 132, 53 also γένος τι ἀκάνθης (Κύπριοι); see ἄρπιξ.
•DER ἀπριγδόπληκτος (also -τό-) 'struck unceasingly' (A.).
•ETYM For adverbs in -(γ)δα, -ξ, see Schwyzer: 620, 626. Frisk analyzed it as containing intensive α- and ►πρίω 'to saw', assuming an original mg. 'as tight as the teeth of a saw'; this is rather dubious, both formally (πριγ- is attested only late, cf. DELG) and semantically.

ἀπροξίς, -ίδος [f.] name of a shrub, 'Dictamnus albus' (Pythag. apud Plin. HN 24, 158). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unexplained.

ἀπτερέως [adv.] 'promptly, as quick as lightning' (Hes., Parm.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER ἀπτερύσσομαι [v.] 'to flap the wings' (Archil.), cf. πτερύσσομαι to πτέρυξ; ἀπτερύομαι (Arat.) after ἀφύω : ἀφύσσω, etc.
•ETYM From ἄπτερος 'winged, quick' (Trag. Adesp., H.), which is built on copulative ἀ- and πτερόν. The ending -έως is metrically conditioned. Cf. ►πτερόν.

ἀπτοεπής [adj.] said of Hera (Θ 209), exact mg. unknown. ⊲IE? *$seng^{wh}$- 'sing'⊳ •ETYM Analyzed by Wackernagel BB 4 (1878): 283f. as *ἀ-επτο-επής 'who speaks words that should not be spoken' (n̥-$uek^w$to-uek^w-es-), which is not really convincing. Meier-Brügger MSS 50 (1989): 91-96 suggests that it contains n̥-sng^{wh}-to- 'what cannot be sung', from the root *$seng^{wh}$- in E sing; n̥-sng^{wh}-to- would also occur in ►ἄαπτος. Neither hypothesis is really evident.

ἅπτω [v.] 'to join, attach, grasp; kindle' (Il.). ⊲IE *$h_2$ep- 'join, fit'⊳ •VAR Mostly med.
•DER ἁφή 'kindling, touching, grip, etc.' (Hdt., Pl., etc.); thence ἁφάω 'to handle, treat' (Il.), only pres.; further ἀφάσσω 'id.' (Ion., Hell.) and ἀφάζει· ἀναδέχεται 'undertake, give security, etc.' (H.).
ἅψις 'handling' (Hp., Pl., Arist.); ἅψος [n.] 'connection', plur. 'joints' (Od.), see Chantraine 1933: 421; ἅμμα 'noose, cord' (Hp., Hdt., et al), whence late ἁμματίζω, ἁμματισμός, diminutive ἁμμάτιον (Gal.). ἀψίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'mesh, rim, etc.', lengthened from ἅψις 'connection'.
Perhaps ►αὐαψή and χορδαψός (s.v. ►χορδή) contain a derivative of ἅπτω, but this may be doubted.
•ETYM Fur.: 324, 353 took ἁφάω as evidence for Pre-Greek origin, but it is rather a denominative to ἁφή, which has analogical aspiration. As will be argued in Van Beek fthc.a, ἅπτω derives from the root *$h_2$ep- seen in Hitt. ḫapp-^{zi} 'to join' and Lat. aptus 'fit, apt'. The initial aspiration is secondary after verbs like ἕπω 'to take care of' < sep-, and the root-final aspirate -φ- can be explained by analogy with ταφ-, σκαφ-, etc. The same proposal was done already by Kretschmer Glotta 7 (1916): 352, but it was neglected e.g. by Frisk.
On the relation between ἅψος 'joint' and other Indo-European forms, see Clackson 1994: 98ff. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 656 separated two meanings: he connected 'to fasten' with Lat. apiō and 'to kindle' with Gm. sengen 'to singe', OCS prě-sočiti 'to dry' < *$senk^w$-. This is now abandoned, as its root is reconstructed as sek- 'to dry up', with a pure velar (see LIV² s.v.).

ἀπυλιῶναι [v.] uncertain (IG 5(2) p. xxxvi D 1, 20 [Tegea IV^a]). ⊲GR?⊳
•ETYM Thurneysen Glotta 12 (1922): 145 supposed haplology from *ἀπυ-πολιῶναι 'to give back'; cf. ►ἀπολεῖν[α]. A better hypothesis is that of Buck 1955: §162, 10, who understands it as 'to regulate, cancel' and connects it with ἀπο-λειόω 'to erase' (see ►λεῖος), with iotacism and the ending -ωναι of the infinitive.

ἄπφα [m.] endearing address between brothers and sisters or beloved ones (Eust.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •DER ἀπφίον (Eust.), ἀπφάριον (Xenarch., Smyrna), ἀπφίδιον (sch.); ἀπφία (Poll., H.), ἀπφῦς [m.] 'papa' (Theoc.), expressive but unexplained.
•ETYM An elementary form of address; cf. unaspirated ἄππα, etc. See Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 245 and Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 184.

ἄρα [adv.] 'of course, then, so' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_2(e)r 'thus, so'⊳ •VAR Also ἄρ, enclitic ῥα, with elision ῥ'.
•DIAL Cypr. ἔρ(α) (H.), against Latte; see Ruijgh 1971: 433[76].
•ETYM On final -α, see Schwyzer: 622f. Related to Lith. ir̃, Latv. ir 'and, also; even' and (with full grade) the question particle Lith. ar̃, Latv. ar. Connection with the root of ►ἀραρίσκω, ►ἄρτι is possible, assuming an original sense 'accordingly' vel sim., and would require h_2r. However, Cypr. ἔρ(α) (if trustworthy) would point to $h_1$er, but this is impossible since h_1r̥ would have given *ἐρα, not ἀρα.

ἀρά [f.] 'prayer, curse' (Il.). ⊲IE? *$h_2$eru- 'prostrate'⊳ •DIAL Ion. ἀρή, Arc. καταρϝος 'cursed'; the interpretation of Myc. ka-ta-wo is doubtful.
•COMP πολυαᾱ́ρητος (Od.) 'much prayed for'.
•DER ἀραῖος 'belonging to ἀ.' (trag.); ἀρᾱτός (-η-) 'prayed for, accursed' (Il., poet.). Denominative ἀράομαι [v.] 'id.' (Il.), which often occurs with preverbs, e.g. ἐπ-, κατ-αράομαι (IA). Thence ἀρητήρ [m.] 'who prays, priest' (Il.), fem. ἀρήτειρα (Call., A. R.), ἀρητήριον 'place for praying, etc.' (Plu.).
•ETYM Arcadian shows a pre-form *ἀρϝά, which neatly explains the difference in quantity of ἀ- in Ionic and Attic. The final -α in Attic ἀρά poses problems, however, since we expect -η after *ϝ. Perhaps it is from (-)ἀράομαι or from the frequent plural ἀραί (cf. Schwyzer: 188²).
Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 19f. compared ἀρύει 'cry'. Not connected to Arm. uranam 'to deny' < ōr- (see Clackson 1994: 102f.). The connection with Hitt. aruu̯ae-^{zi} 'to prostrate, bow', is revived by Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. who proposed that the Hittite verb derives from thematic $h_2$oruō-. If related, Greek would presuppose a noun h_2(e)ru-eh_2-.

ἄραβος [m.] 'rattle, ring', of armor or teeth (Il.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER Denominative verb ἀραβέω 'to rattle, ring' (Il.).
•ETYM The same suffix is found in θόρυβος, κόναβος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 260). For the stem cf. ►ἄραδος, ►ἀράζω. Perhaps the word is onomatopoeic, see Güntert 1914: 145f. Fur.: 142 compares ἀροπῆσαι· πατῆσαι 'to tread' (H.), which points to substrate origin (with interchange α/ ο). As Furnée remarks, a word can be both onomatopoeic and a substrate word.

ἀράγδην •VAR ἄραγμα, ἀραγμός. ⇒ ἀράσσω.

ἄραδος [m.] 'disturbance, palpitation' (Hp.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •DER ἀραδ<ήσ>ει· θορυβήσει, ταράξει 'make noise, agitate' and ἀράδηται· κεκόνηται (?), συγκέχυται 'has caused to hasten, is confounded' (H.); also ἀράζουσιν· ἐρεθίζουσιν 'provoke' (H.).
•ETYM Cf. κέλαδος, ὅμαδος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 359). Perhaps onomatopoeic (but is it primarily used of sounds?). Cf. ► ἄραβος.

ἀράζω [v.] 'to snarl, growl', of dogs (D. H.). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Also ἀρράζω; ῥάζω (Cratin.); also ῥύζω (Hermipp.).
•DER ἀρρίζω (AB), reduplicated ἀραρίζω (Ammon.).
•ETYM On the anlaut, see Schwyzer: 310. Is it onomatopoieic and/or Pre-Greek? Cf. ► ἄραβος and ► ἄραδος.

ἀραιός [adj.] 'thin, slender, with open spaces' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR ἀρ- (Hdn. Gr., also in mss.).
•DER ἀραιότης 'looseness' (Hp., Arist.), opposed to πυκνότης; ἀραιώδης 'porous' (Gal.). ἀραιόω [v.] 'to rarify' (Hp., Arist.), whence ἀραίωμα, ἀραίωσις.
•ETYM The word probably had ϝ- (Sommer 1905: 114), but there is no further explanation. Fur.: 339 etc. compares ἀρβός· διεστός, ἀραιός, ἐλαφρός (H.) if this gloss stands for (or derives from) *ἄραβος, but this is highly uncertain.

ἄρακις [f.] 'bowl, pan' (Ath. 11, 502b: Αἰολεῖς τὴν φιάλην ἄρακιν καλοῦσιν). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR ἄρακις (cod. ἀρά<κ>η<ν>)· φιάλην καὶ ἀράκτην 'bowl or pan' (H.); ἐξ ἀρ(α)κίδων (cod. ἄρκιαων)· ἐκ φιαλῶν 'of bowls' (H.).
•DER ἀρακτῆρα· ἀμελκτῆρα 'milking-pail' (H.), derived from ἀράκτην.
•ETYM The form with -κτ- proves substrate origin (see Fur.: index). Given this, it is unnecessary to assume -α- in ἀρκίδων. Fur.: 308, 319 further compares ἄροκλον = φιάλη (Nic. fr. 129) with κτ > κλ, for which he gives parallels. The interchange α/ ο is well-known in substrate words.

ἄρακος [m.] wild chickling, 'Lathyrus annuus' (Ar.). Cf. ἄρακοι· ὄσπριόν τι, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ καὶ λάθυρον 'a pulse, the same as λ.' (H.). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Also [n.]; also a consonant stem ἄραξ [m.] (pap.). Variant ἄραχος (Gal.).
•DIAL Myc. PN a-ra-ko?
•DER Diminutive ἀρακίς, ἀρακίσκος (Gal.). Further ἀράχιδνα (Thphr.); ἀραχνοῦς. εἶδος ὀσπρίου 'kind of pulse' (H.); ἀράχνη a plant, 'Heracleum sphondylium' (Ps.-Dsc. 3, 76).
•ETYM The interchange κ/ χ and the suffix -ιδνα- clearly prove substrate origin (Fur.: 127f.). Unrelated is Lat. arinca 'kind of spelt'.

ἄραξα [?] mythical plant growing near the Araxes (Ps. Plu., Fluv. 23,2). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀραρίσκω [v.] 'to fit together, construct, equip, etc.' (Il.+). ⊲IE *h_2er- 'fit'⊳ •VAR Them. aor. ἀραρεῖν, s-aor. ἄρσαι, perf. ἄρᾱρα (intr.); pass. aor. ἤρθην; ἄρμενος 'fitting, equipped' is an isolated med. root ptc. (Il.), with substantivized ntr.plur. ► ἄρμενα.
•DIAL Myc. a-ra-ro-wo-a /ararwo^{h}a/ [n.pl.]; a-ra-ru-ja /araruia(i)/; ka-ka-re-a /k^{h}alk-āreha/ 'equipped with bronze'.
•DER Many etyma derive from the same root, e.g. ► ἅρμα, ἁρμός, ► ἁρμονία, ► ἁρμόζω, ► ἀρτύς, ► ἄρθρον. From the perfect ἄραρα derives ἀραρότως 'well-fitted' (A., E., Pl.). Further ἀρθμός 'tie, friendship' (h. Merc. 524), ἄρθμιος 'allied' (epic Ion.) and ἀρθμέω [v.] 'to unite' (Il., A. R.). ἀρμή 'junction' (Hp.), ἅρμᾱ f. 'union, intercourse' (Delph., Plu., H.). ἄρσιον· δίκαιον 'just' (H.) probably arose from ἀν-άρσιος by decomposition. See also ► ἀριθμός, ► ἀρείων, ► ἀρέσκω, ► ἀρετή, ► ἄρτι, ► ὄαρ.
•ETYM The present is based on the aor. ἀραρεῖν; there is also an old perfect ἄρᾱρα. The nearest cognate is the Arm. arari 'I made', pres. aṙnem, which also has a reduplicated aorist. The root is found in other languages too, e.g. Av. arəm 'fitting' and Skt. r̥tá- 'order' (see LIV^2 s.v.).
Hitt. āra- 'proper', Hitt. arā- 'friend' and Lyc. ara- 'rite', Lyc. erawazije 'monument' are connected by Kloekhorst 2008 under the assumption of an o-grade *h_2*or-o-* (etc.), with neutralization of the laryngeals before o*.

ἀράσσω [v.] 'to beat, strike', of rattling, clashing (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. ἀράξαι.
•DER ἀραγμός 'clashing, rattling' (A.).
•ETYM Unknown. Is the word onomatopoeic? Cf. ► ἄραβος. On possible connection with ► ῥάσσω, ῥήσσω 'to beat' see there.

ἀρασχάδες [m./f.pl.] · τὰ περυσινὰ κλήματα 'last year's vinetwigs' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Cf. ἀρέσχαι· κλήματα, βότρυες 'vinetwigs, bunches of grapes' (H.) and ὀρεσχάς· τὸ σὺν τοῖς βότρυσιν ἀφαιρεθὲν κλῆμα 'twig with bunches of grapes taken off' (H.). Clearly related αὐροσχάς = τὸ κατὰ βότρυν κλῆμα (Eratosth. 37), also name of a wine (Parth.). DELG s.v. ὄσχη gives ὀρεσχάδα, 'dit de branches d'ormaux', from Harp. (as in Nic. Al. 109 [not in LSJ]), and further to ὄλοσχος 'pedicle of the pomegranate' (Nic. Th. 870).
•ETYM ὄλοσχος may have λ for ρ. I am convinced that the four forms of the word (αρα-, αρε-, ορε-, αυρο-) are not old compounds (certainly not if we connect ὄλοσχος). It is rather a vocalic variation in an evident substrate word (Fur.: 302, 342, 348). In Pre-Greek, I reconstruct ar^w-ask-at-, which explains interchange α-/αυ-/ο- and -ρα-/-ρο-.

ἀράχιδνα ⇒ ἄρακος.

ἀράχνη [f.] 'spider's web, spider' (Hp.). ⊲LW Medit.⊳
•VAR ἀράχνης [m.] 'spider' (Hes.), ἄραχνος [m.] (A.).
•DER ἀράχνιον 'spider's web' (Od., com., Arist.), also diminutive (Arist.), ἀραχνιώδης 'like a spider's web' (Hp., Arist., Dsc.) denominative ἀραχνιόομαι [v.] 'to be covered with spider's webs' (Arist., Nonn.). Adjectives ἀραχνώδης (Arist., Ael.), ἀραχνήεις (Nic.) and ἀραχναῖος (AP), denominative ἀραχνάομαι 'to weave a web' (Eust.). ἀράχνηκες· ἀράχναι (H.) is reshaped after σφῆκες, μύρμηκες, σκώληκες, etc.

•ETYM ἀράχνη can be from araksnā-*, like Lat. arāneus [m.] 'spider', arānea [f.] 'spider's web'. As the word looks non-IE and since it is limited to these two languages, it is probably a borrowing. Connection with ἄρκυς is impossible in IE terms, and for a substrate element it is difficult, too. See Gil Fernández 1959: 24f.

ἄραχος ⇒ἄρακος.

ἀρβάλη [f.] · τήγανον ὀστράκινον. Ταραντῖνοι 'earthenware frying-pan (Tarent.)' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ἄρβηλος [m.] 'semicircular knife', used by cobblers (Nic. Th. 423). Also metaph. of a geometrical figure (Papp.), see Mugler 1958-1959 s.v. ◄PG► •VAR Cf. also ἀνάρβηλα· τὰ μὴ ἐξεσμένα, ἀρβήλοις γὰρ τὰ δέρματα <ξέουσι> (H.).
•ETYM A substrate word, see Fur.: 115[5] on the suffix.

ἀρβίννη [f.] · κρέας. Σικελοί 'flesh, meat (Sicilian)' (H.). ◄LW► •ETYM Connected to Lat. arvīna 'fat, especially around the intestines', from which it is a loan (Campanile 1969: 318f). Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 16, the word is Messapian and cognate with arvīna.

ἀρβύλη [f.] 'shoe that covers the whole foot up to the ankle' (Hp.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR ἀρβύκη (read ἀρβύλης)· τοῦ ὑποδήματος 'sandal' (H.). Also ἀράβυλας· ὑποδήματος εἴδη φορτικὰ καὶ βαρβαρικὰ 'kinds of coarse, non-Greek sandals' (H.). And ἄρμυλα· ὑποδήματα. Κύπριοι 'sandals (Cypr.)' (H.).
•DER κατάρβυλος 'reaching down to the shoes' (S.); cf. καθάρβυλος χλανίς.
•ETYM Clearly a substrate word, as evidenced by the suffix -υλ- (Fur.: 201[14]) and variations β/μ, αρ/αρα, and κατ-/καθ-άρβυλος (Bănățeanu REIE 3 (1943): 145, Knauer Glotta 33 (1954): 114[1]).

ἀργαλέος ⇒ἄλγος.

Ἀργεϊφόντης epithet of Hermes (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM Since Kretschmer, assumed to be a metrical reshaping of *Ἀργοφόντης (Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 45ff., Kretschmer Glotta 24 (1936): 236f., Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 33): "killer of Argos", the many-eyed primordial Giant. Ruijgh 1995: 87[306] takes the form at face value (i.e. argehi-*k^{wh}on-tā-) and assumes that it originally means 'who kills by his flash', from the s-stem *ἄργος seen in ἐναργής and ἀργεννός. The connection of the second member with εὐθένεια by Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 5 (1954): 19ff., assuming a sense "shining in splendour", is unconvincing. Chantraine 1935: 69ff., thinks of a Pre-Greek word, which seems quite possible.
Further literature: Chittenden AJA 52 (1948): 24-33 ("dog-killer"); West 1978: 368f.; Koller Glotta 54 (1976): 211-215 (unconvincing).

ἄργελλα [f.]? · οἴκημα Μακεδονικόν, ὅπερ θερμαίνοντες λούονται 'Macedonian dwelling-place, where [men] bathe while warming up' (Suid.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR ἄργιλλα, ἀργῖλα [f.] 'subterranean house' (Magna Graecia, Strabo V 244 = Ephor. [fr. 45], cf. Eust. ad D. P. 1166).
•ETYM From this word comes Alb. ragál' 'cottage' (Jokl IF 44 (1927): 13ff.). See also Pagliaro Ric. ling. 1 (1950): 145f. and Hubschmid 1963: 81. The interchanges ε/ι and λ/λλ clearly point to a substrate word. Related to ἄργιλλος 'white clay'? See Kalléris 1954: 104.

ἀργέλοφοι [m.pl.] 'legs and feet of a sheepskin, offal' (Ar. V. 672 only). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR Cf. ἀργίλοφοι· λαπάραι κωδίων [read: κῳδίων] 'the flanks of sheepskins' · οἱ δὲ πρωκτόν. καὶ μηλωταί 'anus; sheepskin' (H.).
•DIAL Acc. to the sch. and AB 8, the word is Attic for ποδεῶνες 'ragged ends of the skins of animals'.
•ETYM Derivation from ἀργός (in which case the -ε- is unexplicable) or from λόφος "kann jedenfalls unmöglich richtig sein" (Frisk). One is inclined to consider it as a momentary creation of Aristophanes, but how could his audience have understood him? It is rather a word that we simply do not know. Fur.: 358 adduces the gloss with -ι-, which probably demonstrates substrate origin, e.g. arg-al*^{y}-ap-. The word clearly denotes the useless parts of a sheep(skin), cf. the meanings 'anus' or 'membrum virile' (attested for ποδεών).

ἄργεμον [n.] 'white spot in the eye, albugo' (Hp.), also plant name (Plin.). ◄IE? *h_2*erǵ-* 'brilliant, white'► •VAR Also -ος [m.].
•DER ἀργεμώνη 'Papaver Argemone' (Crateuas), a remedy against ἄργεμος, cf. Chantraine 1933: 208. Not from Hebr. 'argāmān 'red purple' (Lagarde Gött. Abh. 35 (1888): 205, cf. Lewy 1895: 49f.), because of the mg.
•ETYM Connected to *ἄργος in ἀργεστής, ἀργεννός, like ἄνθεμον to ►ἄνθος, yet the latter derivation is difficult; cf. Chantraine 1933: 132. Further connected to ►ἀργός 1.

ἀργεννός •VAR ἀργεστής. ⇒ἀργός.

ἀργής, -ῆτος [adj.] 'brilliant white, gleaming' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2*erǵ-* 'brilliant, white'► •VAR Also -έτι, -έτα (Il.).
•DER Poetical enlargement ἀργησ-τής 'id.' (B.), after ὠμηστής? (Schwyzer: 500[1]). ἀργήεις (Dor. -άεις, contr. ἀργᾶς) (Pi.).
•ETYM Formation like γυμνής, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 267) from ►ἀργός. The ablaut -ητ-/-ετ- is of IE origin.

ἀργιλιπής [adj.] context and mg. unclear (Archil. 160). ◄?►
•VAR ἀργίλιπες [pl.] (Nic. Th. 213), of ἔχιδναι, acc. to the scholia = ἔκλευκοι 'very white', but see Frisk III s.v. on the mg.
•ETYM Connected with ἀργι- in ἀργι-κέραυνος, etc. (see ►ἀργός). DELG relates the second member to λιπ- 'fat', comparing it with ἀργέτι δημῷ 'with a white greasy shine'.

ἄργιλλα ⇒ἄργελλα.

ἄργιλλος [f.] 'white clay' (Arist.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR ἄργιλλα [f.] 'id.' (Gal.).
•DIAL ἄργῑλος (inscr. Acarnan.).
•ETYM Generally derived from ►ἀργός 1, but the suffix (Chantraine 1933: 249, Schwyzer: 483) could be non-IE (cf. ►ἄμιλλα); note the interchanges λ/λλ and -ος/-ᾰ. Given the meaning, a substrate word is quite possible, and connection with ἀργός, which means 'brilliant white', is semantically not evident. Lat. argilla is a loan from Greek.

ἀργός 1 [adj.] 'shining white, brilliant', also 'quick, agile' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2rǵ- 'white'▸ •DIAL Myc. po-da-ko /podargos/ name of a cow; to-ma-ko /stomargos/ (?, see ►στόμα); tu-ma-ko /tʰumargos/?
•COMP As a first member ἀργι- in ἀργί-πους, ἀργι-κέραυνος, ἀργι-όδων, etc. It is also found in epic ἀργι-όεις (B 647, 656), with a v.l. ἀργινόεις, for which cf. Ἀργινοῦσσαι. See also ►ἀργιλίπης. For ἀργιόπους· ἀετός, Μακεδόνες read ἀργίπους. As a second member in πόδαργος 'with quick feet'.
•DER Denominative ἀργαίνω [v.] 'to be white' (E., Opp., Nonn.), ἀργῖτις (Verg., Plin.), of ἄμπελος.
ἀργᾶς, -ᾶ [m.] (Achae.), ἀργόλας [m.] (Suid.), types of snake (named after their agility). As a PN, with regular shift of accent, Ἄργος [m.] (Od.), 'the nimble one', of the dog of Odysseus, and Ἀργώ [f.], name of a mythical ship (Od.).
A neuter s-stem in ἐν-αργής and in: 1. ἀργεσ-τής [m.] 'clear', epithet of the south wind νότος (Il.) and the west wind Ζέφυρος (Hes.), also substantivized Ἀργέστης (Arist.) the wind itself, with regular shift of accent; in Nic. Th. 592 it is an enlargement of ἀργής; 2. ἀργεννός < *ἀργεσ-νός 'shining white' (Il.), an Aeolic form. ἀργήεις (Dor. ἀργάεις, contracted ἀργᾶς -ᾶντος) 'shining white' (A. [lyr.], Pi., Orph.) is just an enlargement of the t-stem ►ἀργής.
•ETYM Wackernagel already pointed to the similarity of Gr. ἀργός, ἀργι- with Skt. r̥jrá-, in compounds r̥ji-, which suggests that *h_2rǵ-ró- > *ἀργρός dissimilated to ἀργός. The root *h_2(e)rǵ- is found in several formations in various languages: Lat. argentum 'silver' (further cognates see ►ἄργυρος), Skt. árjuna- 'white, light', ToA ārki, ToB ārkwi 'white', Hitt. ḫarki- 'white, bright'. The meanings 'white' and 'quick, nimble' are both found in Skt. as well, and must have developed via 'brilliant, sparkling'. See ►ἄργεμον.

ἀργός 2 [adj.] 'idle, lazy' (Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Contracted from ἀ-(ϝ)εργός (Il.), with privative ἀ- and (ϝ)έργον.

ἄργυρος [m.] 'silver' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_2$erǵ- 'brilliant white'▸ •DIAL Myc. a-ku-ro /arguros/.
•COMP Frequent as a first member e.g. ἀργυρό-πεζα (Il.) 'with a foot of silver', epithet of Thetis.
•DER ἀργύρεος > ἀργυροῦς 'of silver' (Il.+), ἀργύρειος 'id.' (Att.), ἀργυρώδης 'rich in silver' (X.). ἀργύριον 'silver coin, money' (IA), ἀργυρικός 'concerning money' (Hell.); diminutive ἀργυρίδιον (com , Isoc.). ἀργυρίς 'silver vessel' (Pi., Pherecr.), ἀργυρίτης, fem. -ῖτις 'containing silver', also as a plant name (Strömberg 1940: 26), also 'concerning money' (X., Plb.), ἀργύριος [m.] plant name (H.), = ἀργύρεος (Alcm.), ἀργυρωταί [pl.] name of a government authority in Sillyon (Fraenkel 1910-1912(1): 170. Denominative verbs: 1. ἀργυρόομαι [v.] 'to be covered with silver', -όω 'to cover with silver' (Pi., Dialex.), verbal noun ἀργύρωμα 'silver plate' (Lys., Antiph.), diminutive ἀργυρωμάτιον (Arr.), adjective ἀργυρωματικός (Ephesus). 2. ἀργυρίζομαι [v.] 'to squeeze money from' (Din., J.), ἀργυρισμός (Str., Ph.). 3. ἀργυρεύω [v.] 'to dig for silver' (D. S., Str.); independent of this is ἀργυρευτική [f.] (scil. τέχνη) 'art of the silversmith' (Eustr.).
•ETYM ἄργυρος derives from a u-stem also seen in ►ἄργυφος and in Skt. árju-na- 'white, bright', ToB ārkwi 'white', Lat. arguō 'to make clear', Hitt. arkuu̯ae-[zi] 'to make a plea', etc. Other languages have a thematicized nt-stem in the word for 'silver': Lat. argentum, OIr. argat, Av. ərəzata-, Skt. rajatá- [n.], all < *h_2rǵ-nt-o-. On the realia see Mallory & Adams 1997 s.v. Silver.

ἄργυφος [adj.] 'gleaming white' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_2$erǵ- 'white'▸ •VAR Also ἀργύφεος.
•ETYM From the u-stem also continued in ►ἄργυρος, with the suffix -φο- (on which see Chantraine 1933: 263).

ἄρδα [f.] 'dirt' (Pherecr. 53). ◂PG?▸
•DER ἄρδαλος 'id.' (Erot.), acc. to Erot. also 'ἄνθρωπος ὁ μὴ καθαρῶς ζῶν'; cf. αἴθαλος, πτύαλον for the suffix (Chantraine 1933: 245). Denominative verb ἀρδαλόω [v.] 'to defile' (Hp., LXX).
•ETYM Connection with ἄ̆ρδω 'to irrigate' is impossible because ἄρδα has short ἀ-. Fur.: 391f compares δάρδα· μόλυσμα 'filth' and δαρδαίνει· μολύνει 'defiles' (H.). These glosses cannot be ignored. Is it simply loss of δ- through dissimilation, or does the interchange δ/zero point to a substrate word? The ending has been explained from *-rdi̯ă > *-rzdă > -ρδᾰ, but the short -ᾰ may also point to substrate origin.

ἄρδις, -ιος [f.] 'point of an arrow' (Hdt., A. Pr. 880 [lyr.]). ◂IE? *$h_2$erd- 'point'▸ •DER ἀρδικός· φαρέτρα 'quiver' (H.).
•ETYM Probably related to OIr. aird < ardi-* 'point, direction'; ON erta < artjan-* 'to spur, incite' (but its connection with Skt. árdati 'to be scattered' is semantically unconvincing).

ἄ̆ρδω [v.] 'to irrigate, water' (Pi.). ◂? PG?▸
•VAR Long ᾱ- acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 109.
•COMP νεο-αρδής 'recently watered' (Φ 346).
•DER ἀρδμός 'watering place' (Il.), enlarged ἀρδηθμός (Lyc., Nic.); ἀρδάλια· τοὺς πυθμένας τῶν κεραμίδων, οὓς ἔνιοι γοργύρας καλοῦσιν 'the bottoms of tiles, which some call γ.' (H.). Purely formal enlargement in ἀρδεύω (A. Pr. 852, Arist.), whence ἀρδεία 'irrigation' (Str., Plu.), ἄρδευσις 'id.' (Plb.), ἀρδεύσιμος (H.); ἀρδευτής [m.] 'irrigator' (Man.).

•ETYM The connection with ἐρράδαται < *ϝεϝράδαται is most probably wrong, because the δ in ἐρράδαται (which belongs to ► ῥαίνω) is secondary (thus already Frisk).
Fur.: 241 compares παρδακός 'humid' (highly doubtful) and ἄρσεα· λειμῶνες 'humid meadows' (H.) (254). The latter proposal is attractive, as -σος is a pre-Greek suffix. Furnée also follows the proposal by Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 294f. that ἀ- is due to a pre-form *ἀϝάρδω (comparing νεοαρδής), the prothetic vowel of which he explains as a substrate element. Neumann 1961: 91 noted that several technical terms for irrigation are pre-Greek (► γοργύρα, ► ἄνδηρα).

ἀρειή [f.] 'threat(s)' (Il.). ◄?►
•COMP See ► ἐπήρεια.
•DER Denominative ἀρειάω [v.] 'to threaten' (Hippon.).
•ETYM Formerly connected with Skt. irasyā́ 'malevolence', irasyáti 'to be angry, be envious', under the assumption of h_2rh_1-es- (see Peters Sprache 32 (1986): 371f.). However, the meaning is different, cf. ► ἀρή. Relationship with ἐπήρεια depends on the question if this contains PGr. *ē. A further comparison is with ἄρος ... καί βλάβος ἀκούσιον (H.); yet, damage is not the same as menace, notes DELG.

ἀρείων [adj.] 'better, stronger, nobler' (Il.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. a-rjo-a$_2$ /arjoha/.
•ETYM A primary comparative, beside which stands a superlative ► ἄριστος. Acc. to Güntert IF 27 (1910): 67, ἀρείων (like λωΐων) was not a primary comparative, but rather formed from an old positive. Seiler 1950: 116ff. finds this positive in ἄρειος, seen in τεῖχος ἄρειον (Il.), and connects it with ἄρος· ὄφελος 'benefit' (H.). The Myc. comparative is formed differently and suggests derivation from the root h_2er-, if it does not stand for h_2erh_1-ios- (with the Lex Pinault, loss of laryngeal before yod).

ἀρέσκω [v.] 'to please, satisfy' (Il.). ◄IE? *h_2erh_1- 'please, satisfy' (?)► •VAR Aor. ἀρέσαι.
•DER ἄρεσις 'grace' (Priene II[a]). ἀρεστός 'pleasing' (Hdt.), ἀρεστήρ [m.] "reconciliator", name of a sacrificial cake for appeasing a deity (inscr., Ael. Dion.), whence ἀρεστήριος 'expiatory' (D. H.), ἀρεστηρία (θυσία) and ἀρεστήριον (inscr.); Ἀρέστωρ PN (Hes., etc.) and ἀρέσμιον 'fee' (Stiris).
From the present ἄρεσκος 'pleasant, flattering' (Arist., Thphr.), ἀρεσκεία 'flattering person' (Arist., Hell.). Backformation from ἀρεσκεία: ἀρεσκεύομαι [v.] 'to flatter' (Clearch., Plu.), ἀρέσκευμα (Plu., Epicur.) and ἀρεσκευτικός (M. Ant.).
•ETYM The word seems to have a disyllabic root h_2erh_1-, but connection with ἀρείων, ἀρετή is semantically not compelling. The connection with h_2er- in ► ἀραρίσκω is formally unclear (origin of the -ε-?).

ἀρετή [f.] 'excellence' (Il.). ◄IE? *h_2erh_1-► •COMP αἰναρέτη [voc.] 'terribly brave' (Il.).
•DER Denominative ἀρετάω [v.] 'to prosper, thrive' (Od.).
•ETYM Not directly related to ► ἀρέσκω for semantic reasons. Connection with ► ἀρείων is semantically attractive, but formally not clear. Vine 1998: 61f. suggests an analysis $h_2(e)r$-etéh$_2$- to the root of ► ἀραρίσκω, which would be formally excellent and for which he adduces semantic arguments. Nikolaev 2005 wants to reconstruct h_2nr-eteh$_2$- from the word for 'man, hero', and tries to reformulate Rix's Law.

ἀρή [f.] 'bane, ruin' (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM Probably related to the ptc. ἀρημένος 'βεβλαμμένος, damaged' (Il.), but the long ᾱ- poses difficulties. Further connected with ἄρος· (...) βλάβος ἀκούσιον 'involuntary damage' (H., see ► ἄρος), and ἀπαρές· ὑγιές 'healthy' (H.); perhaps also with ► ἀρειή. Finally, one may consider a connection with ► Ἄρης. For Ion. ἀρή 'prayer', see ► ἀρά.

ἀρήγω [v.] 'to help, support (against)' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2reh_3g- 'help, support'► •DER ἀρηγών, -όνος m. f. 'helper' (Il.). With old ablaut ἀρωγή 'help, support' and ἀρωγός, -όν 'helper' (Il.).
•ETYM The forms require h_2re/oh_3g-, unless $h_2rēg$-, $h_2rōg$- were root nouns, for which there is no indication. Possibly comparable with Germanic forms such as OHG geruohhen, OS rōkjan, ON rǿkja, etc. 'to care for' and MoDu. roekeloos 'without care' (with old ō); if so, not related to Lat. regō, Gr. ὀρέγω, with which Skt. rā́jā 'king' seems to be connected (on which, see Gonda KZ 73 (1956): 151ff.).

ἀρήν, ἀρνός [m., f.] 'sheep, lamb' (Il.). ◄IE *urh_1-en- 'lamb'► •VAR Nom. ῥήν (A. R. 4, 1497), taken from compounded forms.
•DIAL Myc. we-re-ne-ja /wrēneja/ in a list of leather goods; wa-ni-ko /warniskos/, found as a PN in the class. language; wo-ro-ne-ja /wroneja/ may perhaps also represent /wolneja/ 'woollen'; The ϝ- is found in ϝαρήν (Gortyn) and βάννεια· τὰ ἄρνεια, καὶ τὰ βάννιμα τὸ αὐτὸ (H.); ῥᾶνα· ἄρνα 'sheep, lamb' is probably Elean, with η > ᾱ.
•COMP πολύ-ρρην < *πολύ-ϝρην < *urh_1-n-.
•DER ἄρνειος 'of a sheep or lamb' (Hdt.), like αἴγειος, βόειος (Chantraine 1933: 50f.); ἀρνέα [f.] 'sheepskin' (Hdn.), also 'sheep-breeding' (POxy. 2, 297, 8) like αἰγέα etc. (Chantraine 91); ἀρνακίς 'sheepskin' (Ar.), haplological fem. from *ἀρνό-νακος? Uncertain is the appurtenance of ► ἀρνειός and ► ἀρνευτήρ. Also ἀρνεῖον 'butcher's shop' (Didym.); diminutive ἀρνίον 'little lamb', also 'sheepskin' (Lys.).
Popular ἄριχα (acc.)· ἄρρεν πρόβατον 'male cattle' (H.), βάριχοι (= ϝ-)· ἄρνες 'sheep' (H.) (Chantraine 1933: 403), but the absence of the nasal is unexplained. It is confirmed by the PN ϝαριχος (Tarente).
•ETYM ἀρήν < ϝαρήν < urh_1-ēn matches Arm. gaṙn, -in 'lamb'. Skt. úraṇa- [m.] 'id.' is a thematization of urh_1-en-, cf. MP varak 'ram'. The original inflection was nom. urh_1-ēn, acc. urh_1-en-m, gen. urh_1-n-os > *ϝαρην, *ϝαρενα, *ϝρηνος. This means that the oblique stem ϝαρ-ν- is due to a reshaping. Unrelated is ► εἶρος 'wool', which derives from *ϝέρϝος. Cf. Meier-Brügger KZ 103 (1990): 26-29.

Ἄρης, Ἄρεως [m.] the god of war; also god of vengeance and oaths (Arcadia, Athens, etc., see Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 195ff.); metonym. for 'war' (Trümpy 1950: 152f.). ◄PG► •VAR On the inflexion see Schwyzer: 576.

•DIAL Myc. dat. a-re, adj. a-re-(i-)jo; PN a-re-(i-)me-ne. Boeot. Lesb. Ἄρευς.
•DER Fem. Ἄρεια in Arc. τὰν Ἀθάναν τὰν Ἄρειαν; adj. Ἄρειος, Ion. Ἀρήϊος, Lesb. Ἀρεύϊος (Ζεὺς Ἄρειος Epirus, Ἄρειος πάγος Athens, whence Ἀρεοπαγίτης). PN Ἀρητάδης (Bechtel 1917a: 11).
•ETYM The ancient grammarians and lexicographers (e.g. EM 140) connected ἀρή 'Schaden, Unheil, Verderben', cf. ἄρος· βλάβος ἀκούσιον (H.). The connection is improbable: IE origin of such a name is not to be expected. On the flection Schulze 1892: 454ff., Bechtel (above) and Kretschmer Glotta 15 (1927): 197.

ἀρθμός ⇒ἀραρίσκω.

ἄρθρον [n.] 'joint, articulation' (Hdt., Hp., S., E.), also 'article' as a grammatical term (Arist.). ◂IE $h_2$er-d^hro- 'fitting'▸ •DER ἀρθρῖτις (νόσος) 'gout' (Hp.), ἀρθριτικός (Hp., Gal.); ἀρθρικός 'of the joint or article' (Gal., gramm.); ἀρθρώδης 'provided with joints' (X., Arist., Gal.), ἀρθρωδία (Gal.). Denominative verb ἀρθρόομαι 'to be articulated', -όω 'to articulate' (Hp., Hermipp., X.), ἄρθρωσις 'articulation' (Phld., Str.).
•ETYM From $h_2$er-d^hro-, derived from $h_2$er- 'to fit' with the instrument suffix. See ►ἀραρίσκω.

ἀρι- 'good, very' (Il.), as a first member in compounds. ◂IE $h_2$er-▸ •COMP In ἀρί-γνωτος, -δείκετος, -πρεπής, etc.
•ETYM Willi KZ 112 (1999): 86-100 convincingly disassociates ἀρι- from ἐρι- and maintains the widely accepted connection with ἄριστος. He concludes that the forms with ἐρι- are mainly bahuvrīhis (possessive compounds), while those with ἀρι- are verbal governing compounds. Willi accepts Heubeck's connection of ἐρι- as ser-i*, related to Hitt. šēr 'above, up', with psilosis (95ff.), see ►ἐρι-. This is better than the analysis by Fur.: 348, who thinks the element is Pre-Greek because of the variation ἐ- / ἀ-.

ἀρία [f.] Doric for φελλόδρυς 'holm-oak' (Thphr.). ◂?▸
•DER ἀρείνος 'of oak' (IG 11(2), 161: A 70, Delos).
•ETYM Unknown.

Ἀριάδνη [f.] daughter of Minos, abducted by Theseus (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Ἀριάγνη on a vase; Ἀριήδη acc. to Zenodotos at Σ 592, Call. cf. 67.13 The form is confirmed by Ἀριήδαν· τὴν Ἀριάδνην. Κρῆτες (H.).
•ETYM The gloss ἀδνόν· ἁγνόν. Κρῆτες 'pure (Cret.)' (H.) is artificial, as γν > δν is not a Cretan development (Brown 1985: 25). This means that the word probably does not contain ἁγνός. An IE etymology is improbable for a Cretan goddess, and the group -δν- is found in other Pre-Greek words.

ἀριδείκετος [adj.] 'most famous' (Il.). ◂IE deiḱ-* 'show'▸ •ETYM A compound from ►ἀρι- and a second member which was formerly connected with ►δηδέχαται, under the assumption of metrical lengthening for *ἀρι-δέκετος (Schulze 1892: 242). Nowadays, the form is read δειδέχαται and is considered to be related to ►δείκνυμι, which means that ἀρι-δείκετος also derives from this root (which seemed obvious anyhow).

ἀρίζηλος [adj.] 'clear, easily recognizable' (Il.), equivalent of ἀρίδηλος. ◂IE $h_2$eri-dieh$_2$-lo-▸ •ETYM Explained as -di̯eh$_2$-lo-* to ►δέατο by Schulze 1892: 244 (in pre-laryngealist terms: *-δι̯ηλος). Others want to read -ζ- as -δδ-, cf. Shipp 1967: 50ff.; Chantraine 1942: 169.

ἀριθμός [m.] 'number; payment' (Od.). ◂IE $h_2$rei- 'count'▸ •VAR Through metathesis ἀμιθρός (Schwyzer: 268).
•DER Denominative verb ἀριθμέω 'count' (Il.), whence ἀρίθμημα (A., Secund.), ἀρίθμησις (Ion., Hell.) 'count, payment', with ἀριθμητικός 'of counting', 'arithmetical' (Pl., etc.); agent noun ἀριθμητής ([Pl.] Just. 373b).
Perhaps in the PNs Ἐπήριτος, Arc. Πεδάριτος and the Arc. appellative Ἐπάριτοι 'the chosen ones', see Wackernagel 1916: 250 and Wackernagel Phil. 86 (1931): 133ff.
•ETYM A derivation in -θμο- from the root of ►νήριτος 'countless'. Outside Greek, there are comparable words in Germanic: ON rím [n.] 'account', OHG rīm [m.] 'row, number', and in Celtic: OIr. rím 'number'. Probably, Lat. rītus 'religious observance, rite' is related too (< $h_2$rei-ti-*).

ἄριλλα [f.] unknown (only IG Rom. 4, 1349). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀρίς 1, -ίδος [f.] 'bow-drill' (Hp.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Technical term of unknown origin. For the formation, cf. ἀκίς, δοκίς, σανίς (Chantraine 1933: 337). Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 41 connects ἐριώλη.

ἀρίς 2, -ίδος [f.] plant name, 'Arisarum vulgare', also 'δρακοντία μικρά' (Ps.-Dsc.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Diminutive of ἄρον? Cf. also ►ἀρίσαρον.

ἀρίσαρον [n.] a plant, 'Arisarum vulgare' (Dsc.). ◂?▸ •ETYM See ►ἄρον and ►ἄσαρον (Strömberg 1940: 157f.).

ἀριστερός [adj.] 'left' (Il.). ◂GR▸
•DER the plant name ἀριστερεών (Plin.) = περιστερεών 'dovecoat' was perhaps reshaped after the latter form; see Strömberg 1940: 153,251f. Or is it unrelated to 'left'?
•ETYM Formed with the contrast-marking suffix -τερο-; connection with ἄρισ-τος is mostly assumed. A problem is that omens coming from the left side were considered unfavorable in Greece. It is thought that the left side was considered favorable in earlier times, judging by parallels like Lat. sinister (but see the doubts in De Vaan 2008 s.v.), OHG winister, Av. vairiia.stāra- 'left, more favorable' (or are these old euphemisms?).

ἄριστον [n.] 'breakfast' (Il.), taken in the afternoon in classical times (see Athen. 11b ff.). ◂IE $h_2$eier- 'day, morning', $h_1$ed- 'eat'▸

•DER Denominative ἀριστάω [v.] 'to have breakfast' (IA), ἀριστητής 'who eats twice a day' (Hp.). ἀριστητικός 'who loves breakfast' (Eup.), ἀριστητήριον 'refectory' (BCH 15, 184). 2. ἀριστίζω 'to give breakfast' (Ar.), -ίζομαι 'to have breakfast' (Hp.).
•ETYM An old compound meaning "eaten in the morning", a contraction of a locative ἆρι (< αἴερ-ι) and the zero grade of ἐδ- 'eat' (see ►ἐσθίω) + το-suffix: $h_2$eieri-h_1d-to-; see Bechtel 1914. Note, however, that ►ἦρι 'early' is now derived from $h_2$eus-er-i*.

ἄριστος [adj.] 'the best, first, noblest' (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἀριστίνδην [adv.] 'according to birth or merit' (Att.), whence substantivized ἀριστίνδᾱς [m.] (Sparta).
ἀριστεύς (mostly plur. ἀριστῆες) 'they who excel, chiefs' (Il.); ἀριστεύω [v.] 'to be the best, excel' (Il.), ἀριστεία [f.] 'deed of valor' (Gorg., S.). ἀριστεύς could be a back-formation from ἀριστεύω, if the latter was derived directly from ἄριστος. Also ἀριστεῖα, Ion. ἀριστήϊα [n.pl.] 'meed of valor' (Hdt., S.), but ἀριστεῖος 'belonging to the ἄριστοι' (D. H., Plu.) directly from ἄριστος. Further numerous PNs, like Ἀρίστων, Ἀριστίων, etc.
•ETYM A primary superlative to the comparative ►ἀρείων. It is sometimes considered to contain the prefix ἀρι-, but this seems improbable to me. Perhaps it is related to ►ἀραρίσκω, as 'the fittest'.

ἄριχα ⇒ ἀρήν.

ἀριχάομαι ⇒ ἀναρριχάομαι.

ἀρκάνη [f.] · τὸ ῥάμμα ᾧ τὸν στήμονα ἐγκαταπλέκουσι διαζόμεναι 'thread with which the warp is intertwined, when they are setting it up in the loom' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM The connection with ►ἄρκυς is doubtful. The suffix is also seen in δρεπάνη, καπάνη, θηγάνη, etc.; see Chantraine 1933: 198f. Probably a loanword, perhaps Pre-Greek.

ἄρκευθος [f.] 'juniper, Juniperus macrocarpa' (Hp.). ◄PG?, EUR?►
•VAR ἄργετος· ἡ ἄρκευθος. Κρῆτες (H.).
•DER ἀρκευθίς, -ίδος [f.] 'juniper-berry' (Hp.), ἀρκευθιδίτης (οἶνος) 'wine from or perfumed with juniper-berries' (Dsc. 5, 46 ed. Sprengel).
•ETYM Within Greek, the gloss ἄργετος is certainly cognate, cf. Brown 1985: 25. In view of this, ἄρκευθος is clearly a substrate word. On the suffix see Fur.: 115[3], on the material cf. Beekes 2000: 27. The word has always been connected with the Slavic group of Ru. rakíta 'willow, Salix fragilis' < arkūtā*; these can be combined if we assume a loan from the European substrate. The comparison with ἄρκυς 'net' is improbable.

ἀρκέω [v.] 'to ward off, defend; suffice' (Il.). ◄IE $h_2$erḱ-* 'hold, contain'► •COMP Often -αρκης: e.g. αὐτάρκης 'self-sufficient'; γυιάρκης 'strengthening the limbs' (Pi.), etc. Perhaps ►ποδάρκης.
•DER Verbal noun ἄρκεσις 'help' (S., inscr. Thera); also ἄρκος [n.] 'defense' (Alc.), which is rather deverbative to ἀρκέω because of its limited distribution. Further ἄρκιος (Il., epic) 'to be relied on, sure, certain, sufficient' (the development of the mg. is difficult). Perhaps here ἄρκιον 'burdock, Arctium Lappa' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Related to Lat. arceō 'to hold off, contain, etc.' and Hitt. ḫark-^{zi} 'to hold, have', and perhaps also to the noun Arm. argel 'hindrance'.

ἄρκηλος [m.] 'young panther, kind of panther' (Callix.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Perhaps ἄρκηλα· ... Κρῆτες τὴν ὕστριχα = 'hedgehog, porcupine (Cret.)' (H.), if it is itacistic for ἀρκύλᾱ 'bear'.
•ETYM Unknown. On the suffix (as a substrate element) see Fur.: 115[5]. It is not clear whether the gloss belongs here.

ἄρκτος [f., m.?] 'bear' (Il.); also name of a constellation: 'Ursa Major' (Scherer 1953: 131ff.), 'the north'; also a crustacean, 'Arctos Ursus' = τέττιξ (Arist.), see Thompson 1947: 17. ◄IE $h_2$rtḱo-* 'bear'► •VAR Younger form ἄρκος [m., f.] (LXX); the form appears at an early date in names, see Dobias-Lalou 2000: 6. Late ἄρξ (OGI 201, 15).
•COMP Ἀρκτοῦρος (Hes.), with -ορος 'surveyor'; see ►φρουρός.
•DER Diminutives ἀρκτύλος (Poll.), ἀρκυλλος (sch. Opp.), ἄρκιλος (Eust.).
ἀρκτικός 'northern' (Arist.), ἀρκτῷος 'id.' (Luc.), after ἑῷος 'eastern' from ἕως; ἄρκ(τ)ειος 'belonging to a bear' (Dsc.), after αἴγειος, βόειος, etc.; ἀρκτῆ < -έη [f.] 'skin of a bear' (Anaxandr.). ἄρκτιος [adj.] 'northern' (Nonn.), ἄρκτιον [n.] plant name, 'Inula candida' (Dsc.), Strömberg 1940: 118. Denominative verb ἀρκτεύω, -εύομαι 'to serve Artemis as a female bear' (Lys., sch. Ar. Lys. 645).
It is uncertain whether the ethonym Ἀρκάδες belongs here; see Sommer 1934: 63f.
•ETYM Old name of the bear found in Skt. ṛ́kṣa-, Av. arša-, Arm. arǰ, Lat. ursus, Celtic forms like MIr. art, and Hitt. ḫartagga- 'some wild animal'. These (especially the latter) lead to a reconstruction $h_2$rtḱo-*. The late Greek form with single -κ- is confirmed by the derivations. It is probably just a simplification of the cluster; or is it from before the metathesis?
The old etymology as 'destroyer' (Skt. rákṣas-, Av. raš- 'damage') has become untenable with the laryngeal theory.

ἄρκυς, -υος [f.] 'net' (A.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Mostly plur.
•DER ἄρκυον 'id.' (EM), after δίκτυον; also ἄρκυλον· δίκτυον 'net' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Acc. to Lidén IF 18 (1905-1906): 507f., in the sense of 'twined, woven', related to ἄρκευθος and ἀρκάνη and the Slavic words for 'willow'. This is improbable, as one expects a derivative suffix. A technical term which may well be a substrate word; for the u-stem, cf. μίμαρκυς, ῥάπυς / ῥάφυς, etc.

ἅρμα 1 [n.] 'wagon, car', especially 'war chariot' (Il.); on the use in Homer see Delebecque 1951: 170f. ◄IE $h_2$er-* 'join'► •VAR Often plur.
•DIAL Myc. a-mo /arm$^{(h)}$o/, dat. a-mo-te-i, plur. a-mo-ta, but it means 'wheel'. Further a-mo-te-jo-na-de /armoteiōna-de/ 'to the wheel-maker's shop'. On traces of the mg. 'wheel' in Homer, see Panagl 1992: 137-44.

•COMP ἁρματο-πηγός (Il.) ‘wheel-maker’, etc. ἁρμάμαξα contains ἅμαξα (Ar.), unless it is an adapted Persian word. On ►βητάρμων, see s.v.
•DER ἁρμάτειος ‘of the chariot’ (E., X.), ἁρματόεις ‘id.’ (Critias), ἁρματίτης ‘using chariots’ (Philostr., pap.), diminutive ἁρμάτιον (gloss.). Denominative ἁρματεύω [v.] ‘to drive a wagon’ (E. Or. 994).
•ETYM Derived from the root ἀρ- ‘to fit’ in ►ἀραρίσκω. It is assumed that the rough breathing (also in ►ἁρμόζω, ►ἁρμονία, etc.) is due to an original suffix -sm-. This presupposes that thematic ►ἁρμός is the older form, since only a thematic suffix -smo- is known. However, note that the Mycenaean form has no initial aspiration.
Outside Greek, several forms have a suffix -m-, e.g. Lat. arma [pl.] ‘weapons’, Arm. y-armar ‘fitting’. Unrelated is the word for ‘arm’ in Lat. arma [m.] ‘arm’, Go. arms ‘id.’, because of Skt.īrmá- ‘id.’ < _*h$_2$rH-mo-_ with root-final laryngeal.

ἅρμα 2 [n.] ‘food’ (Hp. acc. to Hellad. apud Phot. [p. 533 B]; also v.l. for ἅρμενα Hes. Th. 639). ◅?▻ •ETYM Connection with αἴρομαι ‘to take for oneself’, or with ►ἀραρίσκω has been suggested (cf. ►ἅρμενα in the meaning ‘food’). Furthermore, it is mentioned in the gloss νωγαλεύματα ἢ νωγαλίσματα· τὰ κατὰ λεπτὸν ἐδέσματα. οἱ δὲ τὰ μὴ εἰς χορτασίαν, ἀλλὰ τρυφερὰ ἅρματα (H.).

ἁρμαλά [?] a plant, ‘rue’ = πήγανον ἄγριον (Dsc.). ◅LW Sem.?▻ •VAR Syrian for πήγανον κηπαῖον (Ps.-Dsc. 3, 45). Also ἁρμαρά (pap.).
•ETYM Cf. Arab. harmal ‘rue’. Is ἁρμαλά from Semitic, or the other way round?

ἁρμαλιά [f.] ‘ration, food’ (Hes.). ◅?▻
•VAR Also αρμολια, -εα (pap.) and ἅρμωλα· ἀρτύματα. Ἀρκάδες ‘condiments (Arc.)’ (H.). Other glosses may contain mistakes: ἁρμόγαλα· τὰ ἀρτύματα. Ταραντῖνοι ‘condiments (Tarantine)’ (alphabetically wrong) and ἁρμώμαλα (read -ματα?). Cf. further ἡρμαλώσατο· συνέλαβεν ‘collected’ (H.).
•ETYM On the suffix, see Chantraine 1933: 82. The variation -αλ-, -ολ-, -ωλ- suggests a loanword; connection with ►ἅρμενα ‘food’ or ►ἅρμα 2 ‘id.’ is hardly feasible.

ἅρμενα [n.pl.] ‘sail, tackle; instruments; food’ (Hes., epic Ion.). ◅IE _*h$_2$er-_ ‘fit’▻ •VAR Rarely sing.
•DER ἁρμενίζω ‘to sail’ (gloss.), MoGr. also ‘to deliver, lead’ (see Browning Class. Rev. N.S. 19 (1969): 68.).
•ETYM Literally ‘what has been fitted out’, ‘equipment’, a substantivization of ἅρμενος from ►ἀραρίσκω.

ἁρμόζω [v.] ‘to join, fit together, connect’ (Il.). ◅IE _*h$_2$er-_ ‘fit’▻ •VAR Aor. ἁρμόσαι.
•DIAL Att. -όττω; Dor. aor. ἁομόξαι.
•DER ἁρμοστής (Dor. -τήρ) [m.] title of an official, especially of the Spartan governor in dependent cities (inscr., Th.), ἁρμόστωρ (A.) ‘commander’, action nouns ἅρμοσμα ‘joined work’ (E. Hel. 411), ἅρμοσις ‘tuning of an instrument’ (Phryn., Theol. Ar.), ἁρμοστικός (Theol. Ar.). With -γ-: ἁρμογή ‘fitting together’ (Eup.), cf. Dor. ἅρμοξα, ἅρμοκται.

•ETYM Denominative verb from ἁρμότᾱς acc. to Ruijgh 1967a: 48[17], which itself derives from ►ἁρμός ‘joint’ (S.).

ἁρμονία [f.] ‘means of joining; frame; covenant, agreement, etc.’ (Il.). ◅IE _*h$_2$er-_ ‘fit’▻ •ETYM Derived from an adjective only known as a PN: Ἅρμων, for which cf. Ἁρμονίδης (Il.). Also found in ►βητάρμων. Like ►ἅρμα 1, this adjective derives from ἀρ- ‘to fit’ with a suffix -men-. See ►ἀραρίσκω.

ἁρμός [m.] ‘joint’ (S., E., inscr.). ◅IE _*h$_2$(e)r-smo-_ ‘joint’▻ •DER Hence the old locative ἁρμοῖ [adv.] ‘just, lately’ (A.). ἁρμόδιος ‘fitting, etc.’ (Thgn.) seems to be a back-formation to ►ἁρμόζω.
•ETYM See ►ἁρμόζω.

ἅρμυλα ⇒ἀρβύλη.

ἅρμωλα ⇒ἁρμαλιά.

ἀρνακίς ⇒ἀρήν.

ἀρνειός [m.] ‘ram’ (Il.). ◅IE? _*h$_2$ers-n-i-_ ‘ram’▻ •VAR Cf. ἀρνειός· ὁ τριετὴς κριός ‘three-year-old ram’ (H.). Also in Pausanias 159 Erbse, who cites Istros ἄρνα, εἶτα ἀμινόν, εἶτα ἀρνειόν, εἶτα λιπογνώμονα. For ἀρνηός, see below.
•DIAL Att. ἀρνεώς [m.].
•DER ἀρνηάδες, -άδων [fem.pl.] (Aeol., Del.^{3} 644, 15).
•ETYM As the glosses indicate, the word was a designation for a ram of a certain age (Benveniste BSL 45 (1949): 103). Att. ἀρνεώς shows that the original form was *ἀρνηός, which is confirmed by Aeol. ἀρνηάδες. The form with ει in Homer may have arisen by reinterpretation of spelled E. We thus have to reconstruct _*ar(s)nēi̯os_ or _*ar(s)nēu̯os_. The old connection with (ϝ)ἀρήν was rightfully rejected by Meillet IF 5 (1895): 328f., both because of the meaning and because the word had no digamma. *ἀρνηός therefore appears to belong to ►ἄρσην ‘male animal’ (see there on the absence of an initial digamma). The same formation, but from a different root, is found in Skt. vr̥ṣṇí-, Av. varšni-, also meaning ‘ram’. An alternative, but less convincing etymology derives the word from the verb ἀρνευω (s.v. ►ἀρνευτήρ); see Bechtel 1914.

ἀρνέομαι [v.] ‘to deny, refuse, decline’ (Il.). ◅IE _*h$_2$res-_ ‘refuse, deny’▻ •VAR Aor. ἀρνήσασθαι.
•DER ἄρνησις ‘denial’ (trag., Pl., D.), ἀρνήσιμος (S.), perhaps after ἀμφισβητήσιμος; ἀρνητικός ‘negative’ (Chrysipp., Numen.). Probably deverbal: ἄπ-αρνος and ἔξ-αρνος (IA).
•ETYM Mayrhofer KZ 71 (1953): 75ff. connected the word with Av. rah- ‘to be disloyal, unfaithful’ (3pl. intens. rārəšiieiṇtī, caus. rå̊ŋhaiiən), assuming a nasal present _*h$_2$r-n-es-_ for Greek. This etymology fits both form and meaning very well, cf. also Beekes MSS 38 (1979): 10-11. Unrelated is Arm. uranam ‘to deny’, see Clackson 1994: 102f.

ἀρνευτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] ‘jumper, acrobat’, also a bird (Il., Hdt., Arat.). ◅GR▻

•VAR Acc. to sch. AT on M 385, the ἀρνευτὴρ is ὁ κυβιστήρ, παρὰ τοὺς ἄρνας. οὗτοι γὰρ κυβιστῶσιν ὥσπερ τὸν ἀέρα κυρίττοντες 'tumbler; ram (for they tumble while butting with the horns)', but this may be a folk-etymological interpretation after ἀρνειός 'ram'. Also ἀρνευτής [m.] epithet of a fish (Numen. apud Ath.); cf. Strömberg 1943: 50.
•DER ἀρνευτήρια [n.pl.] 'diving tricks' (Arat.), ἀρνέυω [v.] 'to dive' (Lyc.).
•ETYM The connection with ►ἀρνειός 'ram' is uncertain. See Fur.: 235 on ἄρναπον· τὸν ἄρνα (H.) (Latte reads ἀρνάριον); he prefers a separate root for 'jump'.

ἄρνυμαι [v.] 'to win, gain, acquire' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2er- 'take, acquire'► •VAR Aor. ἀρέσθαι.
•COMP Starting from the expression μισθὸν ἄρνυσθαι, the verb μισθαρνέω 'to work, serve for hire' (Hp.) was formed.
•DER ἄρος [n.] 'benefit' (A. Supp. 885 [uncertain reading], H., Eust.).
•ETYM An old nasal present ἄρνυμαι < h_2r-nu-, seen in Arm. aṙnum 'to take', aor. aṙi, and in Av. ərənuuaiṇti 'they grant'. Hitt. arnu-^{zi} 'to transport, deport' is related to ►ὄρνυμι.

ἄροκλον ⇒ἄρακιν.

ἄρον [n.] a plant, 'Arum italicum' etc., cuckoo-pint (Thphr.); see LSJ. ◄LW? Eg.► •ETYM Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 244 and Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 54 derived it from Eg. r 'reed, cane'; cf. Plin. Hist. Nat. 19, 5, 30, 95: est inter genera et quod in Aegypto aron vocant. Perhaps, it is also contained in ►ἀρίς and ►ἀρίσαρον. Comparison with Lat. (h)arundo 'cane' is less probable.

ἄρος [n.] = ὄφελος 'advantage' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR ἄρος· ὄφελος καὶ <πέτρας> κοιλάς, ἐν αἷς ὕδωρ ἀθροίζεται ὄμβριον, καὶ βλάβος ἀκούσιον 'advantage; hollows of rocks in which rain water is collected; also involuntary damage' (H.).
•ETYM In the first sense, usually compared with ►ἄρνυμαι. For the second, Defner 1923: 47 compares Laconian ἀρέ· λάκκος 'cistern'. For the third, see on ►ἀρή.

ἀρόω [v.] 'to plow, plant' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2erh_3- 'plow'► •VAR Aor. ἀρόσαι.
•DIAL Myc. a-ro-u-ra /aroura/.
•DER ἀροτήρ [m.] 'plowman' (Il.), secondarily ἀρότης [m.] (IA, poet.); ἄροτος [m.] 'plowing, (plowed) land, etc.' (Il.); thence ἀροτήσιος ὥρη (Arat. 1053), after adjectives of time in -ήσιος; ἀροτικός 'fit for plowing' (Gal.), perhaps directly from ἀρόω; 2. ἄροσις 'plowing, etc.' (Arist., Arat., Ael.), 'farmland' (Hom.), whence ἀρόσιμος 'arable' (Thphr., Str.); sometimes with secondary length ἄρωσις (pap.) and ἀρώσιμος (S. Ant. 569), metrically conditioned (Arbenz 1933: 48); 3. ἄρωμα 'farmland' (S., com.); 4. ἀροσμός 'plowing' (pap.); 5. Doric *ἀρατύς (on -α- see below) is perhaps contained in the month name Ἀράτυος.
ἄροτρον 'plow' (Il.); thence denominative verbs: 1. ἀροτρεύω [v.] 'to plow' (Pherecyd., Lyc., Nic., Babr.), ἀροτρεύς 'plowman' (Theoc., Bion, Arat.), ἀροτρευτήρ 'id.' (AP), ἀρότρευμα 'plowing' (Poet. apud Stob.); 2. ἀροτριάω = ἀρόω (Call., Thphr.), ἀροτρίασις (LXX) and ἀροτρίαμα 'plowed land' (sch. Ar.); 3. ἀροτριόω = -ιάω (LXX); 4. ἀροτριάζω 'to plow' (pap.), ἀροτριαστής (EM) and ἀροτριασμός (sch. Opp.).
ἄρουρα 'arable land' (Il.), already Myc. a-ro-u-ra. Thence ἀρουραῖος 'rural' (IA), ἀρουρίτης 'id.' (Babr.), diminutives ἀρούριον (AP) and ἀρουρίδιον (pap.); from Egyptian papyri: ἀρουρηδόν [n.] 'surface measured by ἄρουραι' (substantivized adverb), ἀρουρισμός 'measuring in ἄρουραι'.
•ETYM An old yod-present derived from the dissyllabic root *h_2erh_3-. The reflex of -h_3- is seen in the aorist, and perhaps also in the present if this directly continues h_2erh_3-ie/o- (this is one of the very few counterexamples against Pinault's Law in Greek). The -α- in the Doric forms (ἄρατρον, Ἀράτυος, fut. ἀράσαντι (Tab. Heracl.); Ther. Rhod. ἐνάρατον) is probably due to influence of the verb ἀράω, which must be analogical (though it is hard to indicate a precise model). Cognate yod-presents are Lat. arāre, MIr. airim, Go. arjan, Lith. árti, 1sg. ariù, OCS orati, 1sg. orjǫ.
The formation of ἄροτρον is matched by Arm. arawr, Lat. arātrum (with secondary length), MIr. arathar, and ON arðr; all from an instrument noun h_2erh_3-tro- 'plow'; the same formation is continued by Lith. árti, OCS ralo < PBSl. arH-tlo- or -d^hlo-. It is possible that Hitt. ḫarra-^{i} 'to grind, crush' is cognate, in which case 'to plow' was originally called 'to break the soil'.
ἄρουρα is a derivation in -ια from a verbal noun *ἄρο-ϝαρ 'plowing'; on the details see Peters 1980a: 143ff. This old r/n-stem h_2erh_3-ur̥, gen. h_2rh_3-uen-s is continued in MIr. arbor < arur̥, gen. OIr. arbe < aruens 'corn', Skt. urvárā- 'arable land'; a similar formation is found in Lat. arvum < h_2erh_3-uo-.

ἁρπάζω [v.] 'to snatch away' (Il.). ◄PG?(S), IE? *serp- 'prune'► •VAR Aor. ἁρπάξαι (Il.), ἁρπάσαι (Hom.).
•DER From ἁρπαγ-: ἅρπαξ [f.] 'plundering' (Hes.), [m.] 'robber' (Ar.); ἁρπαγή 'robbery' (Sol.), ἁρπάγη 'hook, rake' (E.); ἅρπαγος [m.] 'hook' (A., S.); ἁρπαγεύς 'robber' (Them.) was probably taken from ἁρπαγή; *ἁρπαγών is found in the Latin borrowing harpagō 'grappling-hook' (Plaut.).
Deverbal from ἁρπάζω: ἁρπακτήρ [m.] 'robber' (Il.), ἁρπακτής (Call.); action nouns ἁρπαγμός 'robbery, booty' (Plu., Vett. Val.), ἅρπαγμα 'id.' (Lyc., LXX), ἁρπακτύς [f.] 'robbery' (Call.); ἁρπάγιον 'vessel like the κλεψύδρα' (Alex. Aphr.).
Adjectives: ἁρπάγιμος 'robbed, stolen' (Call., AP), lengthened ἁρπαγιμαῖος 'id.' (Orph.); ἁρπακτικός 'rapacious' (Luc.), ἁρπακτήριος 'id.' (Lyc.). Adverb ἁρπάγδην 'snatching' (A. R., Opp., Aret.).
Forms deriving from the aorist ἁρπάσαι are less frequent: ἅρπασμα (Pl., Men.), ἁρπασμός (Plu.), ἅρπασις (Phryn.), ἁρπαστικός (Arist., Phld.), ἅρπασος name of a predatory bird (Ant. Lib.).
•ETYM ἁρπάζω seems to be a denominative verb from a stem ἁρπαγ-. This may be related within Greek to ἁρπ- (from which ἁρπάζω may have been derived directly), as found in ἅρπη 'sickle', also a bird of prey. Less probable is connection with ►ἅρπυς and ►ἅρπυια; as DELG remarks, this may be based on folk etymology.
The word for 'sickle' is derived from a root *serp-. If ἁρπάζω is derived from this, too, it would originally mean 'to snatch'. However, the etymology is far from certain, as a suffix -αγ- cannot be explained in IE terms, and forms which contain it seem to be substrate words (Chantraine 1933: 397). Nor can ἀρπ- be easily explained as an IE form, since the zero grade *sr̥p- would be expected to yield ῥαπ-.

ἁρπαλέος [adj.] 'devouring, greedy, consuming'; thence 'with pleasure, attractive, alluring' (Od.). ◂GR▸ •DER Denominative ἁρπαλίζω [v.] 'to be eager to receive; to exact greedily' (A.), ἁρπαλίζομαι· ἀσμένως δέχομαι 'to receive gladly' (H.).
•ETYM Dissimilated from ἀλπαλέος, which belongs to ►ἄλπνιστος. The original form is recorded by Hesychius: ἀλπαλαῖον (leg. -έον)· ἀγαπητόν 'amiable'. The secondary connection with ἁρπάζω explains the spiritus asper and the development of the meaning.

ἀρπεδής [adj.] 'flat' (Nic. Th. 420). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Sometimes with rough breathing ἁρ-. Cf. ἐρπεδόεσσα (-δοσσα ms.)· ἐπίπεδος 'level, flat' (H.).
•DER ἀρπεδόεις (Antim. Col.). Denominative verb ἀρπεδίσαι· ὁμαλίσαι, ἐδαφίσαι 'to make even or level, beat level and firm' (H.).
•ETYM Connection with πέδον (for which one compares ἄπεδος 'flat') leads nowhere. Since antiquity, the word has been derived from ἀρι-πεδής (Did., Hdn.), but this is rightly rejected by Frisk. If the gloss with ἐ- is reliable, it is a substrate word (Frisk refers to ἔρθυρις = ἐρίθυρις for ἐρ- from ἐρι-).

ἀρπεδόνη [f.] 'cord, yarn', used to ensnare game, etc. (Hdt.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also -εδών [f.] (AP).
•DER ἀρπεδονίζειν· λωποδυτεῖν. καὶ διὰ σπάρτου θηρᾶν 'to steal clothes; hunt by rope' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown; cf. the names of instruments in -δών, -δόνη (Schwyzer: 529f., 490, Chantraine 1933: 361f., 207). Connection with ►ἁρπάζω is improbable for a word for 'cord'. Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 225f. connects the word with Lith. vefpti 'to spin', but then the -αρ- must be analogical after -ερ-.

ἄρπεζα [f.] 'hedge' (Nic.), cf. ἀρπέζας· τοὺς αἱμασιώδεις τόπους. οἱ δὲ τείχη καὶ περιβόλους. οἱ δὲ τὰ κλιμακώδη χωρία 'places that are hedged in; walls and enclosures; terraced places' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἄρπεζος [f.] 'id.' (Mylasa). Cf. further ἄρπισαι· αἱμασιαί. ἢ τάφρους 'walls; ditches' and ἄρπιξ· εἶδος ἀκάνθης, Κύπριοι 'kind of thorny plant (Cypr.)' (H.). Also ἀρπάναι· μάνδραι βοσκήματων 'cattle folds'.
•ETYM Connection with ἅρπη, ἀρπεδόνη, ἁρπάζω is not convincing. Chantraine's suggestion that the basic meaning is 'limit of a terrain', and so perhaps connected with ἀρπεδόνη 'cord', is improbable: the ἄρπεζα is clearly something in the terrain, functioning as a boundary (αἱμασιά). The variation -εζα/-ισα (in ἄρπισαι) is typical for substrate words.

ἅρπη [f.] 'sickle' (Il.), also a bird of prey (after its claws, see Bechtel 1914 and Thompson 1895). ◂IE?, ? *ser(p)- 'sickle'▸

•VAR ἅρπης· εἶδος ὀρνέου 'kind of bird' (H.) and ἀρπετόν· ἀκόμιστον ἢ ἰκτῖνος. Κρῆτες 'untended; a kite (Cretan)' (H.).
•DER Acc. to Leumann 1950: 294, the bird comes from the interpretation of Homer; not convincing.
•ETYM ἅρπη agrees with OCS srъpъ, Latv. sirpe 'sickle'. Furthermore, one compares Lat. sarpiō and sarpō, sarpere 'trim, prune (vine)', but the vocalism is difficult to accout for (see Schrijver 1991: 493: from sarriō). If we suppose an IE origin, "ἅρπη a un vocalisme ambigu", say E-M, by which they must mean that it is difficult to explain. I agree with E-M and am inclined to assume a non-IE word (for the concept of European substrate words, see Beekes 2000). The appurtenance of OIr. serr is also doubtful; see Vendryes. For a hypothesis of an Oriental origin, see Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 17. It is improbable to take ἅρπη as the basis of ἅρπαξ, ἁρπάγη, ἁρπάζω, as Szemerényi 1964: 205, 213 does.

ἄρπιξ [f.]? · εἶδος ἀκάνθης 'kind of thorny plant' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also ἄπριξ; and ἄπριγδα· εἶδος ἀκανθης 'id.' (Cypr. EM 132, 53).
•ETYM Unknown. The variation with -γδα and the form itself suggest substrate origin.

ἀρπίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'kind of shoe' (Call.), = κρηπίς 'man's high boot' (EM 148, 36). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀρπίδες· μαλακαὶ κρηπῖδες ἢ ὑποδήματα 'soft boots or sandals' (H.). ῥαπίς = κρηπίς (H., EM).
•ETYM The word is Laconian, acc. to Hesychius. A formal variant is ►ῥαπίς, so the word must be Pre-Greek.

Ἅρπυια [f.] usually plur. 'the Harpies', demons (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Old dual Ἀρεπυίᾱ (Aigina); the same form (but with -υῖαι) is also found in EM 138, 21.
•ETYM The expression Ἅρπυιαι ἀνηρέψαντο (ξ 371 = α 241) was once suggestive of etymological connection with ►ἐρέπτομαι 'to feed on', but this is impossible in view of the ἐ-. Moreover, apart from οἶδα, perfect forms without reduplication do not exist. The suffix -υια is typical for substrate words, cf. ἄγυια, αἴθυια, etc., and the variation ε/ zero is also a substrate characteristic. It must be concluded that the name is a substrate element, like e.g. Εἰλείθυια. See Szemerényi 1964: 203-213 and Beekes 1998: 24f. The aspiration may have been taken from ἁρπάζω by folk etymology.

ἄρπυς [f.] 'love' (Parth.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἄρπυν· ἔρωτα. Αἰολεῖς 'love (Aeol.)' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Fur.: 327f. connects the word with Ἅρπυια.

ἀρράβη [f.] · θύρα. οἷον γέρ<ρ>ον 'door, such as of wickerwork' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Not related to Hebr. 'ārab 'twist', as per Lewy 1895: 130, though Hesychius's gloss may indicate that the door was twisted or twined.

ἀρραβών 1, -ῶνος [m.] 'caution money' (Antiph.). ◂LW▸
•VAR Also ἀραβών
•DER ἀρραβωνίζεται· ἀρραβῶνι δίδοται 'is presented with caution money' (H.).

•ETYM A Semitic loan acc. to Lewy 1895: 120, followed by Schwyzer: 153, 316, who compare Hebr. ʿērābōn 'id.'. But the Semitic character of the word is not certain; perhaps the word is a loan from elsewhere (Cohen GLECS 8 (1957): 13). Egyptian has ʿrb. Cf. E. Masson 1967: 30ff. Cf. Lat. arrabō, arra.

ἀρραβών 2 [m.]? · ἄγκιστρον 'fish-hook' (H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Unknown. An attempt at an explanation in Lewy 1895: 130.

ἄρρατος [adj.] = σκληρὸς, ἀμετάστροφος 'hard, unalterable' (Pl. Cra. 407d, Resp. 535c, Ax. 365a). ◅?▻
•VAR In Euph. 24 the -α- is long.
•ETYM Uncertain. Does it derive from ἀ-ϝρατ-ος, from PIE uert- 'to twist'? If this is correct, the length of the -α- would be spurious. An analysis -ϝρᾰ-τος is more obvious.

ἀρρηνής [adj.] 'growling', only in ζάκοτόν τε καὶ ἀρρηνές (Theoc. 25, 83), scil. θηρίον, said of a dog; acc. to H. = ἄγριον, δυσχερές 'wild, intractable'. ◅?▻
•DER ἀρρηνεῖν· λοιδορεῖν. καὶ <ἐπὶ> γυναικὶ· πρὸς ἄνδρα διαφέρεσθαι 'to slander, abuse; of a woman, to quarrel with a man' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Is it from ἀρ(ρ)άζω 'to bark, howl', remodelled after στρηνής or ἀπηνής? See ►ἀράζω.

ἀρρηφόρος [f.] name of the Athenian girls who carried the symbols of Athena in procession (Paus.). ◅?▻
•VAR ἐρρηφόρος, -έω (inscr.); and ἐρσηφόρος, -ία; also ἐρσε-, ἐρσο- (inscr., sch. Ar.).
•DER ἀρρηφορία 'procession of ἀρρηφόροι' (Lys.), denominative ἀρρηφορέω [v.] (Ar., Din.), τὰ ἀρρηφόρια (sch. Ar., EM).
•ETYM Unexplained. In antiquity, the word was derived from ἄρρητος 'unsaid, mysterious' (with an inexplicable loss of -το-), or from ἕρση 'dew', also the name of a daughter of Kekrops. See Adrados Emerita 19: 117-133 and Burkert Herm. 94 (1966): 1ff.

ἀρριχάομαι ⇒ἀναρριχάομαι.

ἄρριχος [f., m.] 'basket' (Ar.). ◅PG?(S)▻
•VAR ἀρίσκος· κόφινος ἢ ἀγγεῖον λύγινον 'basket or vessel of chaste-tree wood' (H.).
•DER ἄρσιχος (D. S.), diminutive ἀρριχίς [f.] (Ath.).
•ETYM Unknown. The development -ρσ- > -ρρ- is normal in Attic (Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 265); the same suffix occurs in the synonym σύριχος (Schwyzer: 498, Chantraine 1933: 402). Fur.: 348 hesitantly compares ἄρυσος/ ἔρυσος 'basket'. Probably a substrate word; it does not belong to ἀερσι- (ἀείρω), as DELG suggested.

ἀρρωδέω ⇒ὀρρωδέω.

ἄρσεα [n.pl.] · λειμῶνες 'meadows' (H.). ◅?▻
•VAR Delph. ἄρσια (F. Delph. 3, 4, 42, 13)?
•ETYM Unknown. Schwyzer suggested a relation with ἄρδω 'to irrigate', with a suffix -σος like in ἄλσος etc. (Schwyzer: 513, cf. Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 254). The suffix -σος, however, may be a substrate element (Fur.: 254[27]). Gusmani 1969: 512 compares Hitt. arši- 'plantation'.

ἀρσενικόν [n.] 'arsenic' (Arist.). ◅LW Orient.▻
•VAR Also ἀρρενικόν, fem. ἀρρενική (Gal.).
•ETYM Word of oriental origin, ultimately from MP zarnīk* 'gold-colored' (cf. MoP zarnīx, zarnīq 'id.' and see ►χλόη, ►χλωρός), probably via a Semitic intermediary (Syr. zarnīkā) and reshaped after ἀρσενικός, ἀρρενικός 'male'. See Schrader-Nehring 1917 s.v.

ἄρσην, -ενος [adj.] 'male' (Il.). ◅IE uers-n-* 'male'▻ •DIAL Att. ἄρρην; Ion., Lesb., Cret. ἔρσην, Lacon. ἄρσης.
•DER ἀρρέντερος 'male' (Arc.) and ἐρσεναίτερος (El.) are probably secondary after θηλύτερος.
ἀρσενικός (Att. -ρρ-) 'male' (Hell.), ἐρσενικός (pap.), ἀρσένιος (Teuthis); ἀρσένιον [n.] 'male child' (pap.). Adverb ἀρρενωδῶς 'male' (LXX); abstracts: ἀρρενότης [f.] 'masculinity, masculine gender' (Stoic.), ἀρσένωμα 'masculine seed' (sch. Opp.). Denominative verb ἀρρενόομαι 'to become man, behave like a man' (Luc., Ph.).
•ETYM ἄρσην and ἔρσην reflect IE u(e)rsēn* 'male animal', the zero grade ἄρσην corresponding to Skt. (v)r̥ṣa-bhá- 'bull', Arm. aṙn 'ram', and full grade ἔρσην to OP aršan- 'man, male', Lat. verrēs 'ram', Lith. veršis 'bull calf'. The Gr. forms show no trace of a digamma, cf. especially Gortyn ερσεν-. Pronk fthc.b has argued that initial u-* was lost in Greek, Armenian and in part of the Indo-Iranian cognates in the compound g^{w}eh$_3$u-ursēn* 'bull', attested in ToA kayurṣ, ToB kauṛṣe 'bull' and ON kursi 'bull calf' (a brilliant find by Kroonen, p.c.). For the former, textbook view see the discussion in Peters 1993a. Cf. ►ἀρνειός, ►ἀρνευτήρ.

ἄρσιον ⇒ἀνάρσιος.

ἀρσώμιδες · ὑπόδημα γυναικεῖον 'women's sandal' (H.). ◅?▻
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀρτάβη [f.] a Persian and Egyptian measure (Hdt.). ◅LW Iran.▻
•VAR Also ἀρτέβη.
•DER In papyri: ἀρτάβιος 'measuring an α.', ἀρταβιαῖος 'id.', ἀρταβίειος (or -ιεῖος) 'id.'; cf. κοτυλίειος (and -ιεῖος) from κοτύλη (Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 95); abstract ἀρταβιεία (also -βεία, -βία) 'tax for one α.'.
•ETYM The word is of Iranian (Old Persian) origin, acc. to R. Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 100-102.

ἄρταμος [m.] 'butcher, cook' (S.). ◅?▻
•DIAL Perhaps Myc. a-to-mo.
•ETYM Eustathios 577, 45 explains it as ὁ εἰς ἄρτια τέμνων, in which case it would be haplological for *ἀρτί-ταμος or *ἀρτό-ταμος 'artful cutting'. DELG objects that we should expect -τομος; to my mind, the whole etymology is most improbable. Fur.: 345 thinks it is a substrate word; although there is no further evidence, this is a priori the most likely solution.

ἀρτάω [v.] 'to bind to, hang upon, attach to' (Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •DER Verbal nouns: ἄρτημα designation of several objects, such as 'ear-pendant' (Hdt.), 'weight' (Arist.), etc.; ἄρτησις 'hanging' (Papp.), ἀνάρτησις 'id.' (Thphr.), ἀρτησμός 'id.' (AB). Further ἀρτάνη 'rope, noose' (A.), after πλεκτάνη, etc.
•ETYM ἀρτάω is reconstructed as *ἀϝερτάω, from ἀείρω 'to bind, hang', but the derivation is unusual (Schwyzer: 705f.). Cf. ▸ἀρτήρ and ▸ἀρτηρία.

ἀρτεμής [adj.] 'fresh, healthy' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DER ἀρτεμέω [v.] 'to be healthy' (Nonn.), ἀρτεμία 'health' (Max., AP, Procl.).
•ETYM Unknown. The word has been explained as a haplology, either from *ἀρτι-δεμής (to δέμας), or as a compound from ἀρ- = ἀρι- (but see on ▸ἀρπεδής) and *τέμος (to ▸τημελέω), Fick & Bechtel 1894: 439. Both are unconvincing.

Ἄρτεμις, -ιδος [f.] name of the goddess (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Gen. also -ιτος.
•DIAL Myc. a-te-mi-to /Artemitos/ [gen.]; a-ti-mi-te /Artimitei/ [dat.]. Dor. Ἄρταμις, -ιτος; Boeot. Ἄρταμις, -ιδος; Delphi Ἄρτεμις, -ιτος (SIG 671, etc.).
•DER Ἀρτεμίσιος, Ἀρταμίτιος [m.], also the month name Ἀρτεμισιών (Th.); Ἀρτεμίσιον [n.] 'temple of A.' (Hdt.). Ἀρταμίτια [n.pl.] 'festival of A.' (Delphi). ἀρτεμιδήϊον [n.], ἀρτεμισία [f.] plant name, see Strömberg 1940: 100. Ἀρτεμισιασταί [m.pl.] worhsippers of A. (Athens), as if from *ἀρτεμισιάζω; cf. Ἀπολλωνιασταί (Chantraine 1933: 316).
•ETYM The forms show an interchange e/i, which may point to Pre-Greek origin. We further find e/a (see Fur.: 185), which is rather an old phenomenon than a recent assimilation. The variation t/d is due to a recent replacement of the suffix: Myc. has -t-, and the forms in -σιον- presuppose a -t- too.
The name is found in Lydian inscriptions (Artimuś, Artimu-), and Lycian has ertemi, but this does not prove that the name comes from Lydia or Asia Minor. Improbable is Illyrian origin (Ruipérez Emerita 15 (1947): 1ff. and Ruipérez Zephyrus 2 (1951): 89ff., who assumed Illyr. artos* 'bear'). Against the interpretation as 'bear-godess' and connection with ἄρκτος see Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 34, who connects ἄρταμος 'butcher', which seems very improbable. The Indo-European interpretation by Peters 1989: 214ff. involves many difficulties and should be rejected.

ἀρτέμων, -ονος [m.] 'foresail' (Act. Ap. 27, 40); mg. uncertain in Lyd. Mens. 2, 12. ◂?▸ •ETYM A technical word, for which a precise explanation of meaning and history is lacking. Connection with ▸ἀρτέομαι or ▸ἀρτάω with a suffix -μων (Chantraine 1933: 172, Schwyzer: 522) does not explain the meaning. Borrowed as Lat. artemo(n) name of a sail (since Lucil.); it also means 'principal pulley' (Vitr. 10, 2, 9). Cf. Vart 1887: 101-106 and Rougé 1966: 58f.

ἀρτέομαι [v.] 'to prepare, make ready' (Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •COMP Prefixed ἀν-, παρ-αρτέομαι (Hdt., Arr.).
•DER ἄρτησις (Hdt.), with a v.l. ἄρτισις, from ἀρτίζω; ἀρτίζω 'to prepare, equip' (Theoc.), καταρτίζω (Hdt.), cf. the pair αἰτέω : αἰτίζω. The s-stem in ἐπαρτής 'ready' (Od.) does not presuppose an s-stem noun.

•ETYM Derived from the root ἀρ- in ▸ἀραρίσκω, via an intermediary noun in -τ-; not directly from ▸ἄρτι.

ἀρτήρ [m.] 1. that by which anything is carried (LXX Ne. 4, 17 [11]); 2. kind of shoe (Pherecr. 38, H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM 1. derives from *ἀϝερ-τήρ, from ▸ἀείρω 1 'to raise'; 2. could be analyzed as 'what is bound to', from ▸ἀείρω 2 'to bind', or from ἀρτάω with haplology for *ἀρτη-τήρ.

ἀρτηρία [f.] 'artery', 'windpipe' (Hp., Pl., Arist.); see Strömberg 1944: 60. ◂GR▸ •DER ἀρτηριακός (medic.) and ἀρτηριώδης (Gal.); ἀρτηρίασις 'bronchitis' (Isid. Etym. 4, 7, 14), as if from a verb of disease *ἀρτηριάω, cf. ψωρίασις, ἐρυθρίασις.
•ETYM Like the semantically comparable ἀορτή (see ▸ἀείρω 2), it probably derives from ἀείρω 'to bind, hang up'. On the formation, see Chantraine 1933: 81 and Scheller 1951: 59.

ἄρτι [adv.] 'just, just now, recently' (A.); in Homer only in compounds and derivatives). ◂IE *$h_2$er- 'fit'▸ •COMP Frequent as a first member, first meaning 'right, fitting': ἀρτι-επής 'who knows well how to use the word', ἀρτί-φρων,'sensible, intelligent'; ἀρτί-πος (all Hom.), ἀρτί-χειρ, ἀρτι-μελής (Pl.). In later compounds, it means 'recently'.
•DER ἄρτιος (Il.) 'right, fitting', also 'even' (of numbers), ἀρτιότης [f.] (Arist.), ἀρτιάκις [adv.] 'an even number of times' (Pl.), ἀρτιάζω [v.] 'to play at odd and even' (Ar.); ἀρτιασμός (Arist.). Perhaps ἀρτίζω 'to order, equip, etc.', if not from ▸ἀρτέομαι; usually ἀπ-, ἐξ-, καταρτίζω, with a number of derivatives; from the simplex ἀρτιστῆρες [pl.] title of an officer in Elatea.
•ETYM Probably a locative of the t-stem *$h_2$er-t- 'order', from the root of ▸ἀραρίσκω. The word neatly corresponds with Arm. ard 'just now', cf. ard-a-cin 'just born, ἀρτι-γενής', and with Lith. artì 'close by'. Lat. ars, artis reminds of ἀρτίφρων and ἀρτίχειρ, where the first element may mean 'skillful'. See ▸ἀνάρσιος.

ἀρτίαλα [n.pl.] 'decoration of the ear' (Poll. 5, 97). ◂?▸
•DIAL Doric.
•ETYM Unexplained. Connection with ἄρτιος, with a suffix -αλο- (Schwyzer: 483f., Chantraine 1933: 245f.), has been suggested.

ἄρτος [m.] 'bread' (Od.). ◂?▸
•DIAL On Myc. a-to-po-qo /arto-pok^{w}os/ 'baker', see ▸πέσσω.
•COMP Frequent as a first member, note ἀρτο-κόπος 'baker' (Hdt.) with metathesis (cf. Lith. kepù beside OCS pekǫ); further ἀρτοποιός 'id.' (X.), etc.
•DER Diminutive ἀρτίσκος [m.] (Hp., Dsc., Gal.) and ἀρτίσκιον (Damocr.).
•ETYM Unknown; connection with ἀρ- 'fit' is improbable. Pisani Ric. ling. 1 (1950): 141 derives it from Iranian arta-* 'flour' as a borrowing, which is impossible for a word already attested in Mycenaean. Hubschmid 1953b: 104 adduces Basque arto 'id.', OSpan. artal 'especie de empanada', etc. and considers it to be a substrate word (or is it a loan from Greek?).

ἀρτύω [v.] 'to arrange, prepare', also of food 'to season' (Il.). ◄IE h_2(e)r-tu-* 'order'► •COMP Frequently prefixed, e.g. ἐξ-, κατ-αρτύω (Il.).
•DER 1. ἄρτυμα 'condiment' (Hp., S.), with late derivations ἀρτυμάτιον, ἀρτυματώδης, ἀρτυματικός; ἀρτυμᾶς and ἀρτυματᾶς [m.] 'spice trader' (pap.). 2. ἄρτυσις 'arrangement, seasoning' (Ph., D. S.). 3. ἀρτυτήρ name of an official (Thera). 4. ἀρτυτικός [adj.] 'fit for seasoning' (sch.); ἀρτυτικόν [n.] 'herb' (Sammelb. 5224, 50). A variant is ἀρτύνω = ἀρτύω (Il.); see Schwyzer: 727f.
•ETYM The verb is denominative in origin, but the noun is found only in ἀρτύς· σύνταξις 'ordering', ἀρτύν· φιλίαν καὶ σύμβασιν ἢ κρίσιν 'friendship, coming together, decision' (H.). It is a derivation in -tu- from $h_2$er- 'to fit' as in ►ἀραρίσκω, and may well be old, cf. Skt. ṛtú- [m.] 'fixed time, order, rule' < $h_2$rtu-*, Arm. ard, gen. ardu 'order', Lat. artus, gen. -ūs [m.] 'joint, limb'.

ἄρυα [n.pl.] · τὰ Ἡρακλεωτικὰ κάρυα 'Heraclean filberts' (H.). ◄LW► •VAR Cf. αὐαρά· τὰ Ποντικὰ κάρυα 'nuts from the Pontic area' (H.).
•ETYM ἄρυον is considered a variant of κάρυον; see Strömberg 1940: 155f.; thus also Fur.: 391. The variation κ/zero points to substrate origin. One would conceive of a Pre-Greek form qar-*, of which the first phoneme (a uvular) was rendered as k- or zero in Greek.
Alb. arrë [f.] 'nut, nut-tree', OCS orěxъ 'nut', Lith. riešas, riešutas 'nut', Latv. riẽksts 'nut', and OPr. buccareisis 'beech-nut' (first element bucus 'beech') are too different to be compared to the Greek forms: the BSl. forms have a/or-* beside r-*, followed by -ei-.

ἀρύβαλλος [m.] 'bag or purse which can be tied together' (Stesich.), 'globular oil flask' (Ar.). ◄PG?(S)► •DIAL ἀρβυλίδα· λήκυθον. Λάκωνες 'oil flask (Lacon.)' (H.). Also ἀρυβάσσαλον· κοτύλη ἢ φλάσκων 'small vessel, flagon' (H.).
•ETYM Hesychius explains it as ἀρύβαλλοι· τὰ μαρσύππια 'pouches'. ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀρύειν καὶ βάλλειν εἰς αὐτούς 'because sth. is scooped and put into them'. This explanation (though defended by Chantraine) is folk-etymological and is not worth discussion. It is not even certain that the meaning 'flask' is primary. Most probably Pre-Greek (note the suffix -αλλος), cf. ►βαλλάντιον.

ἀρύω 1 [v.] 'to draw water' (Hes.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἀρῦσαι.
•DIAL With an enlargement -τ- (Schwyzer: 704): Att. ἀρύτω, Lesb. ἀρυτήμενοι (Alc.).
•COMP As a second member in ἐτν-ήρυσις 'soup ladle', ζωμήρυσις, οἰνήρυσις etc. (com.).
•DER ἀρυστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'spoon' (Alc., Semon., Hdt.), ἀρυτήρ (Dsc., pap.); fem. ἀρυστρ-ίς, -ίδος (AP), more common ἀρύταινα 'id.' (Ar., Antiph., Thphr., pap.), after ἀρύτω, see Chantraine 1933: 109; diminutive ἀρυταίνιον (Lebena [II[a]]).
ἄρυστις [f.] 'ladle' (S.), diminutive ἀρύστιχος [m.] (com., Aegina); ἀρυσάνη 'id.' (Timo), cf. names for utensils like λεκάνη; ἀρυσᾶς (Delos) probably denotes the profession 'water drawer'; for ἄρυσος [m.] 'wicker basket' (Hdn.), cf. τάμισος, πέτασος, etc.; ἀρυτήσιμος and ἀρύσιμος 'potable' (sch.); ἀρυστικός 'fit for scooping' (Ael.).
•ETYM Unknown. Frisk Eranos 50 (1952): 1-8 takes it as *ϝαρύω (comparing [ϝ]αρυσσάμενος Hes. Op. 550), and connects it with Arm. gerem 'to take prisoner', εὑρίσκω 'to find', assuming a root uer-;* but the Greek -α- creates difficulties for this etymology. It could be from a u-present urh₁-u-*, but there is no further support. For other doubtful attempts see DELG.

ἀρύω 2 [v.] 'to speak, cry', only in glosses: ἀρύει· ἀντὶ <τοῦ> λέγει, βοᾷ 'shouts, instead of speaks'; ἀρύουσαι· λέγουσαι, κελεύουσαι 'who are speaking, urging'; ἀρύσασθαι· ἐπικαλέσασθαι 'to summon' (H.). ◄?►
•DIAL It is Syracusan acc. to EM 134, 12.
•ETYM Unknown. Not related to ►ἀρνέομαι 'to refuse, deny', as per Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 19f. Latte corrects it to ἀπύει = ἠπύει.

ἀρχή [f.] 1. 'begin, origin' (Il.); 2. 'reign' (Pi.). ◄GR► •DER From 1: ἀρχαῖος 'original, ancient, old' (Pi.), ἀρχαιότης [f.] 'antiquity' (Pl., D. H.); late denominatives ἀρχαΐζω [v.] 'to be old-fashioned', of style (D. H., Plu.), ἀρχαϊσμός 'old-fashionedness, etc.' (Men., D. H.); ἀρχαιωθείς (χρόνος) 'aged' (pap. VI[p]). Also ἀρχαϊκός 'old-fashioned' (Ar., Antiph.).
From 2: ἀρχικός 'ptng. to power, etc.' (A., Th., Pl.), later also taken to 1. (Phld.); diminutive (scornful) ἀρχίδιον (Ar., D.), ἀρχήϊον, ἀρχεῖον 'government building', ἀρχειώτης (Dig.) and ἀρχειωτικός (Lyd.); Dorianized ἀρχέτας [m.] 'ruler' (E.), which could derive from ἄρχω directly; ἀρχῖτις (Thasos), ἀρχίνη (Syros), both incorrectly written with -ει-, and ἀρχηΐς (Amyklai) are names of priestesses.
•ETYM ἀρχή is a verbal noun of ►ἄρχω.

ἀρχός 1 ⇒ἄρχω.

ἀρχός 2 [m.] 'rectum, anus' (Hp.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown. Frisk asks if it could be a joking formation for ►ἀρχός 1.

ἄρχω [v.] 'to be the first', thence 1. 'to begin' (Il.); 2. 'to rule' (Il.). ◄IE? h_2r-ske/o-* 'start, rule'► •VAR Aor. ἄρξαι.
•DIAL Uncertain is the interpretation of Myc. a-ke- in PNs: /ark[h]e-/ or /age-/? Uncertain too is Myc. o-ka, see Aura Jorro 1985-1993.
•COMP ἀρχέκακος 'who initiated the evil' (Il.); ἀρχιτέκτων (Hdt.) after τερπικέραυνος (?); ἀρχι- is never found in poetry.
•DER ἀρχός [m.] 'leader' (Il., poet.); ἀρχεύω [v.] 'to be the first, command' (epic since Il.), which is also used as an official term (Paphos, Cos) could be denominative to ἀρχός or be an enlargement of ἄρχω after βασιλεύω, ἀριστεύω. The usual term is ἄρχων, -οντος [m.] 'commander', name of the highest official in Athens, fem. ἀρχοντίς (Cat. Cod. Astr.), short form ἀρχίς (Tenos). Late derivations: ἀρχοντικός 'ptng. to the α.' (AP, pap.), ἀρχοντεύω [v.] 'to be α.' (Olbia), ἀρχοντιάω [v.] 'to wish to command' (sch., Lyd.). ἄργματα [n.pl.] 'first fruits' (ξ 446), ἀπάργματα (Ar.), ἀπαρχαί; also ἄρχματα (H.) with restored -χ-. On ►ἀρχή, see s.v.

•ETYM Klingenschmitt 1974: 274[1] suggested to derive ἄρχω from a present h_2r̥-ske/o-* '(der Reihenfolge und dem Range nach) der erste sein'. The reconstruction was pleaded for more recently by Matzinger KZ 113 (2000): 287-288[27], who also derives Arm. ark'ay 'king' from the same root. Frisk and Chantraine only mention the connection with ►ὄρχαμος 'commander' (Il.). The variation α-/ ο- between these words has been taken to point to substrate origin by Fur.: 342, but this proposal does not seem compelling, since the morphological analysis of ὄρχαμος is unclear.
LIV^2 s.v. reg^h-* follows Tichy, who reconstructed (h_2)rg^h-ske/o-* to a root found in MHG ragen, regen 'to rise, stir' and Lith. regė́ti 'to watch'. This seems possible only if we assume a root $h_2$rg^h-, because a PIE root could not start in r- (cf. Beekes 1995: 148), but also because of the Greek imperfect ἦρχε. The present ἄρχω may have specialized its meaning from 'start to join' to 'undertake'.

ἄρωμα [n.] 'condiment, aromatic plant' (Hp.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Unknown. See Schmeja 1968: 133. For the suffix -ωμα, see Chantraine 1933: 184ff.

ἆσαι [v.aor.inf.] 'to satiate, take one's fill' (Il.) ◅IE seh_2-* 'satiate'▻ •VAR Inf.pres. ἄμεναι, subj. ἕωμεν < *ἤ-ο-μεν; fut. ἄσειν; them. pres. ἄεται (Hes. Sc. 101 cod. Laur.; the other mss. have ἄαται, which may be athem. or stand for contracted *ἆται; cf. ἆται· πληροῦται 'is filled' [H.]). See Solmsen 1901: 93f.
•DIAL Myc. a-se-so-si /asēsonsi/ [fut.].
•DER ἀ-ατος > ἆτος 'insatiable'.
•ETYM Derivatives from this old athematic root aorist are ►ἄδην and ►ἄση. PIE seh_2-/sh_2-* is found as a verbal root in Hitt. šāḫ-^{i} 'to clog, to stuff', and further in isolated nominal derivations: Lith. sotùs 'satiated', Lat. satis 'enough', OIr. sáith 'fullness', and Lith. sótis 'satiety' (all < s(e)h_2-ti-*); Go. gasoþjan 'to satiate' (denominative) etc. On *εά(ζ)ω 'to satiate' see Peters 1993b: 89ff.

ἀσαλής [adj.] = ἄφροντις, ἀμέριμνος 'careless, thoughtless', attribute of μανία (EM 151, 49 = A. fr. 319). ◅?▻
•DER ἀσάλεια (cod. ἀσαλέα) = ἀμεριμνία καὶ ἀλογιστία 'freedom from care, thoughtlessness', EM = Sophron (113).
•ETYM Acc. to EM, the word derives from σάλη in the sense of φροντίς 'thought, care'. Modern scholars derive it from σάλος (with regular transition to an s-stem), which is glossed by Hesychius as φροντίς, ταραχή 'agitation', and is identified with ►σάλος 'turbulent movement'. σάλη (also σάλα H.) would be a back-formation of ἀσαλής and ἀσαλεῖν (cod. ἀσάλειν)· ἀφροντισθῆναι. It is uncertain, however, if we are dealing with one and the same word.

ἀσάμινθος [f.] 'bathtub' (Il.). ◅PG(S)▻ •DIAL Myc. a-sa-mi-to /asaminthos/.
•ETYM A clear substrate word because of the suffix in -νθ-, like in the TNs Κόρινθος, Ὄλυνθος, etc. Gaerte PhW 1922: 888 and von Blumenthal IF 48 (1930): 50 pointed to Sum. asam, Akk. assammu(m), ansammum 'earthenware water-vessel'. Improbable speculations by Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 657.

ἄσαρον [n.] 'hazelwort, Asarum europaeum' (Crateuas). ◅PG?▻
•VAR Short, unadapted form ἄσαρ (Aët.), whence ἀσαρίτης (Dsc.), of οἶνος.
•ETYM Unknown. Lewy 1895: 47 thinks it is Semitic. A priori, a Pre-Greek word is most probable. Cf. perhaps ►ἀρίσαρον, and Strömberg 1940: 158.

ἄσβεστος [adj.] 'unquenchable, unextinguishable', also 'unslaked' (Il.). ◅GR▻ •ETYM Verbal adjective of ►σβέννυμι. As a substantive, it indicates either unslaked lime (τίτανος) or an unknown combustible mineral. It never means 'asbestos' (ἀμίαντος), see Diels KZ 47 (1916): 203ff.

ἄσβολος [f., m.] 'soot' (Hippon.). ◅PG(V)▻
•VAR Also ἀσβόλη [f.] (Semon.). In the gloss ἀσβολόεν· μέγα, ὑψηλόν, μέλαν 'big, high, dark' (H.), Latte reads the second as ψολόεν: for μέγα, we may also posit μέλαν, but its final ν was read as υ. This led to the interpretation of υψολοεν as ὑψηλόν.
•DER ἀσβολώδης 'sooty' (Dsc.), denominative verb ἀσβολόομαι in ἠσβολωμένος (Macho), also ἀσβολάω (Aesop.), ἀσβολαίνεται· fuscatur (gloss.).
•ETYM Fur.: 154f. posits substrate origin, which must be correct in view of the rare cluster -σβ- and the variant σποδός 'soot', which was hitherto unexplained. This means that ἄσβολος has a Pre-Greek prothetic vowel. Furnée further points to σποδίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread baked in hot ashes', which is also called σπολεύς (Philet. apud Ath. 3, 114e); note that the latter is unnecessarily corrected to *σποδεύς by Frisk! For the interchange δ/λ, cf. ►λαβύρινθος beside Myc. da-pu$_2$-ri-to-. Finally, Fur.: 393[21] asks whether the group is identical with ψόλος 'soot' (A.), which seems most probable to me (but identification with ψόθος 'dirt' is less obvious). On variation σπ/ψ in Pre-Greek words, see Fur.: 393.
The analysis as a compound ἄσ-βολος, with elements derived from h_2eh_1s-* 'to dry' and βάλλω, must be abandoned; it was semantically unlikely anyway.

Ἀσγελάτας [m.] epithet of Ἀπόλλων on Anaphe. ◅PG▻
•VAR Ἀπόλλων Αἰγλάτας (Anaphe, Thera).
•ETYM The explanation in Greek terms by Schwyzer: 27 (who assumes a development ασ > αι[σ]) is rightly criticized by Chantraine s.v. αἴγλη; part of Schwyzer's evidence is itself Pre-Greek. The variation in these epithets is typical of Pre-Greek words, as can clearly be seen in the name ►Ἀσκληπιός: aC-/aiC- and asC-/aisC-. In the present case, we only have aiC- and asC-, but the principle remains the same (Fur.: 293, 295; see also Pre-Greek). Furnée's (ibid.: 234, 335) further connection with ἀγλα(ϝ)ός and ἄγλαυρος deserves consideration. The resemblance of Akkadian azugallatu 'great physician' (Burkert 1992: 78) is remarkable. Thus, the word is probably a loan via (Pre-)Anatolian and Pre-Greek. A connection with ►αἴγλη cannot be proven.

ἀσελγής [adj.] 'elated, wanton, unconstrained' (Lys.). ◅?▻ •VAR Unclear ἀσάλγαν· ὕβριν, ἀμέλειαν 'insolence, indifference' and ἀσαλγάνας· φοβερός, εἴρηκε δὲ οὕτως παραβαρβαρίζων 'fearful' (H.); as the final remark says, this may be just a vulgar or 'barbarian' pronunciation.
•DER ἀσέλγεια 'licentiousness' (Pl.). Denominative ἀσελγαίνω 'to be elated' (D.); sporadically ἀσελγέω (sch.); ἀσέλγημα (Plb., pap.).

•ETYM The interchange α/ε is frequent in Pre-Greek words, but it is unclear if the glosses belong here: ἀσάλγα could perhaps be a Pre-Greek formation meaning ἀσελγεία, but the formation of the second gloss and its semantic relation to our word are unexplained. I am not sure whether the conclusion of a substrate origin is admissible. Havers IF 28 (1911): 194ff., stated that the word is Boeotian for *ἀθελγής, but this is semantically difficult.

ἄση [f.] 'disgust, loathing, dissatisfaction' (Hp.). ◂GR?▸
•DIAL Aeol. ἄσᾱ.
•DER ἀσηρός (-ᾱ-) 'causing discomfort, feeling disgust' (Aeol, Ion.), ἀσώδης 'id.' (Hp.). ἀσάομαι [v.] 'to feel nausea' (Aeol., Ion., Arist.), probably denominative.
•ETYM If the word originally meant 'surfeit', then ἄση is from ►ἆσαι, but the formation poses difficulties. Unlikely is the suggestion by Solmsen 1909: 242ff., who assumed an analogically preserved suffix -σᾱ- from the zero grade root ἁ- < PIE *sh_2-, rejecting a pre-form *sh_2-ti̯-eh_2-. It would be better to posit *(h)ad-s-ā, an old collective from the s-stem in ἅδος 'satiation' (Il.); problematic, however, is the failure of a geminate -σσ- (only in ἀσσαροτέρας Sapph. 77) to appear in Aeolic. The simplification to -σ- would be due to epic influence acc. to Schwyzer: 321, but all in all, the explanation is not entirely convincing. See ►ἄδην, ►ἀδμολίη.

ἆσθμα [n.] 'short-drawn breath, panting', as a medical term 'asthma' (Il.). ◂?▸ •DER Medical term ἀσθματικός [adj.], also ἀσθματίας, ἀσθματώδης; denominative ἀσθμαίνω [v.] 'to pant, breathe with difficulty' (Il.); late ἀσθμάζω (AB); uncertain ἀσθμάομαι (pap.), ἄσθμησις (gloss.).
•ETYM Unclear. -θμα is known as a suffix (cf. ἴθμα), but derivation from *h_2enh_1- 'to breathe' (in ►ἄνεμος) seems impossible: it would have to yield ἀνε-, even as the result of a zero grade *h_2nh_1-. The -σ- is also found in ἰ-σθμός. Chantraine offers an unclear comment: "dans le cas de ἆσθμα, le σ donne une certaine valeur d'harmonie imitative." If he means that it is onomatopoeic, the same could be supposed for the word itself.

ἀσιδα [f.] 'stork' (LXX). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Cf. ἀσίδα (-ον cod.)· ἐρωδιόν 'heron' (H.).
•ETYM A loanword from Semitic, cf. Hebr. hᵓsidhah.

ἀσίαρος [adj.] · ἐπισκάζων. ἢ ἀσίδαρος 'limping upon' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 391[14] takes it as Pre-Greek (adducing other cases of variation dental/zero).

ἄσιλλα [f.] 'yoke for carrying baskets, etc.' (Simon.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM An improbable Semitic etymology is offered by Lewy 1895: 110. Most probably, ἄσιλλα is a substrate word in view of the suffix -λλα, cf. ►ἅμιλλα.

ἀσίρακος [m.] 'locust' without wings (Dsc.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Considered to be an Egyptian loanword (Strömberg 1944: 16, Gil Fernández 1959: 238), but no argument is given. A substrate word is more probable.

ἄσις, -ιος [f.] 'slime, mud' (Il. Φ 321). ◂?▸

•DER ἀσώδης (A. Supp. 31), perhaps for *ἀσιώδης after the homonym that belongs to ἄση? Ancient commentators derived the reading Ἀσίω (instead of Ἀσίῳ) in B 461 from this word (Eust.), instead of from Ἀσία.
•ETYM The comparison with Skt. ásita- 'dark, black' (for -ta-, compare Skt. hári- 'yellow' beside hári-ta- 'id.') presupposes that the s in ἄσις was preserved after *-n̥-. Nikolaev 2005: 50f. pleads for a reconstruction *h_2nsi- for these words, arguing against the Lex Rix, but there is no compelling evidence for *h_2-: Cop compared Hitt. ḫanzana- 'black', but see the critical remarks in Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. The etymology must be regarded as uncertain.
Fur.: 80[426] compares ἄα· σύστημα ὕδατος (H.), but variation σ/zero is further unknown in Pre-Greek words.

ἀσκάλαβος [m.] 'lizard, gecko' (SGDI 3123 [Corinth], Nic.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἀσκαλαβώτης (Ar.), σκαλαβώτης (Orac. apud Eus. PE 5, 12), καλαβώτης (LXX), cf. γαλεώτης to γαλεός; further Argive καλαβύστης (H.) and ἀσκόλαχα (read *ἀσκάλαβα?), cf. Chantraine 1933: 403; κωλώτης (Arist.); see κῶλον; καλαβάς· καλαβώτης (H.).
•ETYM Clearly a substrate word. The ending -βος is often found in animal names, see Chantraine 1933: 266ff. Several variations are typical for substrate words: prothetic vowel, σ-mobile, etc. On the suffix -ωτ-, see Fur.: 283f. Less probable is a connection with ►σκάλοψ 'mole' (Fur.: 154).

ἀσκάλαφος [m.] name of an unknown bird, perhaps an owl (Arist.), see Thompson 1895 s.v. Also a PN (Il.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also κάλαφος· ἀσκάλαφος. Μάγνητες (H.).
•ETYM The suffix -φος in animal names is well known. Clearly a substrate word, like ►ἀσκάλαβος.

ἀσκαλώνιον [n.] of κρόμυον, 'onion from Askalon', in Palestine (Diocl.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Cf. Strömberg 1940: 125 and André 1956 s.v. Ascalonia. Lat. ascalōnia, whence MoFr. échalotte > MoHG Schalotte and MoE scallion, was borrowed from Greek.

ἀσκαλώπας [m.] 'woodcock, Scolopax rusticola' (Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Ending with long ᾱ (DELG)?
•ETYM Probably identical with ►σκολόπαξ. A substrate word with typical variations.

ἀσκάνδης [m.] ἄγγελος, ἡμεροδρόμος 'messenger, courier' (Plu.). ◂LW Iran.▸
•VAR Also ἀσγάνδης, ἀστάνδης.
•ETYM An Iranian word, cf. Buddhist Sogdian zγ'nt, 'st'nyk 'messenger', as well as Bab. ašgandu (Happ Glotta 40 (1962): 198ff., Schmid Glotta 40 (1962): 321). Cf. Arm. astandel 'waner'.

ἀσκάντης [m.] 'pallet, bier' (Ar.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DIAL ἀκχάνθαρ (codd. ἀκχαλίβαρ)· κράββατος. Λάκωνες 'couch (Laconian)' (H.); σκάνθαν· κράββατον 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM The variations are due to substrate, rather than "vulgar" or "popular" origin (which solves nothing).

ἀσκαρίζω ⇒σκαίρω.

ἀσκαρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'worm in the intestines, larva of the gnat' (Hp.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Also σκαρίδες· εἶδος ἑλμίνθων 'kind of worm' (H.).
•ETYM Generally taken to be from ἀσκαρίζω 'to jump', e.g. in Strömberg 1944: 24; Frisk thinks this is semantically not strong. German Springwurm is a calque from Greek. In view of the prothetic vowel, it is rather a substrate word.

ἄσκαρος [m.] 1. a kind of shoe, cf. ἄσκαροι· γένος ὑποδημάτων ἢ σανδαλίων (H.); also 2. a musical instrument, cf. Poll. 4, 60: ἔνιοι δὲ τὴν ψιθύραν τὴν αὐτὴν εἶναι τῷ ἀσκάρῳ ὀνομαζομένῳ νομίζουσιν. ◂?▸
•ETYM The musical instrument was a square with strings, so it probably has nothing to do with the shoe. Fur. analyses the shoe as a suffix -αρος added to ἀσκός 'skin, bag made of a skin'. The gloss ἀσκαροφόρον· φορτηγόν 'carrier of cargo' (H.) is unclear; does it imply that ἄσκαρος means 'bag, pack, load'? Cf. ► ἀσκέρα and ► ἀσκηρά.

ἀσκελής [adj.] 'obstinate', also 'weak, soft'? (Il.). ◂GR?▸
•DER Adverb ἀσκελές, -έως. Note the gloss ἀσκαλεῶς· ἄγαν σκληρῶς 'very hard' (H.), wrong for ἀσκελέως?
•ETYM Mostly derived from ► σκέλλω 'to dry up', either with privative ἀ- in the sense of 'not withered, soft' (cf. περι-σκελής 'completely dried up, hard'), or with copulative ἀ- in the sense 'dried up, hard' (note the contradiction). The latter meaning fits ἀσκελὲς αἰεί, with the notion 'obstinately', but not κ 463, where it seems to mean 'weak'.

ἀσκέρα [f.] 'winter shoe with fur lining' (Hippon.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •DIAL Ion. -η. Also in Attic inscr., SEG 13, 13: 148.
•DER Diminutive ἀσκερίσκος [m.] (Hippon.).
•ETYM A loanword, but is it from Lydian (see Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 37, O. Masson 1962: 125) or a substrate word (it is also attested in Attic inscr.)? Fur.: 348 compares ► ἄσκαροι.

ἀσκέω [v.] 'to process raw materials, shape by art' (Il.), 'to exercise, train' (Hdt.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ἀσκῆσαι.
•DIAL Myc. a-ke-ti-ri-ja /askētriai/, also a-ke-ti-ra₂, 'workers', of textile or wool?
•DER ἄσκησις [f.] '(gymnastic) exercise' (Hp.), 'ascetism, way of life' (Luc.); ἄσκημα [n.] 'exercise' (Hp., X.); ἀσκεία (H.); deverbal ἄσκη [f.] = ἄσκησις (Pl. Com.). Agent nouns: ἀσκητής [m.] 'skilled worker', 'athlete' (Att.), 'hermit' (Ph.); ἀσκητήρ (Poet. apud Gal. Protr. 13), fem. ἀσκήτρια 'nun' (Cat. Cod. Astr.); ἀσκητικός [adj.] 'industrious' (Pl. Lg. 806a), 'of an athlete' (Ar.), 'ascetic' (from ἀσκητής or from ἄσκησις, or even directly from ἀσκέω).
•ETYM The oldest meaning may be 'to fashion material, embellish or refine it'. As DELG remarks, it could be a denominative of ἀσκός, implying an original meaning 'to prepare a skin', but this remains uncertain.

ἀσκηθής [adj.] 'unhurt, unscathed' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἀσκηθέες = -θεῖς (ξ 255), not ἀσκεθέες as per Eustathius (see Leumann 1950: 263).
•ETYM Presupposes a noun *σκῆθος [n.] 'damage', which has been connected with a Germano-Celtic group: e.g. Go. skaþis [n.] 'damage'. However, the comparison is impossible, as θ does not match Gothic þ.

ἀσκηρά [f.] · εἶδός τι τῶν καστανίων 'kind of chestnut' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 131[59] compares Arm. kask 'chestnut'; for alternation κ/zero, cf. ► ἄδδιξ. See ► κάστανα.

Ἀσκληπιός [m.] hero, later god of medicine (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Dor. -ᾱπιός.
•DIAL Αἰσκλαπιός (Epid., Troiz.), Ἀσχλαπιός (Boeot.), Αἰσχλαπιός, Ἀσκαλαπιός (Thess.), Ἀσκαλπιός (Gort.), Αἰσχλαβιός (on a bronze figure from Bologna with Corinthian letters; see Kretschmer Glotta 30 (1943): 116), Ἀγλαπιός (Lac.), Αἰγλαπιός.
•DER ἀσκληπιάς [f.] name of a plant (Dsc); see Strömberg 1940: 99. Patronymic Ἀσκληπιάδης [m.] (Il.), Ἀσκληπιάδειος name of a metre (Heph.); Ἀσκληπίεια (-ίδεια) [n.pl.] 'festival for Ἀ.' (Pl.); Ἀσκληπιεῖον [n.] 'temple for Ἀ.' (Plb., Str.); Ἀσκληπιακός (Aristid., Dam.); Ἀσκληπιασταί (-ᾱπ-) [m.pl.] name of worshippers of Ἀ. (Rhodos), cf. on Ἀρτεμισιασταί s.v. Ἄρτεμις). ἀσκληπιάς [f.] plant name (Dsc., Gal.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 99.
•ETYM Szemerényi's etymology (Szemerényi JHS 94 (1947): 155) from Hitt. aššula- 'well-being' and pai-/pi- 'to give' cannot be correct, as it does not explain the velar.
The name is typical for Pre-Greek words: apart from minor variations (β/ π, αλ(α)/ λα, κ/ χ/ γ), we find α/ αι (a well-known variation, see Fur.: 335-339) followed by -γλαπ- or -σκλαπ-/ -σχλαπ/β-. To my mind, this goes back on a voiced velar without -σ-, or a voiceless velar with -σ-. The -σ- was probably palatalized and we must reconstruct *(a)-sʸklap-. As the group -σγ- is rare in Greek, especially before another consonant, the loss of -σ- can be understood. The palatal character was sometimes expressed as a preceding or following ι (see on ► ἐξαίφνης, ► ἐξαπίνης and ► πινυτός beside ► πνυτός).
Fur. 233f., 296 attempts to connect αἰγλή and ἀγλαός as found in the epithets of Apollo Αἰγλήτης, Ἀσγελάτᾱς 'the shining one'. However, this must be rejected, as here there are no variants with αἰσ- < asʸ as in Asklepios.

ἀσκός [m.] 'animal skin, hide', mostly 'bag made of it' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DIAL ἀκκόρ· ἀσκός. Λάκωνες (H.).
•DER Diminutives ἀσκίον (Hp., Crates Com.), ἀσκίδιον (Ar., Posidon.). ἀσκίτης (sc. ὕδρωψ) [m.] 'dropsy, patient with this illness' (Epicur.); ἄσκωμα 'leather padding', of the hole which served for the rowlock (Ar.). Denominative verb ἀσκώσατο· ἠχθέσθη 'was vexed' (H.). See ► ἀσκώλια.
•ETYM Unknown. Boeot. furnishes a PN ϝασκώνδας, but there is no trace of ϝ- in Homer. Not related to φάσκωλος, as per Fur.: 241.

ἄσκρα [f.]? · δρῦς ἄκαρπος 'tree without fruits' (H.). ◂LW Medit.▸

•DER Note the place name Ἄσκρα in Boeotia.
•ETYM Hubschmid 1953b: 83f. compares Basque azkár 'kind of oak' and Lat. aesculus 'id.', which suggests that it is a Mediterranean. word.

ἄσκυρον [n., m.] 'St. John's wort, Hypericum perforatum' (Dsc.), also = ἄλισμα (Ps.-Dsc.). See André 1956 s.v. ascyron. ◄PG(V)► •VAR σκύρον (Nic. Th. 74).
•DER σκυράω [v.] 'to go mad', from eating α. (Nic.).
•ETYM The prothetic vowel points to a substrate word (Fur.: 373).

ἀσκώλια [n.pl.] festival for Dionysus (sch. Ar. Pl. 1129). ◄?►
•DER ἀσκωλιάζω [v.] (Ar. Pl. 1129), which acc. to the sch. means 'to hop on greased wine-skins at the ἀ.', whence ἀσκωλιασμός (Poll. 9, 121); elsewhere it means 'to hop on one leg; jump up and down with the legs held together' (Arist.).
•ETYM Chantraine 1933: 243f. derived ἀσκώλ- from ἀσκός 'hide, bag, etc.' with a suffix -(ō)lo-, but given the different meaning, the connection with ἀσκός must be secondary. Better seems the comparison by Schulze 1892: 141[2] with σκωλοβατίζω 'to walk upon stilts' (Epich.), ἀγκωλιάδεν· ἄλλεσθαι. Κρῆτες 'to jump (Cret.)' (AB 1, 327, 5), and ἀγκωλιάζων· ἀλλόμενος τῷ ἑτέρῳ ποδί (H.). Schulze assumed that *ἄσκωλος derives from *ἄν-σκωλος; likewise, DELG derived the forms in ἀγκωλ- from ἀνα- and ►κῶλον 'member'. However, it seems clear that the ἀ- is a prothetic vowel. σκωλοβατίζω itself is clearly derived from ►σκῶλος 'pole'.

ἄσμενος [adj.] 'well-pleased, glad' (Il.). ◄?► •DER ἀσμενίζω [v.] 'to receive with joy, to be content' (Plb.), ἀσμενισμός 'satisfaction' (Ph.); ἀσμενέω [v.] (Din.).
•ETYM An isolated participle, which has been interpreted as a sigmatic aorist *ϝάδ-σ-μενος from the root of ►ἁνδάνω, ►ἥδομαι, but note that the form has no aspiration. Wackernagel 1897: 6 proposed connection with ►νέομαι 'to return' as n̥s-s-menos, assuming an original meaning 'safe' (see DELG). Not compelling.

ἀσπάζομαι [v.] 'to welcome kindly, greet' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἀσπάσασθαι.
•DIAL Myc. PN a-pa-si-jo-jo, perhaps /Aspasioio/.
•DER Verbal nouns ἀσπασμός (Thgn.), ἄσπασμα (E., Ph.), ἀσπαστύς [f.] (Call.) 'greeting, caress'. An old adjective is ἀσπάσιος 'welcome, cheerful' (Il.), after other adjectives in -σιος (Schwyzer: 466, Chantraine 1933: 41), cf. θαυμάσιος.
Verbal adjective ἀσπαστός 'welcome' (Od.), ἀσπαστικός 'cheerful, friendly' (Plb.). On ἀσπακάζομαι (Com. Adesp.), ἀσπακῶς· φιλοφρόνως 'friendly' (H.) see Frisk 1934: 62ff.
•ETYM No etymology. Connection with ►σπάω in the sense of 'to draw to onself' has been proposed, but then the ἀ- would have to be the Pre-Greek prothetic vowel. Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 189f. derives it from *ἀν-σπάζομαι.

ἀσπαίρω [v.] 'to pant, struggle, resist' (Il.). ◄IE *h$_2$sperH- 'kick with the foot'► •VAR Only pres.; also σπαίρω (Arist.).
•DER ἀσπαρίζω (Arist.), cf. ἀσκαρίζω to ►σκαίρω.

•ETYM The conviction that ἀ- in ἀσπαίρω is secondary (Frisk) has no basis; it does not derive from ἀνα- (Kretschmer KZ 33 (1895): 566, etc.). Rather, the form without ἀ- will be secondary (perhaps after the pair ἀσκαρίζω : σκαίρω?).
Related forms are Lith. spiriù 'to kick with the foot', Skt. sphuráti 'id.', Lat. spernō 'to despise', ON sperna, among others. Lubotsky 2006 reconstructs the verb as *TsperH- 'to kick with the heel' in view of the irregular correspondences in the anlaut. The words may be old compounds of *pd- 'foot' and *per(H)- 'to beat, kick'.

ἀσπάλαθος [f., m.] name of several types of thorn-bush (Thgn.), see Dawkins JHS 56 (1936): 7. ◄PG?(S)► •ETYM Solmsen 1909: 21 connected σπαλύσσεται· σπαράσσεται, ταράσσεται 'to rip, agitate' (H.), σφαλάσσειν· τέμνειν, κεντεῖν 'to cut, sting' (H.), etc. (see ἀσπάλαξ), but this is semantically unconvincing. It is rather a loanword (substrate?); the suffix -θος often occurs in plant names, see André 1956: 234.
Alessio compares Lat. palla 'genesta alba' (Alessio RILomb. 74 (1940-1941): 737ff., Alessio Studi etruschi 15 (1941): 219. See also Fournier RPh. 1950: 172-176.

ἀσπάλαξ, -ακος [m.] 'mole, Sphalax typhus' (Arist.), see Thompson Class. Rev. 32 (1918): 9ff. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also σπάλαξ [m., f.] (Arist.), ἀσφάλαξ [m.] (Babr.) and σφάλαξ (Paus.).
•ETYM The suffix -αξ in animal names is well known, e.g. κόραξ, σκύλαξ (Chantraine 1933: 378). The connection with a root *sp(h)el- 'to split, tear off' (Pok. 985) is hardly credible. The variations (prothetic vowel, π/φ) in combination with the suffix -ακ- virtually ascertain substrate origin. The synonym σκάλοψ may be a variant, or a recent metathesis. ►σπάλαθρον 'poker' does not belong here.

ἀσπαλιεύς [m.] 'fisher' (Nic.). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἀσπάλους· τοὺς ἰχθύας. Ἀθαμᾶνες 'fish (Athamanian)' (H.). Cf. ἄσπαλον· σκύτος 'skin, hide' (H.) (unrelated?).
•DER ἀσπαλία· τοῦ ἁλιέως ἐργασία 'trade of the fisherman' (H.) for *ἀσπαλιεία? Cf. ἀσπαλίσαι· ἁλιεῦσαι, σαγηνεῦσαι 'fish, catch as in a net' (AB 183).
•ETYM Cf. ἁλιεύς. The etymology is unknown; the old comparison with Lat. squalus name of a big fish, ON hvalr 'whale' must be forgotten. Rather a susbtrate word, with Huber 1921: 21. DELG strangely doubts the connection of ἀσπαλιεύς and ἄσπαλος.

ἄσπαλον ⇒σπολάς.

ἀσπάραγος ⇒ἀσφάραγος.

ἀσπάσιος ⇒ἀσπάζομαι.

ἀσπερχές [adv.] 'unceasingly' (Il.). ◄IE *sperǵ^h- 'hurry'► •ETYM Derived from σπέρχω 'to (be in a) hurry', with copulative (intensive) α-; see Chantraine 1933: 427.

ἄσπετος [adj.] 'endless, immense' (Il.). ◄IE *sek^w- 'say'►

•ETYM From *n-skʷ-eto-, literally 'unspeakable', a negative verbal adjective to ἐννέπω < PGr. *en-hekʷ-. The omission of *kʷe > τε in this word, which is probably due to the preceding σ-, has given rise to the name ἄσπετος-rule.

ἀσπιδής •ETYM A hapax in δι' ἀσπιδέος πεδίοιο, which some read instead of διὰ σπιδέος πεδίοιο. Doubtful; further details s.v. ►σπίδιος.

ἄσπιλος ⇒σπιλάς 1.

ἀσπίς 1, -ίδος [f.] 'shield' (Il.), a round shield, as opposed to ►σάκος, see Trümpy 1950: 20ff. and LfgrE s.v. ◄IE *$h_2$esp- 'cut'?►
•DER Diminutive ἀσπίδιον (Hermipp.), also as a plant (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 55; ἀσπιδίσκη and -ίσκος (LXX, inscr.), ἀσπιδίσκιον (inscr.), ἀσπιδισκάριον (Lyd.); ἀσπιστής 'warrior with shield' (Il.), secondary ἀσπιστήρ (S., E.) and ἀσπίστωρ (A. Ag. 404 [lyr.]), see Chantraine 1933: 327 and 325f.; ἀσπιστικός (D. H.). Further ἀσπιδίτης (S. Fr.), probably after ὁπλίτης; more common ἀσπιδιώτης (Il., Theocr., etc.), metrically conditioned in origin; ἀσπιδόεις 'consisting of shields' (Opp.). ἀσπιδεῖον mg. uncertain (inscr., pap.); cf. forms in -εῖον in Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 12ff.; note the gloss ἀσπιδεῖα· τὰς πτύχας τῶν ἀσπίδων καὶ μέρος τῆς νεὼς πρὸς τῇ πρύμνᾳ 'plates of shields, also a part of the ship near the stern' (H.). Denominative ἀσπίζω 'to shield, protect' (Lydia, H., Suid.).
•ETYM No remotely convincing suggestions have been made (see older litt. in Frisk) until Melchert 2007: 253-8, who finds the root of CLuw., Hitt. ḫasp- in Lat. asper 'rough, harsh' and also in Gr. ἀσπίς, starting from an i-stem $h_2$esp-i-, with meaning specialized to 'skin, leather', thence 'shield'.

ἀσπίς 2, -ίδος [f.] name of the Egyptian cobra, 'Coluber haie' (Hdt.). ◄GR► •ETYM Perhaps identical with ►ἀσπίς 1, after the shield formed by the snake's neck when it attacks. Rather not a loanword.

ἄσπληνον [n.] a plant (Dsc.). ◄GR►
•VAR Also -ος [m.].
•ETYM Perhaps from privative ἀ- and σπλήν: the plant would cure anthrax. Rather not a loanword.

ἄσπρις [f.] kind of oak, 'Quercus Cerris' (Thphr.). ◄?► •ETYM No etymology. It is not related to OHG aspa 'asp', as this originally had -ps-, and the Greek -r- would remain unexplained.
Hubschmid 1953b: 98 compares Basque tšapaŕ 'oak', but this does not fit well.

ἄσσα [n.pl.] indefinite pronoun, = τινά.
•VAR Att. ἄττα; ἅσσα, Att. ἅττα = ἅτινα. ⇒τίς.

ἄσπρος [adj.] 'rough' (Ael.). ◄LW Lat.► •ETYM A loan from Lat. asper. For the later history of the word, see DELG.

ἀστακός [m.] 1. 'the smooth lobster' (Philyll.), 2. 'hollow of the ear' (Poll.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR ὀστακός (Aristom.), Attic acc. to Ath. 3, 105b.

•ETYM Often analyzed as a k-derivation of the word for 'bone' (Gr. ὀστέον, Skt. ásthi, obl. asth(á)n-); so $h_3$esth$_1$-n̥-kó-. However, this etymology dates from a time when every Greek word had to be given an IE origin. The formation is unparallelled in Greek, and the assimilation ἀστα- < ὀστα- is highly improbable. The comparison with Skt. an-ástha-ka- 'without bones' (Frisk) is irrelevant: it is formed with a suffix productive in that language; neither does MInd. aṭṭhi-taco 'lobster' < asthi-tvacas-* 'with bony skin' prove anything for Greek.
Rather, we are dealing with a substrate word, with variation ἀ-/ ὀ-. See Fur.: 137. See ►ἀστράγαλος, ►ὀστέον, ►ὄστρακον.

ἀστάλη [f.] · πολύπους ὁ ἐν τῇ μυκτῆρι 'excrescence in the nostril' (1.), ἔνιοι σκώληκα οὐρὰν ἔχοντα 'worm with a tail' (2.) (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Fur.: 379 compares (1.) with ἄστλιγξ and ὄστλιγξ 'anything curled', which is also used for the arms of the cuttle-fish. This cannot be substantiated. The etymology of (2.) is completely unknown. Chantraine adduces ἀσταλύζειν, but this must be a mistake; see ►ἀνασταλύζω.

ἀστάνδης ⇒ἀσκάνδης.

ἀσταφίς, -ίδος [f.] 'dried grapes, raisins' (Hdt., IA, inscr. Tegea [V^a]); σταφὶς ἀγρία 'stavesacre, Delphinium Staphisagria' (Hp.), see André 1956 s.v. pedicularia herba. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ὀσταφίς (Cratin.), σταφίς (Hp.).
•DER σταφίδιος (Hp.) and σταφιδίτης (Orib.), of οἶνος. Also σταφιδευταῖος (Hp.), as if from *σταφιδευτής or *σταφιδεύω. Denominative verb σταφιδόω [v.] 'to dry grapes, produce raisins' (Dsc., Gp.).
•ETYM The formation reminds of κεδρίς, κεφαλίς and other parts or products of plants; the stem recalls ►σταφυλή 'grapes'. A typical substrate word, with prothetic vowel and variation α/ο-.

ἄσταχυς [m.] 'ear of corn' (Il.), 'bandage' (Gal.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR στάχυς (Il.+), -ῦς (E.); see ►στάχυς.
•ETYM Previously connected with OHG stanga, stengil, etc. Undoubtedly a substrate word in view of the prothetic vowel.

ἀστέλεφος [m.]? · τὸ περὶ τὴν κιθάραν δέρμα 'the skin around the thorax' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Fur.: 373 compares ►στέρφος 'skin, etc.', with variation ρ/λ and prothetic vowel. However, substrate origin is unlikely for the latter word, as it has a decent Indo-European etymology.

ἀστεμφής [adj.] 'firm, stiff' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀστεμφέως [adv.] (Od.).
•ETYM Unclear. The ἀ- is assumed to be either copulative ("stamped tight") or privative ("unmoved, unshaken", which is the meaning given by LSJ). This presupposes a noun *στέμφος or a verb στέμφω 'to press, stamp', but these are not known in Greek (only ►στόμφος and ►στέμβω, with the wrong stop). Unrelated is ►στέμφυλα. Appurtenance to the PIE roots in Pok. ($steb^h$- 1012, *stem- 1021) is difficult.

ἀστεροπή [f.] 'lightning' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR More common is στεροπή (Il.); ἀστραπή (Hdt.); στροπά· ἀστραπή. Πάφιοι 'lightning (Paphian)' and στορπάν (cod. -τιάν)· τὴν ἀστραπήν 'id.' (H.); Στορπᾶος epithet of Zeus (Tegea). Note στροφαί. ἀστραπαί (H.).
•DER ἀστεροπητής, -οῦ [m.] epithet of Zeus (Il.), ἀστεροπῆτα κεραυνόν (IG 14, 641) after ἀργῆτα κεραυνόν (Hom.); ἀστεροπαῖος (Corn.).
From ἀστραπή: ἀστραπαῖος (Arist.) and ἀστράπιος (Orph.); ἀστραπηδόν (Aristobul.). Denominative ἀστράπτω [v.] 'to thunder' (Il.), aor. ἀστράψαι; late ἄστραψις (Suid.) and ἀστραπτικός (sch.).
A variant which occurs in poetry is στράπτω (S., A. R.), whence the back-formation στραπή (EM).
•ETYM Mostly analyzed as a compound from ἀστήρ 'star' and ὀπ- 'eye', meaning 'star-eye'. For the semantics of the formation, Arm. p'ayl-akn 'lightning' is compared (p'ayl 'glow, splendour' and akn 'eye'), as well as Arm. areg-akn 'sun' (arew 'sun' and akn). However, 'glow, splendour' is not the same as 'star' and, more importantly, the variants στεροπή and ἀστραπη cannot be explained in this way (also note π/φ in στροφή). Also, if ἀστράπτω is not a very recent formation, one would expect *ἀστρασσω from the IE pre-form, as DELG points out. The word must therefore belong to the substrate layer, as Kuiper and Furnée already saw. See Beekes MSS 48 (1987): 15-20.

ἄστηνος [adj.] 'miserable' (Call.), acc. to EM 159, 11 παρὰ τὸ μὴ στάσιν μηδ' οἴκησιν ἔχειν. ◄GR?► •VAR Remarkable is the athematic plural in ἀστῆνες· ταλαίπωροι, δυστυχεῖς 'distressed, unfortunate' (H.).
•DER Denominative ἀστηνεῖ· ἀδυνατεῖ 'is unable' (H.).
•ETYM The gloss of EM is clearly a guess. Possibly from privative α- and the second member of ►δύστηνος.

ἀστήρ, -έρος [m.] 'star' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_2$ster- 'star'► •VAR Plur. mostly ἄστρα, whence secondary sg. ἄστρον.
•DER Diminutives: ἀστερίσκος (Call., Thphr.), ἀστερίσκιον (Apollon.); ἀστηρίδιον 'star-like ornament' (pap.).
Adjectives: ἀστερόεις 'starry' (Il.); ἀστερωτός 'id.' (inscr. III^a); ἀστέριος 'star-like' (Arat., Call.), ntr. ἀστέριον, which is also found as a plant name (Crateuas); see Strömberg 1940: 48, 50; ἀστεριαῖος 'like a star' (Cleom.); ἀστερικός 'belonging to the stars' (Theol. Ar.), ἀστερώδης (sch.).
Substantives: ἀστερίας fish and bird name (Philyll., Arist.), cf. Strömberg 1943: 28, Thompson 1895: 57; ἀστερίτης, of λίθος, name of a mythical stone (Ptol. Heph.), fem. ἀστερῖτις plant name (Ps.-Apul.).
From the zero grade in ἄστρα (ἄστρον): ἄστριον 'star-like ornament' (inscr.); ἀστρῷος 'starred, of the stars' (AP, Phlp.); ἀστρικός 'belonging to the stars' (Philostr.); ἀστραῖος 'starred' (Nonn.).

Rare denominatives: ἀστερίζω [v.] 'to arrange in constellations' (Hipparch.); ἀστερόω [v.] 'to change into stars, provide with stars' (Placit., sch.).
•ETYM The reconstruction of the word for 'star' is straightforward: hysterodynamic nom. *$h_2$stēr, acc. *$h_2$ster-m, gen. *$h_2$str-os, seen in Hitt. ḫasterza /ḫstert^s/, Arm. astł, OIr. ser < *$h_2$ster-h_2, Go. stairno << *$h_2$ster-no-, ToB ściry̆e, Av. stār-əm [acc.sg.], Skt. tārah̥ [nom.pl.] (the absence of the s- is unexplained), stŕ̥-bhiḥ [instr.pl.]; Lat. stella < *stēr-lā or rather *stēl-nā.
►ἀστεροπή, etc. do not belong here. The connection with PIE *h_2eh_1s- 'to burn' seems quite probable; Sumerian-Babylonian origin (Ištar 'Venus'), on the other hand, is highly improbable in view of the initial laryngeal. On the internal derivation of the word, see most recently Pinault 2007: 271-279.

ἄστλιγξ ⇒ὄστλιγξ.

ἀστός ⇒ἄστυ.

ἀστραβδα [adv.]? mg. unknown; used with δορκάσιν παίζειν (Hdt. 3, 64). ◄?►
•VAR Accent unknown.
•ETYM Formation like κρύβδα, κύβδα, μίγδα (Schwyzer: 626), of unknown etymology.

ἀστράβη [f.] 'comfortable saddle for an ass or a mule' (Lys.), see RE 4, 1792. ◄PG(V)► •VAR On ἀστράπην (Anon. in Rh. 8, 668) see below. Note Lat. astrama = σανίς, ὑποπόδιον (gloss. II 22, 15, see RE), where the -m- for -b- may point to (Pre-Greek) substrate origin.
•ETYM Connection with ►ἀστραβής 'steadfast' (as per DELG) is improbable. Neumann Inc. ling. 1 (1974): 103-8 connects Hitt. ašatar 'seat' (from aš- 'to sit'), but -ba- is rare in Hittite. Fur.: 143 mentions ἀστράπην (-απήν trad.), referring to Sturtevant Class. Phil. 6 (1911): 208. Variation αβ/απ is well-known in substrate words (Fur.: 107), so it may well be a Pre-Greek word. This analysis is rejected without good reason by Neumann (who points to other words in -βα/ος, but these are probably loanwords too).

ἀστραβής, -ές [adj.] 'straight, steadfast, rigid' (Pi., Hp., Pl.). ◄GR► •DER ἀστραβαλίζειν· ὁμαλίζειν, εὐθύνειν 'to make even or level, direct' (H.). ἀστραβιστήρ. ὄργανόν τι ὡς δίοπτρον 'an instrument, as that for seeing through' (H.).
•ETYM Commonly assumed to belong to ►στραβός 'squinting', ►στρεβλός 'twisted, crooked', etc., with privative ἀ-.

ἀστράγαλος [m.] 'one of the neck vertebrae; anklebone; knuckle-bones (used as dice); dice' (Il.). Also a plant, see DELG Supp. ◄PG(V)► •VAR ἀστραγάλη [f.] 'id.' (Anacr.), στράγαλος (Vita Aesop. (G) 69, see LSJ Supp.).
•DER ἀστραγαλωτός (μάστιξ) '(whip) made from ἀ.' (Crates Com.), ἀστραγαλωτή a plant (Philum.); see Schwyzer: 503, Chantraine 1933: 305.
ἀστραγάλειος 'covering the ankles, talaris' (Aq.), ἀστραγαλῖτις 'kind of iris' (Gal.), ἀστραγαλῖνος 'bull finch'. (Dionys.). Denominative ἀστραγαλίζω [v.] 'to play with ἀ.'

(com., Pl.), whence ἀστραγάλισις 'dicing' (Arist.), ἀστραγαλιστής 'dice player' (com.), ἀστραγαλιστικός [adj.] (Eust.). Hypocoristic ἄστρις [f.] = ἀστράγαλος (Call.); with the hypocoristic suffix -χ- also ἄστριχος [m.] (Antiph.), see Schwyzer: 498.
•ETYM Generally considered to be a derivation in -λ- (Chantraine 1933: 247) of the inherited word for 'bone' (see ►ὀστέον). The same etymology is often assumed for ►ἀστακός and ►ὄστρακον, ►ὄστρειον, but this cannot be correct. There is no good explanation for the -γ-. Therefore, it is probably a substrate word (Beekes 1969: 51).

ἀστραλός [m.] · ὁ ψαρὸς ὑπὸ Θετταλῶν 'starling (Thess.)' (H.). ◄LW?► •ETYM Closely resembles words for 'tern' and 'starling', like Lat. sturnus, OHG stara [f.], etc. However, the reconstruction *ἀστρ̥λός, assumed by Schwyzer (see Frisk), is improbable. A much simpler solution is to assume independent suffixes -no- and -lo-. Although we may mechanically reconstruct h$_2$str-lo-* for Greek and h$_2$stor-no-* for the European branches, it is more likely that the word is non-IE. See Thompson 1895 s.v.

ἀστραπή ⇒ἀστεροπή.

Ἀτρεύς [m.] father of Agamemnon, son of Pelops, etc. (Il.).
•ETYM West Glotta 77 (1999): 262-266 remarks that the form in -εύς is extremely rare (the nom. in Homer only in B 106, while Ἀτρέος υἱός occurs 11 times). The name was interpreted as ἄτρεστος 'undaunted'. West supposes that the name may have had Ἀτρε(h)- followed by -ίας (there is a variant Ἀτρέας) or by -ίων (Ἀτρείων occurs as a patronymic). This possible form explains the Hittite name Attar(i)ššii̯a-, mentioned as a man from Aḫḫii̯au̯a- = Achaea. This name may represent *Ἀτερσιας or *Ἀτρεσιας: a man with the same or a related name.

ἄστρις •VAR ἄστριχος. ⇒ἀστράγαλος.

ἄστυ [n.] 'town' (Il.). ◄IE ueh$_2$stu-* 'town'► •VAR Att. -εως, Ion. -εος.
•DIAL Myc. wa-tu /wastu/, Boeot. ϝαστιος [gen.]; Myc. wa-tu-o-ko /wastuok^{h}os/, Arc. ϝασστυοχō [gen.].
•DER ἀστικός 'of a town' (A., etc.), which could also be derived from ἀστός (see below); sometimes ἀστυκός after ἄστυ; ἀστεῖος 'id.', also 'fine, polite' (Att., Arist.), whence ἀστειότης (Vett. Val.), ἀστειοσύνη (Lib.), denominative ἀστεΐζομαι [v.] (Str., J.), ἀστεϊσμός (Demetr. Eloc., D. H.), ἀστέϊσμα (Tz.); further ἀστεϊεύομαι (sch.). Curious formation in ἄστυρον '(small) town' (Call., Nic.). ἀστός [m.] 'citizen' (Il.) < *ἀστϝός, Thess. ϝαστϝος; thence ἄστιος = ἀστικός (inscr. Crete, Stymphalos, Delos). ἀστίτης [m.] 'fellow citizen' (S.) after πολίτης.
•ETYM ἄστυ < ϝάστυ resembles Skt. vā́stu [n.] 'residence, abode' (younger vastu [n.] 'place, thing'), Messap. vastei [dat.] and ToA waṣt, ToB ost 'house'. Together with ἄστυ, this requires ablauting ueh$_2$stu-, uh$_2$steu, the latter form being generalized in ἄστυ (see Beekes IF 93 (1988): 24). The root shape implies that the word cannot belong to Skt. vásati 'to dwell, live', Gr. aor. ►ἄεσα 'to spend the night', Hitt. ḫuiš-^{zi} 'to live'. Recently, some scholars have therefore assumed metathesis of h$_2$us-* to uh$_2$s-*, either restricted to Greek or in PIE (see litt. in Balles 2007: 17, especially Neri KZ 118 (2005 [2006]): 208[32]), but this does not convince. It is not probable either that the group of ἄστυ is related to Lat. vāstus 'desolate', OHG wuosti 'barren', OIr. fás 'empty', which rather belong to the root h$_1$ueh$_2$-* 'to lack, disappear'.

ἀστυλάζει ⇒ἀνασταλύζω.

ἀσυρής [adj.] 'lewd, filthy' (Hdt. 4, 51). ◄GR?►
•ETYM Uncertain. Perhaps copulative ἀ- and *σύρος, which would be an old verbal noun to ►σύρω 'to drag, sweep', with the same semantic shift as in σύρμα, συρφετός 'refuse, litter'.

ἀσύφη [f.] kind of κασία 'cinnamon' (Peripl. M. Rubr. 12, Dsc. 1, 13). ◄LW► •VAR ἀσυφήμων (v.l.).
•ETYM Unknown loanword, see André 1956 s.v. asufi.

ἀσύφηλος [adj.] uncertain, 'headstrong, insulting' or 'foolish' (Il.)? ◄PG?(V)► •ETYM The scholion on Ven. A and Bechtel 1914 connect σοφός, with privative ἀ-. For the vocalism, Σίσυφος and σέσυφος· πανοῦργος (H.) are compared. Fur.: 337 further compares the gloss αἰσύφιος· δεινός, ψευδής, ἀπατεών 'awesome, deceptive, treacherous' (H.), -ος (Cyr.), which seems to fit well. In view of the interchange αι-/α-, substrate origin is more probable than the traditional etymology.

ἄσφαλτος [f., m.] 'asphalt, bitumen' (Hdt.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also -ον [n.].
•DER ἀσφάλτιον 'treacle clover, Psoralea bituminosa' (Dsc.), named after the smell (see Strömberg 1940: 62); ἀσφαλτῖτις 'bituminous' (Str.), of βῶλος, etc.; ἀσφαλτώδης 'like α.' (Arist., Str.), whence ἀσφαλτωδεύομαι [v.] 'to cover with α.'. Denominative verb ἀσφαλτόω 'to smear with α.' (LXX), whence ἀσφάλτωσις (Suid.); ἀσφαλτίζω [v.] 'to smell like α.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Generally taken as a negated verbal adjective of σφάλλεσθαι, under the assumption that it denoted the material that protects walls from tumbling down (σφάλλεσθαι). For the 'causative' meaning of the verbal adjective one compares ἀμέθυστος; still, this semantic point makes the etymology weak. It is rather a substrate word. Diels KZ 47 (1916): 207ff. noted that sources occur everywhere in the Greek world, e.g. on Zakynthos and near Dyrrhachium.

ἀσφάραγος 1 [m.] 'throat, gullet' (X 328, Plu.). ◄PG(S,V)►
•VAR σφάραγγος (σφάραγος Latte)· βρόγχος, τράχηλος, λαιμός, ψόφος 'windpipe, neck, throat, noise' (H.); = φάρυγξ (Apion apud Phot.).
•ETYM Fur.: 227 connects φάραγξ, -γγος 'gorge' and compares σφάραγγες (codd. -ές) sine expl. (H.). The combination of the variations and the suffix -αγ-/-αγγ- (prenasalization) proves substrate origin. He further compares μάραγοι· οἱ ἀπόκρημνοι τόποι 'overhanging places' (H.), which seems improbable to me.

ἀσφάραγος 2 [m.] 'asparagus, young shoots' (Cratin.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ἀσπάραγος (com., Thphr., Plb., etc. [not given separately by LSJ]).

•DER ἀσφαραγία 'rootstock of the asparagus' (Thphr.) and ἀσφαραγωνία 'wreath of asparagus' (Plu.), cf. βρυωνία, ῥοδωνία.
•ETYM The word has been compared with ►σφαραγέομαι 'to burst with a noise, teem', but it is rather a substrate word, as is made probable by the variation π/φ.

ἀσφόδελος [m.] 'asphodel, Asphodelus ramosa' (Hes.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also σφόδελος (H.), σφοδελός (Ar.); σποδελός (v.ll. acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 152).
•DER ἀσφοδελός 'grown with α.' (Od.), on the accent see Schwyzer: 420; ἀσφοδελώδης 'like α.' (Thphr.), ἀσφοδέλινος 'made of α.' (Luc.).
•ETYM A substrate word, as is shown by the variants. Fur.: 288 further compares σφονδύλ(ε)ιον, σπονδύλιον 'Heracleum sphondylium', which would show prenasalization. A speculative attempt by Biraud 1993: 35-46, who finds the same suffix in στυφελός, ζάφελος, ῥάκελος, etc.

ἀσχαλάω [v.] 'to be distressed, grieved' (Il., Archil., E.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀσχάλλω (Od., IA) is more usual; fut. ἀσχαλεῖ (A. Prom. 764).
•ETYM Commonly derived from *ἄσχαλος 'who cannot hold himself', with privative α- and the root of σχεῖν, to which a suffix -αλο- would have been added. Highly doubtful.

ἀσχέδιον · τραχύ, Κρῆτες 'rough (Cretan)' (H.). ⇒ἀσχέλιον.

ἀσχέδωρος [m.] 'wild boar' in Magna Graecia (A. Fr. 191). ◄?► •ETYM Kretschmer KZ 36 (1900): 267f. proposed a Doric form *ἀν-σχε-δορϝ-ος 'who resists the lance', which would originally be an epithet. Comparable formations are μεν-έγχης, μεν-αίχμης. Possible at best.

ἀσχέλιον · τραχύ, Κρῆτες 'rough (Cretan)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Latte notes: "non coharens ideoque asperum", and corrects to ἀσχέδιον. DELG connects the corrected form with σχεδ-όν and ἔχω (which may be what Latte meant). However, Latte's correction is too uncertain to be printed in the edition of Hesychius.

ἀσχίον [n.] 'puffball, Lycoperdon giganteum' (Thphr.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Semitic etymology in Lewy 1895: 31.

ἄσχυ [n.] 'inspissated juice of the fruit of the bird cherry (Prunus Padus)', used by the Scythians (Hdt. 4, 23). ◄LW Iran.► •ETYM See the note ad loc. in the edition of Legrand.

ἄσωτος •VAR ἀσωτία. ⇒σωός.

ἄτα ⇒οὖς.

ἀταβυρίτης [adj.] scil. ἄρτος, a kind of bread from Rhodes (Sopat.). ◄GR► •ETYM Cf. Ἀταβυρία· ἡ Ῥόδος πάλαι (H.) and the mountain Ἀτᾶβύριον. The suffix -ίτης is common for kinds of bread, cf. Redard 1949: 88.

ἀτάλαντος ⇒τάλαντον.

ἀταλός [adj.] 'tender, delicate' (Il.). ◄PG?(V)►
•DER Denominative verb ἀτάλλω (pres. only) 'to skip in childish glee', trans. 'to bring up (a child)' (Il.); ἀτάλματα· παίγνια 'toys' (H.). With internal reduplication (Schwyzer: 648) ἀτιτάλλω 'to rear, tend' (Il.), aor. ἀτίτηλα; ἀτιτάλτας 'foster father' (Gortyn).
•ETYM Extensive discussion in DELG. Leumann Glotta 15 (1927): 153ff. (also Leumann 1950: 139ff.) derives ἀταλός from the expression ἀταλὰ φρονέων, which arose by reanalysis of ἀταλαφρονέων. This is based on ἀταλάφρων, and this again is the negation of ταλάφρων. Although it explains the compositional vowel α, the whole analysis is too complicated. Derivation from ἄττα (Benveniste 1969(2): 85ff.) seems improbable too. What remains is an adjective ἀταλός of unknown origin, with a verb that means 'to treat tenderly'. Fur.: 262 compares ἀζαλαί· νέαι καὶ ἁπαλαί and concludes that it is a substrate word. This is quite probable.

ἀτάλυμνος [f.] = κοκκυμηλέα, 'plum tree' (Nic.). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Unknown, but no doubt a substrate word (suffix -υμνος).

ἀτάρ [adv.]? 'nevertheless, but' (Il.). ◄GR► •ETYM A combination of *h_2et = Lat. at 'but' (also in Go. aþþan 'but') and ►ἄρ (s.v. ►ἄρα). Cf. ►αὐτάρ and Ruijgh 1957: 43ff.

ἀτάρβακτος [adj.] 'fearless' (Pi., B.). ◄PG?, ?►
•ETYM A privative verbal adjective, which presupposes an unattested *ταρβάσσω or *ταρβάζω that would belong to τάρβος, ►ταρβέω, see Fur.: 219. Cf. ἀτάρμυκτος (Euph., Nic.) to ►ταρμύσσω 'to scare' (Lyc.). See ►τάρβος.

ἀταρπιτός •VAR ἀταρπός. ⇒ἀτραπός, ἀτραπιτός.

ἀταρτηρός [adj.] 'mischievous, baneful' (Il.), mg. not quite certain. ◄?► •DER ἀταρτᾶται· βλάπτει, πονεῖ, λυπεῖ 'hinders, labors, grieves' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Stürmer IF 47 (1929): 299 assumes a pre-form ἄταρτος 'unfatiguing', comparing ►ἀτέραμνος and ►τείρω. This is impossible because the roots concerned are dissyllabic ($terh_1$-* 'to pierce', $terh_2$- 'to overcome').

ἀτάσθαλος [adj.] 'reckless, wicked' (Il., Aeol.). ◄?►
•DER ἀτασθαλίαι (always plur. in Hom.), sing. -ίη, -ία (Hes., Hdt., Pi.); ἀτασθάλλων [pres.ptc.] (Od.).
•ETYM Unexplained. As DELG remarks, connection with ἄτη is impossible as the latter has long ᾱ-. The gloss from Hesychius ἀπὸ τοῦ ταῖς ἄταις θάλλειν is clearly a folk etymology. The proposal by Frisk Eranos 31 (1933): 21ff. to posit *ἄ-θαρστος = Skt. á-dhṛṣta- 'irresistable', to θάρσος, is a desparate attempt. See also Fur.: 379.

ἀτειρής [adj.] 'indestructible, stubborn, hard' (Il.). ◄?► •ETYM Mostly connected with ►τείρω 'to tire', Lat. terō 'to rub', in which case the proposal by Bechtel 1914 s.v. to posit *ἀτερϝ-ής (with the *-u- of τέρυ) makes some sense. Improbable is the proposal by Wackernagel 1897: 14ff., who assumed *ἀτερσ-ής to ►τέρσομαι and an original meaning 'not dried up, fresh'.

ἀτέμβω [v.] 'to maltreat', med. 'to be bereft of' (Il.), also 'to revile' (A. R.) by a false interpretation of φ 312, acc. to Leumann 1950: 33. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Only pres.
•DER ἀτέμβιος· μεμψίμοιρος 'criticizing' (EM).
•ETYM Unknown. Traditionally connected with Skt. dabhnóti 'to damage' < *d^heb^h-, but aspiration is not lost after nasal in Greek (Schwyzer: 333).

ἀτενής, -ές [adj.] 'tense, fixed, attentive' (Hes.). ⊲IE? ten-* 'draw, stretch'⊳ •DER ἀτενίζω [v.] 'to stare' (Hp.), ἀτενισμός (Thphr.) and ἀτένισις (Paul. Aeg.).
•ETYM Perhaps 'with tension', if derived from a substantive *τένος [n.] = Lat. tenus [n.] 'cord' with copulative α- (and Ionic psilosis), from the root of ► τείνω.

ἄτερ [prep.] 'without, far from' (Il.). ⊲IE sn-ter*, snHu*, snHi* 'without'⊳ •DER ἄτερθε(ν), Aeol. ἄτερθα 'id.' (Pi., A. and S. [lyr.]); ἀπάτερθεν, also as adv. (Il.).
•ETYM A psilotic form (perhaps Aeolic) from *ἁτέρ, identical with OHG suntar 'separated, but' < PIE sn̥-tér*. There was also a form snH(e)u* giving Greek ► ἄνευ and remade in Skt. sanu-tár 'separate from, far away' (cf. Av. hanarə). Again differently formed are ToA sne, ToB snai 'without', Lat. sine 'id.' < seni*, OIr. sain 'particular, different'. However, these words require a laryngeal (snH-*), which is impossible for ἄτερ. This is problematic, but remains unsolved to date (in spite of Meier-Brügger Glotta 66 (1988): 137-141). The suggestion by Nikolaev 2007: 165 that ἄτερ continues *h_2n-ter is unacceptable, in view of the problems this creates for ► ἄνευ (which he derives from *h_2n-eu). The fact that the word is psilotic shows that it is a poetic (epic and Ionic) word.

ἀτέραμνος [adj.] 'hard, stubborn, merciless' (Od.). ⊲IE? *$terh_2$- 'overcome'⊳ •VAR Athematic ἀτεράμων 'id.' (Ar.).
•DER ἀτεραμνία (Hp.), ἀτεραμνότης (Thphr.), ἀτεραμνώδης (Gal.).
•ETYM Analyzed as a privative formation to a noun *τέραμα, from the root of ► τείρω, ► τέρην, which implies an original meaning 'without weakness'. This is semantically a bit strained, and worse, there is no evidence for h_2 in this root ($terh_1$-). It seems more natural to connect *$terh_2$- 'to overcome', as found in Hitt. tarra-$^{tta(ri)}$ 'to be able', Skt. tiráte 'to overcome'. There is also an adjective ► τεράμων, but Frisk and Chantraine think that it may be secondarily derived from ἀτέραμνος.

ἄτερος ⇒ἕτερος.

ἀτέων [ptc.] unknown, 'mad' vel sim. (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR ἀτέει (Call. fr. 633).
•ETYM Connection with ἄτη (Bechtel 1914) seems impossible because there the ἀ- is long. It has therefore been proposed to read Υ 332 as ἀτέοντα with synizesis, or even as ἀ(ϝ)ατέοντα.

ἄτη [f.] 'damage, guilt, blindness, dazzlement' (Il.), 'penalty, fine' (Gortyn). ⊲?⊳
•COMP ἄν-ατος, ἄπ-ατος (Gortyn).

•DER ἀτηρός 'blinded, bringing disaster' (Thgn., A.), ἀτηρία (Pl. Com., X.); ἀτάομαι (ἀϝατάομαι; see below) 'to suffer or sustain damage' (S., E.), 'to lose a suit, be fined' (Gortyn, Gytheion).
•ETYM As appears from αὐάτα (Alc.) and denominative ἀϝατᾶται (Gytheion), ἄτη derives from *ἀϝάτη. Note ἀγατᾶσθαι (= ἀϝα-)· βλάπτεσθαι 'to be damaged' (H.). The ἀ- is long except in Archil. 73 (where it is possible to read ἄγη, see Page Entretiens Hardt 10 (1964): 110), and in A. Ag. 131 (where Hermann reads ἄγα).
*ἀϝάτη is a verbal noun to *ἀϝά-σαι (see ► ἀάω), which could mechanically derive from PIE *h_2ueh_2-. Fur.: 234 compares ἀϝατη with ἀπάτη (interchange ϝ/π). Cf. DELG Supp. s.v. ► ἀάω on the parallellism with Hitt. waštul 'fault', which is semantically very neat - but this does not prove that there is an etymological relation with ἄτη.

ἀτημελής ⇒τημελέω.

ἀτίζω [v.] 'not to heed, to despise' (Il.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Aor. ἀτίσ(σ)αι.
•ETYM Formation in -(ί)ζω to the stem of ► τίω; cf. the synonym οὐκ ἀλεγίζω.

ἀτιτάλλω ⇒ἀταλός.

ἀτίω [v.] 'to dishonor' (Thgn. 621, Orph. L. 62). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Incidental formation, antithetic to ► τίω after the pattern of τιμάω : ἀτιμάω (which derives from ἄτιμος, but has been reshaped after τιμάω). Cf. the older form ► ἀτίζω.

Ἄτλας, -αντος [m.] 'Atlas' (Od.), name of the god who carries the pillars of heaven. ⊲PG⊳ •DER Ἀτλαντίς [f.] (Hes.), among other things the name of a mythical island, plausibly interpreted as Minoan Crete (Castleden 1998); thence Ἀτλαντικός (E.) and Ἀτλάντειος (Critias).
•ETYM Originally the name of an Arcadian mountain god; the name was transferred to the mountain chain in Western Africa, see Solmsen 1909: 24.
The old interpretation is that the word is built from copulative α- and the root *$telh_2$- of τλῆναι, and that it was later reshaped to an nt-stem (cf. Ἀτλᾱγενέων Hes. Op. 383). The name of the African mountain is also compared with Berber ádrār 'mountain' (Steinhauser Glotta 25 (1936): 229ff.). Brandenstein Arch. Orbis 17:1 (1949): 69ff. plausibly suggested folk-etymological reshaping of Berb. ádrār.
The assumption of initial sm̥-* is clearly a desperate guess. It cannot to be expected that this ancient Titan carries an Indo-European name; moreover, Pre-Greek words often end in -ant-. See Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 12[1].

ἀτμήν, -ένος [m.] 'servant, slave' (Call.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR ἄτμενος [m.] (Archil., POxu. 8, 1087 column 2, 38, Call. fr. 538), also as an adjective = δουλικός (H.).

•DER ἀτμενίς 'female servant' (EM); also ἀδμενίδες (EM), after δμώς? ἀτμενία 'slavery' (Man., AP), ἀτμένιος 'laborious' (Nic.); denominative ἀτμεύω (Nic.), for *ἀτμενεύω.
•ETYM The variation τ/δ points to a substrate word. Fur.: 179 (also 95) adduces λατμενεία· δουλεία (H.); other instances of λ-/zero are found ibid.: 392.

ἀτμός [m.] 'steam, vapor, odor' (A.). ◄?► •VAR ἀτμή [f.] 'id.' (Hes.).
•DER ἀτμίς [f.] 'steam' (Hdt., Pl., Arist.), whence ἀτμιδώδης (Arist.) and ἀτμιδόομαι [v.] 'to be changed into steam' (Arist.). Also ἀτμώδης (Arist., Thphr.), ἀτμίζω [v.] 'to steam, evaporate' (S., X., Arist.), which may also derive from ἀτμίς.
•ETYM Contracted from ἀετμός, cf. the glosses ἀετμόν· τὸ πνεῦμα 'wind', ἄετμα· φλόξ 'flame' (H.)? Compared with ►ἄημι, and further with ►ἀϋτμή, but the vocalism is unexplained. DELG points to the difference in meaning with ἄημι (see Solmsen 1901: 271f.). Not to Skt. ātmán- 'soul', OHG ātum 'breath' < h_1eh_1t-m-.

ἆτος ⇒ἄατος.

ἀτρακίς ⇒ἄτρακτος.

ἄτρακτος [m., f.] 'spindle' (Hdt.), also 'arrow' (S., A. fr. 139); Laconian acc. to Th. 4, 40. ◄PG(V)► •VAR ἄδρακτος (H., gloss.), see LSJ Supp.
•DER Diminutive ἀτράκτιον (Epic. anon. in Arch. Pap. 7, 9, fr. 10; POxy. 14, 1740, 2). ἀτρακτυλ(λ)ίς, -ίδος 'spindle-thistle, Carthamus lanatus' (Arist., Thphr., Theoc.), ἀτρακίς kind of thistle (Gal.), see Strömberg 1940: 105.
•ETYM The connection with Lat. torqueō, τρέπω and Myc. to-ro-qe-jo-me-no /trok^weiomenos/, etc. is impossible in view of the -κ-; moreover, the ἀ- would remain unexplained.
It is rather a loan from the substrate; this may find support in ἄδρακτος and ἀτρακίς, if the variation κ/κτ is old and not due to simplification. Skt. tarku- has formerly been compared, but it derives from tark- 'to turn' and is unrelated.

ἀτραπός [f.] '(foot)path' (Hdt.). ◄PG?(V), EUR?►
•VAR ἀταρπός (Il.), ἀταρπιτός (Il.), ἀτραπιτός (Od.) after ἁμαξιτός (s.v. ►ἅμαξα); ἀτραπητός (AB 460).
•ETYM Often taken as copulative α- and the verbal root τραπ- seen in ►τραπέω 'to tread (grapes)', the o-grade of which is seen in τροπέοντο· ἐπάτουν 'were treading' (H.). Possible, though the formation is strange (cf. the doubts in DELG). It is rather a substrate word, of which the interchange αρ/ρα could also be an indication. In IE words with this variation, one of the variants is analogical, but this seems impossible here: the root has a full grade II τρεπ-, so we cannot understand the vocalization -αρ-. Ru. tropá 'id.' (Fraenkel 1956a: 104) could point to a European substrate word (cf. Beekes 2000).

ἀτράφαξυς, -υος [f.] 'orach, Atriplex rosea' (Hp.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR ἀδράφαξυς (ἀδρ-), ἀνδράφαξυς, ἀτράφαξις, cf. Hdn. Gr. 1, 539; 2, 49; 467 and Strömberg 1940: 160.
•ETYM Clearly a substrate word, as is shown by the variants δ/τ, the prenasalization and perhaps the interchange υ/ι. Folk etymology (after ἁδρός, ἀνήρ) does not explain all the variants. See Fur.: 179, etc. Lat. ātriplex is a loan from Greek (Frisk) rather than a parallel borrowing (as suggested by André 1956 s.v.).

ἀτρεκής [adj.] 'exact, precise' (Il.); see Luther 1935: 43ff.; Leumann 1950: 304f. ◄?►
•VAR Homer has only adverbial ἀτρεκές and ἀτρεκέως.
•DER ἀτρέκεια 'what exactly happened, truth' (Hdt., Pi.), Ion. also -είη (-ίη); ἀτρεκότης 'id.' (sch.). Denominative verb ἀτρεκέω [v.] 'to be sure, etc.' (E. fr. 315).
•ETYM Unknown. The analysis as a compound of privative α- and an s-stem *τρέκος, in the sense 'undistorted', finds no further support: connection with the root of Lat. torqueō is impossible, because a reflex of the labiovelar would be lacking.

ἀτρέμα •VAR ἀτρέμας. ⇒τρέμω.

ατροπανπαις [adj.] uncertain (IG 5(1), 278 [Lacon. I^p]). ◄GR► •DER Also πρατοπανπαις.
•ETYM Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1911): 269f. (also Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 211) reads ἁδροπάμπαις = 'the ripe πάμπαις'. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 658 objects that a boy cannot be ἁδρός if he is in his 5th year (LSJ Supp.) of state education (at the age of 12). He convincingly interprets the first element as 'second' (ἄτερος), see Szemerényi 1964: 271.

ἀτρύγετος [adj.] uncertain (Il.), epithet of the sea and the aether. ◄IE? trug-* 'dry'► •ETYM In antiquity connected with ►τρυγάω and interpreted as 'unfruitful', but this is formally not easy. Vine 1998: 62-64 proposes n̥-trug-eto-* 'un-dry-able', cf. ἔτρυγεν· ἐξηράνθη and τρυγητός = ξηρασία. This is quite possible. Leukart 1986 analyzed it as intensive ἀ- and τρύζω, assuming the sense 'strongly murmuring'; this is less probable.

ἄττα 1 [m.voc.] 'father' (Il.). ◄IE atta 'father'► •VAR ἄττειν [acc.] 'grandfather' (Thespiae).
•DIAL Thess. acc. to Eust. 777, 54, used to address one's foster father.
•ETYM A nursery word which is found in several IE languages, and may be inherited: Lat. atta inflected Hitt. atta-, Go. atta, gen. -ins, etc.; suffixed OCS otьcь. See also ►ἄππα.

ἄττα 2 = τινά. •VAR ἄττα = ἅτινα. ⇒τίς.

ἀτταβυγάς ⇒ἀτταγᾶς.

ἀτταγᾶς, -ᾶ [m.] kind of partridge, 'francolin, Tetrao francolinus' (Ar.). See Thompson 1895 s.v. ◄PG?(S)► •VAR ἀτταγήν, -ῆνος (Arist.), which is the scientific form; also ἀτταγῆς, -έος (Opp.); without α-: ταγήν = ἀτταγήν (Suid.).

•DER Diminutive ἀτταγηνάριον (gramm.), ταγηνάριον (Suid.). Fish name ἀτταγῖνος (Dorio apud Ath., ms. -εινός), perhaps after the color (Strömberg 1943: 120), but see Lacroix Ant. class. 6 (1937): 295.
•ETYM On the formation see Chantraine 1933: 31 and 167, Björck 1950: 63 and 272, Strömberg 1944: 45, also Hubschmid 1963: 119. Unexplained; it is called onomatopoeic (after the cry) by Ael. N. A. 4, 42. It could be a substrate word (note the suffix -ην, for which see Fur.: 172[118]). On the variant without prothetic vowel, see Fur.: 374.

ἀττάκης, -ου [m.] 'kind of locust' (LXX). ◂LW▸ •VAR Also ἀττακύς (LXX), ἄττακος [m.] (Aristeas, Ph.).
•ETYM Probably a loanword, but from the orient, or from the substrate? See Gil Fernández 1959: 238. Cf. ►ἀττέλαβος.

ἀτταλίζομαι [v.] · πλανῶμαι. Σικελοί 'to cause to wander (Sicilian)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Acc. to Lobeck 1843: 147 it is a denominative of ἀταλός; this remains hypothetical.

ἄττανα [n.pl.] · τήγανα. καὶ πλακοῦς ὁ ἐπ' αὐτῶν σκευαζόμενος 'frying-pan; flat cake which is prepared on it' (H.). ◂LW▸ •DER Diminutive ἀττανίδες· πλακοῦντες, ἔνθρυπτοι 'flat cakes, sops' (H.). Further ἀττανίτης 'a cake', beside τηγανίτης (Hippon.) and ταγηνίτης (Ath.), see Redard 1949: 87f.
•ETYM Unknown. Because of the form in Hippon., Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 282f. supposed that the word was Anatolian, see O. Masson 1962: 119. Ernout 1946: 28 = Ernout BSL 30 (1930): 92 compares Lat. atena, adtanus, atanuuium, atanulus, cups for religious service, which he considers to be Etruscan (but the Greek words are not cups).

ἀττάραγος [m.] 'crumb, morsel of bread' (Ath., Call.), τὸ ἐλάχιστον. οἱ δὲ τὰς ἐπὶ τῶν ἄρτων φλυκταίνας. οἱ δὲ τὰς καλουμένας ψίχας 'blisters on cakes or loafs of wheat-bread; morsels' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Certainly a loanword, possibly Pre-Greek.

ἀττάρυμα [n.]? · πόμα, σόφισμα Κρητικόν 'drink, Cretan device' (H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Brown 1985: 35 thinks σόφισμα should be understood in the sense 'invention, specialty'. He derives ἀττάρυμα from the place name Ἄπταρα (with Cretan assimilation). Like Latte, he considers a mistake for *ἀτταρικά.

ἀττέλαβος [m.] an edible locust (Hdt.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR ἀττέλεβος (LXX), cf. ἀττελεβόφθαλμιος (Eub.); also Thess. PN Αττελεβει[ος], ἀτ(τ)ελεβαία Masson Mus. Helv. 43 (1986): 486. Also ἀττελάβη· ἀκρίδας 'locusts' (H.).
•ETYM Clearly a substrate word (note -βος). Semitic etymology by Lewy 1895: 17[1]; Strömberg 1944: 16 reckoned with Egyptian origin.

ἀττηγός [m.] 'male goat' (Magnesia Mae. [II^a]; Eust. ad ι 222). ◂LW Anat.▸

•ETYM Acc. to Eust., ἀττηγός was used by certain Ionians; Arnobius 5, 6 calls the word attagus 'hircus' Phrygian. So probably an Anatolian loan.

Ἀττικός, Ἀτθίς [adj.] 'Attic'. ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Also Ἀτθικός (IG 4^2(1), 104), Ἀθικός (IG 4^2(1), 102). Fem. Ἀτθίς 'Attic', especially the land 'Attica'.
•ETYM Derived from the same source as the name of Athens, displaying θ, geminated τθ, and unaspirated ττ, which are typical Pre-Greek variants. See ►Ἀθῆναι.

ἄττομαι [v.] 'to set the warp in the loom, i.e. start the web' (Hermipp. 2). ◂IE *h_2et- 'stick, pierce'▸ •DER ἄσμα 'warp' (AB), cf. δίασμα (Call., etc.) from διάζομαι = ἄττομαι (Nicophon), see below. Cf. ἄττεσθαι· διάζεσθαι στήμονα (H.).
•ETYM ἄττομαι derives from *ἄτ-ι̯ομαι; δι-άζομαι must be analogal after verbs in -ζω. Bechtel 1914: 130f. connected ►ἤτριον. The connection with Alb. end, ind 'to set the warp in the loom' (for which Klingenschmitt 1982: 113[8] reconstructs *h_2nt-ie-) is impossible, as *h_2nt- gave Greek *ἀντ- (in spite of Nikolaev's recent attempt, Nikolaev 2005).
Van Beek (p.c.) proposes to connect Hitt. ḫatt-$^{a(ri)}$ 'to pierce, prick' and reconstruct *h_2et-ie/o- for ἄττομαι. In Greek, the verb was restricted in its meaning to weaving; cf. also ►ἔξαστις, which may derive from *-h_2et-ti-. The development of meaning is trivial; compare MoE stitch beside stick (into), and MoDu. insteken 'to insert' (in knitting).

ἀτύζομαι [v.] 'to be frightened, amazed, terrified' (Il.). ◂PIE *h_2tug- 'be terrified'▸ •VAR Aor. pass. ἀτυχθείς, later ἀτύζω, aor. ἀτύξαι.
•DER ἀτυζηλός 'terrible' (A. R.).
•ETYM The comparison wirh Hitt. ḫatuki- 'terrible' and Skt. tujyáte 'to be seized by panic' (the usual mg. of Skt. tuj- is 'to push, set in motion') convinces both formally and semantically.

αὖ [adv.] 'again, on the other hand, on the contrary' (Il.). ◂IE *h_2eu 'away, again'▸ •DER As a prefix in ►αὐχάττειν.
•ETYM To Lat. au- in au-fugiō, etc., Lith. au-, OCS u- 'away from', further to Skt. áva 'down'. It is frequently found in adverbs and particles, e.g. αὖτε (αὐτάρ), αὖτις, αὖτιν (αὐτίκα), αὖθι, αὖθις, αὖθε, and in the pronoun ►αὐτός. Cf. Osc. auti = Lat. aut, and Lat. autem.

αὐαίνω •VAR αὐαλέος. ⇒αὖος.

αὐαψή [f.] = αὐαντή, 'ξηραντικὴ νόσος, atrophy' (Hp. gloss. XIX 86, 18 K) [not in LSJ]. ◂GR▸ •ETYM Concatenation of αὖος 'dry' (αὐαίνω, αὐαντή), and a second element, cf. χορδαψός 'disease in the great guts'. Connection with ἅπτω 'to fasten' may be doubted.

αὐγή [f.] 'light, glow, ray of light', e.g. of the sun (Il.). ◂IE? *h_2eug- 'shine'▸ •COMP On μελαναυγής, etc., see DELG.

•DER αὐγήεις 'clear-sighted' (Nic.), αὐγίτης (λίθος) name of a precious stone (Plin.); αὐγῖτις plant name = ἀναγαλλὶς ἥ Φοινικῆ (Ps.-Dsc.), see Redard 1949: 67, 70 and Strömberg 1940: 25).
Denominative verbs: 1. αὐγάζομαι (-άζω) 'to see clearly, lighten, shine upon' (Il., poet., LXX), verbal nouns αὔγασμα (LXX) and αὐγασμός (Placit.); αὐγάστειρα 'lightening' (Orph.). 2. αὐγέω [v.] 'to illuminate' (LXX).
Note αὖγος (H.) as an explanation of ἠώς; Αὐγώ [f.] name of a bitch (X.) is probably a term of endearment.
•ETYM Probably an old verbal noun, cf. Alb. ag 'dawn' < $h_2$eug-*, see Demiraj 1997. Perhaps further to OCS jugъ 'South, south wind'. Connection with the root $h_2$eug-* 'to increase, grow strong' seems plausible, in view of the limited distribution of the words meaning 'light'.

αὐδή [f.] '(human) voice, sound, speech' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2$ued-* 'speak'▸ •VAR *οὐδήεσσα is a suggestion of Aristotle for αὐδήεσσα, meant as 'ἐπίγειος'; on this see Beekes Sprache 18 (1972): 127f.
•DER αὐδήεις 'with (human) voice' (Il.); denominative verb αὐδάω, aor. αὐδῆσαι 'talk, speak, speak to' (Il.). (Chantraine's opposition of a god(dess) with a human voice, language as opposed to the language of the gods is wrong. It means 'having a voice [to speak with]', which may be 'human' or 'beautiful' as the context requires; see Beekes, l.c. 128 n.3.)
•ETYM Mostly derived from a root $h_2$ued-* that is assumed for ►ἀείδω, and with lengthened grade for ἀ(ϝ)ηδ-ών. An o-grade $h_2$uod-* is assumed for the name Ἡσί-(ϝ)οδος and in ϝοδόν (written γοδόν)· γόητα 'sorcerer', ϝοδᾶν (written γ-)· κλαίειν 'to weep' (H.), but DELG considers the glosses unreliable. Note that this would presuppose the Saussure Effect (loss of the initial laryngeal before o-grade of the root), which is not certain (see Van Beek 2009). The problem with this whole account is that an alternation h_2u-ed-* beside h_2u-ei-d* is suspicious, and that a long vowel in h_2u-ēd-* is not very probable either.
There has also been discussion whether $h_2$ud-* gave ὑδ- (Beekes) or αὐδ- (Peters 1980a: 65ff., 72). The zero grade is seen in ►ὑδέω, cf. ἰθαρός < h_2id^h-. Outside Greek, a root (h_2)ued(H)- is found in Skt. vádati 'speak', ptc. uditá- and in OCS vaditi. A root-final laryngeal is improbable, as we would then expect aspiration of the stop in Sanskrit. Hitt. uttar 'word, thing, story, reason, etc.' is probably unrelated, while Lith. 1sg. vadinù 'to call, name' points to -d^h-* on account of Winter's Law. See ►ἀηδών, ►οὐδήεσσα.

αὐερύω ⇒ἐρύω.

αὐθάδης, -ες [adj.] 'conceited, presumptuous, arrogant' (Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •DER Thence αὐθάδεια 'conceit, presumption' (Att., Hell.), also -ία; αὐθαδικός (Ar.). Denominative αὐθαδίζομαι [v.] 'to be presumptuous, etc.' (Pl., Them.), αὐθάδισμα (A.); also αὐθαδιάζομαι (J.) 'id.'.
•ETYM From αὐτο-ϝάδης, a compound of αὐτός and the root of ἁδεῖν < swad- with crasis. A contracted Ionic form αὐτώδης is given by A. D. Pron. 74, 9 and H. See ►ἁνδάνω.

αὐθέντης, -ου [m.] 'author, perpetrator', also 'murderer' (Hdt.). ◂IE senH-* 'win, accomplish'▸ •DER Only late, e.g. fem. αὐθέντρια = κυρία (Lydia); αὐθεντία 'dictatorship' (LXX, pap.); αὐθεντικός 'authentic, correct, etc.' (pap.), etc.
•ETYM The forms αὐτο-έντης (S.) and συνέντης· συνεργός 'working together' (H.) point to earlier *ἕντης, the full grade of the root of ἀνύω 'to accomplish', combined with αὐτός. The root is aniṭ from forms where the laryngeal was lost before vowel, acc. to Rikov Orpheus 4 (1994): 63-66. On the later history of the word see DELG.

αὖθι [adv.] 'right here, there, immediately' (Il.); later contaminated with αὖθις 'again' (Call.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Probably, αὖθι arose from αὐτόθι by haplology (Meillet MSL 20 (1920): 106f.). Att. αὖθις and Rhegin. αὖθιν seem to be conflations of αὖθι and αὖτις/ αὖτιν (see Schwyzer: 629); on -ς and -ν see Schwyzer: 619f.

αὐίαχοι in N 41-2 φλογὶ ἶσοι ἀολλέες ἠὲ θυέλλῃ || ἄβρομοι αὐίαχοι ◂?▸
•ETYM Acc. to Frisk, Aeolic for *ἀ-ϝίϝαχοι (Schwyzer: 224) which would belong to ἰαχή < *ϝιϝαχή. Acc. to Aristarchus, ἀ- is copulative or intensive: 'shouting intensely'; acc. to Apion and Hesychius it contains privative ἀ-, meaning 'without a sound'; less probable. The application of βρόμος to fire, wind, etc. is found more often. See ►ἰάχω.

ἀυίδετος [adj.] 'invisible', in ἀυϊδέτου· ἀφανοῦς, ἀοράτου (H.). ◂IE uid-* 'see'▸ •ETYM Probably from n̥-uid-eto-, where -etó- has potential value. Vine 1998: 33-35 argues for the interpretation of Myc. o-wi-de-ta-i as a dat.pl. /owidetā^{h}i/ 'to the invisible deities (of the nether world?)' < n̥-uid-eto-*.

αὖλαξ ⇒ἄλοξ.

αὐλή [f.] 'open court, courtyard' (since Il.). ◂IE $h_2$eus-leh_2*▸ •VAR Another formation in αὖλις, acc. -ιν, gen. -ιδος [f.] 'night camp (in open air)' (Il.).
•COMP ἄγραυλος 'who passes the night outside' (Il.); ἔπαυλος (Od.).
•DER αὔλειος 'of the courtyard' (Od.), after ἕρκειος; αὐλαῖος (LXX) is rare and late, substantivized as αὐλαία [f.] 'curtain' (Hyp., Thphr.), also αὐλεία (Andania); αὔλιον [n.] 'cottage, fold, cave' (h. Merc.); αὔλιος [adj.] 'belonging to the αὐλή or αὔλιον' (A. R.); αὐλία· ἔπαυλις ἢ ἡ μικρὰ αὐλή (AB 463); αὐλικός 'of the court' (Plb., Phld.). Diminutive αὐλίδιον (Thphr.). αὐλίτης (αὐλήτης H.) 'farm servant' (S., A. R.). αὐλιάδες (APl.), of νύμφαι, cf. κρηνιάδες.
Denominative verb αὐλίζομαι [v.] 'to lie in the courtyard, camp (in the open), pass the night' (IA), late verbal nouns αὔλισις (Ael.), αὐλισμός (Sm., H.), αὔλισμα (sch.); αὐλιστήριον (Herm., Aq.).
•ETYM αὐλή, αὖλις are derivations of the root of ►ἰαύω, ►ἄεσα 'to spend the night', which is also seen in Arm. aw-tʻ 'place to spend the night' and aganim 'to spend the night'. The formation in -l- has also been supposed in ToB aulāre, ToA olar 'companion', if from $h_2$eu̯-l(e)h_2- + -ro-*.

As remarked by Clackson 1994: 104ff. (already Peters 1980a: 39f.), all Greek forms may derive from *$h_2$eus-l-. Clackson sees no reason to assume a separate root *$h_2$eu- just for Armenian, and assumes old Schwebeablaut *$h_2$eus- ~ *$h_2$ues-.

αὔληρα ⇒εὔληρα.

αὖλις ⇒αὐλή.

αὐλός [m.] 'hollow tube, pipe, flute' (Il.); also 'cow-bane, Cicuta virosa' (Ps.-Plu.). ⋖IE *$h_2$eu-l- 'tube'⋗

•DER Diminutive αὐλίσκος (Thgn., Hp., S., Arist.), αὐλίδιον (Alex. Trall.). αὐλών [m., f.] 'defile, glen, etc.' (Hdt.); on -ών, see Chantraine 1933:164; diminutive αὐλωνίσκος [m.] (Thphr.), αὐλωνιάδες (Opp.), of νύμφαι, cf. αὐλιάδες to ►αὐλή), Αὐλωνεύς epithet of Dionysus (Attica), αὐλωνίζω (H.). αὐλωτός 'provided with pipes' (A.).
Denominative verb αὐλέω [v.] 'to blow (a flute)' (Alcm.), αὔλησις 'flute-playing' (Pl., Arist.), αὔλημα 'piece of music for the flute' (Pl., Ar.); αὐλητής 'flutist' (IA) and αὐλητήρ (Ion.) 'flute-player', fem. αὐλητρίς (IA), whence diminutive αὐλητρίδιον (Theopomp. Hist.), also αὐλήτρια (D. L.); αὐλητικός [adj.] 'concerning the flute or flutist' (Pl., Arist.), from αὐλητής or from αὐλέω, αὐλός. TN αὐλητήριον (H.) and αὐλητηρία· αὐλῶν θήκη 'place for storing flutes' (H.).
αὖλιξ (cod. αὐλίξ)· φλέψ 'blood-vessel' (H.), cf. χόλιξ 'guts, bowels'. On the mg. of αὐλῶπις, epithet of the helmet (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 44. Also αὐλωπίας a kind of tunny(?), perhaps = ἀνθίας (Thompson 1947: 20)?

•ETYM Several cognates with a suffix -l- are found, e.g. Lith. aũlas [m.] 'leg of a boot', MoNw. (dial.) aul 'hollow stalk of Angelica', Lat. alvus 'belly, cavity, etc.' (with metathesis). Hitt. auli- [c.] 'tube-shaped organ in the neck' < *$h_2$ouli-, OPr. aulis 'shin'. The words adduced all denote hollow or tube-like objects. The correspondences αὐλός : Lith. aũlas, καυλός : Lith. káulas < *keh$_2$u-ló- are noteworthy, see Güntert 1914: 154. See ►ἔναυλος.

αὖνος ⇒βαῦνος.

αὔξω [v.] 'to increase, strengthen, magnify; grow' (Il.). ⋖IE *$h_2$eug-, *$h_2$ueg-s- 'grow'⋗

•VAR ἀέξω (Il.), αὐξάνω (Ion.-Att.), αὐξύνω (Aesop.), aor. αὐξῆσαι, late ἀεξῆσαι (Nonnos). It is unfortunate that αὔξω and αὐξάνω are not treated separately in LSJ.

•DER Action nouns αὔξησις (IA), αὐξησία (Hdt.), αὔξημα (Hp., E.), αὔξη (Pl.), αὖξις (H., v.l. in Pl. Phlb. 42d) 'increase, growth'. Agent noun αὐξητής [m.] 'booster, promotor' (Orph.), Αὐξώ name of a goddess of growth (Paus., Poll.).
αὐξίς, -ίδος [f.] 'young of the tunny' (Phryn. Com., Arist., Nic.), see Strömberg 1943: 127, either from αὔξω or αὔξη.
Adjectives: αὐξητικός 'increasing, furthering' (Hp., Arist.), αὔξιμος 'id.' (Hp., A.), uncertain αὐξηρός (Nic.).

•ETYM Derived from the PIE root *$h_2$uegs-, where the -s- is probably presentic in origin. *$h_2$ueg- is found in Gm. (e.g. Go. wahsjan), Skt. vakṣáyati 'to make grow', Av. vaxš- 'id.'.

A root *$h_2$eug-, without -s-, is found in Lat. augeō 'to increase (tr.)', Go. aukan, Lith. áugti 'to grow'; the zero grade in Skt. ugrá- [adj.] 'big, strong'. An s-stem is found in Lat. augur 'prophet', Skt. ójas- [n.] 'strength', enlarged in Lat. augustus 'venerable'. With -s-, *$h_2$eugs- is found in ToB auks- 'to grow (intr.)'. Zero grade *ug-s- is found in Skt. pres. ptc. úkṣant-, med. ukṣámāṇa-, and Av. pres. uxšiieitī 'grows'.
The conclusion to be drawn from all these forms is that *$h_2$eug- and *$h_2$ueg-s- are old, where the full grade slot changed in the latter because of the root structure. The same phenomenon is found in ἀλκή < *$h_2$elk- beside ἀλέξω < *$h_2$lek-s-.

αὖος [adj.] 'dry' (Il.). ⋖IE *h_2s-us- 'dry'⋗

•DIAL Att. αὖος.

•DER Abstract αὐότης [f.] 'drought' (Arist.); αὐονή (Archil., A. [lyr.], Herod.), cf. καλλονή, ἡδονή (Chantraine 1933: 207).
αὐαλέος 'dry' (Hes., poet.) like ἀζαλέος etc.; αὐηρός (AP), cf. αὐστηρός; also αὐσόν· ξηρόν 'dry' (H.) with a suffix -s- like in ῥυσός, γαυσός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 454). On αὐσταλέος, αὐστηρός, see below.
Denominative verb αὐαίνω [v.] 'to dry', also αὑαίνω (compounded with ἀπ-, ἀφ-, κατ-, καθ-αυαίνω); thence αὔανσις 'drying, dehydration' (Arist.), αὑασμός 'id.' (Hp.); αὐαντή name of a disease 'dehydration' (Hp.).
A primary verb seems to be implied by the gloss αὔω· ξηραίνω 'dry up' (Hdn.), which finds support in ἀφαύει (Ar. Eq. 394), unnecessarily corrected in ἀφᾶνεῖ by Solmsen 1901: 277, and perhaps in προσαύσῃ (S. Ant. 619). It may be denominative, however (Schwyzer: 723). Thence αὖσις (EM).
Two adjectives with related mg.: αὐσταλέος 'dried up' (Od.), cf. αὐαλέος; and αὐστηρός 'harsh' (Hp.) presuppose a verbal adj. *αὖστος; but cf. the synonym καύστειρα.

•ETYM αὖος, αὖος is cognate with Lith. saũsas, OCS suxъ, OE sēar all 'dry'. Skt. śóṣa- [m.] 'drying', assimilated from *soṣa-, is secondary. Uncertain is the appurtenance of Alb. than 'dry', see Demiraj 1997 s.v. Forms pointing to *sus- are Skt. śúṣka- = Av. huška-, OP uška- 'dry', perhaps also Lat. sūdus 'dry, bright' < *suzd- (but see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). From *sus-, verbs like Skt. śúṣyati, Latv. sust 'to become dry' are derived.
Lubotsky KZ 98 (1985): 1-10 argues that the Greek form goes back on *$h_2$sus-. This root shape is found in ἀυσταλέος, which has five syllables. Lubotsky further analyzes αὖος as a perfect ptc. of *$h_2$es- 'to be dry' (not 'to burn, glow'), as seen in ἄζω and in Lat. āreō. The reconstruction of the root has altered slightly: Lat. is from *$h_2$eh$_1$s-, and Gr. ἄζω < *$h_2$ed-ie/o-, but this does not affect the analysis, as a zero grade *h_2h$_1$s- is simplified to *h_2s-. Balto-Slavic and Germanic are derived from *$h_2$sous- with secondary o-grade. In this way, the awkward reconstruction *saus- with PIE *a can be avoided.
Doubtful criticism on Lubotsky by Berg and Lindeman Glotta 70 (1992): 181-196, based on the reconstruction of a proto-hexameter; they end with assuming IE *a, and a prothetic vowel of non-laryngeal origin, etc. See ►αὐχμός.

αὔρα [f.] usually 'breeze, fresh air' (ε 469, etc., poet.), but see below.

•ETYM Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 619, 626 connects ►ἀήρ < *$h_2$eus-ēr, showing that αὔρα still clearly means 'morning mist' in ε 469.

αὐρι [adj.] · ταχέως 'quickly' (AB 464). ◄?►
•COMP αὐρι-βάτᾱς 'walking quickly' (A. fr. 280), in the gloss αὐριβάτας· Αἰσχύλος το αὐρὶ (ms. αὔριον) ἐπὶ τοῦ ταχέως τίθησι, καί ὁ αὐτὸς Ψυχοστασίᾳ οὕτως φησὶ τὸ ὄνομα (fr. 207 M) ταχυβήμων (H.).
•ETYM αὐριβάτᾱς derives from αὖρι βαίνειν (βῆναι), with the suffix -της. Etymology unknown. Perhaps the compound contained αὖρι 'early in the morning' (see ►αὔριον) and was later misunderstood. Cf. ►αὐροί.

αὔριον [adv.] 'tomorrow' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_2$eus-r- 'dawn'► •DER αὐρίζειν· ῥιγοῦν καὶ τὸ εἰς αὔριον ὑπερτίθεσθαι 'be cold or shiver; defer until tomorrow' (H.).
•ETYM Derived from *αὖρι, the old locative of an r-stem also found in Lith. aušrà 'dawn', Skt. usrā́- [f.] 'morning', and, within Greek, in ►ἀήρ (see on ►ἕως) and ►ἦρι. The same stem is also found in ἄγχ-αυρος (νύξ) 'near the morning' (A. R. 4, 111), perhaps for earlier *ἀγχαύριος, which itself would derive from the expression ἄγχι τῆς αὔριον.

αὐροί [?] · λαγοὶ [ἴσαυροι] 'hares' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Perhaps related to αὖρι· ταχέως (H.). Acc. to Keil Herm. 23 (1888): 317 and Latte Glotta 32 (1953): 41f. we should read αὐροί (= ἁβροί)· λάγ<ν>οί. Doubtful.

αὐροσχάς, -άδος ⇒ἀρασχάδες.

αὔσιος ⇒αὐτός.

αὐσταλέος •VAR αὐστηρός. ⇒αὖος.

αὐτάρ ⇒ἀτάρ, αὖ.

ἀϋτέω •VAR ἀϋτή. ⇒αὔω 1.

αὐτίκα [adv.] 'immediately' (Il.). ◄GR► •ETYM For the ending cf. τηνίκα, ἡνίκα, πόκα, ὅκα, etc.; for the first element see αὖ, αὖτιν, and especially αὐτός. Cf. ἐξαυτῆς 'id.' (Thgn.) from ἐξ αὐτῆς τῆς ὁδοῦ (Wackernagel 1916: 41[4]). See Monteil 1963: 296.

ἀϋτμή [f.] 'breath; scent' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_2$seut- 'seethe'► •COMP νήυτμος < *n̥-$h_2$sut-mo-.
•DER Also ἀϋτμήν, -ένος [m.] (Ψ 765, γ 289).
•ETYM Fritz KZ 106 (1993): 288-299 solved the problem by connecting OHG siodan 'sieden', reconstructing *$h_2$seut-. Greek ἀϋτ- is from *$h_2$sut-; the o-grade *$h_2$sout- is found in Go. sauþs 'sacrifice'; Fritz also gives a discussion of the semantics. Not to ἄετμα· φλόξ or ἀετμόν· τὸ πνεῦμα (H.), nor to ►ἀτμός 'steam, vapor'.

αὐτόδιον [adv.] probably 'immediately' (only θ 449). ◄IE *dieu- 'light of day'►

•ETYM In antiquity, interpreted as ἐξ αὐτῆς τῆς ὁδοῦ ἐλθόντα. Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 258 supposed *αὐτό-διϝον, derived from the root *dieu- (Lat. diēs, ►Ζεύς), comparing αὐτ-ῆμαρ 'on the same day', and Skt. sa-dívaḥ 'at once'. Quite possible.

αὐτοκάβδαλος [adj.] 'improvised, extempore' (Arist.); also subst. plur. 'buffoons, improvisers' (Eup.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 316 compares καυαλός· μωρολόγος (not to Lyd. καύης 'priest', as per Latte), with interchange βδ/ β/ ϝ. The group -βδ- is almost certainly of substrate origin. To my mind, the word is cognate with κόβᾱλος, etc. (see Kuiper 1956: 215), Fur.: 237.

αὐτοκράτωρ, -ορος [m., f.] 'one's own master, independent', = Lat. imperator (Th.). ◄GR► •ETYM For older *αὐτοκρατης after the agent nouns in -τωρ.

αὐτόματος, (-η), -ον [adj.] 'spontaneous, automatic, of one's own accord' (Il.). ◄IE *mn-to- 'thought'► •ETYM Formed of αὐτός and the zero grade of the root of ►μέμονα, μέμαμεν, ►μένος. The second member -ματος agrees with the second element of Lat. commentus and with Skt. matá-, Lith. miñtas 'thought', etc. Cf. Chantraine 1933: 303f., Schwyzer: 502f.

αὐτός [pron.] 'self' (Il.), ὁ αὐτός 'the same'; in the oblique cases also as an anaphorical pronoun of the 3rd person. ◄IE *$h_2$eu 'again' + *to- 'that'► •COMP Very many compounds; cf. Sommer 1948: 83ff., 153ff. and DELG s.v. See ►κασίγνητος, ►αὐτόδιον, ►αὐτόματος.
•DER αὐτίτης (sc. οἶνος) 'local wine(?)', see Redard 1949: 96; also 'all alone' (Arist., hapax); αὐτότης [f.] 'identity' (S. E.), ταὐτότης [f.] 'id.' (Arist.). Denominative verbs: ταὐτόομαι 'to become identified' (Dam., Procl.), ταὐτίζω [v.] 'to use as a synonym' (Procl., Eust.).
αὔτως [adv.] 'just like, like it was, merely, etc.' (for the accent see Schwyzer: 384); αὔσιος 'idle, in vain' (Ibykos) reminds of αὐτόματος.
See further ►αὐτόθι, ►αὐτίκα.
•ETYM Risch 1937: 312 derives it from *αὖ τόν. On Go. auþs, auþeis, MoHG öde, etc. see Mezger KZ 82 (1968): 288ff.

αὐχάττειν [v.] · ἀναχωρεῖν καὶ τὸ ἐμμένειν ἐγχάττειν 'to go back' (H.). ◄GR►
•DIAL Doric
•ETYM The forms are Cretan, with -χάττειν standing for χάζειν (Buck 1955: 71). It is supposed that αὐ-, as a prefix, corresponds with Lat. au- (e.g. auferō), Lith. au-, Slav. u-. See ►αὖ.

αὐχέω [v.] 'to boast' (Hdt.). ◄?►
•COMP κενε-αυχής 'idle boasting' (Il.).
•DER αὔχημα 'boasting' (Pi., S., Th.), whence αὐχηματίας 'boaster' (sch., Eust.) and αὐχηματικός (Eust.); αὔχησις 'id.' (Th., Aq.); back-formation αὔχη 'boasting, pride' (Pi.), αὐχάν· καύχησιν 'boasting' (H.), wrong Güntert 1914: 153f.; αὐχήεις (Opp., AP);

αὖχος 'id.' (sch.). αὐχαλέος [adj.] 'boasting, proud' (Xenoph., H.), cf. θαρσαλέος to θάρσος, θαρσεῖν); αὐχητής [m.] 'boaster' (Poll.), αὐχητικός 'boasting' (sch.).
•ETYM Unrelated to ►εὔχομαι, which goes back on a root *h_1ueg^{wh}-. Adontz 1937: 10 derived the word from ►αὐχήν, assuming an original sense 'to keep one's neck proudly'; unconvincing formally as well as semantically. On Oettinger's connection with Hitt. ḫuek-^{zi} / ḫuk- 'to conjure, treat by incantation' is followed with due hesitation by Kloekhorst 2008 s.v., as formal (*h_2ug^h- > Gr. ὑχ-) as well as semantic objections can be made against it. Discussion in Peters 1980a: 18ff.
Fur.: 391 considers non-IE origin, connecting ►καυχάομαι with interchange κ-/zero. Probably from a Pre-Greek uvular, see Pre-Greek.

αὐχήν, -ένος [m.] 'neck, throat; isthmus' (Il.). ◄IE? *$h_2em\acute{g}^h$-u- 'narrowness'► •VAR Aeol. acc. ἄμφενα (Theoc. 30. 28), αὔφην in Jo. Gramm. Comp. 3, 16 is very doubtful, cf. Solmsen 1909: 118[2]. Further ἄμφην· αὐχήν, τράχηλος 'neck, throat' (H.); also ἀμφήν· αὐλήν 'id.' (H.).
•DER αὐχένιος 'of the neck' (Od.), diminutive αὐχένιον (An. Ox., Eust.), αὐχενίας [m.] 'provided with bull's necks' (gloss.). Denominative verb αὐχενίζω [v.] 'to cut the throat' (S.), 'to bind by the throat' (Ph., Hippiatr.), whence αὐχενιστήρ [m.] (Lyc., Hippiatr.).
•ETYM The variants ἄμφην and αὐχήν are generally assumed to reflect *amg^{wh}-ēn with assimilatory loss of nasality in αὐχήν (Pisani Ric. ling. 1 (1950): 182f., most recently Pronk fthc.a). The Greek words are then derived from the IE u-stem adjective reflected in Skt. aṃhú-, OCS ǫzъkъ, Go. aggwus 'narrow', which derive from the root *$h_2em\acute{g}^h$-, see ►ἄγχω. One further connects Arm. awji-k' [pl.] 'neck', with a similar assimilation of the nasal to the following labiovelar, which is a controversial development (see Clackson 1994: 107ff.).
Alternatively, the variants may show that the word is Pre-Greek. Variation labial/velar, however, is rare (Fur.: 388, φ/χωριαμός, but cf. γέφυρα/ βέφυρα); also α/αυ is rare; μ/ϝ occurs mostly before n or intervocalically (Fur.: 242-247).
Therefore, I think we must compare the type δάφνη / δαυχνα-, which Fur.: 229-233 explains as showing variation labial/ϝ. In my opinion, these forms had a labiovelar *g^{wh}, which either gave φ (in Aeolic) or -υχ- with anticipation of the labial element (see Pre-Greek). So we have *ἀφ-ην beside αὐ-χήν; ἄμφ-ην then shows the well-known prenasalization.
The Armenian form does not prove IE origin, as it can be a loan from an Anatolian language, cf. γέφυρα - kamurǰ (Beekes Glotta 78 (2004)).

αὐχμός [m.] 'drought; squalor' (Hp.). ◄GR► •DER αὐχμηρός 'dry, dirty' (Hp.; Chantraine 1933: 232f.), whence rare abstracts αὐχμηρότης, αὐχμηρία, αὐχμηρώδης; αὐχμώδης 'id.' (Hdt., E., Arist.). Hapax αὐχμήεις (h. Hom. 19, 6); αὐχμαλέος (Choeril., Amynt.), after ἀζαλέος etc.
Denominative αὐχμέω [v.] 'to be dry, dirty' (Od., IA), also αὐχμάω. αὔχμωσις 'dirt' (Gal. 16, 88) is probably an enlargement of αὐχμός. Late by-form αὐχμή [f.] (Q. S., Phryn.).

•ETYM A compound of ►αὖος 'dry' and -χμ- from the word for earth (see ►χθών), see Pronk fthc.a. A similar formation may be preserved in νεο-χμ-ός 'new', see Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 1f.

αὔω 1 [v.] 'to cry aloud, call' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR The υ is long everywhere. Ipf. αὖε (dissyllabic), mostly aor. ἀῦσαι, fut. ἀΰσω.
•DER ἀϋτή '(battle) cry' (cf. Trümpy 1950: 153ff.), Corcyr. αϝυτα, with ἀϋτέω = αὔω (Il.), only pres. except for late ἠΰτησα (Nonn., Epigr. Gr.); ἀϋτέω can either be denominative from ἀϋτή or deverbative from αὔω (Schwyzer: 705f.). Also αὐονή 'shouting' (Semon. 7, 20).
•ETYM The word may be onomatopoeic, but nothing more can be said. Specht KZ 59 (1932): 121 mentioned ἄβα· τροχὸς ἢ βοή (H.).

αὔω 2 [v.] 'to get a light, light a fire' (ε 490). On the mg. Borthwick Class. Quart. 63 (1969): 296. ◄IE *h_2eus- 'scoop, take'.►
•DIAL Myc. pu-ra-u-to-ro /puraustrō/ [du.], ἔναυον· ἔνθες, Κύπριοι 'put in(to) [ipv.]' (H.).
•COMP ἐναύω 'to kindle' (Hdt.), med. 'to scoop fire' (IA); ἔναυσμα 'spark, etc.' (Hell.) and ἔναυσις (Plu. Cim. 10), also of drawing water; ἐξαῦσαι· ἐξελεῖν 'to take out' (H., Pl. Com.), whence ἐξαυστήρ 'fire-tongs, κρεάγρα' (A., inscr.); καταῦσαι· καταντλῆσαι (cod. καταυλῆσαι), καταδῦσαι 'to pour down, go down' (H.); also καθαῦσαι· ἀφανίσαι 'to hide' (H.).
Uncertain are καταύσεις (Alcm. 95) and προσαύση (S. Ant. 619 [lyr.]).
Further πυραύστης [m.] 'moth that gets singed in a candle' (A.), πυραύστρα [f.] 'pair of fire-tongs', πύραυστρον [n.] 'id.' (Herod.), cod. πύραστρον; all from πῦρ αὔειν (see the Myc. form above). With analogical loss of σ: γοιναῦτις· οἰνοχόη 'vessel (for pouring wine)' (H.).
•ETYM αὔω may be from *h_2eus-e/o- or from *h_2eus-ie/o-; most Greek forms show psilosis. IE cognates are ON ausa 'to scoop' < ausanan* and Lat. hauriō 'to scoop' (with hypercorrect h-). The predominant connection with fire seems to be a secondary development of Greek. See ►ἀφύσσω.

αὔω 3 ⇒ἰαύω.

αὔω 4 ⇒αὖος.

ἀφαδία [f.] 'enmity' (Eup. 34). ◄GR►
•DER ἄφαδος 'displeasing, odious' (EM) and ἀφάδιος 'id.' (Hdn.).
•ETYM Derivations from ἀφανδάνω, ἀφαδεῖν (Od.); see ►ἁνδάνω.

ἀφάκη [f.] 'vetch, Vicia angustifolia' (Pherecr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR ἄφακος (Schwyzer 1950: 30).
•ETYM Dsc. and Galen think it comes from φακός 'lentil'. The suggestion by Fur.: 373 is attractive: he takes ἀ- as a prothetic vowel and considers the word to be a substrate word (note the change of inflection -ος : -η). Likewise Pisani Paideia 11 (1956): 296.

ἀφαμιῶται [m.pl.] slaves in Crete (Str.). Also ἀφαμιῶται· οἰκέται ἀγροῖκοι 'rural household slaves' (H.). ◄GR►

•ETYM Literally, 'those in a state of ἀφαμία (= ἀφημία)' who have no φήμη. Cf. ἀφημοῦντας· ἀγροίκους (H.).

ἄφαρ [adv.] 'forthwith, immediately' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR ἀφνός· ἐξαίφνης 'suddenly' (H.).
•DER ἀφάρτερος (Ψ 311) 'quicker'; ἀφαρεί (ἀφάρει DELG)· ταχέως καὶ ἀκόπως 'quickly and indefatigably' (EM, H., Suid.).
•ETYM One connects ἄφνω, assuming a neuter r/n-stem. Van Windekens 1941: 28 connects Go. abrs 'strong', comparing for the meaning MoE fast. Fur. (see index) brilliantly connected ἐξαίφνης and ►ἐξαπίνης, and further ►αἶψα, -ηρός, assuming a substrate element with variation α/ αι, π/ φ. He also connected ►αἰπύς etc., which is quite possible (cf. MoHG jäh, both 'steep' and 'immediate').

ἀφαρεύς [m.] 'belly-fin of the female tunny' (Arist. HA 543a, uncertain), τοῦ θήλεος θύννου τὸ ὑπὸ τῇ γαστρὶ πτερύγιον 'id.' (H.). ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM Fur.: 174 compares ἀβαρταί· πτηναί, Κύπριοι 'flying, wings'; for -τος in substrate words see ἄτρακτος, ἄσφαλτος. The suggestion in DELG that it could belong with ἄφαρ is ununderstandable.

ἀφάρκη [f.] name of an evergreen tree, 'Arbutus hybrida' (Thphr.). ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM Improbable theory by Strömberg 1944: 27ff. (compound from ἀπο- and ἄρκυς), see Frisk. Unclear is ἀφαρκίδευτον· ἀγρευτόν, ἀθυσίαστον 'caught, unsacrificed' (H.), see DELG. Fur.: 175 refers to Schwyzer: 530, comparing Thess. Φαρκαδών, which would point to a prothetic vowel. A substrate word is probable anyhow.

ἀφάσσω •VAR ἀφάω. ⇒ ἅπτω.

ἀφατειν [?] uncertain (IG 5(1), 209: 34); not an infinitive, see Bourguet 1927: 110, 4 and 124, 1. ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

ἀφαυρός [adj.] 'weak' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷
•DER ἀφαυρότης [f.] (Anaxag.). Denominative verb ἀφαυροῦται (Erot., v.l. ἀμαυροῦται), as an explanation of ἀμαλδύνεται 'becomes weak'.
•ETYM Unknown. These words are often explained as contaminations (see Frisk), but there is no reason to assume such processes; it only testifies to our ignorance. Much more probably, Fur.: 330 compares φαῦρος· κοῦφος 'light' (H.), φλαῦρος 'indifferent, bad' (with inserted λ?) and φαῦλος 'insignificant'. I would suggest that ἀμαυρός / μαυρός is also cognate (with interchange μ/ labial stop, cf. e.g. λαφύσσω/ λαμυρός, etc., see Fur.: 224ff.). Note the v.l. of the verb cited above, and note that -αυρος can hardly represent something IE ($*\text{-}eh_2u\text{-}ro\text{-}$?).

ἀφελής, -ές [adj.] 'plain, simple' (IA). ◁GR▷
•DER ἀφέλεια, -είη [f.] (Hp.), late ἀφελότης [f.] (Act. Ap., Vett. Val.); Chantraine 1933: 298.
•ETYM Highly improbable is the proposal by Persson 1912(2): 797[3], who connects φελλεύς 'stony terrain' and analyzes it as 'without a stone, even'. This etymology is even given by LSJ as the meaning of the word! Chantraine points to the geminate in φελλεύς. New analysis by Taillardat RPh. 71 (1997): 153f., see DELG Supp.: the word means 'without quality', be it positive or negative, and is derived from ἀφελεῖν 'to take away, deprive'.

ἄφενος [n.] 'wealth' (Il.). ◁IE? $*h_2b^hen\text{-}$ 'rich'▷ •VAR Also msc., after πλοῦτος, acc. to Fehrle PhW 46 (1926): 700f.
•COMP εὐηφενής (Il.); the better attested v.l. εὐηγενής can hardly be correct, see Bechtel 1914. As a second member in the PNs Δι-, Κλε-, Τιμ-αφένης.
•DER With loss of vowel and remarkable final accent: ἀφνειός (Il.), also ἀφνεός 'rich' (Il.). Thence back-formation ἄφνος [n.] (Pi. fr. 219). Lengthened ἀφνήμων (Antim.), after πολυκτήμων, etc.
Denominative verb ἀφνύει, ἀφνύνει· ὀλβίζει 'is blissed' (H.); ῥυδὸν ἀφνύνονται· πλουτοῦσιν 'are wealthy' (Suid.).
•ETYM The old connection with Skt. ápnas- [n.] 'possessions, riches' is now generally rejected. ἄφενος was one of the corner stones of the Pelasgian theory, which must now be abandoned (see my Introduction).
The agreement with Hitt. ḫappina(nt)- 'rich' is remarkable, but cannot be correct in view of the more likely comparison with Lat. ops 'power', opulentus 'wealthy' (which is probably not directly related to the Hitt. word, see De Vaan 2008 s.v. ops).
Balles KZ 110 (1997) starts from $*\text{n̥-}g^{wh}n\text{-}o\text{-}$, parallel to a formation in -io- in Skt. ághnyā- '(the valuable animal which is) not to be killed'. She explains the adjective with final accent from $*\text{n̥}g^{wh}n\text{-}es\text{-}ó\text{-}$ > ἀφνεό-, with metrical lengthening in Homer. However, the explanation of the full grade as analogical after σθένος is improbable; the whole construction is not convincing.
The Greek word looks IE (ablaut; cf. also archaic εὐηφενής). For Greek a root $*h_2b^hen\text{-}$ is the obvious reconstruction. The accent and the form ἀφνεός may be explained following Balles: $*h_2b^hnes\text{-}ó\text{-}$, with ablaut as in ἄλγος / ἀλεγεινός (metrical lengthening in Homer is probable as *ἀφνεοιο is impossible in the hexameter and *ἄφνεος, -ν , etc. are difficult). The recent attempt to connect ἄφενος with IE $*h_2eb^h\text{-}$ 'stream' by Willi 2004 does not convince.
It cannot be connected with the Hittite word (reading ḫpina-* is doubtful). A loan from Anatolian would probably have κ-, and the φ, the s-stem, and the adjective would be unclear.

ἀφήτωρ, -ορος [m.] epithet of Apollo (I 404). ◁GR▷ •VAR ἀφητορεία· μαντεία 'power of divination' (H.). σαφήτωρ· μάντις ἀληθής, μηνύτης, ἑρμηνεύς 'true diviner, informer, interpreter' (H.).
•ETYM Eustathios and the scholia explained it, among other things, as 'prophet' (Eust. ὁμοφήτωρ), i.e. from copulative α- and φημί. This cannot be correct. It rather derives from ἀφίημι, in the sense 'who sends off'. This could well mean 'archer' ('to discharge'). Kraus Wien. Ak. Anz. 87: 516ff. suggests 'who sends off people on a journey'.

ἄφθα [f.] a pedriatic illness, 'thrush' (Hp.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Mostly plur. ἄφθαι.

•DER ἀφθώδης, ἀφθάω (Hp.).
•ETYM Hardly related to ἅπτω. Fur.: 318[5] thinks it is a substrate word because of the group -φθ- (but I see no reason to follow him in supposing that the dental is secondary).

ἀφία [f.] 'lesser celandine, Ranunculus ficaria' (Thphr. HP 7, 7, 3). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM The connection with ἀφιέναι (τὸ ἄνθος) in Thphr. is untenable. The word is rather a loan. Krahe 1955: 44 connected Lat. apium 'parsley' (further to ap-* 'water'). Fur.: 167 objects that these are quite different plants. Himself, he proposes to compare ἄφρισσα 'id.' (Apul. Herb. 15), see ibid.: 330, with parallels for the insertion of -ρ-.

ἀφίας [?] · βωμός 'step, altar' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown; Maaß Arch. f. Religionswiss. 23 (1925): 228 can be forgotten.

ἄφλαστον [n.] 'curved poop of a ship, with its ornaments' (O 717, Hdt.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Bechtel 1921(3): 285 posited 'that which prevents destruction', from privative ἀ- and ►φλάω; improbable. Rather Pre-Greek, thus already Hermann Gött. Nachr. (1943): 1f. For a PG suffix -το- cf. ►ἄτρακτος. Borrowed from Greek: Lat. aplustr(i)a, -ōrum.

ἀφλετῆρες ⇒φλέω.

ἀφλοισμός [m.] 'foaming at the mouth' (O 607). ◂?▸
•ETYM Possibly a verbal noun in -σμός to ἔφλιδεν· διέρρεεν 'flowed out'; cf. διαπέφλοιδεν· διακέχυται 'has been poured out'; πεφλοιδέναι· φλυκταινοῦσθαι 'to have blisters' (H.), etc., see ►φλιδάω. Is the ἀ- copulative, or after ►ἀφρός 'id.'?

ἄφνω [adv.] 'suddenly' (A.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Late ἄφνως (Epigr. Gr. 468; Schwyzer: 405, 624[5]).
•ETYM Related to ►ἄφαρ; often interpreted as a frozen case form of a heteroclitic stem (Schwyzer: 520). More probable is Furnée's brilliant proposal to connect ἐξαίφνης and ►ἐξαπίνης, etc. By-forms are ἀφνός· ἐξαίφνης (Schwyzer: 624) and ἀφνίδια· ἀφνίδαν, ἄφνω (both H.); on αἰφνίδιος cf. ►αἴφνης.

ἀφόρδιον [n.] 'excrement' (γαστρός, Nic.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Frisk suggests that it is from *ἀφόδιον (ἄφοδος 'excrements'), reshaped euphemistically (after φόρος) or drastically (after πορδή)? Not entirely convincing.

ἄφρα [f.] 'kind of plaster' (Aët. 15, 14). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Perhaps a shortening of Ἀφροδίτη in the same sense (Aetius).

ἀφρατίας [m.] · ἰσχυρός. Κρῆτες 'strong (Cretan)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Latte corrects to ἀφραττίας, a development of *ἀφρακτιᾶς, from ἄφρακτος. Uncertain.

ἀφρίους [acc.pl.m.] · ἀθέρας 'chaff' (H.). ◂IE? He/ob^{h}ri-* 'awn'▸ •ETYM Hoffmann BB 18 (1892): 287 compared Skt. ábhri- 'hoe, pickaxe', which Wackernagel accepts, see Latte's edition of Hesychius. However, Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 658 rightly asks whether the meanings are compatible.

ἄφρις · μύρτον (H.), i.e. pudendum muliebre. ◂GR▸ •ETYM Hypocoristicon of Aphrodite (DELG).

ἄφρισσα [f.] a plant = ἀσκληπιάς (Apul. Herb. 15). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 330 connects ►ἀφία. The suffix -ισσ- suggests a Pre-Greek word.

Ἀφροδίτη [f.] goddess of love (Il.). ◂LW Sem.?▸
•DIAL Cypr. Ἀφοροδίτα, Cret. Ἀφορδίτα.
•DER Ἀφροδιτάριον an eyesalve (Gal.), Ἀφροδιταρίδιον 'darling' (Pl. Com.); adj. Ἀφροδίσιος 'belonging to Ἀ.' (IA), substantivized Ἀφροδίσιον 'temple of Ἀ.'; ἀφροδίσια [n.pl.] 'sexual intercourse', ἀφροδισιακός; denominative ἀφροδισιάζω [v.] 'to have intercourse' (IA), whence ἀφροδισιασμός, ἀφροδισιαστής 'lecher', ἀφροδισιαστικός.
For Ἀφροδισιασταί 'worshippers of Ἀ.' (Rhodos), cf. Ἀπολλωνιασται.
•ETYM The connection with ἀφρός (Kretschmer KZ 33 (1895): 267) and other older explanations (e.g. Maaß N. Jb. f. d. klass. Altertum 27 (1924): 457ff.) are now abandoned. A recent Indo-European attempt was made by Witczak 1993: 115-123.
As the goddess seems to be of oriental origin (see Burkert 1985: 152ff.), the name probably comes from the East too. A possibility is the Semitic name of the goddess Aštoret, Astarte; cf. Burkert op. cit. 248[18]. It may have entered Greek via another language. Less probable is the connection with Pre-Greek πρύτανις, Etr. (e)prϑni as 'lady, mistress' by Hammarström Glotta 11 (1921): 215f.
West Glotta 76 (1998): 134-138 rejects the idea that the name renders Aštart (Ugaritic 'Aṯtartu), but he thinks it may well be of Semitic origin. It is not easy either to connect the root prd, from which a word for 'pigeon' was formed. West ends with the suggestion that the name may have rendered a title 'She of the villages', but this seems not very adequate. Still, it seems possible that the name came from the one languages which on historical grounds we should expect to be relevant: Cypriot Phoenician.

ἀφρός [m.] 'foam, slaver' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DER ἀφρώδης 'foaming' (Hp.), ἀφριόεις 'id.' (Nic.; metri causa, see Chantraine 1933: 272). ἀφρῖτις, -ιδος f. 'kind of ἀφύη' (Arist.), see Redard 1949: 81.
Denominatives ἀφρέω [v.] 'to foam' (Il.), ἀφρίζω 'id.' (IA), whence ἀφρισμός (medic.) and ἀφριστής [m.] (AP); ἀφριάω [v.] 'id.' (Opp.); ἀφρόομαι [v.] 'id.' (Theol. Ar.).
•ETYM Meillet BSL 31 (1931): 51f. connected Arm. p'rp'ur 'foam' (which does not belong to σπείρω), but the ἀ- is problematic ($*h_2$- would give a- in Armenian), and the $*b^h$ presupposed by Greek did not give p'. Not to Skt. abhrá- [n.] 'cloud' (because of the meaning), not to ►ὄμβρος, because the rule of de-aspiration before resonant is not valid. Not here ►ἀφρίους· ἀθέρας (H.).

ἀφύη [f.] 'small fry of various fishes' (Epich., Ar.), only plur. in Att. acc. to H. s.v. ἀφύων τιμή. See Thompson 1947: 19f. ◄IE *b^hh_2u- 'grow'► •VAR Mostly plural. Also ἀφύα, cf. ἀφύα· μεμβράς 'sprat' (H.). The gen.pl. is ἀφύων, not -ῶν, which means it is ntr.

•DIAL Perhaps Myc. a-pu₂-we, -de (TNs) /Ap^huwei/, /Ap^hūn-de/; see below.

•DER ἀφύδιον (Ar.), with ῡ (see Schwyzer: 199); ἀφυώδης 'whitish' (Hp.). Denominative ἀφύω [v.] 'to become whitish' (Hp.); see Chantraine 1933: 431.

•ETYM From privative ἀ- and φύω (one compares nonnats 'Aphua pellucida' in Nice) seems folk etymology, but is defended by Meier-Brügger MSS 52 (1991): 123-125: *n̥-b^huH-o- 'without growth' (the root is actually *b^hh_2u-), which is a recent formation compared with Skt. ábhva- 'monster' < *n̥-b^hh_2u-o- (with loss of laryngeal). The accentuation of the gen. pl. ἀφύων (not -ῶν, Hdn. Gr. 1. 425, 13) points to an unextended stem ἀφῡ- (nom. *ἀφῡ-ς), cf. φυγή, φύγα-δε. DELG also keeps open the possibility of a substrate word.

ἀφυσγετός [m.] 'mud', carried by a stream (Λ 495). ◄?►

•VAR As an adj. 'filthy' (Nic. Al. 432), but ἀφυσγετόν is better; also 'abundant' (ibid. 584). ἀφύσγετος (Tyrannion).

•ETYM Unknown. Nicander did not understand the meaning any longer, and connected it with ►ἀφύσσω. Formation like συρφετός (Schwyzer: 501, Chantraine 1933: 300).

ἀφύσσω [v.] 'to draw or scoop liquids' (Il.). ◄?►

•VAR Also ἀφύω in ἐξ-αφύοντες (ξ 95), ἐξαφύουσιν· ἐξαντλήσουσιν 'they will drain' (H.); aor. ἀφύσ(σ)αι, fut. ἀφύξω.

•DER ἀφυσμός (Suid.) and ἀφύσιμος (sch.), also ἀφύξιμος (Nic.) with transition to the flexion with velar.

ἄφυσσαν· τὴν κοτύλην <παρὰ> Ταραντίνοις 'cup (Tarantine)' (H.). Also ἀφύστα· κοτύλη, στάμνος 'cup, jar' (H.) and ἀφυτρίς (cod. ἀφύτρις)· ἀρύταινα (cod. ἄρπαινα) 'ladle or cup' (H.). Uncertain κατηνδράφυξας· κατέκτεινας (H.).

•ETYM Oehler (see Schulze 1892: 311) explained the form as ἀφ + ὑσ- < *h_2us-, the zero grade of αὐσ- found in ►αὔω 2 'to light a fire' and Lat. hauriō < *$h_2(e)us$-, which is quite possible. The presents ἀφύσσω and ἀφύω are probably derived from the aorist.

Ἀχαιμένης [m.] Achaimenes, ancestor of the Persian royal house (Hdt.). ◄LW Persian►

•VAR Gen. -εος, -ους.

•DER Ἀχαιμενίδαι [pl.] descendents of Ἀ., a Persian clan to which the Persian kings belonged (Hdt.); Ἀχαιμένιος 'Persian' (A. Pl.); Ἀχαιμενία a part of Persia (St. Byz.); Ἀχαιμενῖτις [f.] epithet of Babylon (Epiphan.). ἀχαιμενίς, -ίδος [f.] a plant (Ps.-Dsc.); see Strömberg 1940: 134ff. and André 1956 s.v. achaemenis.

•ETYM From OP Haxāmaniš, which probably means 'having the mind (-man-) of a friend'. Greek -αι- in Ἀχαι-μένης (instead of -ā- in Haxā-maniš is probably an adaptation to names like Ταλαι-μένης, Πυλαι-μένης, etc. (Schwyzer: 448). Jacobsohn KZ 54 (1927): 261f. explained -αι- from the stem haxāi- = Skt. sakhāy- 'friend', which is cognate with Lat. socius.

ἀχαίνει [v.] · σαίνει, παίζει, κολακεύει 'fawns, plays, flatters' (H.). ◄?►

•ETYM No etymology.

ἀχαίνη [f.] 'kind of bread, made by women for the Thesmophoria' (Semus 13). ◄?►

•ETYM No etymology.

ἀχαΐνης, -ου [m.] 'brocket, two-year-old stag' (Arist.). ◄?►

•VAR ἀχαΐνη [f.], also ἀχαιΐνη 'roe' (Arist.).

•DER ἀχαιινέη [f.] 'deerskin' (A. R.).

•ETYM The word has been derived from Ἀχαΐα, the supposed habitat of the animal; cf. Keller 1909: 350; Keller 1887: 77, 79, 91. Brands 1935: 81 points to EM, sch. A. R. 4, 175, who derive it from a town Ἀχαιινέα in Crete.

Ἀχαιοί [m.pl.] name of a Greek tribe (Il.). ◄PG?►

•VAR Sg. Ἀχαιός 'Achaean', fem. Ἀχαιαί, sing. -ά (see Schwyzer: 460).

•DER Ἀχαιΐς, -ίδος [f.] (scil. γαῖα) 'the land Achaea' or 'the Achaean woman' (scil. γυνή), also Ἀχαιϊάς [f.] (Il.); Ἀχαιϊκός, Att. Ἀχᾱϊκός (cf. Schwyzer: 265f.) 'Achaean'; Ἀχαιΐη, Att. Ἀχᾱΐα [f.], the Thessalian and Peloponnesian regions 'Achaea'; also a town (Rhodos, etc.), perhaps trisyllabic.

•ETYM The name Ἀχαιοί < Ἀχαιϝοί (cf. Lat. Achīvī) is known from Egyptian sources as 'q'jw'š', to be read as Aqaiwaša, and also in Hitt. Aḫḫii̯a, later Aḫḫii̯au̯ā (e.g. Kretschmer Glotta 21 (1933): 227). In spite of strong opposition (e.g. Sommer 1934, Sommer IF 55 (1937): 169ff.), the equation is now generally accepted, but the Hittite form has not been satisfactorily explained (why is there no reflex of the second α in Hittite?). Recenly, Finkelberg Glotta 66 (1988): 127-134 derived the Greek form from Hitt. Aḫḫii̯au̯a, with -ḫii̯- giving χ, but this is doubtful. The name is no doubt Pre-Greek, e.g. /$Akay^wa$-/.

ἀχάλιον [n.] a plant, = σιδηρῖτις, ἀλθαία (Hippiatr. 11), but these are two different plants; they are both used as medicaments. ◄?►

•ETYM No etymology.

ἀχᾶνη [f.] name of a measure = 45 μέδιμνοι (Ar.); 'chest, box' (Phanod.). ◄?►

•ETYM Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 54 compares Eg. hn 'chest' (Akk. ḫannū). Fur.: 138 compared Hitt. (Hurr.) aganni, but this means 'bowl' (and is connected with Akk. agannu 'bowl', Kronasser 1962-1987: 245, and with Eg. 'ikn 'pot'). He also compares ἀγάννα· ἅμαξα <ἱερὰ> καί ἡ ἐν οὐρανῷ ἄρκτος (H.) (with ἅμαξα taken as 'box'; and the Bear seen as a box?); ibid.: 392, he compares λαχάννα (H.). No solution can be offered.

ἀχαρνώς, -ώ [m.] a sea fish, = ὀρφώς, perhaps 'bass' (Callias Com. 3). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Also ἄχαρνος; ἀχάρνᾱς, with gen. ἀχάρνου (Arist. fr. 566). Comparable forms: ἀχάρνα· εἶδος ἰχθύος 'kind of fish' (H.), ἀχέρνα (cod. -λα)· ἰχθὺς ποιός 'id.' (H.); ἀκαρνάν (Ath.), ἀκάρναξ· λάβραξ 'bass' (H.).

•ETYM The variation χ/κ and the ending -ω(ς) point to Pre-Greek origin; the group -ρν- is also frequent in such words. Cf. Thompson 1947: 6f.

ἀχᾱ́της, -ου [m.] 'agate' (Thphr.). ◂LW▸ •ETYM Borrowing from an unknown source. Semitic etymology in Lewy 1895: 56. The river Achates on Sicily and the PN Achates are probably called after the stone.

ἄχερδος [f.] 'wild pear, Pyrus amygdaliformis' (Od.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also [m.] (Theoc.); ἀγέρδα (cod. -αα)· ἄπιος, ὄγχνη 'pear-tree, pear' (H.). ἄχηρον· ἀκρίδα Κρῆτες 'locust (Cretan)' (H.), with Cretan development ερδ > ηρ; ἀκρίδα is changed by Latte into ἀχράδα, which is doubtful; cf. ► ἀκρίς.
•ETYM Theoretically, ἀγέρδα could be Macedonian, but there are no further indications.
Comprared with Alb. dardhë 'pear' < g^hord-. In this case, the ἀ- must be a real prothetic vowel, and the word a non-IE loan word. Connection with ► ἀχράς is evident.

ἀχερωΐς, -ίδος [f.] 'white poplar, Populus alba' (Il.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Connection of -ωΐς (< *-ōsis) with Lith. úosis 'ash' is most improbable. Derivation from Ἀχέρων is a mere formal guess. The stem ἀχερω- suggests a Pre-Greek word (type ► ἥρως; cf. on ► ἀχαρνώς).

Ἀχέρων, -οντος [m.] name of several rivers, also the mythical river of the Underworld (Od.). ◂?▸
•DER Ἀχερούσιος (A.), fem. -ιάς (Pl., X.); younger Ἀχερόντ(ε)ιος, fem. -ιάς (E.).
•ETYM Connected with the Balto-Slavic group of Lith. ēžeras, ážeras, OPr. assaran, OCS jezero 'lake', under the influence of which Ἀχέρων has been interpreted as 'forming lakes'. Acc. to Derksen 2008 s.v., the BSl. group may be related to the group of Lith. ežià 'boundary(-strip)', ORu. ězъ 'fish weir', and also with Arm. ezr 'bank, border' as PIE $h_1eǵ^h$- (the group of Lith. ēžeras then goes back to $h_1oǵ^h$-er-o-). This reconstruction implies that the Greek name cannot be related, in view of its initial Ἀ-. The gloss ἀχερούσια· ὕδατα ἑλώδη 'marshy waters' may be based on ideas of the Underworld river, and cannot be used as a testimony for the original meaning of the name.

ἀχεύω ⇒ ἄχνυμαι.

ἀχήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'poor' (Theocr.), a Doric word. ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR ἀεχῆνες· πένητες '(day-)laborers, poor (men)' (H.) must be due to folk etymology (privative α and ἔχω).
•DIAL ἠχῆνες· κενοί, πτωχοί 'bereft, beggar(ly)' (H.) must be from IA.
•COMP κτεαν-ήχης· πένης '(day-)laborer, poor (man)' (H.).
•DER ἀχηνία 'poverty, lack' (A.), with short α- after the negation. Other formation in ἀχηνεῖς· κενοί (H.); verb ἠχάνω· πτωχεύω 'to beg' (Suid.), perhaps to be read *ἰχάνω, see below. Also ἀχαιος (IG 3, 1385)?
•ETYM Connection with ἰχανάω 'desire' (Hom.) has been proposed (cf. Wackernagel 1897: 11f.), with an alternation ī / ā. Indo-Iranian forms with a similar alternation exist: Skt. īhate 'to desire', Av. iziieiti 'to strive, long for' beside Av. āzi- [m.] 'desire', etc. In laryngealistic terms, this alternation would continue h_2e-$h_2ǵ^h$- beside h_2i-$h_2ǵ^h$-. But if Av. aēzah- 'desire' belongs to this group rather than Av. āzi-, which is far more likely, the root should be reconstructed as $Heiǵ^h$- (Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 273) and Greek ἀχήν cannot be connected. ToA ākāl, ToB akālk 'desire' are supposed to be Iranian loans.
Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 659 proposes that ἀχήν is from ἀ-εχ- (doubtful). Not related to ἶχαρ (A.), which has short ι-.
Since an IE etymology is unknown, the word might be Pre-Greek (Chantraine 1933: 166: "vocabulaire technique et populaire"; "cette fois encore il semble s'être produit une collision entre un suffixe indo-européen et une finale méditerranéenne"). IE adjectives in -ην, -ηνος are hardly known (cf. Chantraine ibid.), but the suffix is well-known in Pre-Greek, cf. ► ἀτμήν and see Fur.: 172[118].

ἄχθομαι [v.] 'to be loaded', mostly of mental oppression: 'to be vexed or grieved' (Il.). ◂IE $h_2ed^hǵ^h$- 'squeeze, (op)press'▸ •VAR Aor. ἀχθεσθῆναι.
•DER ἄχθος [n.] 'load', also metaph. 'burden, trouble' (Il.). Thence ἀχθεινός 'burdensome' (E., X.), and rare forms like ἀχθηρός (Antiph. 94, uncertain), ἀχθήεις (Marc. Sid. 96), ἀχθήμων (Man. 4, 501). Denominative verb ἀχθίζω 'to load' (Babr.), perhaps ἀχθήσας (for ἀχθίσας?)· γομώσας, ἤγουν πληρώσας 'stuffed, filled' (H.). ἀχθηδών, -όνος [f.] 'weight, burden' (A.); cf. ἀλγηδών.
•ETYM Former comparisons (ἄχθος 'load' with ἄγω 'to carry'; ἄχθομαι 'to be grieved' with ἄχομαι, ἄχνυμαι 'to be sad' were formally not very convincing (a verbal suffix -θ- is not well represented). One also compared ► ὀχθέω, but this is more plausibly connected with ἔχθομαι 'to be hated'.
Risch IF 69 (1964): 78 etymologically connected ἄχθομαι with Hitt. ḫatk-ⁱ 'to shut, close, make tight', which would mean that we have to reconstruct $h_2ed^hǵ^h$-. Both Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. and Puhvel HED s.v. accept this etymology, noting that it is corroborated by the fact that neither the -t- nor the -k- is ever spelled with a geminate in Hittite. The meaning 'to shut' in Hittite must have developed from 'to squeeze'.

Ἀχιλλεύς [m.] the son of Peleus and Thetis (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Also Ἀχιλεύς (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. a-ki-re-u, dat. a-ki-re-we.
•DER Ἀχιλλήϊος (Hdt.), Att. Ἀχίλλειος (E.); also a plant.
•ETYM The variation λλ ~ λ (like σσ ~ σ in Ὀδυσ(σ)εύς) is typical of Pre-Greek words, and probably points to a palatalized phoneme /l^y/. Any metrical explanation of the origin of this interchange is vicious. I do not believe that the name is hypocoristic for an older compound, or that it belongs to ► ἄχος 'pain'.
Holland Glotta 71 (1993): 17-27 gives a new proposal for Achilles. He connects it again with ἄχος, though he admits that it does not mean 'fear' as in Germanic: although he translates it as 'grief' in some passages, in Greek it means 'distress'. He cites instances where Homer mentions the ἄχος of Achilles, but these can easily be understood as folk-etymological explanations of the name. Holland explains the geminate as hypocoristic, and then assumes an element -ιλο- for which he cites ὀργίλος 'inclined to anger', but here without any meaning; it contradicts his intepretation of the λ as a remnant of λαός 'army', for which there is no evidence. The most serious mistake is that he does not accept the evidence of Mycenaean, where we find a-ki-re-u = Ἀχιλλεύς. Holland admits (19) that the word enjoyed a certain popularity, and that "the name was not invented for the Homeric hero". It shows that the name existed in this form centuries before Homer. The name can easily be understood as Pre-Greek: note the suffix -ευς, and the variaton between geminate and simple consonant (Fur.: 387). Holland sweeps this explanation away as "nebulous pre-Greek" (17), but this is no argument. In doing this, he takes us back to the period before we knew Mycenaean, and his interpretation must be fundamentally rejected. Achilles is clearly a hero taken over from other stories. The meaning of the name remains unknown, but this is unimportant.

ἀχλῡ́ς, -ύος [f.] 'mist, darkness' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_2eg^hlu- 'mist, dark weather'⊳ •VAR Later -ῠ́ς.
•DER ἀχλυώδης 'hazy, murky' (Hp., Arist., Hell.); ἀχλυόεις 'cloudy, dark' (Epigr. apud Hdt., Hell., late epic). Denominative verbs: ἀχλύω [v.] 'to become (make) dark' (Od., epic), ἄχλυσις 'obfuscation' (Syn. Alch.); ἀχλύνομαι 'to become dark' (Q. S.); ἀχλυόομαι 'to become dark', -όω 'to get dark' (Thphr.).
ἀχλυδιᾶν· θρύπτεσθαι 'to break small' (H.) after the verbs for diseases in -ιάω (Schwyzer: 732), perhaps by contamination with χλιδᾶν (χλιδιᾶν).
•ETYM Seems identical with OPr. aglo [n.] 'rain' (which need not be a u-stem); Arm. ałǰa-m-ułǰ-k' [pl.] 'darkness' requires metathesis of -g^hl-, and subsequent palatalization of g^h to ǰ. The reduplication is typical of Armenian.

ἄχνη [f.] 'foam, froth; chaff' (Il., poet., Hp.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM With a different velar, we find Lat. agna 'ear of corn' < akna*, Go. ahana 'chaff', etc., from the root *$h_2eḱ$- 'sharp'. Connection with this root has been proposed for ἄχνη too, assuming a suffix -snh_2-, but this seems ad hoc: the more obvious connection with ►ἄχυρον 'chaff' shows that it is a Pre-Greek word.

ἄχνυμαι [v.] 'to grieve, lament for' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_2eg^h- 'distress, fear'⊳ •VAR Ptc. also ἀχεύων, ἀχέων (Il.; see below); aor. ἀκαχέσθαι, ἀκαχεῖν, ἀκαχῆσαι, perf. ἀκάχημαι (ἀκηχεμένη metr. cond.?); thence a new pres. ἀκαχίζομαι, -ίζω; ἄχομαι occurs only twice (Od.). Rare presents are ἀκαχύνω (Antim.), ἀκάχομαι (Q. S.) and ἀχνάσδημι (Alc. 81), a re-formation in -άζω from *ἄχνημι, *ἄχναμαι.
•DER An old noun is ἄχος [n.] 'sadness, pain' (Il.); ἀχνύς, -ύος [f.] 'id.' (Call.) after ἄχνυμαι.
•ETYM Although a difference in meaning exists, ἄχος corresponds with the s-stem in Go. agis [n.], OE ege [m.] 'fear'. Further, Gm. has a preterito-present Go. og 'to fear', and the Go. ptc. un-agands 'fearless' is thematic, like ἄχομαι. Further cognates are OIr. -ágadar 'id.', and PIIr. *Hag^ha- > Skt. aghá- [adj.] 'evil, bad, dangerous' (RV+), YAv. aya- [adj.] 'bad, evil'.

ἀχεύων is tentatively interpreted as a participle built on an athematic present *ἄχευμι (DELG) or aorist *ἤχευα (Frisk). For ἀχέων beside ἄχος, one compares κρατέων to κράτος. See Strunk 1967: 105ff., and cf. West ZPE 67 (1987): 17-19.

ἀχραδάμυλα [?] · ὁ κοχλίας 'snail' (H.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •VAR Cf. ἀκραμύλα· κοχλίας, Ταραντίνοις (H.); χραμαδοῖλαι· χελῶναι 'tortoises'. καὶ αἱ νωθρόταται τῶν κυνῶν 'the most hybridized of bitches'. οἱ δὲ τοὺς κοχλίας 'snails' (H.). Here the last explanation has clearly been added later, as the case forms do not agree.
•ETYM As two forms have both δ and μ, the syllable with δ was probably lost in ἀκραμύλα (either in reality or only graphically: in ΑΔΑ?). Since two forms end in -μυλα, the original form will have been ἀχραδαμυλα. Variation οι/ υ is well known in Pre-Greek words. The analysis will be *(a)krad-am-ul-a, with well-known Pre-Greek suffixes. The word closely resembles the town Καρδαμύλη (Il.), also on Chios; for the metathesis see Fur.: 392 (on τέρμινθος/ τρέμιθος).

ἀχράς, -άδος [f.] 'the wild pear and its fruit, Pyrus amygdaliformis' (com., Arist.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM One connects ►ἄχερδος. Acc. to Frisk and Chantraine, it is possibly a loanword; to my mind, it is Pre-Greek, with ἀ-χερδ- beside ἀ-χραδ-, with metathesis and α/ε (cf. Fur.: 392 στεργίς / στρεγγίς). Admittedly, the alternation can also be understood in IE terms, but such an origin is highly improbable for a word for 'pear'. DELG points out that -άς, -άδος is frequent in plant names.

ἀχρεῖον [acc.sg.n.] not quite certain: ἀχρεῖον ἰδών (B 269); ἀχρεῖον δ' ἐγέλασσε (σ 163); ἀχρεῖον κλάζειν (Theoc. 25, 72). ⊲GR⊳ •COMP ἀχρειό-γελως [adj.] (Cratin.); ἀχρείως γελᾶν (APl.).
•ETYM It may be the same word as ἀχρεῖος 'useless, idle' (see ►χρή).

ἄχρι, ἄχρις [adv., prep., conj.] 'to the uttermost; as far as, until, as long as' (Il.). ⊲IE *$me\text{-}ǵ^hsri$ 'until'⊳ •DER ἄχροι (Corcyra; after the locatives in -οι).
•ETYM This is the zero grade of ►μέχρι. On the variant with -ς, see Schwyzer: 404f., 650.

ἀχύνωψ ⇒κύνωψ.

ἄχυρα [n.pl.] 'chaff' (com.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳
•VAR Rarely sing. -ον; collective sing. ἀχυρός or ἄχυρος [m.] 'heap of chaff'. Note ἄχορα· τὰ πίτυρα. ἔνιοι δὲ κρανίον 'chaff, skull; head' (H.).
•COMP ἀχυροθήκη (X.).
•DER ἀχυρώδης (Arist.), ἀχύρινος (Plu.), etc.; ἀχυρών, -ῶνος [m.] 'storehouse for chaff' (Delos), ἀχύριος [m.] 'heap of chaff' (Heraklea). Denominative verb ἀχυρόω [v.] 'to mix with chaff', etc. (Arist., Thphr.), whence ἀχύρωσις (Arist.).
Remarkable is ἀχυρμιαί [f.pl.] 'heap of chaff' (E 502, AP 9, 384, 15), which is a form in -ιά from a noun in -μος. The form in -αί is probably an old locative; see Dürbeck MSS 37 (1978): 39-57. The same formation is found in ἀχύρμιος (Arat. 1097), said of ἄμητος. Doubtful ἀχυρμός (Ar. V. 1310; conj. by Dindorf for ἀχυρός).

•ETYM The analysis as an old r/n-stem to ἄχνη is impossible, as the -υ- would remain unexplained. The word is clearly identical with ἄχορα (see ►ἄχωρ), a gloss not mentioned in the literature. It shows that the word is Pre-Greek (Fur.: 362). This explains the relation to ἄχνη: Pre-Greek has often a suffix with -ν- beside the more frequent suffixes -VC-; moreover, -υρ- is well known.

ἀχυρμιαί ⇒ἄχυρα.

ἄχωρ, -ορος [m.] 'scurf, dandruff' (Ar. fr. 410, Hdn. Gr. 2, 937). ◅PG(V)▻ •VAR ἀχώρ, -ῶρος (Alex. Tracl.). Cf ἀχῶρα· τὸν ἀχῶρα. εἴρηται δὲ τὸ πιτυρῶδες τῆς κεφαλῆς 'the scurf of the head' (H.) and ἄχορα· τὰ πίτυρα. ἔνιοι δὲ κρανίον 'chaff, skull; head' (H.).
•DER ἀχωρώδης (Aët., v.l. in Hp. Liqu. 6); ἀχωρέω [v.] 'to suffer from ἄχωρ', or -ιάω (conj. in Paul. Aeg. 3, 3).
•ETYM The connection with ►ἄχυρα 'chaff' is proven by the glosses. The vocalic interchange points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 211, 302, 362). See also Skoda RPh. 60 (1986): 215-222.

ἄψ [adv.] 'back(wards), again' (Il.). ◅IE *h_2ep- 'from, away'▻ •DER ἄψερον = ὕστερον, πάλιν (Alc., H., Zonar.), after ὕστερον.
•ETYM Identical with Lat. abs 'away, back'. For the -ς cf. ἐξ and Schwyzer: 620. The relation to ἄπο, etc. is unclear.

ἀψίνθιον [n.] 'wormwood, Artemisia Absinthium' (Hp.). ◅PG(S)▻ •VAR Also ἄψινθος [f., m.] and ἀψινθία [f.].
•DER ἀψινθίτης οἶνος (Dsc.); ἀψινθᾶτον 'drink prepared with ἀ.' (Aët.) and ἀψινθάτιον (pap.); cf. Lat. absinthiātum (vinum).
•ETYM The suffix -νθ- proves Pre-Greek origin.

ἀψίς, -ῖδος ⇒ἅπτω.

ἄψορρος [adj.] 'going backwards' (Il.). ◅GR▻ •VAR Also -ον [adv.].
•ETYM Forssman 1980: 185ff. convincingly derives the second member from the verbal root ϝερρ- 'to go away', see ►ἔρρω. The problem with the older analysis "with the ὄρρος backwards" is that ►ὄρρος is an Attic word; in the epic language we find παλίν-ορσος with the expected treatment of -rs-. The form ἀψόρροος in ἀψορρόου Ὠκεανοῖο (Σ 399, υ 65) is either from ἄψ and ῥόος with compositional -ο-, or rather from ἄψορρος reshaped after ῥόος (discussion in Forssman l.c.).

ἄω 'to eat one's fill'. ⇒ἆσαι.

ἄω 'to blow'. ⇒ἄημι.

ἀών, -όνος 1 [?] a fish (Epich., H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Epich. 63 has ἀόνες φάγροι τε. No etymology.

ἀών, -όνος 2 [?] Plur., a kind of garment (P. Amh. 2, 3a, II, 21). ◅LW Eg.▻
•VAR ἀϊών (ᾱῐ) (B. 17, 112, S., H. s.v. ἔλυμα, see LSJ Supp.).
•ETYM The text in B. (αἰόνα πορφυρέαν) shows that it was ᾀών. An Egyptian word, see Latte Phil. 87 (1932): 271f. and Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 192.

ἄωροι 1 [adj.] uncertain, epithet of the πόδες of Scylla (μ 89), also in opposition to the ὀπίσθιοι πόδες (Philem. 145). ◅?▻ •ETYM Acc. to scholia H and Q, it means ἄκωλοι: τοὺς γὰρ Ἴωνας λέγειν φασὶ τὴν κωλῆν ὤρην καὶ ὡραίαν (sch. μ 89). In SIG 1037 (Milete IV-III[a]), ὤρη is a part of the sacrificial animal, but different from κωλῆ. Bechtel 1914 s.v. translates 'Beine, die keine Waden haben', so 'legs without calfs', but his comparison with Lat. sūra seems impossible. Van Windekens proposes to understand ἄωροι (H.), i.e. 'wakeful' (belonging with ὦρος 'sleep'). The meaning in Philem. may be artificial.

ἄωρος 2 [m.] 'sleep' (Sapph. 57). ◅?▻
•VAR Call. fr. 177, 28 (Pfeiffer) has ὦρον.
•ETYM Acc. to EM 117, 14, it stands for ὦρος: κατὰ πλεονασμὸν τοῦ ᾱ μηδὲν πλέον σημαίνοντος. ὦρος γὰρ ὁ ὕπνος 'the ᾱ does not mean anything, for ὦρος means ὕπνος'. Cf. ἄωρος (cod. ἄορος)· ἄυπνος. Μηθυμναῖοι (H.). See ►ἀωτέω.

ἀωτέω [v.] 'to sleep'(?), with ὕπνον as an object (K 159, κ 548). ◅?▻
•VAR Only present.
•ETYM In the same meaning, but without object, in Simon. 37, 5. H. glosses ἀωτεῖτε (γλυκὺν ὕπνον, κ 548) with ἀπανθίζετε τὸν ὕπνον 'pick sleep (vel sim.)'. Derived from ►ἄωτος; connection with ►ἄωρος 2 'sleep' seems impossible.

ἄωτος [m.] 'flock of wool, down; the choicest, the flower of its kind' (Il.). Raman Glotta 53 (1975): 195-205 shows that the word means 'nap, tap'. ◅?▻
•VAR Also -ον [n.].
•DER ἀωτεύειν· ἀπανθίζεσθαι 'to pluck off flowers' (H.), ὑφαίνειν 'to weave, plan' (AB).
•ETYM Considered to be a verbal noun to ►ἄημι, so *'blowing'; this was also argued by Jacquinod REA 90 (1988): 319-323, assuming *h_2uoh_1-to-. But semantically, there is no support for the connection with 'blow'; the etymology was merely suggested by the formal appearance. Rather the word is a technical term, as remarked by DELG; it remains without etymology.

B

βᾶ 1 [interj.] imitation of the bleating of a lamb (Hermipp. 19). ⊲ONOM⊳ •ETYM Onomatopoeic word. Cf. ►βῆ.

βᾶ 2 Abbreviation of βασιλεῦς 'king' (A. Supp. 892, lyr.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Cf. Schwyzer: 423 A. 2. However, there is a v.l. πᾶ, an abbreviation of πατήρ.

βαβάζειν [v.] · τὸ <μὴ> διηρθρωμένα λέγειν. ἔνιοι δὲ βοᾶν 'to speak [in]articulately; to cry' (H.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR Also βαβίζω, -ύζω (Zenod.).
•DER βάβαξ [m.] 'chatterer' (Archil.); βάβακοι· ὑπὸ Ἠλείων τέττιγες 'cicadas', ὑπὸ Ποντικῶν δὲ βάτραχοι 'frogs'; βάβακα· τὸν γάλλον 'eunuch' (H.) (see Maas RhM 74 (1925): 469f.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic forms like these are frequent: cf. ►βαβαί, ►βάζω, ►βαΰζω, ►βαβράζω, and ►βάβαλον; cf. also ►βάρβαρος, ►βαβύρτας, ►βόμβος, etc.

βαβαί [interj.] Exclamation of surprise (E.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR Extended βαβαιάξ (Ar.).
•ETYM Cf. Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 254. Lat. babae is borrowed from Greek. Cf. ►βαβάζω and ►παπαῖ, as well as ►πόποι.

βάβακα ⇒βαβάζειν.

βαβάκινον, -ος [m.] (or [n.]?) · χύτρας εἶδος 'kind of earthen pot' (H.). ⊲LW Celt.?, Anat.?⊳
•VAR Cf. βακάϊον· μέτρον τι 'a measure' (H.).
•ETYM Latte Glotta 32 (1953): 41 compared ἐμβακανίτης· τὸ μετὰ τοῦ ταρίχους καὶ στέατος σκευαζόμενον βρῶμα 'food prepared with salted [fish] meat and hard fat' (H. and Cyrill. mss.) to reconstruct an unreduplicated form *βάκινος (-ον), probably also found in Lat. bacchinon (Greg. Tur., whence MoFr. bassin). The word is supposed to be Anatolian or Celtic. Fur.: 171 connects the word with φάκται· ληνοί, σιπύαι, πύελοι (►φάκτον 2) and Myc. pa-ko-to [du.] /p^haktō/. The variation would then point to a Pre-Greek word, but this is uncertain.

βαβάκτης [m.] epithet of Pan (Cratin.), Dionysus (Corn.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR ἐκβαβάξαι· ἐκσαλεῦσαι 'shake violently' (H.) = S. fr. 139. βαβάξαι· ὀρχήσασθαι 'dance' (H.); βαβάκτης· ὀρχηστής, ὑμνῳδός, μανιώδης, κραύγασος, ὅθεν καὶ Βάκχος 'dancer, singer of hymns, like a madman, shouter, whence also Bacchus' (H.); = λάλος 'talkative' (EM 183, 45).

•ETYM Onomatopoeic word to express joy; cf. ►βαβάζω. DELG considers the connection with Lydian to be an etymological speculation on Bacchus. The terms with βαβα(κ)- may sometimes have included other expressions of joy etc., which were not limited to one language only.

βάβαλον [n.] · κραύγασον. Λάκωνες 'bawler, shouter; Laconians' (H.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •ETYM Onomatopoeic word; cf. ►βαβάζω, ►βαβάκτης. On the -λ- in the suffix, cf. ►λάλος; on bal-, see also Pok. 91f. On βάβαλον· αἰδοῖον 'private parts', see ►βάμβαλον.

βαβήρ [m.] · ὁ Ἄρης (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

βάβιον [n.] 'baby' (Dam. Isid. 75). ⊲ONOM⊳
•DER See L. Robert 1963: 368.
•ETYM A nursery word used in Syria. See ►βαβάζω and Pok. 91 (E baby). Also related is βαβάλια 'cradle' (Oehl IF 57 (1940): 11ff.).

βαβράζω [v.] 'to chirp', of cicadas (Anan., H.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •ETYM Onomatopoeic word; cf. ►βαβάζω.

βαβρήν [?] · ὑπόστασις ἐλαίου κατὰ Μακεδόνας 'sediment of olive-oil (Maced.)' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Hoffmann 1906: 73f. relates it to βάπτω, which is doubful. The meaning suggests a Pre-Greek word: sometimes it is connected with ►βάβρηξ.

βάβρηξ [m./f.] in βάβρηκες· τὰ οὖλα τῶν ὀδόντων, οἱ δὲ σιαγόνας· οἱ δὲ ἐν τοῖς ὀδοῦσιν ἀπὸ τῆς τροφῆς κατεχόμενα 'the gums of the teeth, the jaws; particles of food stuck between the teeth' (H.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR βέβρηκες· τὸ ἔνδον τῶν σιαγόνων μέρος 'the part within the jaws'(?) (H.).
•ETYM Kalléris 1954: 114f. derives the word from a root βρ- in βίβρωσκω, but this root ends in $*h_3$, and should not be lost in this formation. There seems no apparent reason to connect this gloss with βαβρήν, as per Kalléris and DELG. Is βάρηκες just a mistake? The meaning of βέβρηκες unclear: μέρος can hardly mean 'piece of food'. The word is probably Pre-Greek, in view of the variation α/ ε. See ►βαβρήν, ►βάρηκες.

βαβύας [m./f.]? · βόρβορος, πηλός 'mud, earth' (H.); βαβύη· χείμαρρος, οἱ δὲ πόλις [read πηλός?] 'winter-flowing mud' (H.); βακίας [read βαβύας?]· βόρβορος, πηλός ὑπὸ Ταραντίνων 'mud, earth [Tarent.]' (EM 186,1). ⊲PG?⊳
•ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 20 suggests Messapian origin (with the ending -uos). However, the meaning rather suggests a Pre-Greek word.

βαβύρτας [m.] · ὁ παράμωρος 'an almost foolish man' (H.). ⊲LW⊳ •DER Also a PN (Wilhelm 1909: 321).
•ETYM Cf. Lat. baburrus 'stultus, ineptus'; cf. the type βάρβαρος (?) and E-M s.v. babit.

βαγαῖος [m.] · ὁ μάταιος. ἢ Ζεὺς Φρύγιος. μέγας. πολύς. ταχύς 'foolish/idle; or the Phrygian Zeus; great, many, swift' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM The gloss consists of two or more elements; see Solmsen 1909: 139[1]. One may think of a connection with OP baga- 'god' (cf. ►βάγος). Schmitt Sprache 9 (1963): 38-47 reads Βαλαῖος, but Heitsch Glotta 46 (1968): 74f. returns to Βαγαῖος.

βάγαρον [adj.] · χλιαρόν, Λάκωνες 'warm (Lacon.)' (H.) ⊲?⊳
•ETYM No etymology.

βάγος [m.]? · κλάσμα ἄρτου <ἢ> μάζης. καὶ βασιλεὺς, καὶ στρατηγός. Λάκωνες 'piece of cake or barley-cake; both a king and general (Lacon.)' (H.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Probably a contamination of ϝάγος (ἄγνυμι) and ἀγός (Latte). Pisani KZ 67 (1940): 111 thinks βασιλεύς = OP baga- 'lord, god' (cf. the people's name Βαγαδάονες [Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 232]), but see Petersen AmJPh. 56: 64ff. and Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 197.

βαδᾶς ⇒βάταλος.

βάδην ⇒βαίνω.

βάδιον ⇒βάτος 2.

βάδρυα ⇒μάδρυα.

βάζω [v.] 'to speak, say' often of nonsense (Il.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR Only present stem, except for βέβακται (θ 408) and ἔβαξας (H.).
•DER βάξις 'word, rumour' (Emp.), βάγματα [pl.] (A. Pers. 637 [lyr.]).
•ETYM Cf. βάσκειν· λέγειν (which Latte deletes), κακολογεῖν (H.) (cf. λάσκειν). Possibly from *βάκ-σκειν (Schwyzer: 708; cf. Βάκις). ►βάσκανος can hardly be separated from βάσκειν. See also ►ἀβακής. Onomatopoeic; cf. ►βαβάζω (the objections of DELG are hardly decisive).

βάθρον ⇒βαίνω.

βαθύς [adj.] 'deep, high', metaph. 'rich', etc. (Il.). ⊲IE?⊳
•COMP Many compounds with βαθυ-: e.g. -κολπος, -λειμος (Hom.).
•DER Grades of compar. βαθύτερος, -τατος, rarely βάθιον, βάσσον, βάθιστος (Seiler 1950: 52). Factitive verb βαθύνω (Il.), 'go down, sink (intr.)' (Ph.). On Βαθύλος, -υλλος see Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 218. Besides βένθος 'depth' (Il.) and βάθος [n.] 'id.' (IA, mainly in an ethical sense).
•ETYM Related to βένθος, but there are no further etymological connections; only an alternation *-en- : -n̥- can be reconstructed, which suggests IE origin. βένθος is not analogical after πένθος (as per Schwyzer RhM 81 (1932): 201, accepted by Pok. 465). Not related to βάπτω (and βόθρος), as per Szemerényi Glotta 38 (1960): 211-216, nor to ►βῆσσα, ►βάσσος, or ►βυθός.

βαῖα [f.] 'grandmother' (Str.). ⊲ONOM, PG?⊳
•ETYM Nursery word; might be Pre-Greek (Fur.: 217).

βαῖβυξ, -υκος [m.] 'pelican' (Hdn. Gr., H. ex Philet., Choerob.). ⊲PG(S)⊳

•VAR βαυβυκᾶνες· πελεκᾶνες (H.).
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. ὄρτυξ, ἴβυξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 397). βαῖβυξ seems to be a typical Pre-Greek word (βαυβυκ- by assimilation?).

βαίθ- ⇒βάτος.

βαίνω [v.] 'to go' (Il.). ◁IE *g^{w}em-, *g^{w}eh$_2$- 'go'▷ •VAR Only present stem. Other presents: 1. βάσκω, mostly ipv. βάσκε, -τε (Il.); 2. βιβάσκω (Il.), mostly causative; 3. βίβημι (βίβᾱμι), -άω (to ἔβην, see below) in βιβάς, βιβῶν, βιβᾷ 'stride' (Chantraine 1942: 300); 4. causative βιβάζω (post-Hom.); 5. βιβάσθων in μακρὰ β. (Il.), metrical lengthening of βιβάς at verse end (Chantraine 1942: 327, Shipp 1967: 39). Suppletive aor. ἔβην, fut. βήσομαι (factitive ἔβησα, βήσω after ἔστησα, στήσω), perf. βέβηκα (all Il.).
•COMP ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐμ-βαίνω, etc.
•DER 1. βάσις [f.] 'step, base' (Pi., in compounds Il.) = Skt. gáti- (see below). 2. βατήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'threshold, basis' (Amips., inscr., etc.). 3. -βάτης, -ου [m.] in compounds with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐμ-βάτης, etc. (Il.), also with nominal first element, e.g. στυλο-βά-της; 4. -βατος in compounds: ἀνα- (ἀμ-)βατός, etc. (Il.); as a simplex, βατός 'accessible' (X.) is very rare; see Chantraine 1933: 302ff. Abstracts in -σία are derived from -βάτης and -βατος, like ὑπερβασία 'transgression' (Il.); also denominatives in -εύω and -έω, like ἐμβατεύω, etc. 5. -βάς, -άδος [f.] in ►ἐμβαδές. Hence the adverb βάδην 'step by step'. 6. βάθρον 'basis, seat', etc. (IA), βάθρᾱ. 7. βαθμός and βασμός [m.] 'step, basis', etc. (Hell.; βαθμίς [f.] Pi.). Unrelated is ►βαμβαίνων.
From the root βη-: βῆμα, βᾶμα [n.] 'step', etc. (h. Merc., etc.), = Av. gāman- [n.] 'step'; further, βηλός (βᾱλός) [m.] 'threshold' (Il.), βηλά [n.pl.] = πέδιλα (Panyas.); see Chantraine 1933: 240. Also -βήτης, -ου [m.] in ἐμπυριβή-της (τρίπους) 'standing over the fire' (Ψ 702); see also ►διαβήτης 'circle, etc.' (Ar.) and ►ἀμφισβητέω.
•ETYM The verbal root *g^{w}em- has a number of exact matches in other branches. Greek βαίνω and βάσκω both go back to the root *g^{w}em-. The first is a yod-present, from *g^{w}an*i̯*e/o- < *g^{w}m̥-*i̯*e/o-, identical with Lat. veniō; the second is a present in *ske/o- from *g^{w}m̥-sk-, seen back in Skt. gácchati. The full grade is seen in Go. qiman 'to come' and Skt. ágamam [aor.] 'I went'. Morphologically, βάσις is comparable with Skt. gáti-, Lat. con-ventio, and Go. ga-qumþs. Further, -βατος = Skt. (-)gata- and Lat. -ventus.
The non-presentic forms ἔβην, βήσομαι, βέβηκα, etc. are derived from a different root βη- (βᾱ-) < *g^{w}eh$_2$-. For βίβημι, cf. Skt. jígāti 'he goes'. The aor. ἔβην agrees exactly with Skt. ágām 'I went'; the noun βῆμα corresponds to Av. gā-man- [n.] 'step, pace'. The root pair g^{w}em- :: g^{w}eh$_2$- may be compared with *drem- (see ►δραμεῖν) :: *dreh$_2$- (see ►διδράσκω). See ►βέβαιος, ►βέβηλος, ►βωμός, ►βαστάζω, ►βητάρμων.

βαιός [adj.] 'small, slight' (Parm.). ◁?▷
•VAR Cf. ἠβαιός (Il.).
•DER βαιών, -όνος [m.] a small worthless fish = βλέννος (Epich.), cf. Strömberg 1943: 32, Chantraine 1928: 10. On the meaning of μέτρον παρὰ Ἀλεξανδρεῦσι (H.) see ►βαΐς.

•ETYM The word has been compared with ►ἠβαιός. Fur.: 378 takes the ἠ- as prothetic, allegedly indicative of Pre-Greek origin; in my view, this remains uncertain.

βαΐς [f.] 'palm leaf' (LXX, pap.). ◁LW▷ •VAR Acc. -ιν. Also βάϊον [n.] 'id., measuring rod' (Ev. Jo., pap.).
•DER Adj. βαϊνός (Sm.) 'made of palm leaf', βαινή [f.] 'branch of a palm' (LXX).
•ETYM From Eg. bꜤj, Copt. bai. See Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 245f.

βαίτη [f.] 'shepherds' or peasants' coat or tent made of skins' (Hdt.), also 'covered hall' (Magnesia, Mantinea; see Gossage *Class. Rev.*N.S. 9 (1959): 12f.). ◁PG?▷
•DER βαίτωνα· τὸν εὐτελῆ ἄνδρα 'shabby man' in opposition to βαιτάς· εὐτελὴς γυνή H.; for the gloss βαίτιον see ►βλίτον.
•ETYM Unknown (see Pisani Sprache 1 (1949): 138). Go. paida 'χιτών' and other Gm. words, like OHG pfeit [f.] 'shirt, coat' etc., are borrowed from βαίτη; from Gm. in turn is Fi. paita 'shirt'. With a suffix -k-, we can probably connect Alb. petk 'coat'. If the Albanian continues paitakā*, the word may have been taken over from a European substrate (Fur.: 158 argues for Pre-Greek origin).

βαίτιον [n.] · βοτάνη ἐμφερὴς δικτάμνῳ, ἤγουν γλήχωνι 'plant resembling dittany, or rather pennyroyal' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM βαίτιον was supposed to be a mistake for βλίτιον; see ►βλίτον (not accepted by DELG).

βαίτυλος [m.] kind of (magical) stone (Sotacos of Carystos apud Plin. N. H. 37, 135) which fell from heaven (Dam. Isid. 94, 203). Acc. to Hesychius and others, the stone was given to Kronos instead of Zeus. Also name of a god (Διὶ Βετύλῳ, Dura iii^p). βαίτυλον ἂν κατέπιες Apostol. 9.24, of a greedy person. ◁LW Sem.▷
•VAR ῠ (LSJ Supp.).
•DER βαιτύλιον (Dam., etc.).
•ETYM Zuntz Class. et Med. 8 (1966): 169ff., with special attention for the sources, thought that it was a Mediterranean word, also seen in Sem. bethel, interpreted as 'House of God'. Unfortunately, Zuntz postulates a pan-Mediterranean substrate as a common source, which is hardly acceptable. Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 99f. rather opts for Semitic origin, and likewise Röllig, Dict. Deities Demons (s.v. Bethel). The fact that the word appears very late in Greek, and in the context of northern Syria, makes this the most probable solution: Bayt-el 'House of El'. An old Pre-Greek word is therefore improbable (cf. further West 1997: 294f.; Davidson Herm. 123 (1995): 363-9).

βαῖτυξ ⇒βλέτυες.

βάκανον 1 [n.] 'Althaea cannabina'. ◁?▷
•VAR Cf. βάκανον· τὸ ἀγριοκάναβον (Lex. Parisinus gr. 2419).
•DER βακάνιον (POsl.).
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. λάχανον and see Chantraine 1933: 199. Cf. ►βάκανον 2 and DELG Supp. s.v.

βάκανον 2 [n.] 'Brassica napus oleifera' (pap. I^{p}-II^{p}). ◁LW Eg.▷ •ETYM See ►βάκανον 1.

βάκηλος 1 [m.] 'woman-like man' (Antiph.), 'eunuch in service of Cybele' (Luc.). Βάκηλος· ἀπόκοπος, ὁ ὑπ' ἐνίων γάλλος, οἱ δὲ ἀνδρόγυνος, ἄλλοι παρειμένος, γυναικώδης 'a castrated man, a Gallus or hermaphrodite or a weakened man, a woman-like man' (H.) ◁LW Anat.▷ •ETYM Cf. κάβηλος and κάληβος, with comparable meanings, in Hesychius. Maaß RhM 74 (1925): 472ff. and Nehring Sprache 1 (1949): 165 assume metathesis. Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 192 compares Βάκχος; this is improbable. The word is probably Anatolian (so perhaps Pre-Greek, [Fur.: 116]?). On the meaning, see Lucas RhM 88 (1939): 189f. and Masson RPh. 93 (1967): 229.

βάκηλος 2 [adj.] · ὁ μέγας 'big or great man' (H.). ◁PG(S)▷ •ETYM Fur.: 115 compares βάγιον· μέγα (H.). The suffix -ηλο- is well known in Pre-Greek.

βάκκαρις, -ιδος [f.] 'unguent from asarum' (Semon.). ◁PG?, LW Lyd.?▷ •VAR Acc. -ιν. Also βάκκαρ [n.] = ἄσαρον (Plin.) and βάκχαρι [n.] (Aret.), βάκχαρ [n.] (Ps.-Dsc.).
•ETYM The word is Lydian, according to Sch. A. Pers. 42; cf. βάκκαρις· ... ἄλλοι δὲ μύρον Λυδόν (H.). Whereas Fur.: 128 argues for Pre-Greek origin (words in -αρ are well-represented there), E. Masson 1967: 100f. suggests that it is Anatolian. The word is not of Gaulish origin (WH 1, 91); Lat. baccar etc. are borrowed from Greek.

βακόν [adj.] · πεσόν. Κρῆτες 'falling (Cret.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. The word is not to be derived an unknown verb *βᾰ́κω, aor. *ἔβᾰκον (as per Bechtel 1921, 2: 782), nor is a connection with βάκτρον ('stick', see ►βακτηρία) or βάκται· ἰσχυροί 'strong men' (H.) very likely. Cf. ►ἀβακής.

βάκται [m.] · ἰσχυροί 'strong men' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Fur.: 311 etc., connects the word with Hitt. u̯akturi- 'solid, durable' and Lycaon. Ουανγδαμιοης, etc. (with prenasalization), which remains very uncertain.

βακτηρία [f.] 'staff, stick, scepter (as a symbol of judges)' (Ar.). ◁EUR▷ •VAR Also βακτήριον (Ar.), βακτηρίδιον (H.), βακτηρίς, -ίδος [f.] (Achae. [?]). Cf. βάκτρον [n.] 'stick, cudgel' (A.).
•DIAL Cypr. pa-ka-ra (LSJ Supp.).
•DER Also βάκτρον 'id.', whence βακτρεύω [v.] 'to prop' (arg. metr. in S. OC), βάκτρευμα (E.); βακτηρεύω (Suid.) by influenced of βακτηρία.
•ETYM βακτηρία looks like an abstract formation from *βακτήρ, with a by-form βάκτρον, just as ἀροτήρ beside ἄροτρον. It has been compared with ►βάκται · ἰσχυροί (H.) (doubtful) and ►βακόν (improbable). The word is related to Lat. baculum 'staff, stick', which points to bak-tlo-*. From baculum in turn is borrowed βάκλον 'stick, cudgel' (Aesop.); also OIr. bacc 'hook, crook' etc. Pok. 93 gives other, quite doubtful, forms. Is it a European loanword, given the a-vocalism?

βάκτρον [n.] · κάμηλος 'camel' (H.) ◁LW Iran.▷

•ETYM If the gloss is correct, rather 'Bactrian', as Bactrian camels were famous (Arist. HA 498 b 8).

βάκχος [?] a fish, kind of κεστρεύς 'mullet' (Hicesios apud Ath. 306 e). ◁?▷ •ETYM See Thompson 1947, Saint-Denis 1947 and Strömberg 1943: 96.

βάκχυλος [m.] = ἄρτος σποδίτης 'bread baked in hot ashes' (Nic. Fr. 121). Elean, acc. to H. ◁PG?▷ •ETYM Unexplained. Perhaps PG because of the geminate -κχ- and the suffix -υλ-.

βάλαγρος [m.] a freshwater fish, kind of carp (Arist.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also βάλ(λ)ερος, βαλλιρός, βαλῖνος (βαρῖνος) (Arist.).
•ETYM See Thompson 1947 s.v. amd Strömberg 1943: 39. Fur.: 116 compares βάρακος· ἰχθὺς ποιός 'kind of fish' (H.); this is uncertain. Still, the word is certainly Pre-Greek because of the variants (Fur.: 192).

βαλανεῖον [n.] 'warm bath, bathroom' (Ar.). ◁PG▷
•DER βαλανεύς [m.] 'bath-man' (Ar.), as a basis of further derivatives (cf. κναφεῖον : κναφεύς, etc.)? Also βαλανίτης (-είτης) 'bather' (Plb.). βαλανάριον [n.] (pap., inscr.) with the Latin suffix -ārium.
•ETYM DELG attempts to derive the word from βάλανος 'acorn' as 'stopper', but this is improbable. For a term for bathing in warm water, which is probably an Aegaean custom, we might expect Pre-Greek origin, like ►ἀσάμινθος. The structure of the word is frequent in Pre-Greek: βαλ-αν- (with β-, -α-, -αν-). From βαλανεῖον comes Lat. bal(i)neum.

βάλανος [f.] 'acorn, fruit like an acorn, date', and objects like an acorn, e.g. 'stopper'; also name of a fish (Od.). ◁IE $*g^{w}lh_{2}$- 'acorn'▷ •DER βαλάνιον 'acorn-drink' (Nicoch.), 'suppository' (medic.), βαλανίς 'stopper' (Hp., pap.), βαλανῖτις 'kind of chestnut' (Plin.). βαλανωτός 'fastened with a β.' (Parm.), βαλανώδης, βαλάνινος 'made of dates' (Thphr.), βαλανηρός 'like a β.' (Thphr.).
Verbs: 1. βαλανίζω 'to shake off acorns' (AP, Zen.), 'to administer a suppository' (Hp.); 2. βαλανόω 'to fasten with a β.' (Ar.).
•ETYM Old IE word. The closest kin is Arm. kałin, gen. kałnoy 'acorn', although a pre-form $g^{w}l̥h_{2}$-eno-* (> βάλανος) would also have to give Arm. -an- (so the -in- is probably analogical). Several related forms have a dental suffix: Lat. glāns, -andis ($g^{w}lh_{2}$-nd-*), CS želudь (< želǫdь* < $g^{w}elh_{2}$-end-*), Alb. lend [m.], Tosk lëndë [f.] 'acorn'. A different formation is found in Baltic, e.g. Lith. gìlė 'acorn'. Not related to βάλλω, which derives from $*g^{w}elh_{1}$-.

βάλαρις plant name = βρύον 'oyster-green', λυχνίς 'rose campion' (Ps.-Dsc.), βοτάνη τρίφυλλος 'three-leaved plant' (H.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Also βάλλαρις.
•ETYM Unknown. Perhaps Pre-Greek because of -λ-/ -λλ-.

βαλαύστιον [n.] 'flower of the wild pomegranate' (Dsc., Gal.). ◁PG▷ •VAR βαλώστιον (pap. III^{a}).

•COMP βαλαυστιουργός (Alciphr. 1, 2), form and mg. uncertain, 'dyer'?
•DER βαλαύστ(ρ)ινος (pap.).
•ETYM The variation αυ/ω is typical of Pre-Greek words. Moreover, the meaning already suggests substrate origin. Fur.: 301 compares ►βαλλωτή 'Ballota nigra' (Dsc.).

βαλβίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'rope indicating start and finish of the race-course, turning post' (Att.). ◁PG▷ •DER βαλβιδώδης 'provided with cavities' (Hp.), cf. Wendel Herm. 69 (1934): 345.
•ETYM Formation with -ῖδ- like κρηπίς, κνημίς, etc. βαλβίς is a technical term borrowed from the Pre-Greek (already Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 164ff.).

βάλε [interj.] with optative: 'o that!' (Alcm.). ◁GR▷ •VAR Also ἄβάλε, ἄβάλε (= ἆ βάλε) with ind. and inf. (Call.).
•ETYM Probably an aor.ipv. of βάλλω. Older litt. is mentioned by Frisk, who compares the Lithuanian permissive particle te-gul̃ (quite uncertain).

βαλιός [adj.] 'spotted, dappled' (E.), 'swift' (Opp.; after ἀργός). ◁?▷ •VAR With a different accent (see Schwyzer: 380, 635): Βαλίος, name of a horse of Achilles (Il.).
•DER βαλία· ὀφθαλμία 'an eye-disease' (H.)?
•ETYM Cf. πολιός and other color adjectives in -ι(ϝ)ός (Chantraine 1933: 123). Since *b- is rare in PIE, it has been considered a loanword from another IE language: e.g. Thracian/Phrygian (Solmsen KZ 34 (1897): 72ff.), Illyrian (Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 203), Macedonian (Schwyzer: 68[3], hesitantly). If so, the genuinely Greek cognate would have to be ► φαλιός. Pok.: 118 posits *b^hel-.
Athanassakis Glotta 78 (2000): 1-11 demonstrates with an extensive discussion that the word is of Illyrian origin; cf. Alb. ballë 'horse with a white spot on its forehead'. For the Albanian word, Huld 1984: 40 reconstructs *b^hol-; Demiraj 1997 assumes *b^hh_2l-.

βαλίς [f.] = σίκυς ἄγριος 'wild cucumber' (Ps.-Dsc.). ◁?▷
•DER βαλιδικά (κάρυα 'nut-bearing tree', pap.).
•ETYM See André Ét. class. 24 (1956): 40-2, who connects it with βάλλω, because the fruit throws out its sap and kernel.

βαλλάντιον [n.] 'purse' (com., Thphr.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR βαλάντιον (less frequent).
•ETYM Unknown. Krahe (see Frisk) thought it was a word from the northern Balkans, related to Lat. follis. However, it is perhaps Pre-Greek because of the variation -λ- ~ -λλ-. Cf. ►βαλλίον.

βάλλεκα [?] · ψῆφον 'pebble' (H.). ◁PG(S)▷ •ETYM The connection with Lat. (Iber.) bal(l)ūca 'gold-sand, grain of gold' (WH s.v. balūx; Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 198) is improbable, since the gloss does not refer to gold. Apparently, the word contains a suffix -εκ-, which is very rare (compare ►ἀλώπηξ); therefore, we opt for Pre-Greek origin.

βαλ(λ)ήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'king' (A.), also name of a mythical stone in Phrygia (Ps.-Plu.). ◁LW Anat.▷
•VAR Less certain βαλήν = παλην (inscr. IV^a Lycia).
•DER βαλληναῖον (ὄρος) = βασιλικὸν ὄρος.
•ETYM Unexplained. According to H. and others, the word is Thourian or Phrygian; at any rate, it is an Anatolian loan (Solmsen 1909: 138f.). The word is not related to Lat. dēbilis, nor to Aram. ba'lēna 'our Lord'. The ending -ην is a common feature of Pre-Greek (Fur.: 143).

βαλλητύς [f.] Festival in Eleusis during which stones were thrown (Ath. 9, 406d ff.; see Deubner 1932: 69). ◁?▷ •ETYM Because of the incomprehensible formation of the stem (in spite of fut. βαλλή-σω), the word is probably a loanword adapted to βάλλω by folk etymology (Schwyzer: 291). On the other hand, DELG accepts a morphological analysis βαλλη- + -τυς.

βαλλίζω [v.] = βάλλω 'to throw' (Sophr.), but = κωμάζω, χορεύω 'to celebrate; to dance (Ath., etc.), known from the western colonies (Ath. 8, 362b f.). ◁GR▷ •DER βαλλισμός 'dance' (Alex.). βαλλιστής (Shipp Glotta 39 (1960): 149-52) from which Lat. ballista 'catapult' (since Plaut.); βαλλίστρα 'id.' (Procop.); as a constellation Scherer 1953: 203.
•ETYM Derived from βάλλω. On the meaning, see Paessens RhM 90 (1941): 146ff., Radermacher RhM 91 (1942): 52ff., and DELG. Lat. ballāre 'dance' is related to βαλλίζω, but is not directly borrowed from it.

βαλλίον [n.] = φαλλός 'phallus' (Herod.). ◁LW▷ •DER Βαλλίων PN (Axionic.), Lat. Ballio (Pt.); Thracian people's name Τρι-βαλλοί? (but see Detschew 1957: 526).
•ETYM If cognate with ►φαλλός, the word might be from another language (Thraco-Phrygian?). See Haas Wien. Stud. 71 (1958): 161-7. See also Fur.: 172, who assumes a Pre-Greek root *φαλ/ βαλ- 'Hervorspringendes'. Note also ►βά(μ)βαλον 'αἰδοῖον'.

βάλλις, -εως [f.] a medicinal plant (Xanth. 16). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown. See L. Robert 1937: 156-8. Cf. ►βάλ(λ)αρις, ►βαλλωτή, and ►βαλίς.

βάλλω [v.] 'to throw, hit' (Il.), originally probably 'to reach, hit by throwing'. ◁IE *g^welh$_1$- 'hit by throwing'▷ •VAR Aor. βαλεῖν (βλείην, ξυμβλήτην, ἔβλητο), perf. βέβληκα, -μαι, (βεβολημένος from *βέβολα, Chantraine 1942: 235?), fut. βαλῶ, also βαλλήσω (see ►βαλλητύς).
•DIAL Arc. δέλλω in ἐσ-δέλλω = ἐκ-βάλλω, also ζέλλω, ἔζελεν (EM, see below).
•COMP ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐμ-, ἐκ-βάλλω, etc.
•DER 1. βόλος [m.] 'throwing, net' (A.); in compounds πρόβολος [m.] 'projecting land', etc. (Od.). 2. βολή [f.] 'throw(ing)' (Il.). Many derivatives of βόλος, βολή: see DELG. 3. βέλος [n.] 'throwing weapon' (Il.); cf. ►βελόνη. 4. βέλεμνον 'arrow, javelin' (Il.), see below. 5. -βλής in compounds, e.g. προβλής, -ῆτος 'projecting' (Il.). 6. βλῆμα 'throw, throwing weapon; wound'. 7. -βλησις in compounds, e.g. ἀνάβλησις 'delay' (Il.). 8. -βληστρον (on the σ see Schwyzer: 706) in ἀμφίβληστρον 'net' (Hes.). See ►βαλλητύς, ►βλῆτρον.

Few derived agent nouns; from a simplex only βλήτειρα ὀιστῶν (Alex. Aet.); nouns in -ευς were derived from the compounds, e.g. -βολεύς (Hell.) in ἀμφιβολεύς, etc.; also διαβλήτωρ (Man.) = διάβολος. Formation in -(έ)της in ἑκατηβελέ-της (Il.) < *-g^w*elh*$_1$-teh$_2$-, = ἑκατηβόλος.

Adjectives: from the compounds we have derivations in -βλητικός and -βλήσιμος, and adverbs in -δην, e.g. παραβλήδην (Il.).

Deverbative βολέω has been assumed for the perfect forms in βεβολήατο, βεβολημένος, etc., but see Chantraine 1942: 435.

•ETYM IA βάλλω and Arc. ζέλλω, -δέλλω point to original *g^w-. The geminate -λλ- derives either from a yod-present PGr. *g^w*al-i̯e/o-* or from a nasal present PGr. *g^w*al-n-e/o-*, perhaps for originally athematic *g^w*l̥-n(e)h*$_1$-. The full-grade in Arc. δέλλω (ζέλλω) was taken from the aorist ἔζελεν· ἔβαλεν (H.), which represents an old root aorist *h_1*e-*g^w*elh*$_1$-t (see Harðarson 1993a: 162ff.), while ἔβαλον continues the zero grade of the same root aorist: 3pl. *g^w*lh*$_1$-o-nt. The old full grade βελε- is also found in ►ἑκατηβελέτης and in βέλεμνον (note that Fur.: 151 considers the latter to be a substrate word because of the suffix, and connects πελεμίζω). The form βλη- derives from the zero grade *g^w*lh*$_1$-C-, which is certain for ἔβλητο (see Francis Glotta 52 (1974): 11-30). On the meaning of ἔβλην, see McCullagh KZ 115 (2002): 59-78.

Remarkably, this seemingly old verb has no certain cognates. Av. ni-yrāire probably stands for ni-ynā- (Insler KZ 81 (1967): 259-64), while the appurtenance of ToA klā-, ToB klāy^{ä}- 'to fall', Skt. ud-gūrṇa-, and OIr. atbaill 'dies' is highly uncertain (notwithstanding LIV^2 s.v. *g^w*elh*$_1$-). Not related to Skt. galati 'to drip', OHG quellan 'to bubble up', etc. (= LIV^2 s.v. 2.*g^w*elH-*). See ►βούλομαι, ►βελόνη.

βαλλωτή [f.] a plant, 'Ballota nigra' (Dsc.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳

•ETYM Cf. ►βάλαρις, ►βάλλις, and Strömberg 1940: 151. Fur.: 301 compares ►βαλαύστιον (also -ώστιον); the interchange αυ/ ω is well-attested in Pre-Greek words, as is the suffix -ωτ-.

βαλμός [m.] ([n.]?) · στῆθος 'breast' (H.). ⊲PG⊳

•ETYM Unknown. According to Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 196, the word is Pre-Greek. For the suffix, cf. ►λαιμός. Fur.: 172, 178 convincingly compares φαλὸν· τὸ στερεὸν κύκλωμα τοῦ στέρνου 'the solid circle of the breast' (H.). The variation bertween βαλμ- and φαλ- points to Pre-Greek origin.

βάλσαμον [n.] 'balsam', both the shrub and its oil (Arist.); 'Comiphora Opobalsamum' and 'Chrysanthemum balsamita'. ⊲LW⊳

•VAR See below.

•DER βαλσαμίνη 'βούφθαλμον' (Ps.-Dsk.), 'ὀποβάλσαμον' (Plin.); cf. Strömberg 1944: 38.

•ETYM Assumed to be Semitic, cf. Akk. bašāmu, Hebr. bāśām, and Arab. bašām 'id.' (Lewy 1895: 41). Fur.: 143 etc. argues for Near-Eastern origin on the basis of the -λ- (and Arm. apr(a)sam and the variants πάλσαμον, βλάσαμον, βάρσαμον). However, Schrader-Nehring 1917 (s.v. Balsam) state that the plant originated from the far south (Africa) and became known only after Alexander. On plant names in -αμον, -αμος, see Schwyzer: 494 and Chantraine 1933: 133.

βαμβαίνω [v.] 'to chatter with the teeth, stammer' (K 375, Bion, AP). ⊲ONOM⊳

•ETYM Onomatopoeic verb. Cf. βαμβακύζω (Hippon.), βαμβαλύζω (Phryn., H.); γογγύζω, etc., as well as βαμβαλεῖν (H.). See Weber RhM 82 (1933): 193[2]. Not related to βαίνω, as per Schwyzer: 647. Cf. ►βαβάζειν, ►βάβαλον.

βαμβακεύτριαι [f.] · μαγγανεύτριαι, οἱ δὲ φαρμάκισσαι, οἱ δὲ λαλοῦσαι 'tricksters, others: women using charms, others: chattering women', also τὸ δὲ βαμβακείας χάριν· φαρμακείας χάριν 'thanks to sorcery' (both H.). ⊲LW India?⊳

•VAR βάμβακους τοὺς φάρμακους Κίλικες καλοῦσιν 'the Cilicians call drugs β.' (AB). Also ἀβαμβάκευτος 'not seasoned', of food (Pyrgion apud Ath.), for which there are no obvious cognates.

•ETYM A word for medicine or charms; the meaning 'λαλοῦσαι' must have arisen secondarily. The basis is identical with that of the word for 'cotton', ►βαμβάκιον; cotton was thought to have a medicinal effect.

βαμβάκιον [n.] 'cotton' (Suidas s.v. πάμβαξ). ⊲LW India?⊳

•VAR παμβακίς (AP 6,254,6, Myrin.), πάμβαξ (Suid.).

•DER βαμβακοειδής, v.l. for βομβυκ- (Dsc. 3,16).

•ETYM Cotton is first mentioned in an inscription by Sanherib. Hdt. 3,106 describes it as Indian. Theophrastus says that it was found near the Persian Gulf. We find the word in MP pambak, whence Arm. bambak, Oss. bæmbæg. From Greek were borrowed Lat. bambax, bambagium with Ital. bambagia; through the influence of βόμβυξ (because of the formal and semantic resemblance?), Ital. bombagio, MoFr. bombasin. Another Gr. designation is ἐριόξυλον; cf. MoHG Baumwolle. Pliny uses the word gossypium. Unclear is whether ►βύσσος in Pausanias also means 'cotton'. For 'cotton', see also ►κάρπασος. Cf. ►βαμβακεύτριαι.

βάμβαλον · ἱμάτιον· καὶ τὸ αἰδοῖον. Φρύγες 'a garment; genitals (Phrygian)' (H.). ⊲?⊳

•ETYM Probably two words. See L. Robert 1963: 153 (the treatment of Campanile SSL 3 (1963): 83-85 is incorrect).

βαμβραδών, -όνος [f.] kind of sprat (Epich.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳

•VAR βεμβράς (Aristomen.), μεμβράς; βεβράδα· ἀθερίνην 'kind of smelt' (H.).

•DER μεμβραφύα s.v. ►ἀφύη.

•ETYM The word has been derived from βράζω, by comparison with βαμβρασμός· καχλασμός 'splashing of water' and βαμβράσσει· ὀργίζεται 'is angry' (Cyr.), under the improbable assumption that the fish was named after the sound it makes (e.g. Strömberg 1943: 63ff.). Given the formal variants, the word is rather Pre-Greek. For the formation, cf. animal names like ►τενθρηδών, τερηδών (Schwyzer: 529f., Chantraine 1933: 360f.).

βάναυσος, -ον [adj., m.] 'of an artisan; artisan'; metaph. 'vulgar' (IA). ⊲PG(S)⊳

•DER βαναυσία.

•ETYM According to EM 187, 40, a haplology from *βαύναυσος, in turn a compound of ►βαῦνος 'furnace' and ►αὔω 'scoop, light a fire'. Although this would fit Hesychius' explanation βαναυσία· πᾶσα τέχνη διὰ πυρός. κυρίως δὲ ἡ περὶ τὰς καμίνους. καὶ πᾶς τεχνίτης χαλκεὺς ἢ χρυσοχόος βάναυσος 'any art using fire; in common usage, the art using furnaces; also, any metal worker or goldsmith is a βάναυσος', we have to disregard that as folk etymology (Kretschmer Glotta 21 (1933): 178). Evidently, it is rather a Pre-Greek word. For the suffix -σος, cf. κόμπασος and ὄρυξος (see Pre-Greek).

βαννάται [f.] · αἱ λοξοὶ καὶ μὴ ἰθυτενεῖς ὁδοὶ παρὰ Ταραντίνοις· τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ καὶ βάνvατροι 'slanting and non-straight roads (Tarant.); the same as βάνvατροι' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM DELG suggests that β- represents ϝ-, and that the gloss contains *ϝαρν-, as in βάννεια 'piste des moutons'. Uncertain.

βανωτός [m.] 'vase used as a measure' (pap. III[a], Callix.). ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM Pre-Greek; for the suffix -ωτ-, see Pre-Greek (the -ω probably goes back to -au-, which makes comparison with βάναυσος attractive).

βάπτω [v.] 'to immerse, so as to temper or color' (Od.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. βάψαι.
•DER 1. βαφή 'dipping, temper, dye' (IA); 2. βάμμα 'dye' (Pl.); 3. βάψις 'id' (Antiph.). βαφεύς 'dyer' (Pl.), βαφεῖον (Str.); verb βαπτίζω, which appears metathesized in βιπτάζω (Epich.).
•ETYM Often considered to be a yod-present comparable to ON kvefja 'to press down, immerse, choke' and OSw. kvaf [n.] 'depth' (thus Frisk). However, this does not explain the -α-. The by-form βύπτειν· βαπτίζειν (H.) is perhaps formed analogically after δύπτειν (see ►δύω) or κύπτειν; it does not reflect an original zero grade.

βάραθρον [n.] 'cleft, abyss'. ⊲PG⊳
•VAR βέρεθρον (Hom.; Aeol.?, Chantraine 1942: 114), from which (through *βέρθρον) βέθρον (Euph.), Arc. ζέρεθρον (representing δ-; cf. ζέλλω = δέλλω s.v. ►βάλλω).
•ETYM The connection with ►βιβρώσκω 'devour' cannot be maintained: *g^werh_3- / *g^wrh_3- would give *δερο-/ βρω-, *βαρ(ο)-. In view of the variants, the word is rather Pre-Greek, like ►φάραγξ; see Beekes 1969: 193 (on alleged Illyrian cognates, see Krahe IF 58 (1942): 220).

βάρακος [m.] · ἰχθὺς ποιός H., a freshwater fish in a Boeotian inscr. ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Cf. βαρκαῖος (Theognost.).
•ETYM Cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. and Lacroix 1938: 52. Fur.: 116 compares βάλαγρος(?).

βάραξ, -κος [m.] a kind of cake (Epil.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •VAR βήρηξ (Ath.; H. also βήραξ); πάραξ (Test. Epict.); βάρακες· τὰ προφυράματα τῆς μάζης 'dough kneaded in advance for a cake' · Ἀττικοὶ δὲ βήρηκας· δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ τὴν τολύπην 'it also designates the ball-shaped cake' (H.).

•ETYM A foreign word (thus already Bechtel 1921, 2: 368), and typically Pre-Greek (suffix -ακ-, variants β/π). Cf. ►βάρηκες.

βάρβαξ · ἱέραξ παρὰ Λίβυσι 'hawk, falcon (Libyan)' (H.). A PN on Thera, Masson RPh. 93 (1967): 231. ⊲?⊳ •ETYM See Fauth Herm. 96 (1968): 257f.

βάρβαρος, -ον [m.] 'foreign(er), non-Greek', also adj. 'uncivilized, raw' (IA). ⊲ONOM⊳ •COMP βαρβαρόφωνος 'of foreign speech' (Il.).
•DER βαρβαρικός 'foreign' (Simon., Th., X., Arist., etc.) with βαρβαρίκιον name of a garment (pap.); βαρβαρώδης (sch., Tz.).
Denominative verbs: 1. βαρβαρίζω 'to behave like a foreigner, to side with the barbarians = Persians' (Hdt.), whence βαρβαρισμός 'use of foreign language or customs, language mistakes' (Arist., Hell.), adv. βαρβαριστί 'in a foreign way, in foreign language' (Ar., Plu. et al.); 2. βαρβαρόομαι 'to become a barbarian, become uncivilized' (S.).
•ETYM An onomatopoeic reduplicated formation, which originally referred to the language of the foreigner. One may compare Skt. (post-Vedic) barbara- 'stammer', a designation of non-Aryan peoples. In spite of Sumer. barbar 'foreigner' not of Babylonian or Sumerian origin. From βάρβαρος was borrowed Lat. barbarus. Comparable formations in other IE languages are mentioned in Pok. 91f. and Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 217 s.v. balbalā-.

βάρβιτος [f.] or [m.] musical instrument with many strings (Pi.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •VAR Later also -ον [n.], also βάρμιτος (EM 188, 21, called Aeolic); also βάρμος (Phillis apud Ath. 14, 636c) and βάρωμος (Ath.).
•ETYM Foreign word (Phrygian? See Str. 10, 3, 17). Grošelj Slavistična Revija 4 (1951): 250 connects it with φόρμιγξ, as does Fur.: 173, etc. The word is most probably Pre-Greek, with a suffix -ιτ-. Perhaps the strange -ω- in the variant βάρωμος can be explained from *bar^wm-? Otherwise, one might consider the possibility that this -ω- is the result of epenthesis.

βαρβός [m.] = μύστρον 'spoon' (Ar. fr. 341). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

βαρδῆν [v.] · τὸ βιάζεσθαι γυναῖκας. Ἀμπρακιῶται 'to coerce women (Ambrac.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. Not convincing are the solutions by Pisani RhM 97 (1945): 62[14] (of Illyrian origin, from *b^her- 'bear', which would also be the source of Lat. forda 'pregnant'), Bechtel 1921, 2: 282 (as original *ϝαρδῆν related to ἄρδαλος 'dirt'), and Pischel BB 7 (1883): 334 (to Skt. mṛdnā́ti 'squeezes').

βάρηκες [m.]/[f.]? = τὰ οὖλα τῶν ὀδόντων, σιαγόνες, τολύπη 'the gums, cheeks; clew of wool', etc. (EM 188, 37ff.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR ►βάρακες 'τολύπη' 'ball-shaped cake' (H.).

•ETYM Cf. ►βαβρῆκες 'id.'. Is the word from Pre-Gr. bar*^{w}-ak-? or simply reduplicated, i.e. ba-b[a]r-ak-*?

βᾶρις 1 [f.] 'Egyptian boat, a kind of raft' (A.). ◀LW Eg.▶
•VAR Gen. -ιδος, -ιος.
•ETYM The word is of Egyptian origin, cf. Copt. barī 'boat' (Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 241). From βᾶρις is borrowed Lat. bāris, barca (< bārica*) 'bark'. Fur.: 325, on the other hand, considers all these words to be loans from a Mediterranean substrate. On the 'strengthened' form βούβαρις (Philist. 56), see Chantraine 1928: 16.

βᾶρις 2 [f.] 'large (fortified) house' (LXX). Toponym, see L. Robert 1963: 14-6, 128. ◀LW Illyr.?▶
•VAR Gen. -ιδος, -εως.
•ETYM Probably Illyrian (Krahe 1955: 39, with ā from au); cf. ►βαυρία · οἰκία EM (Messapian) and ►βύριον. Alternatively, we may consider the possibility that the word derives from a Pre-Greek form bar*^{w}-, which would explain the interchange βαρ- ~ βαυρ- ~ βυρ-.

βαρῑ́της [m.] name of a bird (Dionys. Av. 3, 2). ◀?▶
•ETYM Unknown; any connection with ►βᾶρις 2 is not compelling.

βάριχοι · ἄρνες 'lambs, sheep' (H.). ⇒ἀρήν.

βαρνάμενος ⇒μάρναμαι.

βᾶρος [m.] kind of spice (Mnesim. 4, 62). ◀?▶
•VAR βάρον [n.].
•ETYM Unknown.

βαρύες [m.]/[f.]? · δένδρα 'trees' (H.). ◀?▶ •ETYM Unknown. The word is hardly related to βορέας, as per Osthoff 1901: 48. See ►ἄβλαροι.

βάρ<υ>κα · αἰδοῖον παρὰ Ταραντίνοις. καὶ περόνη 'the genitals [Tarant.]; a pin' (H.). ◀?▶ •ETYM Unknown. Completely uncertain is the idea of von Blumenthal 1930: 10f. that the word is Illyrian-Messapian, related to Lat. feriō, forō, and to φάρυγξ, etc. Comparison of the suffix (Lat. verrūca) is pointless, since the -u- is a conjecture.

βαρύς [adj.] 'heavy', of tone 'low, deep' (Il.). ◀IE g*^{w}rh$_{2}$-u- 'heavy'.▶ •COMP βαρύ-γδουπος (Pi.), etc.
•DER βαρύτης, -ητος [f.] (Att.). Denominatives: 1. βαρύνω 'weigh down, oppress' (Il.); 2. βαρύθω 'be weighed down' (Il.); 3. βαρέω see below. Further βάρος [n.] 'heavy weight' (as a simplex Hdt.; in compounds (χαλκο-, οἰνο-βαρής) already Il.). The ptc. βεβαρηώς (οἴνῳ βεβαρηότες, -ότα γ 139, τ 122) cf. οἰνοβαρής (Α 225; metrically lengthened οἰνοβαρείων ι 374, κ 555), from which οἰνοβαρέω (Thgn.); thence (?) βεβαρημένος (Pl.); βόρημαι (Sapph. Supp. 25, 17) with Aeol. vocalism; βαρέω (Hp. Morb.).

•ETYM The word is identical in formation with Skt. gurú- and Go. kaurus 'heavy', whereas Lat. gravis reflects graus* < g*^{w}reh$_{2}$us. The full grade is seen in the Skt. compar. gárīyān. Lat. brūtus 'heavy, brute', which goes back to an extended g*^{w}rH-u-to-, is originally an Oscan word. Cf. ►βριαρός, ►βρίθω.

βάρ(ω)μος ⇒βάρβιτος.

βασαγίκορος [adj.] · ὁ θᾶσσον συνουσιάζων (Hippon.). ◀?▶ •ETYM Is this word corrupt? See O. Masson 1962: 173. Shall we compare ἀψίκορος 'quickly satiated' s.v. ►ἅπτω?

βάσανος [f.] 'touchstone, examination, inquiry (by torture), agony' (Pi.). ◀LW Eg. (Lyd.)▶ •DER βασανίτης λίθος (H., Ptol.). Denominative βασανίζω 'put to the test, inquire (by torture)' (IA).
•ETYM From Eg. baḫan, a stone, which was used by the Egyptians as a touchstone of gold. It came to Greece via Lydia (Λυδία λίθος, B. 22); the σ for ḫ is unclear. See Sethe Berl.Ak.Sb. 1933: 894ff.; Kretschmer Glotta 24 (1936): 90. In Plin. 36, 58, basaniten became basalten by mistake, which is the origin of basalt. See Niedermann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 127f.

βασιλεύς [m.] 'king (especially the Persian king), prince' (Il.). ◀PG(S)▶ •DIAL Myc. qa-si-re-u /g^{w}asileus/; fem. qa-si-re-i-ja; qa-si-re-wi-jo-te /g^{w}asilewjontes/.
•DER Feminine forms: βασίλεια (Od.); βασιλίς (S.), βασιληΐς (Man., Epigr. Gr. 989, 3), βασίλισσα (inscr. Athens 337^{a}, com.; formed to stems in -ικ- from words like Κίλισσα, Φοίνισσα, etc.); βασίλιννα 'wife of the ἄρχων βασιλεύς in Athens' (D.; cf. Κόριννα, Φίλιννα, etc., hypocoristic, Schwyzer 491; differently Chantraine 1933: 205). Diminutive βασιλίσκος, also name of a snake, fish, etc. (Hp.; cf. Strömberg 1943: 91f.), adjectives βασιλήϊος (Od.), βασίλειος (Att.); fem. also βασιληΐς (Il.); substantivized ntr. βασιλήϊον, βασίλειον, 'king's palace' (IA). Denominative verb: βασιλεύω (Il.).
•ETYM Beside βασιλεύς, Greek has two other words for 'king', ►κοίρανος and ►ἄναξ. βασιλεύς is the youngest; see Wackernagel 1916: 209ff. The word is no doubt of Pre-Greek origin (i.e., not a loanword from another country); labiovelars are well-known in this language.

βάσκανος, -ον [adj., m.] 'one who bewitches, sorcerer, slanderer' (Att.). ◀EUR?▶
•DER βασκανία, βασκάνιον 'bewitching, witchcraft'; βασκοσύνη 'id.' (Poet. de herb., mag. pap.), for βασκ(αν)οσύνη. Denominative verb βασκαίνω 'to bewitch'.
•ETYM Generally connected with βάσκειν· λέγειν, κακολογεῖν, and further with ►βάζω. However, βάσκειν in the sense 'κακολογεῖν' may have been influenced by βάσκανος itself. Kretschmer 1896: 248[4] unconvincingly considered the word to be a borrowing from a Thraco-Illyrian representative of φημί, φάσκω. One has also tried to connect Lat. fascinum, which cannot be a loanword from Greek; perhaps the Latin and the Greek have a common origin in a substrate. Cf. further ►βασκευταί, ►βάσκιοι.

βασκαρίζειν [v.] · σκαρίζειν, Κρῆτες 'to jump (Cret.)' (H.).
•ETYM DELG thinks it is derived from βάσκω after the verbs in -αρίζω, but this hardly explains the meaning 'jump'.

βάσκα ⇒μακέλη.

βασκᾶς [m.] kind of duck (Ar. Av. 885, v. l. Arist. HA 593b 17), ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Acc. -ᾶ. Also βοσκάς, -άδος (Arist. ibid., Alex. Mynd. apud Ath. 9, 395d, and φασκάς, -άδος [f.] (Alex. Mynd. ibid.); H. gives all forms.
•ETYM Cf. ἀτταγᾶς, ἐλασᾶς, and other bird names; see Chantraine 1933: 31. The ο of the variant βοσκάς can hardly be due to influence of βόσκω; nor is the β- (compared to the φ- of φασκάς) Thracian or Illyrian. For the gloss βοσκάς· φασκάς. Λίβιοι (H.), Latte suggests: "<Ιλ>λυριοι? (propter β pro φ)". However, the variation has to be taken seriously: it clearly points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 168; unconvincing, however, is his link with Bulg. patka, Span. pato, p. 251; Sardian busciu, adduced by Thompson 1895 s.v. βοσκάς, is nothing better).

βασκαύλης [m./f.] an unknown utensil (POxy. 1, 109, 22, III-IV[p]). ◂LW Celt.▸
•VAR Perhaps also ►μασκαυλης.
•ETYM Grenfell-Hunt adduce Lat. vasculum, but this would hardly yield the Greek form. WH considered it a loan from Lat. bascauda (also m-) 'metal washing-basin' (Mart.). Thus Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 660, but his proposal that the Greek word is due to a mis*reading* of Λ for Δ is improbable; it could well be a phonetic development. Fur.: 212 thinks that the word is Pre-Greek, as shown by b/m and d/l. He further recalls Talmud. maskel 'basin', which would confirm its Mediterranean origin. However, Martialis 14, 99 appears to prove that the word is Celtic (or perhaps a European substrate word).

βασκευταί [m.]/[f.]? · φασκίδες, ἀγκάλαι 'fascides; bundles' (H.). ◂EUR▸ •VAR Cf. βάσκιοι· δεσμαὶ φρυγάνων 'bundles of firewood' (H.).
•ETYM It has been suggested that the word is Macedonian, cognate with Lat. fascia 'binding'. On the assumption that φασκίδες is the genuinely Greek reflex, Szemerényi KZ 71 (1954): 212f. proposed that it is Illyrian. However, the word rather seems to come from a European substrate; see Beekes 2000: 21-31. Not related to ►φάσκωλος.

βάσκω ⇒βάζω and βαίνω.

βασσάρα [f.] 'fox' (sch. Lyc. 771), 'dress of a Bacchante' (EM, AB, H.) from the skin of a fox; 'bacchante' (sch. Lyc. 771, EM), 'impudent woman' (Lyc., EM). ◂LW Eg.▸
•DER βασσάριον 'fox' (Hdt. 4, 192; Libyan), βασσαρεύς name of Dionysus (Hor.), βάσσαρος = βάκχος (Orph.); denominative verb ἀνα-βασσαρέω 'to break forth in Bacchic frenzy' (Anacr.).
•ETYM Herodotus calls the word Libyan, which seems to be confirmed by the etymological connection with Eg. wasar, Copt. bašor (Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 660, without reference). Szemerényi further tries to maintain the connection with Hitt. u̯aššuu̯ar 'clothing', rightly rejected by Neumann 1961: 19. Fur.: 257[36] notes that βάσσος = βασσάρα (EM), and that -αρ(ος) is a frequent Pre-Greek suffix.

βάσσος [n.] · οὐδετέρως· ἡ βῆσσα 'a neuter word meaning glen, vale' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Schwyzer RhM 81 (1932): 199f. (who argues against the accentuation βᾶσσος) proposes *βάθ-σος. However, beside βῆσσα, we find Dor. βᾶσσα, so that βάσσος could be a variant of βῆσσα and βᾶσσα; if so, Pre-Greek origin becomes likely. The suggestion of Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 258f. that Lat. bassus 'lowly' is borrowed from this word remains quite uncertain. See ►βῆσσα, ►βαθύς.

βαστά [n.pl.] · ὑποδήματα. Ἰταλιῶται 'sandals (Ital.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Johansson IF 19 (1906): 121 takes βαστά as Messapian and connects it with OHG, etc. bast 'bark'. Jacobsohn ZfdA 66 (1952-1953): 238ff. thinks it is an Iranian (Scythian) Wanderwort, i.e. Av. and OP basta- 'bound' (cf. πεῖσμα, πενθερός); this is uncertain. Not related to Lat. fascis (see ►βασκευταί). See Meid IF 69 (1965): 232.

βαστάζω [v.] 'to lift up, raise' (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. βαστάσαι, late βαστάξαι.
•DER βάσταγμα 'load' (E.), βασταγή 'transport' (Lyd.). Here also βάστραχαις· τοὺς τραχήλους. Βοιωτοί 'necks, throats (Boeot.)' (H.) (EM), from βάστακας (from *βάσταξ, cf. *μάσταξ and Bechtel 1921, 1: 303) contaminated with τράχηλος; further βαστραχηλίζει· τραχηλίζει 'twist the neck, overpower' (H.) and βαστραχαλίσαι· τραχηλιάσαι; from carrying on one's back. βαστέρνιον from Lat. basterna.
•ETYM Unknown. Connection with βαίνω (see Schwyzer 1937: 70) is not convincing.

βασυνίας [m.] kind of sacrificial cake, from the island Hecate near Delos (Semos 3). ◂PG▸ •DER βασυμνιάτης 'baker of β.' (inscr. Corycos, Lycia).
•ETYM See von Wilamowitz 1931: 264. Fur.: 245 adduces the variant with -μν-, which proves Pre-Greek origin.

βάταλος [m.] · καταπύγων καὶ ἀνδρόγυνος, κίναιδος, ἔκλυτος 'a lewd man, hermaphrodite, catamite; lascivious' (H.); = πρωκτός 'anus' (Eup. 82 apud Harp.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also βάτταλος; βατᾶς, βαδᾶς and σπάταλος 'wanton, lascivious'; see below.
•DER βαταλίζομαι 'to live like a β.' (Theano), -ίζω (τὰ ὀπίσθια, of a horse) 'to turn to and fro' (Hippiatr.). Shortened (cf. Chantraine 1933: 31f.) βατᾶς· ὁ καταφερής. Ταραντῖνοι 'lecherous person (Tarantinian)' (H.); βαδᾶς· κίναιδος ὡς Ἀμερίας (H.). Demosthenes was called Βάτ(τ)αλος in his youth (D. 18, 180; Aeschin. 1, 126; 2,99), which perhaps referred to a speech-defect, namely pronouncing λ for ρ and thus βατταλίζειν for βατταρίζειν 'to stammer'; see Holst Symb. Oslo. 4 (1926): 11ff.
•ETYM There has been an attempt to connect the word with βατέω 'mount'; however, that βαδᾶς would be formed after βάδην, βαδίζω is quite improbable. Fur.: 154, etc. convincingly connects it with ►σπάταλος, which indicates Pre-Greek origin, along with the interchange ττ/ τ/ δ.

βατάνη •ETYM See ►πατάνη.

βατέω •VAR βατεύω ⇒βαίνω.

βᾰτιᾰ́κη [f.] a cup (Diph.). ◂LW Iran.?▸
•ETYM The word is Persian, according to Ath. 784a. Rudgren Glotta 38 (1958): 10-4, compared MoP bād(i)yah < bātiaka-*. Thence the Lat. LW batioca. Fur.: 179 compares βάτος, βάδος 'measure for liquids' (LXX), and the suffix -ακη (158[64]), but see ►βάτος 2.

βατίς [f.] 'skate, ray' (Epich.); also a bird, 'stone chat'? (Arist.); also 'samphire, Crithmum maritimum' (Plin.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM If the word is identical with ►βότις, the vowel interchange points to Pre-Greek origin, which is to be expected for a fish name anyhow.

βάτος 1. [m.] and [f.] 'bramble, Rubus ulmifolius' (Od.). Also a fish, 'skate' (Epich.), because of its spines (Strömberg 1943: 47). ◂LW▸ •VAR βάτον [n.] 'blackberry' (D. S.).
•DER βατία (βατιά?) 'thicket' (Pi.); βάτιον 'mulberry on Salamis' (Parth.); βατίς 'skate' (Epich.); name of a bird (Arist. HA 592b 17: ὄρνις σκωληκοφάγος); plant name 'Crithmum maritimum' (Plin.); βατόεις 'thorny' (Nic.). Not here Βατίεια = σῆμα Μυρίνης (B 813) and the PN Βάτεια (Hellanic.), which are rather Illyrian.
•ETYM Bertoldi Glotta 21 (1933): 258ff. points to ►μαντία 'blackberry', identified as Dacian by Dsc. 4, 37, as well as several other plant names pointing to ma(n)t-*, e.g. Alb. man 'mulberry', Gheg mand; see also Fur.: 209, 272. A widespread Mediterranean word. See also DELG.

βάτος 2 [m.] a measure for liquids (LXX). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Also βάδος.
•ETYM Probably a loan from Semitic (Hebr. bath); see LSJ Supp. s.v. βαίθ, βαίθαρα. Cf. ►βατιάκη.

βάτραχος [m.] 'frog' (Hdt.). Also name of a fish, 'Lophius piscatorius' (Arist.), see Strömberg 1943: 92f. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Ion. βάθρακος with displacement of aspiration, a common phenomenon (cf. Lejeune 1972: 59f.); βότραχος (Hp.) and βρόταχος (Xenoph. 40, see Bechtel 1921(3): 109); βρατάχους· βατράχους (H.); further βρούχετος· ... βάτραχον δὲ Κύπριοι (H.), perhaps after βρυχάομαι; βύρθακος· βάτραχος (H.); βρύτιχοι· βάτραχοι μικροὶ ἔχοντες οὐράς 'frogs having small tails' (H.) (cf. βρύω?); βριαγχόνην· βάτραχον. Φωκεῖς (H.), a mistake for *βρ(α)τ-αγχ-?; βρόγχος· βάτραχος (H.) may also be a mistake; also βλίκανος, βλίκαρος, βλίχα(ς) (H., EM, Suid.); βλίταχος (H.). βάβακοι· ὑπὸ Ἠλείων τέττιγες 'cicalas', ὑπὸ Ποντικῶν δὲ βάτραχοι (H.), see ►βαβάζω.
•DER Diminutive βατράχιον (Paus.), also plant name 'Ranunculus' (Hp., Dsc., cf. Strömberg 1940: 119); βατραχίσκοι· μέρος τι τῆς κιθάρας 'a part of the lyre' (H.); on the suffixes Chantraine 1933: 408. βατραχίτης, -ῖτις (λίθος; because of the color; Plin.).
•ETYM Several variants are due to folk etymology or taboo, and also to simple phonetic variation. A priori, a local (i.e. Pre-Greek) form is to be expected for all of these forms; the variation α/ ο points to this. This holds for βαρδακος as well, if this is what must be read in H. for βαρακος· βάραχος (Fur.: 184[2]; see Latte). The form may in origin have been onomatopoeic βρατ-αχ- (Grošelj Živa Ant. 6 (1956): 235), with which compare βρεκεκεξ; or even brt-ak-*, from which the forms with -υ- may have originated (βύρθακος, βρύτιχος). The hopeless forms βριαγχόνη, βρόγχος (is this form to be read for βρούχετος?) contain a (misread) prenasalized *(βρατ)αγχος, which would also point to Pre-Greek origin. The forms βλικ/χ- and βάβακοι are etymologically unrelated. For the meaning 'hearth', Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 660 refers to Alb. vatër.

βατταρίζω [v.] denoting a speech-defect, perhaps 'to stammer' (Hippon.). Cf. Holst Symb. Oslo. 4 (1926): 11. ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Cf. βατταρισμοῖς· φλυαρίαις 'nonsense' and Βάττος· ...τρυλόφωνος, ἰσχνόφωνος 'feeble; thin- or weak-voiced' (H.).
•DER βατταρισμός (Phld.). Cf. Βάτταρος (Herod.).
•ETYM The word is comparable to βαττολογέω 'stammer' (Ev. Matt. 6, 7, Simp.) together with βαττολογία· ἀργολογία, ἀκαιρολογία 'ill-timed speech' (H.). Cf. the PN Βάττος (Hdt. 4, 155). See also ►βάταλος. Is it onomatopoeic? Cf. Lat. butubatta; on βαττολογέω, see especially Blass and Debrunner 1959: Anh. § 40. See also Pok. 95.

βαυβάω [v.] 'to sleep' (E. Fr. 694, etc.), also factitive 'to put to sleep' = κοιμίζω (H.). ◂ONOM▸ •DER βαυβών [m.] = ὄλισβος (Herod.), also βαυβώ· τιθήνη Δήμητρος 'nurse of D.'. σημαίνει δὲ καὶ κοιλίαν, ὡς παρ' Ἐμπεδοκλεῖ (fr. 153) 'it means the womb/belly too, like in Emp.' (H.); see Headlam and Knox 1922 to Herod. 6, 19; on the formation Schwyzer: 478. βαυβαλίζω 'to make sleep' (Alex. 229) see ►βαυκαλάω.
•ETYM A nursery word.

βαυβυκᾶνες ⇒βαῖβυξ.

βαΰζω [v.] 'to bark; revile, cry, etc.' (A.). ◂ONOM▸ •DIAL Dor. βαΰσδω.
•DER Also βαυβύζω (pap.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic form from βαύ βαύ (Com. adespota 1304). Cf. Lat. baubor 'bark', Lith. baũbti 'cry', of cows, etc.

βαυκαλάω [v.] 'to lull to sleep, nurse' (Crates).
•DER βαυκάλη 'cradle' (Sor.).
•ETYM Denominative from βαύκαλος, known only from EM 192, 20: βαύκαλον· μαλακιζόμενον, τρυφερόν, καὶ ὡραϊστόν 'softened, effeminate, affected'. This in turn is a derivation from ►βαυκός, cf. ►βαυβάω.

βαυκάλιον [n.] vase with a narrow neck (pap.). ◂LW?▸ •ETYM One supposes Egyptian origin. See Nencioni Riv. degli stud. or. 19 (1940): 98ff. DELG suggests βαυκαλάω, which does not seem probable. On the forms (including MoFr. bocal) Leroy-Molinghen Byzantion 35 (1965): 214-20. Cf. καυκάλιον (s.v. ►καῦκος) and ►βῖκος.

βαυκός [adj.] 'affected, prudish' (Arar. 9). ◂PG?▸

•COMP βαυκοπανοῦργος (Arist. EN 1127b 27).
•DER βαυκίδες [pl.] 'women's shoes' (Com., Herod.), βαυκίζομαι, -ίζω 'to play the prude, θρύπτεσθαι' (Alex. Com.); βαυκισμός 'a dance' (Poll.). PN Βαῦκος. On ►βαυκαλάω, see s.v.
•ETYM Cf. γλαυκός, σαυκός, and φολκός for the suffix. It is probably a Pre-Greek adjective (but the comparison in Fur.: 325 with ψαυκρός, μαυκυρός is not evident). It is uncertain whether the gloss 'women's shoes' belongs to this lemma. For Iranian comparanda, see Rundgren Orientalia Suecana 6 (1957): 60f.

βαῦνος [m.] 'furnace', also = χυτρόπους '(stand for a) pot' (Eratosth., Max. Tyr., etc.). ⋖PG?⋗
•VAR Cf. βαύνη· κάμινος ἢ χωνευτήριον 'furnace' (H.).
•ETYM Technical term without etymology. Fur.: 236 compares αὖνος· κάμινος.

βαυρία ⇒βύριον, βᾶρις.

βδάλλω [v.] 'to milk (cows)' (Pl.). ⋖PG⋗
•VAR Mostly present (rare aorists βδάλας, βδήλαιο). Also βδέλλω (sch. Theocr. 11, 34) (cf. βδέλλα 'leech').
•DER βδάλσις 'suction' (Gal.). Difficult βδαλοί· ῥαφίδες 'garfish, Belone acus' θαλάσσιαι. καὶ φλέβες κρισσώδεις 'varicose veins' (H.) (not a mistake for βελόνη); βελλαι 'id.' (H.), misread for βδαλοί, or a variant of *βδελλαι?
•ETYM It is deceptive that βδάλλω looks like a zero grade of βδέλλ-(α). The meaning 'leech' and the group βδ- show that it is a Pre-Greek word, as does the geminate -λλ- (perhaps bdalʸ-, or bʸalʸ-*). If βδαλοί does belong here, it exhibits the Pre-Greek interchange -λλ/λ-.

βδέλλιον [n.] '(aromatic) gum of the oriental wine palm' (Dsc., Plin.). ⋖LW Sem.⋗
•VAR Also βδέλλα (J.).
•ETYM An Oriental loan; cf. Hebr. bᵉdōlaḥ and Akk. budulḫu. See Lewy 1895: 45 and Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 84f.

βδελυρός [adj.] 'disgusting, loathsome' (Ar.). ⋖PG⋗ •DER βδελύσσομαι (-ττ-), fut. βδελύξομαι 'feel a loathing' (Hp.), act. -ύσσω, -ύττω (LXX) together with βδελυγμία (Cratin.), etc. Verbal adjective βδελυκτός (βδελύκτροπος from *βδελυκτο-τροπος A.). PN Βδελυ-κλέων (Ar.), βδελυχρός (Epich.).
•ETYM βδελυρός is mostly explained as formed from βδέ-ω with a suffix -λυ- (as in θῆ-λυ-ς), but this is hardly possible. A verb in -εω does not yield a stem in -ε to which suffixes can be added. Moreover, a suffix -λυ- probably does not exist: θῆλυς seems rather to be built on a λ-stem (DELG, Frisk), and -λυ- was certainly no longer productive (Chantraine 1933: 121). One scholar assumed a suffix -λ- in βδέλλων· τρέμων ἢ βδέων, βδέλεσθαι· κοιλιολυτεῖν (H.; the forms are doubted) and in βδόλος 'stench' (Com. Adesp. 781; cf. γαλεόβδολον, s.v. ►γαλέη). However, these forms are just as difficult: there was no stem βδε- to which a suffix could be added. Moreover, the derivation of βδελυρός from βδέω is not clear semantically (in H., forms are often explained with μισέω): it is easy to understand that the verb was later influenced by the meaning of βδελυρός. Therefore, the word cannot be explained as an inner-Greek formation. An analysis as βδελ-υρ- then seems more probable, both components of which are probably Pre-Greek: βδ- and the suffix -υρ- (see Pre-Greek).

βδέω [v.] 'to break wind, fart' (com.). ⋖IE pesd-* 'break wind (smoothly)'⋗ •VAR Aor. βδέσαι (AP) and βδεῦσαι (Hierocl.).
•DER βδ-ύλλω 'break wind (for fear)' (Ar.) and βδέννυμαι· ἐκκενοῦμαι τὴν κοιλίαν 'empty the intestines' Suid. (βδένεσθαι H., correct? Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 97f.) Cf. βδόλος, ►βδελυρός and ►βδελύσσομαι.
•ETYM βδέω goes back to an old PIE verb pesd-* reflected in e.g. Ru. bzdet', Lith. bezdù, bezdėti, Lat. pēdō < pezdō*. Thus, βδέω itself must come from *βζδέω; see Schwyzer: 326 add. 5. Cf. also ►πέρδομαι.

βέβαιος [adj.] 'firm, steady' (Parm., IA). ⋖GR⋗ •DER βεβαιότης [f.] 'stability' (Pl.), denominative βεβαιόω 'establish' (IA).
•ETYM Generally connected with βῆναι, though the formation is unclear; it is hardly from *βεβα-υσ-ιος, as per Wackernagel 1916: 113[1] (cf. *ϝιδ-υσ-ιος > ἴδυιος).

βέβηλος [adj.] 'allowed to be trodden, profane, permitted' (trag.). ⋖GR⋗ •DIAL Dor. βέβᾱλος, Cyrene βάβαλος.
•ETYM Like βέβαιος, the word is connected with the perfect βέβη-κα, but the formation is not quite clear. Cyren. βάβαλος is also problematic; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 235.

βεβράδα ⇒βαμβραδών.

βέβροξ [adj.] · ἀγαθός, χρηστός, καλός 'good, useful/good, beautiful' (H.). ⋖PG?⋗
•ETYM Acc. to Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 197f., it is a foreign word, related to Lat. for(c)tis, etc. (?). For the ending, cf. βίρροξ s.v. ►βίρρος. The word is probably Pre-Greek. See ►βεβρός, ►βροκός.

βεβρός [adj.] 'stupid' (Hippon. 40 Masson). ψυχρός, τετυφωμένος 'cold/stupid, stupid' (H.). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Also βεμβρός· τετυφωμένος, πάρετος 'stupid, relaxed' (H.).
•ETYM We may compare βέβροξ, with the semantic development 'good' > 'too good, stupid'. See Masson ad loc. The prenasalized form indicates Pre-Greek origin.

βειέλοπες [pl. m./f.] · ἱμάντες οἷς ἀναδοῦσι Λακεδαιμόνιοι τοὺς νικηφόρους 'leather straps with which the Lacedaimonians honored victorious men' (H.). ⋖PG?⋗
•VAR The notation -ει- or -ι- was discussed in antiquity, An. Ox. 2, 289; Bourguet 1927: 97[3].
•ETYM Neither Solmsen 1901: 255 (*ϝιελ- to γίς [= ϝίς]· ἱμάς, Lat. vieō 'bind, plait') nor Kalén GHÅ 26:2 (1920): 105ff. (*ϝεισελ-ελοπες to Skt. veṣṭate 'wrap round' and *ἔλοφος 'tie, strap'; cf. ►ἀργέλοφοι) offer a persuasive hypothesis. The word is probably non-IE, and must be analyzed as β(ε)ιελ-οπ- with the frequent Pre-Greek suffix -οπ- (καλαῦροψ).

βεικάδες · δέρματα θρεμμάτων νόσῳ θανόντων, Λάκωνες 'skins of animals perished from disease (Lacon.)' (H.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

βείομαι ⇒βίος.

βέκος [m.] 'bread' (Hdt. 2,2). ◁IE? *b^hh_1g- 'bake'.▷ •ETYM Identified as Phrygian by Herodotus, which is to be confirmed by its occurrence in Phrygian inscriptions. Hipponax (fr. 125 Masson) seems to identify it as Cyprian (which may have borrowed it from Phrygian as well); see O. Masson 1961: 167f. and Solmsen KZ 34 (1897): 70. Fur.: 297 compares βέσκεροι· ἄρτοι ὑπο Λακώνων (H.): "eine altes vorgriechisches Restwort, das sich in drei entlegenen Gebieten (Zentral-Kleinasien, Kypros, Peloponnesos) behauptet hat."

βέλα · ἥλιος 'sun'. •ETYM See ►εἵλη 1.

βέλεκκος [m.] · ὄσπριόν τι ἐμφερὲς λαθύρῳ μέγεθος ἐρεβίνθου ἔχον 'pulse resembling a caper spurge (Euphorbia Lathyris) having the size of a chick-pea' (H.); also in Ar. fr. 755. ◁PG?▷
•VAR Ms. -υς.
•ETYM Fur.: 150f compares ►πέλεκυς, πέλεκκον, -ος, just as Kretschmer 1896: 106f. before him.

βέλεμνα ⇒βάλλω.

βέλλιον [adj.] · ἀτυχές, Κρῆτες 'unfortunate (Cret.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Fur.: 389 compares γελσόν· ἀτυχές (H.).

βελλούνης [adj.] · τριόρχης. Λάκωνες 'buzzard (Lacon.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM As a hypothesis, Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 166 connects φαλλός, Lat. Balliō. For the formation, cf. ►ἐριούνης.

βελόνη [f.] 'needle' (Arist.). ◁?▷
•DER Diminutive βελονίς (Hermipp.); both also as fish names, see Strömberg 1943: 36f.
•ETYM Cf. περόνη, etc., on which see Chantraine 1933: 207. Connection with βάλλω is not semantically evident. Fick 1874-1876(1): 404 therefore connected the word with Lith. geliù, gélti 'sting'. Is β- for δ- Aeolic?

βέλτερος [adj.] 'better, the best' (Il.). ◁IE? bel*- 'strong'.▷ •VAR βελτίων (post-Hom.); superlative βέλτατος (A.), βέλτιστος (Att.).
•DIAL Dor. (Theoc.) βέντιστος (λτ > ντ).
•DER From βελτίων: βελτιόω (Ph.). On ►ἀβέλτερος, see s.v.
•ETYM Mostly connected with Skt. bála- [n.] 'force', Lat. dē-bilis 'without power', OCS boljii 'bigger', etc. But the formation is unclear, most notably the -τ-. Seiler 1950: 91ff. assumes *βελτός 'desired' > 'better' (it is hardly related to βούλομαι because of the β-, but cf. Cret. δέλτον· ἀγαθόν [Phot.]). On bála-, etc., see the discussion in Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 215.

βέμβιξ, -ῖκος ⇒βόμβος.

βεμβράς, -άδος ⇒βαμβραδών.

βένετος [adj.] 'blue', in the circus (Lyd.). ◁LW Lat.▷
•DER βενετιανός 'partisan of the Blues' (M. Ant. 1,5).
•ETYM From Lat. venetus; see E-M s.v. and André 1949: 181f.

βένθος ⇒βαθύς.

βερβέριον [n.] 'kind of headdress' (Anacr. 21, 3; LSJ Supp.). ◁?▷
•ETYM The word has been compared with βερρόν and βειρόν· δασύ. Older suggestions which assumed the meaning 'shabby garment' must now be abandoned.

βεργαῖος [adj.] 'romantic, invented' (Alex. P. Oxy. 1801, Str. 2, 3, 5). ◁GR▷ •ETYM Alexander (DELG; LSJ: Antiphanes) of Berga in Thrace was famous for his 'tall tales'.

βέρεθρον ⇒βάραθρον.

βερενίκιον a plant (H.); 'nitre' of good quality (Gal.). ◁GR▷ •DER βερενικάριον νίτρον (Orib.); βερενικὶδες 'women's shoes' (H.).
•ETYM The word derives from the name of queen Berenike.

βερίκοκκον [n.] 'apricot' (Gp.). ◁LW? Lat.?▷
•VAR βερικόκκιον.
•ETYM DELG mentions that Latin has the word praecoquum 'precocious' (perhaps it was considered a precocious variant of the peach), which was transcribed in Greek as πραικόκκιον (not in LSJ); note Gr. ►κόκκος 'grain of fruit'. However, it is unclear how this could have yielded βερίκοκκον. Through Arab. albarqūq and Catal. a(l)bercoc, the word reached French as apricot.

βέρκιος · ἔλαφος ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'deer (Lacon.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. See Bourguet 1927: 63[4].

βερκνίς [m./f.]? · ἀκρίς 'locust' (H.). ◁PG?▷ •ETYM Evidently cognate with ►βροῦκος, etc. Fur.: 129[50] considers it a different word, but a suffix -n- (without a preceding vowel) is typical for Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek).

βερνώμεθα [v.] · κληρωσώμεθα. Λάκωνες 'we shall appoint (Lacon.)' (H.). ◁?▷
•VAR Cf. βερρέαι· κληρῶσαι H., which may be corrupt.
•ETYM Kretschmer KZ 35 (1899): 605 and Fraenkel Glotta 2 (1910): 37 connect the word with μέρος, μείρομαι with dissimilation from μερ-ν-. von Blumenthal Glotta 18 (1930): 153f. argues for Illyrian origin (cf. φερνή).

βερρός ⇒βίρροξ.

βέσκεροι ⇒βέκος.

βεττονική [f.] 'Paul's betony, Sideritis purpurea' (Paul. Aeg.). ◁LW Lat.▷ •ETYM From Lat. uettonica, betonica; see André 1956.

βεῦδος [n.] 'rich woman's dress' (Sapph.); = ἄγαλμα at Hermione (EM 195, 52). ⊲LW Phryg⊳ •ETYM See Pfeiffer 1949-1953 on Call. fr. 7, 11. βεῦδος is borrowed from Phrygian beudos, the statue of a goddess, which itself derives from PIE $b^heud^h$-os-* (Lubotsky JIES 36 (2008): 96-98). The comparison with -γαύδης by Fur.: 116 is improbable.

βῆκα [f.]? · ἀναδενδράς 'vine that grows up trees' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳
•ETYM Fur.: 212, etc. compares ἀμαξίς· γένος σταφυλῆς ἀπὸ ἀναδενδράδος (H.); this is possible, but doubtful (on p. 393, he even adduces a Georgian word).

βῆλα = οἶνος. ⇒πηλός.

βῆλημα · κώλυμα, φράγμα ἐν ποταμῷ. Λάκωνες 'an obstacle, fence in a river (Lacon.)' (H.).
•ETYM Related to Messen. ἦλημα. The word is from *ϝέλ-νημα; see ►εἴλω and ►ἁλής.

βηλός •VAR βῆμα. ⇒βαίνω.

βήξ [m., f.] 'coughing' (Th.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Gen. βηχός, also βηκός, see Schulze 1933a: 703.
•DER Diminutive βηχίον, also a plant 'colt's-foot (Hustenkraut), Tussilago farfara', as a medicine against coughing (Lehmann KZ 41, 94, Strömberg 1940: 85f.). Denominative βήσσω, βήξω, ἔβηξα.
•ETYM The root noun βήξ denotes the illness as an agent. Fur.: 128 notes βήκιον and πήχιον as variants and concludes that it is Pre-Greek. Ultimately, the word might be of onomatopoeic origin (but certainly not IE, pace Pisani Arch. glott. ital. 53 (1968): 63f.).

βηρίχαλκον [n.] · τὸ μάρανθον, Λάκωνες H., perhaps to be corrected in μάραθρον 'fennel' (DELG). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Cf. ἄνθρυσκα· ἄγρια λάχανα παραπλήσια ἀνήθοις, οἷα καὶ τὰ μάρανθα 'wild herbs close to dill, like the μ.' (AB 404, 23). See Hesselman 1932: 94. To be read as ϝηρι- (Bechtel 1921, 2: 373).

βήρυλλος [f.] a precious stone, 'beryl' (LXX). ⊲LW India⊳ •VAR βηρύλλιον 'id.' (LXX).
•DER βηρύλλιος a plant (Ps.-Dsc.); βηρυλλίτης (λίθος, Cat. Cod. Astr.).
•ETYM The stone came from India in Hellenistic times; the name was Prākr. veruliya < veḷuriya (Sanskritized vaiḍūrya-). The word is Dravidian, perhaps derived from Vēḷūr, present-day Bēlūr, a town in southern India; see Master BSOAS 11 (1943): 304ff. βήρυλλος is a back-formation from βηρύλλιον; see Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 215[6].

βήσαλον 'brick' (Moses Alch.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Cf. βίσαλον (Alex. Trall.).
•ETYM Unknown. The word is no doubt non-IE.

βῆσσα [f.] 'wooded combe, glen' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳

•DIAL Dor. βᾶσσα
•DER βησσήεις (Hes.).
•ETYM On the assumption that ►βαθύς reflects a zero grade ($*h_2$), βῆσσα has been connected with it as an e-grade root variant, i.e. *βᾱθ-ι̯α; this would imply, however, that βένθος, certainly related to βαθύς, is secondary. I would rather take βένθος and βαθύς as reflecting old en ~ n ablaut, so that βῆσσα cannot be connected. Alternatively, βῆσσα was thought to be cognate with Av. vī-gāϑ- [f.] 'ravine', Skt. gā́hate 'plunge' (or gāhá-), OIr. báidim 'sink into the water' (LIV[2] $*g^weh_2d^h$-). Any relation with ►βυθός can be excluded, but Fur.: 330 refers to the gloss βρῆσσαι· βῆσσαι (H.) and opts for Pre-Greek origin (Βρῆσσα is a town and a promontory in Lesbos; see Fick 1905: 63).

βῆτα ⇒ἄλφα.

βητάρμων [m.] 'dancer' (θ 250, 383, Man.); ἀπὸ τοῦ ἡρμοσμένως βαίνειν 'to walk fitly' (H.). ⊲GR?⊳
•DER Secondary βηταρμός 'dance' (A. R. 1, 1135).
•ETYM Usually connected with ►ἀραρίσκω, etc., though there is no other compound in -αρμων governing the first member (as in πολυ-κτήμων; see Sommer 1948: 12[2], 117). The first member seems to be derived from βῆναι, but there is no clear solution. Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 35 assumes haplology from *βηματ-άρμων, which seems possible; Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 51 (1899): 199[1] starts from *βητος, *βητη or (with dissimilation) *βῆτρον = Skt. gā́tram 'limb'. Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 198 assumes βη-τ- (nom. *βής), like δω-τ- (nom. δώς). Cf. also Bechtel 1914: 81f.; Knecht 1946: 34; Schwyzer: 442.

βίᾱ [f.] 'strength, force' (Il.). ⊲IE $*g^wei$- 'conquer, force'⊳ •DIAL Ion. βίη.
•COMP ὑπέρβιος (Il.), ἀντίβιος (Il.), etc.
•DER βίαιος 'violent' (Od.); βιατάς [m.] 'strong' (Alcm.). Denominative verb βιάομαι, βιάω (Il.), βιάζομαι, βιάζω (Il.). βιασμός (Eup.), βιαστήρ (Gorg.) 'violent man', βιαστικός 'using violence' (Pl.). On ►βῑνέω, see s.v.
•ETYM Presumably, a derivative of the verbal too $*g^wei$-, reflected in Skt. jáyati 'conquer'. Conversely, a connection with Skt. j(i)yā́- 'robbery' (?) can be excluded, since its direct cognate Av. ziiā- points to $*\acute{g}^h$- instead (Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 574).

βιβάζω ⇒βαίνω.

βίβλος ⇒βύβλος.

βιβρώσκω [v.] 'to devour' (originally non-presentic; for the late present see below). ⊲IE $*g^werh_3$- 'devour'⊳ •VAR Perf. βέβρωκα (Il.), βεβρώθοις Δ 35 (see Chantraine 1942: 429), βεβρώσεται (Od.), βέβρωμαι (A.), aor. ἔβρων (h. Ap. 122), pass. ἐβρώθην (Hdt.). Other forms are late: βρώζω (Herod.), fut. βρώσομαι (Hell.), βιβρώσκω (Babr.), ἀναβρώσκων (H.), ἔβρωσα, -ξα (Hell.). Desiderative βρωσείω 'desire to eat' (Call.).

•COMP ὠμο-βρώς, -τος 'eating raw meat' (E.), δημο- 'devouring his people', θυμο-βόρος (Il.), cf. Lat. carni-vorus, Skt. aja-gará- 'devouring goats', Av. aspō.gara- 'eating horses'.
•DER Action nouns: βρωτύς (Il.) and βρῶσις (Il.) 'food' (Chantraine BSL 59 (1964): 11-22); also βρώμη (Od.), βρῶμα (IA); βρωτόν (E.); βρώσιμος 'eatable' (A.). Agent nouns: βρωτήρ (A.), as 'moth' also βρωστήρ (Aq.). βορά 'food (of a predator)' (possibly cognate to the *g^woreh$_2$- that seems to be set forth by Lat. vorāre). On ► βούβρωστις, see s.v.
•ETYM Derived from IE *g^werh$_3$-, which formed a root aorist (which fits the semantics; ἐσθίω is to a certain extent used as the corresponding present). The zero grade is found in the verbal adj. βρωτός, which agrees morphologically with Lith. gìrtas 'drunk' and Skt. gīrṇá- 'devoured'. Greek generalized this zero grade βρω-, further regular in the plural of the aorist and perfect, as in e.g. ἔβρως [2sg.aor.]. The aor. is found in Arm. eker [3sg.] (h_1e-g^werh$_3$-et) from the pres. utem and in the Skt. aor. garat, gārīt. Sanskrit has a perfect jagāra for g^we-g^worh$_3$-e and a present giráti < g^wrh$_3$-e/o-; the latter agrees with OCS žьrǫ 'devour'. Lat. vorāre may be denominative. ► βάραθρον is not related. Cf. ► δέρη.

βίδην · εἶδος, κροῦμα, Σοφοκλῆς Ἀκριδίῳ "ὡς ἐπιψάλλειν βίδην τε καὶ ξυναυλίαν". ἄλλοι βίθυν (H.) ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also βυδοί· οἱ μουσικοί, ἢ κρουμάτι. σοφώς Κρησίν (H.). Also ψαλεῖ βίδυν LSJ Supp.
•ETYM A musical term, the details of which are unknown; even the case form of the lemmas is unclear. Fur.: 194 correctly concludes that the word is Pre-Greek (variation ι/ υ). Kathakis-Karamanos Glotta 83 (1985): 165, considers βίδυν as the original form of the word.

βιδυ(ι)οι [m.pl.] 'supervisor', designation of Spartan officials supervising male youths (Laconia, Messenia [II^a], Paus.). ◄IE *ueid- 'see'► •VAR Also βιδεοι; Pausanias's βιδιαιοι is wrong.
•ETYM Probably from *ϝιδυσ-ι̯οι, i.e. the zero grade of the perf.ptc. εἰδώς, for which cf. Hom. fem. ϝιδυῖα (see ► οἶδα). Cf. the Mycenaean PN wi-do-wo-i-jo. Striano Glotta 68 (1990): 40-48, tries to explain the two notations βιδυ(ι)οι, βιδεοι as rendering wid-wos-i̯os. Further comparanda are Att. ἰδῦ(ῖ)οι· συνίστορες, μάρτυρες 'witnesses' (Solon apud Ar. fr. 222), and ἰδυῖοι· ... οἱ τὰς φονικὰς δίκας κρίνοντες 'they who judge in cases of murder' (H.). The form with -ε- is not well explained; see Bechtel 1921, 2: 355ff. On βι-/ βει- cf. Bourguet 1927: 97^3. A parallel formation was considered for ► βέβαιος, but this is hardly correct.

βιζακίων [gen.pl.] · μικρῶν λίθων 'small stones' (Suid.). ◄LW Sem.?, PG?(S)► •ETYM Lewy KZ 59 (1932): 190 compares Aram. bizqā, bīzᵉqā , etc. 'broken piece, small stone'. However, -ακ- could also represent the Pre-Greek suffix.

βικία [f.] 'vetch', vicia sativa (Gal.) ◄LW Lat.►
•VAR βικίον [n.].
•ETYM From Latin vicia.

βῖκος [m.] 'vase with handles', also a measure (Hdt.; see Solmsen 1909: 65; also Hippon. fr. 142 Masson). ◄LW Eg.?, Sem.?►
•DER Diminutive βικίον (pap.), βικίδιον (Suid.).
•ETYM Egyptian origin has been considered: cf. Eg. b:ḳ.t 'oil flask, used as a measure' (Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 241). E. Masson 1967: 78ff. considers Semitic origin. Not related to Lat. fiscus, as per Fur.: 294, nor to ► βαυκάλιον.

βίλλος · τὸ ἀνδρεῖον μόριον τὸ κοινῶς βιλλίν 'the lot of a man, commonly βιλλίν' (Hdn. I, 158). ◄PG► •VAR Also βιλλᾶς (ib.).
•DER PN Βίλλος, -αρος (L. Robert 1963: 16-22).
•ETYM Fur.: 325 compares ἀβίλλιον· ἀνδρεῖον (H.). The prothetic vowel may point to Pre-Greek origin, which is expected anyway. βιλλίν is Ephesian if the form is a nom.; cf. the Pre-Greek words in -ν (see Pre-Greek).

βίμβλις ⇒βύβλος.

βῑνέω [v.] 'coire, futuere' (Ar.), also τὸ βίᾳ μίγνυσθαι 'to have intercourse by force' (Sol. apud H.). ◄?►
•VAR βενέω (Olympia V^a), impf. βινεσκόμην, fut. βινήσω.
•DER Desiderative βινητιάω (Ar.), as if from *βινητής; cf. ὠνητιάω : [ὠνητής :] ὠνέομαι.
•ETYM βῑνέω is a vulgar word that is often connected with βία 'force', but the association with 'force' may be secondary. It has also been compared with ζάει· βινεῖ (H.), but it is unclear how these words should be related. Skt. jināti 'overpower, suppress' cannot be related in view of Av. zināiti, which proves *ǵ- (instead of *g^w-); nor can we connect δῑνέω, as the meaning is too far off (pace Palmer Minos 5 (1957): 62). Basing himself on the variant βενέω, De Lamberterie (CEG 1) proposes a connection with *g^wen- 'woman', with ῑ from κῑνέω; in that case, however, we would expect *δεν-. See ► μνάομαι.

βίος ⇒βιω-.

βιός [m.] 'bow', also 'bowstring' (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 66f. ◄IE *g^wieh$_2$- 'string'► •VAR Rare after Homer, replaced by τόξον.
•ETYM Related to Skt. jiyā́-, Av. jiiā- 'bowstring'. Schindler 1972: 20 assumes a root noun *g^wieh$_2$-, and derives the Greek word from *g^wih$_2$-o- 'provided with a bowstring'; this, however, depends on whether the meaning 'bowstring' is found in Greek. Schwyzer 1950: 32^4 starts from an original fem. o-stem, which is rather doubtful. The word is probably further related to Lith. gijà 'thread', OCS ži-ca 'string'; yet note the slightly different root *g^{wh}iH- 'string, sinew, etc.' in Lat. fīlum 'thread', etc.

βίρρη · πυράγρα, οἱ δὲ δρέπανον 'pair of fire-tongs; pruning-knife' (H.). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Fur.: 232, 251 compares Svan berež 'iron'; Akk. parzillu, Hebr. barzel, Ugar. bršl, South Arabic przn 'id.'; furthermore, OE bræs, OFris. bras(penning), Basque burdin (cf. Dussaud 1953: 162). Is the word from Asia Minor?

βίρρος [m.] 'kind of cloak' (Artem.). ⊲EUR?⊳
•VAR βίρροξ· δασύ, Μακεδόνες 'dense (Maced.)' (H.); βερρόν, βειρόν· δασύ (H.); βιρρωθῆναι· ταπεινωθῆναι 'be reduced' (H.).
•ETYM Cf. Lat. birrus 'id.'; was the word originally Celtic? Cf. MIr. berr, W byrr 'short'. See Friedmann 1937: 92. Is it a European substrate word?

βίσβη [f.] βίσβης (-ν?)· δρέπανον λέγουσι Μεσάπιοι. καὶ ἑορτὴν Βισβαια, ἣν ἡμεῖς κλαδευτήρια 'pruning-knife [Messap.]; the festival Βισβαια, a festival at pruning-time' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. Messapian?

βίσταξ ὁ β' <μετὰ> βασιλέα παρὰ Πέρσαις 'the second after the king (Pers.)' (H.). ⊲LW Pers.⊳ •ETYM Certainly a mistake for *βιταξ, a borrowing from a Persian word for 'viceroy', known from MP as bidaxš. The Persian word is discussed by Szemerényi Acta Iranica 5 (1975): 363ff., but our gloss is not mentioned there, and the article does not bring us much further. Nyberg Eranos 44 (1946): 237[2] analyzed the first part as Iran. bitīya-* 'second'. Amm. Marc. 23, 614 has it in the form vitaxa. Later Greek has βιδαξης, πιτιάξης.

βίσων, -ωνος [m.] 'European bison' (Paus.). ⊲EUR⊳ •ETYM Cf. OHG wisunt. The Greek form comes from Lat. bisōn, and this in turn from Gm. (thus DELG), of which the ultimate origin remains unknown (Kluge[22] s.v. Wisent). See Pok. 1134.

βίτος [?] 'binding of a wheel' (Ed. Diocl.). ⊲LW Lat.⊳ •ETYM From Lat. uitus.

βίττακος ⇒ψίττακος.

βιω- [v.] 'to live' (Il.). ⊲IE *g^weih_3- 'live' (or *$g^wh_3(e)i$-?)⊳ •VAR Aor. ἐβίων, βιῶναι; s-aor. ἐβίωσα (Hdt.), med. fact. ἐβιώσαο (θ 468); fut. βείομαι, βέομαι (Il.; old subjunctive, cf. ἔδομαι), also βιώσομαι; perf. βεβίωκα. βιόμεσθα (h. Ap. 528 for *βειομεθα? DELG); pres. βιόω (Arist.).
•DER βίος '(way of, means of) life', βιοτή [f.] 'id.' (Od.), βίοτος [m.] 'id.' (Il.); also Cret. βίετος (see below). βιωτός 'worth living' (Att.), βιώσιμος 'to be lived' (Hdt.). With δ from *g^w Heracl. ἐνδεδιωκότα, if = ἐμβεβιωκότα. In PN Βιο-; Βίτων < Βιο-.
•ETYM The root ended in a laryngeal, and the zero grade *g^wih_3- is seen in Av. jī-ti-, OCS ži-tь, as well as in Lat. vīta, Osc. bíitam [acc.]; with a suffix -uo-, it appears in Skt. jīvá-, OCS živъ, Lat. vīvus, etc. (all 'alive'), and in the thematic presents derived from this adjective: Lat.vīvō, Skt. jī́vati, OCS živǫ, ToA śāw-, ToB śāy- ~ śāw- (all 'live'). The forms with short i (e.g. Go. qiwa-, MW byw) may be due to pretonic shortening, i.e. Dybo's Law (Schrijver 1991: 355, 526). Greek does not have forms with long i, which is understandable since all forms attested have a vowel after the root: *g^wih_3-o- > βίος, *g^wih_3-eto- > βίοτος. (For the formation, cf. ►θάνατος; for the most recent discussion on this, see Vine 1998.) Cret. βίετος will have restored the suffix -ετος. One noteworthy form is ►ὑγιής, which must derive from *h_2iu-g^wih_3-ēs, with analogically restored vocalism of the ending. The aorist ἐβίων has been reconstructed by Francis 1970: 76ff. with the suffix -eh_1-, seen in the Greek "passive" aorist (e.g. ἐμάνην); thus, *g^wih_3-eh_1- yielded βιω-. A full grade I *g^weih_3- (probably old; cf. Klein 1988: 272) must be assumed for βέ(ί)ομαι. The same full grade is seen in Skt. gáya-, Av. gaiia- 'life' < *g^we/oih_3-o- and in ORu. gojь 'peace'. A full grade II *g^wieh_3- is seen in Av. jiiā-tu- 'life' (Skt. jyā-tu-* in jīvā́tu-, which must have been reshaped after jī́vati); Gr. ζωϝός is probably from this root form (rather than from the zero grade of the root, as per Klein (l.c.): 257ff.). Since this root form seems to be found in Gr. ζώ-ω, ζῆ-ν as well (see ►ζώω), Schwebeablaut cannot be avoided (pace Anttila 1969: 137). Arm. kea-m 'I live' (see LIV[2]) is difficult to judge. On the basis of BSl. accentual reflexes, Kortlandt reconstructs *$g^wh_3(e)i$- (e.g. Kortlandt 1992: 237[4]); for Greek, one would have to assume laryngeal metathesis *g^wh_3i- > *g^wih_3- (in pre-consonantal position).

βλάβη [f.] 'damage' (A.) ⊲PG⊳
•VAR βλάβος [n.].
•DIAL Cretan ἀβλοπές· ἀβλαβές H., ἀβλοπία = ἀβλάβεια, καταβλάπεθαι = -εσθαι (inscr.).
•COMP ἀβλαβής.
•DER βλαβερός 'damaging' (Hes.), formed to ἀβλαβής like κρατερός to ἀκρατής (Schwyzer 482). Verb βλάπτω, βλάψαι, ἐβλάβην, originally 'to hinder, disable' (Il.), also without suffix βλάβεται (T 82, 166 = ν 34), probably old (Chantraine 1942: 311). βλάψις (Pl.).
•ETYM On the basis of the Cretan forms, βλαβ- is mostly considered to have resulted from βλαπ- by assimilation. With βλαπ- as the original form, it is connected with Skt. mṛ́c- f., marká- m. 'damage', Av. mərəṇcaitē 'destroys', which require a reconstruction mr/lkʷ-*. However, the development to -λο- (which is Arc.-Cypr., Myc.) is not found in Cretan (although one might consider an Achaean substrate on Crete). On the other hand, the interchanges α ~ ο and β ~ π are typical for Pre-Greek; Fur. 144 compares ἀβλαβία - ἀβλοπία with ἀραβῆσαι, Cret. ἀροπῆσαι. A connection with Lat. mulceō 'stroke, caress', mulcō is doubtful because of the velar and the meaning; see WH s.vv. Puhvel HED suggested a connection with Hitt. gullakuwan, but this means 'scheusslich' (Tischler 1983ff. s.v.). Cf. ►βλάσφημος.

βλαγίς [?] · κηλίς. Λάκωνες 'stain (Lacon.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. von Blumenthal 1930: 23f., suggests connecting the word with βλαί<ς> βλητή. Λάκωνες 'stuck (Laconian)' (H.).

βλαδεῖς [adj.] · ἀδύνατοι ἐξ ἀδυνάτων 'powerless'; βλαδαρόν· ἐκλελυμένον, χαῦνον 'flaccid, porous' and βλαδαρά· ἄωρα, μωρά, ὠμά 'untimely, sluggish' and βλάδαν [?]· νωθρῶς 'slothful', and βλαδόν· ἀδύνατον 'powerless' (H.). ⊲IE? mld-u-*⊳ •VAR These words are sometimes identified with βλαδύς Hp. Aër. 20; perhaps βλαδαρός 'bottle' Gal. 19, 88 is related, too.
•ETYM In spite of the variation, mostly only βλαδύς is cited, although the appurtenance of that form is actually doubtful. On that basis, the word is often equated with Skt. mṛdú-, Lat. mollis < moldu̯i-* 'soft', and further connected with ►ἀμαλδύνω. Evidently, the latter connection is impossible in IE terms because of the prothetic vowel; Arm. mełk 'weak, soft' shows that this group had no initial laryngeal. Rather, I would take the variation in the suffix and that in the initial (presence vs. absence of a prothetic vowel) as indications of substrate origin, although this cannot be proven independently.

βλαί [?] · βληχή [corr. for βλητη], Λάκωνες 'bleating (Lacon.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown; see ►βλαγίς.

βλαισός [adj.] 'bent, distorted' (Hp.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR πλαισός (Phot.).
•DER βλαισώδης, βλαισότης, βλαισόομαι, βλαίσωσις (all Arist.).
•ETYM Formation as in γαυσός, γαμψός, λοξός (Chantraine 1933: 434). Lat. blaesus 'lisping, stammering' may eventually be borrowed from Greek? Pre-Greek origin is probable in view of the variation β ~ π.

βλᾱ́ξ, -κός [m., f.] 'indolent, stolid, stupid' (Ar.), from 'weak'? Also a fish (Erot.), Strömberg 1943: 33f. ◄IE? mlh$_2$(e)k- 'weak'► •DER βλακικός, βλακώδης 'id.'; βλακίας· ἰχθὺς ποιός 'a kind of fish' (H.). Denominative βλακεύω [v.] 'to be slack', whence βλακεία, βλάκευμα.
•ETYM The word cannot be of IA origin. If it is related to μαλακός, one might posit mlh$_2$-k- (which would explain the long ᾱ) next to mlh$_2$-ek-. Without the suffix -k-, Skt. mlā-tá- 'soft' and OIr. mláith 'tender, soft' (< mlā-ti-) may be related, but Lat. flaccus should be left out. Perhaps Ru. molčát' 'be silent', which may go back to mlh$_2$k-, is related, too. ►βληχρός is also possibly related (but not ►μύλη, nor ►ἀμαλδύνω, both of which are outdated comparisons). See ►μαλακός.

βλάπτω ⇒βλάβη.

βλαστάνω [v.] 'to bud, sprout, grow' (A.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. βλαστεῖν, intr. fut. βλαστήσω (Thphr.), trans. aor. ἐβλάστησα (Emp.), perf. βεβλάστηκα (Hp.), ἐβλάστηκα (E.); recent formations βλαστέω, βλαστάω.
•DER βλάστημα 'offshoot' (A.), βλαστικός (Thphr.); deverbal βλαστός 'id.' (Hdt.), βλάστη 'origin' (S.), whence βλαστέω (Thphr.).
•ETYM The aorist βλαστεῖν is the basis of all the forms. Its analysis is uncertain; perhaps *βλαθ-τεῖν (or βλαδ-, βλατ-). Connection with ►βλωθρός 'tall' is impossible if the words are IE (an ablaut $m\text{̥}ld^h$-, $ml\bar{o}d^h$- is impossible in an adjective); the same holds true for ►μολεύω 'cut off (and transplant) the shoots of trees' (cf. further ►βλώσκω). From other languages, OHG blat (etc.) 'leaf' is often proposed as a comparandum.

βλασφημέω [v.] 'to speak profanely, slander' (Arist.). ◄?►
•DER βλασφημία (Democr.); βλάσφημος 'evil-speaking' is rare and late (D.).
•ETYM βλασφημέω and βλασφημία seem to be older than βλάσφημος, which is reminiscent of ἀνδραγαθία (from ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός), etc. The second element seems to be φήμη, the first is uncertain (βλάβος, μέλεος, etc.). Cf. the synonymous ►κερτομέω, ►λοιδορέω, which have no etymology. On MoGr. βλαστημῶ, see CEG 5.

βλάττα [f.] 'purple' (Ed. Diocl.). ◄LW Lat.► •ETYM From Lat. blatta, which is itself of unclear origin.

βλαττοῖ [v.] · παιδαριεύεται 'behaves childishly' (H.). ◄ONOM► •ETYM Latte ad loc. compares Lat. blatiō, blaterō 'babble, chatter'. The word is an onomatopoeic formation; cf. ►βαβάζω.

βλαύτη [f.] 'slipper' (Com.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR βλαῦδες· ἐμβάδες, κρηπῖδες, σανδάλια 'slippers, boots, sandals' (H.).
•DER Verb βλαυτοῦν· ὑποδέειν. ἢ πλήσσειν σανδαλίῳ, οἱ δὲ ὑποδήματι 'to put on shoes, or: strike with a sandal, or with a shoe' (H.) (from Men.).
•ETYM Although it is often assumed reshaping that βλαῦδες results from analogical reshaping of βλαῦται after ἐμβάδες, it is preferable to explain the variation τ ~ δ as Pre-Greek.

βλεῖ ⇒βλέτυες.

βλεμεαίνω [v.] 'to boast' (Il.; σθένεϊ βλεμεαίνων, -νει Θ 337, etc.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀβλεμές· ἀσθενές, φαῦλον 'weak' and ἀβλεμής· ἄτολμος, ἀτερπής, παρειμένος 'without courage, without joy, slack'.
•DER ἀβλεμής 'powerless' (Nic.); unclear -έως πίνων 'immoderately' (?; Panyas.).
•ETYM Formation like μενεαίνω. Thus, the word is probably from *βλέμος in ἀ-βλεμής (cf. μενεαίνω to μένος). No etymology.

βλέννᾰ [f.] 'mucous discharge, μύξα' (Hp.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Also βλέννος [n.] (Arist.); πλένναι· μύξαι H.; βλένα· μύξα. οἱ δὲ δία τοῦ π πλένα καὶ πλέννα τὰ ἀσθενῆ καὶ δυσκίνητα H.; πλεννεραί = μυξώδεις (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 131). πληνώδης· ἀσθενὴς (H.) is perhaps to be read πλεν(ν)-, Fur.: 144.
•DER βλεννώδης 'slimy, mucous' (Hp.). Also βλεν(ν)ός 'id., idiot' (Epich.), and (with regular retraction of the accent) βλέννος [m.] a fish (Sophr., H. as an explanation of σιαλίς), see Strömberg 1943: 29, Grilli Stud. ital. fil. class. 33 (1961): 201f.
•ETYM On the assumption that βλέννος goes back to *μλεδ-σ-νος (Lejeune 1972: 124), it was often connected with Skt. ū́rṇa-mradas- 'soft as wool' (would be Gr. *-βλεδής), mṛdú- 'soft', and MIr. blind 'slime from the mouth of a dead man' (Pok. 718). Justified criticism can be found in DELG, "Pour le sens ces rapprochements ne s'imposent pas." and Frisk, "Der sehr beschränkte Wert dieser Kombinationen liegt indessen auf der Hand." As Fur.: 144 points out, the variations π ~ β, νν ~ ν prove Pre-Greek origin. If the final -α is short, βλενα cannot be IE, whereas this ending is frequent in Pre-Greek.

βλέπω [v.] 'to see, look, perceive' (Solon). ◄PG?►
•VAR Aor. βλέψαι; other forms (e.g. βέβλεφα, βέβλοφα) are late. Also ποτι-γλέποι [opt.] (Alcm. 23, 75).
•COMP Often with prepositions, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀντι-, ἀπο-. Also παραβλώψ (Il.), κυνοβλώψ (H.).

•DER βλέψις 'sight' (X.); βλεψίας a fish, κεφαλῖνος (Strömberg 1943: 42); βλέμμα 'glance' (Att.); rare βλέπος 'id.' (Ar.). Expressive deverbative: βλεπάζοντες· βλέποντες and βλεπετύζει· βλέπει H., perhaps for βλεπετίζει, cf. χρεμετίζει.
βλέφαρον 'eyelid' (Il.), mostly plur.; thence βλεφαρίδες [f.pl.] (rarely sg.) 'eye-lashes', also 'eyelids' (Ar., X., Arist.); βλεφαρίτιδες τρίχες 'eye-lashes' (Paul. Aeg.); βλεφαρικός 'of the eyelids' (Cael. Aur.); βλεφαρίζω [v.] 'to blink' (sch.).
•ETYM γλέπω exists beside βλέπω just as γλέφαρον beside βλέφαρον; the variation was taken to suggest a labiovelar $*g^w$- with irregular development (see Schwyzer: 298f.), but rather points to substrate origin. von Blumenthal 1930: 21 points to Macedonian γλέπου = βλέπω. It is possible that the verb and the noun βλέφαρον are unrelated; in that case, the latter word may originally have been *γλέφαρον and may have influenced the verb. But it seems more probable that they were cognate, with β/ γ and π/ φ pointing to a Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 389; pace Hamp Glotta 72 (1994): 15), although β/ γ is rare. Pre-Greek had labiovelars which did not always develop in the same way as their inherited equivalents.

βλέτυγες [m./f.]? · φλυαρίαι, οἱ δὲ βλέκυγες 'nonsense, foolery; also β.' (H.). ◄ONOM, PG?►
•VAR Cf. *βλαταγίζουσα [conj. for βλασταρίζουσα]· ἐπικροτοῦσα 'rattling, applauding' (H.); also ὑπερβλαττύουσαν (DELG s.v. βλαττοῖ).
•ETYM With βλετ-, βλεκ-, -βλαττ-, βλικ-, we find quite a number of stem variants, perhaps of onomatopoeic origin, otherwise possibly Pre-Greek (cf. Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 42). See ► βλίκανον.

βλέτυες [pl.] · αἱ βδέλλαι 'leeches' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR *βλίτυξ (ms. βαιτυξ)· βδέλλα H.; the correction by Latte seems evident, but is not mentioned by DELG.
•ETYM Analyzed as a derivation in -τυ- from a stem βλε- (see Frisk s.v.), seen in καταβλέθει and καβλέει· καταπίνει (both) 'gulp down' and βλεῖ· βλίσσει, ἀμέλγει, βλίζει 'collect honey, milk' (H.). Note that βλίζω is further unknown, and that the semantics are incompatible if βλίσσει stands for βλίττω; therefore, DELG s.v. thinks that the gloss may be corrupt. However, since a root βλε- is impossible in IE (the basic shape is *CeC-), the word must be Pre-Greek, which is confirmed by βλίτυξ (Fur.: 355). For -υς beside -υξ, cf. Fur.: 218 on μῆρυξ. Cf. ► δέλεαρ.

βλέφαρον ⇒βλέπω.

βλῆρ ⇒δέλεαρ.

βλῆραι [f.] · αἱ κνίδαι. ἄλλοι χόρτον. οἱ δὲ τῶν ὀσπρίων τὴν καλάμην 'nettles; fodder, the stalk of straw of pulse' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM The conjecture of Strömberg 1944: 54f. is improbable. Note that the gloss is corrupt (the case forms do not agree); perhaps one should assume a second gloss βλῆρ· χόρτον ...?

βληστρίζω ⇒βάλλω.

βλῆτρον [n.] 'bolt, plug' (like in MoGr.); only O 678 ξυστὸν κολλητὸν βλήτροισι 'a shaft or lance shod with bands'. Scholars in antiquity were uncertain: τῆς ἁμάξης τροχοί. σφῆνες. ἐμβλήματα. οἱ δὲ γόμφους καὶ συμβολὰς ἀξόνων 'wheels of a wagon; wedges; insertions; bolts and the joins of axles' (H.). ◄GR?►
•ETYM The connection with βάλλω remains uncertain. The factitive ptc. βλητρώσας 'providing with β.' is explained by Hesychius as ἐμβαλών.

βληχή [f.] 'bleating' (μ 266, A.). ◄ONOM► •DIAL Dor. βλᾱχᾱ́.
•DER βληχάομαι 'bleat' (Ar.), perhaps not denominative, but an independent intensive like βρυχάομαι, μυκάομαι, etc. (see Schwyzer: 683). βληχηθμός (Ael.; cf. μυκηθμός, etc.), βλήχημα H., βληχάς (Opp., cf. μηκάς, Schwyzer: 508). βληχητά [pl.] 'bleating animals' (Eup., cf. ἑρπετά, etc.). βληχώδης 'bleating' (Babr.). βληχάζω (Autocr.).
•ETYM An onomatopoeic formation with many parallels, e.g. Cz. blekati, MLG bleken, MoHG blöken; and, without the velar, CS blějati, Latv. blêt, and MHG blœjen; with a dental, there are Gm. words like OE blǣtan, OHG blāzen; all of which point to original *ē. Trag. βλᾱχᾱ́ must be a hyperdorism; note βληχάομαι in Theoc.

βλῆχνον [n.] 'male fern, Aspidium Filix-mas'. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also βλῆχρον (Dsc.), βλήχρα H., also βλᾱ́χνον (Phan. Hist), βλᾱ́χρον (H.).
•ETYM No etymology. See Rohlfs 1958: 124, Rohlfs Sprache 5 (1959): 175[2], and Rohlfs Glotta 38 (1959): 103. The variation ρ/ν does not derive from an r/n-stem, but points to Pre-Greek origin; see Fur.: 388.

βληχρός [adj.] 'weak' (Alc.). ◄?►
•VAR ἀβληχρός (Il.; s.v.).
•DER βλῆχρος a plant, Strömberg 1940: 24.
•ETYM Connected with ► βλᾱ́ξ as Ionic; the -χ- would be expressive (thus Chantraine 1933: 225f.; not via *μλᾱκ-σ-ρός). Not related to ► μαλάχη, as per Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀβληχρός. Blanc 1999: 317-38 suggests connection of the root $*g^welh_1$- 'sting' (Pok. 470); the ἀ- was either lost in βληχρός (which is an insufficient solution), or added later to ἀβληχρός.

βλήχων, -ωνος [f.] 'pennyroyal', 'Mentha pulegium' (h. Cer.). ◄PG► •VAR Ion. γλήχων, Dor. γλᾱ́χων; also βληχώ, -ους (Schwyzer 479); βληχός = βλήχων (Thphr., Dsc.).
•DIAL Myc. ka-ra-ko /glāk^{h}ōn/, but the reading is doubtful.
•DER βληχωνίας 'prepared with β.' (Ar.); Chantraine 1933: 94f. γληχωνίτης (οἶνος; Dsc.).
•ETYM Unknown. The variation β- ~ γ- could be due to dissimilation (Schwyzer: 299); cf. β-/ γλέπω. But since the word has no etymology, and since the stem formation is strange, we are rather dealing with a Pre-Greek word. For a folk-etymological connection with βληχάομαι, see Strömberg 1940: 155.

βλίζω ⇒βλέτυες.

βλίκανον ⇒βλίχας.

βλικάς [m.]/[f.]? · σύκου φύλλον 'leave of a fig' (H.). Also EM 201, 41, Choeroeb., An. Ox. 2,184, 9. ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Most probably a Pre-Greek word.

βλῑμάζω [v.] 'to feel, squeeze' (e.g. woman's breasts, Com., Hp.). Also = βλίττω (EM). ◂?▸
•COMP Verbal noun βλίμασις· ἡ τῶν τιτθῶν θλῖψις 'squeezing tits' (H.).
•DER Cf. βλιμάξαι· βαστάσαι 'lift up' (Latte thinks that this gloss is corrupt), ἀτιμάσαι 'dishonour' (H.); βλίμη· προπηλακισμός, ὕβρις 'besmearing, offense' (H., EM).
•ETYM Unexplained.

βλίτον [n.] 'blite, Amaranthus Blitum' (Hp.). ◂?▸
•DER A few denigrating designations of persons: βλιτάς [f.] 'old woman', βλιτο-μάμμας mg. uncertain (Ar. Nub. 1001; or to μέλι?), βλίτωνας· τοὺς εὐήθεις 'silly' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Not related as *μλ-ιτον to ►μύλη, ►ἀμαλδύνω. LW Lat. blitum 'blite', also bliteus 'tasteless, foolish' (Plaut.).

βλίττω [v.] 'to cut out the comb of bees' (Arist.). ◂IE meli, -tos* 'honey'▸ •VAR Analogical βλίζω (H.), aor. βλίσαι.
•DER βλιστηρίς [f.], from *βλιστήρ; PN Βλιστίχη.
•ETYM From *μλιτ-ι̯ω, zero grade denominative of μέλι, -ιτος 'honey'.

βλίτυρι 'the sound of the chord of a harp'; hence 'sound without mg.' (S. E.) ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM Probably onomatopoeic.

βλίτυρον · ἐστὶ φυτὸν ἢ φάρμακον ἢ χορδῆς μίμημα 'a plant or drug or an imitation of a gut-string' (EM 201, 43). ◂?▸
•ETYM For the last part, see ►βλίτυρι.

βλιχ(αν)ώδης [adj.] 'clammy'; cf. LSJ Supp. ◂?▸
•VAR βλιχώδης (Hp.), βλιχανώδης (Diph.). βλίκανος (which must not be changed to *βλίχανον)· βάτραχον 'frog' καὶ βλίχαν '?' (H.)
•ETYM Minon RPh. 74 (2000): 263f. compares βλαχάν· βάτραχον and Artemis's epithet βλαγανῖτις. Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 42, adduces βεβλιχασμένον (ms. βεβλυχ-)· μεμολυσμένον 'stained' (H.).

βλοσυρός [adj.] uncertain, perhaps 'terrible' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP βλοσυρῶπις [f.] (Λ 36; on the ι see Schwyzer: 463, Chantraine 1942: 208), -ωπός (AP, D. P.), -ώπεε [du.] (Opp.); βλοσυρόμματος (Cerc.), βλοσυρόφρων (A.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Leumann 1950: 141ff. derives it from βλοσυρ(ός) 'of a vulture', as if it were Aeolic from IE g^wl̥tur(os), related to Lat. voltur(us) 'id'. There is no evidence, however, that the word is IE.

βλύζω [v.] 'to bubble, gush forth' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. βλῦσαι.
•DER Verbs βλύω (LXX), βλυστάνω (Procop.); βλύσις (AP). Also adj. βλύδιον· ὑγρόν, ζέον 'humid, seething' (H.).

•ETYM Cf. κλύζω, φλύζω; βλύω is probably secondary. Maurice BSL 82 (1987): 216f., attempted to connect it with φλύω (οἰνόφλυξ). We may consider onomatopoeic origin. In any case, not related to Skt. galati 'drip' or OHG quellan.

βλωθρός [adj.] '(grown) high' (of trees; Il.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR γλωθρός (H., see LSJ Supp. and Fur.: 389), a form which is often overlooked.
•ETYM The connection with a word for 'head' (Skt. mūrdhán- [m.], OE molda [m.] 'upper part of the head, crown') as *μλωθρός is obsolete. Nor can it be connected to ►μέλαθρον or ►βλαστάνω, two alternative proposals by Frisk. Further, ►βλώσκω "est loin pour le sens" (DELG). In my view, the variant with γ- points to Pre-Greek origin (see Beekes 1969: 215f.).

βλωμοί [?] · στραβοί 'squintings' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. See Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 198 (who compares βάλλω).

βλωμός [m.] 'piece of bread' (Call.). ◂?▸ •COMP ὀκτά-βλωμος (Hes. Op. 442), see Hofinger Ant. class. 36 (1967): 457ff.
•ETYM Not related to βλέει in καβλέει (H.; see ►βλέτυες). Cf. ψωμός s.v. ►ψῆν; however, the etymology is unknown.

βλώσκω [v.] 'to go, come' (Il.). ◂IE melh₃-* 'come'▸ •VAR Aor. μολεῖν, ἔβλω· ἐφάνη, ᾤχετο, ἔστη 'appeared, went, stood up' (H.); fut. μολοῦμαι (βλῶξαι, βλώξω Lyc.), perf. μέμβλωκα (βέβλωκε· ἠρεμεῖ, φύεται 'be at rest, grow', H.).
•COMP Also with κατα-, προ-, ἐκ-, etc. αὐτόμολος 'deserter' (Hdt.); ἀγχίμολον (ἦλθε, Il.), old absolutive, Wackernagel Mus. Helv. 1 (1944): 226ff.; ἀγχιβλώς· ἄρτι παρών 'just arrived' (H.).
•DER προμολή (mostly plur. -αί) 'approach, vestibule' (Ar.); βλῶσις· παρουσία 'presence' (H.).
•ETYM The present βλώσκω < *μλώ-σκω (cf. μολ-εῖν, μέ-μβλω-κα) from $ml̥h_3$-sk- is clear. The aorist stem βλω- then has the same origin, with the zero grade from the plural. The nominal forms with -μολ- have the o-grade $molh_3$-, while the aor. stem μολ-ε/ο- is explained from metathesis in *μελο-μ, -ς, -τ < $melh_3$- (after Ruipérez Emerita 10 (1942): 386-407). Harðarson 1993a: 169f. and 224f., also assumes *$l̥h_3$ > ολο under the accent, which is doubtful; a twofold development μλω- (in ἔβλω) beside μολο- is improbable. I would expect -$l̥h_3$-V- to have yielded -αλV-, which was replaced by -ολV- after the predominant o-vocalism. The metathesis is not an independent phonetic development, but part of this process of morphological reorganisation. Outside Greek, the verb may be found in Slavic, e.g. SCr. iz-mòlīti *'let appear', i.e. 'show', and Sln. molíti 'pass, hand over'. The connection with ToA $mlusk^{ā}$- 'escape' (and ToB $mlutk^{ā}$-? Cf. Adams s.v.) is uncertain. Connection with μέλλω is phonetically improbable (because of the laryngeal), while that with ►μολεύω 'cut off and transplant the shoots of trees' is semantically very difficult.

βόᾱξ [m.] a fish, 'Box boops' (Epich.). ◂?▸ •VAR Ion. βόηξ, later βῶξ. Ar. Byz. preferred βόωψ (ap. Ath.). Cf. βόα = σάλπη (Pancrat. apud Ath.).

•ETYM The ancients believed that the fish was called this way because it cried; see Strömberg 1943: 63-6 and Thompson 1947 s.v. βώξ. Thence the Latin loanword boca; MoGr. βοῦπα, γοῦπα, γῶπα.

βοάω [v.] 'to cry' (Il.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Aor. βοῆσαι (Ion. also βῶσαι), βεβωμένος, ἐβώσθην.
•DER βοή 'cry' (Il.), βοητύς 'id.' (α 369), βόᾱμα, βόημα 'id.' (A.), βόησις 'id.' (Thd., Quint.); βοητής (Hp.), fem. βοᾱτις (αὐδά) 'loud' (A.).
•ETYM Probably a deverbative like ποτάομαι, with deverbal βοή (Schwyzer: 683); alternatively, βοάω is denominative from βοή. A connection with Skt. jóguve 'to speak loudly' (intensive) and BSl., e.g. Lith. gaudžiù, gaũsti 'to cry, weep' and OCS govorъ 'noise' is conceivable, but these may just as well belong to ►γοάω. βοάω is rather onomatopoeic; cf. bū s.v. ►βύας. Lat. boō, boāre was borrowed from Greek. The same root is found in ►βοηθέω, ►βωστρέω.

βοηδρομέω ⇒βοηθόος.

βοηθόος [m.] 'who brings help (in war)' (Il.). ◄GR► •VAR Dor. βοᾱθόος, Att. and Hdt. βοηθός (see below).
•DER Hence a denominative Aetol. βοᾱθοέω (Lesb. βᾱθόημι), and by hyphairesis Dor. βοᾱθέω, Att. and Hdt. βοηθέω 'come to help on a cry, help' (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 96f.). From βοαθόος resp. βοηθό(ο)ς: Aetol. βοαθοῖα (< *βοαθοϝία), Att. βοήθεια 'help' (rebuilt after the nouns in -ειᾰ [Schwyzer: 469]). From βοηθέω as a back-formation βοηθός (or contracted from βοηθόος, see Schwyzer: 469?); βοήθησις 'help' (Hp.).
•ETYM βοηθόος is from an expression like (ἐπὶ) βοὴν θεῖν (see Schulze 1933a: 188). Based on βοηθέω, βοηθός, the synonym βοηδρομέω (Eur.) was created, together with βοηδρόμια [pl.] name of a festival (D.; month name Βοηδρομιών, Βοηδρόμιος), and βοηδρόμος (E.; on the connection, see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 96ff.).

βόθρος [m.] 'hole, trench, pit (dug in the ground)' (Il.; on the mg. see Hutchinson JHS 55 (1935): 1ff.; also as a sports term, see Jüthner Wiener Stud. 53 (1935): 68ff.). ◄PG?►
•DER Diminutive βοθρίον (Alciphr.), also 'small ulcer' (Hp.). Also βόθῡνος [m.] (Cratin.; cf. αἰσχρός : αἰσχύνομαι, Chantraine 1933: 208).
•ETYM βόθρος and βόθυνος have been connected with Lith. bedù 'sting, dig', Lat. fodiō 'to dig', fossa 'ditch', and MW bedd 'canal'. In order to explain the discrepancy between Greek β- and Lat. f-, dissimilation of PIE *b^hod^h- to PGr. *bod^h- was assumed, or influence of βαθύς (but Alciphr. 3, 13 ἐμβαθύνας βόθρια may be a later association). Equally unsatisfying is the solution of Petersson 1921: 128ff., who assumed a labiovelar and connected the word with γυθίσσων· διορύσσων 'digging out' (H.) and further to βαθύς, etc. (see ►βυθός). Since the IE connection is impossible, and the formation (nominal -ῡν-, see Pre-Greek) is also suspect, we should better derive the word from Pre-Greek; even the meaning suggests such origin.

βόλβιτον [n.] 'cow dung' (see Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 54f.). ◄PG►

•VAR Also -ος [m.] (Thphr.), βόλβιθος (PMag. Par.; after σπύραθος, σπέλεθος? See Chantraine 1933: 367); also βόλιτον, -ος (Cratin.); βόλβιτα· ἀφόδευμα βοός 'cow dung' (H.) (i.e. βόλβις), followed by βόλβυθον· τὸ αὐτό.
•DER βολίτινος (Ar.); βολίταινα cuttle fish, which smells badly (Arist.), also βολβίτιον (Gal.) and βολβίς (Epich.).
•ETYM As an alternative to the unsatsifactory assumption that βόλιτον arose from βόλβιτον through dissimilation, Frisk implausibly suggested that it is rather βόλβιτον that is secondary, influenced by βολβός. βόλιτον cannot be derived from βάλλω, βόλος, and βολεών 'Düngerhaufen' either, because this leaves the formation unexplained. Much better is it to explain the variation as Pre-Greek, which is further confirmed by the suffix -ιτον (Fur.: 163; further 180, 187); in addition, the alternations τ ~ θ and ι ~ υ are typical for Pre-Greek. The variation between β and zero, to which Fur.: devotes an entire chapter, is perhaps best explained from a labialized lateral, i.e. *bal^w-it- in this case (cf. ►αὖλαξ and Pre-Greek). The discussions in Frisk and DELG are typical examples of the wrong method to explain away the characteristics of Pre-Greek.

βολβός [m.] 'onion; purse-tassels, Muscari comosum' (Att., Arist.). ◄ONOM► •DER βολβίον (Hp.), βολβάριον (Epict.), βολβίσκος (AP) 'small onion'. From βολβός the plant βολβίνη (Thphr., see Strömberg 1937: 86). On the fishnames βολβίδιον, βολβίτιον, βολβιτίνη see ►βόλβιτον; also βολβῖτις, βολβιτίς. See Thompson 1947: 33.
•ETYM The form of the word is expressive, sound-symbolic, with a kind of reduplication. There are no direct relatives. It is reminiscent of words for round, globular objects, like Lat. bulla 'water bubble', βυλλά· βεβυσμένα 'stuffed objects' (H.), Lith. bur̃bulas 'water bubble', etc.; cf. βομβυλίς s.v. ►βόμβος. Further, similar to Arm. bołk 'radish' (less adequate, however, is Skt. bálba-ja- [m.] kind of grass, 'Eleusine indica', originally 'balba-born'); cf. Pok. 103 and WH s.v. bulbus. Lat. bulbus is a loan. Cf. ►βῶλος.

βολέω ⇒βάλλω.

βολεών 'dunghill' (Din.). ◄GR?►
•DER βολεός 'heaped' (inscr. II^a, LSJ Supp.), of λίθοι 'stones' as boundary marks.
•ETYM Generally derived from βάλλω, but this could be deceptive. The suffix is obscure; see Chantraine 1933: 164. βολεός may or may not be cognate.

βολίζη [f.] 'female slave in Crete' (Seleucus apud Ath. 267c). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

βόλινθος [m.] 'aurochs, the European bison', = βόνασος (Arist.). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM The conclusion, on the basis of βόνασος, that the word derives from *βόνινθος is most uncertain. The influence of βοῦς is also a mere guess. No etymology. Probably Pre-Greek; cf. Krahe Die Antike 15 (1939): 180 and Krause 1958: 62f.

βόλιτον ⇒βόλβιτον.

βομβοία [f.] · ἡ κολυμβὰς ἐλαία παρὰ Κυπρίοις 'olive pickled in brine (Cypr.)' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

βόμβος [m.] 'noise with a low tone' (IA). ◂ONOM, PG▸
•DER βομβέω 'give a low tone, hum' (Il.). βομβάξ interj., as ironic imitation of a swollen style (Ar. Th. 45), with intensive reduplication βομβαλοβομβάξ (ibid. 48). Related are: βομβυλιός (accent. acc. to Hdn. 1, 116; IA) 'humming insect', also vase with a small neck (from the sound when emptied), also βομβύλην· λήκυθον 'a vase' (H.) and βομβυλία· κρήνη ἐν Βοιωτίᾳ 'source in Boeotia' (H.); with different mg.: βομβυλίδας· πομφόλυγας 'waterbubbles' (H.). βόμβυξ, -ῡκος [m.] 'low sounding flute, the lowest tone of a flute' (Ar.); also βομβυκίας (of κάλαμος 'reed-pipe'; Thphr.); Βομβύκᾱ [f.] name of a flute player (Theoc.); also 'drone', with βομβύκιον kind of bee (Arist.). Glosses βομβρύζων· τονθορύζων, βοῶν 'mumbling, shouting'; βομβρυνάζειν· βρενθύεσθαι 'be haughty' (H.). Related is βέμβιξ 'whipping-top; insect'.
•ETYM Although πέμφιξ and πομφόλυξ, variants of βέμβιξ, show typical Pre-Greek charactertistics (e.g. -ῡκ- beside -ῑκ-), the ultimate origin of the word is probably onomatopoeic. Cf. Lith. bim̃balas, Latv. bam̃bals 'beetle', CS bubenъ 'drum', 3sg. Alb. bubullin 'it thunders', ON bumla [f.] 'drum'. Lat. bombus is a Greek loan. See ►βολβός.

βόμβυξ, -υκος [m.] 'silk-worm' (Arist.). ◂PG▸ •VAR The quantity of the υ is unknown.
•DER βομβύκιον 'cocoon of the β.' (Arist.); βομβύκινος (Lib.).
•ETYM βόμβυξ must be of Anatolian origin, as is also suggested by its structure: it is now known that silk was also produced in Greece itself (Kos and Asia Minor) before it was introduced from the east (Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 65). We may compare several words for 'cotton' (see ►βαμβάκιον), of which Osman. pambuk 'cotton' is the best match. The word may derive from an original p/bamb-ūk-* (with suffix -uk-, probably with long ū; cf. also Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 381ff., DNP: 347ff.).

βόνασ(σ)ος [m.] 'aurochs' (Arist.). ◂EUR▸ •ETYM Unexplained; generally considered to be a loanword from a European language. There have been attempts to connect it with ►βόλινθος, which is quite uncertain. Fur.: 213 tries to connect it with Paeonian ►μόναπος, for which there is no basis.

βορά ⇒βιβρώσκω.

βόρασσος [m.] 'growing spadix of the date with immature fruit' (Dsc. 1, 109, 5). ◂LW Eg.▸ •ETYM Egyptian word; cf. Arab. bosr 'unripe date'. See Cuny REA 20 (1918): 223f.

βόρατον ⇒βράθυ.

βόρβορος [m.] 'mire, filth' (Asios). ◂?▸

•DER Βορβορῖται name of an association in Thera (inscr.) and of a Manichaean-gnostic sect (Epiph.). Denominatives: βορβορόω, βορβορίζω (Dsc.; = μολύνει H.). See also ►βοβορύζω.
•ETYM Expressive reduplicated formation, probably onomatopoeic (cf. the gloss βορβορίζει s.v. ►βορβορύζω). A connection with Arm. kork 'dirt', which would require a reconstruction gʷorgʷ(or)o-*, remains very doubtful.

βορβορύζω [v.] 'to rumble' (Hippon., see LSJ Supp.). ◂?▸
•DER βορβορυγή· ποιός τις ἦχος, ὃν καὶ κορκορυγὴν καλοῦσιν 'kind of sound, also called κ.' (H.), βορβορυγμός 'id.' (Hp.); also βορβόρωσις (Archig. apud Aët.), as if from βορβορόω (see ►βόρβορος). βορβορίζει· γογγύζει, μολύνει. Κύπριοι 'grumbles, stains (Cypr.)' (H.), βορβορισμός (Cael. Aur.) = βορβορυγμός.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic reduplicated formation. Connected with ►βόρβορος, though partly different in meaning (developments like these are not infrequently found in onomatopoeic words). In βορβορίζει, the two meanings come together. No etymology.

βορβύλα · πέμμα στρογγύλον διὰ μήκωνος καὶ σησάμης μεγέθους ἄρτου 'round pastry made from poppy and sesame, of the size of a loaf of bread' (H.). ◂LW Anat.▸ •ETYM Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 661 compares Hitt. ^{NINDA}purpura- 'Klotz' or 'Kugel, Knödel'. Names of pastries are frequently borrowed from Asia Minor.

βορέας, -ου [m.] 'north wind, north', also PN (Il.); see Nielsen Class. et Med. 7 (1945): 1ff. ◂IE? gʷ(o)rH-* 'mountain'▸ •DIAL Att. (contracted) βορρᾶς, -ᾶ (see Scheller 1951: 114), Ion. βορέης, contracted βορῆς, -έω, Lesb. βορίαις (ι < ε; αι for ᾱ).
•DER βόρειος, Ion. βορήιος (Chantraine 1933: 52) 'of the north wind'; fem. also βορε(ι)άς, βορηιάς (A.). Local adverbs: βορέηθεν, βορρᾶθεν, βορρόθεν, etc. Denominative: βορεύω 'come from the north' (Thphr.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Taken as 'wind from the mountains', related to a word for 'mountain' seen in Skt. girí-, Av. gairi-, Lith. gìrė 'wood', and OCS gora; cf. Illyr. bora 'mountain' in names (Krahe IF 57 (1940): 125ff.), as well as ►δειράς. So the Ὑπερβόρεοι are properly 'those living beyond the mountains' (Pedersen KZ 36 (1900): 319). The formation, however, is unclear; see Pedersen 1926: 66, Schwyzer: 461. On wind names in -ίας, see Chantraine 1933: 95. Is the word an IE formation at all?

βόσκω [v.] 'to feed, tend', med. 'to feed oneself' (Il.). ◂IE gʷeh₃-* 'feed, tend'▸ •VAR Fut. βοσκήσω (Od., but see Chantraine 1942: 446), hapax βώσεσθε (A. R. 1, 685; see below); ἐβοσκήθην, βεβόσκηκα, ἐβόσκησα are all Hell. and late.
•DIAL Myc. su-qo-ta-o /su-gʷōtāōn/, qo-u-qo-ta /gʷou-gʷōtai/.
•COMP In compounds -βώτης and -βότης (συ-βώ-της, ἱππο-βό-της); αἰγίβοτος 'browsed by goats'; πουλυβότειρα. As a first member in βωτι-άνειρα 'feeding men' (Il.); see Risch 1937: 174.
•DER βοσκή 'fodder, meadow' (A.); βόσκημα 'id.', also 'cattle tended, herd' (trag.). βοσκός 'shepherd' (Aesop.; a back-formation, see Schwyzer 541); fem. βοσκάς 'feeding itself' (Nic.). βόσις 'fodder' (T 268); βοτόν 'cattle', especially 'sheep' (Il.), βοτάνη 'fodder' (Chantraine 1933: 199), βοτέω 'tend' (Nic., H.); βοτήρ 'shepherd' (ο 215; fem. βότειρα (Eust.); βώτωρ (Il.), cf. Benveniste 1948: 29 on the difference between -τωρ and -τήρ.

•ETYM Old IE verb. Its nearest relation is Lith. gúotas 'herd' ($g^{w}eh_{3}$-to-); cf. βοτόν ($g^{w}h_{3}$-to-). ►βοῦς is probably derived from this root.

βόσμαρος [m.] 'Indian millet, Ragi, Eleusine coracana' (Str.). ◄?►
•VAR βόσμορον (Peripl. M. Rubr.).
•ETYM Unknown.

βόστρυχος [m.] 'curl, lock of hair' (Archil.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Plur. also βόστρυχα (AP).
•DER βοστρύχιον, also 'vine-tendril' (Arist., AP), βοστρύχια· στέμφυλα 'mass of pressed graped or olives' (H.); cf. βότρυχος s.v. ►βότρυς; βοστρυχηδόν 'in locks' (Luc.). βοστρυχίζω, βοστρυχόομαι. On the suffix -χ- see Chantraine 1933: 402.
•ETYM Unknown. The suffix -υχ- could well be Pre-Greek (-υC- is frequent), and such origin is probable for the whole word. On the confusion with ►βότρυς, see there.

βοτάνη ⇒βόσκω.

βότις a fish (Sophr.). ◄?►
•VAR βότις· βόλτιον H., considered corrupt by Latte; on sufficient grounds?
•ETYM Perhaps identical with ►βατίς.

βότρυς, -υος [m.] 'bunch of grapes' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also acc. βότρυα (Euph.), LSJ Supp.
•DER βοτρυηρός 'of the genus grapes' (Thphr., cf. οἰνηρός Chantraine 1933: 233). βοτρυΐτης, -ῖτις (λίθος) kind of pearl, 'Calamine' (Dsc.). Adverb βοτρυδόν (Il.). Isolated βοτρυμός· τρυγητός 'vintage' (H.), as if from *βοτρύω; see Schwyzer: 492. After βόστρυχος arose βότρυχος 'lock of hair' (Pherecr.; probably E. Or. 1267) and βοστρύχιον 'vine-tendril' and βοστριχίτης, see ►βόστρυχος.
•ETYM Like ἄμπελος, the word is probably Pre-Greek. It is hardly Semitic (Hebr. boṣer 'uvae immaturae acerbae'), as per Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 661. Fur.: 302 considers it originally to have been identical with βόστρυχος (interchange στ/ τ); this is very doubtful.

βου- augmentative prefix. ◄GR► •ETYM This meaning seems to have developed from the bahuvrīhi compounds of the type 'having X like a β.' See βούβρωστις, βουγάϊε, etc. Cf. DELG and further Richardson BICS 8 (1961): 15-22 and Richardson Hermathena 96 (1962): 92.

βοῦα [f.]? · ἀγέλη παίδων. Λάκωνες 'a group of children (Lacon.)' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Wrong accent acc. to DELG. βουόα· ἀγέλη τις 'a herd' (EM; perhaps from βουσόα, to σεύειν? But original σσ would not have disappeared; Wahrmann Glotta 17 (1929): 242 supposes an hyperarchaism).
•DER βουαγόρ· ἀγελάρχης, ὁ τῆς ἀγέλης ἄρχων παῖς. Λάκωνες 'slave who watches over the herd (Lacon.)' (H.); also βουαγός, βοαγός (inscr.). Further συμβοῦαι· συνωμόται 'confederate'. συμβουάδ<δ>ει· ὑπερμαχεῖ. Λάκωνες 'fight in defense of' (H.).
•ETYM According to von Blumenthal 1930: 9, the word is Illyrian for φυή; this is semantically improbable. See Bechtel 1921, 2: 368f. and Kretschmer Glotta 17 (1929): 242.

βουαγετόν [m.]/[n.]? · ὑπὸ βοῶν εἱλκυσμένον ξύλον 'piece of wood drawn by oxen' (H.). ◄GR► •ETYM The word is simply from βοῦς and ἄγω.

βουάκραι [f.] · οἱ φοίνικες ὑπὸ Λακώνων (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. LSJ translates 'palms', but it is impossible to know if this was really the intended sense.

βουβάλιον 1 [n.] 'bracelet' (Com., inscr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Mostly plur. -ια. Cf. βουπάλινα (Delos) and βουπαλίδες· περισκελίδες 'leg-bands' (H.).
•ETYM The variation β ~ π points to Pre-Greek origin (so not from πάλλω!). For the suffix -ιν-, Fur.: 145, 373 refers to γοσσύπινον, ἀπόλινον. The word is hardly connected with βούβαλις 'antelope' (as per L. Robert 1963: 24-30).

βουβάλιον 2 [n.] 'wild cucumber, ἄγριος σικυός' (Ps. Diosc., Hp. apud H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Explained from the prefix ►βου- and ►βάλλω, see André Ét. class. 24 (1956): 40-2, but this looks like a folk-etymological explanation; the structure of the word is strange. As a plant name, the word is rather Pre-Greek.

βούβαλις, -ι(δ)ος [f.] '(African) antilope' (Hdt.); see Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 52; Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 263. ◄?►
•VAR Also βούβαλος [m.] (Arist.).
•ETYM The word seems to contain ►βοῦς, but this is rather a secondary association, as the formation is unclear. It was borrowed as Lat. būbalus, whence later bufalus, OFr. bufle, E buffalo.

βουβάρας · (1) μεγαλοναύτης, παρὰ τὴν βᾶριν 'great sailor [?], after the β. (a flat-bottomed boat)' καὶ (2) μέγα βάρος ἔχων 'having heavy weight' καὶ (3) αὐχηματίας 'boaster' ἢ (4) ὁ μέγας καὶ ἀναίσθητος ἄνθρωπος 'great and unnoticed man' (H.). ◄GR, ?►
•VAR Cod. βοβ-. Cf. βούβαρις· νεὼς ὄνομα 'name of a ship' (H.).
•ETYM In (3) the ms. has και αὐχηματίας; καυχητίων ex EM Alb. The other definitions are clear.

βούβαστις [f.] 'groin' (Aët.). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Related to ►βουβών; further unknown. DELG improbably considers it to have been coined after the Egyptian goddess Βούβαστις. Note that Pre-Greek has a suffix -(α)στ-; see Pre-Greek.

βούβητις, -ιος [f.] 'stream for watering cattle'(?) (Tab. Heracl. 2, 13, 14). ◄?►

•ETYM Since the word is Doric, it is not related to ἔβην (ἔβᾱν). The form *-βα-ετις (Schwyzer: 270) has no basis. The old connection with Lith. gė̃tis 'Viehtrift' seems impossible, as a labiovelar would yield δ-. Foreign origin (Kretschmer KZ 30 (1890): 579, Fraenkel 1910: 116 A. 1) is always possible, but βου- suggests a Greek word.

βούβρωστις [f.] 'ravenous appetite' (Ω 532), also as a goddess. ◄GR?► •ETYM The meaning is not quite certain: 'hunger' does not fit well in Homer, and in antiquity it was interpreted as οἶστρος 'gadfly'. The word seems to have an augmentative ►βου- (Schwyzer: 434), like βούλιμος and βούπεινα (which are possibly synonymous), and a second element as in βιβρώσκω; it is modelled after νῆστις (Risch 1937: 39), but as an agent noun (like ►ἄμπωτις).

βουβών, -ῶνος [m.] 'groin' (Il.); 'swollen gland' (Hp.). ◄?►
•VAR Late also βομβών (Moeris; after βόμβος?).
•DER βουβωνίσκος 'bandage for the groin' (Heliod. apud Orib.; cf. γραφίσκος, etc., Chantraine 1933: 408); βουβώνιον the plant 'Aster amellus' (Dsc., Strömberg 1940: 87). Denominative βουβωνιάω 'to suffer from swollen glands' (Ar.).
•ETYM Unknown. Formation like μυών, σιαγών. Connection with βουνός 'hill' is morphologically impossible. It can hardly be related to Skt. gavīnī́ [f.du.] 'part of the lower body'. If the (late) variant βόμβων is reliable, the word is then be Pre-Greek.

βουγάϊε [m.] 'braggart'? (Ν 824, σ 79). ◄?►
•VAR Schol. βουκαίε.
•ETYM Contains the prefix ►βου- as in ►βούβρωστις, βουκόρυζα, βούπαις, etc.; the second member could be related to the pres. ►γαίω (cf. κύδεϊ γαίων). The ᾱ is problematic (Zenodotus wrote βουγήϊε; Chantraine 1942: 22). See Latacz 1966: 129f.

βουκάτια [n.pl.] a festival in Delphi (inscr.). ◄IE? tk̑en-* 'slay'► •DER Βουκάτιος name of a month.
•ETYM The analysis as 'killing of cows' (from καίνω) is factually correct. Puhvel KZ 79 (1964-5): 7ff. (after Wackernagel-Debrunner 1930: 372) reads '(festival) of 100 cows' as in Skt. go-śatam. Note that ►ἑκατόν derives from dk̑m̥-tom* > ekaton*, and that the d* also leaves a trace in the decades in -dk̑omth*$_2$ > -ήκοντα. This shows that the -t-* did not cause lengthening.

βουκόλος [m., adj.] 'cowherd' (Il.). ◄IE kʷel(H)-* 'turn around'► •DIAL Myc. qo-u-ko-ro /gʷou-kolos/.
•DER βουκολίαι 'herds of cattle' (h. Merc.), βουκόλια (-ιον) 'id.' (Hdt.); βουκολεῖον 'office of the ἄρχων βασιλεύς' (Arist. Ath. 3, 5; cf. πρυτανεῖον); βουκολίς [f.], also [adj.] 'pasture' (D. H.); βουκολίσκος kind of bandage (Gal.; cf. βουβωνίσκος s.v. ►βουβών); βουκολίνη· κίγκλος τὸ ὄρνεον 'the bird κ.' (H.); see Thompson 1895 s.v.; βουκολικός 'ptng. to the shepherd', "bucolic" (Theoc.). Denominative βουκολέω (Il.), βουκολιάζομαι, -ιάζω 'sing shepherd songs' (Theoc.). From βουκόλος, as a short name, Βοῦκος (Theoc.).
•ETYM Old compound of βοῦς and πέλομαι, cognate with OIr. búachaill, MW bugail 'shepherd'. Cf. ►αἰπόλος and ►ἀμφίπολος.

βουκονιστήριον [n.] 'arena for bulls' (IGRom. 3, 484, Oenoanda II[p]). ◄GR► •ETYM For κονιστήριον (Vitr., Pergamon), cf. κονίστρα 'arena' (Heberdey and Kalinka 1897: 2, 70). Acc. to Robert Hellenika 3 (1946): 149f., however, it must be equated with βυκανιστήριον.

βουλιμία [f.] 'hunger like a bull' (Timocl.). ◄GR► •DER βουλιμιάω [v.] 'to have hunger like a bull' (Ar.). βουλιμώττω (Suid.) = βουλιμιάω.
•ETYM From βούλιμος, properly an adjective (Alex.), but also = βουλιμία (Plu.) by association with λιμός; see Risch IF 59 (1949): 59. In contains augmentative ►βου-, as in ►βούβρωστις, ►βουγάϊε.

βούλομαι [v.] 'want, wish' (Il.). ◄IE gʷel-* (gʷelh*$_3$-?) 'want, wish'► •VAR The other tenses are based on the present: βουλήσομαι, ἐβουλήθην, βεβούλημαι. On βέβουλα (Α 113) see below.
•DIAL Arc.-Cypr. Eretr. (also Hom., see Chantraine 1942: 311) βόλομαι, Lesb. βόλλομαι, Dor. (Cret.) βώλομαι; Thess. βέλλομαι, Boeot. βείλομη, Dor. (Heracl., etc.) δήλομαι, Locr. Delph. δείλομαι.
•DER βουλή 'will, decision, council' (Il.); Dor. Arc. βωλά, Lesb. βόλλα. Denominative βουλεύω (βωλ-, βολλ-εύω), -ομαι 'deliberate' (Il.), with many derivatives: βούλευμα, βουλεία, βουλευτής, βουλευτήριον 'council chamber'.
•ETYM The verb has been much discussed, yet there is no agreement on its prehistory (the root must have been gʷel-/gʷol-*). We can assume that there was a perfect *βέβολα with present meaning, a trace of which could be found in προ-βέβουλα (Α 113), with ου from βούλομαι. The o-vocalism and the β- may have spread from there. (We cannot exclude influence from βουλή, but this is probably itself to be derived from the present.) However, it seems doubtful that the perfect alone is the source of the pervasive o-vocalism. The central problem is the origin of the present, for which a suffix -n- or -s- has been assumed, although Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 315f. maintains that only -λν- can explain the compensatory lengthening (see also Slings Mnem. 28 (1975): 1-16). Peters 1986: 311 suggested a root in -h*$_3$, which may help to explain the o-vocalism: a nasal present gʷl-n-h*$_3$- would have yielded *βαλνο- [or βλανο-?], which was replaced by *βολν-, and Pamphylian βΟλΕμενος would have βολε- < βελο- < gʷelh$_3$-. However, Peters' solution remains problematic because we have no evidence of βλω-, nor is there a clear basis for the introduction of the o-vocalism.

βουλῡτός [m.] lit. "unyoking of the oxen", 'evening' (Π 779 = ι 58, in βουλυτόν δε). ◄GR► •ETYM From ►βοῦς and ►λύω with a suffix -το- (Chantraine 1933: 303). The length in λῡ- is caused by a laryngeal, also seen in Lat. so-lū-tus, Skt. lū-na- 'cut off', and in ToAB läw[ā]- 'to send'.

βουνός [m.] 'hill' (Hdt.). ◄PG?►
•VAR βουνός· στιβάς, κύπριοι 'bed of leaves, matress (Cypr.)' (H.).

•DER βοῦνις [f.] 'hilly' (A.; cf. θοῦρις). Plant names βουνιάς 'Brassica napus' (Agatharch.) and βούνιον 'Bunium ferulaceum' (Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 117. βουνίτης epithet of Pan, but reinterpreted as containing βοῦς; Dor. βωνίτης.
•ETYM Acc. to Hdt. 4, 199, the word is Cyrenaean, but it is actually Doric (Solmsen BPhW 1906: 756f.). It is a dialectal word that spread in Hellenistic times (DELG). Fur.: 208, 213 cites μουνιάς, μουνιαδικόν as variants of βουνιάς, which may point to Pre-Greek origin. He further adduces Basque muno 'hill', and additionally refers to προύνους· βουνούς (H.). Fur.: 213[53] thinks that βουνός· στιβάς 'bed of straw' derives from βύνω.

βουπαλίδες •VAR βουπάλινα. ⇒βουβάλιον.

βούπρηστις [adj.] 'poisonous beetle' (Nic.); also a plant, Bunias erucago? (Thphr.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM See Amigues RPh. 64 (1990): 89-97, who interprets it as 'who inflames cattle', and explains the plant name as secondary to that of the animal.

βούπτινον [m.]/[n.]? · βοτάνη, λεγομένη τρίφυλλον 'a plant called clover' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Fur.: 318 thinks that the word is Pre-Greek because of the group πτ, which is quite possible.

βουρδών [m.] 'mule' (Edict. Dioclet.). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM A loanword from Lat. burdō.

βοῦς [f., m.] 'cow, bull, ox' (Il.). ◂IE $g^w eh_3$-u- 'cow'▸ •VAR Gen. βοός; acc. βῶν (Dor. and H 238), Dor. nom. βῶς; Att. acc. βοῦν after βοῦς (see below).
•DIAL Myc. qo-o /g^wōns/? (Ruijgh 1967a: 131).
•COMP As a first member, βου-, βο(ϝ)- (before vowel): βουκόλος, βούβοτος, ►βούτυρον, βοηλάτης, ►βοῶπις. On augmentative ►βου- s.v. and ►βούβρωστις, ►βουγάιε, ►βουλιμία. See also ►ἑκατόμβη. As a second member also -βοιος, e.g. ἐννεά-βοιος (Il.) < *-βοϝιο- = Skt. gávya- (see below).
•DER Diminutives βοΐδιον (Ar.), βούδιον (Hermipp., pap.). Further βούτης 'cowherd', also adj. 'of a cow' (A.), with πολυ-βούτης 'rich in cows'; βοεύς 'strap of cow-leather' (β 426), βοών, -ῶνος [m.] 'cow-sty' (Heraklea).
Adjectives: βόειος, βόεος 'bovine' (Il.), substantivized fem. βοείη, βοέη 'cow-hide' (Il.). With a suffix -κ-: βοει-κός (Th. et al.) and βο-ϊκός (Elis, Priene); also βόϊνος (gloss., Eust.); βοώδης (Adam., Apollon. Lex.).
Denominative verb βοόω 'to transform into an ox' (Eust.).
On Βοῦκος, βουκαῖος see ►βουκόλος. See also ►βοῦα and ►βουσός.
•ETYM βοῦς is cognate of Skt. gáuḥ, acc. gā́m (= βῶν), Lat. bōs (from Osc.-Umbr.), gen.pl. boum = βοῶν = Skt. gávām, U acc. bum = βῶν; Arm. kov (u-stem), OIr. bó, OHG chuo, ToA ko, ToB ke_u, Latv. gùovs all 'cow', OCS gov-ędo 'cattle'. Adjective g^wou-io- in -βο(ϝ)ιος = Skt. gávya-, Arm. kogi 'butter'.
The root was probably $g^w eh_3$-, as seen in ►βόσκω 'to tend'; the circumflex accent in the nom.sg. points to a lost laryngeal. The original inflection is still unclear: we expect $g^w eh_3$-u-s, gen. $g^w h_3$-eu-s (proterodynamic); the latter form explains Av. gaoš and Gr. βοϝός, but not Skt. gáuḥ, nor the acc. gā́m, βών, which look like old forms. The Greek nom. could be $g^w eh_3$-us > βοῦς; the acc. may have been g^wōm < older g^woum.

βουσός [f.] 'path for cows', only dat. βουσοῖ (Orchomenos, Arcadia, Schwyzer: 664, 15; 18). ◂GR?▸ •ETYM From *βου-σόϝος (Schwyzer: 450); related to ►σεύω. Cf. μηλοσόη· ὁδός, δι' ἧς πρόβατα ἐλαύνεται. Ῥόδιοι 'road on which cattle is driven (Rhod.)' (H.), as well as ►βοῦα. Not related to Ion. βυσσός 'depth, bottom' (as per Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 22).

βουτάνη [f.] A: · (1) μέρος τι τῆς μακρᾶς νεώς 'part of a long ship'; (2) ἢ μάστιξ 'a whip', ἢ (3) τάνυσις τῆς βοείας 'force of an ox'. (4) μέρος δὲ τῆς νεώς, πρὸς ὃ τὸ πηδάλιον δεσμεύεται 'part of the ship to which the rudder is tied'. (5) δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ μάχην 'a battle'. (6) ἀηδίαν 'nausea'. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. B: βουστάνη· βοοστασία, ἡ τῶν βοῶν στάσις 'cowshed'. (2) ἢ μάστιξ 'whip', (3) καὶ πληγή 'blow'.
•ETYM Glosses A1, B3, and A4, which was added later, are unexplained. Gloss A2 is identical to B2: they show the typical Pre-Greek variation τ ~ στ (Fur.: 304f). For A5, Fur. compares βύτανα· κόνδυλοι 'knuckle, swelling' (H.), and for A6, he suggests that a gloss βούταλις (Aisop. 85) ἀηδών was lost (Fur. 305f.). A3 and B1 are probably folk etymologies from antiquity.

βοῦτ(τ)ις [f.] 'vase in the form of a frustum of a cone' (Hero). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also βούτη.
•ETYM Lat. buttis may be borrowed from Greek; the Greek word itself is evidently Pre-Greek because of the alternation τ ~ ττ. See ►βυτίνη, βωτίον, ►βωσίον (cf. also Szemerényi BSOAS 19 (1957): 627f.).

βούτῡρον [n.] 'butter' (Hp.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Also βούτυρος (Gal.), after τυρός.
•ETYM From βοῦς and τυρός; cf. βούσταθμον (: σταθμός). Lat. būtȳrum is borrowed from the Greek, and from the Latin in turn OHG butera, MoDu. boter, etc. See Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 177f.

βοῶπις [adj.] epithet of Hera: 'with the head of a cow'(?), 'with the eyes of a cow' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From ►βοῦς and ►*ὤψ.

βρά [?] · ἀδελφοί, ὑπὸ Ἠλείων 'brothers [Elean]' (cod. Ιλειων) (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM If the word is related to φράτηρ, it could perhaps be an Illyrian element in the Elean dialect, cf. Alb. vëlla 'brother', which is unexplained otherwise (Demiraj 1997; cf. also Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 33; Pisani Sprache 7 (1961): 100). Latte even reads Ἰλλυρίων for the Ιλειων of the manuscript.

βραβεύς [m.] 'judge at the games, arbitrator, umpire; leader' (S.). ◂PG?▸
•DIAL Here perhaps Myc. mo-ro-qa, but form and mg. (a person, official?) are unknown.

•DER βράβευμα 'decision of a judge' (S.), βραβεία 'decision' (E.), βραβεῖον 'prize' (Men.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Probably Pre-Greek (see Chantraine 1933: 125). In order to account for the Myc. form (where /a/ may phonetically be [o]), we may reconstruct *mrogʷ-, *miragʷ-, or *mr̥gʷ-. If this word is of Pre-Greek origin indeed, this could imply that the athletic contests, too, are part of the Pre-Greek heritage.

βράβῠλον [n.] 'sloe, Prunus spinosa' (Theoc.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR βράβυλος [f.] (Aret.). Mss. also βραβι-, βραβη-; also βάρβιλος (Gp).
•ETYM Unknown; a loanword. Cf. βραβύλη = ἀνεμώνη ἡ φοινικῆ (Ps.-Dsc.). See André 1956 s.v. brabilla.

βράγος [?] · ἕλος 'marsh-meadow' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM βράγος might somehow be related to βράχος, βράχεα 'shallows' (Hdt.). For these words, Fick BB 29 (1905): 199f. proposed that they are of Macedonian origin, whereas Çabej 1969: 176 compared Alb. bërrakë 'sumpfiges Land'. According to Moutsos KZ 88 (1974): 74-76, who reads βραγός (as in the ms.), the word means 'embankment, garden-plot' (however, his IE etymology remains quite uncertain).

βράγχος [m.] 'hoarseness, angina' (Hp.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also βάραγχος (Hippon.), βράγχη [f.] (Xenocr.) 'id.' and βραγχία· ἡ περιτράχηλος ἀλγηδών 'pain around the neck' (H.).
•DER βραγχαλέος 'hoarse' (Hp.), βραγχός 'id.' (AP). βραγχάω, βραγχιάω [v.] 'to have a sore throat' (Arist.); βραγχιάζοισθε· πνίγοισθε 'choke, stifle' (H.). Different mg. in βράγχια [pl.] 'gills of fishes, bronchial tubes', also βαράγχια, βαράχνια (Hdn.).
•ETYM The resemblance with βρόγχος 'windpipe' may have caused the semantic shift of βράγχια. Fur. 128, 276 connects the word with βραχώδης· τραχύς 'rough, harsh' (H.), βρακίας· τραχεῖς τόπους 'rough places' (H.), and βαρακινῆσιν· ἀκάνθαις. σκόλοψι 'thorns, palisade' (H.). Thus, we arrive at a set of variants βρακ-/ βραχ-/ βραγχ-, which are typical of Pre-Greek. The aorist βραχεῖν 'rattle, clash' (Johansson KZ 36 (1900): 345f.) may also be connected as 'produce a raw sound'. The additional α in the first syllable of βάραγχος (Schwyzer: 278, 831) may be due to purely phonetic epenthesis, but this type of variation, too, is frequent in Pre-Greek words as well (Fur.: 378-385).

βραδύς [adj.] 'slow' (Il.). ⊲IE? *gʷrd-u- 'slow'⊳ •VAR Compar. and superl. βραδύτερος, -τατος, also βραδίων, βάρδιστος and βραδίστατος (Ael.).
•DER βραδυτής, -τῆτος 'slowness' (Il.), βράδος 'id.' (X.; after τάχος). Denominative βραδύνω 'retard' (A.).
•ETYM βραδύς may morphologically be identical with Lith. gurdùs 'slow', Latv. gur̃ds 'tired', reflecting *gʷr̥dú- (Fraenkel Phil. 97 (1948): 172; Fraenkel KZ 69 (1951): 76ff.). Lat. gurdus 'dolt, heavy' can be connected as well (De Vaan 2008 s.v.).

βράθυ 1 [n.] 'savin, Juniperus sabina'; also 'Juniperus foetidissima' (Dsc.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR Also βόρατον [n.] (D. S.); βορατίνη (Aq.).

•ETYM βράθυ has been compared with a Semitic word, Aram. bᵉrāt, Hebr. bᵉrōš, Assyr. burāšu 'cypress'; Lat. bratus (Plin.), an Anatolian cypress, must go back to the same source (Lewy 1895: 34; Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 671).
Fur.: 187 thinks it is rather a loan word from the Near East, comparing κυπάρισσος and Hebr. gōfer (this might be supported by the suffix -ιν-). For the u-stem, cf. μῶλυ, μίσυ, and σῶρυ (Chantraine 1933: 119), as well as δάκρυ 'resin'.

βράθυ 2 · πόα τις θεοῖς θυομένη 'some herb offered to the gods' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

βράκαι [f.pl.] 'breeches' (pap., inscr., D. S.), worn by Gauls. ⊲LW Celt.⊳ •ETYM Borrowed from Celtic, just like Lat. brācae.

βράκαλον ⇒ῥόπαλον.

βράκανα [n.] · τὰ ἄγρια λάχανα 'wild vegetables' (H.; also Pherecr., Luc.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM βράκανα has been compared with OHG moraha, OE moru 'carrot'. Fur.: 330 rather compared βάκανον 'cabbage(-seed)' (Aët.), which requires the assumption of an alternation β ~ βρ (or even β ~ βδ ~ βρ); for such an alternation there are indeed parallels in the Pre-Greek lexicon.

βρακεῖν [v.] · συνιέναι 'to comprehend'; βράξαι· συλλαβεῖν, δακεῖν, καταπιεῖν 'to put together, comprehend; bite; gulp down' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Perhaps also to be considered here is δυσβράκανον· δυσχερές, ... δυσκατανόητον 'hard to manage, ... hard to understand' (H.). Since Roth KZ 19 (1870): 223, the word has been connected with Skt. mr̥śáti 'touch, take, seize' (*mr̥ḱ-). Further comparisons have been with βράψαι· συλλαβεῖν, ἀναλῶσαι, κρύψαι, θηρεῦσαι 'comprehend; spend; hide; hunt' and βράπτειν· ἐσθίειν, κρύπτειν, ἀφανίζειν, τῷ στόματι ἕλκειν, ἢ στενάζειν 'eat; hide; render invisible; suck up with the mouth; sigh', as either influenced by μάρψαι or related to it (with assimilation of κ to initial μ-, giving π; Schwyzer: 302). All of these comparisons are uncertain (see ►μάρπτω). Cf. further βράκετον· ... πλῆθος 'crowd' and βράττειν· πληθύνειν, βαρύνειν 'multiply, oppress' (H.). See Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 200. See ►βρόξαι.

βράκος [m.]? · κάλαμος. ἱμάτιον πολυτελές 'reed; an expensive cloak' (H., also Sappho 57, Theoc. 28,11). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM The word has been identified with ►ῥάκος 'ragged cloth', but the meaning does not fit. Also, the first gloss is unclear. Perhaps the word goes back to *u̯r̥ko-, parallel to γάρκαν· ῥάβδον 'rod' (H.; Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 199f.).

βράπτειν ⇒βρακεῖν.

βράσσω [v.] 'to shake violently, agitate, boil (up), winnow' (Ar.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Att. βράττω, also ἐκ-βρήσσω (Gal.), aor. βρᾶσαι, ἐβράσθην, fut. βράσω, perf. βέβρασμαι. In H., · τὸ ἡσυχῇ ὀδύρεσθαι 'wailing in silence'. Also βράζω 'be boiling'.
•DER βρασμός 'boiling', βράσμα 'id.', βρασματίας 'upheaval' (Posidon., etc.; cf. μυκητίας σεισμός, σεισματίας Chantraine 1933: 94f.), βράσις 'boiling' (Orib.). βράστης [m.] 'earthquake' (Arist.), βραστήρ 'winnowing-fan' (gloss.).

•ETYM Bezzenberger BB 27 (1902): 152f. connected the word with Latv. murdēt 'boil up', Lith. mùrdau, mùrdyti "etwas im Wasser rüttelnd behandeln"; this is uncertain.

βράσσων ⇒βραχύς.

βραυκανᾶσθαι [v.] · ἐπὶ τῶν κλαιόντων παιδίων λέγεται ὡς μίμημα φωνῆς 'is said when children weep, onomatopoeic' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Related to βροῦκος?

βραχεῖν [v.] · ἠχῆσαι, ψοφῆσαι 'to sound' (H.), 'to rattle, clash' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aor. βράχε, ἔβραχε. Perhaps here βράχαλον· χρεμετισμόν 'neighing' (H.).
•ETYM Possibly related to ▸βράγχος.

βραχίων, -ονος [m.] 'upper arm', as opposed to ▸πῆχυς (Il.). ◂GR?▸
•DER βραχιόνιον 'armlet' (Delos II[a]), βραχιονιστήρ 'id.' (Plu.), see Chantraine 1933: 327f.; βραχιάλιον, -άριον (Sm.), βραχιόλιον (Alex. Trall.) from Lat. bracchiale, bracchiolum.
•ETYM According to Pollux 2, 138 originally the comparative of ▸βραχύς: ὅτι ἐστὶ τοῦ πήχεως βραχύτερος 'because it is shorter than the forearm'. However, the phonetically regular reflex of mr̥ǵʰ-ios-* is probably seen in βράσσων (K 226): βραχίων would have to be a later formation. Alternatively, Ruijgh Minos 9 (1968): 147f. (see also Ruijgh 1991b: 585) assumes that it has the same suffix as Κυλλοποδίων. The word was borrowed as Lat. bracchium, which in turn was the source of MW braich, etc.

βραχύς [adj.] 'short' (Hdt., Pi.). ◂IE mr̥ǵʰú-* 'short'▸ •VAR Grades of compar. βραχύτερος, -τατος, βράχιστος. βραχίων (in this sense only Choerob., elsewhere 'upper arm', s.v.); hapax legomenon βράσσων τε νόος (K 226), after θάσσων?
•DIAL Aeol. βροχύς.
•DER βραχύτης, -τητος (Pl.); τὸ βράχος (only Procop.). Denominative βραχύνω 'shorten' (Hp.). On βράχεα [n.pl.] 'shallows' see ▸βράγος.
•ETYM βραχύς (< mr̥ǵʰú-*) finds a morphological match in Skt. múhuḥ, múhu [adv.] 'suddenly', muhūrtá- [n.] 'short time, moment' (Prakritisms for mr̥hú-*), Av. mərəzu- 'short' in mərəzu-jīti-, mərəzu-juua- 'short life' resp. 'short-lived' (cf. ὁ βίος βραχύς [Hp.]), Sogd. murzak 'id.', OHG murg(i) 'short', and OE myrge 'entertaining' ("kurzweilig"). Further related are Go. ga-maurgjan 'to shorten', and Lat. brevis (< mreǵʰu-i-*).

βρέγμα •VAR βρεγμός. ⇒βρεχμός.

βρέγμα 2 ⇒βρέχω.

βρέγμα 3 [n.] a substance found in peppercorns (Dsc.2, 159). ◂LW India▸ •ETYM Word of Indian origin, acc. to Pliny NH XII, 14,27; see Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 64.

βρεκεκεκέξ [interj.] imitation of the sound of frogs (Ar. Ran. 209). ◂ONOM▸

βρέμω [v.] 'to roar, grumble' (Il.). ◂ONOM▸
•VAR Only pres.
•COMP βαρύ-βρομος, etc.; -βρεμ-έτης in ἐρι-, ὑψι-βρεμ-έτης (Il.). -βρέν-τᾱς in ἀναξι-βρέν-τᾱς, ἀργι-βρέν-τᾱς. Also αἰολο-βρόντᾱς from βροντάω.
•DER βρόμος 'loud noise' (Il.) whence βρόμιος 'boisterous' (Pi.), Βρόμιος as a name of Bacchos (A.). -βροντή 'thunder' (Il.), Βρόντης name of a Cyclops (Hes.), Βροντήσιος (Ζεύς); βροντέα name of a precious stone (Plin.). Denominative βροντάω 'to thunder' (Il.). βρενταί· βρονταί (H.). Deverbative βρομέω (iterative-intensive) (Il.); βρωμάομαι 'cry' (Ar.). Further βρεμεαίνων· ἠχῶν H., see ▸βλεμεαίνω. Note that the -ντ-forms refer to thunder, whereas the forms with μ and without τ indicate droning sounds in general.
•ETYM Although βρέμω resembles Lat. fremō 'to rumble, roar', OHG breman 'buzz', and MW brefu 'roar' (Pok. 142), these cannot be connected, since they derive from bʰrem-*, whereas Greek has β-. Therefore, it is rather an onomatopoeic word. ▸βρόμος ~ βόρμος in the sense 'oats' (Hp.) is not related, but probably Pre-Greek. Cf. ▸χρεμετίζω.

βρένδον [m.]/[n.]? · ἔλαφον 'deer' (H.). βρέντιον· ἡ κεφαλὴ τοῦ ἐλάφου 'a stag's head; the head of a deer' (Str. 6,3,6, EM). ◂LW Messap.▸ •ETYM A Messapian word (EM), possibly also found in place names, e.g. Βρεντέσιον = Brundisium. Further possible cognates are found in NGm., e.g. MoSw. dial. brind(e) 'male elk' and MoNw. (dial.) brund (Latv. briêdis, probably from Gm.); cf. Alb. bri 'horn, antlers', without a dental (Demiraj 1997 s.v.). See Krahe 1955: 39; Rix Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 5 (1970): 115ff.

βρένθος [m.] is attested in wide variety of (only partly polysemic) meanings: 1. a bird (a waterbird in Arist. HA 609[a]23, but a singing bird (v.l. βρίνθος) in Arist. HA 15[a]16 = κόσσυφον 'blackbird' (H.); see Thompson 1895 s.v.); 2. 'pride' (Ath.); 3. · πυθμήν, τύμβος 'bottom, base; tomb' (H.). 4. a perfume βρένθον· μύρον τι 'a perfume' <τῶν παχέων>, ὡς βάκκαρις (an unguent), οἱ δὲ ἄνθινον μύρον 'perfume of flowers' (H.), cf. βρενθινῷ· ἀνθινῷ (H.). 5. βρένθινα· ῥιζάρια τινά, οἷς ἐρυθραίνονται αἱ γυναῖκες τὰς παρειάς 'roots with which women redden their cheeks' · οἱ δὲ ἄγχουσαν, οὐκ εὖ ... οἱ δὲ φῦκος ('orchil'?) παρεμφερὲς κύδει Ἀφροδίτης (H.) 6. βρένθις = θρίδαξ (Nic. fr. 120), βρένθιξ· θριδακίνη. Κύπριοι 'lettuce (Cypr.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •DER βρένθειον (μύρον; Sapph.). βρένθυς, -υος [f.] 'perfume of βρένθειον μύρον' (Phld.). More usual is βρενθύομαι (pres. only) 'to behave haughtily, swagger' (Ar.), also βρενθύνομαι (AP).
•ETYM DELG is of the opinion that the name of the bird is the same word as that for 'arrogance', which is quite doubtful. It suggests that there were two groups, the bird name (and 'arrogance') on the one hand, and the plants and perfume on the other. The word for 'τύμβος' may constitute yet another group. However, these categories remain uncertain.
If the v.l. βρίνθος is reliable, the bird name may be Pre-Greek because of the variation ι/ ε. On the other hand, βρινδεῖν· θυμοῦσθαι, ἐρεθίζειν 'be agitated, provoke' (H.) is not related (pace von Blumenthal 1930: 6, Krahe DLZ 51 (1930): 1654; see also Alessio Studi etruschi 15 (1941): 190ff.).

βρέτας, -εος [n.] 'wooden image of a god' (A.). ◂PG?▸
•DER PN Βρέτων (Attica), Bechtel 1917a: 13f.
•ETYM DELG suggests that the word is the Doric equivalent of ►ξόανον, likewise an image of a god. No etymology (see Benveniste RPh. 58 (1929)128f.).

βρέφος [n.] 'newborn child, young of an animal' (Il.). ◂IE? *g^werb^h- / g^wreb^h- 'child, young'▸ •COMP βρεφο-κτόνος 'child-killing' (Lyc.).
•DER βρεφώδης 'childish' (Ph.), βρεφόθεν 'from childhood' (Eust.).
•ETYM βρέφος is related to OCS žrěbę, žrěbьcь 'foal'; the Greek reflects *g^wreb^h-, but the Slavic must go back to *g^werb^h- (in South Slavic, the regular metathesis of PSl. er yields rě). The appurtenance of MIr. brommach 'foal' (< *g^wromb^hāko-) is uncertain; on Skt. gárbha- 'womb', see ►δελφύς.

βρεχμός [m.] 'front part of the head' (Il.). ◂IE? *$mreg^h$-n- 'brain(-pan)'▸ •VAR Also βρέγμα [n.] (Stratt.; Schwyzer: 206), βρεγμός (EM), βρέχμα (v.l. Alciphr. 3, 5).
•ETYM Not related to βρέχω. The word is rather related to WGm. words for 'brain': OE brægen, MLG bragen, OFr. brein, etc. (PGm. bragna-*), from *$mreg^h$- or *b^hreg^h-; cf. also OW br(e)ithel. The connection of Benveniste BSL 31 (1930): 80 with Av. mərəzu- 'cervical vertebra' and MoIran. words for 'neck' from mr̥z-* remains uncertain.

βρέχω [v.] 'to wet, drench' (Hp.). ◂IE? *$merg^h$- 'wet, moisten'▸ •VAR Aor. βρέξαι, βρεχθῆναι, βραχῆναι; ἀναβέβροχεν (P 54).
•DER βροχή 'rain, moistening, inundation' (Democr.), βροχετός (AP), βροχμός, βρέγμα (Erot.). βροχίς 'ink-horn' (AP), βρόχιον 'id.' (pap.).
•ETYM In spite of the doubts expressed in DELG s.v., and the difference in meaning, βρέχω is possibly related to Latv. merguôt 'rain slowly', merga 'soft rain', which can be traced back to *$merg^h$- (Trautmann 1923: 182; however, Ru. morosít' 'rain slowly' cannot be connected because of its -s-). βρεχω would require *$mreg^h$- with schwebeablaut (cf. the discussion s.v. ►βρέφος; perhaps it is a secondary full grade on the basis of a zero grade *βραχ-). See ►βρύχιος.

βρήσσειν [v.] · τὸ μετὰ βηχὸς ἀναπτύειν. ἔνιοι ταῦτα χωρὶς τοῦ ρ γράφουσι 'to spit up by coughing; sometimes written without the ρ' (Gal. Lex. Hipp.); βρήσσει· βήσσει 'to bleat, cough' (H.). ◂ONOM▸ •DER βρῆγμα· ἀπόπτυσμα ἀπὸ θώρακος, παρὰ Ἱπποκράτει 'what is spit out from the chest' (H.) Acc. to Bechtel 1917a: 12f., also the Boeot. PN Βρεικίδας (= Βρηκ-) (?).
•ETYM An expressive (onomatopoeic) word, a variant of βήσσειν, perhaps under the influence of ►βραχεῖν. The gloss βρήσσουσιν· βληχῶνται. φωνεῖ τὰ πρόβατα 'calls the cattle' (H.) suggests that the -ρ- is a variant of -λ- (and perhaps of δ in the cluster βδ-?; cf. Fur. 330).

βρί (βρῖ) [?] · ἐπὶ τοῦ μεγάλου καὶ ἰσχυροῦ καὶ χαλεποῦ τίθεται 'an epithet of the [words] great, strong and fierce' (H.). ◂PG▸ •DIAL The interpretation of Myc. pi-ri-ta-wo is uncertain.
•COMP In e.g. βρι-ήπυος 'crying loudly' of Ares (N 521), with ἠπύω (Bechtel 1914 s.v.), Βριάρεως see below, βριηρόν· μεγάλως κεχαρισμένον 'very happy' (H.), Βρίακχος 'Bacchante' (S.) with ἰάχω, Ἴακχος.
•DER βριαρός [adj.] 'strong' (Il.); βριάω [v.] 'to be or make strong, mighty' (Hes.) back-formation from βριαρός? See Schwyzer: 682f., Bechtel l.c.; also βριερός. For Βριάρεως, a giant with hundred arms (Il.), in Hes. Ὀβριάρεως, the interpretation 'who causes much damage (ἀρή)' (Bechtel 1914) is most uncertain; much more probably it is a Pre-Greek name, cf. Fur.: 168[103].
With -θ-: βρῖθω 'to be laden with, be full of' (Il.), perf. βέβριθα, aor. βρῖσαι; βριθύς 'heavy' (?) (Il.), βρῖθος [n.] 'weight' (Hp.), βριθοσύνη 'id.' (Il.). Here also βρινδεῖν· θυμοῦσθαι, ἐρεθίζειν 'to be agitated, irritate' (H.) with prenasalization of βριθ-? (For the mg., cf. βριμάομαι.) Further ►βρίμη, ►βριμάομαι. See also ►βρίζω and ►ὕβρις.
•ETYM Since the idea of an old 'ablaut' ī / ia must be given up and such cases must be reconstructed as -ih_2- / -ih_2-e, βριαρός could in principle continue g^wrih_2-eros. The suffix can hardly be anything else, because we cannot assume a derivational system -i- / -ro- here, nor has a root *βριαρ any plausibility (pace Benveniste 1935: 15). The connection with ►βαρύς 'heavy' is very doubtful, as this word continues g^wrh_2-u-; a derivative g^wrh_2-iH- would have given *βαρῖ-. g^wr-iH-, derived from a root without laryngeal, would be possible, but the only evidence for such a root is Skt. grī-ṣmá- [m.] 'midsummer' (Wackernagel KZ 61 (1934): 197f.). However, the semantics are very weak, and for the explanation of the second part -ṣmá- as from sámā '[half-]year', Av. ham- 'summer' is difficult as the latter derive from smH-*. As Fur.: 168[104]; 174[122]; 246f. remarks, the word group, meaning 'big, strong, χαλεπός', can be alternatively connected with βριμός 'great, difficult' (see ►βρίμη). Since βρῖμ- is very probably related to ὄβριμος (cf. ὀβριάρεως), this whole etymon must be of Pre-Greek origin in view of the variants (Fur.: index). See ►φριμάσσομαι.

βρία = πόλις, τεῖχος, in Thracian (Str. 7, 6, 1); βρίαν· τὴν ἐπ' ἀγροῖς (ἄκροις?) κώμην 'an unfortified village in the country (in the periphery?)' (H.). ◂LW Thrac.?▸ •ETYM The word has been connected with ToA ri, ToB riye 'town' (which may continue < urih_1-en-*) since Lidén 1916: 143f. (see Adams s.v.). ►ῥίον 'peak, headland' has also been compared. The theory of Pisani KZ 75 (1957): 78f. (i.e., that the word is Ligurian) is improbable. Fur.: 270[13] refers to Πολτυμβρία, Σηλυ(μ)μβρία and 355 to Βρέα, a town in Thrace. As DELG remarks, the word can hardly be regarded as genuinely Greek.

βριαρός ⇒βρί.

βρίγκα [m.] · τὸ μικρόν. Κύπριοι 'small (Cypr.)' (H.); βρίγκος name of a sea-fish (ap. Ath. 322e), = ἰχθῦς κητώδης 'cetaceous fish' (H.) (Thompson 1947 s.v.); further ἀνωδόρκας· βρίγκος (cod. βρίκχος) ὁ ἰχθῦς, ὑπὸ Θηβαίων 'sea-fish (Theb.)' (H.) (Strömberg 1943: 58); also PN (Eretria). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown. For the stem formation, see ►βρίζω.

βρίζω [v.] 'to be sleepy, nod' (Δ 4, 223, A.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἔβριξα (Od., E. Rh. 826 [lyr.], v.l. ἔβρισα), βρίξαι· ὑπνῶσαι, νυστάξαι 'sleep, take a nap'; βρισθείς· ὑπνώσας H.; βριζώ, -οῦς [f.] = ἐνυπνιόμαντις (Semus 5). ἄβρικτον· ... ἄγρυπνον 'sleepless', ἀβρίξ· ἐγρηγόρως 'awake' (H.; cf. ἀπρίξ s.v. ►ἄπριγδα and Schwyzer: 620).
•ETYM Unexplained. The connection with βρί-, βρίθω (Curtius 1858: 475; cf. Lat. somnō gravātus) is improbable.

βρίθω ⇒βρί.

βρίκελοι [m.] · οἱ μὲν τοὺς ἱστόποδας, ἀπὸ τοῦ βάρους καὶ τοῦ ξύλου· οἱ δὲ βαρβάρους· Δίδυμος δὲ τὰ τραγικὰ προσωπεῖα, παρὰ Κρατίνῳ, οἷον βροτῷ εἴκελοι, ἐν Σεριφίοις 'long beams of the loom, made of a weight and wood; barbarians; characters in tragedy (apud Cratinus, acc. to Didymus); like a mortal (in Cratinus's Seriphians)' (H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also: βρίκελος· Κρατῖνος Σεριφίοις (204K.) "<αἶρ',> αἶρε δεῦρο τοὺς βρικέλους" ("raise high the beams")· ἔστι δὲ βαρβαρικὸν τὸ ὄνομα, τίθεται δὲ [καὶ] ἐπὶ προσώπων τραγικῶν καὶ εἴρηται οἱονεὶ βροτῷ [ε]ἴκελος ἢ Βριξὶν [ε]ἴκελος. Βρίγες γὰρ ἔθνος βαρβαρικὸν 'the word is barbarian; it is used for tragic characters [too] and it is used like "like a man" or "like a barbarian". For the Βρίγες are a barbaric race.' (Paus. Gr. p. 169 Erbse). Cf. βρικόν· βάρβαρον; βρυκός· βάρβαρος; βρίγες· βάρβαροι. οἱ δὲ σολοικισταί 'barbarian, or those who speek incorrectly' (H.).
•ETYM Perhaps we are dealing with a Pre-Greek word βρικ-/ βρυκ- 'barbarian, foreigner': the variation ι ~ υ is well known, and -ελ- is a Pre-Greek suffix (see Pre-Greek: suffixes). The idea that the word has anything to do with Βρίγες is clearly folk-etymological, whereas an interpretation as βροτῷ εἴκελος is a learned etymology. According to Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 166f., it is a Pre-Greek word related to φρίκες· χάρακες 'pointed stick, palisade (?)' (H.). The gloss as ἱστόποδες 'beams' in H. is unclear; perhaps it is inspired by a folk-etymological interpretation of βρίκελοι from βάρος and κελ- (= ξύλον).

βρίμη [f.] · ἀπειλή. καὶ γυναικεία ἀρρητοποιΐα 'threat; also womanly vice' (H., supposed to refer to A. R. 4, 1677 Μηδείης βρίμη πολυφαρμάκου); doubtful conj. h. Hom. 28, 10 (of Athena); also probably Orph. Fr. 79 = 'roaring'. ◄PG►
•VAR Cf. βριμός· μέγας, χαλεπός 'great, difficult' (H.)
•DER Βριμώ epithet of Hecate and Persephone (A. R.), also Ὀβριμώ; βριμώδης (Herm. apud Stob. [?]). Verbs: βρῑμάομαι 'snort with anger' vel sim. (Ar. Eq. 855, Phld.) with βρίμημα (H., APl. [?]), more usual ἐμ-βριμάομαι (A.); βριμόομαι 'id.' (X.), βριμαίνεται· θυμαίνεται, ὀργίζεται 'is angry, rages'; βριμάζων· τῇ τοῦ λέοντος χρώμενος φωνῇ 'using the voice of the lion'; βριμάζει· ὀργᾷ εἰς συνουσίαν. Κύπριοι 'is longing for company (Cypr.)' (H.).
•ETYM Probably based on βρι- in βριαρός, βρίθω. As these words are rare, their meanings are not quite clear (cf. Solmsen KZ 42 (1909): 207[2]). The assumption that the original meaning was 'heaviness, vehemence, energy', etc. is partly based on the wrong etymological connection with βαρύς (see the discussion on ►βρι-). Pre-Greek origin is proven by Fur. (index) credible connection with φριμάσσομαι, the whole group of βρι-, and with ►ὄβριμος (cf. Ὀβριμώ). See ►βρί.

βρίνδεῖν ⇒βρί.

Βριτόμαρτις [f.] epithet of Artemis on Crete (inscr., Str.), also a goddess or nymph on Crete, Dreros (Call. Dian. 190). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also Βριτόμαρπις, -μάρπεια (Crete); There is also a form Βρυτόμαρτις (Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 170).
•DER Βριτομάρτια [n.pl.] festival on Delos (inscr.).
•ETYM Acc. to Marinatos Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 9: 79ff. it belongs to the Aetolian DN Μάρπησσα. Wahrmann (l.c.) held that -μαρπις is the original form, but it is improbable that Βριτόμαρτις is due to dissimilation.
Acc. to Solin. 11, 8, it means 'dulcis virgo' = 'sweet maiden', which seems confirmed by the gloss. Latte thinks that the gloss may have been invented secondarily to explain the name, but Brown 1985: 41 rightly objects that the u-stem cannot be accounted for in this way. Proposals for an IE etymology are useless. For the interchange π/ τ, Fur.: 166 compares Πανοπεύς / Φανοτεύς; see also ibid.: 389. A variation ι/ υ is also known from Pre-Greek. See ►βριτύ.

βριτύ [adj.] · γλυκύ. Κρῆτες 'sweet (Cret.)' (H.). ◄PG► •COMP See also on ►Βριτόμαρτις, epithet of Artemis on Crete (inscr., Str.), also a goddess or nymph on Crete, Dreros (Call. Dian. 190).
•ETYM Unknown. The hypothesis of Magnien Glotta 21 (1933): 178 is improbable.

βρόγχος [m.] 'windpipe, throat' (Hp.). ◄PG(V)►
•DER βρόγχια [n.pl.] 'bronchial tubes' (Hp.), βρογχίη [f.] 'system of conducts connecting heart with liver' (Hp., cf. ἀρτηρία), βρογχεῖον 'bronchial cartiledge' (S.). βρογχωτήρ 'neck in a garment' (J.; cf. τροπωτήρ - τροπός, Chantraine 1933: 327f.). Denominative βρογχιάζει· καταπίνει 'gulps down' (H.).
•ETYM The word is evidently connected with ►βρόξαι and βρόχθος. The nasal infix, which would be inexplicable if the word were IE, can be easily understood as Pre-Greek prenasalization. For the formation of βρόχθος ~ βρόγχος, compare κόχλος ~ κόγχνη, and μόχθος ~ μογέω. It is conceivable that βροχθ- is not a suffixal derivation from this word, but just another form of the root. Further, ►βράγχος and ►βραχεῖν belong to this group, with the typical variation α/ο.

βροκός [adj.] · μωρός, Ἕλληνες 'dull' (H.); βρόκων· ἀμαθής, ἀπαίδευτος, οἷον βόσκημα 'who has not learnt; uneducated; like a piece of cattle' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM DELG refers to βρόκοι· ἀττέλεβοι 'locusts' and considers it to be "un emploi plaisant" of 'locust'. To my mind, it is rather an accidental homonym. Fur.: 145 suggests connection with πρόκον· ἠλίθιον 'numb' (H.), and, much more doubtfully, with Lat. bargus 'sine ingenio'.

βρόμος 1 [m.] 'oats' (Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also βόρμος (Dieuch. apud Orib.).

•ETYM Probably Pre-Greek on account of the alternating vocalism; cf. further examples in Fur.: 392.

βρόμος 2 [m.] · τόπος εἰς ὃν ἔλαφοι οὐροῦσι καὶ ἀφοδεύουσι 'place into which deer urinate and defecate' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. Hardly related to βρέμω (as per LSJ).

βροντή ⇒βρέμω.

βρόξαι [v.] 'to gulp down, swallow (again)' (μ 240, δ 222; H. βρόξαι as a simplex = ῥοφῆσαι, AP). ◁PG▷ •VAR Aor. pass. ἀναβροχέν (λ 586), perf. ἀναβέβροχεν (P 54, acc. to Zenodotus for ἀναβέβρῦχεν). βράξαι· ... καταπιεῖν 'gulp down' (H.). Cf. βρούξ· τράχηλος, βρόγχος 'neck, throat' (H.).
•COMP Mostly ἀνα-, κατα-βρόξαι.
•DER βρόχθος [m.] 'throat, gullet' (Hp.), βροχθώδης 'shallow' (?; Nic.); βροχθίζω 'take a mouthful, clear the throat, give to drink' (Arist.).
•ETYM The surprising o-vocalism in the aorist can hardly be explained by Aeolic origin, in spite of the gloss βράξαι. The notation κατα-βρῶξαι (Ar.) may be due to influence of βιβρώσκω. βρόχθος, probably an action noun, has been compared with γνάθος, στῆθος, etc. (Schwyzer: 510f., Chantraine 1933: 367), but these are body parts (note that γνάθος is Pre-Greek). Not related to βιβρώσκω, as *g^wrh_3-C- would have given *βρω-C-. From other languages, one adduces Gm. and Celt. words like MHG krage 'neck, throat, collar', ME crawe 'crop, craw (of a bird)' (which may contain *g^wrog^h-), and OIr. brágae 'neck', MW breuant 'windpipe' from PCl. brāg-*, PIE *$g^wrōg^h$- (not from *g^wrHg^h-, as this would give βρη/α/ωχ- in Greek). However, this IE etymology can explain neither βρόχθος, nor ►βρόγχος or ►βράγχος. The aberrant o-vocalism is confirmed by the a-vocalism of βράγχος, which should be interpreted as reflecting Pre-Greek origin. If βρούξ· τράχηλος, βρόγχος (H.) is reliable, it would also remain unexplained by the IE etymology; for ο/ου in Pre-Greek, however, cf. κολοτέα/ κολουτέα (see Pre-Greek).

βροτός [m., f.] '(mortal) man', also 'mortal' (Il.). ◁IE mr-tó-* 'dead, mortal'▷ •COMP φαεσίμβροτος 'shining on mortals', βροτολοιγός 'ruining mortals' (Il.), etc. Note ἄβροτος 'without men' (A. Pr. 2).
•DER βρότεος (τ 545, etc.), βρότειος (Archil.) 'mortal, human' (cf. Wackernagel 1916: 69[1], S. Schmid 1950: 28f.); βροτήσιος 'id.' (Hes.), after Ἰθακήσιος, φιλοτήσιος, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 41f.; βροταί· γυναῖκες 'women' (H.), corrected by Latte to βροτοί(?). ἄ-μβροτος 'immortal, divine', note ἀ-βρότη νύξ (Ξ 78), cf. ἀμφιβρότη ἀσπίς 'shield protecting in all directions' (B 389); ἀμβρόσιος 'id.', ἀμβροσίη 'Ambrosia', food of the gods (all Il.). On PNs with μόρτος see Masson RPh. 89 (1963): 222f. Unrelated is ►μαραίνω.
•ETYM βροτός, Aeolic from mr̥tó-*, agrees with Arm. mard 'man' (mr̥tó-*), Skt. mr̥tá- (verbal adj.), Av. mərəta- 'dead'; Lat. mortuus, OCS mrъtvъ 'dead' (with suffix after vivus, živъ). The privative Skt. a-mŕ̥ta-, Av. a-məṣ̌a- 'immortal' is comparable to ἄ-μβροτος. Another vocalism is found in ►μορτός· ἄνθρωπος, θνητός 'man' (H.) = Skt. márta-, Av. marəta- 'the mortal one, man', probably representing a different ablaut grade mor-*.

βρότος [m.] mostly interpreted as 'clotted blood' (Il.). Except for μέλανα βρότον 'dark blood' (ω 189) only at verse end in the formula βρότον αἱματόεντα 'red blood' (H 425). ◁?▷
•DER βροτόεις 'bloody' in ἔναρα βροτόεντα (Z 480, etc.) and βροτόεντ' ἀνδράγρια (E 509); further the hapax βεβροτωμένα τεύχεα (λ 41 = Q. S. 1, 717; after this Stesich. 42 δράκων ... κάρα βεβροτωμένος).
•ETYM Perhaps Aeolic (with retracted accent) for *βρατός, but the connection with Skt. mūrtá- 'clotted' (pres. mūrchati) is only possible if loss of the laryngeal under unknown circumstances is accepted. (The word has been compared with στρα-τός, Aeol. στρο-τός, to Skt. stīr-ṇá-, but the latter contains a different root; see Beekes 1969: 243.). Differently, Leumann 1950: 124ff.: he maintains that βρότος is from ἄμβροτος, wrongly taken as ἀναίμων; this is hardly probable. Improbably, Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 257f.: that ἀμφιβρότη (ἀσπίς B 389, etc.) is from *βροτόν 'body'.

βροῦκος [m.] 'locust' (Thphr.). ◁PG(V)▷
•VAR βροῦχος (LXX, Ph.), βρούκα (Cypr., H.); βραῦκος (Cret.), βραύκη (AB, H.), βρε<ῦ>κος· ἡ μικρὰ ἀκρίς, ὑπὸ Κρητῶν 'small locust (Cret.)' (H.), βρύκος (H.), βρόκοι· ἀττέλεβοι, ἀκρίδες 'locusts' (H.).
•DIAL Ion. acc. to H.
•ETYM βρύκος (and βροῦχος) was compared with βρύκω 'eat greedily, grind the teeth' (EM), but the agreement may be secondary. No doubt a Pre-Greek word, a hypothesis which is confirmed by the vocalic variation. The names of small animals frequently show such variations, but this is precisely due to foreign origin, or to dialectal differences (cf. Schwyzer: 198). See also ►βερκνίς. Lat. bruchus is borrowed from the Greek, MoFr. bruche in turn from Latin.

βροῦλος [m.] · πόα ἔνυδρος 'plant growing in water' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM The text has πονηρος; see Rohlfs 1930: 388.

βρόχθος ⇒βρόξαι.

βρόχος [m.] 'noose, slip-knot' (Od.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR βρυγχός· βρόχος (H.).
•DER βροχίς 'id.' (AP).
•ETYM The word has been connected with μόροττον· ἐκ φλοιοῦ πλέγμα τι, ᾧ ἔτυπτον ἀλλήλους τοῖς Δημητρίοις 'plaiting of bark, with which the Δ. used to hit each other' (H.), but it is uncertain whether the noose was made of bark (see Fur.: 341). βρόχος has also been compared with Slavic words like OCS mrěža 'net, noose', Serb. mrȅža 'net', and Latv. mer̃ga, mar̃ga 'railing, gallery', Lith. márška 'net' (Vasmer 1953(2): 119). However, these words would need implausible reconstructions *$morHg^h$-$skeh_2$- and $merHg^h$-ieh_2-, whereas they could be explained much more easily from merg- with Winter's law. If the gloss on βρυγχός, which had not been noticed earlier, is reliable, then the prenasalization points to Pre-Greek origin. Not connected to ►βρέχω, nor to ►μέρμις.

βρῦ ⇒βρῦν.

βρυαλίζων [v.] · διαρρήσσων 'breaking' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•DER βρυαλιγμόν· ψόφον, ἦχον 'sound' and βρυαλίκται· πολεμικοὶ ὀρχησταί· 'μενέδουποι' Ἴβυκος καὶ Στησίχορος 'war dancers; steadfast in battle (Ibyc. and Stes.)' (H.). Further, Λακωνικὰ ὀρχήματα διὰ Μαλέας ... καὶ βρυάλιχα..., προσωρχοῦντο δὲ γυναῖκες καὶ Ἀπόλλωνι 'Laconian dances ... and β. ..., which the women danced for Apollo, too' (Poll. 4,104); βρυλλιχισται [read βρυαλ-]· οἱ αἰσχρὰ προσωπεῖα περιτιθέμενοι γυναικεῖα καὶ ὕμνους ᾄδοντες 'people who wear ugly masks of women and sing songs' (H.); βρυδάλιχα (read βρυάλιχα?; ms. -ίχα)· πρόσωπον γυναικεῖον 'female mask' (H.; further corrupt).
•ETYM Derived from *βρύαλος (-η, -ον), which itself is connected with ►βρύω, but the meaning does not match very well. For the semantics, it has been compared with βρυάσομαι· ἀναβακχεύσομαι μετά τινος κινήσεως 'burst into Bacchic frenzy with a certain movement' (H.). It is probably a Pre-Greek word: Fur.: 174 also cites βρυανιῶν· μετεωριζόμενος καὶ κορωνιῶν 'is raised and streches the neck [is ambitious]' (H.).

βρύθακες [?] · οἱ χιτῶνες βομβύκινοι. ἢ γένος ἰθαγενῶν 'silken tunics; an ancient stock' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Fur.: 187 compares βρυτιγγοί· χιτῶνες 'tunics' (H.), and further, βρυτίνην· βυσσίνην (H.); he reconstructs a word *βρυθ/τ-ος 'linen' (or 'silk'?). Cf. ►βύσσος.

βρύκος [m.] · κῆρυξ, οἱ δὲ βάρβαρος, οἱ δὲ ἀττέλεβος 'herald; barbarian; locust' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR βρύκαιναι· ἱέρειαι ὑπὸ Δωριέων 'priestesses (Dor.)' (H.). Also βρυχός· κῆρυξ (H.).
•ETYM On the explanation ἀττέλεβος, see βροῦκος; for βάρβαρος, see βρίκελοι. For βρυχός, cf. Βρυχαλείō, the epiclesis of Hermes at Pharsalos (Dettori Myrtia 15 (2000): 27-33). Further unknown.

βρῡ́κω [v.] 'to bite, eat greedily' (Com.), next to βρῡ́χω 'grind the teeth' (Hp.), but the distinction is not always clear . ◂IE *$g^{w}ruH\acute{g}^{h}$-▸ •VAR Aor. βρῦξαι, fut. βρύξω.
•DIAL βρύκω Att. acc. to Moeris and Ammon.
•DER βρυγμός (Eup.); βρυκετός· ταὐτὸν τῷ βρυγμῷ, καὶ βρυκηθμὸς ὁμοίως. Δωριεῖς 'the same as β., and likewise for β. (Dor.)' (H.); cf. δακετόν, βρυχηθμός. Further βρυκεδανός· πολυφάγος ... 'eating a lot' (H.), cf. πευκεδανός; βρύγδην 'with clenched teeth' (?) (AP).
•ETYM If the κ in βρῡ́κω is secondary for χ in βρῦξαι, then βρύξω and βρύχω may continue *$g^{w}ruH\acute{g}^{h}$-, cf. OCS gryzǫ, grysti 'gnaw', Lith. gráužiu, gráužti 'id.' (the initial accentuation of Ru. grýzla shows that the root must have contained a laryngeal). Further related are OIr. brón 'sorrow', MW brwyn 'biting pain' (from *brŭgnos with pretonic shortening), and possibly Arm. krcem 'gnaw' < *kurcem (perhaps metathesized like turc, gen. trcoy 'jaw'; see Lidén 1906: 34f.), if c for expected j can find an explanation. Cf. ►βρῦν, ►βρυχάομαι, ►βρύχιος.

βρυλιχισταί ⇒βρυαλίζων.

βρῦν in βρῦν εἰπεῖν 'call for drink', of small children (Ar. Nu. 1382). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Also βρῦ or βροῦ.
•DER βρύλλω 'id.' (Ar. *Equ.*1126); βρύλλων· ὑποπίνων 'drinking a little' (H.).
•ETYM Probably based on an onomatopoeic form. West Glotta 47 (1970): 184f., thinks it represents βρῦτον, which would be surprising.

βρύσσος [m.] a kind of sea urchin (Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἄμβρυττοι· εἶδος ἐχίνου θαλασσίου, Ἀριστοτέλης αὐτοὺς δὲ βρύττους καλεῖ 'kind of sea urchin, also called β. by Arist.' (H.) (also ἄβρυττοι); also βρύττος· εἶδος ἐχίνου πελαγίου, ὥς φησιν Ἀριστοτέλης, οἱ δὲ ἰχθύν, οἱ δὲ τρισυλλάβως, ἄμβρυττον, ἥν, Λάχης ποιεῖ 'some: a fish; others, with three syllables, ἀμβ., [?]' (H.; it cannot be concluded that the reading ἄβρυττοι is false).
•ETYM The variants, together with the prenasalization, prove that this is a Pre-Greek word.

βρύτανα ⇒βύτανα.

βρυτιγγοί ⇒βρύθακες.

βρῦτος [m.] 'beer' made of barley (Archil.). ◂LW Thrac.▸
•VAR Also -ον [n.]; also βροῦτος, βρύττιον (H.).
•DER βρύτεα (-ια) [n.pl.] 'refuse of olives or grapes, τὰ στέμφυλα' (Ath.). βρύτινος (Cratin.), βρυτικός (Antiph.).
•ETYM As is evident from the variant forms, βρῦτος is a loan word from Thracian. It may be identical with OE broð, OHG prod 'juice', OIr. bruth 'glow' (*$b^{h}rutos$, -om). The closest comparandum is Lat. dēfrŭtum [n.] 'must boiled down', from Lat. ferv(e)ō; see Schrijver 1991: 254f. Whether the long ῡ of the Greek goes back to Thracian as well is unknown. Lat. brīsa 'refuse of grapes' is probably also derived from Thrac. βρύτεα, -ια (Demiraj 1997 s.v. bërsí). Not connected to ►φρέαρ, ►φορύνω.

βρῡχάομαι [v.] 'to roar, bellow' (Il.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Perf. βέβρῡχα (with pres. mg.), Aor. βρυχήσασθαι.
•DER βρυχηθμός 'roar(ing)' (Arist.), βρύχημα 'id.' (A.); retrograde βρυχή (Opp., cf. βρύχω); βρυχητής, βρυχητήρ; βρυχηδόν (A. R.). Perhaps here also βροὐχετος· ... βάτραχον δὲ Κύπριοι 'frog [Cypr.]', βρυχός· κήρυξ 'herald' (H.; also ►βρυκός). For the forms see Fraenkel 1912: 95[3] (p. 96).
•ETYM The intensive perfect βέβρυχα (cf. μέμυκα, etc.) was the basis of βρυχάομαι. Probably of onomatopoeic origin.

βρῡ́χιος [adj.] 'deep (under water)' (A.). ◂?▸ •DER ὑπόβρυχα 'under water', originally an adjective acc.sg. (ε 319, Hdt. 7, 130; see Bechtel 1914 s.v.), later adverbial (Arat.); ὑποβρύχιος (h. Hom. 33, 12); περιβρύχιος 'engulfing' (S.). Secondary βρύχα 'depth of the sea' (Opp. H. 2, 588).
•ETYM One would have to start from a noun *βρύξ, βρυχός 'water, depth (of the sea)'. On the formation of ὑπόβρυχα, ὑποβρύχιος, see Schwyzer 1950: 532.

Connection with βρέχω is phonetically impossible, and the meaning is different as well. There seems to have been a connection with βρυχάομαι by popular etymology.

βρυχός ⇒βρύκος.

βρύχω ⇒βρύκω.

βρύω [v.] 'to swell, teem with' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Only pres. (but βρύσας Procop.).
•COMP Old ἔμβρυον [n.] 'new-born (lamb)' (ι 245), 'foetus' (Hp.), type ἔμπεδος, ἐγκέφαλος.
•DER βρύσις (Suid.), βρυσμός (Arc.), also PN as Βρύας, Βρύσων. Also βρυάζω with βρυάσομαι· ἀναβακχεύσομαι μετά τινος κινήσεως 'burst into Bacchic frenzy with a certain movement' (H.; uncertain ἀνεβρύαξαν Ar. Eq. 602) together with βρυασμός 'voluptuousness' (Plu.), Βρυάκτης epithet of Pan (Poet. apud Stob.). βρύον [n.] 'tree-moss, etc.' (Hp.) with βρυώδης, βρυόεις (Nic.); βρυώνη, βρυωνία 'black, white vine' (Nic., Dsc.; see Chantraine 1933: 207f.). See ►βρυαλίζων. Denominative βρυόομαι 'to be grown over with βρύον' (Arist.).
•ETYM No etymology.

βρῶμος [m.] 'stench' (LXX, Gal.). ◄?►
•VAR Sometimes βρόμος.
•DER βρῶμα 'ordure' (?; Ev. Marc. 7, 19); βρωμώδης, βρομώδης 'stinking' (Str.); βρωμέω (-ο-) 'id.' (Al.).
•ETYM No etymology. The word has been supposed to be identical with βρόμος 'noise' (Kretschmer Glotta 9 (1918): 222f., Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 98, Hatzidakis Glotta 22 (1934): 130-3). Differently, Kalitsunakis Glotta 12 (1923): 198. Lat. brōmus, brōmōsus, exbrōmō is borrowed from the Greek. The word lives on in the chemical element (Fr. brome, E. bromine, etc.).

βύᾱς [m.] 'eagle-owl, Strix bubo' (Arist.). ◄ONOM► •DER Verb βύζω (βύας ἔβυξε D. C., see Schwyzer 716). Deverbal βῦζα = βύας (Nic.).
•ETYM Derived from the onomatopetic βῦ after the nouns in -ᾱς (Schwyzer: 461, Chantraine 1933: 27f., 30). Similar instances of onomatopoeia are e.g. Arm. bu 'owl' (= Georg. bu), MoP būm 'id.', Lat. būbō, Bulg. buh (Pok. 97f.; Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 216; André 1967: 45). Cf. ►βύκτης.

βύβλος [m.] The Egyptian papyrus, 'Cyperus Papyrus; papyrus stalks, bark, roll, paper' (Hdt.). ◄PG?►
•VAR βίβλος, βίμβλις; Βίμβλινος (or -ινων)· εἶδος οἴνου καὶ γένος ἀμπέλου ἐν Θρᾴκῃ καὶ ὁ παλαιὸς οἶνος. Ἐπίχαρμος δὲ ἀπ' ὀρῶν Βιβλίνων. ἔστι δὲ Θρᾴκης 'kind of wine and vine in Thrace, also old wine. Epicharmus [uses it as] from the B. mountains. It is from Thrace.' (H.).
•DER βύβλινος (Od.), βίβλινος (pap.) 'made of papyrus'; (both) also a kind of wine, see DELG; also βίμβλινος (LSJ Supp. and H., see above). βυβλιά (on the accent see Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 191f.) 'plantation of papyrus' (Tab. Heracl.; but see Scheller 1951: 47). βυβλίον, βιβλίον (see Kretschmer KZ 57 (1930): 253) 'paper, book' (IA). βιβλῑ́διον with strange long ι, βίμβλις, -ιδος 'cords of β.', cf. βιβλίδες· τὰ βιβλία ἢ σχοινία τὰ ἐκ βίβλου πεπλεγμένα (EM 197, 30).
•ETYM The papyrus rind was supposedly named after the Phoenician harbor Byblos, from where it was shipped to Greece. Since the name of this town was Gbl in Phoenician, next to Akk. Gublu, and Hebr. G^{e}bāl, we would need to assume the the initial gu- was interpreted as g^{w}u- by the Greek, or that distant assimilation g-b > b-b took place. However, E. Masson 1967: 101-7 concluded that the word is of unknown origin and that the town was named after it and Alessio Studi etruschi 18 (1941): 122f. assumed that the word was Pre-Greek. Fur.: 364 offers evidence for υ/ ι in Pre-Greek (the forms with -ι- appear to be old, not due to late assimilation; cf. Kretschmer KZ 57 (1930): 253). Pre-Greek origin is also strongly suggested by the prenasalized forms (which are hardly expressive). Cf. ►πάπυρος.

βυβός [adj.] = 'μεστός, πλήρης, μέγας' 'full, great' (Sophr. 115 apud Suid. and H.). ◄ONOM► •DER PN Βύβων Masson Verbum 18 (1995-6): 319 (Euboea), so the word is old.
•ETYM Familiar word, from ►βυνέω, ►βύω, etc., either with reduplication or with -βος. On words in -βός, see Chantraine 1933: 261.

βυθός [m.] 'depth (of the sea)' (A.). ◄PG►
•COMP ἄβυσσος 'bottomless' (Hdt.), substantivized fem. 'abyss, underworld' (= Hebr. təhōm, LXX, NT, pap.; cf. Schwyzer RhM 81 (1932): 203); βυσσοδομεύω 'build in the deep > brood over (in the deep of one's soul), ponder deeply' (Od.), metri causa for βυσσοδομέω (Eust., Suid.) like οἰκοδομέω, etc., see Chantraine 1942: 368.
•DER βύθιος 'of the depth' (late), fem. βυθῖτις (ψάμμος, AP). Denominative βυθίζω 'sink' (S.); ptc. βυθόωσα (ῥίζα) 'going in the deep' (Nic. Th. 505). Further βυσσός [m.] 'depth of the sea' (Il.), βυσσόθεν (S.). Also βύσσα (Opp.; after βῆσσα? so probably secondary); further βύσσαλοι· βόθροι 'pits', βυσσαλεύοντι· τῷ βυθῷ ἐφικνουμένῳ 'reaching the depth' (H.); also βυθμός· ἄντρον, πυθμήν, καὶ βυθμήν 'cave, bottom', perhaps corrupt.
•ETYM A base form *βυθι̯ός or βυθσός, for βυσσός (Frisk), does not inspire confidence, since this would presuppose that the word is epic (Aeolic): -d^{h}i̯- and -Ts-* would give IA -σ-. In order to connect the word with βαθύς (and βῆσσα), a labiovelar has bee posited, but then the straightforward connection of βαθύς with βένθος must be abandoned. Moreover, assuming a labiovelar would mean that the β- is irregular (one would expect γυ-): it would have to have been introduced from βῆσσα, which remains a guess. A connection with γυθίσσων· διορύσσων 'digging out' (H.) would pose the same problem; the form is better left aside. The earlier attempts to connect βαθύς and βῆσσα (with α, as opposed to υ) are most improbable, and should now be abandoned. βυθός - βυσσός shows a typical variation in Pre-Greek words; see Fur.: 248-263, e.g. ἄνηθον/ ἄνησον. The conclusion is confirmed by βυσσαλ-, with a typical Pre-Greek suffix; cf. κόρυδος beside κορύδαλος/κορυδαλλός (Fur.: 254). One may also compare the glosses ἄμυσσος· κῆτος 'sea monster' and ἀβυδόν· βαθύ.

Van Windekens KZ 100 (1987): 307 connects Hitt. akkuš(š)a- 'Fangrube', which is quite improbable ("β au lieu de -κ- sous l'influence de βυσσός").

βυκάνη [f.] 'trumpet, horn' (Plb.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER βυκανάω 'to blow the horn' (Plb.), βυκανητής (Plb.); βυκανίζω (Eust.) βυκανιστής (Plb.), βυκανισμός (Nicom.).
•ETYM A loan word from Lat. būcina; for the suffix, cf. māchina : μηχανή (Niedermann IF 37 (1916/1917): 147f. contra Cuny 1908: 108ff.: from unweakened būcana*). A more exact rendering is βου-; βουκινάτωρ (Lyd.) = būcinātor and the hybrid form βουκινίζω (S. E.) are directly borrowed from Latin. See also ►βουκονιστήριον.

βύκτης [adj.] / [m.] only βυκτάων ἀνέμων (κ 20), also substantivized as 'stormwind' (Lyc.). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM If the word means πνεόντων, φυσητῶν (i.e., 'blowing'), as the ancients suggested, it may be compared with βεβυκῶσθαι· πεπρῆσθαι <παρὰ> Θετταλοῖς 'blow, kindle (Thess.)' (H.), and further with ►βυνέω. According to Fraenkel 1910: 19[1], the word is connected with βύζω, βύξαι 'to hoot (like an owl)' (see ►βύᾶς). See the discussion on k-enlargements of onomatopoeic bū- and bu- in Pok. 97f. and 100f.

βυνέω [v.] 'to stuff' (Hdt.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also βύνω (Hdt.), βύζω (Aret., H.); βύω, aor. βῦσαι, fut. βύσω; βέβυσμαι (Od.), ἐβύσθην, (παρά)βυστος.
•COMP Often with prefixes δια-, ἐπι-, παρα-, προ-.
•DER βύσμα 'plug' (Hp.), βύστρα 'id.' (Antiph.); βύζην [adv.] (< *βύσ-δην, see below) 'closely' (Hp.), together with βυζόν· πυκνόν, συνετόν, γαῦρον δὲ καὶ μέγα 'compact, intelligent, haughty, big' (H.). Also βυλλά· βεβυσμένα H., with denominative βεβυλλῶσθαι· βεβύσθαι (H.). Fur.: 213[54] suggests that βουνός· στιβάς 'mattress', Κύπριοι (H.) is derived from βυνέω.
•ETYM Like κυνέω, βυνέω could represent a continuation of a nasal present *βυ-νέ-σ-ω, with βῡν- perhaps from a zero grade βυν-σ- (e.g., in the 3pl. *βύνσοντι, see Schwyzer: 692). Alternatively, it could go back to *βυσ-νέω with secondary -έω. βυνέω has been compared with Alb. m-bush 'fill' and words for 'pouch', e.g. MIr. búas (< bousto-*), ON posi, OE posa, OHG pfoso, PGm. pŭsan-* (< bŭson-). However, this connection fails on the necessity to assume a root with PIE b- (the material collected in Pok. 98ff. is too heterogeneous). Cf. ►βυβός, ►βουβών, ►βύτανα.

βύνη 1 [f.] 'malt (for brewing)' (pap., Aët.). ◂?▸
•VAR βύνι, -εως [n.] (after κίκι, κόμμι, etc.).
•DER Doubtful βυνεύς· σκεύασμά τι κρίθινον 'dish made of barley' (H.; Lagercrantz 1913: ad PHolm. 15); constructed from a gen. βύνεως?
•ETYM Unknown; of foreign origin?

βύνη 2 [f.] · θάλασσα 'sea' (Euphor. fr. 127), πεύκη 'pine' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The meaning 'sea' fits well to the homophonous name of Leucothea (Ino) in Lyc. 107, but its etymology is unknown.

βύνητος an Egyptian garment (Hdn.). ◂LW? Eg.▸
•ETYM Unknown.

βύριον [n.] βύριον· οἴκημα 'abode'; βυριόθεν· οἴκοθεν 'from home' (H.). Cf. εὐβύριον· τὸ εὔοικον εἴρηται, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν βαυρίαν ἢ κατὰ Μεσσαπίους σημαίνει οἰκίαν 'comfortable to inhabit, because β. means "house" in Messapian' (EM 389,25); and βαυριόθεν = οἴκοθεν 'from home' (Cleon Sic. 2). ◂LW Messap.▸
•DER Perhaps βυρμός· σταθμός 'stable' (H.), s.v. von Blumenthal 1930: 3.
•ETYM Messapian word, also seen in Germanic: ON búr [n.], OHG, OE būr [m.] 'cottage, room' (PGm. būra-*); cf. Pok. 149. With a different ablaut are ►βαυρία and ►βᾶρις. See Krahe IF 57 (1940): 116. The words are supposed to be r-derivatives of the root for 'live, be'; see ►φύω.

βυρρός [m.] · κάνθαρος. Τυρρηνοί 'dung-beetle, drinking cup (Etr.)' (H.). ◂LW? Etr.▸ •ETYM The word is believed to derive from the color, from Gr. πυρρός = Lat. burrus 'deep red' (Paul. Fest. 31). See Fohalle 1925: 157f. and Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 166. However, this is hardly appropriate in the case of a cup. Fur.: 213 connects it with μύρσος 'basket' (Call. fr. anon. 102; H.), Etr. murś; the word lives on in Otrant. vurro, Toscan. borraccia (Alessio 1955: 736).

βύρσα [f.] 'skin, hide' (Hdt.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP βυρσοδέψης (Ar.).
•DER βυρσίς (H.); βύρσινος 'of leather' (D. C.), βυρσικός 'id.' (Gp.), also 'used by tanners' (Hippiatr., to βυρσεύς), βυρσώδης 'id.' (Gal.). βυρσεύς 'tanner' (Act. Ap.) for older βυρσοδέψης (Ar.); βυρσεύω 'tan' (H.), βυρσεῖον 'tan-pit' (sch.). Denominative βυρσόω 'to cover with skins' (Ath. Mech.). Old is only βυρσίνη 'leather thong' (Ar. Eq. 59, 449).
•ETYM A technical term without etymology (Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 271, see further Frisk). The word may be of Pre-Greek, as argued by Fur.: 65, etc., who also compares ἀμυρτόν· ἱμάτιον 'cloth' (H.).

βύσσα [f.] a bird (Ant. Lib. 15). ◂?▸
•ETYM Etymology unknown.

βύσσος [f.] "Byssos", flax and the linen made of it (Emp.); later also referring to cotton and silk. ◂LW Sem.▸
•DER βύσσινος 'made of β.' (Hdt.); βύσσωμα 'net from β.' (AP; on the formation see πέπλωμα, etc., Chantraine 1933: 187).
•ETYM The word is supposed to have been borrowed by Greek from Eg. w:d 'linen' via Semitic (Hebr., Aram. būs; see E. Masson 1967: 20ff.; Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 661).

βυσσός ⇒βυθός.

βύσταξ [m.] 'moustache' (Antiph. 44.4 apud Ath. 4, 143a). ◂PG▸ •VAR Cf. βύσταγα· πώγωνα 'beard' (H.).
•ETYM The explanation of βύσταξ as adapted from μύσταξ after βυνέω is highly improbable. Rather, it is evidently cognate with μύσταξ, the words being of Pre-

Greek origin because of the alternation β ~ μ (Fur.: 116, 218; cf. κ/ γ, see also Güntert 1914: 128). For further variants, see ►μύσταξ.

βύτανα [n.pl.] · κονδύλοι 'knuckle'. οἱ δὲ βρύτανα (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM A formation in -ανον (Chantraine 1933: 197ff., Schwyzer: 489f.). Although the word has been connected with ►βυτθόν · πλῆθος 'crowd' (H.) and ►βύττος · γυναικὸς αἰδοῖον 'private parts of a woman' (H.), this is only a superficial resemblance in form. The variant with βρ- points to a Pre-Greek word; further examples are adduced by Fur.: 330.

βυτθόν [n.]? · πλῆθος 'large number, crowd' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word has been connected βύτανα and βύττος, for which there seems to be no rationale.

βυτίνη [f.] · λάγυνος ἢ ἀμίς. Ταραντῖνοι 'flask or chamber-pot (Tarantian)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. Att. πῡτῑ́νη 'flask covered with plated osier' (Poll.), title of a comedy of Cratinus (Ar. fr. 880 K.-A.).
•ETYM The interchange π/ β proves Pre-Greek origin (the variation voiced/ voiceless being extremely frequent in such words; Fur.: 101-200). The suffix -ῑν- is also frequent in Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek, Suffixes). VLat. butina is borrowed from the Greek, and the Latin is in turn the source of e.g. OE byden, OHG butin, MoHG Bütte (Fi. putina, Ru. bódnja, etc. are again borrowed from Germanic; see Vasmer 1953 s.v.).

βύττος [m.]? · γυναικὸς αἰδοῖον 'female genitals' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. μυττός· τὸ γυναικεῖον 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 218 connects the gloss with μ-, which shows that the word is Pre-Greek. Szemerényi refers to Hubschmid 1955: 76.

βωβός [adj.] name of a handicap, acc. to H. = χωλός, πηρός (πτορός cod.) 'lame, disabled'; by Plu. Fr. inc. 149 used together with κωφός; in MoGr. it means 'dumb'. ◂?▸
•DER PN Βωβᾶς, Βουβᾶς, L. Robert 1963: 30-33.
•ETYM Cf. κολοβός, κλαμβός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 261).

βωληνή [f.] ἄμπελος 'grape-vine', growing in Bithynia (Gp. 5, 17, 5). ◂PG (or LW Anat.)▸ •ETYM Fur. 219 compares μῶλαξ, a Lydian name for wine.

βωλήτης [m.] 'fungus, especially mushroom' (Ath.). ◂LW? Lat.▸
•VAR Also βωλίτης (Gp., Gal.), also 'root' of the lychnis.
•DER βωλήτιον 'saucepan', βωλητάρια πινάκια (pap.), βωλητῖνος ἄρτος (Ath.), after the form.
•ETYM Borrowed from Lat. bōlētus (Sen.), which was named after the Spanish town Boletum (Niedermann IF Anz. 29 (1912): 31f.). βωλίτης is remodelled after the derivatives in -ίτης, and borrowed into Latin (Plin.) again (Redard 1949: 70); its meaning 'root' is due to influence of βῶλος.

βῶλος [f.] 'lump, clod of earth' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also [m.].
•COMP ἐρίβωλος, ἐριβῶλαξ (Il.).
•DER Adjectives βωλώδης (Thphr.), βώλινος (H.); adverb βωληδόν (Dsc.); βώλωσις 'formation of lumps' (pap.). Old is βῶλαξ [f.] = βῶλος (Pi.; cf. on -αξ Chantraine 1933: 379; βωλάκιος (Pi.). βωλίς· μάζης εἶδός τι ἐν ταῖς θυσίαις 'kind of ball in sacrifices' (H.); unclear the gloss on βωλόναι (H.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown; hardly connected with ►βολβός.

βωμός [m.] 'step, stand (for chariots), base (of a statue)', most frequently 'altar' (Il.). ◂IE $g^w oh_2$-mo- 'stand'▸ •COMP βωμολόχος 'one that waited about the altars to steal the meat, ribald'.
•DER βωμίς 'step' (Hdt.; on the word CEG 6), βωμίσκος technical term (Hero.); βῶμαξ· ὁ μικρὸς βωμός, ὑποκοριστικῶς 'small altar (hypocor.)' (H.). βωμῖτις (sc. γῆ) 'sacred land' (Pergamon). βωμίστρια 'priestess' (Nic.; on -ίστρια Chantraine 1933: 106); βώμᾰξ· βωμολόχος H., see Chantraine 1933: 381f.; on -αξ see Björck 1950: 263[1]. Adjectives βώμιος (S.), also month name (Lamia); βωμιαῖος (S.). Note βώμηνεν· ὤμοσε 'swore' (H.) from *βωμαίνω 'swear (with the hand on the altar)'.
•ETYM Verbal noun $g^w oh_2$-mo- to ἔ-βη-ν (ἔ-βᾱ-ν). For the meaning, cf. ►βάσις and OP gāϑu- 'place, throne' (from gā- = βᾱ-, βη-).

βωνίτης ⇒βουνός.

βωρεύς [m.] 'mullet' (Xenocr.). ◂LW Eg.▸
•VAR βωρίδιον [n.], also βουρίδιον (Alex. Trall.).
•DER On the PN with Βωρ- (Βῶρος, Βώρακος, Βώριμος) see Boßhardt (below).
•ETYM Boßhardt 1942: 61 derived the word from βῶροι· ὀφθαλμοί 'eyes' (H.), just as Strömberg 1943: 42f., but βῶροι is probably from *ϝῶροι (see ►ὁράω). Connected with Copt. bori, Arab. būrī; see Thompson 1947 s.v. and Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 247.

βωσίον [n.] a utensil (pap.). ◂PG?▸
•DER βωσιδία (pap.). Also βωτάριον (Zos. Alch.); βωσιδιαι is probably bad orthography for -ίδια.
•ETYM From βωτίον· σταμνίον 'wine jar' (H.) with τι > σι; see Olsson Symb. Oslo. 4 (1926): 62f. The word may be related to ►βοῦτ(τ)ις.

βωστρέω [v.] 'to call (to aid)' (Od.). ◂GR▸
•VAR Only present.
•ETYM The word is connected to ►βοάω just as ἐλαστρέω (Il.) to ἐλαύνω, ἐλά-σαι and καλιστρέω (Call.) to καλέω. It is an expressive formation, based on the nominal suffixes τερ-, τρο- (cf. Risch 1937: 310), but details remain unclear.

βωτάζειν ⇒γατάλαι, οὐτάω, and ὠτειλή.

βωτιάνειρα •VAR βώτωρ, etc. ⇒βόσκω.

Γ

γα ⇒γε.

γάβαθον [n.] · τρυβλίον 'cup, bowl' ◁LW? Sem.▷
•VAR Also καβαθα (accent unknown; pap. III[a]); also fem.sg. (Edict. Diocl.). And ζάβατος· πίναξ ἰχθυηρὸς παρὰ Παφίοις 'a trencher for fish (Paphian)' (H.).
•ETYM Semitic origin has been assumed (E. Masson 1967: 75, which could also account for Lat. gabata. Alternatively, we may consider Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 187 assumes that it is a Mediterranean loan). Cf. ► γάβενα, ► κάβος.

γάβενα [n.pl.] · ὀξυβάφια, ἤτοι τρυβλία 'small vessel; cup, bowl' (H.). ◁?, PG?▷ •ETYM On the basis of MoGr. forms, Moutsos Orbis 18 (1969): 535-540 argues that γάβενον < *γαβινον < *καβινον, a derivative from κάβος. Fur.: 116, etc. compares the word with ► γάβαθον, which is certainly a possibility.

γαγάτης [m.] (sc. λίθος) 'lignite' (Orph., Plin., Dsc.). ◁LW Anat.▷
•VAR Also γαγγῖτις or γαγγῆτις λίθος (Str.); this form may have been influenced by the adjective 'of the Ganges'. And ἐγγαγὶς πέτρα (Nic.) = γαγάτης.
•ETYM According to Pliny 36, 141, the word derives from Γάγας or Γάγγαι, a town and river in Lycia. The forms with γαγγ-, with prenasalization, confirm its Anatolian (= Pre-Greek?) origin. Lat. gagātēs, with MoFr. jais, MoHG Gagat, etc., was borrowed from the Greek.

γαγγαίνειν [v.] · τὸ μετὰ γέλωτος προσπαίζειν 'playing with great laughter' (H.). ◁ONOM▷ •VAR Cf. γαγγαλίδες· γελασῖνοι 'front teeth; dimples'; γαγγαλᾶν, γαγγαλίζεθαι· ἥδεσθαι 'to enjoy oneself'; γάγγαλος· ὁ εὐμετάθετος τῇ γνωμῇ καὶ εὐμετάβολος 'fickle in belief; changeable'.
•ETYM γαγγαίνειν is a reduplicated expressive form, which has been taken to belong together with Skt. gañjana- 'despising', which in turn was connected with OE canc 'insult'. As the Skt. form appears only in MInd., the connection remains very uncertain. Neither is the word related to Lat. ganniō, etc. Cf. ► γογγύζω.

γάγγαμον [n.] 'small round net for catching oysters' (A.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR γαγγάμη [f.] (Str.); γαγγάμη· σαγήνη ἢ δίκτυον ἁλιευτικόν. καὶ σκεῦος γεωργικὸν 'drag-net or fishing-net; also an agricultural tool' (S ὅμοιον κρεάγρᾳ 'similar to a flesh-hook') (H.); γάγγαμον· δίκτυον. καὶ τὸ περὶ τὸν ὀμφαλὸν 'fishing-net; also that which is around the navel' (H.); γαγγαμουλκοί· σαγηνευταί 'dragging an oyster-net' (H.).

•DER γαγγαμεύς· ἁλιεύς, ὁ τῇ γαγγάμῃ ἐργαζόμενος 'fisherman, he who handles the γ.' (H.); γαγγαμευτής 'id.' (conj. EM).
•ETYM Technical term, certainly of foreign origin and probably Pre-Greek. Not related to ►γέντο 'he took'. Neumann 1961: 100 connects it with Hitt. kānk-ⁱ 'to hang'; this is most uncertain.

γαγγῆτις ⇒γαγάτης.

γαγγλίον [n.] 'tumour on a tendon, or the head' (Gal.); the nerve knots now called ganglia have been compared to such a tumour. ◄PG?►
•DER γαγγλιώδης 'like a γ.' (Hp.).
•ETYM Unknown. The word is mostly connected with ►ἄγλις, ►γέλγις, ►γάλινθοι, ►γέλινθοι. It is most probably non-IE, and possibly Pre-Greek (Fur.: 129).

γάγγραινα [f.] 'gangrene', an illness that eats away the flesh (Hp.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Cf. γάγγραινα· φαγέδαινα 'cancerous sore, cancer'. οἱ δὲ καρκίνος 'lobster', etc. (H.).
•DER γαγγραινόομαι, γαγγραίνωσις, etc. (Hp.).
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. ►φαγέδαινα. The basic form is uncertain, for a discussion of which see Chantraine 1933: 108f.; it is perhaps *γάγγρων, *γάγγρος, or *γάγγρα. Alexander Polyhistor in St. Byz. s.v. Γάγγρα gives this word as a name for 'goat'. In antiquity, it was compared with γράω 'to devour' (thus also Frisk), but this is certainly incorrect. It is most probably a Pre-Greek word (a-vocalism, -αινα, prenasalization?). Cf. ►καρκίνος.

γάδασμον [n.]? · ἐνηρόσιον 'rent for corn land'. ◄GR?►
•VAR Ms. γαλασιον corr.
•ETYM Latte Mnem. 3/10 (1942): 91[10] reads γάδασμον for γαλασιον in the manuscript on the basis of a comparison with δασμός 'rent'.

γαδή [f.] · κιβωτός 'box' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Cf. γάνδιον· κιβώτιον (H.; Belardi Rend. Acc. Linc. 8: 9 (1954): 620). Because of the prenasalized variant, the word is Pre-Greek. Because of the deviant semantics, Lat. gandeia, an African vehicle, is not related.

γάδος 1 [m.] name of a fish, also called ὄνος (Dorio apud Ath. 7, 315f.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR γάδαρος (Diogenian) = γαϊδάριον (pap. VI-VII[p]), MoGr. γαϊδαρόψαρον (see Thompson 1947 s.v. ὄνος and Saint-Denis 1947 s.v. asellus. Very unclear, see DELG.
•ETYM There is a variety of names for the ὄνος-fish: γαλίας, γαλλερίας, καλλαρίς, χελλαρίης, etc. (Strömberg 1943: 130f.). Fur.: 339[3], 254 adds γάζας· ἰχθὺς ποιός 'a fish' (H.), assuming Pre-Greek origin. DELG explains γαϊδάριον as a loan from Arabic (Andriotis, Etym. Lex. s.v.), but disassociates it from γάδος.

γάδος 2 ⇒γάνδος.

γάζα [f.] '(royal) treasury' (Thphr., OGI 54, 22 [III[a]]). ◄LW Pers.►
•COMP γαζο-φύλαξ 'guarding the treasury' (LXX).
•ETYM According to Pomp. Mela 1, 64 and others, γάζα is of Persian origin, cf. MP ganj (ultimately going back to Median; see Mayrhofer KEWA 1: 315 with references). Arm. ganj was likewise taken over from Iranian. Lat. gaza, and probably Syr. gazā, were borrowed from Greek.

γάζας ⇒γάδος 1.

γάθια [f.] · ἀλλαντία 'small sausage' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM Unknown. See Belardi Ric. ling. 4 (1958): 196. Fur. (index) connects the word with γηθυλλίς, ἀγαθίς.

γαῖα [f.] 'earth' (Il.).
•COMP Dor. γαιάοχος, Lacon. γαιάϝοχος, epic ►γαιήοχος, epithet of Poseidon, also ►ἐννοσίγαιος (Il., s.v.). ἀνώγαιον 'upper floor of a house, granary'; also ἀνόκαιον· ὑπέρῳον, γράφεται καὶ ἀνώγεων H.; perhaps the form with -ο- is original, the other variants being due to folk etymology.
•DER γαιήϊος 'from the earth' (Od.; with -ήϊος, Chantraine 1933: 52); γαιών 'heap of earth' (Tab. Heracl. 1, 136) beside γαεών (IG 14, 322: II 83, Halaesa); γαιόω 'change into earth' (Tz.).
•ETYM Unknown; see ►γῆ.

γαιήοχος [m.] Epithet of Poseidon, secondarily of Zeus, etc. (Il.), mg. uncertain, mostly taken as 'earth-shaker' (= ►ἐννοσίγαιος, s.v.). ◄?►
•VAR Dor. γαιαοχος, Lacon. γαιάϝοχος.
•ETYM γαιήοχος is a compound with γαῖα as the first member, but the interpretation of the second member is debated. The solution of Borgeaud KZ 68 (1944): 221f. that the word means 'bringing home (i.e., the husband of) Gaia' (viz., Ποσειδῶν) is impossible. Kretschmer Glotta 5 (1914): 303 interpreted γαιήοχος as Γαῖαν ὀχεύων 'mounting Gaia' or Γαίᾳ ὀχούμενος, basing himself on the myth that Poseidon ἵππιος had intercourse with the earth goddess Demeter. However, Lacon. γαιάϝοχος shows that the second member started with ϝ-, for which there are no indications in the case of ►ὀχέω and ►ὀχεύων. Alternatively, Nilsson 1941: 419 understood 'faring below the earth' (with Poseidon as a river, after Hesychius, "ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ὀχούμενος"), which is implausible, too. Most scholars follow Meillet 1924 and connect the second member with Go. gawigan 'to set in motion'. Cf. further αἰγίοχος (s.v. ►αἰγίς).

γαῖσος [m.] a Gaulish javelin (Ph. Bel.). ◄LW Lat.►
•VAR Also γαῖσον [n.].
•DER γαισᾶται/-οι 'mercenarii' (Plb.) is a loan from Lat. gaesātus.
•ETYM Like Lat. gaesum, the word is from Gaulish, but via Latin: cf. the PN Gaesāto-rīx, Gaeso-rīx, Vandal. Gaise-rīcus, Go. Rada-gaisus. We can compare OIr. gae, Co. gew 'javelin', and OHG and OS gēr, OE gār, ON geirr [m.] 'spear'. See further s.v. ►χαῖος.

γαίω ⇒ γάνυμαι, γηθέω.

γακού · ἡδύ, γλυκύ 'sweet' (H.). ◄?►
•DER γακουπώνης· ἡδυπότης 'fond of drinking' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

γάλα [n.] 'milk' (Il.). ◄IE glkt(-)* 'milk'► •VAR Gen. γάλακτος. Rare forms: dat. γάλακι (Call. Hek. 1, 4, 4), gen. γάλατος (pap.), τοῦ γάλα (Pl. Com.). Also γλάγος [n.] (B 471). Other forms: γλακῶντες· μεστοὶ γάλακτος 'full of milk' (H.); κλάγος· γάλα. Κρῆτες (H.), see below; with hypocoristic gemination γλακκόν· γαλαθηνόν 'sucking (milk)' (H.); and γλακτο-φάγος 'living on milk' (Il.); these forms may be due to simple assimilations (or metathesis).
•COMP Old is γαλα-θη-νός 'sucking milk' (Od.) from γάλα and θῆσθαι; on the suffix cf. ἀγανός, etc. (Schwyzer: 452), also τιθήνη. Also γαλακτο-πότης 'drinking milk' (Hdt.), etc. On γάλα as a second member see Sommer 1948: 83.
•DER γαλακτίς (πέτρα) name of a stone (Orph.) = γαλακτίτης (Dsc.), both also as plant names = τιθύμαλλος (Aët., gloss.; after its juice, see Strömberg 1940: 58); γάλαξ name of a white shellfish (Arist.; Strömberg 1943: 109; cf. Chantraine 1933:379); ►γάλιον s.v. Adjective γαλακτώδης (Arist.). Denominative verbs: γαλακτίζω, γαλακτόομαι, γαλακτιάω. With ξ (from τ assibilated before ι) γαλαξίας (κύκλος) 'Milky Way' (D. S.; see Chantraine 1933: 95; also γαλακτίας Ptol.); γαλάξια [n.pl.] name of a festival for Cybele (inscr., Thphr.), from which Γαλαξιών month name on Delos (inscr. III[a]). Independent is γαλατμόν· λάχανον ἄγριον 'wild herb' (H.; cf. γάλιον); perhaps from *γαλακτ-μόν (Strömberg 1940: 58); Fur.: 374, 389 compares ἀδαλτόμον. See on ►γάλαγγα. From γλάγος derive the late forms γλαγερός, γλαγόεις; also περιγλαγής (Π 642) and γλαγάω (AP).
•ETYM Outside Greek, only found in Lat. lac (De Vaan 2008 s.v.) and Armenian (see below). The basis of the Greek forms is galakt-* or glakt-;* the latter is seen in γλακτο-φάγος (N 6). As an alternative to assuming a proto-stem with two variants, we may consider the possibility that γάλα goes back to glakt* (from glkt*) with loss of the final consonants and development of a secondary vowel in the nom./acc. (cf. γυνή). In that case, γλακτο- (see above) would be the expected outcome for the oblique cases, whereas γάλακτος would have analogical γάλ- instead of γλ-. Since in the nominative the final consonants must have been lost in subsequent stages, i.e. galakt* > galak* > γάλα, the intermediate stage could have yielded the t-less forms like γλάγος. The Armenian forms, class. kat'n and dial. kaxc', have been explained by Kortlandt (following Weitenberg) as from acc. gl̥kt-m*, gen. gl̥kt-s* via an intermediate kałt'-* with al < l̥* (Kortlandt REArm. 19 (1985): 22). MIr. lacht, etc. were borrowed from Lat. lac. The derivation of Szemerényi KZ 75 (1958): 170-184 from mlg/k-* (from the root of ἀμέλγω) is impossible, as this root was $h_2$melǵ-*. Not related is Hitt. galaktar 'soothing'; see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. kalank-[i] 'soothe'.

γάλαγγα [?] 'galingal, Alpina officinarum' (Aet.). ◄LW Sem.► •ETYM From Arab. khalandjan, itself of Chinese origin. See André 1956 s.v. galenga.

γάλας · γῆ 'earth'. παρὰ Εὐκλίτῳ (H.). Corr. Εὔκλῳ? (PW 6, 1055). ◄?►

•ETYM Etymology unknown. The word is Mediterranean, according to Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 200.

γαλάσιον ⇒γάδασμον.

γαλέη, γαλῆ [f.] 'weasel, marten' (Batr., Ar.); also a fish name (Ael.), see Strömberg 1943: 108. ◄?►
•COMP γαλε-άγκων (Arist.), also γαλι-άγκων (Hp.; after the frequent first members in -ι: ἀργι-, κυδι-, etc.; see below), properly "with arms like a weasel", i.e. 'with short upper arm', cf. Solmsen 1909: 225f.; γαλεό-βδολον [n.] "weasel stench", 'dead nettle', substantivized bahuvrīhi, = γαλήοψις "weasel eye" (Dsc.); on the names see Strömberg 1940: 138f., Lehmann IF 21 (1907): 193[1]. Denominative γαλιάω = ἀκολασταίνω 'be licentious', "ce qui serait sémantiquement satisfaisant"(?) DELG.
•DER γαλιδεύς 'young weasel' (Crat.), after λυκ-ιδεύς, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 364; see below); γαλεώτης 'gecko lizard' (Ar.), 'weasel' (Luc.); on the formation see Schwyzer: 500; also 'swordfish' (Plb.), cf. s.v. ►γαλεός.
•ETYM The formation of γαλέη shows that the word originally indicated the skin; cf. ἀλωπεκ-έη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 91) and Lat. galea below. γαλέη has been connected with Lat. glīs 'dormouse' and Skt. giri-, girikā- [f.] 'mouse'. However, the Skt. word is only attested in lexicons and probably did not really exist (Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 488). In spite of its deviant meaning, the Latin could perhaps be related if γαλ- reflects glH-V-*, Lat. glīs possibly going back to glHi-* (Schrijver 1991: 242). γαλέη is not related to MW bele 'weasel' (pace Schwyzer: 299; cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v. fēlēs). The original meaning 'weasel-skin' is found in Lat. galea 'leather helmet', cf. κυνέη properly 'dog-skin'. For a possible connection of 'weasel' with ►γαλόως 'husband's sister', see there.

γαλεός [m.] 'dogfish, shark' (Pl. Com.), also = γαλέη (Aret.). ◄?►
•DER γαλεώδης 'like a shark' (Arist.), γαλεώτης 'swordfish' (Plb.; see below), also γαλαξίας = γαλεός (Gal.); connection with γαλαξίας 'milky way' unclear; remarkable compound γαλεώνυμος = γαλεός (Phylotim. apud Gal.), cf. also καλλιώνυμος name of a fish, see Strömberg 1943: 108f.
•ETYM Strömberg l.c. maintained that the dogfish was named after the weasel, but the formation of γαλεός is unclear (a back-formation from γαλεώτης after ἀσκαλαβώτης : ἀσκάλαβος?). On γαλεός, see Thompson 1947 s.v. For γαλεώνυμος etc., Frisk and DELG (s.v. γαλέη) suggested contamination and tabu-formation, which remains gratuitous.

γαλήνη [f.] 'stillness of the sea' (Od.); also 'lead sulphite' (Plin.), see Chantraine RPh. 91 (1965): 203-5. ◄IE ǵlh₂-es-* 'laughter'► •VAR Dor. γαλᾱ́νᾱ.
•DER γαλήνεια (γαλάνεια) = γαλήνη (Eur.), after σαφήνεια?; not from γαληνής (only Arist. Phgn. 811b 38); γαληναίη (A. R.; cf. ἀναγκαίη beside ἀνάγκη), γαληναῖος (AP). γαληνός 'still' (E.). After the numerous adjectives in -ρο- (not an old r/n-stem): γαληρός (H.); after the adjectives in -ερος: γαλερός (H.).

•ETYM Similarly to σελήνη, the variants γαλήνη and γαλᾱ́νᾱ derive from *γαλασ-νᾱ, in turn from an s-stem that is also seen in γέλως, γελασ-τός, etc. Because of its e-grade, γελήνη (termed Aeol. by Jo. Gramm. Comp. 3, 1) is perhaps to be ranged with the latter words. γαλήνη must originally have meant 'cheerfulness'; cf. γελεῖν· λάμπειν, ἀνθεῖν 'to shine, flourish' (H.). For the ablaut grade $\acute{g}lh_2$-es-, cf. Arm. całr 'laughter'. See ► γελάω, ► γλήνη, ► γλῆνος.

γάλι ⇒ἅλις.

γαλιάγκων ⇒γαλέη.

γαλίας ⇒γάδος.

γάλινθοι [m.pl.] · ἐρέβινθοι. οἱ δὲ γάλιθοι 'chick-peas; elsewhere γάλιθοι' (H.). ◁PG▷ •VAR Also γέλινθοι· ἐρέβινθοι (H.).
•ETYM Pre-Greek (note the suffix -ινθος with a variant without prenasalization, as well as the interchange α/ε). Not related to ► γέλγις.

γάλιον [n.] 1. 'bedstraw, Galium verum' (Dsc. 4, 95) and 2. 'dead nettle' (Plin. 27, 81). ◁GR▷ •VAR The first also (ibid.) γαλάτιον (cf. ἁλάτιον 'salt') and γαλαίριον (unclear).
•ETYM In the sense 'bedstraw' etc., γάλιον is related to γάλα because it was used as rennet (Dsc. l.c., cf. Strömberg 1940: 108). In the sense 'dead nettle', we should rather compare ► γαλέη in view of other words for 'dead nettle': γαλεόβδολον and γαλήοψις.

γαλλαρίας •VAR γαλλερίας. ⇒καλλαρίας.

γάλλαρος [m.] 'member of a Dionysiac cultic society' (inscr. Philippopel, II[p]). γάλλαρος· Φρυγιακὸν ὄνομα παρὰ Λάκωσι 'a Phrygian name, acc. to the Laconians' (H.). ◁LW Phr.▷ •ETYM See Dunst KZ 78 (1963): 147ff. Cf. ► γάλλος.

γάλλια [n.pl.] · ἔντερα 'intestines' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM As *ϝάλλια, the word is perhaps from *ϝάλνια, related to εἰλύω 'wind, turn, etc.' (Lidén KZ 61 (1934): 22f.). Cf. ON vil [n.], viljum [dat.pl.] 'viscera', IE uel-io-. On the development, cf. Lesb. Thess. στάλλα, from *στάλνᾱ.

γάλλος [m.] 'a priest of Cybele, eunuch' (inscr, Epict.). ◁LW Phr.▷ •COMP γαλλομανής, γαλλιαμβικόν metrical term (not in LSJ).
•DER γαλλαῖος 'of a γ.' (Rhian.), γαλλάζω (Schwyzer: 633, 12).
•ETYM In antiquity, the word was believed to be Phrygian. Probably, ► γάλλαρος is related.

γαλόως [f.] 'husband's sister' (Il.). ◁IE $\acute{g}lH$-ōu-s 'husband's sister'▷ •VAR γαλόω [gen.sg.], γαλόῳ [dat.sg.] and [nom.pl.], γαλόων [gen.pl.] (with metrical diectasis). Also γάλις· γαλαός (H.), see below.
•DIAL Also Att. γάλως, -ω (acc. to Hdn. Gr.).

•ETYM The Greek forms derive from *γαλ-αϝ-ο- (not *γαλ-ωϝ-ο-; Beekes MSS 34 (1976):13ff), a thematicization of $\acute{g}lh_2$-eu-, which is probably an oblique stem of $\acute{g}(e)lh_2$-ōu-s (formation as in ► πάτρως, ► μήτρως). The PIE term denoted the unmarried sister of the husband, cf. Lat. glōs 'husband's sister' (secondarily 'brother's wife'; the loss of the laryngeal in Latin is difficult to account for, see Schrijver 1991: 131). Further cognates are Arm. tal 'id.' (i-stem), which has initial t- for c- after taygr 'husband's brother' (see ► δαήρ), and Slavic words like OCS zъlъva, Ru. zólva, zolóvka, which must reflect -uu̯- instead of -u-, probably through adaptation to -uh_2- after other feminines. γέλαρος· ἀδελφοῦ γυνή, Φρυγιστί (H.) is unclear (for *γέλαϝος? Hermann Gött. Nachr. (1918): 222f.). Oettinger 1998: 649-654 points out that in Romance languages and dialects, 'weasel' and 'aunt' are often homonyms, because of the behaviour of the aunt; for the same reason, the IE terms may have been identical. The nature of the laryngeal is difficult to determine, unless the Hesychius gloss has *γαλαϝ-ος < $\acute{g}lh_2$-eu-os. γάλις could represent $\acute{g}lH$-i-.

γαμβρός [m.] 'son-in-law, brother-in-law (sister's husband)' (Il.). ◁IE $\acute{g}(e)mH$- 'marry'▷ •DER Rare and late: γαμβροτιδεύς 'son of a γαμβρός' (Iamb., after λεοντιδεύς, etc.), γαμβρεύω 'form connections by marriage' (LXX).
•ETYM Outside Greek, one compares Skt. jā́mātar- = Av. zāmātar- (with secondary -tar-); cf. Av. zāmaoiia- (< -mavya-) 'brother of the son-in-law' and Skt. jāmí- 'related', fem. also 'daughter-in-law', Lat. gener, Alb. dhëndërr, dhândër(r). The formation of the BSl. terms is isolated: Lith. žéntas, OCS zętь. The BSl. and Alb. words, as well as Lat. gener, must have been influenced by $\acute{g}enh_1$- (γίγνομαι), although even then Latv. znuôts remains difficult, as it seems to go back to $\acute{g}neh_3$-to-. The Greek and Indo-Iranian forms must belong together, the Greek requiring $\acute{g}m̥$-ro-, the Indo-Iranian forms $\acute{g}$omo-; ► γαμέω might have been formed secondarily, or else the resemblance may be due to later influence γαμέω (cf. Viredaz IF 107 (2002): 152-180).

γαμέω [v.] 'to marry' (Il.). ◁IE $\acute{g}(e)m$- 'marry'▷ •VAR Fut. γαμέω (γαμῶ), aor. γῆμαι, perf. γεγάμηκα, -ημαι (Att.); late γαμήσω, ἐγάμησα, ἐγαμήθην; isolated fut. γαμέσσεται I 394 'give in marriage' (Aristarchus reads γε μάσσεται).
•DER Back-formation γάμος [m.] 'wedding' (Il.). From γαμέω: γαμετή 'wife' (Hes.); from γάμος: γαμέτης 'husband' (A.). γαμήλιος 'nuptial' (A.) with the month name Γαμηλιών (Arist.). A suffix -l- also in γάμελα [n.pl.] 'wedding offerings' (Delphi V[a]) and Γαμέλιος months name (Dodona). Desiderative γαμησείω (Alciphr.).
•ETYM There are no cognate verbs outside Greek. The connection with γέντο, ὕγγεμος = συλλαβή, γέμω is uncertain. Probably connected with ► γαμβρός.

γάμμα [n.] name of the letter (X.). ◁LW Sem.▷
•VAR γέμμα (Democr.).
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. gīmel and the word for 'camel': Hebr. gāmāl, Aram. gamlā (Schwyzer: 140).

γαμφηλαί [f.pl.] 'jaws of animals' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR γναμφαί· γνάθοι 'jaws' (H.).
•DER Backformation γαμφαί (Lyc.).
•ETYM Cf. τράχηλος 'neck, throat', etc. Generally connected with ►γόμφος and γομφίος, but the α-vocalism is problematic. Neither a popular word, a zero grade *γαφ- with restored nasal, nor influence from γαμψός or γναμπτήρ (CEG 1) seems to be a sufficient explanation. The suffix -ηλ- occurs in Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek), so the word may be Pre-Greek. Pedersen (see WP 1: 534) pointed to Ru. gubá 'lip', etc.

γαμψός [adj.] 'curved, crooked' (Ar.). ◄PG?►
•COMP γαμψῶνυξ (Il.), γαμψώνυχος (Epich.) 'with curved claws'.
•DER γαμψόομαι (Arist.), γαμψωλή (H.).
•ETYM It seems evident to connect the word with ►γνάμπτω. On the assumption that γαμψός is a back-formation from γαμψώνυχ(ο)-, the absence of the -ν- was implausibly explained as the result of dissimilation (Leumann 1950: 156). Equally unattractive is it to assume a contamination of γνάμπτω and κάμπτω (Güntert 1914: 115f.). We rather have to connect γαμψός with (a variant of) ►κάμπτω, and possibly ►γνάμπτω is related as well. If so, all of these words may well be Pre-Greek.

γᾶναι •VAR Cod. γάναι. ⇒αἴνω.

γάνδος [m.] · ὁ πολλὰ εἰδὼς καὶ πανοῦργος. τίνες δὲ γάδος 'a villain who knows much; some authors have γάδος' (H.). ◄PG► •VAR Cf. γάσος· ὁ ἀπατέων. ὁ πολλὰ εἰδὼς καὶ πανοῦργος 'a deceiver; a villain who knows much'.
•ETYM The prenasalization proves Pre-Greek origin; see Fur.: 254, 288. This conclusion is confirmed by the variant with σ.

γανῖται [?] · δάπανοι, ἄσωτοι 'extravagant men; spendthrifts' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM DELG hesitantly and unconvincingly suggests a connection with Lat. ganea 'underground house', which implies some relationship with ►γάνος 2.

γάνος 1 ⇒γάνυμαι.

γάνος 2 [m.] · παράδεισος 'garden' (Cyprian, acc. to EM); γάνεα· κήπους 'gardens' (H.). ◄LW Sem.► •ETYM From Semitic (Hebr. gan 'garden'); see E. Masson 1967: 74.

γάνος 3 ⇒γλάνος.

γάνυμαι [v.] 'to brighten up, be glad, rejoice' (Il.). ◄IE *geh_2u- 'be bright, be glad'► •VAR Present; further only fut. γανύσσομαι (Ξ 504); late perf. γεγάνυμαι.
•COMP Γανυ-μήδης, etc.
•DER γανύματα· ἀρτύματα 'seasonings' (AB), γανύσματα (Paul. Sil.), from which (with rhotacism) γανύρματα H.; γανυρόν· λευκόν, ἡδύ, ἱλαρόν 'white, sweet, merciful' (H.; γανερόν EM), γανυτελεῖν· γανυπελεῖν, ἡδύσματα ποιεῖν 'bring joy' (H.), γάνος 'brightness, joy' (Sapph.), with γάνωμα = γάνος (Ph.), γανώδης (Thphr.), διηγανές· λαμπρόν 'bright' (H.) and γανόομαι (Anacr.) with γάνωσις (Plu.). Denominative γανεῖν· λευκαίνειν 'to become bright' (H., EM). Pres. γανύσκομαι (Them.). Homeric ptc. γανόωντες, γανόωσαι, etc. 'glitter, gleam' (Il.), innovations after the verbs in -ανάω (see Risch 274, Chantraine 1942: 360), late present γανόωσιν (Arat. 190) and γανάσσαι· σμῆξαι, ἡδῦναι 'wash clean, rejoice' (H.). γαίων in κύδει γαίων (Il.) 'rejoicing in splendour' vel sim.; γαίεσκον· ἔχαιρον 'rejoiced' (H.).
•ETYM γάνυμαι is an old nasal present *gh_2-n-u-, cognate with γαίων, from *γᾰϝ-ι̯ω < *gh_2u-$\underset{\frown}{i}\bar{o}$. Possibly further related to ►γαῦρος (*geh_2u-ro-) and ►γηθέω.

γαπελεῖν [v.] · ἀμελεῖν 'to have no care for' (H.). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Without any additional support, Bechtel KZ 44 (1911): 354 connected the word with the PNs Arg. Γαψίας, Delph. Γάψων (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 5 (1914): 307). It has also been proposed to correct this entry, i.e. to *ναπελεῖν for νηπελεῖν (Whatmough Class. Phil. 53 (1958): 203f.). Alternatively, Fur.: 391 convincingly adduces ἀπαλεῖν· ἀμελεῖν (H.): because of the variation in the initial, a very promising indication of Pre-Greek origin.

γάρ [pcl.] 'for, since' (Il.).
•ETYM From ►γε ►ἄρ. See Schwyzer 1950: 560.

γάργα [f.] · αἴγειρος 'black poplar, Populus nigra' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Fick 1905: 82 compares the Attic Deme called Γαργηττός and Γάργαρα (Troas).

γαργαλίζω [v.] 'to tickle' (Pl.). ◄ONOM► •VAR γαγγαλίζω (Phryn.), with γαγγαλίδες· γελασῖνοι 'front teeth; dimples' (H.) and γαγγαλιάω (H.).
•DER Backformation γάργαλος (Ar.), γαργάλη (Com.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic formations with reduplication (for *γαλ-γαλ-); cf. Schwyzer: 259 and 647.

γάργαρα [n.pl.] 'heaps, lots (of people)' (Com.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Dissimilated γάργαλα· πλῆθος, πολλά 'a multitude, many' (H.).
•DER γαργαρίς· θόρυβος 'tumult' (H.), γαργαίρω 'swarm' (Com., Sophr.); γαργάρται· λίθοι αὐτοφυεῖς 'natural stone' (H.)? With another vowel γέργερα· πολλά (H.).
•ETYM Reduplicated onomatopoeic formation. Not related to ►ἀγείρω, ►ἀγοστός. Comparable independent formations are seen, for instance, in Lith. gurgulỹs 'tangle of threads, swarm (of birds)', gùrguolė 'mass (people, bees)'.

γαργαρίζω [v.] 'to gargle' (Orib., sch.). ◄ONOM► •DER Deverbal γαργαρεών [m.] 'uvula', also 'trachea' (Hp.); cf. ἀνθερεών. With different vocalism γέργερος· βρόγχος 'windpipe' (H.), cf. on ►γάργαρα.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic formation with intensive reduplication; see Schwyzer: 423.

γάρκαν [?] · ῥάβδον. Μακεδόνες 'rod, wand (Maced.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Reminiscent of ►γάρρα · ῥάβδος; ►γάρσανα · φρύγανα. Κρῆτες 'stick (Cret.)' (H.) and ►γέρρον. However, the words can hardly be cognate, even if they are from Pre-Greek. Not related to βράκος· κάλαμιος (pace Pisani Acme 1 (1948): 312; Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 200f.; Kalléris 1954: 136f.; see also Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 253f.).

γάρνον [?] · τὸ ἔσω τῆς πλήμνης σιδήριον, ὃ τὸν ἄξονα τρίβει 'iron implement in the nave of a wheel, which pounds the axle' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Pollux 1, 145 writes γάρκον.
•ETYM Etymology unknown.

γάρος [m.] 'sauce or paste made of brine and small fish' (A.). ◂?▸ •VAR Also ntr. (pap.), γάρον (Str.).
•DER γαράριον, γαρηρόν 'bowl for γ.' (pap.); γαριτικός (pap.); γαρῖνος and γαρίσκος fish names (Marcell. Sid.); Strömberg 1943: 41 and 88.
•ETYM Etymology unknown; Lat. garum is borrowed from the Greek (see DELG).

γάρρα ⇒γέρρον.

γαρριώμεθα [v.] · λοιδορούμεθα 'we are reproached' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM An expressive form which recalls Lat. garriō, 'to chatter'. The connection with ▸γῆρυς is doubtful. Bechtel 1921, 2: 369 opts for Laconian origin.

γάρσανα ⇒γέρρον.

γάσος ⇒γάνδος.

γαστήρ [f.] 'belly, paunch, womb' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Gen. -τρός, -τέρος (for the inflection see Schwyzer: 568, Chantraine 1942: 96 and 215).
•COMP As a first member γαστρ(ι/ο)-. Old ὀγάστωρ (H.).
•DER γάστρα, -η 'belly of a vase' (Il., inscr., cf. μήτρα); γάστρων 'pot-belly' (Alc.). Denominative γαστρίζω (Ar.).
•ETYM γαστήρ is often derived from *γρασ-τήρ as "glutton", which would be a derivative of ▸γράω; the word would be matched by Skt. grastar- 'eclipser', an astronomical term (allegedly from "devourer"). However, the semantics are far-fetched since the belly is not an "eater", nor is DELG's comment convincing: "le ventre de femme en tant qu'elle conçoit et porte un enfant". If ▸γέντα should be related, we might think of a gnt-$tēr$ with tt > st, but this remains quite uncertain.

γατάλαι [f.pl.] · οὐλαί 'barley-corns' (H.).
•ETYM Mostly corrected to γατειλαί and, as *ϝατειλαί, connected with ▸ὠτειλή.

γαυλός [m.] 'milk-pail, water-bucket, beehive' (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR γαῦλος, with different accent (see Hdn. Gr. 1, 156), a (round) freighter (Epich., see Chantraine 1928: 7).
•ETYM A connection with ▸γωλεός and ▸γύαλον (q.vv.) and, outside Greek, OHG kiol, ON kjóll 'ship' has been considered. Alternatively, γαυλός could be borrowed from Semitic, cf. Hebr. gullā 'vase for oil'. Specifically Phoenician origin cannot be proven with the gloss γαυλοί· καὶ τὰ Φοινικικὰ πλοῖα γαῦλοι καλοῦνται 'also Phoenician ships are called γ.' (H.); see E. Masson 1967: 39ff. Lat. gaulus is borrowed from the Greek.

γαυνάκης [m.] a thick cloak, Persian or Babylonian? (pap., Peripl. M. Rubr., Clem. Al.). ◂LW Pers.▸
•VAR Also καυνάκης (Ar.) and καυνάκη [f.] (pap.).
•ETYM Borrowed from a Persian word that reflects older gauna-ka-* 'hairy' (cf. Av. gaona- 'hair'). Assyr. gunakku, a garment, is borrowed from the same source, whereas Lat. gaunaca (since Varro) was taken over from the Greek (see Schwyzer ZII 6 (1926): 234ff.). Alternatively, Fur.: 119 assumes a 'vorderasiatisches Wanderwort' (see R. Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 102-105).

γαῦρος [adj.] 'haughty, exulting in' (Archil.). ◂?▸
•DER γαύρηξ 'braggart' (Alc.), γαυρότης 'exultation' (Plu.). Denominative γαυριάω 'bear oneself proudly' (Cratin.); γαυρόομαι 'id.' (E.).
•ETYM Mostly connected with ▸γάνυμαι, ▸γηθέω. MIr. gúaire 'noble' (< gaurịos*?) has also been cited as a comparandum. Cf. ▸ἀγαυρός.

γαύσαπος [m.] 'shaggy woollen cloth, frieze' (Str.). ◂LW Balkans?▸ •VAR γαυσάπης (Varro).
•ETYM For a suggestion, see Fur.: 119, who compares καυσία 'Macedonian felt hat' (NB: forms like *γαυδαπος, which he often cites, e.g. 229, are ghost forms). Lat. gausape(s), -a, -um (Lucil.) is borrowed from the Greek. γαύσαπος is not borrowed from from Assyrian guzippu, kuzippu 'cloth' (Lewy KZ 58 (1931): 26ff.).

γαυσός [adj.] 'crooked, bent outwards' (Hp.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Or γαῦσος? (DELG; the accent varies).
•DER Thence γαυσάδας· ψευδής 'false' (H.; see DELG); denominative γαυσόω (Sor.). Also ἔγγαυσον· ἔνσκαμβον 'crooked' (H.), cf. Strömberg 1946: 127.
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. βλαισός, λοξός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 434). γαυσός has been compared with γαυλός, which is semantically improbable, and with γυρός, γύαλον (from a PIE root geu-* 'curve, etc.'), which is formally impossible. The origin of the word is rather to be sought in Pre-Greek.

γε [pcl.] 'at least, at any rate' (Il.). ◂IE ǵe* emphatic pcl.▸
•VAR Dor. Boeot. γα.
•ETYM Combinations like ἐμέγε, σέγε invite a comparison with Go. mi-k, þu-k, although mik could be influenced by ik 'I'. The particle ▸-χι has a comparable function, cf. Skt. hí (from ǵʰi*), and also Skt. ha (from gʰe*) and ghă (from gʰo*), and further Lith. ne-gù, ne-gì 'not', OCS ni-že 'neque', ToA -(ä)k, ToB -k, Hitt. ammuk 'me', etc.

γέγειος [adj.] 'antique' (Hecat.). ◂?▸
•ETYM DELG remarks that the word never means 'of the earth', so that connection with γῆ is improbable. However, the meaning could actually derive from 'earth-born' (LSJ).

γέγωνα [v.] 'to shout so as to make oneself heard' (Il.; on the meaning Wackernagel 1916: 156f.). ◂?▸

•VAR Old perfect, with preterite (plpf.) (ἐ)γέγωνε, ἐγεγώνει, ἐγεγώνευν (-εον), inf. γεγωνέμεν, -εῖν, ptc. γεγωνέοντες (Chios V[a]); imp. γέγωνε (A.), γεγωνείτω (X.), 3sg.pres.ind. γεγωνεῖ (Arist.); new aor. γεγωνῆσαι (A.), Fut. -ήσω (E.). Unclear γεγωναί· αἱ ὁμιλίαι 'intercourse' (H.).
•DER γεγώνησις (Plu.). From the ptc. γεγωνώς the adj. γεγωνός, -όν 'loud-sounding' (A.). Recent γεγωνίσκω (A.).
•ETYM Often connected with ► γιγνώσκω, but the lengthened vowel was usually left unexplained (see Schwyzer 770). Hackstein 2002: 187ff. assumes a desiderative PGr. *ge-gon-s- from an IE root *$\acute{g}h_3$en-, also seen in ToA ken- 'call'. On this proposal, see now Vine 2007: 343-357.

γεῖσον [n.] 'projecting part of the roof, cornice' (E.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Often γεῖσσον, γεῖσος [n.] (LXX, Hell. inscr.).
•DER γείσωμα 'penthouse' (Poll.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.); γείσωσις· τὸ τῆς στέγης ἐξέχον 'projecting part of the roof' (H., EM), from γεισόω (EM), but see Chantraine 1933: 288.
•ETYM A Carian word, acc. to Steph. Byz. s.v. Μονόγισσα, who compares Car. γίσσα 'stone' (which does not fit very well semantically). Fur. 117 compares Georg. kviša 'gravel', etc.; cf. further κίσηρις 'pumice-stone' (Arist.). In any case, the word is a loan, like many other terms for building, on which see Schwyzer: 62; the term could be an Anatolian LW or (= ?) Pre-Greek.

γείτων, -ονος [m., f.] 'neighbour', also as an adj. (Od.). Also γ<ε>ίτονας· τὰ δύο αἰδοῖα 'the two genitals' (H.), also in MoGr. (Pontos, Koukoulés Ἀρχ. 27, 61ff.). ◂IE?▸
•COMP As a second member in τὰ Μεταγείτνια a festival in Miletus (V[a]), with the month name Μεταγειτνιών (IA), beside Πεδαγείτνιος, etc. (Rhodos, Cos, Chalcedon).
•DER Late fem. γείταινα (AB, cf. τέκταινα, etc.). With γειτον-: γειτονία 'neighbourhood' (Pl.) with γειτονέω (A.), γειτονεύω (Hp.). With γειτν-: γειτνιάω (S.), γειτνία, γείτνιος (pap.), γειτνέω (pap.), etc.
•ETYM If the ablaut in the suffix is old, γείτων cannot be a recent creation. However, it lacks a good etymology (in any case, not related to γεῖσον).

γελανδρόν [adj.] · ψυχρόν 'cold' (H.; in wrong position). ◂?▸
•ETYM γελανδρόν is reminiscent of Lat. gelidus. Contrary to what Frisk argued, the unusual formation of the Greek word does not prove that the entry is corrupt; rather, its correctness is corroborated by the French dialect word jalandro from the region of Grenoble (Hubschmid Vox Romanica 3 (1938): 130). If we assume substrate origin and a pre-form *γελαδ-ρο- with prenasalization, all three words could be related (perhaps the ultimate source is Galatian).

γελάω [v.] 'to laugh' (Il.). ◂IE *$gelh_2$- 'laugh'▸
•VAR Aor. γελάσ(σ)αι, with γελάσομαι, ἐγελάσθην, γεγέλασμαι (Att., etc.).

•DER γέλασμα 'laughing' (A., see below), γελαστύς 'id.' (Call.), γελαστής 'laugher, sneerer' (S.), ἐγγελαστής (E.), γέλασις (EM). γελασῖνος 'laugher' (Ael.), plur. 'the front teeth' (Poll.). Also γελάσκω (AP) and γελασείω (Pl.).
Beside γελάω stands γέλως, -ωτος (epic acc. γέλω for γέλων, γέλον, Att. gen. γέλω) [m.] 'laughter' (Il.), with γελώω (Od., see Chantraine 1942: 365f.) and γελοῖος (B 215, where γελοίϊος metri causa, cf. Schwyzer: 467 and Chantraine 1942: 168) with denominative γελοιάω, γελοιάζω (LXX). γελασ- in ἀ-γέλασ-τος (θ 307), also in γελᾱνής (Pi.) < *γελασ-νής? Also in γελαρής· γαλήνη. Λάκωνες 'calm of the wind (Lacon.)' (H.) < *γελασ-ρής; also in γελάω, γελάσ-σαι <*γελασ-ι̯ω. Aeolic o-stem γέλος [m.] (cf. ἔρως : ἔρος : ἐραστός).
•ETYM Beside γέλως ($gelh_2$-ōs) stands Arm. całr, gen. cału 'laughter' (with ci-całim [v.] 'laugh'); cf. Clackson 126-132. For the ablaut, cf. γαλ- < *glh_2- in γαλήνη. The 'physical' meaning is preserved in γελεῖν· λάμπειν, ἀνθεῖν 'glow, flower' (H.). Cf. ► γαλήνη, ► γλήνη, ► γλῆνος.

γέλγη [n.pl.] 'frippery' (Eup., Luc.). Acc. to H., (ὁ ῥῶπος καὶ) βάμματα, καὶ ἄτρακτοι, καὶ κτένες '[petty wares and] dyes, and spindles and combs'. ◂?▸
•DER γέλγει· βαπτίζει, χρωματίζει 'dip, tinge' and γέλγια· πήνη, σπάθη, κουράλια 'woof, blade, coral' (H.).
•ETYM No etymology. Hardly connected to ► γέλγις.

γέλγις [f.] 'garlic', or its cloves (Thphr.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Gen. -ῑδος, -ῑθος; plur. γέλγεις, γέλγιθες.
•DER γελγιδόομαι 'change into γ.' (Thphr.), γελγιθεύειν· ἀπατηλογεῖν 'to speak deceivingly (vel sim.)' (H.).
•ETYM The obviously related synonym ► ἄγλις suggests that γέλγις is to be analysed as a reduplicated *γε-γλις. Evidently, the variation ἀ- ~ zero or ἀ- ~ γε- cannot be of IE origin. In addition, Fur.: 123, 127 (etc.) adduces σκελλίς, -ίδος (Plu.; also σκελίς Alex. Trall.) with the same meaning; this form cannot be separated from γέλγις, and so further confirms Pre-Greek origin because it adds, e.g. the interchange γ ~ κ. The suffix, too, with a long vowel ῑ, is typically Pre-Greek. Any connection with ► γαγγλίον is a mere guess.

γέλενος [?] · ἀσπόδελος, νάρκισσος 'asphodelus, narcissus' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Fur.: 138 compares σχέλινος· ἀγρία κυπάρισσος 'wild cypress' (H.); see his comments.

γέμω [v.] 'to be full (of)' (IA). ◂IE? gem- 'take, seize'▸
•VAR Only present.
•DER γόμος 'freight, cargo' (IA) with factitive γομόω 'load' (Babr.); poet. γέμος [n.] 'load' (A.). Deverbative with causative value (Schwyzer: 717): γεμίζω 'to fill, load' (A.); also γεμόω 'id.' (pap.).
•ETYM Probably related to U kumiaf [acc.pl.f.] 'gravidās' whence, as a loan, Lat. gumia [m., f.] 'glutton'. Connection with Lat. gemō is difficult (see E-M: 'be full' < sigh'?). Cf. Szemerényi ZDMG 101 (1951): 219. The word has further been connected with ► γέντο 'took', which is semantically not evident.

γενεά •VAR γενεή. ⇒γίγνομαι.

γένειον •VAR γενειάς. ⇒ γένυς.

γέννᾱ [f.] 'descent, birth' (Pi.). ◁IE *ǵenh$_1$- 'beget'▷
•DER γεννάδᾱς [m.] 'noble (of birth)' (Ar.), Att. γεννήτης 'member of the γένος' (Is.); γεννικός 'noble' (Com., Pl.); γεννήεις 'begetting' to γεννάω, see below. Old is γενναῖος 'of good origin' (Il.) with γενναιότης (E.). Beside γέννα and γενναῖος, we find the verb γεννάω 'to beget, generate' (Pi.) with γέννημα (S.; γένημα after γένος), etc., γέννησις, γεννητής 'begetter' (S.); γεννήτωρ (A.) and γεννητήρ (App.) 'id.', γεννήτειρα (Pl.), γεννήτρια (Phryn.). From γεννάω also γεννητικός (Arist.) and γεννήεις (Emp.).
•ETYM γέννα and cognate forms are obviously related to root represented by γένος and γίγνομαι. However, problematic is the origin of the geminate νν, which is certainly not expressive (pace Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 15f., Chantraine 1933: 46). If the verb γεννάω is primary (as argued by DELG), we could perhaps explain the νν as the result of a restoration of the root γεν- (for instance after γένος) in a νᾱ-verb (like δάμνημι, δαμνάω). On the other hand, γενναῖος seems to be an old formation, which in turn suggests that its basis γέννα is old as well (as argued by Wackernagel KZ 30 (1890): 300 and 314; for γενναῖος, Schwyzer Glotta 5 (1914): 195f., has suggested that it actually stands for *γενῃαῖος). As none of the above solutions is really convincing, we should rather consider some kind of irregular, for instance analogical development of *n*ja*; after all, γέννα ends in short -α, which seems to presuppose -i̯a < *-ih$_2$. See ► γίγνομαι.

γένος ⇒γίγνομαι.

γέντα [n.pl.] 'intestines' (Call.); κρέα, σπλάγχνα 'meat, innards' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM No etymology. According to Eust., it is a Thracian word. Szemerényi WuS NF 1 (1938): 156f. connects it with ► γαστήρ, which is theoretically possible if the latter reflects *$gnt$-tēr.

γεντιανή [f.] a plant, 'gentian' (Dsc., Hp.). ◁?▷
•DER γεντιὰς ῥίζα (Androm. apud Gal., Dsc.), for *γεντιανάς, Chantraine 1933: 353.
•ETYM According to Dsc. 3, 3, the plant is named after the Illyrian king Gentis, which has been associated with the fact that the plant was prominent in the Alps; cf. Strömberg 1940: 135. On the form of the name of the Illyrian king, Gent(h)ius, see Krahe 1929: 53f. Compare also Venet. χe.nθe.i [dat.].

γέντο [v.aor.] 'he took' (θ 43). ◁IE? *$*gem$- 'seize, take, etc.'▷ •ETYM Like λέκτο 'he laid down', γέντο is either a med. root aorist, or an s-aorist that lost its -σ- (*λέκ-σ-το, *γέμ-σ-το; on the μ, see below); cf. Schwyzer: 751 Zus. 2. If they are root aorists, both verbs have analogical full grade. To γέντο < *γέμτο, we can probably further add the ipv. ἀπό-γεμε· ἄφελκε. Κύπριοι 'draw away (Cypr.)' and ὕγ-γεμος· συλλαβή. Σαλαμίνιοι 'grip, hold (Salam.)' (H.). From other languages, comparisons have been made with MIr. gemel 'fetter', Latv. gùmstu, gùmt 'seize, etc.', as well as OCS žьmǫ, žęti 'σφίγγειν, comprimere'. The word has furthermore been compared with Gr. ► γέμω 'be full', which could be the thematic present beside the athematic (sigmatic) aorist γέντο. Not connected to ► γαμέω, nor to ► γάγγαμον 'net'.

γένυς, -υος [f.] 'jaw', also 'edge of an axe' (Il.). ◁IE *ǵenu- 'chin'▷ •VAR Sometimes ῡ metri causa.
•DER γένειον (< *γενϝ-ιον) 'chin, beard' (Il.), with γενειάς 'beard, cheek' (Od.); γενειάτης, -ήτης, fem. -ᾶτις, -ῆτις 'bearded' (Theoc., cf. ὑπηνήτης), γενειόλης 'id.' (Hdn.); γενειαστήρ 'chin-strap' (Poll., cf. βραχιονιστήρ). Denominative verb γενειάω 'to get or have a beard' (Od.), etc. Also γενηΐς 'edge of an axe' (S. Ant. 249 gen. γενῇδος).
•ETYM The u-stem has parallels in OIr. giun, gin 'mouth', MW gen 'cheek, chin', plur. geneu, Go. kinnus 'cheek', ToA śanw-e-ṃ [du.] 'cheeks', and further Arm. cnawt and Skt. hánu- [f.] 'jaw-bone' (with an unexplained h- for j-, Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 801), whereas Lat. gena 'cheek' is reshaped after māla (but the u is preserved in dentes genuīnī 'molars'). Compare also Av. *zanauua (written zanuua), MoP zanax, Khot. ysanuva 'jaw'. Not connected to ► γνάθος.

γεράνδρυον [n.] 'old tree-trunk' (Thphr.). ◁GR▷ •ETYM A Hellenistic innovation: a substantivized adjective γεράνδρυος (Thphr., etc.), modelled after μελάν-δρυον 'heartwood' (Thphr.; cf. τὸ μέλαν δρυός ξ 14); see Strömberg 1937: 99. Cf. also γεράνδρυες (H.), from δρῦς. See ► γέρων and ► δρῦς.

γέρανος [f., m.] 'crane' (Il.), also metaphorically of various kinds of apparatuses, and a fish name (see Strömberg 1943: 120). ◁IE *ǵerh$_2$-en-/-eu- 'crane'▷ •DIAL Myc. ke-re-na-i [dat.pl.] /kerenāhi/, see RPh. 73 (1999) 84 (doubtful).
•DER γερανίς kind of bandage (medic.). γερανῖτις name of a stone (Plin.), γερανίας 'with a crane (neck)' (Phryn.), γεράνιον 'geranium', also called γερανογέρων (Strömberg 1940: 54 and 159). See also Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM Beside the o-stem γέρανος (*ǵerh$_2$-n-), we have an n-stem in γέρην or γερήν (H.) < *ǵerh$_2$-ēn. Old name of the bird 'crane', with a suffix -n- or -u-, seen in Arm. krun-k; Celtic, e.g. Gaul. tri-garanos 'with three cranes', MW garan; Germanic, e.g. OE cran, OHG kran-uh; Lith. garnŷs 'heron, stork'. The u-stem appears in Lat. grūs, Lith. gérvė (*ǵerh$_2$-u-), OCS žeravь (*ǵerh$_2$-ōu-) with BSl. *g- by depalatalization from the zero grade *ǵrh$_2$-.

γέρας [n.] 'gift of honour' (Il.); originally 'old age', see ► γῆρας. ◁IE *ǵerh$_2$- 'old'▷ •VAR Gen. -αος or -ως.
•DIAL Myc. ke-ra /geras/.
•COMP Compound ἀ-γέρασ-τος 'without gift of honour' (Il.).
•DER γεραιός 'old' (Il., accent like in παλαιός); γεράσμιος 'honouring, honoured, aged' (h. Merc., cf. Schwyzer: 493); denominative γεράζω 'honour' (EM). Beside γέρας stands γεραρός 'honourable' (Il.; hardly an old r-stem as per Benveniste 1935: 16; different Schwyzer: 516), fem. γέραιρα (Il. [v.l.], see Bechtel 1914), and γεραίρω 'honour, distinguish' (Il.).

•ETYM Cf. Skt. jarás- [f.] 'old age'. ►γέρων, ►γῆρας, and ►γραῦς are cognate. Perhaps also connected with ►γεργέριμος.

γεργέριμος [?] a kind of olives (Call.). See H., Suid., Ath. 56 d. They are δρυπεπής, i.e. ripe on the tree. ◁LW Sem.▷ •ETYM Semitic origin seems possible: for a connection with Hebr. garg^erīm 'ripe olives', see Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 41. Therefore, the word is rather not related to γέρων, etc.

γερδιος [m.] ([f.]) 'weaver' (pap. II[a]). ◁LW?▷
•VAR Accentuation unknown. Also γέρδις.
•COMP γερδιοραβδιστής (pap.), γερδοποιόν (gloss.).
•DER Feminines γερδία (Edict. Diocl.) and γερδίαινα (pap.). γερδιακός and γερδιών 'weaving-shed' (pap.).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. gerdius (since Lucil.); further unknown. Was it borrowed into Latin from Greek? Hebr. girdā'ā 'weaver' is also from Greek, acc. to Bauer in WH s.v. As the word is very late, a loan is probable. See Frisk Supp.

γεροῖος •VAR γεροίταν, γέρυς. ⇒γέρων.

γέρρον [n.] different objects of wickerwork: 'shield' (Hdt.), 'wattles, booths, body of a cart' (D.), 'stake, arrow' (Eup.), = τὸ αἰδοῖον 'genitals' (Epich.). ◁EUR▷ •COMP γερροφόρος 'shieldbearer' (Pl.).
•DER γερράδια· στρωτηρίδια 'crossbeams' (H.); cf. Chantraine 1933: 72, Schwyzer: 487. Here also γέρσυμον· ἄκρον ἁλιευτικοῦ καλάμου 'point of a fishing rod' (H.)? (cf. γέρρον = 'stake'), variants γένσιμον (H.) and κέρσιμον (sch.), see below; not to ἀγείρω as per Latte. On γάρρα and γάρσανα s.v. ►γάρσανα.
•ETYM γέρσυμον (not to be corrected to γέρσιμον, contra Latte), which is found next to γένσιμον and κέρσιμον, points to a substrate word (interchange ε/ α, κ/ γ, ι/ υ). Probably, Arm. car̄ 'tree', plur. 'shrubs' is also to be compared, as well as perhaps ON kjarr [n.] 'shrubs' (PGm. kersá-*), and ON kass 'basket' (PGm. kársa-*). Within Greek, γάρσανα and γάρρα may be related. The whole group of words probably derives from a European substrate; see Fur.: 117. Lat. gerra [f.] 'wicker-work' is borrowed from the plural γέρρα.

γέρων, -οντος [m.] 'old man'; also as an adjective 'old' (Il.). ◁IE ǵerh₂-* 'be(come) old, ripen'▷ •VAR As an administrative term οἱ γέροντες 'the elders'.
•DIAL Myc. ke-ro /gerōn/? ke-ro-si-ja /geronsiā/?
•DER γερούσιος 'concerning the elders' (Il.), γερουσία 'council of the elders' (in Sparta, Carthage, etc., D.; on these forms see Collinge Glotta 49 (1971): 218-229), γερουσίας 'member of the γ.' (Sparta), γερουσιαστής 'id.' (Plb.; Chantraine 1933: 316ff.), γερουσιακός. Diminutive γερόντιον (Ar.), γερόντειος (Ar.), etc. Denominative γεροντεύω 'be a senator' (Sparta), with γεροντεία (Ephesus). γεροντιάω 'get older' (D. L.). Beside γέρων, γέροντ- there are a few formations with γερυ-: γέρυς and γερύτας· γέρων (H.), cf. πρέσβυς and πρεσβύτας. Also PNs Γερύλος, Γέρυλλος, Γερυς, -υδος hypocoristic? (Bechtel 1917a: 15). Of the forms with -οι-, γεροίταν· πάππον. Κρῆτες 'grandfather' (H.) is inverted writing for γερύταν; γεροῖα [n.pl.] 'old stories' (Corinn.), if correct, is perhaps after the adjectives in -οῖος (see Bechtel 1921, 1: 304). Unclear is γερωνία (H.), see Latte, despite Scheller 1951: 33[2]. γερωχία (Ar. Lys. 980) is perhaps graphic for Lacon. γερωΐα (von Fritz AmJPh. 66 (1945): 196f.; but see Wackernagel 1916: 208[2]; also Schwyzer: 218). γεράτης 'old', of a horse (POxy. 6, 922; DELG refers to γερατία; not in LSJ).
•ETYM In its formation, γέρων is identical with Skt. járant-, Oss. zærond 'old (man)'. One may further compare Arm. cer, -oy 'old man' (o-stem) and MoP zar 'id.'. Cf. ►γέρας, ►γῆρας, ►γραῦς.

γεύομαι [v.] 'to taste' (Il.); γεύω, γεῦσαι 'give a taste' (Hdt.). ◁IE ǵeus-* 'taste'▷ •VAR Aor. γεύσασθαι, fut. γεύσομαι, perf. γέγευμαι; secondary athem. form γεύμεθα (Theoc. 14, 51).
•DER γεῦμα 'tasting' (IA), γεῦσις 'id.' (Democr.), γευθμός 'id.' (Nic.), γεύστης (Chios), γευστήριον (Com.); γευστικός (Arist.).
•ETYM The compound ἄ-γευσ-τος 'not tasting, inexperienced' (Att.) points to a basis *γεύσ-ομαι, which agrees with Go. kiusan, ON kjósa 'taste, choose', OHG OS kiosan; further, with Skt. juṣáte, -ti 'id.' and Lat. gustāre = OHG OS kostōn 'taste', as well as Go. caus. kausjan from ǵous-eie/o-*.

γέφῡρα [f.] 'bridge'; on other mgs. in Homer see below (Il.). ◁PG▷ •VAR Boeot. βέφυρα, Cret. δέφυρα, Lacon. δίφουρα (H.).
•DER γεφυρίς· πόρνη τις ἐπὶ γεφύρας, ὡς Ἡρακλέων 'whore on the bridge' (H. also with another mg.); denominative γεφυρόω 'make a bridge' (IA; Il. 'dam up', see below') together with γεφύρωσις (Str.), γεφύρωμα 'bridge' (J.), γεφυρωτής 'bridge-builder' (Plu.); γεφυρίζω 'abuse' (Plu.), acc. to H., "ἐπεὶ ἐν Ἐλευσῖνι ἐπὶ τῆς γεφύρας τοῖς μυστηρίοις καθεζόμενοι ἔσκωπτον τοὺς παριόντας" 'because the people sitting at the bridge in Eleusis during the mysteries used to mock at the passers-by'; thence γεφυρισμός (Str.), γεφυριστής (Plu.).
•ETYM The variation of the first consonant between γ-, β- and δ- suggests a labiovelar g^w-*, although the reflex γ- is then difficult to explain. The evidently cognate Arm. kamurǰ 'bridge' would also pose unsurmountable problems if the word were IE. Beekes Glotta 78 (2004): 12-21 follows Fur. 97, etc., who sees it as a loanword from Anatolian, connecting Hattic hammuruwa 'beam'. An original meaning 'beam' fits all passages in Homer and, notably, the expression πολέμοιο γεφύρας, where it has the same meaning as phalanx ('tree, beam'). The Lacon. form with -ι- and -ου- points to non-Greek origin as well.

γῆ [f.] 'earth' (Il.). ◁PG▷
•VAR Dor. γᾶ, Cypr. ζα is uncertain, see Lejeune BSL 50 (1954). Ion. plur. γέαι is an innovation (Schwyzer: 473, Schwyzer 1950: 51, Meister 1921: 172, 253).
•DIAL In the Thebes tablets we find maka, interpreted as /Mā Gā/ 'Mother Earth' (e.g. Avrantinos-Godart-Sacconi, Thèbes (...) Les tablettes, 2001).
•COMP Often as a first member γη- (γα-), mostly γεω- from γη-ο- (late also γε-η- from γη-η-, γε-ο- and γειο- after -γειος < -γη-ιος): γη-γενής 'earthborn' (IA), γή-λοφος (Pl.), γεώ-λοφος (X.) 'earthen hill', γεωμετρία, -ίη 'surveyeing of lands' (IA), γεωργός 'peasant' (IA) < γη(-ο)-ϝοργός or -ϝεργός, cf. γαβεργός· <ὁ> ἀγροῦ μισθωτής. Λάκωνες 'tax farmer (Lacon.)' (H.).

•DER Diminutive γήδιον (Ar.); adj. γήϊνος 'earthen' (IA), Dor. γάϊνος, γεώδης (Pl.), γειρός (Hp., cf. s.v. ἐγγαροῦντες); rare γήτης (S. Tr. 32) 'peasant', cf. γαῖται· γεωργοί (H.), Redard 1949: 36; denomin. γεόομαι 'become earth' (D. S.)
•ETYM No IE etymology; the hypothesis of Meier-Brügger MSS 53 (1992): 113-6 (connecting ǵenh$_1$-* 'to beget') is incorrect. Probably related to ►γαῖα, which is a Pre-Greek word as well. On possible ►Δα 'Earth', see ►δᾶ and ►Δημήτηρ, as well as ►Ποσειδᾱ́ων; however, this is rather doubtful. For the interchange δ-/ γ-, cf. γέφυρα/ δέφυρα and Fur. 388f. The word is likely to go back to gaya*, which was contracted to gā* at a very early date. See Pre-Greek under the suffix -αι-. Cf. ►αἶα and ►γέγειος.

γη(γ)γήλιξ [?] · ὁ ἄγριος μῦς 'wild mouse' (H.). ◄PG► •VAR Also γήλιγρος.
•ETYM There is no reason to correct γη(γ)γήλιξ into γιγγιλ-. A suffix -ρ(ο)-, as seen in the variant γήλιγρος, is well-known from Pre-Greek; likewise, γηγγ- shows typically Pre-Greek reduplication and prenasalization, for which γίγγλυμος and γάγγαμος may be compared. Without doubt, the word is of Pre-Greek origin.

γηθέω [v.] 'to rejoice' (Il.). ◄IE geh$_2$d^h-* 'be glad' (?)► •VAR Perf. γέγηθα, aor. γηθῆσαι (Dor. γᾱθέω, γέγᾱθα, γᾱθῆσαι); late presents γήθομαι, γήθω (Dor. γᾱ́θω).
•DER γηθοσύνη (Il.), γηθόσυνος (Il.); late γῆθος [n.] (Epicur.) and γηθαλέος (Androm., apud Gal.). Also γάσσαν· ἡδονήν 'joy' (H.), if with Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 376 from *γᾱθ-ι̯αν.
•ETYM Because of Lat. gaudeō, gāvīsus sum, a pre-form γᾰϝ-εθ-έω was reconstructed for γηθέω (see Schwyzer: 703), but the contraction then needed would have to have been very early and have spread even to the perfect (Chantraine 1942: 429). Moreover, the present geh$_2$u-ed^h-eie- would be an isolated formation within PIE. Recently, the word has been compared with ToA kātk-, ToB kātk- 'be glad' (< geh$_2$d^h-sk-), which has yielded the reconstruction geh$_2$d^h- for Greek (LIV², Adams 1999: 150). The same root is found in ►γαίω < *γᾰϝ-ι̯ω and ►γάνυμαι.

γηθυλλίς, -ίδος [f.] name of an onion (Epich.); cf. Strömberg 1937: 84. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also γήθυον [n.] (Ar.), γήτειον [n.] (Ar.), κητίον (Cratin.), γαιθυλλάδαι (H.). Fur.: 187, 253 further adds γάθια· ἀλλάντια 'sausage' (H.), ἀγασυλλίς 'Ferula marmarica' (Dsc. 3, 84). ἀγαθίς = σησαμίς 'sesame' (H.).
•DIAL Dor. γᾱθυλλίς.
•ETYM Because of the many alternations, e.g. τ/ θ/ σ, α/ αι, γ/ κ, γηθυλλίς is obviously of Pre-Greek origin. The suggestion of DELG that γήτειον was remodelled after γηθέω (which would explain the variation τ/ θ) is implausible in itself and does not account for the other variants. The folk-etymological suggestion of Kalén 1918: 103ff. to analyse γη-θυλλίς as 'Erdsäckel', with *θύον 'sacculus' (as found in γήθυον) is of course to be abandoned.

γῆρας [n.] 'old age' (Il.). ◄IE ǵerh$_2$-* 'be old, ripen'► •VAR Gen. -αος, -ως.
•DER γηραιός 'old' (Hes.; cf. γεραιός s.v. ►γέρας), γηραλέος 'id.' (Anacr.; after the adjectives in -αλέος), γηράεις 'id.' (Alc., see Chantraine 1933: 272f.). Further γήρειον 'thistledown' (Arat.) and γηράνιον· γεραν<ογέρων> H.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 159[1]; γηράμων H., glossed as (*)γράζα.
Further γηράσκω 'to get old' (Il.), 3sg. aor. ἐγήρα, ptc. γηράς (Il.), inf. γηράναι or γηρᾶναι (A., cf. Schwyzer 682); aor. ἐγήρασα (Hdt.; also as a causative like ἔφυσα: ἔφυν, Schwyzer: 755γ); fut. γηράσομαι, -σω (IA), later γεγήρακα, ἐγηράθην. New present γηράω (X.); aor. γηρείς (Xenoph.) after δαμείς. From γηράσκω: γηράσιμος 'getting older' (Tlos), and γήρανσις (Arist.) after ὑγίανσις (Chantraine 1933: 281).
•ETYM The word stands beside γέρας, with a remarkable long vowel which has been explained as deriving from the s-aorist, but this cannot be proven. On ἐγήρα as the reflex of an old s-aorist, see Barton Glotta 60 (1982): 32-49 and Harðarson 1993a. 72-76. Cf. ►γέρας, ►γέρων, ►γραῦς.

γῆρυς [f.] 'voice, speech' (Il.). ◄IE? geh$_2$r-* 'voice, sound'► •DIAL Dor. γᾶρυς, -υος.
•DER γηρύω, γαρύω 'sing, speak' (h. Merc.), γήρυμα (A.).
•ETYM Comparable forms are found in Celtic and Germanic, which, however, often have a short vowel, e.g. Go. kara [f.] 'care, solicitude' and OE cearu [f.] 'id.', OHG chara [f.] 'lament(ation)', and OIr. ad·gair < gar-et*. LIV connects the Celtic verb with Oss. zæl- 'resound' and reconstructs an IE root ǵar-* 'tönen, rufen' with a*, ablauting with ā* for forms like γῆρυς, OIr. gáir [f.] 'cry', W gawr 'crying, battle'. However, a-vocalism, and certainly a :: ā ablaut, is of course impossible in PIE: the evident reconstruction is gh$_2$r-, geh$_2$r-. The zero grade gh$_2$r-* explains the Celtic forms with -a-, and theoretically also the Germanic ones, although the latter are perhaps better kept apart because of their deviant meaning. Forms with -rr-, like Lat. garriō, and Gr. ►γαρριώμεθα are rather not related (LIV suggests onomatopoeic origin).

γίγαρτον [n.] 'grape-stone' (Simon.); cf. Strömberg 1937: 140 for the names of kernels. ◄PG?►
•DER γιγαρτίς· σταφίς 'grape' (H.), γιγαρτώδης 'stone-like' (Thphr.); γιγαρτώνιον 'unripe grape' (Dsc.)
•ETYM Reduplicated formation. It is often connected with Lat. grānum, MoHG Korn, Kern, which is formally improbable (Greek would have a different suffix and reduplication). The word is rather non-IE, that is to say a Pre-Greek loan.

γιγγίς, -ίδος [f.] kind of turnip, French carrot (Alex. Trall.). ◄PG?►
•DER γιγγίδιον a plant, Daucus Gingidium (Dsc.); γιγγικίδιον (schol. Nic. Al. 432).
•ETYM Solmsen 1909: 213f. assumed *γεγγίς, with assimilation, connecting the word with ►γογγύλος. However, it is rather a Pre-Greek word.

γιγγλίαν [f.] · κάλυμμα κεφαλῆς ἐρεοῦν 'woollen hood for the head' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

γιγγλισμός [m.] · γαργαλισμὸς ἀπὸ χειρῶν, γέλως 'tickling by the hand; laughter' (H.). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM DELG compares κιχλισμός (hardly influenced by ►γίγγρος). Neither is it related to γίγγλυμος.

γίγγλος [m.] · νᾶνος 'dwarf' (H.). ◂ONOM?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

γίγγλυμος [m.] 'hinge, joint, pivot, gudgeon' (X., Epid.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also γιγγλυμός; and γύγλ- (ap. Frisk), γιγλύμιον (ap. Frisk), not in LSJ.
•DER γιγ(γ)λύμιον (Anthem.), γιγγλυμώδης (Arist.), γιγγλυμωτός (Ph.), γιγγλυμόομαι (Hp.).
•ETYM Technical term of unknown origin (cf. Schwyzer: 423). Not related to OIr. glún 'knee', etc. (as per Petersson 1922: 8f.). Probably Pre-Greek (note the prenasalization and interchange ι/ υ).

γίγγρος [m.] name of a Phoenician flute (Men.). ◂PG or LW Phoen.▸
•VAR Also -ον H., -ᾶς [m.]. γίγγλαρος (Poll.), γιγγλάριον (AB) by dissimilation?
•DER Thence γιγγράϊνος 'like a γ.' and γιγγραντός '(made) for a γ.' (Ath.); γιγγρίαι· αὐλοὶ μικροί, ἐν οἷς πρῶτον μανθάνουσιν 'small flutes, on which they first learn', γιγγρασμός· ἦχος 'sound', γιγγρί· ἐπιφώνημά τι ἐπὶ καταμωκήσει λεγόμενον. καὶ εἶδος αὐλοῦ 'an interjection in case of mockery; also a kind of flute' (H.).
•ETYM According to Ath. 4, 174f., the word is from Γίγγρης, the Phoenician name of Adonis, but it is actually rather an expressive onomatopoeic formation (not related to γῆρυς or γέρανος). Lat. gingrina 'genus quoddam tibiarum exiguarum' (Paul. Fest.) is borrowed from the Greek.

γίγνομαι [v.] 'to be born, become, arise' (Il.). ◂IE *ǵenh$_1$- 'beget, arise'▸ •VAR Ion., etc. γῑ́νομαι (Schwyzer: 215), Thess. Boeot. γίνυμαι, Cret. γίννομαι; aor. γενέσθαι, perf. γέγονα, γέγαμεν, γεγαώς, med. γεγένημαι (recent), fut. γενήσομαι; recent are γενηθῆναι and γενηθήσομαι (Att., etc.); trans. s-aorist γείνασθαι (epic, etc., from *γεν-σ-; Schwyzer: 756, Wackernagel 1916: 175), also γεινόμεθα, -μενος (either for γί(γ)νομαι, Schwyzer: 715, or for γεν- with metrical lengthening); athem. root aorist ἔγεντο (Hes.; analogical innovation, see Schwyzer: 678f.).
•COMP -γνη-τος in e.g. ►κασίγνητος 'brother' and -γν-ος in νεο-γν-ός 'newborn' (h. Hom.), with a suffix -ιο- in ὁμό-γν-ιος 'of the same origin'.
•DER Action nouns: 1. γένος [n.] (γενικός, -γενής) and γόνος, γονή (γονεύς 'parent'). 2. γενεά (Ion. -ή) 'lineage' (Il.; see Chantraine 1933: 91). 3. γενέ-θλη (Il.) and γένεθλον (A.) 'id.', together with γενέθλιος and (rare and late) γενεθλιακός, γενεθλίδιος, γενεθλίωμα, γενεθλιάζω. 4. γενε-τή 'birth' (Hom.); hypocor. Γενετυλλίς name of Aphrodite as a protectress of birth (Ar.). 5. γένε-σις 'birth, origin' (Il.). 6. ►γέννᾰ.
Agent nouns: γενέ-τωρ (Ion. Dor.) and γενε-τήρ (Arist.) 'begetter'; on the difference see Benveniste 1948: 46; fem. γενέτειρα (Pi.); γενέ-της (Ion.); thence γενέσια [n.pl.] 'parentalia' (Hdt.). γνήσιος 'of real descent' (Il.) from γνητός. Cf. further ►ἴγνητες; γνωτός, -τή 'relative' belongs to γιγνώσκω.

•ETYM The reduplicated pres. γίγνομαι is also found in Lat. gignō [act.] 'to beget', and the aorist ἐγένετο corresponds to the Skt. root aorist ájani, whereas the perf. γέγονα matches Skt. jajāna. Nouns include γένος (= Skt. jánas-, Lat. genus) and γόνος (Skt. jána-), γενέτωρ, γενετήρ (= Lat. genitor, Skt. jánitar- and janitár-), γενέτειρα (= Skt. jánitrī, Lat. genitrī-x); γένεσις (with e-grade) corresponds to Skt. jātí- 'birth, family', Lat. nāti-ō, OE (ge)cynd (all with zero grade). Gr. -γνητος is from ǵnh$_1$-to-, while -γν-ος in compounds shows loss of the laryngeal, as in Lat. prīvi-gn-us 'born separately' = 'stepchild'; furthermore, note the correspondence νεογνός: Go. niuklahs 'as a child' (dissimilated from *-kna- < IE *-ǵnh$_1$-o-).

γιγνώσκω [v.] 'to come to know, perceive' (Il.). ◂IE *ǵneh$_3$- 'recognize, get to know'▸ •VAR Ion., etc. γῑνώσκω (cf. γῑ́νομαι beside γίγνομαι), Epidaur. γνώσκω, aor. γνῶναι, perf. ἔγνωκα, fut. γνώσομαι; with analogical -σ-: γνωσθῆναι, ἔγνωσμαι; later s-aor. γνώσασθαι (Man.).
•COMP Many compounds.
•DER γνῶσις 'inquiry, knowledge' (IA), often in compounds, e.g. ἀνά-γνωσις 'recognizing, reading' to ἀνα-γιγνώσκω 'recognize, read'; γνώμη 'thought, judgement' (Thgn.); rare γνῶμα 'token, opinion' (Hdt.); usual γνώμων [m.] ([f.]) 'interpreter, expert, etc.' (IA); γνωτός 'known' (Il.), often with -σ- γνωστός (A.; ἄγνωστος Od.) like in γνωστήρ 'surety, witness' (X.), γνώστης 'id.' (LXX), etc. With a suffix -ρ- we find γνώριμος 'well-known, familiar' (Od.), γνωρίζω 'make known, become acquainted with' (IA), γνώρισις, γνώρισμα, γνωρισμός, γνωριστής, etc.
With unexplained vocalism ἀγνοέω 'to fail to perceive or recognize' (Il.; ἠγνοίησα with 'false' -οι-; see Chantraine 1942: 99) together with ἀγνοίᾱ, ἄγνοιᾰ (Att.); after νοέω and compounds: ἀνοίᾱ, ἄνοιᾰ, etc. (in any event, not derived from *ἄγνο-ϝος, which would be a related to ἀγνώς, ἀγνῶτος 'unknown', Od.).
•ETYM γιγνώσκω matches Lat. (g)nōscō, OP xšnāsa- in xšnāsāhiy 'you shall recognize' (subj.), etc., and probably Alb. njoh, although these forms have full grade ǵneh$_3$-, whereas Greek probably has a zero grade ǵnh$_3$-sk-. Likewise, the to-ptc. γνωτός corresponds to Lat. nōtus, Skt. jñātá-, as well as OIr. gnáth 'known' and ToA ā-knats, ToB a-knātsa 'fool', where the Greek form points to ǵnh$_3$-to- (as does perhaps Tocharian). Cf. further OCS znati 'recognize', 1sg. znajǫ, Arm. aor. can-eay 'I recognized', Go. kann, pl. kunnum, ptc. kunþs 'known'. On ἀγνοέω, see above; on ►γέγωνα, see there. Hitt. kane/išš-^{zi} 'to acknowledge', which was thought to reflect ǵnēh$_3$-s- (with Eichner's Law, i.e., that a laryngeal does not color an old lengthened grade), can be accounted for with a conventional reconstruction ǵn(e)h$_3$-s- (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). Nevertheless, the vocalism of OE cnāwan 'know' (< PGm. knē-) and ToA kñasu 'I have recognised' (< knēs-) remains difficult. For γνώριμος, cf. Lat. gnārus < ǵnh$_3$-ro-; Gr. γνῶσις, Lat. nōti-ō and Skt. -jñāti-, however, may be independent formations.

γιλός [adj.] · ἑτερόφθαλμος 'one-eyed' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Perhaps connected here is the PN Γίλλος, Γιλλίς (but see on νεόγιλλος, as well as Bechtel 1902: 64).

γινιπτήριον [n.] 'broom' (P. Leid. X, 19). ◂?▸

•ETYM Perhaps for *γινιστήριον; cf. Lat. genista.

γίννος [m.] 'offspring of a mare by a mule' (Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also γινος (Ialysos). LSJ (and Supp.) give the accentuations γίννος, γιννός and γῖνος. Also ἰννός (H.) and ὕννος.
•ETYM Unknown; see DELG. The forms without γ- or with υ may well be late. It can hardly be from γίγνομαι. The word is probably Pre-Greek. Cf. ►ὄνιννος.

γῖτον [n.] uncertain; 'comestibles'? (UPZ 89,14, II[a]). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

γλαβρήνη [f.] Cretan plant name (unknown poet III[p]). ◄PG► •ETYM See Neumann 1967: 229-235. Probably a local name, i.e. Pre-Greek.

γλάγος ⇒ γάλα.

γλάζω [v.] 'to sing aloud (μέλος)' (Pi. Fr. 97). ◄?►
•VAR cf. γλαγγάζει· πτερύσσεται, κέκραγε 'he flaps the wings, shrieks' (H., Cyr.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic; cf. ►κλάζω. But von Wilamowitz (following the sch.) reads μέλι; thus, does it mean 'suck'?

γλαινοί ⇒ γλήνη.

γλάμων, -ωνος [adj.] 'blear-eyed' (com.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also γλαμυρός 'id.' (Hp.). From γλάμος· μύξα 'mucus' (H.) after adjectives in -ων and -υρός (φλεγυρός 'inflamed', Chantraine 1933: 231). Denominative γλαμάω (Poll.) = λημιάω (which LSJ does not give), γλάμυξος = γλαμυρός together with γλαμυξιάω (EM), for γλα[μο]-μυξος? γλημώδης = γλαμυρός (Gal.), after λημώδης 'full of rheum'?
•ETYM Unknown. The comparisons with Lith. glẽmės, gléimės [pl.] 'slime' (not related to MoE clammy 'sticky') and Alb. ngjomë 'humid, fresh' (Pok. 361) are very doubtful. The word may be Pre-Greek. From Greek comes Lat. glamae = gramiae 'viscous humor that collects in the corners of the eyes'.

γλάνος [m.] 'hyena' (Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Cf. γάνος· ἡ ὕαινα, ὑπὸ Φρυγῶν καί Βιθυνῶν H.; also γάννος 'hyena' (Phlp. in GA).
•DER Hence the fish name γλάνις, -ιος (-εως), -ιδος [m.] ([f.]) 'Silurus, sheat-fish' (Com., Arist.; γλάνιος Hdn.), thus called because of its voracity and the sound it makes, see Strömberg 1943: 70 and Thompson 1947 s.v.
•ETYM Unknown. The word may be Pre-Greek.

γλαρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'chisel' (S., Delos III[a]). ◄?► •ETYM For the formation, cf. the semantically related γραφίς, γλυφίς, κοπίς, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 338).

γλαυκός [adj.] in Hom. (Π 34) and later poets of the sea, post-Hom. always the color 'blueish-green or grey' (Il.); see Pötscher RhM 141/2 (1998): 97-111. ◄PG?►
•DIAL Myc. ka-ra-u-ko /Glaukos/.

•DER γλαῦκος name of a fish (Com.; see Strömberg 1943: 23f. and Thompson 1947: 48); γλαυκία ἢ γλαυκίον· βοτάνη τις 'a plant' (H.: Plin.); also 'juice of the horned poppy' (Dsc.) and name of a duck (Ath.), both after the color; γλαυκίδανον name of an eye salve (Gal.). Denominal ptc. γλαυκιόων 'gleaming?' (Il.), but acc. to Pötscher Glotta 72 (1994): 105-8) 'with the green, brilliant eyes of an owl', γλαυκόομαι 'be affected with glaucoma' (Hp.), γλαύκωμα 'glaucoma' (Arist.), γλαύσσω 'shine' (H.) cf. λευκός: λεύσσω. Several PNs: Γλαῦκος, Γλαύκη (Il.), Γλαύκων, -ίων, etc. See ►γλαυκῶπις.
•ETYM Hardly connected to ►γαλήνη, ►γελάω. Improbably, Leumann 1950: 148ff. (with incorrect analysis of γλαυκῶπις; see Chantraine 1966: 193ff.). No etymology. The word is hardly IE, as gleh$_2$u-ko-* would be an unusual formation; therefore, it is rather Pre-Greek.

γλαυκῶπις [adj.] 'with the bright eyes of an owl' (Il.), epithet of Athena. On the mg. Pötscher Phil. 141/1 (1997): 3-20 (not to γλαυκός 'blue'). ◄GR► •ETYM The owl was associated with Athena. Its eyes are remarkable for their 'éclat nocturne'. Cf. βοῶπις epithet of Hera. See ►γλαῦξ.

γλαυνός [m.] a kind of chiton (Poll. 7, 48). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

γλαῦξ, -κός [f.] 'little owl, Athene noctua' (com., Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR LSJ gives γλαύξ. Besides, there is a word γλαύξ 'wart cress' (Dsc.), which is also given as γλάξ (Hdn. Gr. 1, 395, etc.).
•ETYM Derived from γλαυκός by the ancients, which is rejected by Thompson 1895 s.v. as a folk etymology. Thus also Pötscher Phil. 141/1 (1997): 3-20 (see on ►γλαυκῶπις). Some bird names with the k-suffix are provided by Specht 1944: 204; note πέρδιξ and the many Pre-Greek words in -ξ (see Pre-Greek on word end). The etymology is unknown. The variation in the word for 'cress' may point to a Pre-Greek word (which is probable anyhow), but it is not sure that 'owl' and 'cress' have the same origin.

γλαφυρός [adj.] 'hollow(ed)' (Il.), 'polished, smooth, refined, elegant' (Ar.). ◄?►
•DER γλαφυρότης 'neatness, elegance' (Ph.) and γλαφυρία 'id.' (Plu.). Rare is γλάφυ [n.] 'cavern' (Hes. Op. 533) and γλάφω 'hollow out' (Hes. Sc. 431), also (late) 'engrave' (διαγλάψασα, see ClassRev. 12 (1898): 282 [Coptos II[p]]).
•ETYM Dissimilated from -υλός, according to Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 223[2], which would be derived (cf. λιγυρός : λιγύς) from a u-stem that is perhaps represented by γλάφυ. In the sense 'hollow out' (attested only once), γλάφω may be secondary. Later, when this verb means 'engrave', it looks like a cross between γλύφω and γράφω. The development to 'smooth', etc. probably went via 'engraved' and 'polished'. DELG thinks that γλαφυ- was dissimilated from *γλυφυ- (see ►γλύφω); this is doubtful.

γλέπω •VAR γλέφαρον. ⇒ βλέπω, βλέφαρον.

γλήνη [f.] 'eyeball' (Hom.; also in a reviling sense Θ 164), also 'pupil of the eye' (Ruf. Onom., H.), metaph. 'socket of a joint' (Gal.), 'honeycomb' (AB, H.). ◄PG(V)► •DER γλήνεα [n.pl.] 'gaudy things, trinkets' (Ω 192), 'stars' (Arat.); sing. γλῆνος = γλήνη (Nic.), = φάος (H.). γληνίς (IG 5(1) 1447: 9 [Messene III-II^{a}]) mg. unknown. Artificial is Hell. γλήν = γλήνη (Hermesian.), cf. Schwyzer: 584 A. 6. Also PNs: Γλῆνος, Γλῆνις, Γληνώ, Γληνεύς. Unclear is the mg. of τρί-γληνα (ἕρματα, Hom.); τρίγληνος also as an attribute of Hecate (Ath.).
•ETYM The basic meaning of the word is probably 'shining' (see DELG), whereas 'socket of a joint' seems secondary. One may compare γαλήνη 'calm weather' and γλαινοί· τὰ λαμπρύσματα τῶν περικεφαλαιῶν, οἷον ἀστέρες 'ornaments of head-bands, like stars' (H.), which last word is known only from this gloss.
Comparison of γλαινοί with OHG kleini 'gleaming, elegant, fine, small', OE clǣne 'clean' is quite uncertain, since we would then have to separate the other Greek words without -ι-. For γλήνη, Lamer IF 48 (1930): 231f. assumes a basic meaning 'puppet', opting for Pre-Greek origin. If γλαινοί is indeed related, this conclusion seems most probable, since α/ αι is frequent in Pre-Greek words (cf. γηθυλλίς / γαιθυλλάδαι; pace DELG, which remarks that this variation would render an etymological comparison 'imprudent').

γλήχων ⇒βλήχων.

γλία •VAR γλίνη, γλίον. ⇒γλοιός.

γλῖνος [m.] 'Cretan maple' (Thphr.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also γλεῖνος.
•ETYM No etymology. See Amigues RPh. 73 (1999): 84.

γλίσχρος [adj.] 'sticky, penurious' (IA). ◄?►
•DER γλίσχρων 'niggard' (Ar.), γλισχρότης (Arist.), γλισχρία (sch.). Denominative γλισχραίνομαι 'be sticky' (Hp.), γλίσχρασμα 'glue' (Hp.); γλισχρεύομαι 'be niggardly' (M. Ant.).
•ETYM To ►γλίχομαι, ►γλοιός. The formation is unclear; cf. Chantraine 1933: 225. Fur.: 297 thinks the -σ- of γλίσχρος points to a Pre-Greek word. See the conclusion under ►γλοιός.

γλοιός [m.] 'glutinous substance, gum', also the oil and sweat scraped off by athletes (Semon.); secondarily also [adj.] (pap.). ◄EUR► •DER γλοιώδης (Pl.); γλοιάς· ἡ κακοήθης ἵππος καὶ πολυδήκτης παρὰ Σοφοκλεῖ 'horse with bad character and biting according to S.' (H.), γλοίης, -ητος [m.] 'slippery, shifty' (Hdn.; see Chantraine 1933: 267). Denominative γλοιόομαι 'become sticky' (Dsc.), γλοιάζω 'twinkle with the eyes' (Hp.). Also γλία 'glue' (EM) and γλίνη (EM) together with γλινώδης (Dsc.), γλίον· εὔτονον, ἰσχυρόν 'well-strung, vigorous' (H.), perhaps also γλιᾶται· παίζει, ἀπατᾷ 'plays, deceives' (H.), γλιῶσαι· τὸ παίζειν 'play' (EM). Further γλίττον· γλοιόν (H.). Verb γλίχομαι, properly 'stick to', so 'long for' (Hdt.), only present except for ἐγλιξάμην (Pl. Com.); deverbal γλιχός (H.), γλιχώ (EM). The semantic development is not always clear (see DELG). See ►γλίσχρος.

•ETYM If from *γλοιϝός, the word agrees with Ru. (dial.) glev 'slime of fishes' (Slav. glěvъ* < gloi-uo-*). If, however, it derives from *γλοιι̯ός, the word may correspond to OE clǣg 'loam, clay' (PGm. klaii̯a-*). The n-suffix in γλίνη, also in CS glěnъ 'slime' < gloi-no-* and in Ru. glína 'clay, loam' < glei-neh*$_2$-, is explained as from a nasal present seen in OIr. glenim (gli-neh*$_2$-mi), OHG klenan 'stick, smear'. The gloss γλίττον (H.) is best explained, like Lat. glittus 'sticky', with a geminated variant of the t-suffix seen in Lat. glūten [n.] 'glue' (< gloi-t-en-*?; it is not an old r/n-stem, as per Benveniste 1935: 104) and Lith. glitùs 'sticky'. γλία is compared with Ru. glej 'clay, loam' (< glьjь*). There is no cognate for γλίχομαι, analyzed as a χ-present in Schwyzer 702. See Pok. 362f. Not all comparisons are convincing. Most words cited are from BSl. or Gm., which suggests European substrate origin.

γλουρός [m.] 'gold' (AP); cf. γλούρεα· χρύσεα, Φρύγες 'golden items (Phrygian)' (H.). ◄LW? Phr.► •ETYM This word recently turned up in a Phrygian inscription from Dokimeion in the form γλουρεος (Brixhe Kadmos 43 (2004): 7-26). It clearly represents the Phrygian reflex of PIE $\acute{g}^h lh_3$-ro-*. Cf. ►χλωρός.

γλουτός [m.] 'buttock', also dual (X.) and plur. (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR γλουτά (sch. Theoc. 6, 30).
•DER γλούτια 'id.', also medullary tubercles near the pineal gland of the brain (Gal.). Diminutive γλουθίον?
•ETYM Compared with Sln. glûta, glúta 'lump, swelling' (if < glout-*); further, with OE clūd [m.] 'mass of stone, rock' and MoE cloud, which are semantically less evident. Without t-suffix Skt. gláu- [m.] 'round lump, wen-like excrescence'; see Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 511. Schwyzer: 501[10] and 577[11] considers a secondary τ(ο)-suffix (cf. πρωκτός). The IE material (in Pok. 361) is not very convincing. If the -θ- is reliable, the word is rather Pre-Greek.

γλυκύς [adj.] 'sweet' (Il.). ◄IE? dlku-* 'sweet'► •VAR On γλυκίων, γλύσσων, γλυκύτερος, γλυκ(ε)ιότερος see Seiler 1950: 48ff.
•DIAL Myc. de-re-u-ko perhaps /dleukos/.
•DER γλύκων individualising (Ar. Ec. 985), also PN, together with Γλυκώνειος (Heph.); γλυκόεις (Nic.). Diminutives: γλυκάδιον 'sweetmeat, vinegar' (Choerob.; for the mg. cf. ἦδος = ὄξος), γλυκίδιον (pap.). γλυκίν(ν)ᾶς [m.] 'cake made with sweet wine' (Seleuc. apud Ath., Cretan [H.]). γλυκύτης (Hdt.). Denominative γλυκαίνω (Hp.), γλύκυσμα (Lib., Sch.), with γλύκανσις (Thphr.), γλυκαντικός (S.); γλυκάζω (LXX), etc.; γλυκασία 'family-love' (Sammelb.); γλυκίζω (Pagae, Gp.), γλυκισμός (Callix.); ἐγ-γλύσσω 'be sweet' (Hdt. ἔγγλυκυς Dsc.; γλύξις 'sweet wine' (Phryn. Com.); γλεῦξις· οἶνος ἕψημα <ἔχων> 'wine [containing] must' (H.), cf. γλεῦκος. Also γλυκερός (Od.), the fem. Γλυκέρα (with retracted accent) as a PN, with Γλυκέριον. With geminate: γλυκκόν· γλυκύ and γλύκκα· ἡ γλυκύτης (H.). Plant name γλύκη· βοτάνη τις ἐδώδιμος 'an edible plant' (H.) and (strange) γλυκυμή = γλυκύρριζα (Hp. apud Gal.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 63. γλεῦκος [n.] 'sweet wine' (Arist.), γλεύκινος (Dsc.), γλευκίτης (οἶνος) = γλεῦκος (Arist. comm.); γλευκήσας

'stunned by sweet wine' (H.); also γλεύκη = γλυκύτης (sch.) and γλεῦξις, see γλύξις above.
•ETYM If the word is to be connected with Lat. dulcis, we should reconstruct *δλ-. The Mycenaean form seems to confirm this idea, but the υ in the root is unexpected. On Arm. k'ałcr 'sweet', see under ►ἡδύς. The full grade γλεῦκος looks like a late innovation after the numerous neutral s-stems, but ἀγλευκής (Epich.) seems to be an old form.

γλύφω [v.] 'to carve, cut out, engrave' (IA). ◄IE *gleub^h- 'cut, carve, split'► •VAR Pres. always ῠ; aor. γλύψαι, fut. γλύψω, aor. pass. ἐγλύφθην/ ἐγλύφην, perf. γέγλυμμαι.
•COMP ἑρμογλυφεῖον 'statuary's shop' (Pl.); τρίγλυφος, an architectonical element.
•DER γλυφή 'carving' (D. S.), γλύμμα 'engraved sign' (Eup.), γλυφίς, mostly -ίδες [pl.] 'notches, especially at the end of an arrow' (Il.), chisel, etc.' (J.), cf. ἀκίς for the suffix; γλύφανος 'knife' (h. Merc.); γλυφεῖον (Luc.); γλυφεύς 'carver, sculptor' (J.), γλυφευτής 'id.' (pap. VI^p); γλυπτήρ = γλύφανος (AP), γλύπτης 'carver' (APl.), γλυπτικός (Poll.). Adjective γλυφική (τέχνη; Thrace).
•ETYM Germanic has the ablauting verb, e.g. OHG klioban 'cleave, split', pret. kloub, opt. klubi. Lat. glūbō 'bark, peel' probably represents the old full grade *-eu-. Also related is Ru. glýboko 'deep', etc.; see Vasmer 1953 s.v. Some compare ►γλαφυρός.

γλωρόν [?] · νόμον 'custom, law' (H.). ◄GR?► •ETYM Kukules Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 27 (suppl.) 76 compares MoGr. (Karpathos, Cyprus) γλωρός = χλωρός; χλωρονόμι 'grass'. Differently, Latte.

γλῶσσα [f.] 'tongue, language' (Il.), 'rare, dialectal word' (Arist.). ◄IE *glōg^h-s, gen. *glg^h-ós 'point'► •VAR Att. γλῶττα; Ion. also γλάσσα (see below).
•COMP γλώσσ-αργος 'garrulous' (Pi.), from γλώσσ-αλγος 'id.'; from here στόμαργος, see Strömberg 1944: 31; different (to ἀργός 'quick') Willis AmJPh. 63 (1942): 87ff.
•DER γλωσσάριον (Dsc., pap.), γλωσσίδιον (Zen.); γλώσσημα 'point of an arrow' (A.) retains the original mg.; see Chantraine 1933: 186), also 'rare word' (Quint.), γλωσσηματικός (D. H.); γλωσσώδης 'talkative' (LXX), γλωσσός 'id.' (Hdn.); γλωσσίς 'inflammation of the tongue' (Hippiatr.). γλωττίς 'end of a pipe, glottis' (Hero), also a bird (Arist., see Thompson 1895 s.v.); γλωττικός (Arist.); denominative γλωττίζω 'kiss with the tongue', γλωττισμός (AP).
•ETYM Originally "provided with a point", a derivation in -ια from ►γλῶχες. Ion. γλάσσα points to a paradigm *γλωχ-, *γλαχ- which can be explained as nom. *glōg^h-s, gen. *glg^h-ós. (see Beekes 1969: 246).

γλῶχες [f.pl.] 'beard of corn' (Hes. Sc. 398). ◄IE *glōg^h-s, *glg^h-ós 'point'► •DER See ►γλῶσσα. Also γλωχῖς, acc. γλωχῖν, gen. -ῖνος (Hdn. 2, 431, 437) [f.] 'end of the yoke-strap, barb of an arrow, etc.' (Il.). Thence γλωχινωτός (Paul. Aeg.).
•ETYM γλωχῖς continues *-ih$_2$-s, with different development before a consonant than word-finally (in γλῶσσα). There are no certain cognates. The connection with CS glogъ 'thorn' (Bezzenberger & Fick BB 6 (1881): 237) is doubted by Machek Ling. Posn. 2 (1950): 145.

γναθμός [m.] 'jaw' (Hom.). ◄PG► •VAR γνάθος [m.] (Hp.). Note γναμφαί (H. acc. to LSJ, but not in Latte).
•DER PN of a parasite Γνάθων, with Γναθώνειος, Γναθωνίδης, Γναθωνάριον (Plu.). Denominative γναθόω 'hit the jaw' (Phryn. Com.).
•ETYM γναθμός is formed from γνάθος, after λαιμός, βρεχμός, ὀφθαλμός. The word has always been compared with Lith. žándas 'id.', Latv. zuôds 'chin, sharp side'. However, the Lith. acute accentuation either points to a laryngeal, or it may have been caused by a following d (Winter's Law). In neither case can we connect the Greek word: a preform *gnh$_2$d^h- would have given γνᾱθος, and *gnh$_2$ed^h- gives γαναθος; therefore, the Lithuanian, with its entirely different structure, cannot be cognate. Actually, -νᾰ- cannot be derived from any other PIE form either, and the word must therefore be non-IE, i.e. Pre-Greek (this also excludes further connection with γένυς, as the latter is of course IE). Macedonian κάναδοι· σιαγόνες, γνάθοι (H.) has often been compared as well; it may well be related, but only as a Pre-Greek word (perhaps it stands for *κναδοι with epenthesis, see Fur.: 378). κάναδοι has also been connected with κνώδων, κνώδαλον.

γναμπτούς [adj.] · χαλινούς 'bits or bridles' (H.). ◄PG► •VAR Also γλαμψοί· χαλινοὶ στόματος 'bits or bridles for the mouth' (H.).
•ETYM The word is typically Pre-Greek: first, it displays the variation πτ/ψ (see Fur.: 263) as well as ν/λ (see Fur.: 388), and second, the structure γναC- cannot be IE (see also under ►γνάθμος).

γνάμπτω [v.] 'to bend' (Il.). ◄PG► •VAR Aor. γνάμψαι, verbal adj. γναμπτός.
•DER γναμπτήρ 'jaw' (Androm. apud Gal.), cf. γναμφαί s.v. ►γαμφηλαί; γνάμψις 'bending' (EM). Without second nasal (dissimilated?) γνάπτει· κάμπτει and γναπτός = γναμπτός (H.).
•ETYM The etymology of γνάμπτω is unknown. Although it is commonly assumed that it was influenced by κάμπτω (cf. κνάμπτω; e.g. Frisk s.v.), γνάμπτω does not have the κ- of κάμπτω, nor can the -ν- have been taken from there. An Indo-European etymology seems excluded because γναμπ- cannot have a PIE preform (see under ►γνάθμος). However, an alternation γν-/ κ- (as in γνάμπτω : κάμπτω) is not typical for Pre-Greek either. If the insertion of the ν could be explained, we could perhaps assume voicing of κν- to γν-. Cf. also Guilleux RPh. 70 (1996) s.v. γνάμπτω.

γνάπτω •VAR γνάφαλλον, γναφεύς. ⇒κνάπτω.

γνήσιος ⇒γίγνομαι.

Γνίφων ⇒Κνίφων.

γνόφος ⇒δνόφος.

γνοτέρα [f.] the fish βαλλωτή, Ballota nigra (Ps.-Dsc. 3, 103). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Also γνωτέρα.
•ETYM Fur.: 370 compares ἀγνωτίδιον, a variant with a prothetic vowel. Thus the word is Pre-Greek.

γνύθος [n.] 'pit, hollow' (Lyc.). ◀PG?▶
•VAR Also msc. (H., also γνυθός).
•ETYM Formation like βάθος, βυθός. Note γνυφαί· νάπαι 'vales' (H.). Fur.: 390 points to σκύφος / σκύθος. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

γνύξ [adv.] 'with bent knee' (Il.; Erbse Glotta 32 (1953): 240ff.). ◀IE *ǵenu- 'knee'▶ •ETYM From ►γόνυ with zero grade and analogical -ξ after πύξ, λάξ, etc. (Schwyzer: 620). Although the zero grade of γόνυ does not recur in ►γνυπ-, contrary to common belief, it is in fact found in πρόχνυ 'kneeling; utterly' (Il.), where, admittedly, the aspiration is not well explained (cf. Av. fra-šnu- 'with the knees forward'; Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 585). The zero grade *ǵnu probably occurred in the IE paradigm of 'knee', e.g. Hitt. ganut [instr.sg.] and Av. žnubiiō [dat.-abl.pl.].

γνυπ- [v.] 'to be depressed' (Men.). ◀PG▶
•VAR Also γνυπ(ε)τ-. γνύπωνες· στυγνοί, κατηφεῖς, ἄτολμοι, παρειμένοι. καὶ μαλακοί, ἀπὸ τοῦ εἰς γόνυ πεπτωκέναι 'hateful, downcast, spiritless, those who have been passed over; also faint-hearted; after "being on one's knees"' (H.) with the verbal forms γνυπόντι (leg. γνυποῦντι) and from *γνυπόω: ἐγνυπωμένον· ταλαίπωρον. κατηφές 'miserable, downcast' and ἐγνυπώθη · τρυφᾷ. καὶ τὸ ἐναντίον 'with delicacy; also the opposite' (H.) and κατεγνυπωμένον (Plu. Mor. 753c), -μένως (Men. 857). With γνυπτ-: γνυπτεῖν· ἀσθενεῖν. μαλακίζεσθαι 'to be weak, show weakness' (H.) and γνυπτῶν· (cod. γνυων) νωθραίνων 'sluggish' (H.). From *γνυπτόω: κατεγνυπτῶσθαι = κατεστυγνᾶσθαι (H. s.v. γνύπετοι). With anaptyctic vowel: γνύπετοι· ἐκτεταμένοι, δειλοί, ἄλλοι δὲ κατηφεῖς 'stretched prostrate, wretched; miserable' (H.). Here also γνυπεσόν· ἀργόν, οἱ δὲ ἔκλυτον 'brilliant; buoyant' (H.) with interchange τ/ σ.
•ETYM Fur.: 315 has correctly observed (following Latte; see now LSJ Supp. s.v. γνυπτόω) that this is a separate verb with the variants γνυπ- and γνυπτ-, as well as a variant γνυπετ- with anaptyxis; the variation π/ πτ, etc. is well known in Pre-Greek (Fur.: 307ff; Pre-Greek section 5.5).

γνώριμος •VAR γνωρίζω. ⇒γιγνώσκω.

γνωτός ⇒γίγνώσκω.

γοάω [v.] 'to groan, weep' (Il.). ◀IE? *$g^{(w)}$ou(H)- 'call, cry'▶ •VAR Fut. γοήσομαι (late -ήσω), aor. γοῆσαι (Amorgos), isolated preterite γόον [3pl.] Z 500 (see Chantraine 1942: 392[1]).
•DER γόης, -ητος [m.] 'sorcerer' (IA), γοητικός (Arist.), γοητεύω 'bewitch' (Pl.), with γοητεία, γοήτευμα (Pl.), γοήτευσις (Plot.), γοητευτικός (Poll.), γοητεύτρια (Eust.); fem. γοῆτις (AP). γόος [m.] 'lament' (Il.). γοερός 'wailing' (A.), analogical γοηρός (Lyc.), γοώδης 'id.' (Pl.), also γοεδνός (A.), after ὀλοφυδνός, σμερδνός, etc. (cf. Schulze 1933a: 398); also γοήμων (APl.).

•ETYM Like βοάω, μυκάομαι, etc., γοάω is probably a deverbative intensive; γόος is deverbal. We may compare OHG gi-kewen 'call', OE cīegan 'id.' < PGm. *kaujan, the Skt. intensive jó-guv-e 'speak out loudly', as well as an r-derivation in OCS govorъ 'noise' with govoriti 'make noise' (Ru. also 'speak'), see Derksen 2008 s.v. Pace DELG, the connection between γοάω and βοάω is attractive. The different initials can be explained from paradigmatic split, i.e., an original *g^w- was lost before a zero grade *g^wu- in the preform of γοάω; the semantic differentiation can easily be secondary.

γόγγρος [m.] 1. 'conger eel' (Antiph.); 2. 'tubercular disease in olive trees' (Thphr.). ◀PG?▶
•DER γογγρίον (sch. Opp. H. 1, 113); also γογγρώδης (H.: γογγρώδης τῆς ἐλαίας ἔκφυσις as an explanation of γόγγρος); also γογγροειδής (Arist.); γογγρώνη 'excrescence on the neck' (Hp.; cf. χοιράς 'id.', from χοῖρος 'pig'; suffix like in κροτώνη).
•ETYM The botanical-medical term is just a metaphorical use of γόγγρος = 'conger-eel': the fish is round, thick, and voracious, like in καρκίνος, Lat. cancer. The fish name is often considered to be Pre-Greek (e.g. Fohalle 1925: 157ff.; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 166). Pace DELG, ►γογγύλος is not related. Lat. conger (gonger) is borrowed from Greek.

γογγύζω [v.] 'to murmur, grumble' (LXX). ◀ONOM▶ •DIAL Ionic acc. to Phryn.
•DER γογγυσμός (Anaxandr.), γόγγυσις (LXX); agent noun γογγυστής (Ep. Jud., Thd.), γόγγυσος (Thd.; see Chantraine 1933: 435); γογγυστικός (Erot.). In H. also γογγρύζειν and γογγρύσαι· ὡς χοῖρος φωνῆσαι 'sound like a pig', after γρύζειν.
•ETYM An onomatopoeia without certain cognates. Skt. gaṅgūyati 'cry loudly', guñjati 'hum' are only parallel onomatopoeic formations, and the same is true of ►γαγγαίνειν.

γογγύλος [adj.] 'round' (A.). ◀?▶
•DER Substantivized (with change of stress) γόγγυλος "the round one" = 'κόνδυλος, the clenched fist' (sch.), 'ὄλυνθος, wild fig' (Nic.). γογγυλίς (com.), γογγύλη (Str.) 'turnip', also 'round bread' (Ar.), γογγυλίδιον 'pill' (medic.); γογγυλώδης 'round' (sch.); denominative γογγύλλω [v.] 'to make round' (conj. Porson Ar. Th. 56 for γογγυλίζω after γογγύλ<λ>ειν· συστρέφειν 'to condense, become compact' H.); γογγυλεύματα· στρογγυλεύματα 'globular things' (H.). Isolated γογγυλάτης 'who hurls balls of fire'(?) epithet of Zeus (Lyc.).
•ETYM Next to γογγύλος, we find στρογγύλος 'id.' (cf. also ἀγκύλος, καμπύλος with similar meaning). The etymology is unknown: a connection with ON kǫkkr 'clump' (< PGm. *kanku- < *gongu-) is highly doubtful, as is the comparison with Lith. gungulỹs 'ball'; nor does a relationship with ►γιγγίς, γιγγίδιον 'a kind of turnip' seem probable.

γόδα [n.pl.] · ἔντερα. Μακεδόνες 'intestines (Maced.)' (H.). ◀?▶

•ETYM γόδα has been compared with MLG kūt 'weak parts of an animal' and Skt. gudá- 'intestine, vagina' (Pok. 393), but this connection is problematic because the required root structure with two unaspirated voiced stops was not allowed in Proto-Indo-European. Latte reads γόλα instead, connecting χολάς, χόλιξ. His suggestion is adopted by Fur. 141, who also adds κόλον 'id.'.

γοδᾶν [v.] · κλαίειν. Κύπριοι 'to cry (Cypr.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR γοδόν· γόητα 'sorcerer' (H.).
•ETYM The reconstruction *ϝοδ- has been assumed, but is not certain. Connection with ► αὐδή is impossible. Latte reads *γοᾶναι.

γοεδνός •VAR γοερός. ⇒ γοάω.

γοῖτα [?] · οἶς 'sheep' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Cf. γοτάν· ὗν. Μακεδόνες 'wild swine (Maced.)' (H.).
•ETYM Fick BB 29 (1905): 200 read the word as ὗς and conjectures that it is from γοῖ γοῖ, the grunting of a pig (AP 11, 327). This is a mere guess.

γολοινά [f.] · χλωρά. ἢ γολονά 'pale; name of a plant' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM The suggestion of Grošelj Slavistična Revija 4 (1951): 263f. to connect OCS zelenъ 'green', etc. is phonologically impossible (see ► χλόη). Although Latte assumes that this entry (and the following, γολομένη· βοτάνη) is corrupt, we should rather take the form at face value: it is obviously related to γολονά, the variation οι ~ ο in the vocalism pointing to Pre-Greek origin.

γολύριον [n.] · κέλυφος. οἰκεῖον Ταραντίνοις 'pod, shell (Tarantian)' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Only worthless guesses have been made.

γόμος [m.] · ζωμός 'soup' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Latte reads θωμός. von Blumenthal 1930: 15[1] thinks the word is Messapian, related to χέω (from $\acute{g}^h$(o)u-mo-). There are mere hypotheses.

γόμφος [m.] 'peg, bolt, nail' (Od.); also a fish name (gloss.; Strömberg 1943: 36), 'tooth' (H.). ⊲IE $\acute{g}emb^h$- 'bite', $\acute{g}omb^ho$- 'cutting tooth'⊳ •DER γομφίος (ὀδών) 'molar' (IA), γομφίτης 'kind of styrax' (Aët.), γομφάριον fish name (sch.). Denominative γομφόομαι, -όω 'to fasten with bolt or nails' (A.) with γόμφωσις (Gal.), γόμφωμα 'framework, peg' (Plu.); γομφωτήρ 'shipbuilder' (AP), γομφωτήριον 'tenon' (Delos III[a]); γομφωτικὴ τέχνη 'shipbuilding' (Pl.). γομφιάζω 'to have toothache, gnash the teeth' (LXX) with γομφιασμός (LXX) and γομφίασις (Dsc.).
•ETYM Old word for 'tooth', probably 'cutting tooth': Skt. jámbha-, Alb. dhëmb, OCS zǫbъ, Latv. zùobs, ToA kam, ToB keme. Cf. κόμβους· ὀδόντας γομφίους (H.), Illyrian? (Krahe IF 60 (1952): 297). Forms with a metaph. meaning include OHG kamb 'comb' and Lith. žam̃bas 'sharp side'. On the deviant meaning in Greek (from the use of the cutting teeth as pegs), see Porzig 1954a: 184f. Verbs include Skt. iterative jambháyati 'grind' and Lith. žembiù, žem̃bti 'cut' and OCS zębǫ 'tear up'; on the meanings, see Narten KZ 79 (1965): 255ff.

γονή •VAR γόνος. ⇒ γίγνομαι.

γόνυ [n.] 'knee' (Il.); also 'joint of plants' (Hdt.; cf. Strömberg 1937: 101). ⊲IE $\acute{g}enu$, $\acute{g}onu$ 'knee'⊳ •VAR Gen. (*γόνϝ-ατος >) γόνατος, epic Ion. γούνατος, epic also γουνός (< *γονϝ-ός), plur. γόνατα, γούνατα, epic also γοῦνα.
•DER γονατώδης 'with joints' (Thphr.); denominative γουνάζομαι 'clasp the knees' (as a suppliant) (Il.) with γούνασμα (Lyc.), γουνασμός (Eust.), also γουνόομαι 'id.'; γονατόομαι 'get joints' (Thphr.), γονατίζω 'bend the knee' (Cratin.).
•ETYM γόνυ derives from the PIE word for 'knee': Skt. jā́nu, Av. zānu-drājah-, MP zānūk (pointing to PIE *o, lengthened by Brugmann's Law); Hitt. genu, Lat. genū, ToA kanwe-m̥, ToB kenī-ne 'knees [du.]', Arm. cun-r, plur. cun-g-k'; Gm. words like Go. kniu < PGm. knew-a-*, with the zero grade from the gen. $\acute{g}neu$-s (for the zero grade $\acute{g}nu$- cf. further ► γνύξ, s.v.). On Hom. θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κεῖται, see Schwyzer 1923b: 283ff. Cf. also ► γωνία. Cf. also ► ἰγνύη.

γόος ⇒ γοάω.

γοργός [adj.] 'grim, fierce, terrible' of look, gaze (A.), later also 'vigorous, lively'. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Γοργώ, acc.pl. Γοργούς (Hes.)
•COMP γοργώψ, γοργωπός (A.).
•DER γοργότης 'rapidity' (Hermog.), γοργία = agilitas (gloss.), denominative γοργόομαι 'to be spirited', of horses (X.), γοργεύω (pap., Sm., H.).
Γοργώ, -οῦς [f.] (Il.) name of a female monster with a petrifying look, whence Γοργείη κεφαλή (Il.); on the formation see Schulze 1892: 254; plur. mostly Γοργόνες (Hes.), with new singulars Γοργόνα (acc.), etc. (E.), whence Γοργόνειος (A. Pr. 793, etc.), Γοργόνη (Hdn.), Γοργονώδης (sch.) and the plant names Γοργόνειον and Γοργονιάς (Ps.-Dsc.; see Strömberg 1940: 101). Also Γοργάδες (S. Fr. 163), explained by H. as ἁλιάδες; and Γοργίδες· αἱ Ὠκεανίδες (H.). PN Γοργυθίων (Θ 302) and Γοργίας with Γοργίειος 'Gorgias-like' (X.) and γοργιάζω 'to speak like G.' (Philostr.).
•ETYM According to Frisk, γοργός is not related to OIr. garg(g) 'raw, wild', OCS groza 'shiver' (as argued by Osthoff 1901: 44ff.), nor to Arm. karcr 'hard' (pace Pedersen KZ 39 (1906): 379). With Γοργώ primary to γοργός, Leumann 1950: 154f. took the former to be a back-formation from γοργώψ (γοργῶπις), γοργωπός (on an implausible connection with ► γοργυρα, s.v., see Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 663).

γοργυρα [f.] 'underground drain', sometimes used as a prison (Hdt. 3, 145, EM, H.); cf. ἀρδάλια· τοὺς πυθμένας τῶν κεραμίδων, οὓς ἔνιοι γοργύρας καλοῦσιν 'the base of roof-tiles, which some call "γοργύρας"' (H.) which LSJ translates 'water-pot, trough'. Cf. also κορκόδρυα· ὑδρόρυα 'water-course', perhaps to be read as *κορκόρεα· ὑδρορ(ρ)όα (Fur.: 141, which would fit the word order). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR γεργυρα (Alcm. 132); accent unknown.
•DIAL κορχυρέα (Corc. II[a]). Cf. γέργερος· βρόγχος (H.) [DELG].
•DER γοργύριον 'subterranean channel' (LSJ Supp. Sparta).
•ETYM Perhaps related to γαργαρίζω, as per DELG. γοργυρα, with all its variants, is definitely of Pre-Greek origin: variations κ/ γ/ χ and ε/ ο; ending -έα (see Chantraine 1933: 91f.); suffix -υρ- like in γέφυρα (see Pre-Greek). Thus also Neumann 1961: 91, on words for drainage, etc.

γουνός [m.] 'hill' (Il.), acc. to EM and Orion = ὑψηλὸς τόπος 'elevated place'. ◂PG(V)▸ •DER From Γόννος, *Γοῦνος perhaps the name Γουνεύς B 748, see Boßhardt 1942: 111f.
•ETYM γουνός is not related to the Thessalian PNs Γόννος, Γόννοι, and Γοννοῦσσα (the alleged *γονϝος would probably not yield the attested forms, see Buck 1955: §54), nor to ►γόνυ, with which it was compared since antiquity (EM; equally unconvincing is the comparison with Ru. gumnó 'threshing-floor' see Derksen 2008 s.v.). We should rather compare γῶνος (H.) and χῶνος (H.), which implies that the word is Pre-Greek in view of the variation. Fur.: 138 mentions additional material from Sardinia (Gonnos, Gonni), Berber, Basque, and Caucasian.

γοῦρος [m.] a cake (Sol. 38, 3). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM The word can be compared with ἄγγουρος· εἶδος πλακοῦντος 'kind of cake', with prothetic vowel and prenasalization (cf. κύνωψ/ ἀγχύνωψ [which is not from *ἀνα-!]). Therefore, it is of Pre-Greek origin. Perhaps further connected to ►γῦρις, ►γυρίνη.

γουτάριον [n.] 'tomb' (inscr. Phrygia). ◂Lyd.▸ •ETYM This is probably the same word as γούντη (inscr. Lydia III^{p}). Probably somehow connected with Hitt. kuntarra- (Neumann 1961: 66f.); from Hurrit. kuntari-?

γουττᾶτον [n.] a cake (Chrysipp. Tyan. apud Ath. 14, 647c). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM From Lat. guttātus, -um 'sprinkled' (Martialis), in turn from gutta 'drop'.

γράαι [f.pl.] marine animal (Peripl. M. Rubr. 38). ◂(LW) Ind.▸ •ETYM An Indian word; cf. Skt. gráha-, grāhá- 'crocodile, alligator, snake, etc.'. See Goossens Le Muséon 59 (1946): 621ff.

γράβαν [f.] · σκαφίον, βόθρον 'small bowl or basin, hole' (H.). ◂LW Gm.▸ •VAR MoGr. (Laconia, etc.) γράβα = τρώγλη 'hole', often in place names, see Georgacas ByzZ 41 (1941): 360f., Rohlfs 1930: 461.
•ETYM Kretschmer Arch. slav. Phil. 27 (1905): 234 states that the word is from Gm., e.g. Go. and OHG graba 'ditch'. Or is it perhaps from/via Illyrian? See also Hubschmid ZRPh. 77 (1961): 432. Cf. ►γράβιον.

γράβιον [n.] 'torch, oakwood' (Stratt.; also S. Fr. 177 [cod. γραφίοις]?). ◂EUR?▸ •ETYM From an (Illyrian?) word grabu* for 'beech, oak', seen in U Grabovius, epithet of Jupiter; the word is also found in MoGr. γράβος (Epirus), γάβρος (Arcadia). Further compared with Ru. grab 'hornbeam', etc. and OPr. wosi-grabis. See Vasmer s.v., Georgacas ByzZ 41 (1941): 361f., and Porzig 1954a: 148. These comparisons are rejected by Garbini 1969: 391ff.; cf. also Restelli 1969: 820.
Fur.: 169 compares γοβρίαι· φανοί, λαμπτῆρες 'bright, torches' (H), which cannot be ignored; he concludes that the word is a non-IE substrate word, perhaps from the Balkans. See ►κράββατος.

γραῖα •VAR γρᾶϊς. ⇒γραῦς.

γράπις [adj.] 'ὁ ἐρρυτιδωμένος, wrinkled' (EM), 'cast slough of a serpent' (H.), in S. Ichn. 177 the mg. is unclear; name of a bird (H.). ◂?▸
•DER γράπτης 'wrinkled' (Eust.), γραπίνης· οἶνος τραχύς 'harsh wine' (H., EM). Not here, as per Frisk, γραιόομαι 'become old'; see ►γραῦς.
•ETYM Unknown. Not related to γραῦς, γῆρας. DELG suggests that γράπις is a hypocoristic of γράπτης 'wrinkled' cited by Eust., which may derive from γράφω.

γράσος [m.] 'smell of a goat' (Ar.). ◂GR?▸
•DER γράσων 'id.' (M. Ant.; cf. γνάθων beside γνάθος, Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 207[13]), γρασωνία = γράσος (Archig. Med.).
•ETYM γράσος is supposed to be a word for 'he-goat' = "gnawer" from ►γράω 'to gnaw'. On -σο-, see Chantraine 1933: 433ff.

γραῦς [f.] 'old woman' (Il.); a sea-crab (Artem., H., see Strömberg 1943: 95, thus also γραῖα [Epich.]); said of the scum of boiled milk (Ar.). ◂IE ǵreh$_2$-iu-* 'old woman'▸ •VAR Gen. γρᾱός (Schwyzer 574).
•DIAL Ion. γρηῦς, γρηΰς.
•DER Enlarged to γραῖα (Od., also adj. 'old') < *γρᾱϝ-ιᾰ; coll. γραιβία ἢ γραιτία (i. e. γραιϝία)· πανήγυρις. Ταραντῖνοι 'assembly, festival (Tarent.)' (H.); see Scheller 1951: 32. Another enlargement in γρᾱΐς, -ίδος (Charito), Dor. γραῦις (Call.).
From γραῦς: γραώδης 'like old women' (Chrysipp.); from γραῖα: γραιολέας· πονηρὰς ἢ ὀλεθρίας γραίας 'poor and wretched old women' (H.) (cf. the adj. in -όλης, but see DELG; the translation ὀλεθρίας is folk-etymological).
Denominative verb γραΐζω 'to remove the γραῦς from the milk' (Ar.); from γραῖα: γραιόομαι 'to get old', of wine (AP).
•ETYM From the root ǵerh$_2$-* in γέρων, γέρας. Probably from γρᾱ-ι̯υ- < ǵreh$_2$-iu-, with -ι̯υ- like in ὑύς 'son' (plur. υἶες); the element -iu- has nothing to do with h$_2$oiu-* (see ►αἰών), pace Szemerényi. See ►γέρων, ►γέρας, ►γῆρας.

γράφω [v.] 'to scratch, write' (Il. [aor. only]). ◂IE gerb*^{h}- 'scratch, carve'▸ •VAR Aor. γράψαι.
•DIAL γρόφω (Melos).
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀνα-, ἐπι-, συν-, etc. Many compounds with -γράφος as a second member (e.g. λογογράφος 'writer of speeches'); the proparoxytona are passive, e.g. ἄγραφος 'not written'.
•DER γραπτύες [f.pl.] 'scratching' (ω 229); γραφή 'id.' also 'prosecution' (IA; γροφά Epid.), γραφικός; γράφεα [n.pl.] = γράμματα (Arcad., El.); γράφημα = γράμμα (AB); γραμμή 'line' (Pi.), γραμμικός 'linear, geometric' (Gal.), γραμμιαῖος 'id.' (Dam.), γραμμώδης (Thphr.); γραμμιστήρ a chirurgical instrument (medic., cf. βραχιον-ιστήρ) and γραμμιστός (Eust.; γραμμίζω uncertain in Eust. 633, 63). γράμμα, plur. -ατα 'line, writing, letter' (IA); also γράσσμα (Arc.; < *γράφ-σμα), γράθματα (Arg.) and γρόππατα (Aeol., Balbilla); see Schwyzer 317 add. 1 and 523f. On διάγραμμα Bikerman Rev. de phil. 64, 295ff. From γράμμα: γραμμάτιον (Luc.), γραμμάριον 'weight of 2 oboles' (Aët.); γραμματεύς 'writer, secretary' (Att.) with γραμματεύω and γραμματεῖον 'writing table, etc.', γραμματ(ε)ίδιον; γραμματεία 'secretariate' (pap., Plu.); γραμματικός, γραμματικεύομαι (AP); fem. γραμματική (τέχνη) 'grammar, etc.'; γραμματιστής 'secretary, teacher' (IA), γραμματίζω (rare; Herod., Messen., Boeot.); γραμματιστική 'elementary education' (Phld.). γραμμός 'writing' (Hdn.). γραφεύς (Dor. Arc. also γροφεύς) 'painter, writer' (Emp.), γραφεῖον 'writing instrument' (Arist.); γραπτήρ 'writer' (AP), γραπτεύς (sch.). γραφίς 'slate-pencil' (Pl.; γροφίς Epid.); γραφίσκος medical instrument (Cels.). ἐπιγράβδην 'scraping the surface' (Il.) shows the original meaning. Desiderative deverbative γραψείω (gloss.).

•ETYM All forms can be explained from the root form γραφ- < *grb^h-. The principally Doric variant γροφ- (γροφά, -ίς, -εύς, -εύω, σύγγροφος, etc.) does probably not represent old o-vocalism, but rather an inner-Greek variant of ρα from a zero grade (DELG). Outside Greek, we have PIE *$gerb^h$-, seen in Gm. (OE ceorfan 'cut, carve', MHG kerben 'id.'), and further in Slav., e.g. OCS žrěbii (*$gerb^h$-) 'allotment' (prop. *'carved stick'?). ► γριφᾶσθαι is problematic.

γραψαῖος [m.] = κάραβος 'crab' (Diph. Siph. apud Ath. 3, 106d). ◄PG► •ETYM Not from γράφω, as per Chantraine RPh. 91 (1965): 211-214. As Frisk states, the origin is unknown; perhaps it is a Mediterranean word. He compared κάραβος (Epich.). Fur.: 123, 154 adduced other forms for 'beetle' and 'crab': Lat. scarabaeus, which presupposes *σκαραβαῖος (note the agreement with our word), σκορόβυλος (from *σκορβ-), and σκορπίος. So we have prothetic *s- and the variations α/ ο, β/ π. All of these point to Pre-Greek origin. Fur. assumes that γραψ- stands for *γαρψ- (but the ψ is difficult). This gives a word (s)karP-. Furthermore, he compares καράμβιος (Fur.: 109), καρβάρεοι· κάραβοι H.; καραβίδες (169); κηραφίς and κεράμβυξ, κεράμβηλον (with the interchange ε/ α and prenasalization). Frisk points to the "allgemeine Ähnlichkeit mit ital. (g)ravosta, nhd. Krebs, Krabbe und anderen germ. Wörtern ebenso wie mit κάραβος". See ► κᾱ́ραβος.

γράω [v.] 'to gnaw, eat' (Call. Fr. 200). ◄IE? gres- 'gnaw, eat'► •VAR Only impf. ἔγραε. Athem. ipv. γράσθι (Cypr.), them. (contracted) γρᾶ· φάγε. Κύπριοι 'eat! (Cypr.)' (H.). Also γραίνειν· ἐσθίειν 'eat' (H.).
•DER γράστις [f.] 'green fodder' (pap., Hippiatr.); more common κράστις (Ar.), probably due to folk etymological connection with another (unknown) word; γραστίζω 'feed at grass' (Gp., Hippiatr.), γραστισμός (Hippiatr.); κραστίζομαι 'graze' (Sophr.), κρατήριον 'mangar' (Poll.). Also γράσσις (PHamb. 39 II, II^p). With prefix καγρᾶ· καταφαγᾶς. Σαλαμίνιοι (H.), see Bechtel 1921, 1: 421 and 446.
•ETYM The word has been compared with Skt. grásate 'devour' (in which case γράω would be from grs-e/o-). Cf. also ► γράσος. Connection with ► γάγγραινα, ► γρῶνος is improbable. Cf. ► γαστήρ.

γρηγορέω ⇒ἐγείρω.

γρῆνος ⇒ἀγρηνόν.

γρίντης ⇒ῥῖνος.

γρῖπος [m.] 'fishing basket, creel' (AP, Artem.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR = γρῖφος [m.] (Plu.), mostly metaph. 'riddle' (Ar.; see Chantraine 1928: 20), secondarily as adj. 'obscure' (Hdn. Epim. 16).
•DER γριφότης 'obscurity' (Hdn.). γριπεύς 'fisherman' (Sapph.), γριπεύω (Zonar.), γριπηΐς (τέχνη, AP); γρίπων 'id.' (AP); denominative γριπέω (Syria), γριπίζω (Lib., H.), γρίπισμα (EM, Zonar.). γριφώδης 'enigmatic' (Luc.), γριφεύω 'give a riddle' (Ath.). Also γριπώμενα· συνελκόμενα καὶ σπασμωδῶς συμπαθοῦντα, οἱ δὲ ἐγγίζοντα 'contracting and undergoing spasms; approaching' (H.); γεγριφώς· ὁ τοῖς χερσὶν ἁλιεύων 'fishing with bare hands'. Several lemmata in H.
•ETYM The variation π/ φ is typical for Pre-Greek words; such an origin for a fisherman's word is quite understandable. Comparison with MHG krebe [m.] 'basket', ON kjarf, kerfi [n.] 'bundle' (from *e) or Skt. grapsa- 'bundle' must therefore be rejected. There is no reason to connect the word with ► γέρρον.

γρίσων, -ωνος [m.] 'swine' (Hdn. Gr. 2, 249, H.). ◄?► •ETYM Although γρίσων is generally considered to be onomatopoeic, cf. γρῦλος s.v. ► γρῦ (and ► γρομφάς), this lacks support.

γριφᾶσθαι [v.] · γράφειν, οἱ δὲ ξύειν καὶ ἀμύσσειν. Λάκωνες 'to write; to scratch, scrape (Lacon.)' (H.); γριφώμενα ἀλγήματα 'sufferings' (Hp. Prorrh. 1, 100, Erot.); the definiens γραφόμενα, ἢ ἐπανειλούμενα 'being written or unrolled' in H. is unclear. ◄?►
•ETYM ► σκαρῑφάομαι has been compared. Perhaps also connected are ► ἀγρεῖφνα, ἀγρίφη 'harrow'.

γρομφάς, -άδος [f.] · ὗς παλαιά, σκρόφα 'old swine' (H.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Also γρόμφις, -ιος [f.] (Hippon., H.), γρόμφαινα [f.].
•DER γρομφάζω 'grunt' (gloss.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic words. Cf. γρύζω, and also στομφάζω 'speak loudly'. Lat. scrōfa 'sow' is perhaps a loanword from Greek. Note the absence of the nasal (i.e. prenasalization?).

γρόνθος [m.] 'fist' (PAmh. 2, 141, 10, IV^p, sch., gloss.), 'breadth of a hand' (Aq.), also 'grasp, spoke of a machine'. ◄?►
•DER γρόνθων· ἀναφύσησις, ἣν πρώτην μανθάνουσιν αὐληταὶ καὶ κιθαρισταί 'upward stream of air, which flute players learn first' (H., Poll.), with which was may perhaps connect γρονθωνεύεται (cod. -θον-)· θυμοῦται 'becomes angry' (H.).
•ETYM The suffix -θος used to be distinguished (cf. μασθός, βρόχθος, κύσθος), which admitted comparisons with ON krumma [f.] 'hand', OHG krimman 'press', and Lat. gremium 'lap, womb'. Lith. grùmdau 'von oben gewaltsam stoßend stopfen' belongs to the productive iterative-intensives in -dau (cf. grumiù, grùmti 'press into, fill'). All of these comparisons, however, are quite uncertain.

γρόσφος [m.] 'throwing spear' (Plb.); οἱ γροσφομάχοι 'javelin-fighters' = Lat. velites (Plb.). ◄?►
•VAR κρόσφος (Eust.).
•ETYM A technical term borrowed from an unknown source; note that the word is late.

γρῦ [n.]? usually with negation: a 'small quantity', often of sounds (Ar.); acc. to sch. Ar. Pl. 17 of the grunting of a swine (clearly onomat.); = ὁ ὑπὸ τῷ ὄνυχι ῥύπος 'the dirt under the nail' (H.; also γρύξ) and = γρύτη; a small coin (Suid.). ◂ONOM▸
•VAR Indeclinable.
•DER γρύζω, aor. γρύξαι 'grunt' (Ar.), γρυσμός (Agathocl.); γρῦλος, expressive gemination γρύλλος 'piglet' (Ath.), metaph. 'eel' (Diph. Siph.; because of its thickness and sound, see Strömberg 1943: 68f.); γρυλίων· χοῖρος 'pig' (H.); as a PN Γρῦλος, -ων, etc. (Bechtel 1917b: 581); γρυλίζω (Ar.; γρυλλίζω rejected by Phryn.); γρυλισμός (Arist.); γρύλλη· ὑῶν φωνή 'sound of pigs' (H.). γογγρύζειν, γογγρύσαι (H.) were influenced by ▸γογγύζειν.
•ETYM For onomatopoeic γρύζω, compare Lat. grunniō, grundiō, OE grun(n)ian, OHG MoHG grunzen. A difficult comparison is that with γρωνάδες· θήλειαι σύες 'female pigs' (H.), which has been thought to represent the Laconian pronunciation with [u]; cf. MoGr. γουρούνι 'swine' (is γέωνα H. an error?) and see Kretschmer Glotta 13 (1924): 135. Cf. further ▸γρύλλος 'caricature' and γρυλλισμός a dance.

γρύλλος [m.] 'caricature' (Plin. HN 35, 114). ◂?▸
•DER γρυλλο-γραφέω 'draw caricatures' (Phld.). Also a dance (Phryn. PS p. 58 B.); thus also γρυλλισμός, with γρύλλος = ὁ ὀρχούμενος (ibid.).
•ETYM Deemed an Egyptian (i.e. Hellenistic) word by Phrynichos; see Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 190f. It is not from the PN Γρύλλος (Plin.); see Latte ibid. See further Page Class. Rev. 7 (1957): 189-191 and Maas Greece and Rome 5 (1958): 71. There is no relation between γρύλλος and γρῦλος. DELG thinks the connection between the dance and 'caricature' is evident.

γρυμέα [f.] 'bag or chest for old clothes' (Com., Phld.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Codd. often γρυμαία; also γρυμεῖα, γρυμεία. γρύτη [f.] 'trash, trumpery, woman's dressing-case, vanity-bag, frippery' (Sapph., pap.); 'small fry' (Gp.).
•COMP γρυμεοπώλης (Luc.); γρυτοπώλης (Cos, pap.); γρυτο-δόκη (AP).
•DER Diminutive γρυτάριον (Zen., pap.); γρυτεύεται· παρασκευάζεται 'to prepare, put on make-up' (H.).
•ETYM In origin, the word probably denoted small things of little value, later also the chest, etc. The formation of γρυμέα is rare; together with the variants -αία, -εία, it suggests a non-Greek (= Pre-Greek) formation, on which see Pre-Greek on the suffix -αι/ε(ι)-. Perhaps connected to γρῦ as 'something small'. The comparison with Lat. grūmus 'heap of earth, hillock' is unconvincing; better, but still doubtful, is that with OE cruma 'crumb'. From γρυμέα probably comes Lat. crumīna 'bag, purse'; see Pfister IF 56 (1938): 200ff. Likewise, γρύτη may be the source of Lat. scrūta [n.pl.] 'trash, frippery'.

γρυνόν [n.] = σίκυς ἄγριος 'kind of wild fish' (Ps.-Dsc. 4, 150). ◂?▸
•ETYM André Ét. class. 24 (1956): 10 connects the word with γρύσει = τήξει (Arist. Pr. 876b 15) because of its fluid contents; this is most uncertain, as the verb itself is unclear.

γρῦνός [m.] 'dry wood, torch' (Hom. Fr. 18, Lyc. 86, 294). ◂?▸
•VAR γρουνός [m.] (v.l. and Call. Fr. anon. 84).
•DER γρύνη· λιβανωτός 'frankincense' (Theognost. Can. 108). Cf. the TN Γρύνειον, Γρῦνοι (Aeolis), Fick BB 23 (1898): 22 and 213.
•ETYM Unknown.

γρῦπός [adj.] 'hook-nosed, curved' (Pl.). ◂PG(V)▸
•DER γρυπότης (X.). Denominative γρυπόομαι 'become hooked, of nails' (Hp.), γρύπωσις (medi.); further γρύπτω, γρυπαίνω and γρυμπαίνειν· γρυποῦσθαι, συγκάμπτειν 'bend together' (H.). Them. aorist ἔγρυπον (like ἔκτυπον) 'become wrinkled', of the earth in an earthquake' (Melanth. Hist. 1); thus γᾶν ἐγρυμμέναν (Gortyn); idem γρυπανίζω (Antiph. Soph.) and γρυπάνιος (ib.); γρυπάλιον· γερόντιον. ἢ γρυπάνιον (H.), γρυπνόν· στυγνόν 'abhorred' (see DELG). Root noun γρῦψ, -πός [m.] the mythological 'griffin' (Aristeas apud Hdt., A.), later the real 'lammergeier' (LXX); cf. γύψ, σκώψ, γλαῦξ; also γρῦπαι· αἱ νεοσσιαὶ τῶν γυπῶν. οἱ δὲ γῦπαι 'the young of vultures; vultures' (H.). γρυβός· γρύψ (H.) after the nouns in -βος? (Chantraine 1933: 261). Metaph. γρῦπες· μέρος τῶν τῆς νεὼς σκευῶν καὶ ἄγκυραι 'part of the ship's tackle and anchors' (H.).
•ETYM A connection with OE crumb, OHG krump 'crooked' is not very probable (the nasal is difficult). The nasal in γρυμπαίνω could be a Pre-Greek prenasalization, but could also be of inner-Greek origin. The long u is difficult to account for in IE (it requires *-uH-). Güntert 1914: 132f. thought that γρύψ was γύψ, influenced by γρυπός; this is unconvincing. Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 17 assumed a loan from Akkadian (karūbu 'griffin, cherub'; cf. Hebr. kᵉrūb and Lewy 1895: 11f.) through Hittite. From the archaeological perspective, origin in Asia Minor (and the Near East: Elam) is very probable, for discussions on which see DNP s.v. Greif, and Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 51f. (note that it is not connected with Akk. karūbu), Wild Wien. Ak. Sb. 241/4 (1963): 3-28. It is not certain that γρύψ is related to γρυπός. The adjective makes the impression of a Pre-Greek word (γρυμπ-), thus this would be true of the mythical bird as well (whatever its ultimate origin); note γρυβός, which may prove a Pre-Greek alternation of stops. Fur.: 175 assumes further variations on the basis of the Latin forms. Note also γρῦνος· γρύψ H., which fits in his system as showing π/ ϝ (236). Through Lat. gryphus, the word entered the Western Eur. languages (griffin, Greif).

γρύτη ⇒γρυμέα.

γρύψ ⇒γρῦπός.

γρῶνος [adj.] 'hollow, cavernous' (Lyc.). ◂?▸
•DER γρώνη 'hole, kneading trough' (Nic., AP), γρώνους (H.) in several specific mgs.
•ETYM The usual reconstruction *γρωσ-νος vel sim. (to ▸γράω) is quite uncertain, as the verb shows no ablaut; the meaning hardly fits, either.

γύαλον [n.] 'hollow (of a cuirass), vales, dells' (Il.), also of the hand, cf. ἐγγυαλίζω; see below. ◂IE? gou*- 'hand'; gu(H)*- 'bend' (?)▸ •DER γυαλός epithet of λίθος (Call. Fr. anon. 331), with different accent γύαλος [m.] 'cubical stone' (EM 243, 12); γυάλας 'cup' (Megara and Macedonia, Ath. 11, 467c; see Solmsen 1909: 216). ἐγ-γυαλ-ίζω 'hand over' (Il.; see Schwyzer: 736). Independent ἐγγύαλον (Orion) = ἔγκοιλον. Also γυέλιον· κόλπον 'lap' (H.).

•ETYM For the formation, one might compare ἀγκάλη, ὀμφαλός (Chantraine 1933: 245ff.). For ἐγγυαλίζω, the meaning 'hollow of the hand' has been posited. Cf. YAv. gauua- 'hand'; see ► ἐγγύη. Mostly connected with ► γύης, ► γυῖα s.v.

γυγαί [?] · πάπποι 'grandfathers' (H.; cod. πάμποι). ◂LW? Anat.▸ •ETYM If πάπποι is correct, this is an Anatolian word cognate with Hitt. ḫuḫḫa- 'grandfather', HLuw. ḫuḫa-, Lyc. χuge-; see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. Brandenstein 1954b: 65 connects it with the name of the Lydian king Γύγης. Cf. Heubeck Lydiaka (1959): 62f; however, Neumann 1961: 69ff. connected it instead with the bird γύγης. The same word as Lat. avus, Arm. hav 'grandfather', i.e. $*h_2euh_2o$-. See ► κοκύαι.

γύγης, -ου [m.] a waterbird (Dionys. Av. 2, 16). ◂?▸
•ETYM Perhaps onomatopoeic, after its sound; see Thompson 1895 s.v. Lidén 1892: 92f. connected the word with Lith. gùžas, -ùtis 'stork', ON kjúklingr 'chicken', etc.

γύης, -ου [m.] a. 'the curved piece of wood in a plough (Hes. Op. 427, 436), ἄροτρον αὐτόγυον 'plough whose γύης is of one piece with the ἔλυμα and ἱστοβοεύς, not fitted together (πηκτόν)' (Hes.); b. 'lands' (trag.), mostly plur., also a measure in τετρά-γυος 'of four γ.', etc. (Hom.); sometimes fem., cf. γύη· μέτρον πλέθρου 'measure of 100 ft./10,000 sq. ft.' (H.); also γύος [m.] (pap.); c. 'the system of ἀστράγαλοι' (H., Poll.); d. -γυος with e. ἀμφίγυος. ◂IE? gou-* 'hand'; gu(H)-* 'bend' (?)▸ •COMP ἀμφί-γυος of lance and javelin (Il.), 'with a limb at each end'? (Trümpy 1950: 59); metrical lengthening ἀμφιγυήεις, said of Hephaistos, 'crippled on both sides'(?); τετρά-γυος 'of four γ.' (land measure).
•ETYM This word belongs to a difficult complex. It probably consists of: (1) γύαλον, (2) γυῖα, (3) ἐγγύη, which I have treated separately, which correspond to 1, 4, and 2 in DELG s.v. γύη(ς). Here, γύη(ς) (DELG nrs. 3, 5) is treated.
The basic form *γυ(η)- 'curve, curving' has been assumed. For comparison, we have MoP gōšā 'corner' and Av. gu- 'hand'; the other forms in Pok. 393-8 are hardly relevant.
Here probably ► γύαλον, ► γυῖα; see also ► γυρός. Hardly to ► γυλιός.

γυῖα [n.pl.] 'limbs' (Il.), also 'lap' (μητρὸς γυῖα, h. Merc. 20); rare sing. γυῖον 'hand' (Theoc. 22, 121); 'body' (Pi.). ◂IE? gou-* 'hand'; gu(H)-* 'bend' (?)▸ •DER γυιόω 'cripple' (Il.), with γυιός 'lamed' (Call.).
•ETYM Connected with ► γύης and ► ἐγγύη.

γυλιός [m.] 'knapsack' (Ar.); also an animal, 'hedgehog'? (Sophr. 73; see also sch. Ar. Pax 527). ◂?▸
•VAR Also γύλιος.
•DER Also γύλλιον· ἀγγεῖον πλεκτόν 'plaited vessel' (H.), and the fish names γυλλίσκοι· ἰχθύες ποιοί (H.), γυλάριον = μυξῖνος (sch. Opp. H. 1, 111). The gloss γυλλάς· εἶδος ποτηρίου, παρὰ Μακεδόσιν 'kind of drinking cup (Maced.)' (H.) will be a mistake for γυάλας (s.v. γύαλον).

•ETYM Unknown. ON kýll 'bag for victuals', OHG kiulla 'bag' < keula-* have been compared; see WH s.v. vola. Further related to γύαλον? Fur.: 120 compares γυλάριον with ► κύλλαρος.

γυλλός [m.] mg. unclear, 'block of stone' (Milete VI-V[a]) carried in a procession for Apollo (Nisson, Gr. Rel. 1,189); κύβος, ἢ τετράγωνος λίθος 'cube or cubic stone' (H.); γυλλοί· στολμοί 'equipment, apparel' (H.; Latte: corrupt). ◂?▸
•DER γύλλινα· ἐρείσματα, γεῖσοι 'prop, projecting part of the roof' (H.). On γυλλάς· εἶδος ποτηρίου, παρὰ Μακεδόσιν, γύλλιον· ἀγγεῖον πλεκτόν (H.) see ► γυλιός.
•ETYM No etymology. Lewy KZ 55 (1928): 72f. connects the word with Hebr. gōlēl 'Rollstein'.

γυμνός [adj.] 'naked, unarmed' (Il.). ◂IE nogʷ-no-* 'naked'▸ •VAR ἀπόνοιμον· ἀπογύμνωσιν 'stripping bare' (H.).
•DER γυμνάς, -άδος [f.m.] 'naked' (E.); 'trained' (E., Att.); collective = 'trained men' (Amorgos, Astypalaia, Cos). γυμνής, -ῆτος [m.] 'light-armed warrior' (Tyrt.), with γυμνητικός (X.), γυμνήσιος (Arist.), γυμνητεύω (Plu.), γυμνητεία 'light-armed men' (Th.), 'nakedness' (Corn.); γυμνήτης, fem. -ῆτις 'naked' (Lyc.). γυμνικός (ἀγών) 'gymnastic' (opp. ἱππικός) (Hdt.). γυμνηλός 'poor' (H., EM, after νοσηλός, etc.). γυμνότης [f.] (LXX). Denominative γυμνόομαι 'to strip' (Il.), -όω (Hdt.), γύμνωσις (Th.). γυμνάζομαι 'to exercise (naked)' (IA); γυμναστής 'trainer' (Pl.), γυμναστικός, ἡ γυμναστική (τέχνη) 'gymnastics' (IA); γύμνασμα 'training' (D. H.), γύμνασις 'id.' (Poll.); γυμνάσιον 'training' (Pi.), 'school for exercise, gymnasium' (Att.), γυμνασιώδης (Cic.); γυμνασία; on -σιον, -σία Schwyzer: 469f. γυμνασίδιον (Arr.) and γυμναστήριον (Gal.). γυμνιεύω 'to be naked' (P. Ross. Georg. 3, 28, IV[p]).
•ETYM Old inherited word. With a dental suffix, we have Lat. nūdus (< nogʷodʰo-* per Schrijver 1991: 274f.), OIr. nocht, Go. naqaþs, OHG nackt, and ON nøkkviðr. Without a suffix are Lith. núogas, OCS nagъ (with acute lengthened vowel according to Winter's Law); with a suffix -no-, Skt. nagná-, Av. maγna- (dissimilated); with -n-, Gm. forms like ON nakinn, OFr. naken, probably modelled after the n-participles. Hitt. nekumanza (with e-vowel) is modelled after the adjectives in -u̯ant- (becoming -mant- after u). With e, we also have Arm. merk < megʷro-* (cf. Av. maγna-). The υ is from ο like in νύξ after a nasal and before a following labiovelar; the -μν-, from -gʷn- (cf. ἀμνός). We also find λυμνός (H.), with dissimilation of *νυμνός, as well as ἀπολύγματος· ἀπογύμνωσις. Κύπριοι (H.), with preserved -γ-. The essential point, the initial γ-, was explained by Kortlandt (ap. Beekes Orbis 37 (1994): 91) as an assimilation noŋʷno-* > ŋoŋʷno-*. The initial [ŋ-] was reanalyzed as /γ-/, since ŋ was not a phoneme in Greek.

γυνή [f.] 'wife, woman' (Il.). ◂IE gʷen-h₂* 'woman'▸ •VAR Gen. γυναικός. Boeot. βανά (Corinn.), plur. βανῆκας· γυναῖκας H.; Cypr. *βονα does not exist (O. Masson 1961: 298). Voc. γύναι from γυναικ, see Schwyzer: 582f. The stem γυν-αικ- probably derives from an adj. gʷneh₂-iko- (Szemerényi AION 2 (1960): 13-30; against Lejeune REA 63 (1961): 435).
•DIAL Myc. ku-na-ja /gunaia/.

•COMP On the forms of γυνή as a second member ἄ- ἀνδρό- κατά- μισό- φιλόγυνος, ἀ- ἡμι- καλλι- ὀρσι- φιλογύναιξ, ἀγύναικος, ἀ- ἡμι- κακο- κατα- μισο- πολυ- φιλογύναιος, ἀ- ἀνδρο- μισο- νεο- πολυ- φιλογύνης see Sommer 1948: 62f. Exceptional γύν-ανδρος 'hermaphrodite', and γυναι-μανής (Il.). Survey in DELG s.v.
•DER Diminutive γυναικάριον (Diocl. Com.), γυναίκιον (Longos), γυναικίσκιον· παιδίσκιον (H.); γυναικίας [m.] 'womanish man' (Eup.; like νεανίας); γυναικωνῖτις 'women's room' (Lys.), rare γυναικών (X., like ἀνδρών).
Adjective γυναικήϊος, -εῖος (Od.; as ἀνδρήϊος, -εῖος), γυναικικός (Arist.; like ἀνδρικός), γυναικώδης (Plb.: ἀνδρώδης), γυναικηρός (Diocl. Com.; after πονηρός, etc.).
Denominative verbs γυναικίζω, -ομαι 'to behave like a woman' (IA) with γυναίκισις (Ar.) and γυναικισμός (Plb.); γυναικόομαι, -όω 'to be, make womanish' (Hp.).
Not derived from the extended stem γυναικ-: γύννις, -ιδος 'womanish man' (A.) and γύναιος [adj.] (cf. δείλαιος), γύναιον [n.] 'woman'.
•ETYM γυνή derives from the PIE word for 'woman', *g^wen-h_2, e.g. Skt. (Ved.) gnā́- 'woman, goddess', Av. gənā 'woman'. An exact match with γυναι- is offered by Arm. kanay- in the plur. kanay-k' [nom.], etc.; the element -κ- is seen further in Messap. gunakhai 'γυναικί'(?) and NPhr. κναικαν, κναικο.
The labiovelar also appears in Go. qino (n-stem), OIr. ben (ā-stem) 'woman', both < *g^wen-. The full grade, replaced by the zero grade in Greek, is seen in e.g. Arm. kin, OPr. genna, OCS žena, Skt. jáni-, ToA śäṃ, ToB śana. The zero grade is found in OIr. ban- (in compounds), gen.sg. mná < bnās*. A lengthened grade is seen in Go. qens (i-stem) 'woman'.
The word was originally a proterodynamic h_2-stem: nom. *g^wen-h_2 (seen in Skt. jáni-, ToB śana), gen. *g^wn-eh_2-s (in OIr. mná). The Greek u-vocalism probably goes back to a zero grade *$g^w\mathring{n}h_2$-V-, although this would normally be expected to give *βαν-, which is the form attested in Corinna.
On ► μνάομαι 'to woo for one's bride', see ► μιμνήσκω. The full grade may be preserved in ► βενέω, a variant of ► βινέω (acc. to De Lamberterie RPh. 65 (1991): 149-160).

γῦπη [f.] · κοίλωμα γῆς, θαλάμη, γωνία. 'cavity in the earth, den, corner' (Call. Aet. Oxy. 2080, 73). ◂EUR▸ •VAR γύπας· καλύβας, καὶ θαλάμας. οἱ δὲ γυπῶν νεοσσιάς 'hut, den; nest of young birds', referring to ► γύψ through folk etymology. οἱ δὲ τὰς κατὰ γῆς οἰκήσεις, οἱ δὲ σπήλαια 'a habitation below the earth, caverns' ... (H.).
•ETYM The word is connected with a Gm. word for 'room, cave, etc.': ON kofi, OE cofa, MoHG Koben, etc. These words may be European substrate words; see Beekes KZ 109 (1996): 223-227. Av. gufra- 'deep' is probably unrelated; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. gabhīrá-. On γυπάριον, see ► γύψ.

γύπωνες [pl.] dancers in Sparta (Poll. 4, 104): οἱ δὲ γύπωνες ξυλίνων κώλων ἐπιβαίνοντες ὠρχοῦντο, διαφανῆ ταραντινίδια ἀμπεχόμενοι 'some say the γύπωνες danced upon wooden limbs, putting on tarantinidia, translucent dresses'. ◂?▸
•COMP ὑπογύπωνες (ib.).

•ETYM Unknown.

γυργαθός [m.] 'wisker-basket, creel' (Ar.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Accent after Hdn. Gr. 1, 145. Also γύργαθον (BGU 1092, 29) and γέργαθος (POxy. 741, 5).
•DER γυργάθιον (PHolm. 18, 17).
•ETYM Technical word. Connected with ger- ('plait'?) in ► γέρρον? The word looks Pre-Greek.

γυρῖνος ⇒ γυρός.

γῦρις, -εως [f.] 'the finest meal' (Dsc.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also γύριος (PSI 4, 428, 44, III[a]).
•DER γυρίνη kind of cake (Luc.), γυρίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread from γ.' (Ath.), γυριστήριος (gloss.).
•ETYM Unknown. Perhaps connected with ► γοῦρος.

γῦρός [adj.] 'round, curved' (τ 246: γυρὸς ἐν ὤμοισιν ['round in the upper arms', i.e., 'muscular'?]). ◂IE? gou- 'hand'; gu(H)- 'bend' (?)▸ •DER γῦρος [m.] 'rounding, circle' (Thphr.) with γύριος 'forming a γ.' (Anon. apud Suid.), γυραλέος (Opp.). Denominative γυρόω 'make round, make a circle' (LXX, Nic.) with γύρωσις (pap., Gp.); also γυρεύω 'walk in a circle' (Str.). γυριστός 'curved' (sch.), γυρτόν· κυφόν 'hunchbacked' (H.). Also γυρῖνος [m.] 'tadpole' (Pl.; but with short υ) with γυρινώδης (Arist.). Here also PlN like Γυραὶ πέτραι (δ 500), see Bechtel 1914 s.v.
•ETYM Connection with gou-* 'hand', guH-* 'curved' (see Frisk) seems quite possible. See ► γύης, ► γύαλον.

γύψ [m.] 'vulture' (Il.). ◂PG▸ •VAR γῦπός.
•DER γυπιάς (πέτρα) 'where vultures live' (A. Supp. 796 [lyr.]; cf. ὀρεστ-ιάς, etc. Schwyzer: 508); γύπινος 'belonging to a vulture' (Luc.), γυπιαῖος 'id.' (Tz.), γυπώδης 'vulture-like' (Arist.). γυπάριον 'nest, cranny' (γυπαρίοις καὶ πυργιδίοις Ar. Eq. 793).
•ETYM Monosyllabic bird name like σκώψ, γλαῦξ, etc. The usual connection with geu-* 'bend' (see ► γῦρός, ► γύαλον, etc.) is quite uncertain. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek.

γύψος [f.] 'gypsum, chalk, cement' (Hdt.). ◂LW Sem.?▸
•DER γυψίον (pap.), γυψική 'tax on plasterers' (pap.), γύψινος (EM), γυψώδης (Sor.); denominative γυψόω 'plaster with gypsum, chalk over' (Hdt.) with γύψωσις (Gp.) and γυψωτής (EM); γυψίζω 'id.' with γυψισμός (pap.).
•ETYM From Semitic? See Muß & Arnolt TAPA 23 (1892): 70.

γωλεός [m.] 'hole' (Arist.), γωλ<ε>ιοί· σπήλαια. καὶ αἱ πρὸς θάλασσαν καταδύσεις 'caverns; descents towards the sea' (H.); plur. γωλε(ι)ά (Nic.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word has been compared with Lith. guõlis, Latv. guoļa 'lair, nest' (Lith. guliù 'lie down'), and Arm. kałał 'hole, hiding-place'. However, this comparison must remain uncertain and IE origin is not very probable. We have to reckon with influence from φωλεός (Fraenkel KZ 71 (1954): 40); cf. also the remote similarity with ►γύαλον, etc.

γωνία [f.] 'corner' (Hdt.), also 'leader' (LXX). On its use in geometry see Mugler 1958-1959. ⊲GR⊳ •COMP As a second member -γωνος in τρί-γωνος, etc. (like -βιβλος to βιβλίον, etc.), see Debrunner IF 60 (1952): 40ff.; συγγωνίος (RPh. 73 (1999) 84).
•DER γωνίδιον (Luc.); γωνιαῖος (Pl. Com.), γωνιήϊος (Delphi), γωνιώδης (Hp.), γωνιακός (Procl.); γώνιος (pap. VI^{p}). γωνιάζω (Porph.) with γωνιασμός (Ar.); γωνιόομαι (Dsc.) with γωνίωμα (Eust.) and γωνίωσις (Archig. Med.). For παραγωνίζω see RPh. 71 (1997): 155f.
•ETYM Generally connected with ►γόνυ. Since the paradigm of ǵonu-* contained no lengthened grade and mathematicians were Pythagoreans, the long ω must be explained as the regular Doric development of *γονϝ-ία; the long ā in Skt. jā́nu arose from short o in ǵonu* by Brugmann's Law and is irrelevant. Alternatively, Hamp MSS 43 (1984): 19f. explains the long ω from the type τρί-γωνος.

γῶος [m.] · μνημεῖον 'memorial' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. For a suggestion, see von Blumenthal 1930: 15 A. 1, who considers the word as Messapian (or Macedonian), deriving it from IE ǵ^{h}ōuo-* beside ǵ^{h}ouo-* in Gr. χοῦς.

γῶπας [acc.pl.] · κολοιούς. Μακεδόνες 'jackdaw (Maced.)' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM According to Lesny KZ 42 (1909): 297f., γῶπας is identical to γῦπας; according to Hoffmann 1906: 47, it is to be connected with σκῶπας (both hypotheses doubted by Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 307). See ►σκώψ, which could be yet another variant (Fur.: 110).

γωρῦτός [m.] ([f.]) 'quiver, which was also a bow-case' (φ 54). ⊲LW Iran.⊳
•VAR Hesychius' χωρυτός will be due to ancient folk-etymology, as appears from Ap. Soph. (παρὰ τὸ ... χωρεῖν), while γορυτός (H.) may be just a mistake.
•ETYM According to Benveniste 1937b: 42ff., a loanword from a Scythian compound (see under τόξον) that contains the word for 'cow' (see ►βοῦς), Iran. Γω- in Γω-βάρης, etc., as a first member. The interpretation of the second member is totally unclear however, since (pace Benveniste) we can hardly identify it with MoP rūda 'intestine' and interpret the whole compound as 'cow-hide' (Morgenstierne KZ 61 (1934): 29f.). If the second member cannot be 'hide', the first member need not be 'cow-' either. Alternatively, Lubotsky suggests that γωρῦτός may derive from varūtra-* 'something that protects' (Skt. varūtár-), with v- > g- as in later Iranian. For the Greeks, the pronunciation of the initial may already have resembled g(w)-, and a substitution of -va- by ō is trivial. Note that this etymology additionally explains the long ῡ.

Δ

δα- [pref.] e.g. in δα-φοινός 'very red' (Il.), especially of animals, and δά-σκιος 'very shady' (Od.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM From δια-, Aeol. ζα-, although the conditions are unclear (metrical explanation in Chantraine 1942: 168, see also Sjölund 1938: 25f.). See ►δάσκιος.

δᾶ [interj.] (trag.) in lyrics, e.g. A. Eu. 874 οἰοῖ δᾶ φεῦ. ⊲?⊳ •ETYM According to sch. Ag. 1072, EM 60, 8, the word is Doric for γᾶ, γῆ, which Kretschmer finds in Dor. Δαμάτηρ (see ►Δημήτηρ) and in Dor. Ποτειδάν (see ►Ποσειδῶν). However, it is probably only an exclamation. On the accus. Δᾶν, see ►Ζεύς.

δᾱγύς, -ῡδος [f.] 'puppet' of wax (Theoc. 2, 110). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •ETYM Technical word of foreign origin. Etymology unknown. Probably a Pre-Greek word (suffix -ῡδ-).

δαδύσσομαι [v.] 'to be distracted' (Sophr. 117, H.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also δαιδύσσεσθαι· ἕλκεσθαι 'to be drawn, pulled' (H.) and δαιδήσσουσι (for *δαιδύσσουσι?)· βασανίζουσι 'they put to the test'.
•ETYM Since Roscher-Osthoff IF 5 (1895): 282 (and, later, LIV^2 s.v. deu̯k-* 'ziehen'), the word has been connected with Lat. dūco 'lead', Go. tiuhan 'draw' (cf. ►ἀδευκής, ►ἐνδυκέως), assuming intensive reduplication *δαι-δυκ-i̯ο-. However, different from that tradition, DELG notes that the word has "pas d'étymologie". Indeed, if δα- is not a late notation for δαι- (as argued by e.g. Schwyzer: 841 and Frisk), the variation δα-/δαι- may point to Pre-Greek origin.

δαεγώ [interj.] · οἶδα, ἐπίσταμαι 'I know, understand' (H.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Latte and Pearson read δαείω (a subjunctive, acc. to DELG), for which I see no support. Alternatively, MoGr. (Cappadocian) δαγώ 'I know', from οἶδα ἐγώ (Schwyzer: 769), has been compared (Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 215), which is more probable.

Δάειρα [f.] name of a chthonic goddess in Attica, to whom a pregnant sheep was sacrificed (Pherecyd. 45, Lyc. 710, inscr.); also Δαῖρα (A. Fr. 277, inscr.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •DER Δαειρίτης [m.] name of a priestess (Poll.).
•ETYM Formerly compared to formations like κυδι-άνειρα and connected with ►δαῆναι, Skt. dasrá- 'effecting miracles' (cf. ►δαΐ-φρων) but this is semantically unattractive. Nilsson Arch. f. Religionswiss. 32 (1935): 82f. and Kern in PW 4: 1980f.

assumed a feminine of ►δᾱήρ, so properly "sister-in-law", which is not convincing either. More probably Pre-Greek (where a suffix -ειρα occurs more often).

δαῆναι [v.] 'to learn' (Il.). ◄IE dens-* 'learn'► •VAR Epic also intr. aor. δαήμεναι, fut. δαήσομαι, perf. δεδάηκα, δεδαώς (Od.), med. δεδάημαι (h. Merc.), redupl. aor. (with caus. mg.) δέδαε 'taught' (Od.), δέδαον [3pl.] (H.), inf. δεδάασθαι (for δεδαέσθαι?) (π 316), secondary δάε, ἔδαε (A. R.), δα[ι]ῆσαι· διδάξαι 'learn' (H.); present ►διδάσκω.
•DER δαήμων 'knowing' (Il.) with δαημοσύνη (A. R.); privative ►ἀδαής; δάησις (EM); ►Δάειρα.
•ETYM The stem δα- derives from the zero grade of IE dens-*. The full grade is seen in Av. dīdaiŋhē < di-dens-h₁ei* and in nominal forms like Skt. dasrá- 'effecting miracles'. The aor. δέ-δα-ε is from de-dn̥s-e-t*. Cf. ►δήνεα, ►διδάσκω, ►δαΐφρων.

δᾱήρ [m.] 'husband's younger brother, brother-in-law'. ◄IE deh₂i-uer-* 'brother-in-law'► •VAR Acc. -έρα, voc. δᾶερ, gen.plur. δᾱέρων Ω 769 (verse initial) and 762 (Il.), Hell. and late also the accus. and dat.sing. δαῖρα, δαιρί, nom.plur. δέρες (Lydia), gen.sg. δῆρος (Bithynia).
•DER Δάειρα is rather not related.
•ETYM Old kinship term, agreeing with Skt. devár-, Arm. taygr, Lith. dieverìs, OCS děverъ; thus it derives from *δαιϝήρ. Is δαιρί from *δαιϝρί, and *δαιϝρῶν for metrically impossible δᾱέρων? See Schwyzer: 266 and 568. Lat. lēvir was transformed after vir and has l- for d- and ē for ae from the colloquial language.

δαί [interj.] always after interrogative τί, πῶς δαί 'what, how then?' (α 225, ω 299 [both doubtful]; Com.; often false for δέ). ◄GR► •ETYM Innovation to δή after νή : ναί. See Schwyzer 1950: 563³; 570.

δαΐ [f.] 'in battle' (Il.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. da-i-qo-ta /dā^(h)i-kʷʰontās/, Δηιφόντης.
•COMP δαικταμένων Φ 146, 301. PNs Δάιππος (Milete), Δαικράτης (Olbia), Δαϊλέων, Δαιμένης (Athens).
•ETYM Isolated epic dative (also Hes. Th. 650, A. Th. 925), formerly derived from a root noun *δαῦς. However, the Myc. form without -w- shows that this reconstruction is untenable, so it is rather not related to ►δαίω. New accus. δάϊν (Call. Fr. 243). See ►δήϊος.

δαιδάλλω [v.] 'to work artfully, embellish' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Only present stem.
•DIAL Myc. da-da-re-jo-de /daidalejon-de/.
•DER δαίδαλμα 'work of art' (Theoc.). δαίδαλον [n.] 'id., ornament' (Il.); Δαίδαλος name of a mythical artist (Il.), δαίδαλος 'artful' (A.); δαιδάλεος (Il., cf. μαρμαίρω: μαρμάρεος, etc.; acc. to Leumann a metrical variant to πολυ-δαίδαλος 'rich in ornaments'); also δαιδαλόεις (Q. S., like παιπαλόεις). Denominative δαιδαλόω (Pi.), δαιδαλεύομαι (Ph.) with δαιδαλεύτρια 'artful female artist' (Lyc.).

•ETYM The relation between δαιδάλλω, δαίδαλος, and δαίδαλον is debated. Leumann 1950: 131ff. started from a Mediterranean word δαίδαλον 'ornament', from which δαιδάλλω and the compound πολυ-δαίδαλος 'rich in ornament' would be derived. Others have taken δαιδάλλω, which was thought to be an intensive reduplicated formation, as the starting point (cf. Schwyzer: 647 and 725). Within Greek, ►δέλτος and ►δηλέομαι have been compared (see s.vv); further, δάλλει· κακουργεῖ 'do wrong' (H.) and ►δόλων; see also ►δόλος. Not related are several words for 'build, split' in other IE languages, e.g., Lat. dolāre 'hew', Skt. dár-dar(ī)ti 'split', OIr. delb 'form' (< del-wā-), etc. Instead, we should consider Pre-Greek origin, for instance through a connection with the PN Δαίδαλος. Assuming that the verb is primary, δαιδάλλω may have to be interpreted morphologically as a reduplicated dalʸ-dalʸ-.

δαιδύσσεσθαι ⇒δαδύσσομαι.

δαΐζω [v.] 'to cleave, pierce' (Il.). ◄GR► •VAR Aor. δαΐξαι, perf. ptc. δεδαϊγμένος.
•DER δαϊκτήρ "divider", of Ares (Alc.), also of γόος (A. Th. 916); also δαΐκτωρ (γάμος A. Supp. 798); δαϊγμός (EM); δαΐκτας in e.g. μηλοδαΐκτας (B.); καρπο-δαισται (Gortyn) is rather from δαίομαι with analogical -σ-, like in δεδαισμένον, δαισθείς (E.).
•ETYM Deverbative from ►δαίομαι (see Schwyzer: 736).

δαίμων, -ονος [m., f.] 'godlike power, fate, god' (Il.). ◄IE deh₂-(i-)* 'cut, divide'► •DER Adjective δαιμόνιος 'belonging to a δαίμων' (Il.); on δαιμόνιε see Brunius-Nilsson 1955; ntr. δαιμόνιον 'godlike power' (IA); δαιμονικός 'id.' (Plu.); δαιμονιακός 'id.' (PMag. Osl. 1, 143); δαιμονιώδης 'like a δ.' (Ep. Jac., Procl.). Rare and late δαιμονίς (Procl.) and δαιμόνισσα (PMag. Leid. W. 16, 48). On δαιμονή (Alcm. 69?) see Schwyzer: 524. Denominative δαιμονάω 'be possessed by a δ.' (A.), δαιμονιάω 'id.' (Phld.), δαιμονητιᾷ· δαιμονίζεται. Κρῆτες H., after verbs of disease in -άω, -ιάω and -ητιάω (Schwyzer: 731f.); δαιμονίζομαι 'id.' (Philem.) with δαιμονισμός (Vett. Val.), 'become a god' (S. Fr. 173, H.); δαιμονιάζομαι = δαιμονιάω (pap.). Often as a second member of compounds: bahuvrīhi (βαρυ-, δυσ-); substantives (ἀγαθο-, ἀνθρωπο-); see Frisk s.v.
•ETYM The word is connected with ►δαίομαι as 'divider' (cf. von Wilamowitz 1931: 363); for the semantics, cf. OP baga-, OCS bogъ 'god' beside Av. baga- 'part', Skt. bhága- 'id.', related to bhájati 'divide' (the meaning has not developed from "Zerreißer, Fresser (der Leichen)"). See Nilsson 1941: 216ff. and (on its development in modern languages) Chantraine CRAI 1954: 452-5.

δαίομαι [v.] 'to divide', med. 'to feast' (Il.). ◄IE deh₂-, deh₂-i- 'cut, divide'► •VAR δαίνυμι, aor. δαῖσαι, fut. δαίσω, δαισθείς.
•DER Abstracta δαίς, -τός [f.] 'portion, meal' (Il.), compounds ἀβρό-, ὁμό-; δαίτη 'meal' (Il.); δαιτύς, -ύος [f.] 'id.' (X 496; Chantraine 1942: 96) with δαιτυμών, -όνος [m.] 'guest' (Od.); δαιτυμονεύς (Nonn.); δαῖσις 'division (of property)' (Gortyn) with δαισάνη = πτισάνη (EM), δαίσιμον (-ιον EM)· ἐδώδιμον 'food' (H.); δαιθμός 'division, divided land' (inscr.). Nomen loci: δαιτήριον (EM). Agent noun: δαιτρός

'divider, carver' (Od.) with δαιτροσύναι [pl.] 'the arts of the carver' (π 253); denominative δαιτρεύω 'to divide, carve' (Il.) with δαιτρεία (Hdn.); Δαίτωρ as a PN (Θ 275), συνδαίτωρ 'conviva' (A.); δαιτρόν 'part, portion' (Δ 262); δαίτης title of a priest (E. Fr. 472, 12), as a second member in λαγο-δαίτας (A.). Isolated is δαιταλεύς 'banqueter' (A.), cf. δαιταλάομαι 'to banquet' and δαιταλουργία (Lyc.). An enlargement of δαίομαι is ►δαΐζω. See ►δαίμων.

•ETYM δαίομαι (with analogical -ι-) agrees morphologically with Skt. dáyate 'divide' < dh_2-eie-. Other forms of this Skt. root go back to deh_2- or dh_2-, e.g. dā́-ti 'to mow, cut off', di-tí- 'dividing', d-yá-ti 'divide' < dh_2-ie-. Also connected is ►δῆμος (Dor. δᾶμος). From Gm. and Arm., the word for 'time' has been connected: OE tīma, ON tími 'hour, time', PGm. tī-man-* < dī-mon-;* OHG zīt 'time', Arm. ti 'old age, time' < dī-t(i)-*. Alb. daj 'divide, cut', aor. dava may be related, too. See LIV^2 s.v. $deh_2(i)$-* 'teilen'. Cf. ►δατέομαι and ►δάπτω.

δάϊος ⇒δήϊος.

δαισάνη = πτισάνη (EM 264) 'peeled barley'. ◄?►

•ETYM Unknown. See Fur.: 255, 337.

δαΐφρων [adj.] 'artful, experienced'; 'brave' (Il.) by secondary connection with ►δαΐ 'in battle'. ◄IE dens-* 'high mind, power'► •ETYM Compound with ►φρήν (s.v.; cf. ἄ-φρων); the first member is perhaps from *δαh-ι-, related to Skt. das-rá- 'effecting miracles', with i and ro alternating as in κυδι-άνειρα and κυδρός (Schwyzer: 447). Note that this would presuppose that s* > h in the Greek outcome of clusters -n̥sV-*. On ἀμφ' Ὀδυσῆϊ δαΐφρονι δαίεται ἦτορ (α 48), see Risch 1947: 88.

δαίω [v.] 'to kindle' (Il.). ◄IE deh_2u-* 'burn'►

•VAR intr. perf. δέδηα 'burn', ptc. δεδαυμένος (Semon. 30 B), δάηται (Υ 316, Φ 375), aor. δαῆναι, ἐκδαβῇ (= -ϝῇ)· ἐκκαυθῇ. Λάκωνες 'let it be burnt out, lit (Lacon.)' (H.).

•COMP Compounds with ἀνα- (A.), κατα- (H.). θεσπι-δαής (πῦρ, Μ 177, etc.) 'flaming godlike' (rather to the aor. δαῆναι than to δάος?).

•DER δάος [n.] (< *δάϝος) 'torch' (Hom.) together with δᾱνός < *δαϝεσ-νός 'fit for a torch, dry' (ο 322, Ar. Pax 1134 [lyr.]). δᾱλός [m.] 'firebrand' (Il.) < *δᾱϝελός (= δαβελός· δαλός. Λάκωνες H.), δαελός (Sophr.); *δάϝος: *δαϝελ-ός like νέφος: νεφέλ-η; further δαῦλον· ἡμίφλεκτον ξύλον 'half-burnt wood' (H.). Diminutive δᾱλίον (Ar.); δᾱλός also = μελάνουρος ἰχθύς 'fish with a black tail' (H.), metaph. 'burnt out = old man' (AP), with hypocoristic gemination δαλλώ· ἡ ἀπόπληκτος. οἱ δὲ τὴν ἔξωρον παρθένον ἢ γυναῖκα καὶ πρεσβυτέραν 'dumb woman; an over-aged maiden or woman' (H.). δαΐς, -ίδος [f.] 'torch' (Il., on Att. δᾴς, δᾳδός see below) < *δαϝίς, whence the diminutive δᾳδίον (Ar.); δᾳδίς 'torch-festival' (Luc.), δᾴδινος 'ptng. to the torch, made of pine-wood' (Gal.), δᾳδώδης 'resinous' (Thphr., Plut.), to δᾴς 'resin-glut', name of a disease in pines (Thphr.); δᾳδόομαι 'become affected with resin-glut' together with δᾴδωσις (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 167. Compounded δᾳδοῦχος 'holding a torch'. δαύακες· θυμάλωπες 'pieces of burning wood' (H.), cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 118, Grošelj Živa Ant. 2 (1952): 206. δαερόν· μέλαν. καὶ τὸ καιόμενον

'black; burning' (H.), perhaps also Emp. 90 for δαλερός. δαηρόν· θερμόν, καυματηρόν, λαμπρόν, προφανές 'warm, very hot, glowing, shining forth' (H.). δαηθμόν· ἐμπρησμόν 'burning' (H.), on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 137f.; Latte (with Voß) corrects it to δαιθμόν. ►δαῦκος · ὁ θρασύς. καὶ βοτάνη τις Κρητική 'bold; also a Cretan plant' (H.) is rather PG. Not here ►δαΐ 'in battle', because Myc. has no -w-.

•ETYM As shown by δεδαυμένος, δαίω goes back to *δαϝ-ιω. Att. δᾴς (δᾶις < *δαιϝ-ις) originates from a metathesized *δαίϝω (cf. Cor. Διδαίϝων). The perfect δέδηα < *δέ-δᾱϝ-α resembles Skt. du-dāv-a (gramm.), to which the present du-nó-ti 'to burn' is related (for dunā́ti*, acc. to LIV^2 s.v. deh_2u-* 'in Brand geraten'). OIr. dóim 'to burn' and OHG zuscen 'id.' may have to be connected as well. Cf. Peters 1980a: 37. See ►δύη and ►δήϊος.

δάκνω [v.] 'to bite', also 'to sting (of insects), wound' (Il.). ◄IE denḱ-* 'bite'►

•VAR Aor. δακεῖν (Il.), δῆξαι (Luc.); fut. δάξομαι (Hp.), δήξομαι (E.); perf. δέδηγμαι (Ar.), δεδαγμένος (Pi.), δέδηχα (Babr.), δέδακα (AP); aor. pass. δηχθῆναι (S.), δακῆναι (Aret.); vb.adj. ἄ-δηκτος (Hes., Hp.).

•COMP Compounds with ἀμφι-, ἀνα-, ἀντι-, etc., also θυμοδακής (Od.).

•DER δάκος [n.] 'bite, stitch', often 'biting animal' (Pi.) = δακετόν (Ar., cf. ἑρπετόν), δαγμός 'bite, stitch' (Ruf.), δάγμα 'id.' (Nic.), δάκια· τὰ ἄγρια ὀρνιθάρια 'wild birds' (H.); δάξ = ὀδάξ (Opp.) together with δαξ-ασμός = ὀδαγμός (Ti. Locr.; after μαρασμός, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 141f.). From δηκ-: δῆγμα 'bite, stitch' (A.), δηγμός 'id.' (Hp.), δῆξις 'id.' (Hp.); δήκτης 'biter, biting' (E.) with δηκτήριος 'id.' (E.) and δηκτικός (Arist.); δήξ, δηκός 'worm in wood' (Tz.) after σφήξ. δακνώδης 'biting, stinging' (Hp.), δακνηρός 'id.' (Phld., cf. ὀδυνηρός), δακνίς· ὀρνέου εἶδος 'kind of bird' (H.), δακνᾶς 'biter' (Phryn.). Expressive δακνάζω (A.), δαγκάνω (Hdn.).

•ETYM The aorist δακεῖν agrees morphologically with the Skt. present dáśati 'bites'; the perfect dadáṃśa and nouns like dáṃśa- 'bite' show that the root was denḱ-. Therefore, δηκ- in δήξομαι, etc. is a secondary full grade of δακεῖν, after λήψομαι: λαβεῖν. Probably we should connect ToB tsākᵃ- 'bite' (Adams 1999 s.v.), whereas in Gm. we find nouns like OHG zangar 'biting, sharp', ON tǫng 'tongs' (perhaps Alb. danë 'tongs' is related, too). Further forms in LIV^2 s.v. denḱ-* 'beißen'.

δάκρυ [n.] 'tear, drop' (Il., also Peripl. M. Rubr. 30 = 'resin', cf. ►βράθυ). ◄IE dr̥ḱ-h_2ḱru-* 'eye-bitter' > 'tear'► •VAR Dat.pl. δάκρυσι; also δάκρυον [n.] (Il., from the plur. δάκρυα).

•COMP παρά-δακρυ plant name (Ps.-Dsc.); many bahuvrīhis in -δακρυς.

•DER Diminutive δακρύδιον as a plant name (Ps.-Dsc.); δακρυ-όεις 'rich in tears' (Il.); δακρυώδης 'running' (of wounds, Hp.); denominative δακρύω 'weep (over)' (Il.) with δάκρῦμα 'mourned for' (Orac. apud Hdt. 7, 169), 'tear' (A.).

•ETYM Old word for 'tear'. Also seen in Arm. artasu-k' [pl.] (< draḱu-*, see below), sing. artawsr (< draḱu-r*); Gm., e.g. OHG zahar, Go. tagr; Celt., e.g. OBret. dacr, OIr. dér < dakr(o)-*. In addition to these forms, there is also OHG trahan < PGm. trahnu-* < IE draḱnu-. It has been supposed that earlier draḱru- gave these various forms by dissimilation. But the eastern languages have similar words without initial consonants: Skt. áśru-, Av. asrū-, Lith. ašarà, ToA ākär, ToB akrūna [pl.] (see Pinault 1997: 219-233). To explain all different forms, Kortlandt AAL 6 (1985) assumes a compounded form dr̥ḱ-h_2ḱru* 'eye-bitter', where the first element is from derḱ-* 'to see' and the second element from 'bitter'. For Hitt. išḫaḫru- [n.] 'tears', Kortlandt (l.c.) reconstructs sk^w-h_2ḱru* (from sek^w-* 'see'). A Hell. form *δάκρῡμα is often assumed to be the source of Lat. dacrŭma, lacrĭma, but see now the discussion in De Vaan 2008 s.v. dacruma.

δάκτυλος 1 [m.] 'finger' (also as a measure, etc.), 'toe' (IA). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Boeot. δακκύλιος (Tanagra).
•COMP Compounds like τετραδάκτυλος 'four-fingered'; ῥοδοδάκτυλος 'rose-fingered'.
•DER Rare diminutives: δακτυλίδιον (Ar.), δακτυλίσκος (Lebadeia), δακτυλίς (Steph. Med., Plin.); δακτύλιος [m.] (-ον [n.]) '(finger)ring' (Sapph., Hdt.) with the diminutive δακτυλίδιον (Delos III[a], pap.), also δακτυλίδριον, -ίδρυον (pap., dissimilated from -ύδριον [Chantraine 1933: 72f.]), δακτύληθρον (Them.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 373), δακτυλήθρα 'glove with fingers' (X., Chantraine l.c.). δακτυλῖτις plant name (Dsc.; after the root which is thick like a finger, Strömberg 1940: 37), δακτυλεύς name of a sea-fish (Ath.). Adjectives: δακτυλ-ιαῖος 'as thick as a finger' (Hp.), δακτυλικός 'ptng. to the finger' (Ath.), δακτυλωτός 'with fingers' (Ion.). Denominative δακτυλίζω 'to count with the fingers, etc.' (H.) together with δακτυλιστής (pap.), an unknown profession.
•ETYM No etymology. Because Boeot. δακκύλιος can hardly have its -κκ- from -κτ-, it is rather from *δάτκυλος. A form *δατκ-υλ- looks perfectly Pre-Greek: cluster -κτ- (< -τκ-) and a suffix -υλ-. Not connected to OHG zinko; the relation to Lat. digitus is unclear.

δάκτυλος 2 [m.] 'date', the fruit (Arist.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•ETYM From Semitic (Arab. daqal, etc.), reshaped to δάκτυλος by folk-etymology because the leaf resembles a hand; see Lewy 1895: 20f.

δαλάγχαν ⇒θάλασσα.

δαλής [adj.] · μωρός 'dull' (H.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳
•VAR δαλαῖς· οἱ ἀμαθεῖς 'those who are ignorant' (sch. Theocr. 9, 33e).
•ETYM Fur.: 255 connects the word with ζαλαίνω· μωραίνω 'be dumb' (H.).

δάλλει ⇒δηλέομαι.

δᾱλός ⇒δαίω.

δαμάζω ⇒δάμνημι.

δαμάλης, -ου [m.] 'tamer', said of Eros (Anacr.), 'younger bull (still to be tamed)' (Arist.). ⊲IE demh₂-* 'tame'⊳ •VAR Fem. δάμαλις (A.); δαμάλη (E.) 'young cow'.
•DER Diminutive δαμάλιον (pap.); δάμαλος 'calf'? (Hdn.); denominative δαμαλίζω 'to tame' (Pi.). On Δάμαλις as a PN see Schmid Phil. 95 (1942): 118[123].

•ETYM Connected to ►δάμνημι, δαμάσαι; see Chantraine 1933: 236f. Cf. WH s.v. damma 'buck, doe, etc.'.

δάμαρ, -αρτος [f.] 'wife' (Il.; on the meaning, see Gernet 1937: 393ff.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR δόμορτις· γυνή 'woman' (H.; perhaps Aeol.).
•DIAL Myc. da-ma-te, du-ma-te [dat.sg.] /damartei/, /dumartei/?
•DER No derivatives.
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Since Schulze KZ 28 (1887): 281f., it has been derived from the word for 'house' (see δάπεδον, δεσπότης, and δόμος) and the root ἀρ- in ἀραρίσκω with a dental suffix; likewis, δόμορ-τ-ις (Schwyzer: 451[3]). Others have seen an old neuter in -ρ in δάμαρ; see Benveniste 1935: 30 and Lejeune 1972 §29[4]. Ruijgh Lingua 51 (1980): 90 connects the word with ταμία, which might point to Pre-Greek origin.

δάμνημι [v.] 'to tame, subdue, conquer', especially of horses (Il.). ⊲IE demh₂-* 'tame'⊳ •VAR Also pres. δαμνᾷ [3sg.] (for Aeol. δάμνᾱ, according to Schwyzer: 694), aor. δαμάσ(σ)αι, intr. δαμῆναι, perf. δέδμημαι (all Il.); to δαμάσ(σ)αι a new present δαμάζω (A.), fut. δαμάσσω, 3sg. δαμᾷ (Il.), aor. pass. δαμα-σ-θῆναι (Il.), also (after δέδμημαι 'I have built') δμηθῆναι (Il.).
•COMP Compounded with ὑπο-. As a first member in δάμν-ιππος (Orph.).
•DER δμητήρ (ἵππων) 'tamer' (h. Hom., Alcm.), fem. δμήτειρα (Il.), δμῆσις (ἵππων) 'taming' (Il.); ἀ-δμής, -τος [f.m.] 'untamed, unmarried' (Od.), also ἄ-δμη-τος 'id.' (Il.) and ἀ-δάμα-σ-τος (Il.), ἀ-δάμα-τος (trag.), δμᾱτέα (Dor.). δαμαστέα (H.); ►ἀδάμας. Isolated are δαμα- and δαμν- in: Δαμαῖος 'tamer', of Poseidon (Pi.), δαμάτειρα (AP), πάν-δαμάτωρ 'all-tamer' (Il.), late fem. πανδαμάτειρα; δάμασις and δαμαστικός (sch.), δαμάστης ([Epich.] 301 [?], gloss.); δαμνῆτις· δαμάζουσα, τιμωρός 'avenging'; δάμνος· ἵππος. Τυρρηνοί (H.). δαμασώνιον and δαμναμένη plant names (Dsc., Ps.-Dsc.; a love potion acc. to Strömberg 1940: 92). See further ►δαμάλης. Not here ►δμώς.
•ETYM The present δάμνημι, Aeol. δάμνᾱμι agrees morphologically with OIr. damnaim 'to bind, tame (horses)' from dm-n-eh₂-mi*, from a root demh₂-* seen in δαμά-σαι, where the expected δεμα- was reshaped to δαμα-, partly after -δαμο- < dmh₂-o-; the zero grade dm̥h₂-* is found in δμη-θῆναι (Dor. δμᾱ-). There are many representatives in other IE languages, e.g. Hitt. damāš-^{zi} 'he forces, urges'. Gr. παν-δαμάτωρ, Lat. domitor, and Skt. damitár- may be independent parallel formations. As a second member in compounds, ἱππό-δαμος (Il.) is reminiscent of Skt. ariṃ-dama- 'conquering the enemy' (though the latter rather reflects domh₂-o-); (ἄ-)δμητος is from dm̥h₂-to- (Lat. domitus is an independent formation).

δᾱνᾰκη [f.] name of a small Persian coin; ἐλέγετο δὲ καὶ ὁ τοῖς νεκροῖς διδόμενος ὀβολός 'an obol offered to corpses' (H., Call., Poll., EM). ⊲LW Pers.⊳ •ETYM From Persian, cf. MoP dāna(k) 'quarter of a dram (drachme)'. See Eilers Welt des Orients 2 (1959): 333.

Δαναοί [m.pl.] 'Danaans', a Greek tribe (Argos), used by Homer as a general name for the Greeks. According to an ancient tradition, they took their name from king Danaos, who came from Egypt. ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM Kretschmer Glotta 24 (1936): 15ff. sees in the Danaoi the people of the Scythian king Tanaus, who in the 15th c. came to Argos. Kretschmer also compared the river names*Tanais* and Donau, and the Indo-Iranian ethnonym Dā̆nu-, etc. This is untenable; the name is certainly Pre-Greek. A country Danaja (T/Dnjw), with a city Mukana, is mentioned in inscriptions from Egypt, from Amenophis III (1390-1352 BC) and earlier from Tuthmosis III (1437 BC); see DNP s.v. Danaos and Latacz 2001: 150-165.

δα(ν)δαίνειν [v.] · ἀτενίζειν, φροντίζειν, μεριμνᾶν 'to look intently, consider, ponder' (H.).
•ETYM δα(ν)δαίνω has nothing to do with ►δενδίλλω; it may be Pre-Greek (da(n)-dan-yω*).

δανδαλίδες ⇒δενδαλίς.

δάνδαλος [m.] · ὁ ἐριθκαός, τὸ ὄρνεον 'robin, redbreast'. ⊲PG?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

δάνδηξ, -ηκος [m.] name of a big dog (Ps.-Callisth. 2, 33 cod. B). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. Cf. the other forms with -ηκ- in Pre-Greek.

δάνος [n.] 'gift' (Euph. 42), 'loan, debt' (Call. Epigr. 48). ⊲IE? dh₂-no-* 'gift'⊳ •DER δάνειον [n.] 'loan' (D.) with δανειακός (Cod. Just.), denominative δανείζω, -ομαι 'loan, give credit' (Att., Hell. also δανίζω), from which δάνεισμα 'loan' (Th.), δανεισμός 'loan, credit' (Att., Arist.) and δανειστής 'usurer, believer' (LXX,) with δανειστικός (Thphr.). Unclear is δάνας· μερίδας. Καρύστιοι 'portion' (H.).
•ETYM The suffix is just as in ἄφενος, κτῆνος, etc. Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916: 1, 256 connects it with ►δατέομαι, i.e. IE dh₂-no-;* cf. Skt. diná- 'divided'? Not directly related to δίδωμι, as dh₃-no-* would give *δονος. Alternatively, the word could be foreign.

δάξ ⇒δάκνω.

δάξα [f.] · θάλασσα. Ἠπειρῶται 'sea (Epir.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

δάος ⇒δαίω.

δαπάνη ⇒δάπτω.

δάπεδον [n.] 'ground' (Od.). ⊲IE?⊳
•VAR ζάπεδον (Xenoph., Paros).
•DER No derivatives.
•ETYM Possibly a zero grade of dem-*, seen in δεσ-πότης and δόμ-ος (and δάμαρ?), compounded with πέδον. ON topt, (O)Sw. tomt 'building place' have been compared, which would continue PGm. tum-feti-* (= *δα-πεδι-); further, can we compare Lith. dim-stis 'court'? The form ζάπεδον is explained (see Frisk) as an inverted writing of δα- after the intensifying prefix ζα- / δα-; this is hardly convincing. Cf. ►ζακόρος and perhaps ►ἀλλόδαπος.

δάπις, -ιδος [f.] 'carpet, rug' (com.).
•DER Diminutive δαπίδιον.
•ETYM Güntert 1914: 151 assumed a folk-etymological reshaping of τάπις after δάπεδον 'ground', but the word is rather a variant of ►τάπης.

δάπτω [v.] 'to devour, consume' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Aor. δάψαι.
•COMP Compounds with ἀπο-, δια-, κατα-, whence καταδαπάνη and καταδαπανάω (Hdt., X.).
•DER δαπάνη 'cost, expenditure' (Hes. Op. 723; cf. σκάπτω : σκαπάνη) with derivative δαπάνυλλα (Corc.); δαπανηρός 'spendthrift' (Pl.) with δαπανηρία (Arist.); denominative δαπανάω 'spend, consume' (Hdt.) with δαπάνημα (X.), δαπάνησις (Aristeas) and δαπανητικός 'consuming' (S.); δαπανητής EM; deverbal δάπανος = δαπανηρός (Th.); isolated δαπανούμενα (Andania I[a]) as if from δαπανόω or -έω. δάπτης 'eater' (Lyc.) from the present stem, unless = δάπ-της; from the aorist stem δαψ- with a suffix -λ-: δαψ-ιλής 'abundant' (Ion., Arist.; δαψιλός Emp. may be older acc. to Solmsen IF 31 (1912/13): 461ff.) together with δαψίλεια (Arist.) and δαψιλεύομαι (LXX). See ►δαρδάπτω.
•ETYM If δάπτω is formed from a root δαπ-, this may be compared with Lat. daps '(sacrificial) meal', and perhaps with the ToA pret. and subj. tāp- 'eat', ToB tāpp- 'consume' (?), although the Tocharian initial t- from d-* is problematic (Adams 1999 s.v.). Further connections have been proposed with Lat. damnum 'expenditure, loss' and ON tafn 'sacrificial animal, meal', which could be from dap-no-m*, as well as with Arm. tawn 'feast' (< dap-ni-*). Skt. dāpayati 'divide' is a productive causative-formation from dā- 'divide', and is therefore not connected. In spite of the proposed cognates, which do not convince on the semantic side, we may also consider Pre-Greek origin for δαπ(τ)-/ δαψ-, especially if it should be related with ►δεῖπνον (Fur.: 325). Lat. dapinō is a loan from δαπανάω.

δαράται [f.pl.] name of the kitchen, which is offered by a phratry at a matrimony (Delphi V-IV[a]). ⊲?⊳ •VAR Also δαρατος [m.] name of a Thessalian bread (Seleuc. apud Ath. 3, 114b); δαρατον [n.] (Coropa VI-V[a]; not quite certain).
•ETYM The comparisons with Skt. dū́rvā- and MoDu. tarwe 'wheat' and MoE tare, or that with Lith. dirvà 'field, floor' (see Fraenkel 1955 s.v.), are very doubtful. See Kalléris 1954: 147-151. DELG refers to δάρον (H.). Cf. ►δράμις.

δάρδα [f.]? · μέλισσα 'bee' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Perhaps reduplicated: Skt. dardurá- 'frog, pipe', Lith. derdė́ti 'rasseln, schwatzen' and OIr. dardaim 'to roar (of a deer)' have been compared. See also Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 202 (Δάρδανοι, etc.). Fur.: 391 considers the word as Pre-Greek.

δαρδαίνει [v.] · μολύνει 'stains', ἀνεδάρδανε· ἀνεμόλυνε (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Specht KZ 66 (1939): 203f. unconvincingly analysed δαρ-δ-αίνω, -άνω, connecting a word for 'excrement' seen in OE tord [n.] 'excrement', ON torðyfill 'dung-beetle', as well as in Latv. dìrst 'cacare', Lith. dìrsė 'back'. As this is mere speculation, the etymology is still unknown. Cf. ►δάρδα.

δαρδάπτω [v.] 'to devour' (Hom.). ◁?▷
•VAR Only present except δαρδάψῃ (Opp.), δαρδάψαι· ῥῆξαι, σπαράξαι 'break, tear' (H.), δεδάρδαφε· καταβέβρωκε 'he eats up' (H.).
•ETYM Intensive reduplicated formation with unclear -ρ-, perhaps connected to δάπτω (Fur.: 326). See Frisk for older litt.

δαρθάνω [v.] 'to fall asleep'. ◁IE der-* (?) 'sleep'▷
•VAR The simplex as a present only Hierocl. in CA; aor. ἔδραθον (υ 143); mostly κατα-δαρθάνω (Pl.), also ἐγκατα-, ἐπικατα-, συγκατα-, and ἀπο-, παρα-, aor. -δραθεῖν (Od.), -δαρθεῖν, perf. -δεδάρθηκα (Att.), later aor. -δαρθῆναι (see Schwyzer 759). Mostly as a suppletive aorist to the pres. [καθ-]εύδω 'sleep'.
•DER No derivatives.
•ETYM δαρθάνω bears a certain resemblance to Skt. drā́-ti 'to sleep', Lat. dormiō 'id.', CS drěmati 'slumber' (from drēm-*). Theoretically, the θ could be a secondary formant (cf. Benveniste 1935: 191 and Chantraine 1942: 329).

δάρ[ε]ιρ [?] · τὸ ἀπὸ τοῦ μεγάλου δακτύλου ἐπὶ τὸν μικρὸν διάστημα 'the distance from the thumb up to the little [finger]'; also δάριν· σπιθαμήν. Ἀρκάδες 'span (Arcad.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM DELG assumes rhotacism in the first gloss and thinks it is Laconian, and borrowed from the Arcadian form. See ►δῶρον 2.

δάρκα [?] kind of κασία (Dsc. 1, 13). ◁PG?▷
•VAR δάκαρ (v.l.).
•DER δάρκανος = ἐρυθρόδανον (Ps.-Dsc. 3, 143); for the formation cf. ἄκανος, ῥάφανος, etc. (Strömberg 1940: 144).
•ETYM Unknown. The form δάρκανος might confirm the reading of the lemma. Is the word Pre-Greek?

δάρκες ⇒δράσσομαι.

δάρπη [f.] · σαργάνη, κόφινος 'basket' (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM Fur.: 261 connects τάρπη and δάρπη and, further, σάρπους· κιβωτούς, Βιθυνοὶ δὲ ξυλίνους οἰκίας 'boxes; wooden dwellings (Bith.)' (H.) This proves Pre-Greek origin. Note that the word is also attested in Anatolia (Bithynia). Older suggestions (see Frisk; Güntert IF 45 (1927): 347: cross of ►τάρπη s.v. and *δάρφη = Skt. darbhá- 'grass-bundle'; Bechtel 1921, 2: 289: δ- "vulgar" for τ-) have therefore become obsolete.

δᾴς ⇒δαίω.

δάσκιλλος [m.] an unknown fish (Arist. HA 591a 14: τέρπεται τῷ βορβόρῳ καὶ κόπρῳ ['it enjoys filth and excrement']). ◁?▷ •ETYM Wood AmJPh. 48 (1927): 303 derived it from δά-σκιος 'shadowy', which is a mere guess.

δασπλῆτις [f.] of unknown meaning; used of the Erinyes, Hekate, the Eumenids, etc. (ο 234, Theoc.). ◁?▷
•VAR Also δασπλής, -ῆτος [f.] (Simon., Euph., Nonn.; -ῆτε as a msc.du. in Nic.), δασπλήτης [m.] (An. Ox.).
•ETYM Unknown. The formation is like χερνῆτις, κυνηγέτις, etc. (Schwyzer: 451). There are several explanations. An analysis as δασ-πλῆτις looks nice formally, but a connection with πλησίον, ἄ-πλητος, Dor. ἄ-πλᾱτος 'unapproachable', πλᾶτις 'spouse' (Bechtel 1914) seems strange. The first member must then be connected either to δασύς (Osthoff MU 2 (1879): 46ff.), or to *δα- 'house' in δά-πεδον. Differently, Solmsen RhM 60 (1905): 497ff.; Schwyzer: 451.

δασύς [adj.] 'hairy'; 'aspirated' as a grammatical term (Od., IA). ◁?▷
•COMP Compounded with ἀμφί- (Hom.), ἐν- (Dsc.), ἐπί- (Thphr.), ὑπέρ- (X.), ὑπό- (Dsc.).
•DER δασύτης 'hairiness, aspiration' (Arist.), δάσος [n.] 'thicket, shagginess' (Men.), δάσυμα eye-disease = τράχωμα (Sever. Med.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.); δασυλλίς [f.] hypocoristic of bears (EM 248, 55); Δασύλλιος epithet of Dionysus (Paus.; acc. to EM l.c. παρὰ τὸ δασύνειν τὰς ἀμπέλους, 'because vine-branches are rough'). Denominative δασύνομαι, -ω 'become, make hairy' (Ar.) with δασυντής, -τικός 'aspirating' (gramm.), δασυσμός (Dsc.). Note δασκόν· δασύ (H.); unless from δάσκιον as per Latte. On ►δάσκιλλος, see s.v.
•ETYM The old connection with Lat. dēnsus depends on the development of -σ- after sonantic n̥. Hitt. daššu- 'heavy, strong' used to be added here too, but it is now rather connected with Gr. διδάσκω 'learn' by Kloekhorst 2008, who reconstructs de/oNs-u-* (cf. also ►δαῆναι). A pre-form dn̥tu-* vel sim. was proposed because of PNs like Delph. Δατυς and Phth. Δατυου, but the -τυ- in these names cannot reconciled with the -συ- in δασύς: the latter cannot reflect -tu-*.

δατέομαι [v.] 'to divide' (Il.). ◁IE dh₂-* 'divide'▷ •VAR Aor. δάσ(σ)ασθαι, perf. δέδασμαι; from the aor. the new present δάσσω (Call. Fr. anon. 145).
•DIAL Myc. e-pi-de-da-to /epi-dedastoi/, e-pi-da-to /epi-dastos/.
•COMP Compounds with ἀνα- (ἀναδασμός 'redistribution'), ἀπο- (-δάσιμος, -δασμός), δια-, ἐν-, κατα-, ποτ-.
•DER δατητής 'divider' (A.), δατήριος 'dividing' (A. Th. 711; haplological for *δατητήριος), δάτησις (Poll.). δασμός 'distribution, tribute' (Il.) < *δατ-σμός, δάσμευσις 'distribution' (X.), δάσματα· μερίσματα 'parts' (H.); δαστήρ name of an official (Aetol.). Lengthened present δατύσσειν· λαφύσσειν, ἐσθίειν 'to lap, eat' (H.), iterative preterite δασάσκετο (I 333).

•ETYM No exact parallel. The verb contains the zero grade δᾰ- < *dh_2- of the root of ►δῆμος, δᾶμος, and ►δαίομαι. For the present formation, cf. πατέομαι and Schwyzer: 705f. and 676.

δαῦκος [m.] name of several Umbellates (Athamanta Cretensis, Peucedanum Cervaria, Daucus Carota; Hp., Dsc., H.; see Andrews Class. Phil. 44 (1949): 185). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Also δαῦκον (Thphr.), δαύκειον (Nic.), δαυκίον (Gp.); also δαῦχος (below), δαυχμός 'Cretensis' (Nic.), see also on ►δάφνη 'laurel'.
•DER δαυκίτης (οἶνος), see Redard 1949: 96.
•ETYM The plants are characterized by their sharp smell and the bitter, burning taste of the root, such that a connection with δαίω 'kindle, burn' has been proposed; see Frisk for older lit., where the scholia to Nic. Th. 94 on δαυχμός (v.l. δαῦκος) are mentioned: Πλούταρχος πλείονα μέν φησι γένη τῆς βοτάνης εἶναι, τὸ δὲ κοινὸν τῆς δυνάμεως ἰδίωμα δριμὺ καὶ πυρῶδες 'Pl. says that there is more than one species of the plant, the common peculiarity of the meaning being "sharp and fiery"'. However, the name of the Daukos plants rather derives from their gummy sap, which is collected from certain species and which burns with a bright flame; cf. δαυχμόν· εὔκαυστον ξύλον δάφνης 'well-burning wood of the laurel'. Note the form καῦκον in Ps.-Dsc. 2, 139, which was influenced by κάω, καῦσαι. Mediterranean origin is quite possible. Under ►δάφνη, it is argued that this is one and the same word; in addition, δαῦκος and δαῦχος are actually identical, too: δαύκου· τὸ μέντοι δαύκου καὶ δαύχου γράφεται, ἐπὶ τινων δὲ καὶ γλύκου H.).

δαυλός [adj.] 'thick, shaggy' (A.). ⋖?/PG⋗ •VAR δαῦλος (Paus. Gr.).
•COMP ἔνδαυλον· λοχ<μ>ῶδες, δασύ 'overgrown with bushes, rough' (H.).
•DER Δαυλίς in Phocis?
•ETYM Cf. the antonyms ψωλός, ψιλός for the suffix (Chantraine 1933: 238). Direct connection with δασύς is impossible. If a suffix -τ- is assumed for ►δασύς, then δαυλός < *dn̥su-lo- could remain with Lat. dēnsus.

δαύω [v.] 'to sleep' (Sapph. 83), ἔδαυσεν· ἐκοιμήθη 'he fell asleep'; ἀδαύως· ἐγρηγόρως 'awake' (H.). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM Improbably, Güntert 1914: 163. No better is the hypothesis of Bechtel 1921, 1: 118 (that the word is related to Skt. doṣā́- 'evening'). See under ►δείελος.

δάφνη [f.] 'laurel' (Od.). ⋖PG(V)⋗
•VAR Variants: λάφνη· δάφνη. Περγαῖοι (H.) and δαύχνα (Thess., Cypr.) with Δαυχναῖος (Aetol.); also δαυχμός 'Cretensis' (Nic., H.; see δαῦκος).
•DER δαφνίς 'laurel' (Hp.; cf. κεδρίς and Chantraine 1933: 343), δαφνών 'laurel wood' (Str.), δαφνῖτις 'Kassia of laurel, etc.' (Dsc.), -ίτης (οἶνος, Gp.), epithet of Apollo in Syracuse (H., EM). Adjectives: δαφνώδης 'laurel-like' (E.), δάφνινος 'from laurel' (Thphr.), δαφνιακός (AP), δαφνήεις 'rich in laurels' (Nonn.), δαφναῖος 'belonging to the laurel' (Nonn.), also an epithet of Apollo (AP, Nonn.), Δαφναία epithet of Artemis in Sparta (Paus.), also Δαφνία (Olympia, Str.). Δάφνις [m.] PN, Δαφνοῦς TN.
•ETYM While it is obviously in some fashion related to Lat. laurus, δάφνη is a typically Pre-Greek word that showing several types of variation. The variants δαφ-ν- or δαυκ/χ-(ν/μ)- can be explained by assuming a proto-form *dak^w-(n)- (note that there is no *λαυφ-, see Pre-Greek B 1). Thus, δαφν- and δαυκ/χ-ν/μ- were one and the same word originally.

δαφοινός ⇒δα- and φοινός.

δαψιλής ⇒δάπτω.

δέ [pcl.] adversative and copulative: 'but, and' (Il.). ⋖IE *de deictic pcl.⋗
•VAR Myc. -de, e.g. da-mo-de /dāmos de/ 'but the people'.
•ETYM Probably from ►δή by means of vowel reduction, following the functional bleaching, as per Leumann Mus. Helv. 6 (1949): 85ff. Because of Myc. -de, the connection as *g^we with OCS že 'δέ' (as defended by e.g. Delbrück 1893-1900(2): 502ff.) is impossible.

-δε [postp.] local (deictic) postposition governing the accusative of direction, originally accentuated δέ (A. D. Adv. 179, 5; 181,13, Hdn. 1, 498), later enclitic as opposed to δέ 'but' (Il.). ⋖IE *de deictic pcl.⋗
•DIAL Myc. ku-do-ni-ja-de /Kudōnijān-de/; a-mo-te-jo-na-de /harmoteiōna-de/ 'to the wheelwright' •ETYM Identical with (ablauting) OCS do 'towards', Gm., e.g. OE to, OHG zuo 'to' (IE *dō); further, Lat. in-de and en-do, indu. The deictic function of -δε is also observed in ὅ-δε, etc. See also ►δεῦρο.

δέατο [v.] 'seemed', isolated imperfect 3sg. (ζ 242). ⋖IE *$deih_2$- 'shine'⋗ •VAR Besides δεάμην· ἐδοκίμαζον, ἐδόξαζον 'I approved, supposed' and δέαται· φαίνεται, δοκεῖ 'it appears, seems' (H.); Arcadian subj. δεατοι and (aor.) δεα[ση]τοι. Here perhaps also the aorist δοάσσατο 'seemed', subj. δοάσσεται (Hom.) for *δεάσσατο, -εται after ἔδοξε 'he expected' (Wackernagel 1916: 61f.), but cf. τροχάζω 'I run quickly' from τρέχω 'I run'; see Ruijgh 1957: 130.
•ETYM The disyllabic root *$deih_2$- is continued in δέᾰ-το and in the adjective ►δῆλος < *δέα-λος. There has been some debate on whether, in *-ViHC-, the laryngeal assimilated to the yod or not (cf. the thematic optative in -οι-). If so, then our form may continue a thematic verb in *$deih_2$-e-to. Sanskrit has dī́-de-ti 'shines', ipv. di-dī-hí. See ►δῖος, ►Ζεύς, ►δέελος.

δέδαε ⇒δαῆναι.

δέδια •VAR Also δεδίσκομαι, δεδίττομαι. ⇒δείδω.

δέελος [m.] 'binding'(?), only K 466. ⋖IE *deh_1- 'bind'⋗ •VAR δέελος· δεσμός, ἅμμα 'band, bond' (H.).
•ETYM Although δέελος has traditionally been identified with the adjective δῆλος 'clear', even since the ancient grammarians, Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 319 (see ► δῆλος) has convincingly argued that this is wrong. According to him, it is rather a noun in the passage of the Iliad. δέελος is derived from δέω 'to bind' with the suffix -ελο-; its meaning could have been 'tie' (cf. the gloss by H.; for another, less plausible option, see Ruijgh l.c.).

δεῖ ⇒ δέω 2, δέομαι.

δειδίσκομαι [v.] 'to greet, welcome' (Hom.). ◄IE [188] deik- 'show'► •VAR δειδέχαται, -το, δεικ-νύ-μενος, δεικ-ανόωντο and δε(ι)-δισκ-όμενος.
•ETYM These forms were corrected into *δηδέχαται, etc. by Wackernagel BB 4 (1878): 268ff., who connected them with Skt. dāśnóti and wanted to restore the (supposed) intensive reduplication in the Greek form (see Beekes 1969: 114). On the use of the different forms, see Tichy Glotta 54 (1976): 71-84. Forssman Sprache 24 (1978): 3-24 showed that δει-, consistently found in the texts, is the correct reading. The form δει-δεχ- is the most difficult and replaces δει-δικ- (Forssman §31). The other forms replace *δει-δικ-; the original meaning was 'to show'. Cf. also ► δηδέχαται.

δείδω [v.] 'to fear' (Il.). ◄IE duei- 'fear'► •VAR Old perfect continuing *δέ-δϝοι-α; plur. δείδιμεν < *δέ-δϝι-μεν, with a new sing. δείδια (Il.), Att. δέδιμεν, δέδια; new perfect Hom. δείδοικα, Att. δέδοικα < *δέ-δϝοι-κα (doubtful is δεδροικώς [for δεδϝοι-]· <δε>δοικώς H.?), with a new present δεδοίκω, fut. δεδοικήσω (Sicily); sigmatic aorist δεῖσαι (Il.) < *δϝεῖ-σαι (ἔδδεισε < *ἔ-δϝει-σε), them. root aor. in περὶ γὰρ δίε (E 566, etc.) and δίον (X 251) < *δϝί-ε, -ον (Il.); see on ► δίεμαι; fut. δείσομαι (Il.).
•DER To δείδω: δειδ-ήμων (Γ 56, Nonn.) after the adjectives in -ήμων (δαή-μων, etc.). To δεῖσαι: δεισίλος· δειλός 'wretched' (H.); to δέδοικα: δεδείκελον· ἀεὶ φοβούμενον, δειλόν 'frightened all the time' (H.) Expressive deverbative δειδίσσομαι (epic), Att. δεδίττομαι, aor. δειδίξασθαι, δεδίξασθαι 'be frightened', first < *δεδϝικ̯ομαι, unless analogical after the verbs in *-(ί)σσω. Innovation after the σκ-verbs δεδίσκομαι (Ar.). Cf. also ► δέος, ► δεῖμα, ► δειλός, ► δεινός.
•ETYM δείδω is related to Av. duuaēϑā 'threat', and, with an s-extension, Skt. dvéṣṭi 'hate'. Possibly, Lat. dīrus 'fearful' is to be connected (if a dialectal form from du̯ei-ro- or du̯eis-o-; cf. De Vaan 2008). Further related to ► δίς 'twice', ► δύω 1 'two'; see Benveniste Word 10 (1954): 254f. The comparison with Arm. erknč'im, etc. 'to fear' is rejected by Kortlandt AAL 10 (1989): 43-52.

δείελος [adj.] 'of the afternoon, of the evening', [m.] 'evening' (Od.). ◄?►
•VAR -όν Hdn. Also δείελον [n.] 'evening meal' (Call.); denominative δειελιήσας 'after the evening meal' (ρ 599; after ἑστιήσας).
•DER δείλη [f.] 'afternoon, evening' (also Φ 111, unless to be read δειέλη, Wackernagel 1916: 166; Hdt.) with δειλινός (LXX), δειελινός (Theoc.). Doubtful denominative δείλετο (η 289; read by Aristarchus for δύσετο); see Schwyzer 722f. Uncertain εὔδειλος (Alc. POxy. 2165 I 3), of λόφος; see Gentili Maia 3 (1950): 255f. Cf. εὐδείελος.

•ETYM The word is not related to Skt. doṣā́- 'evening', etc., nor to δῆλος. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 319 argues that δείελος must be connected with Myc. e-u-de-we-ro /eu-deiwelos/.

δεικανόωντο ⇒ δηδέχαται.

δείκνυμι [v.] 'to show' (Il.). ◄IE deiḱ- 'show'► •VAR Also them. δεικνύω; Ion. δέκνυμι, Cret. δίκνυτι, aor. δεῖξαι.
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀπο-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, κατα-, παραδείκνυμι, etc.
•DER δεῖξις, frequent compounds ἀπό-, ἔν-, ἐπί-δειξις, etc. (IA); δεῖγμα 'proof', παρά-, ἔν-, ἐπί-δειγμα, etc. (IA), with παρα-δειγματικός, δειγματίζω, δειγματισμός, etc. (Arist.). Agent nouns: δείκτης, ἐν-, προ-δείκτης, etc. (Hell.) with δεικτικός, ἀπο-, ἐν-δεικτικός, etc. (Att., Arist.). Nomen loci: δεικτήριον 'scene' (pap., EM) with δεικτηριάς [f.] 'mime' (Plb.). Isolated δείκηλον '(mimic) performance, picture, sculpture' (Hdt.; see Chantraine 1933: 242, Schwyzer: 484) with δεικηλίκτᾶς (Dor.) 'actor, ὑποκριτής' (Plu.); also δείκελον (Democr.) and δείκανον (EM). See on ► δίκη.
•ETYM With the exception of Cret. δίκνυτι and the noun δίκη, the Greek νυ-present with secondary full grade has ousted all other ablaut forms. Outside Greek, we find thematic presents, e.g. Lat. dīcō (old deicō) 'speak', Go. ga-teihan 'show, make clear', OHG zīhan, MoHG zeihen 'accuse', Skt. diśáti 'show, demonstrate'. Other formations are the Sanskrit intensive dédiṣṭe, the Iranian yod-present Av. disiieiti 'show', and deverbatives as Lat. dīcāre, OHG zeigōn 'show'. Cf. in general Gonda 1929. Hitt. tekkuššiie/a-[zi] 'to show' is not related (see Kloekhorst 2008). See also ► δηδέχαται.

δείλη •VAR Also δείλετο. ⇒ δείελος.

δειλός [adj.] 'cowardly, miserable' (Il.). ◄IE duei- 'fear'► •COMP ἄ-, θρασύ-, πάν-, περί-.
•DER δειλία 'cowardice, uselessness' (IA) with δειλιάω 'fear' (LXX), ἀπο-δειλιάω (Pl.) and (ἀπο-)δειλίασις (Plb.); δειλότης (H.) and denominative δειλαίνω 'be fearful' (Arist.), δειλόομαι (S. Ichn. 150?, LXX); δειλιαίνω 'make fearful' (LXX). Expressive δείλαιος 'wretched' (Emp.), δειλαιότης (sch.); δείλακρος (Ar.; Frisk 1934: 63f.), δειλακρίων (Ar.), δειλακρίνας (EM).
•ETYM Usually analyzed as *δϝει-λός or *δϝει-ελός, a stem in -λο- beside *δϝεῖος > δέος, comparable to the pair νεφέλη: νέφος. However, Kuiper Glotta 75 (1999): 63-67 finds the meaning 'cowardly' only in N 278; elsewhere in Homer, it means 'vile, worthless, miserable, wretched'. Moreover, the initial δ- does not make position, and out of 36 instances, δειλός is never found in hexameter-initial position, which shows that it was probably *δεελός. Therefore, he prefers a connection with Skt. dīná- 'weak, minor, miserable' < dih_1-no-; δειλός then reflects $deih_1$-(e)lo-.

δεῖμα [n.] 'fear' (Il.). ◄IE duei- 'fear'► •DER δειμαλέος 'timid' ([Arist.] Phgn., Mosch.; cf. θαρσαλέος, σμερδαλέος, etc.), δειματόεις (AP), δειματηρός (A. D.), δειματώδης (Aret.), Δειματίας epithet of Zeus (D. H.), Δείμας PN (cf. Schwyzer: 526). Denominative δειμαίνω 'be afraid' (h. Ap.), δειματόομαι, -όω 'to get, make frightened' (Hdt.) with δειμάτωσις. Often personified as Δεῖμος 'Fear' (Il.).

•ETYM From *δϝεῖ-μα, related to ► δείδω.

δεῖνα, ὁ (ἡ, τό) [?] 'N. N., mr. so-and-so' (Att.). ◂?▸
•VAR τοῦ δεῖνος, οἱ δεῖνες, etc., sometimes indecl. τοῦ δεῖνα (more forms in Schwyzer: 612), always with the article.
•ETYM Unknown. The explanation from plur. *τάδε ἕνα (cf. ἐκεῖνος) 'this (and) that' > *ταδεῖνα, with analogical ὁ δεῖνα, has now been abandoned: the singular forms are much more common than the plural forms. Biraud 1994: 57-69 proposes that it consists of de (proximate deixis) + pronominal en- (with distant deixis) and final adverbial -α, lit. 'Mister-this-or-that-way'.

δεινός [adj.] 'fearful, terrible', also 'awesome, strong, extraordinary', etc. (Il.). ◂IE duei-no-* 'fearful'▸ •COMP πάν-, περί-, ὑπέρ-.
•DER δεινότης (Att.), especially as a rhetorical term. Denominative δεινόω 'to exaggerate, magnify' (Th.), together with δείνωσις (Pl.) with δεινωτικός (Corn.) and δείνωμα (Phld.); δεινάζω 'to be in fear' (LXX). PN Δϝενίας (Cor.). Expressive Δεινάκων (inscr.; Schwyzer: 417).
•ETYM From *δϝει-νός, related to ► δείδω. The pair κλεινός (< *κλεϝεσ-νός): ἀ-κλε(ϝ)ής enables an alternative analysis of δεινός beside *ἀ-δϝειής (> ἀ-δεής): namely, from a basis *δϝειεσ-νός, with early contraction.

δεῖπνον [n.] 'meal' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP With -δεῖπνον as a second member: 1. substantives ἀριστό-, λογό-, ψευδό-; 2. Bahuvrīhis in -δειπνος like ἄ-, σύν-, φιλό-. As a first member: δείπνηστος (-ός), scil. καιρός 'time for eating' (ρ 170), from δεῖπνον and ἐδ- 'eat' (with compositional lengthening), with το- as in δορπηστός (s.v. ► δόρπον) and ► ἄριστον; also δειπνηστύς 'id.' (H.).
•DER Diminutive δειπνίον (Ar.), δειπνάριον (Diph., AP). δειπνῖτις (στολή) 'cloth for meal' (D. C.). δειπνοσύνη = δεῖπνον (Matro; parodizing); Δειπνεύς [m.] a hero in Achaia (Ath.). Denominative δειπνέω 'to have δεῖπνον' (Il.), whence δειπνητής 'guest' (Plb.) with δειπνητικός (Ar.) and δειπνητήριον 'dining room' (J.). δειπνίζω 'to entertain (a guest)' (Od.) with δειπνιστήριον 'dining room' (Mantinea I^a); on δειπνέω and δειπνίζω see Schwyzer: 736.
•ETYM No etymology; perhaps of Pre-Greek origin. Fur.: 339 assumes that it derives from *δαιπνον and compares ► δάπτω, Lat. daps, damnum, etc.

δειράς, -άδος [f.] 'height, mountain ridge' (h. Ap.). The exact mg. is uncertain; see DELG. ◂PG?(S)▸ •DIAL Cret. δηράς.
•COMP As a second member in ὑψί-δειρος.
•DER Without suffix (or from δειρή; see below): δειραῖος 'hilly' (Lyc.). Also δεῖρος· λόφος. καὶ ἀνάντης τόπος 'ridge; steep place' (H.); derived from ὑψί-δειρος?

•ETYM On the assumption that δειράς goes back to *δερσάς, it was connected with Skt. dṛṣád- 'rock, millstone', but this etymology must be abandoned because -ad-* is not an IE suffix (Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 741f.). Alternatively, Ehrlich KZ 39 (1906): 569f. posited a pre-form gʷerio-*, relating it to ► βορέας, etc. (s.v.; also Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 248). However, Miller Glotta 54 (1976): 159ff. showed that the Attic word is epic, and probably Homeric in origin, so that it can reflect δερϝ-αδ- (which also matches Cret. δηράς), which makes a connection with Att. δέρη 'neck, ridge' possible (for the semantics, cf. the gloss δεῖρος· λόφος H.). Although there are no other indications, the suffix may point to Pre-Greek origin. See ► δέρη.

δειρή ⇒ δέρη.

δειριᾶν [v.] · λοιδορεῖσθαι. Λάκωνες 'to abuse [Lacon.]'; δειρεῖοι· λοίδοροι 'railers'. οἱ αὐτοί; δερίαι· λοιδορίαι 'reproaches' (H.; Bechtel 1921, 2: 370 corrects into δεριᾶν, δεριαῖοι.; van Herwerden 1910: 192 into δηριῆν, etc.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Bezzenberger BB 16 (1890): 248 and Zupitza 1896: 78 have implausibly suggested connections with Skt. járate 'crackles, roars, sounds', OHG queran 'tipple', etc.; so far, the word remains without etymology. See also ► λοιδορέω.

δεῖσα [f.] 'slime, filth' (pap. II^a, Suid., EM), δείσ-οζος 'having a bad smell' (AP). ◂?▸ •COMP Compound ἄδειος· ἀκάθαρτος. Κύπριοι 'filthy (Cypr.)' (H.) with loss of -σ-, as is regular in Cypr.
•DER δεισαλέος (Clem. Al., Suid., H.), δεισαλία = ἀκαθαρσία (Thd., H.); cf. Debrunner IF 23 (1908-1909): 23f. and 38.
•ETYM Unknown. Solmsen 1909: 236f. connects the word with OCS židъkъ 'succosus, ὑδαρός' and Ru. žídkij 'thin, fluid, slim'. See also Lasso de la Vega Emerita 22 (1954): 89.

δεισίας [acc.pl.f.] κρεῶν 'of meat' (IG 2², 1356 [Attica IV$^{a\ init}$]). ◂?▸ •VAR Also δεισιάδα· τὴν μοῖραν 'lot', οἱ δὲ διμοιρίαν 'double share' (H.), cf. διχάς 'half', μονάς 'unit', etc. (Chantraine 1933: 358).
•ETYM Unknown.

δέκα [num.] 'ten' (Il.). ◂IE deḱm* 'ten'▸ •COMP 'eleven', 'twelve': ἕν-, δώ-, also δυώ-, δυό-.
•DER Inherited (see below) δέκατος (Arc. Lesb. δέκοτος, cf. Arc. δυώδεκο) 'tenth'; fem. δεκάτη (sc. μερίς) 'the tenth' (IA) with δεκατεύω 'to exact tithe' (IA), with δεκάτευμα (Call.), δεκάτευσις (D. H.), δεκατεία (Plu.), δεκατευτής (Harp.) and δεκατευτήριον 'custom house' (X.); rare δεκατόω 'id.' (Ep. Hebr.); δεκατός 'sentenced to a fine of one tenth of one's property' (Cyren.), haplological for δεκα[τω]τός or δεκα[τευ]τός; δεκάτη (scil. ἡμέρα) 'the tenth day of the month or after the birth of a child, when the name was given' (IA) with δεκαταῖος (Pl.) and δεκατισταί (Bithynia; see Chantraine 1933: 318f.). δεκάς, -άδος [f.] 'decade, group of ten, especially soldiers', δεκαδεύς 'member of a decade' (X.) also 'president of a college of ten men' (Troezen), δεκαδικός (Herm. Alex. in Phdr.), δεκαδιστής, -ίστρια (Delos) = δεκατιστής; Thphr. Char. 27, 11. δεκανός 'decurio, surveyor' with δεκανία, δεκανικός (pap., cf. Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 88), Macedonian (von Wilamowitz 1932:

401[2]). Isolated denominative ►δεκάζω 'to bribe (the judges)' (Att.) whence δεκασμός (D. H.). Uncertain OAtt. δεκᾶν (IG 1[2], 919).
•ETYM Gr. δέκα, Lat. decem, Skt. dáśa, Go. taihun, etc. derive from IE dék̂m*. Besides this, there is a collective formation in -t- (Sommer 1950: 21[1]; also on δεκάκις, -ιν), seen in Skt. daśát, Lith. dẽšimt, OCS desętь, and Alb. dhjetë 'ten', as well as in the ordinals δέκατος, Lith. dešim̃tas, OCS desętъ, Go. taihunda, etc., IE dék̂mto-*. Lat. decimus, OIr. dechmad, and Skt. daśamá-, however, derive from dek̂mHo-*. The collective δεκάς is a Greek innovation: on the suffix (= Hitt. -ant/d-), see Sommer MSS 4 (1954): 1ff. See also ►εἴκοσι and ►ἑκατόν.

δεκάζω [v.] 'to bribe (a judge)' (D. H.). ◄GR► •ETYM From δέκομαι, in the sense 'to make accept'? See Oldfather in PW 13: 2398 and Szemerényi 1964: 126-8.

δέκομαι ⇒ δέχομαι.

δεκτή [f.] · χλαῖνα, χλανίς 'upper-garment' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. von Blumenthal 1930: 25[1] implausibly assumed dissimilation of *τεκτή, which would then be related to Lat. tegō, toga.

δέλεαρ, -ατος [n.] 'decoy, bait' (IA). ◄IE? gʷelh₁-ur*► •VAR Plur. δείλατα, also δέλευρα (see below).
•DER Denominative δελεάζω 'entice' (IA) with δελέασμα (Ar.), δελεασμάτιον (Philox.), δελεασμός (Arist.) and the instrument names δελεάστρα 'baited trap' (Cratin.), δελέαστρον 'id.' (Nicoph.); with δελαστρεύς 'fisher with baited trap' (Nic.; metri causa for *δελεα-, see Boßhardt 1942: 68). With the same mg. δείλατα [pl.] (Call. Fr. 458), δελήτιον (Sophr.; δελῆτι· δελέατι H.), δέλετρον (Numen. apud Ath., Opp.; after the instr. names in -τρον), δέλος (PMagPar. 1, 939, Eust.; innovated after the neuters in -ος).
•ETYM The plural δέλευρα (Ath.) suggests that δέλεαρ goes back to an original r/n-stem *δέλε-ϝαρ; cf. the plur. ἄλευρα to *ἄλε-ϝαρ. The root form δελε- also occurs in δελήτιον < *δελεάτιον and in recent δέλετρον (see Chantraine 1933: 332f.). Late δείλατα, the only deviating form, may derive from *δέλ-ϝατα. Besides δελε-, we find the root form βλη- in βλῆρ (Alc.), from *βλῆ-(ϝ)αρ or βλέ-(ϝ)αρ. The pair βλῆρ ~ δέλεαρ points to gʷ(e)lh₁-ur with initial gʷ-*, but further cognates are unknown. Any connection with ►βιβρώσκω (s.v.; allegedly with ρ > λ dissimalation) can be excluded because that word has a root-final h₃ instead. Hardly better is the suggestion to connect Arm. klanem, aor. ekul 'to devour', Ru. glotát' 'to swallow', Lat. gula, gluttio 'to devour'. On the basis of the similarity in form, one might consider a connection with ►βάλλω instead (p.c. M. de Vaan).

δέλετρον 1 ⇒ δέλεαρ.

δέλετρον 2 [n.] 'torch' (Timach. apud Ath. 15, 699e, H.). ◄?► •ETYM Osthoff ZONF 13 (1937): 6 connects the word with Skt. jválati 'to burn fiercely, blaze'; this is correctly rejected by Hofmann (ibid.).

δελκανός [m.] an unknown fish (Euthyd. apud Ath. 3, 118b). ◄GR►

•ETYM From the river Δέλκων? Cf. Δέλκος· λίμνη ἰχθυοφόρος περὶ τὴν Θρᾴκην 'a creek rich in fish around Thracia' (H.); cf. Strömberg 1943: 85.

δέλλιθες [f.] · σφῆκες, ἢ ζῷον ὅμοιον μελίσσῃ 'wasps, or an animal similar to a bee' (H., Hdn. Gr. 1, 89). ◄PG?►
•DER δελλίθια· ἀνθρήνια. οἱ δὲ κηρία 'wasp's nests; others honeycombs' (H.).
•ETYM The formation is reminiscent of ὄρνῑ-θες. There seem no reason to connect it with ►βελόνη. The geminate λλ could continue a phoneme lʸ, in which case the word would be Pre-Greek. Forms from Lower Italy are mentioned in Rohlfs 1930: 520.

δέλτα [n.] 'the letter delta, delta of a river'. ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Gen. δέλτατος Democr. 20; further uninflected.
•DER δελτωτός 'formed like the δέλτα' (Arat., Eratosth.).
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. dāleth, properly 'gate'; see Schwyzer: 140 γ.

δέλτος [f.] 'writing tablet' (IA). ◄LW Sem.►
•DIAL Cypr. δάλτος.
•DER δελτίον (Hdt.), δελτάριον (Plb.). Denominative δελτόομαι 'write on a tablet' (A. Supp. 179). See ►ἀδεαλτωhαιε.
•ETYM Note that βύβλος 'papyrus' is also fem. (Schwyzer 1950: 34[4]). The old idea to connect δαιδάλλω, Lat. dolāre (and even e.g. OHG zelt 'tent' < PGm. teldá-* [n.]), which takes Cypr. δάλτος as an old zero grade variant, is obsolete; the difference in meaning is too large. Semitic origin is mostly accepted now (Lewy 1895: 171, E. Masson 1967: 61-65). The Cypriot form confirms this. Hebr. has delet 'gate', plur. 'columns of writing', as well as 'tablet' (Lachish); cf. also Ugar. and Phoen. dlt. Were δάλκιον· πινάκιον, οἷον γραμματίδιον both 'small tablet' (H.) formed after πινάκιον? Latte corrects it to δάλτιον, which is better.

δέλφαξ, -ακος [f.] ([m.]) 'mother swine', as opposed to χοῖρος 'young pig' (IA). ◄IE gʷelbʰu-* 'womb'► •DER Diminutive δελφάκιον (Att.) and δελφακίς (pap. and Ostr.); also δελφακῖνη 'id.' (Epich. 124, 2; Chantraine 1933: 204), adjective δελφάκειος (Pherecr.). Denominative δελφακόομαι 'become a δ.' (Ar. Ach. 786).
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. κόραξ, σκύλαξ (Schwyzer: 497, Chantraine 1933: 377ff.), but otherwise the exact origin is unclear. Probably from a word for 'womb' (δελφύς, *δέλφος? See ►ἀδελφός). Cf. ►δελφίς, ►Δελφοί.

δέλφιξ ⇒ Δελφοι.

δελφίς, -ῖνος [m.] 'dolphin' (Il.). ◄IE gʷelbʰu-* 'womb'► •VAR Late nom. -ίν.
•DIAL Lesb. βέλφινες (EM).
•DER δελφινίσκος (Arist.) and δελφινάριον (Hero). Δελφίνιος "dolphin-god", epithet of Apollo (h. Ap.); Δελφίνιον temple of Ap. Delphinios in Athens (Att.); also Δελφίδιος (Knossos). δελφίνιον and δελφινιάς (Ps.-Dsc.) plant name (after the form of the leaves, Strömberg 1940: 42); δελφίνειος (Cyran.) and δελφινίς (Luc.). Denominative δελφινίζω 'to dive like a dolphin' (Luc.).

•ETYM Cf. ἀκτίς, γλωχίς, etc. for the inflexion. Connected to a word for 'womb'; see ►δελφύς and ►ἀδελφεός. Thus, the dolphin was named after its anatomical characteristics.

Δελφοί [m.pl.] name of the inhabitants of Delphi (also attributive) and of the town itself (h. Hom.). ◂IE *g^{w}elb^{h}u- 'womb'▸ •DIAL Aeol. Βελφοί; secondary dialectal forms are Δαλφοί, Δολφοί, Δερφοί (Schwyzer: 205, 213, 275).
•DER Fem. Δελφίς 'Delphian' (Delph., S.), adjective Δελφικός (S.); δέλφιξ, -ῖκος 'table made after the Delphic tripod' (Plu., EM), = Lat. (mensa) Delphica.
•ETYM Acc. to Lundahl Namn och bygd 31 (1943): 42ff., the place was originally called *Δελφύς 'womb' after the shape of the land. The inhabitants were called *Δελφϝ-οί > Δελφοί (cf. *ἀστϝ-ός to ἄστυ); this form was then later used for the place as well.

δελφύς, -ύος [f.] 'womb' (Hp.). ◂IE *g^{w}elb^{h}u- 'womb'▸ •VAR Dor. δελφύα [f.] (Greg. Cor.; after μήτρα 'womb'?).
•DER Also δολφός· ἡ μήτρα 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Beside the feminine word for 'womb', there is the zero grade neuter Av. gərəbuš- 'young animal'; therefore, for δελφύς an s-stem may be considered as well (Schwyzer: 516). δολφός corresponds to Skt. gárbha-, Av. garəβa- [m.] 'womb'. The Greek form with a labiovelar (*g^{w}elb^h-u-, *g^{w}olb^h-o-) does not accord well with the *k- in Gm. forms like OHG kilbur [n.] 'ewe lamb', OHG kalb 'calf', etc., which therefore have to remain apart, unless we assume dissimilation $g^w > g$.

δέμας ⇒ δέμω.

δεμελέας [acc.pl.f.] 'leeches' (Epid.). ◂?▸
•DER Also δεμβλεῖς· βδέλλαι 'leeches' (H.; with -μβλ- from -μλ-). But the gloss stands between δέμει and δέμνια, so perhaps with Bücheler and Latte for (*)δεμελεῖς?
•ETYM Unexplained. There are attempts to connect the word with Lat. lumbrīcus 'intestinal worm' in Bq and WH. Connection with Alb. dhemjë 'maggot' is doubtful.

δέμνια [n.pl.] 'bed' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Rarely sing. -ιον.
•ETYM If δέμνια originally indicated the connective elements of the bed, we can consider a connection with κρή-δεμνον 'headband'. Then δέμνια could be a derivation in -ιο- to an n-stem *δέμα (see ►δέω 'bind'). δέμω 'to build' has also been adduced (Meister BB 11 (1886): 176).

δέμω [v.] 'to build' (Il.). ◂IE *demh$_1$- 'build'▸ •VAR Aor. δεῖμαι, perf. med. δέδμημαι, Dor. δέδμᾱμαι.
•DIAL Myc. de-me-o-te /deme^{h}ontes/ ptc. fut. to-ko-do-mo /toik^{h}o-domos/, na-u-do-mo /nau-domos/, e-te-do-mo /entesdomos/?

•COMP Old compounds νεό-δμᾱτος, νεό-δμη-τος (Pi.). See also ►μεσόδμη. Agent noun οἰκοδόμος, to which οἰκοδομέω 'to build'; adjectival ναο-, πυργο-δόμος 'building of temple, fortifications'.
•DER δέμας (only nom. and acc.) 'bodily shape, outward appearance' (Il.) with analogical -ας, δομή 'id.' (A. R.), also = 'τεῖχος, οἰκοδομή' (H., uncertain J. AJ 15, 11, 3) with δομαῖος 'useful for building' (A. R.); see also on ►δόμος, ►δῶμα, ►δῶ.
Deverbative aor. δωμῆσαι, -ήσασθαι (A. R.; δωμήσουσιν· οἰκοδομήσουσι H.), from *δωμάω (or *δωμέω?, Schwyzer: 719), with δώμημα (Lycia), ἐνδώμησις (Smyrna I^p, etc.), δώμησις, δωμητύς H., δωμήτωρ (Man.). A short vowel appears in some late forms: δομέοντι· οἰκοδομοῦντι H., δεδομημένος (J., Aristid.) with δόμησις, δόμημα (J.), δομήτωρ (Anon. Prog. in Rh.); from οἰκο-δομέω (IA)?
•ETYM The present δέμω has a parallel in the Gm. verb Go. ga-timan, OS teman, OHG zeman 'to befit'. Dor. νεόδμᾱτος, δέδμᾱμαι are hyperdorisms, as the root had -h_1-: see Beekes 1969: 291 add. to p. 202, who adduces spellings with η in Pindar; likewise Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 316, who points to Myc. de-me-o-te. Further connected is HLuw. ta+mi-ha 'I built'.
Different from the reconstruction that the Greek data require (in my view), is that of LIV^2 with *-h_2 (s.v. 1. *demh$_2$-). See further ►δεσπότης.

δέν [n.] 'something' (Democr. 156). ◂GR▸ •VAR Gen. δενός (Alc. 76; uncertain).
•ETYM From οὐδέν, μηδέν; cf. Leumann 1950: 108[68].

δενδαλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'kind of barley-cake' (Nicopho, Eratosth.); δενδαλίδας· οἱ μὲν ἄνθος τι, ἄλλοι τὰς λευκὰς κάχρυς, οἱ δὲ τὰς ἐπτισμένας κριθὰς πρὸ τοῦ φρυγῆναι, οἱ δὲ τὰς ἐκ κριθῶν μάζας γενομένας 'flower; white parched barley; winnowed barley corns for roasting; cake produced from barley corns' (H.). The α is short in Nicophon. ◂PG?(O)▸ •VAR Also δανδαλίς H., Pollux.
•ETYM Cf. σεμίδᾱλις 'fine wheat flour'; further unknown. Nevertheless, the last word is probably from Akkadian samīdu. One may consider a reduplication da/e-n-dali- with prenasalization, in which case δενδαλίς could be Pre-Greek.

δενδίλλω [v.] 'to turn the eyes to, glance quickly' (I 180, A. R. 3, 281, S. Fr. 1039). ◂?▸
•DER δενδίλλει· σκαρδαμύττει, διανεύει, σημαίνει, ἀτιμάζει, σκώπτει 'he blinks, winks; nods, beckons; indicates; does not respect; jeers at' (H.). Here Δένδιλος, Decourt 1995: n° 50, 40?
•ETYM Although δενδίλλω certainly has intensive reduplication, its etymology is unknown. For suggestions, see Wood Class. Phil. 9 (1914): 145, Charpentier KZ 47 (1915): 183, Fraenkel Gnomon 22 (1950): 239, and Grošelj Živa Ant. 2 (1952): 66f. δενδίλλω has nothing to do with δα(ν)δαίνω, which may be Pre-Greek (from da(n)-dan-yω).

δένδρεον [n.] 'tree' (Hom., Pi.). ◂IE? *doru, dreu- 'tree'▸ •VAR Also δένδρον (Att.); δένδρος [n.], also [m.], (Ion. Dor.; see below); gen. δένδρεος (Hdt.), see Schwyzer: 583.

•COMP 1. substantives like καρυό-, λιθό-, ῥοδό-, σταφυλό-δενδρον; 2. many bahuvrīhis in -δενδρος.
•DER δενδρ-ύφιον (Thphr.; see Schwyzer: 471), δενδρίον (Agathocl.). δενδρώδης 'rich in trees' (Hp.), δενδρήεις 'rich in trees' (Od.), δενδρίτης, -ῖτις 'belonging to the tree', also name of a stone (Thphr.), rare δενδρώτης, -ῶτις 'grown with trees' (Hdn., E.); δενδρικός 'belonging to a tree' (Thphr.), δενδριακός 'id.' (AP), δένδρινος 'id.' (gloss.), δενδραῖος 'from trees' (Nonn.), δενδράς [f.] 'id.' (Nonn.). δενδρών and δένδρωμα 'thicket' (Aq.). Denominative δενδρόομαι, -όω 'to grow to a tree, change into a tree' (Thphr.) with δένδρωσις (Thphr.). On δενδρυάζω see ►δενδρύω.
•ETYM The form δένδρος is modelled after the plural forms δένδρεα, -έων (to δένδρεον). The usual Attic form δένδρον is also secondary (cf. ἀδελφός from ἀδελφεός?); see Wackernagel 1916: 109f., Shipp 1967: 21f., 55. δένδρεον < *δένδρεϝον agrees with the Gm. word for 'tree': Go. triu, OE trēow 'tree', etc., PGm. trewa-* < IE dreu-o-. But the form of the Greek reduplication is rare (not comparable with ►γάγγραινα, as per DELG). See further ►δόρυ, ►δρῦς. Janda 1997 assumes dem-dreu̯-om 'tree planted near the house', and similarly Strunk 1995: 357-63. However, a compound with such a meaning strikes me as utterly strange.

δενδρύω [v.] 'to dive into the water' (Epid.). ◁?▷
•DER Lengthened δενδρυάζειν· τὸ καταδύνειν καὶ κρύπτεσθαι, κυρίως εἰς τὰς δρῦς, καταχρηστικῶς δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἁπλῶς δύνειν καὶ κρύπτειν 'duck and hide, mainly in the woods, but also misused for diving and hiding in general' (EM 255, 55); similar H. and Paus. Gr. Fr. 119: τὸ δρυσὶ σκέπεσθαι καὶ τὸ καθ' ὕδατος δύεσθαι κτλ. 'to hide among trees, also to dive under water, etc.'.
•ETYM Intensive reduplication of δρύεται· κρύπτεται 'hides', δρυάσαι· κατακολυμβῆσαι 'dive down' (H.; not shortened from <δεν>δρύεται, <δεν>δρυάσαι, as per Latte). δρύεται is often considered to go back to *νρύεται, which would make a connection possible with Lith. neriù, nérti 'to dive, slip into', CS vъ-nьrǫ, vъ-nrěti 'παρεισδύεσθαι', etc. (which require a set-root nerH-*). See Frisk Eranos 40 (1942): 81ff.

δέννος [m.] 'reproach' (Hdt., probably also Archil. 65 [cod. δεινοῖς]). ◁?▷
•DER Further δεννάζω (cf. κυδάζω) 'abuse, revile' (Thgn.); δεννόν· κακολόγον 'slanderous'; δενναστόν· καταγέλαστον, λοιδορούμενον μετὰ καταγέλωτος 'ridiculous, reproached with absurdity' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Untenable suggestions are contained in Bq., Pok. 466. The geminate is not expressive; see Hoffmann 1898: 583.

δεξαμενή ⇒δέχομαι.

δεξιός [adj.] '(to the) right (side)' (Il.). ◁IE deḱs-* 'right'▷ •DIAL Myc. PN de-ki-si-wo /deksiwos/; also Pamphyl. δεξιϝος (Masson Glotta 39 (1960): 111f.).
•COMP With ἀ-, ἀμφι-, ἀμφοτερο-, etc.
•DER δεξιά, Ion. -ιή 'the right hand' (Il.); δεξιτερός 'on the right side' (Il.). δεξιότης 'dexterity, cleverness' (IA). δεξιόομαι 'to take by the right hand, welcome, greet, etc.' (h. Hom., Att.) together with δεξίωσις 'greeting' Ph.), δεξιωτικός 'welcome' (Eust.), δεξίωμα 'id.' (S.; v.l. δεξίαμα); δεξιάζομαι 'to welcome' (LXX, pap.) after ἀσπάζομαι.
•ETYM If it is from *δεξιϝός (Wackernagel 1897: 11; cf. ►λαιός, ►σκαιός), the word is identical with Gaul. Dexsiva dea (see Porzig 1954a: 138). Celt. and Gm. have forms with a suffix -u̯o-, but without -i-, e.g. OIr. dess, Go. taihswa, OHG zeso, zesawer 'right', IE deḱs-uo-*. IIr. and BSl. have a derivative in -n-, e.g. Skt. dákṣiṇa- (dakṣiṇá-), Lith. dẽšinas; Albanian has djath-(t)ë, etc., perhaps from deḱs(i)-* (see Demiraj 1997 s.v.). δεξιτερός = Lat. dexter. Further, see ►δέχομαι.

δέομαι ⇒δέω 2.

δέος [n.] 'fear' (Il.; on the mg. Schadewaldt Herm. 83 (1955): 129ff.). ◁IE duei-* 'fear'▷ •DER As a second member e.g. in ἀ-δεής 'fearless' (Il.), θεουδής 'godfearing' (Od.) from *θεο-δϝεής, Att. PN Θουδῆς.
•ETYM From *δϝεῖος, a verbal abstract of ►δείδω.

δέπας, -αος [n.] 'goblet' (Il.; on the meaning see Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 357f., 364f.). ◁PG▷ •DIAL Myc. di-pa /dipas/, di-pa-e /dipa^{h}e/ [du.].
•DER Poetical lengthening δέπαστρον 'id.' (Antim.) with δεπαστραῖος (Lyc.), see Chantraine 1933: 333f.
•ETYM Pre-Greek, like many other words for cups, etc. The interchange ε/ ι is frequent (Fur.: 353ff., Hester Minos 6 (1958): 24-36). On -θρον/-στρον, see Fur.: 302[37] and 303[39]. Perhaps the same word as HLuw. tipas- 'heaven'.

δέρη [f.] 'neck, throat' (Att.). ◁?▷
•VAR Ion. δειρή (since Il.). Poetical innovation δείρεα [pl.] (Euph.), after μέλεα 'limbs', μήδεα 'genitals', χείλεα 'lips', etc.; also δέρις (Alciphr., H.), cf ῥάχις 'spine', etc.
•DIAL Arc. δερϝα, Lesb. δέρα (Sapph.).
•COMP Several poetical bahuvrīhis only with -δειρος, as a first member only δειραχθής (AP), δειροκύπελλον (Luc.), δειρόπαις (Lyc.). Epic compound (ἀπο)δειροτομέω 'to cut off the neck', as if from *δειρο-τόμος.
•DER Diminutive δειράδιον (Poll.); δέραιον 'necklace' (E.), from περιδέρ-αιον 'id.' (Ar.); δέριον 'id.' (Charis.); δειρητής = στρουθός (Nic. Fr. 123), δερβιστήρ [= δερϝ-] (EM), δερ[ρ]ιστήρ· περιδέραιον ἵππου 'collar of a horse', δερ[ρ]ιστής· κυνάγχη περιαυχένιος 'dog's collar' (H.); cf. βραχιονιστήρ s.v. ►βραχίων.
•ETYM δέρη and δειρή, which reflect PGr. δερϝᾱ (= Arc.), have been compared with Skt. grīvā́-, Ru. gríva (originally 'neck'; cf. Ru. grívna 'collar'), Latv. grīva 'mouth of a river'. Apart from the highly problematic 'extension' with -ī-, this etymology requires a reconstruction g^{w}er-ueh$_2$-*, but Aeol. δερα (instead of the expected βερα) excludes original g^w. For the same reason, ►βιβρώσκω cannot be related. A much better etymology is offered by ►δειράς, which fits the meaning well.

δέρκομαι [v.] 'to look, cast the eye (on)' (Il.). ◁IE derḱ-* 'see'▷ •VAR Aor. δρακεῖν, with "passive" forms ἐδράκην (Pi.), ἐδέρχθην (A.), perf. (with present mg.) δέδορκα.

•COMP Prefixes ἀμφι-, ἀνα-, etc.
•DER δέργμα 'glance' (A.), δεργμός 'id.' (H.), δέρξις 'sense of sight' (Orac. apud Plu., H.); with zero grade δράκος [n.] 'eye' (Nic. Al. 481). Verbal adjective as a PN Δέρκετος (Crete), δυσ-δέρκετος (Opp.). Cf. also ►δράκων, ►ὑπόδρα. Lengthened verbal form δερκιόωνται (Hes. Th. 911 at verse end; artificial?); innovation to δέδορκα (Schwyzer: 735): δορκάζων· περιβλέπων 'looking about' (H.). See also ►δορκάς.
•ETYM The perfect δέδορκα 'I see' is morphologically identical with Skt. dadárśa, Av. dādarəsa. The aorist ἔδρακον, with the old athematic form δρακέντ- (Pi.; Forssman MSS 17 (1964): 17-19), is matched by Skt. á-dṛś-an [3pl.], etc. Since Indo-Iranian has a suppletive present, Skt. páśyati, Av. spasiieiti (related to ►σκέπτομαι), δέρκομαι is probably a Greek innovation (on which δερχθῆναι, δέρξομαι, etc. were built; see Schwyzer: 758). The verbal adj. Δέρκετος may be compared with Skt. darśatá- 'visible'. Further related forms are e.g. OIr. ad-con-darc 'I have seen', Go. ga-tarhjan 'σημειοῦν, characterize', OE OS torht, OHG zoraht 'light, clear', Alb. dritë 'light' (< IE dṛk-teh_2-). More forms are recorded in LIV^2 s.v. derḱ-.

δέρω [v.] 'to skin, flay' (Il.). ◀IE der-* 'flay'▶ •VAR Also δείρω, aor. δεῖραι, fut. δερῶ, pass. δαρῆναι, δαρθῆναι, perf. δέδαρμαι.
•COMP With prefixes ἀπο-, ἐκ-, etc.
•DER δέρμα '(slayed) skin, leather' (Il.) with diminutive δερμάτιον (Pl.); adjective δερμάτινος 'of leather' (Od.), δερματικός 'of skin' (Arist.) with δερματίκιον a cloth (pap.), δερματώδης 'skinlike' (Arist.), δερματηρός in δερματηρά [f.] 'tax on hides' (pap.), δέρμητες· οἱ ἐξ ἐφήβων περίπολοι (cod. περισσοί) 'the patrolmen out of the epheboi' H., cf. γυμνῆτες, κούρητες, etc. Rare denominative ἀπο-δερματόω 'to flay' (Plb.; δεδερματωμέναι as an explanation of ἰσχαλωμέναι H.), ἀπο-δερματίζω (medic.), δερμύλλει· αἰσχροποιεῖ, οἱ δὲ ἐκδέρει 'to act filthily; strip the skin off from' (H.), Sch.; see Schwyzer: 736. Further δάρμα (Delph.; from δέρμα, Schwyzer: 274; but ἀποδάρματα Hdt. 4, 64 with ablaut?).
δέρος [n.] = δέρμα (S.); also δέρας 'id.' (Chios, E.); δάρος· τὸ βουτύπιον 'ox-butcher' (H.). δορά 'flayed skin' (IA); with δορεύς 'flayer', also a throw with the dice (Herod.), δορίς 'sacrificial knife' (Com.), δορικός 'of skin' (Hp.), δορόω 'smear' (inscr.) with δόρωσις, δορώσιμος (pap.), ἐνδόρωμα (inscr.). δορός 'leather sack' (β 354; 380). δέρρις [f.] 'skin', especially as a technical term for screens, etc. used in a siege (Th.), from *δέρ-σις; here δέρριον· τρίχινον σακίον 'small bag of hair' (H.), δερρίσκος (Att.).
Regular zero grade δάρσις (Gal.). δέρτρον 'caul, membrane' (λ 579, etc.), and δέτρον (H., Et. Gud.). δερτον (accent unknown) 'flayed sheep' (Mykonos). δάρτης 'flayer' (gloss.). Verbal adj. δρατός (Ψ 169), δαρτός (Milete V^a); with δάρτινον· πέπλον λινοῦν 'linen cloth' (H.). See also on ►δῆρις 'battle' and ►δόρκαι.
•ETYM δέρω is related to e.g. Go. dis-, gatairan 'to tear up, destroy', OHG (fir-)zeran 'id.', MoHG (ver)zehren; Lith. derù, dir̃ti (dìrti) 'to flay', OCS derǫ, dьrati 'to flay', and further Sanskrit with a root aor. dárt [3sg.inj.] 'to split' and a nā-present dṛṇā́ti. For the formation, we may compare the aorist ἔδειρα < *ἔδερσα with Skt. dárṣat [subj.]. Also, δάρσις is matched by Skt. dṛ́ti- 'sack', Go. ga-taurþs 'destruction', and

Ru. dert' 'newly cleared land'; and likewise, δρατός, δαρτός with Skt. dṛtá-. A yod-present (cf. δείρω) is found in Lith. diriù 'flay' and Skt. dīryate. Further forms are in LIV^2 s.v. der-*.

δεσπότης, -ου [m.] 'master (of the house), lord' (Pi.; on its absence in Homer [δέσποινα Od.] see Wackernagel 1916: 209 A. 1). ◀IE dems-pot-* 'lord of the house'▶
•COMP In compounds with first member αὐτο-, οἰκο-, φιλο-.
•DER δέσποινα 'mistress of the house, lady' (Od.); δεσποινικός 'in service of the queen' (PMasp. 88, 10, VI^p); also δεσπότις 'id.' (S.), rare δεσπότειρα (S. Fr. 1040), δεσπότρια (sch. E. Hec. 397); on the feminine forms Fraenkel 1912: 27; on MoGr. δεσποινίς Schwyzer: 133. Rare diminutive δεσποτίσκος (E.), δεσποτίδιον (Aristaenet.). Adjective δεσπόσυνος 'belonging to the lord' (Tyrt., h. Cer.), with δεσποσύνη 'lordship' (Hdt.); δεσπόσιος 'id.' (A.), δεσποτικός (Pl.), δεσπότειος (Lyc.). Denominatives: 1. δεσπόζω 'to be lord, rule' (IA); δέσποσμα (Man.). 2. δεσποτέω 'id.', mostly pass. 'to obey a δ.' (A.). 3. δεσποτεύω 'id.' (LXX); δεσποτεία (Pl.).
•ETYM Cf. Skt. dámpati- (also, in two words, pátir dán), Av. dąng paitiš 'lord'. In Greek, it became a fixed compound, which changed its flexion from an i-stem (see ►πόσις) to that of an ā-stem (cf. ἀγκυλο-μήτης beside μῆτις; Schwyzer: 451). δέσποινα is from δεσ-ποτ-νι̯α. The first part, IE dems (whence Gr. δεσ-, Skt. dam-), is the genitive of a word for 'house' (see ►δόμος).

δεταί ⇒ δέω 1.

δευκής ⇒ ἀδευκής.

δεύομαι •VAR δεύω. ⇒ δέω 2.

δεῦρο [adv.] '(to) here', also as interj. and imperative ('come here'). ◀IE de-u-ro*? '(to) here'▶ •VAR Here belongs the plur. δεῦτε (Il.); rare sing. δεῦρε (Att. inscr.; after the imperatives in -ε); also δευρί (Ar., And.) with deictic -ῑ; Aeol. δεῦρυ (Hdn.) like ἄλλυ-(δις) 'from elsewhere', δεύρω Γ 240 (Hdn.) after πρόσ(σ)ω 'forwards'.
•DIAL Myc. de-we-ro-(a_3-ko-ra-i-ja), perhaps containing /dewero-/, a part of the kingdom of Pylos.
•ETYM The Greek word starts with the demonstrative adverb *δε (cf. the postposition -δε). Cf. further Lacon. πέδευρα· ὕστερα 'later' (H.).
Regarding the second part analyzed as -u-ro, the Greek form recalls the synonymous Lith. aurè and Av. auuarə (see Nyberg in Boëthius 1932: 237ff.). Compare further Arm. ur '(to) where?', from ure* (cf. ure-k' 'to some place'), and U uru 'illo'. See Ruijgh Minos 12 (1972): 441-50 for a Greek derivationas de-u* + -(e)ro-*, which is taken up by DELG Supp.

δεύτερος [adj.] 'second', in order and time, also in status (Il.). ◀GR▶ •DER δευτεραῖος 'belonging to the second day' (Hdt.; from ἡ δευτέρα [ἡμέρα], cf. Schwyzer: 596); δευτερεῖα (sc. ἆθλα) [n.pl.], later also -ον and as an adjective (Hdt.; after ἀριστεῖα); δευτερίας (οἶνος) 'bad wine, made from the draff (στέμφυλα)'

(Nicopho [?], Dsc.; after the wine names in -ίας, Chantraine 1933: 94f.; also δευτερίναρ (Lacon.) (H.); δευτέριον 'afterbirth' (Aq.). Denominative δευτερεύω 'to be second' (Plb.), δευτεριάζω 'id.' (Ar. Ec. 634); δευτερόω 'to repeat' (LXX) with δευτέρωσις (LXX) and δευτέρωμα (Eust.). Beside δεύτερος rarely the superlative δεύτατος (T 51, Mosch.).
•ETYM Although δεύτερος is usually analyzed as a comparative of δεύομαι (see ►δέω 2), so originally 'who stays behind, the following', Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 317f. argues that it is improbable that -τερος should have been added to a verbal stem, and suggests that it was added to an adverbial stem *δευ instead (perhaps seen in δεῦτε).

δεύω 1 [v.] 'to make wet' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. δεῦσαι.
•COMP δευσοποιός 'steeped in color, fast', metaph. 'imperishable' (Pl.).
•DER δεύσιμος (τόπος Sch. M 21), from *δεῦσις (Arbenz Die Adj. auf -ιμος), or directly from δεῦσαι; uncertain δεύματα κρεῶν (Pi. O. 1, 50); also δευτήρ 'kettle' (auct. apud Poll. 10, 105). δευσοποιέω and δευσοποιία (Alciphr., Poll.); δευσο-ρούσιος (*PMasp.*VI^p; cf. ῥούσιος [from Lat. russeus 'reddish']). πηλοδευστέω 'to make mortar' (Att.) from *πηλο-δεύστης.
•ETYM Unexplained; ►διαίνω has been compared. Could the word be connected with δύω 'to dive, enter' as 'to immerse' (Van Beek p.c.)?

δεύω 2 ⇒ δέω 2.

δέφω [v.] 'to soften (with the hand), masturbari' (Ar., Eub.). ◄PG► •VAR Also med.; aor. ἐδέψατο (Hippon.)? See Scheller MSS 6 (1955): 88ff. Present δέψει (-εῖ?) [3sg.] (Hdt. 4, 64); aor. ptc. δεψήσας (μ 48).
•DER δεφιδασταί [m.pl.] members of a guild of fullers (Argos), with -αστής, -ιστής denoting membership (Chantraine 1933: 317ff.), otherwise unclear; via *δεφίς, *-ιδος? δέψα 'tanned skin' (Suid.); ἀδέψητος (υ 2; 142, etc.).
•ETYM The present δέψω (cf. ἕψω) beside δέφω seems to have an s-enlargement, but the other instances in Schwyzer: 706 are not completely comparable. Petersson KZ 47 (1918): 285 compared the Arm. denominative top'em 'to beat' and SCr. dépati 'to butt, slay', Pol. deptać 'to tread', which, however, are semantically rather distant and do not correspond phonologically. ►διφθέρα has also been compared, which, if connected, certainly points to Pre-Greek origin, as does, in fact, the variation between -φ- and -ψ- (cf. especially δέψα; Fur.: 263, etc., who also connects διφάω). Lat. depsō, -ĕre is borrowed from Greek.

δέψω ⇒ δέφω.

δέχομαι [v.] 'to take, accept, receive, etc.' (Att.). ◄IE dek̑-* 'take, accept'► •VAR δέκομαι (Ion. Aeol. Cret.), aor. δέξασθαι (Il.). 3pl. δέχαται (M 147), epic aor. ptc. δέγμενος, 1sg.ind. ἐδέγμην, etc. (metrically conditioned), προτί-δεγμαι· προσδέχομαι 'I am received' (H.; cf. Debrunner 1956: 77ff.; on the analogical voiced aspirated and voiced stop see Schwyzer: 772 and 769).
•DIAL Myc. de-ka-sa-to /deksato/, de-ko-to /dekto/; ra-wo-do-ko /lāwo-dokos/, cf. Λαόδοκος (Il.).

•COMP With prefixes: ἀνα-, ἀπο-, εἰσ-, etc.
•DER Numerous derivatives, especially with prefix: 1. -δόκος as a second member in compounds (Il.; also Att.), e.g. ἰο-δόκος 'receiving arrows' (epic), δωρο-δόκος 'accepting presents, corruptible' (Att.); also the simplex ►δοκός 'beam'; δοχός 'container' (Thphr., H.). 2. δοκάν· θήκην 'case' (H.); also in ἀν-δοκά 'surety' (Cret.), ἐσ-δοκά 'contract' (Arc.), etc., (ἀνα-, ἐκ-, etc.) δοχή (Att.) with δοχαῖος (Nic.), δοχικός (pap.); ἀνδοκεύς 'guarantor' (H.; Dor., cf. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 91); (ἐκ-, ὑπο-, etc.) δοχεύς 'receiver, etc.' (Hell. and late); πανδοκεύς 'innkeeper' (retrograde formation); to δοχεύς: (ἐκ-, ὑπο-, etc.) δοχεῖον 'container' (Hell. and late). 3. (ἀπό-, ἔκ-, etc.) δέξις 'reception' (Hdt.) with δέξιμος 'acceptable' (pap.). 4. (ἐκ-, δια-, etc.) δέκτωρ 'who accepts' (A.). 5. (ἀπο-)δεκτήρ 'collector', an official (X.) with the fem. δέκτρια (Archil.). 6. δέκτης 'beggar' (δ 248); ἀπο-, ὑπο-δέκτης 'collector' (Att., Hell. and late); with (ἀνα-, ὑπο-, etc.) δεκτικός 'fit for accepting' (Arist.); ὑποδέξιος 'id.' (Hdt.), ὑποδεξίη 'friendly reception' (I 73). 7. ἀρι-►δείκετος s.v.; 8. ►δεξαμενή 'water collector' (ptc. δεξαμένη with oppositive accent).
See also on ►δόκιμος, ►δόχμη; for δόκανα, δοκάνη see on ►δοκός.
Deverbative verbs: δοκέω, δοκάζω, προσ-δοκάω, etc., see on ►δοκεύω. On δεκανᾶται· ἀσπάζεται 'welcome, salute' (H.) see ►δειδίσκομαι. See further ►δεκάζω (from δεκάς) and ►δέκα.
•ETYM There are several forms from IE dek̑-, dok̑-* which can be compared with δέκομαι: Lat. decet 'it is fitting' with decus [n.] (~ Skt. dáśas-* in daśas-yáti 'honor', MIr. dech 'the best'; cf. also δεξιός), dignus, doceō, etc. Therefore, δέκομαι may originally have meant 'to consider something appropriate'.
From Armenian, compare tesanem, aor. tesi 'to see' (cf. δοκεύω for the meaning), but the appurtenance of Arm. ənçay 'gift' and Slavic and Germanic words like OCS dešǫ, desiti 'to find' (see ►δήω), OHG gi-zehōn 'to order' is uncertain.
Skt. dāśnóti, dā́ṣṭi, dā́śati 'to bring a sacrifice, honor' also belongs here, being an originally reduplicated present de-dk̑-* (there is no need to assume an old lengthened grade). From within Greek, we can connect the word with ►δεξιός, from dek̑s-* with a zero grade s-suffix (cf. Lat. decus), with an adverbial loc. dek̑si* 'right'. See also δοκεύω under ►δοκέω.

δέω 1 [v.] 'to bind' (Il.). ◄IE deh*$_1$- 'bind'► •VAR Aeol., etc. δίδημι (see below), aor. δῆσαι, perf. med. δέδεμαι (Il.), with δέδεκα (Att.), aor. pass. δεθῆναι (Att.).
•COMP Often with prefixes like ἀνα-, κατα-, ὑπο-, συν-, etc.
•DER Verbal nouns: 1. -δημα (as a simplex [= Skt. dā́man-, see below] only sch. A. R. 2, 535) notably in ὑπόδημα 'shoe, sandal' (Od.) with ὑποδημάτιον (Hp.), ὑποδηματάριος 'shoemaker' (Hypata II^p), διάδημα 'band, diadem' (X.) with διαδηματίζομαι (Aq.); secondary zero grade in δέμα (Plb.). 2. δεσμός, plur. also δεσμά, δέσματα 'band, fetter' (Il.) with several derivatives: δέσμιος 'fettered' (trag.), δεσμίης· μαστιγίας, ὅς ἄξιός ἐστι δεσμῶν 'a worthless slave, who deserves imprisonment' (H.), δεσμίς (Hp.), δεσμίδιον (Dsc.), δεσμάτιον (sch.), δεσμώματα [pl.] 'fetters' (A.); δεσμώτης 'prisoner' and δεσμωτήριον 'prison' (IA); denominative δεσμεύω 'bind, fetter' (Hes.) with rare δεσμευτής (sch.), δεσμευτικός (Pl.), δεσμευτήριον (pap.), δέσμευσις (pap.); δεσμέω 'id.' (Hell. and late) with δέσμημα (Tz.); ἀναδέσμη 'band for the hair of women' (Χ 469), δέσμη 'bundle' (Att.). 3. δέσις 'binding, etc.' (Pl.), especially ὑπό-δεσις 'binding of shoes, sandals' (IA). 4. δεταί [pl.] 'torch, fire' (Λ 554, Ar. V. 1361, H.); rather verbal noun 'binding, bundle' than from δετός (Opp.); diminutive δετίς (Gal.). 5. δητοί [pl.] 'bundle' (Sammelb. 1, 5, III^p). 6. -δετήρ, -δέτης in ἀμαλλο-δετῆρες 'binders of sheaves' (Σ 553, 554; see Chantraine 1933: 323), ἀμαλλο-δέται (Theoc., AP) as ἱππο-δέτης (S.), κηρο-δέτας (E. [lyr.]), etc. On ►δέμνια, ►κρήδεμνα, see s.vv.

•ETYM Gr. δετός (in διά-δετος A., δετός Opp.) and Skt. ditá- 'bound', correspond directly, just as δῆμα (ὑπό-δημα, etc.) and Skt. dā́man- 'band', although they could as well be parallel formations. Of the Greek presents, δίδημι (Λ 105) is probably an innovation on the basis of δήσω, δῆσαι, etc. after θήσω: τίθημι (but, according to LIV^2 s.v. deh$_1$-, following Rasmussen and Tucker, a relatively old innovation). The ε-vowel in δέω, δέσις, δετός, etc. (like that in τί-θε-μεν, θέσις, etc.) must be the zero grade dh$_1$- beside the full grade deh$_1$-* in δήσω, etc. Furthermore, we have Skt. pres. -dyati (ā́-dyati) 'bind' from dh$_1$-i̯e-ti* and perhaps Hitt. tii̯a [impv.] (Melchert apud Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).

δέω 2 [v.] 'to miss, lack, be in need of', med. also 'to ask'. ◄IE deu(s)-* 'miss, want, need'► •VAR δέομαι (IA), δεύω, δεύομαι (Aeol., epic Il.), impersonal δεῖ, δεύει, aor. δεῆσαι, δεηθῆναι, epic ἐδεύησεν (ι 483 = 540; δῆσεν Σ 100 is, if correct, an innovation to δεῖ), fut. δευήσομαι.
•DER δέησις 'need, request' (Att.) with δεητικός (Arist.), δέημα 'request' (Ar. Ach. 1059). To ἐπιδέω, -ομαι, ἐπιδεύομαι 'need': ἐπιδεής, ἐπιδευής 'in need of' (Schwyzer 513); to ἐνδέω, ἐνδεῖ, ἐνδέομαι 'need': ἐνδεής (IA) with ἔνδεια (Att.) < *ἐνδέεια, ἐνδέημα (pap.).
•ETYM δέω, δεύω may derive from *δέϝ-ω, but are probably also the regular development of *δεύσ-ω. In the latter case, we could directly connect Skt. doṣa- 'lack' < IE douso-, although this is doubted by LIV^2 s.v. deu̯s- and Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 749 s.v. doṣ-. Perhaps ►δυσ- belongs here; on δεῖ, see Goodell Class. Quart. 8 (1914): 91ff. and Bernardette Glotta 43 (1965): 285ff.

δή [interj.] 'even, indeed, right', emphatic pcl. (Il.). ◄IE? de*► •VAR Like δέ, mostly in the second position of the sentence; also in more or less fixed connections like ἤ-δη, ἐπει-δή, δῆ-θεν, δῆτα, etc.; see Schwyzer 1950: 562f.
•ETYM Perhaps a case form (instrumental?) of a demonstrative; it would be identical with Lat. dē, OIr. dí 'away from'. See de Vaan 2008 s.v. dē. δέ arose by weakening of δή. See also ►δαί.

δηαί [f.pl.] 'barley corns' (EM 264, 13: δηαὶ προσαγορεύονται ὑπὸ Κρητῶν αἱ κριθαί). ◄PG?►
•VAR δητταί· αἱ ἐπτισμέναι κριθαί 'winnowed barley' (H.).
•ETYM Schulze 1892: 288^4 (p. 289) interprets the word as διαί, i.e. ►ζεαι, which would indeed be possible in Cretan, according to DELG. Latte mentions δατῶναι· ζειαί H.; therefore, Pre-Greek origin remains a serious possibility as well (thus also Fur.: 337, etc.).

δηδέχαται ⇒ δειδίσκομαι.

δηθά ⇒ δήν.

Δηϊάνειρα ⇒ δήϊος.

δήϊος [adj.] 'inimical, terrible', of πῦρ 'fire', also of πόλεμος 'war', ἀνήρ 'man' (Il.); by false connection with δαῆναι: 'able, experienced' (APl.). ◄?, PG?►
•DIAL Dor. δάϊος, δᾷος.
•DER δηϊοτής, -τῆτος [f.] (on the oxytonesis, cf. Schwyzer: 528) 'battle, struggle, death' (Hom.); partly as if from δηϊόω (Trümpy 1950: 136ff.). Denominative δηϊόω, δηόω 'slay, kill' (Il.), 'destroy' (IA); isolated δηϊάασκον (A. R. 2, 142) after epic -αασκ-. Thence δηϊοῦσα epithet of κώνειον "the killing" (Ps.-Dsc.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 64). Instead of δηϊόω, Wackernagel 1916: 170f. proposes to read in the epic δηΐω (δήϊον for δῄουν Ε 452, etc.), as A. R. 3, 1374 and H. have δῄειν· πολεμεῖν, φονεύειν 'to make war, murder', which can be a denominative of *δηΐς in Δηΐ-φοβος, etc. (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 49f.). Among the PNs in Δηϊ- note Δηϊ-άνειρα (S., etc.), formed after ►ἀντιάνειρα, κυδι-άνειρα, etc., with verbal reinterpretation of the first member: 'killing the man'; cf. Sommer 1934: 41.
•ETYM The frequent epic expression δήιον πῦρ (verse end) and πυρὸς δηίοιο (combined with θεσπιδαὲς πῦρ [M 177, etc.]) suggests a meaning 'burning', which makes a connection with δαίω 'burn' likely. However, Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 318 observes that Myc. Da-i-qo-ta (cf. Δηιφόντης) has no -ϝ-, so it must have had an -h-, /Dā^{h}i-/, which shows that the word is non-IE (see Chantraine 1942: 107 and Leumann 1950: 129).

δηκανόωντο •VAR *δηκνύμενος. ⇒ δειδίσκομαι.

δηλαυγῶς [adv.] · ἄγαν φανερῶς 'very conspicuous' (H.), Ev. Marc. 8, 25 (v.l.). ◄GR► •ETYM For *τηλαυγῶς, influenced by δῆλος. See Blass-Debrunner-Funk 1961 §119, 4.

δηλέομαι [v.] 'to hurt, damage' (Il.). ◄?, PG?►
•VAR Aor. δηλήσασθαι (δᾶλ- Theoc. 9, 36; 15, 48); El. κα-δαλέοιτο, κα-δαλέμενοι (κα-ζαλ-), perf. δεδήλημαι.
•DER δήλημα 'damage, destruction' (Od.; on the mg. Chantraine 1933: 183), and δηλήμων 'damaging, ruin' (Hom.); δήλησις 'damage' (Ion., Thphr.); δηλήεις 'destructing' (Nic.), after nominal αἰγλήεις, etc.; δηλητήριος 'id.' (Teos V^a, etc.), -ιον 'poison' (Hp. Ep.); δηλητήρ only Hom. Epigr. 14, 8; δηλητηριώδης (Dav. Proll.).
•ETYM Schwyzer: 720 took δηλέομαι as an iterative-intensive deverbative. A root variant with short α is found in φρενο-δᾰλής 'destroying the mind' (A. Eu. 330 lyr.), δάλλει· κακουργεῖ 'does evil' (H.), as well as in παν-δάλητος 'destroyed' (Hippon. 2); and further, but with unknown quantity, in ἀδαλές· ὑγιές 'healthy', δάλαν· λύμην 'maltreatment', δαλῆ· κακουργῇ, δαλήσασθαι· λυμήνασθαι, ἀδικῆσαι 'maltreat, do injustice' (H.). Coversely, the connection with ►ζά-δηλος (Alc., s.v.) is doubtful. Under the assumption of an original meaning 'split', δηλέομαι was connected with δαιδάλλω, δέλτος and derived from IE *del- (cf. Lat. doleō, dolor). However, the ablaut forms are incompatible, and long *ā can hardly be derived from PIE (a hyperdorism in Theoc. is improbable); therefore, the verb is probably non-IE, i.e. Pre-Greek. Hackstein 2002: 219f. implausibly argues that the long α is a secondary lengthened grade, created within the history of Greek.

δήλομαι •VAR Dor. for ►βούλομαι. ⇒βούλομαι.

δῆλος [adj.] 'clear' (Od.; ἔκδηλος E 2). ◁IE? $deih_2$- 'shine'▷ •VAR Besides δέελος 'visible' (K 466).
•DER Denominative δηλόω 'make clear' (IA) with δήλωσις, δήλωμα (Att., etc.), δηλωτικός (Hp.). Often with prefix: ἀρί-δηλος (with, through inverted writing [cf. ζα- = δα-], ἀρί-ζηλος), ἔκ-, ἔν-, ἐπί-, κατά-δηλος, etc. with ἐκδηλόω, etc. See Strömberg 1946 (index). δεϝαλῶσαι (BCH 1988, 283f., Mantinea IV[a]) has hypercorrect ϝ (RPh. 71 [1997] 156).
•ETYM The glosses δίαλον· φανερόν and διάλας· τὰς δήλας καὶ φανεράς H., dialectal for δεα-, show that δῆλος continues *δέαλος < $deih_2$-(e)lo-, cognate with ►δέατο < $deih_2$(-e)-to. This also fits ἔκδηλος in E 2 (Bechtel 1914: 98). Differently, Schulze 1892: 244 A. 2 and Chantraine 1933: 242. See also ►δέελος and ►εὐδείελος.

Δημήτηρ [f.] the Greek mother goddess (Il.). See further Schwyzer: 567f., Sommer 1948: 147. ◁?▷
•VAR Gen. -τερος and -τρος.
•DIAL Though one might expect the name in Mycenaean, it happens not to have been found so far. Δαμάτηρ (Dor., etc.), also Δωμάτηρ, Δαμμάτερι (Thess.).
•DER Δημήτριος 'belonging to Δ.' (A.), also as a PN; thence the month name Δημητριών (Attica); Δημητρίεια [pl.] 'festival for Demeter' (Samos [IV[a]], after Ἀσκληπίεια, etc.), Δημήτρια [pl.] also 'festival for Demetrios'; Δημητριασταί name of the worshippers of Demeter (Ephesus), cf. Ἀπολλωνιασταί, etc.; Δημητριακός 'belonging to Demeter or Demetrios' (D. S.); Δημήτρειοι [pl.] name of the dead (Plu.). Denominative δαματρίζειν· τὸ συνάγειν τὸν Δημητριακὸν καρπόν. Κύπριοι 'to collect the harvest belonging to Δ.' (H.). Short form Δηώ (h. Cer., etc.), whence Δηῷος and Δηωΐνη 'daughter of Δ.'.
•ETYM Taken as "Mother Earth" (Kretschmer Wien. Stud. 24 (1902): 523ff., Kretschmer Glotta 17 (1929): 240), and consisting of δᾶ, assumed to be a Pre-Greek word for 'Earth', and ►μήτηρ. However, there is no indication that ►δᾶ means 'earth', although it has also been assumed in the name of Poseidon. Derivation from *Δασ-μάτηρ < IE *dm̥s-, a supposed genitive of *dem- 'house' (cf. ►δεσπότης) by Ehrlich 1912: 62ff., should be rejected.
Pisani IF 53 (1935): 28ff. and Georgiev 1937: 9ff., 20ff. both consider the word to be Illyrian (like Δαμία, Δμία, etc.) and compare Alb. dhe 'earth' (see ►χθών); rejected by Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 31.
Cf. Messap. damatura, probably name of a goddess (Krahe 1955: 82); the Messapian word must be an adaptation of the Greek name; cf. Δειπάτυρος s.v. ►Ζεύς.
Heubeck 1961: 75-8 starts from 'Phrygian' Γδαν-μαυα/ Γδανμαα, and sees in the first element a cognate of Gr. χθών; he suggests that the form Δωμάτηρ goes back on $d^h\acute{g}^h\bar{o}n$-. However, his further connection with his Minoan-Minyan hypothesis (which would be a separate IE language) is unconvincing.

δημιουργός [m.] 'handicraftsman' (Att.). On the mg. Bader 1965. Originally a creator, in the Dorian world it designated a magistrate. See further Palmer TPS 1954: 18-53. ◁IE? deh_2-mo- 'people'▷ •VAR δημιοεργός (Od., Hdt.).
•DIAL δημιοργός (Ion.), δαμιοργός (Dor., NWGr., Arc., Boeot.), δαμιωργός (Astypal.), δαμιεργός (Astypal., Nisyr.) name of an official.
•DER δημιουργίς, δημιούργιον, δημιουργία, δημιουργικός, δημιουργεῖον; δημιουργέω with δημιούργημα.
•ETYM From *δημιο-ϝεργός, in turn from δήμια ἔργα with verbal reinterpretation of the second member after the types ψυχο-πομπός; partly from -ϝοργός. Further, see ►δῆμος.

δῆμος [m.] 'land, territory' (as opposed to the town), 'people' (Il.); in Athens also a part of the phylai, a deme. ◁IE deh_2-mo- 'people'▷ •DIAL Dor. δᾶμος.
•COMP Numerous compounds, e.g. δημοκρατία 'government of the people' (IA), after ὀλιγαρχία, μοναρχία (δημαρχία = 'the office of δήμαρχος'); further see Debrunner 1947: 11ff.
•DER Doric forms are not mentioned separately:
Substantives: δημίδιον, diminutive δημακίδιον (Ar.); δημότης, Dor. also δαμέτας (Carpathos) 'man of the people' (IA, Dor.) with two normal adjectives: δημόσιος 'belonging to the people, state, public' (IA) with δημοσιεύω intr. 'serve the state', also trans. 'make public' and δημοσιόω 'confiscate, make public' with δημοσίωσις. δημοτικός 'belonging to the people, useful for the people, democratic'; on the difference between δημόσιος and δημοτικός Chantraine 1933: 392; fem. δημότις; denominative δημοτεύομαι 'be δημότης, belong to a demos' (Att.).
Adjectives: δήμιος 'belonging to the people, public' (Od.), ὁ δήμιος (euphemistic) 'executioner' (Att., Benveniste Sprache 1 (1949): 121), δημώδης 'according to the people' (Pl.), δημόσυνος epithet of Artemis (Athens IV-III[a]), δημότερος 'belonging to the people' (Call.; after ἀγρότερος).
Denominative δημεύω [v.] 'to make public, confiscate' (Att.) with δήμευσις and δημεῖαι· αἱ τῶν δήμων συστάσεις 'meetings of the people' (H.); δημόομαι 'sing or explain publicly' (Pi.) with δαμώματα· τὰ δημοσίᾳ ᾀδόμενα 'which is sung publicly' (Ar. Pax 797); δημίζω 'act as friend of the people' (Ar. V. 699). Adverb δημόθεν 'from the people, on communal costs' (Od.).
•ETYM A morphological match is offered by Celtic: OIr. dám 'followers, crowd', OW dauu 'cliens', W daw(f) 'son-in-law', OCo. dof 'gener'; but since these are ā-stems, PIE deh_2mos was perhaps originally feminine (Pedersen 1938: 52). If the word is an m-derivative of the verb 'divide' (see ►δαίομαι), which requires the analysis deh_2-mo-, it must originally have meant 'part'. On ►δημιουργός, see s.v.

δημός [m.] 'fat of animals and men' (Il.). ◁?▷
•DER No derivatives or compounds (probably because of the identity with δῆμος).

•ETYM The word has been compared with Alb. dhjamë 'fat, pork, tallow', but Demiraj 1997: 161 thinks it may be non-IE. It hardly means just 'fluidity, wetness' (as per Frisk s.v.), so the connection with the IIr. word for 'fluid', e.g. Skt. dā́-nu- 'drip, dew', Av. dā-nu- 'river, stream', Oss. don 'water, river', is not convincing either.

δήν [adv.] 'long', also 'far' (Il.). ◄IE dueh$_2$-m 'long'► •DIAL Dor. δάν, δοάν (see below).
•DER δηναιός, Dor. δᾱν- 'living, lasting long' (Il.) with δηναιότης (Democr.) and Δηναιών month name (Erythrai) (not containing an element *αιϝος to αἰών).
•ETYM Like ►πλήν, Dor. πλᾶν prop. *'near', δήν is the old accus. of a root noun *δϝᾱ-, also seen in ►δηρός, ►δηθά. The notation δοάν (Alcm. 135) just renders δϝάν. The form δαόν· πολυχρόνιον 'lasting a long time' (H.) can be *δϝᾱ-ι̯όν, perhaps also *δαϝόν, and belonging directly to OCS dav-ьnъ 'old' (Latte gives δα<ναι>όν). For further cognates, see ►δηρός.

δήνεα [n.pl.] 'counsels, plans' (Il.). ◄IE? densos- 'counsel, skill'► •VAR δῆνος (H.).
•COMP Several compounds, mostly only known from lexicographers: ἀδηνής· ἄκακος 'guileless' H., EM (from where Semon. 7, 53 for traditional ἀληνής), ἀδηνέως (Chios, H.), ἀδανές· ἀπρονόητον 'unpremeditated', ἀδηνείη· ἀπειρία 'lack of skill', πολυδηνέα· πολύβουλον 'of many counsels' (H.).
•ETYM Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 49 (1897): 187 (also Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 518) assumed *δάνσεα, with analogical α from ►δαῆναι, ►δαΐφρων for older *δένσεα, *δένσος = Skt. dáṃsas- [n.] 'wonderful craft', Av. daŋhah- [n.] 'dexterity', IE dénsos- beside dn̥s- in δα-ῆναι, δα-ί-φρων. However, one would rather expect replacement by *δάος; see the objections in Bechtel 1914: 99 and Lasso de la Vega Emerita 22 (1954): 92, who also sees semantic problems. Wackernagel KZ 29 (1888): 137 prefers connecting δήω, which is nothing better. Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 319f. considers the word Mycenaean, with dens- giving δην- (comparing τελη-(ϝ)εντ- < *τελεσ-ϝεντ-). See also R. Schmitt 1967: 161.

δῆρις, -ιος [f.] 'battle' (Il.; cf. Trümpy 1950: 141ff.). ◄IE? der- 'split'► •DER Denominative δηρῑ́ομαι (Pi.), aor. δηρῑ́σαντο (Θ 76), act. δηρῖσαι (Thgn.), pass. δηρινθήτην (Π 756) as if from *δηρίνω; perhaps for δηρῑθήτην (Schwyzer: 761; see Chantraine 1942: 404), δηρινθῆναι (A. R.), present metrically reshaped in δηριόωντο, δηριάασθαι, etc. (Hom.; Schwyzer: 727, Chantraine 1942: 359); ptc. act. δηριώντων (Pi. N. 11, 26; for -όντων acc. to Schulze 1892: 384 A. 3), δηριόωντες (A. R. 1, 752; see Schwyzer 1950: 234, partly metrically determined). δηρίττειν· ἐρίζειν 'to contend with' (H.). Privative adjective ἀ-δήρῑ-τος 'without battle' (P 42; ἄ-δηρις AP); as a verbal adj. to δηρίομαι 'indomitable' (A. Pr. 105), 'undisputed' (Plb.).
•ETYM Formally, δῆρις seem to correspond to Skt. -dāri- 'splitting' (as a second member in epic), but the Skt. word is attested only rather late, which makes the comparison uncertain. See also ►δέρω.

δηρός [adj.] 'lasting long' (Il.). ◄IE dueh$_2$- 'long'►

•VAR Dor. δᾱρός, mostly δηρόν, δᾱρόν [adv.] 'long'. On the use Björck 1950: 126, 208, 210.
•ETYM Related to δήν, δ(ϝ)ᾱ́ν, from *δϝᾱ-ρός. The same root occurs in Hitt. tuu̯a [adv.] 'far', tuu̯ala- [adj.] 'far from' (Benveniste BSL 33 (1932): 142f.), OP duvaištam, Av. dbōištəm 'diutissime', Arm. tev-em 'to hold out' (cf. Kortlandt 2003: 102: derivation of tew), and Skt. dū-rá- 'far', Lat. dū-dum 'for a long time', etc. Not related to Arm. erkar 'lasting long', according to Kortlandt 2003: 92f.

δῆτα ⇒ δή.

δήω [v.] 'I shall find' (Il.); the future mg. is based on the perfective aspect of the verb (Schwyzer 1950: 265). ◄IE? des- 'find, look after'► •VAR Only present (except ἔδηεν· εὗρεν H.) with future meaning.
•ETYM Remarkable lengthened grade thematic root present. It has been compared with OCS dešǫ, desiti 'find' (Pedersen IF 5 (1895): 47) and Alb. ndesh 'meet' (Jokl Wien. Ak. Sb. 168: 1: 60ff, Pok. 190). See also Vasmer 1953 s.v. desitь. Narten KZ 78 (1963): 63 compared Skt. abhi-dāsati (the subj. aor. of ^{5}dā- 'be hostile').

διά [adv., prep.] 'in two, apart, through' (Il.), as a prep. 'through' (Il.); on the mg. Schwyzer 1950: 448ff. ◄IE dis 'apart'► •VAR Thess. διέ, Lesb, ζά (< δι̯α). Epic ►δα-; also διαί (A.; after καταί 'downwards', παραί 'beside', ὑπαί 'under').
•COMP Note διαμπερές, διάνδιχα; διαπρό, διέκ.
•ETYM Probably from *διh-α; related to Lat. dis-, OS, OE te-, OHG zi-, ze- (whence zir-, zer- through contamination with ir-, er-), Alb. ç- 'apart'. Greek has added -α after μετά, παρά, etc. Cf. ►δίς.

διαβήτης [m.] 'circle' (Ar.), 'compass' (Pl., Plu.), later 'siphon' (Colum., Hero) because of the formal similarity. ◄GR► •ETYM From διαβαίνειν, 'spread the legs' (see Kalbfleisch PhW 64 (1944); contra Strömberg 1944: 89). The meaning 'diabetes' is modern. See ►βαίνω.

διάγγαρον [adj.] · δικέφαλον 'two-headed' (H.; alphabetically at the wrong place). ◄?►
•ETYM Schmidt and Latte consider this word corrupt. von Blumenthal 1930: 24 attempted to identify it as Illyrian.

διάζομαι ⇒ ἄττομαι.

διαίνω [v.] 'to make (the eyes) wet, cry' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. διῆναι.
•DER διαντός (Arist.), διαντικὸς (Arist.); δίανσις (Gal.). On ►διερός (Hes.), see s.v.
•ETYM Unknown. See Bechtel 1914 s.v.

δίαιτα [f.] 1. 'mode of life, prescribed way of life, dwelling' (Pi., Ion., also Att.; on the mg. 'ornaments' in LXX Del Medico ByzZ 44, 413ff.); 2. 'arbitration' (Att.). ◄GR►
•DER διαιτάομαι 'feed onself, live somewhere, be somewhere' (IA), -άω 'treat as a physician' (Hp.); 2. διαιτάω 'to distinguish, be arbitrator' (Pi., Att.). διαίτημα (mostly plur.) 'way of life' (Hp.) with διατηματώδης; διαίτησις 'way of life' (Hp.); διαιτητήρια

[pl.] 'living room' (X.); διαιτητικός 'belonging to the food' (Hp.), and 'belonging to the arbitration' (Str.); uncertain διαιτί[α = διαίτησις (epist. Hadr.; Hesperia 3, 41). διαιτητής 'arbiter' (Hdt.), διαιτατέρ (Olympia VI[a]) and διαιτήσιμος 'belonging to the arbiter' (Is.; after ἐφέσιμος; cf. Arbenz 1933: 69f.); τὸ διαιτητικόν 'decision of an arbiter' (pap.). διαίτωμα (Delph. II[a]) = δίαιτα, see Chantraine 1933: 187.
•ETYM Like ἀρτάω from *ἀ(ϝ)ερτάω beside primary ἀείρω, so δι-αιτάομαι, -άω stands beside primary αἴνυμαι (see Schwyzer: 705f.); thus, it originally meant 'take out, divide', whence 'divide food, feed oneself, live' and, on the other hand, 'decide' (with reference to jurisdiction, like ►αἴτιος; cf. also ►αἶσα). δίαιτα is a retrograde formation from the verb. Only in the medical sense of 'treat as physician' is διαιτάω a denominative of δίαιτα.

διάκονιν [m.] · δυσκίνητον. Κρῆτες 'difficult to move (Cret.)' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

διακόνιον [n.] · μάζα ἢ ζωμός, καὶ ἡ κρηπὶς τοῦ πλακοῦντος 'barley-cake or soup or sauce; bottom of a type of flat cake' (Pherecr. fr. 156), οἱ δὲ πέμματα ἐξαπτόμενα τῆς εἰρεσιώνης 'sweetmeats fastened on a wreath' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

διακονίς [f.]? · ἐπὶ ὑφῆς ἱματίου ἀνωμάλου, ὅ φαμεν κονίζειν, καὶ ἄνθρωπος ὁ μὴ πυκνός 'a coarsely-woven tunic; also a man who is not shrewd' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Latte Mnem. 3:10 (1942): 82 recalls the gloss κεκονισμένος· συνπεπλεγμένος from a sch. on Theoc. 1, 30, but this remains unclear.

διᾱ́κονος [m.] 'servant, diaconus' (IA, etc.). ◄IE ken-* 'hasten'► •VAR Ion. διήκονος; secondary διάκων (pap.).
•DIAL Myc. perhaps ka-si-ko-no if /kasi-konos/ 'worker, companion'.
•DER Fem. διακόνισσα (late; see Chantraine 1933: 110). διακονία 'service' (Att.), διακονικός (Att.). διακονέω (διη-) 'to serve, be servant' (IA) together with διακόνημα 'service' (Pl.), διακόνησις 'service' (Pl.), διακονητικός (Alex. Aphr.).
•ETYM If the formation is to be compared with that of ►ἀμφίπολος, διᾱ́κονος derives from a verb lost otherwise, or else it could be deverbal derivation of διακονέω, which would be an iterative-intensive deverbative like ►ἐγκονέω 'hurry'. δια- may have meant 'from all sides, completely'; its long vowel might have to be explained from lengthening in compounds, were it not that according to Ruijgh Lingua 25 (1970): 320 only the first vowel of the second member can be lengthened. On the meaning, see Lidén 1906: 52. Cf. also ►διηνεκής.

διᾱκόσιοι [num.] 'two hundred' (collective τὴν διακοσίαν ἵππον 'two hundred horse' Th. 1, 62). ◄IE dui-dk̑mt-* 'two hundred'► •VAR Ion. διηκόσιοι, Dor., etc. διακάτιοι.
•DER διακοσιοστός 'the twohundredth' (D. H.), ἡ διακοσιοστή name of a half percent tax in Ptolemaic Egypt (pap.); διακοσιάκις (Herod. Med.); διακοσιάπρωτοι name of the highest class of taxpayers (Aphrodisias; after δεκά-πρωτοι); διακοσιοντά-χους 'twohundredfold' (Str.; after ἑκατοντά-χους, etc.), cf. διακοσιοντάκις (Alex. Aphr.).

•ETYM The original form of the second member is -κάτιοι, which became -κόσιοι with regular assibilation τ > σ and analogical -ο- after -κοντα, -κοστός; διᾰ-, διη- is for δι- (see δίς) after τριᾰ-, τριη-κόσιοι, etc. See ►εἴκοσι, ►ἑκατόν.

διακουράζεσθαι [v.] · ἀτενὲς βλέπειν 'to behold intently'· διὰ τὸ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς κόρας λέγεσθαι 'because the eyes were called κ.' (Suid., EM 267,24). ◄GR►
•ETYM Unknown.

διάκτορος [adj.] epithet of Hermes (Hom.); by later poets, who understood it as 'messenger', also used for Iris, Athena, the Eagle of Zeus, etc. (Call.); finally also as adjective (διάκτορα ... ἔγχεα 'swords' Nonn.). Secondary διάκτωρ (AP, H.; cf. διάκων = διάκονος). ◄?► •ETYM The meaning was lost at an early date; it was used as 'διάκονος' by A. Pr. 941, and later simply interpreted as 'messenger': ἀπὸ τοῦ διάγειν τὰς ἀγγελίας 'because they carry over messages' (H.). The gloss continues, however: ἢ οἷον διατόρως καὶ σαφῶς διαλεγόμενος 'or like: said loudly and clearly'. Bechtel 1914 relates it as διά-κτορος to κτέρας: "one who disposes of treasure"(?); Östergaard Herm. 37 (1902): 333ff. takes it as god of death, based on connection with κτέρες· νεκροί 'the dead' (H.), but this is probably a guess by grammarians to explain κτέρεα as 'honors of the dead' (Solmsen IF 3 (1894): 98). Thieme 1952: 52f. objects to these explanations, and analyzes *δια-ακτ-τορος as "transmitting to the other side [of Persephoneia]"; Frisk deems this "mehr kühn als überzeugend". Janko Glotta 56 (1978): 192-195 follows Hesychius in assuming that the form was thematicized secondarily and that it meant ἡγεμών 'leader'.

διαμευστάς [acc.pl.] · ἀλαζόνας 'charlatans, cheats'; διαμευτής· ψεύστης, ἀπατεών 'liar, cheat' (H.). ◄GR?► •ETYM From *δι-αμεύομαι; see ►ἀμεύσασθαι.

διαμμοιρηδά ⇒μοῖρα.

διαμπάξ [adv.] 'right through, through and through' (trag., X). ◄GR► •ETYM From διά, ἀνά and -πάξ in ἅπαξ; perhaps modelled after ►διαμπερές.

διαμπερές [adv.] 'through and through, right through', local and temporal (Il.). ◄GR► •VAR Also with tmesis: διὰ δ'ἀμπερές (Schwyzer 1950: 426).
•DER διαμπερής [adj.] 'piercing' (Hp.); διαμπερέως (Hp.), from there ἀμπερέως· διαμπάξ 'right through' (H.).
•ETYM From διά and ἀμπείρω; cf. ἀμπείραντες 'having pierced' B 426 (διαμπείρω [Q. S.] is a secondary formation after διαπείρω). The root vowel is the same as in δια-περάω, περόνη, etc., as well as in the adj. in -ής (Schwyzer: 513). The combination δι(ά)-ἀνά, or rather -ἀΝ-, occurs also in διάνδιχα (Hom.); see ►δίχα. Cf. Strömberg 1946: 140f. and Luther 1935: 154f. See also synonymous ►διαμπάξ (A.).

διαπρύσιον [adv.] 'going through, piercing', especially of sounds, 'far stretching' (Hom.). ◄IE? *δια-πρ-υ-τ-?►
•VAR Also -ίως [adv.] (D. S.).

•ETYM διαπρύσιος arose from διαπρό 'through and through', to which *-tyo- was added (see Forssman KZ 79 (1965): 14[4]). For the unclear υ-vocalism, Aeolic origin has been proposed (Chantraine 1942: 25; for other suggestions, cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v.; Schwyzer 1950: 505; Schwyzer KZ 63 (1936): 60[1]).

διάραμα ⇒ἐξεράω.

διαττάω [v.] 'to sieve' (Att.). ◂IE *kieh$_2$- 'sieve'▸
•VAR Perf. ptc. pass. διεττημένος (διηττημένος Thphr. as if from δι-αττάω); as a simplex σῶσι [3pl.pres.] (Hdt. 1, 200), ἐττημένος (Pherecr., Att. inscr.), ἐσσημένος (Delos III[a], with Ionic -σσ-). A present in -θ- is ►σήθω.
•COMP ἀλευρό-ττησις 'flour-sieve' (Poll.), 'sieved flour' (Suid.).
•DER Verbal noun διάττησις (Plu.), also (deverbal) δίαττος· ἡ ἀλευρότ<τ>ησις, τὸ κόσκινον 'flour-sieve, sieve' (H.).
•ETYM Formerly, *(δια-)τϝαίω was posited, and the word implausibly compared with Skt. titaü- 'to sieve'. Puhvel has connected Hittite kinae-^{zi} 'to assort', which fits excellently both formally and semantically (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. for a critical note, though). We have to reconstruct a root *kieh$_2$- 'to sieve' (thus LIV[2]), from which Greek probably formed a yod-present (see also most recently RPh. 72 (1998) 124).

δίβολος [adj.] 'with double point', of a halbert or a cloth. ◂GR▸ •DER διβολία 'halbert' (Ar.), 'cloth' (Plu.); διβολέω 'harrow' (pap.).
•ETYM DELG compares βάλλω.

δῖβος [m.] name of a square on the draughtboard (AP 9, 482). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM Loan from Lat. dīvus; however, the ι is short.

διδάσκω [v.] 'to teach, instruct' (Od.). ◂IE *d(e)ns- 'teach'▸ •VAR Aor. διδάξαι (like ἀλύσκω : ἀλύξαι), perf. med. δεδιδάχθαι; post-Hom. διδασκῆσαι (Hes.), διδάξω (A.), δεδίδαχα (Pl.).
•DER διδάσκαλος [m.] ([f.]) 'teacher' (IA, h. Merc.) with διδασκαλία 'lesson, education' (Pi.), διδασκάλιον 'knowledge' (Hdt.), late in plur. 'tuition fee', διδασκαλικός 'ptng. to the teacher', διδασκαλεῖον 'school' (IA). διδαχή 'education' (IA), δίδαξις 'id.' (E.), δίδαγμα 'id.' (IA), for which cf. ταράξαι: ταραχή, τάραξις, τάραγμα; διδαγμοσύνη 'id.' (astrol.). δίδακτρα [pl.] 'teacher's fee' (Theoc.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 332); διδακτήριον 'proof' (Hp.); διδακτικός 'suitable for teaching' (Ph., NT).
•ETYM Reduplicated σκ-present of ►δαῆναι with factitive meaning < *δαh-ῆναι. Since the root was obscured, the reduplication (and partly also the σκ-suffix) spread to the non-presentic forms. See Debrunner 1937: 251ff.

δίδημι ⇒δέω 1.

διδρᾱ́σκω [v.] 'to run away' (ἀποδράς Od.; but see Ἀδρηστος below). ◂IE *dreh$_2$- 'run'▸ •VAR Aor. ἀπ-έδρᾱν, perf. ἀποδέδρακα. Also ἐκ-διδράσκω; the simplex is hardly attested, see DELG.

•DER ἀπόδρᾱσις 'escape' (Hdt.), δρᾱσμός 'flight' (Hdt.). ἄδρᾱστος 'who does not run away' (Hdt.), also as a PN Ἄδρηστος, -δραστος (Il.); fem. Ἀδρᾱ́στεια, name of Nemesis: 'from whom one cannot flee' (A.); also Ἀδρηστίνη. Lengthened verbal form δρασκάζω = ἀποδιδράσκω (Lex apud Lys. 10, 17; Zen.), ἀποδρασκάζω (Tz.); δράσκασις (H.).
δρᾱπέτης [m.] 'runaway (slave)' (Hdt.), with unclear -π- (cf. DELG), whence several derivatives like δραπετεύω [v.] 'to run away'. Note δρᾶψ (Ar. fr. 768).
•ETYM The athematic root aorist ἔ-δρᾱ-ν corresponds morphologically to Skt. drāntu [3pl.impv.] 'run', from a root *dr-eh$_2$- beside *dr-em-, seen in ►δραμεῖν, ►δρόμος. See ►ἀποδιδράσκω.

δίδυμος [adj.] 'double', substantivized plur. 'twins' (Il.), 'testicles' (LXX). ◂IE *dui-du-▸ •DIAL Myc. PN Di-du-mo /Didumōi/.
•DER διδυμᾱ́ονε [du.], -οσιν [dat.pl.] 'twins' (Hom.), as an adj. in Nonn., both plur. and sing., = δίδυμος; built on δίδυμος after ὀπάων (Chantraine 1933: 163, Schwyzer: 521); διδύμιος = δίδυμος (Sammelb. 1068); medical terms διδύμια, διδυμαῖα [pl.] 'testicles, etc.' (Hp.); διδυμωτός 'forked' (Cyran.); Διδυμών month name in Alexandria (Ptol.). διδυμότης 'duality' (Pl.). Denominative διδυμεύω 'to bear twins' (LXX). διδυμᾱ-τόκος (-η-) 'bearing twins' (Theoc.) with compositional (metrical) lengthening for διδυμο-τόκος (Arist.); from the former διδυμη-τοκέω (-ο-).
•ETYM Reduplication from δύο with a suffix -μο- (ἔτυμος); cf. ἀμφί-δυμος 'double' (δ 847). Analogical formations like τρί-δυμος (D. H.) show that δίδυμος was connected with δίς 'twice', at least at a later date. Cf. also Gonda 1953: 48.

δίδωμι [v.] 'to give' (Il.). ◂IE *deh$_3$- 'give'▸ •VAR Fut. δώσω (διδώσω ν 358, ω 314), aor. ἔδωκα, δοῦναι (see below), pass. δοθῆναι, perf. δέδωκα, δέδομαι. Cypr. opt. δώκοι from δώκω (from the aor.).
•DIAL Myc. di-do-si /didonsi/ 'they give', di-do-to /didontoi/ [3pl.ind.pass.], do-se /dōsei/ 'he will give', jo-do-so-si /jō-dosonsi/, o-do-ke /hō-dōke/ [ind.aor.], a-pu-do-ke /apu-dōke/, a-pe-do-ke /ap-edōke/, de-do-me-na /dedomena/ [perf.ptc.pass.]; a-pu-do-si /apu-dosis/, do-so-mo /dosmos/, do-so-mi-jo /dosmios/ 'consisting of contributions', do-ra /dōra/ 'gifts'; PN te-o-do-ra /t^{h}e^{h}odōra/.
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀνα-, ἀντι-, ἀπο-, δια-, etc. As a first member δωσι- in Δωσί-θεος, etc.; cf. Knecht 1946: 11; see also below.
•DER δώς [f.] 'gift' (Hes. Op. 356 < δώ-ς or *δώτ-ς, see below); (ἀνά-, ἀντί-, ἀπό-, etc.)δόσις 'gift' (Il.) with δοσίδιον (inscr.) and δόσιμος, often from compounds with ἐπι-, ἐν-, παρα-; δῶτις, uncertain; acc. to Fraenkel 1910: 105 twice in the Amphiktyon-law of 380[a] for λωτις; also δῶττις· δώς, φερνή 'gift, dowry' (H.), probably a mistake, see Latte; δωτίνη, -ᾱ, 'gift, present, rent' (Hom., also Argolis; but cf. Leumann 1950: 279f.), with δωτινάζω 'collect gifts' (Hdt. 2, 180); ἀπυ-δοσμός 'selling' with ἀπυδόσμιος (Arc.); -δομα in ἀπό-, διά-, πρό-δομα, etc.; cf. Wilhelm Glotta 14 (1925): 70f.; on ►δῶρον see s.v. Further (ἐκ-, ἐπι-, etc.)δοτήρ 'giver' (Il.), fem. δότειρα (Hes.); δώτωρ 'id.' (Od.); on δοτήρ : δώτωρ see Benveniste 1948: 46 and 49; δωτήρ 'id.' (θεοὶ δωτῆρες ἑάων θ 325, etc.; see below); δότης = δοτήρ (LXX); first only in compounds, e.g. προδότης, fem. -τις 'traitor' (IA) with προδοσία 'treason' (IA); δώτης (Hes. Op. 355, beside ἀ-δώτης; cf. δώς above and Fraenkel 1910: 118, Frisk 1948: 20), ἐπιδώτης epithet of Zeus in Mantinea and other gods (Paus.) with Ἐπιδώτειον name of a tempel (Epidauros); Δωτώ name of a Nereid (Il., Hes.; see below). δοτικός, often prefixed with ἐπι-, μετα-, etc. (Arist.). Desiderative deverbative (παρα-, ἐν-, etc.)δωσείω (Th.), iterative preterite δόσκον (epic).

•ETYM δίδωμι goes back to the widespread PIE root deh$_3$-/dh$_3$-. Except for the reduplication vocalism, δίδω-μι corresponds to Skt. dádāti, Av. dadāiti; i-reduplication is also seen in Italic, e.g. Osc. didest 'he will give', Vest. didet 'dat', and perhaps also in Lat. reddō, if < re-di-dō*. Other correspondences are with the medial root aorists ἔδοτο, Skt. ádita, Venet. zo-to < dh$_3$-to*; and with the participles (-)δοτός, Lat. dătus, Skt. -dāta-, Av. dāta- (but zero grade in Skt. -tta- < -dh$_3$-to-*; as a simplex it has new dattá-). The active aorist ἔ-δω-κ-α (with -κ- after ἔθηκα, ἧκα, acc. to Schwyzer: 741) replaces the root aorist *ἔ-δω-ν (cf. ἔ-στη-ν), seen in Skt. á-dā-t, Arm. et 'he gave' < h$_1$é-dō-t*. Cypr. δοϝεναι is often equated with Skt. dāváne [inf.] 'to give' (see Benveniste 1935: 129); however, an element u̯* is also found in Cypr. opt. δυϝάνοι, Lat. duim 'dem', Lith. dovanà 'gift', dãvė 'he gave', and other forms (see LIV^2 s.v. deh$_3$u-*). Hom. Att. δοῦναι is from *δο-έναι. Among the nouns, compare δώτωρ = Skt. dā́tar-, with zero grade Lat. dător; δοτήρ : Skt. dātár-; δόσις = Lat. dăti-ō; δώς, if < *δώτ-ς = Lat. dōs, -tis (if the latter is from IE deh$_3$-t-* and not deh$_3$-ti-*). As a first member, Δωσι- = Skt. dāti-vāra- 'who loves giving, liberal'.

δίεμαι [v.] trans. 'to hunt, pursue' in δίεσθαι (M 276, etc.), intrans. 'to run' in δίενται (Ψ 475) and δίεσθαι (M 304). ◂?▸
•VAR Subj. δίωμαι, δίηται, δίωνται (O 681, etc.), opt. δίοιτο (ρ 317); act. ἐνδίεσαν (see DELG). Active preterite forms δίον 'I fled' (X 251; on δίε see Chantraine 1942: 388), ἐνδίεσαν 'they pursued' (Σ 584); note περὶ γὰρ δίε (E 566, etc.) 'he was afraid', see below. Rare forms in A.: δίομαι with inf. 'I feared' (Pers. 700f. [lyr.] bis), διόμενος 'driven away' (Supp. 819, Eu. 357 and 385 [lyr.]); in Gortyn ἐδδίηται (< ἐσδ- = ἐκδ-), ἐπιδίεθθαι, -διόμενος 'to chase away, pursue' (SGDI 4997-8). See on ▸διώκω.
•ETYM δίε 'was afraid' rather belongs to δέδοικα, ▸δείδω. Since the only active forms remaining are the hapax legomena δίον and ἐνδίεσαν, these may be secondary after ἵενται, ἵεσαν; moreover, a PIE dih$_1$-* could hardly have become διε-, which also suggests that these two forms are analogical. Consequently, the verb was thematic. Cf. further ▸διερός 'quick'. The appurtenance of Skt. dī́yati 'fly' is not certain. From other languages have been compared OIr. dían 'quick' and Latv. diêt 'to dance' (LIV^2 s.v. deih$_1$-* 'dahinjagen'). See ▸δῖνος, ▸δίζημαι, ▸ζητέω.

διεράω [v.] 'to filter through' (Plu.). ◂?▸
•DER διέραμα 'funnel, strainer' (Plu.); in the papyri often used as a technical term of Egyptian transport, mg. not quite clear and probably influenced by διαίρειν 'transport', cf. the notation διαίρεμα; thence διεραματίτης name of an official of transportion. Note διάραμα next to διερᾶν; thence διαραματία name of a liturgy.

•ETYM Beside διέραμα, διέρασις (pap.), also διαίρασις. See Frisk 1931: 28ff.; also, Redard 1949: 242, who adduces διάρημα = λέμβος 'kind of ship' (Procop.). See ▸ἀπεράω and ▸ἐξεράω.

διερός in Hom. a qualification of ἀνήρ 'man' (ζ 201 ἀνὴρ διερὸς βροτός), and of πούς 'foot' (ι 43); in Diog. Laert. (AP 7, 123) epithet of φλόξ 'flame, fire'. In Anaxag. 4, 12 the opposite of ξηρός 'humid' (A.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The meaning was unknown even in antiquity, as is clear from the incompatible translations in H.: διερός· λαμπρός, ζῶν, περιφανής 'brilliant, alive, apparent'. Connection with δίεμαι is only possible if the word is from dih$_1$-ero-*. Schulze (see Bechtel 1914 s.v.) reads ζ 201 as *δϝιερός 'to be feared', related to ▸δείδω; semantically, this is not convincing (cf. DELG). The word has also been connected with διαίνω (Frisk); this is also not convincing (as it is not from an r/n-stem).

δίζα [f.] · αἴξ. Λάκωνες 'goat (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂LW? Illyr.▸ •ETYM The word has been compared with δίζα < *διγ-ι̯α, with Arm. tik 'sack' from IE digeh$_2$-*, related to OHG ziga 'goat'. Schmitt-Brandt Kratylos 13 (1968): 3 compared Alb. dhi 'goat' (rejected by Demiraj 1997). Latte thought the word was Illyrian. Perpillou BSL 67 (1972): 115-122 supposes that the word was originally *αἶζα, perhaps seen in Myc. a$_3$-za (see now DELG Supp.).

δίζημαι [v.] 'to search, seek out, desire' (Il.). ◂IE ieh$_2$-* 'pursue'▸ •VAR διζησόμεθ' (π 239; subj. aor., cf. Chantraine 1942: 455), fut. διζήσεαι (Parm. 8, 6), aor. ἐδιζησάμην (Heraclit. 101); new present δίζομαι (Herod.; see Schwyzer: 689).
•DIAL Att. has ζητέω.
•DER δίζησις (Parm.), cf. Porzig 1942: 197.
•ETYM It was thought that δίζημαι goes back to δι-δι̯ᾱ-μαι, reflecting a verbal stem further occurring in ▸ζῆλος and ▸ζητέω. However, García Ramón (see ▸Ζητήρ) has shown that the basic root is ieh$_2$- 'to pursue, avenge, etc.'.

δίζω ⇒δίς.

διηγανές ⇒γάνυμαι.

διηνεκής [adj.] 'uninterrupted, definite, exact' (Il.; on the mg. Luther 1935: 64f.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Artificially Attic (Dorianized) διᾱνεκής (Schwyzer: 190), -έως.
•ETYM From δι(α)-ενεκ-ής with compositional lengthening (cf. ποδ-ηνεκής) to ἐνεγκεῖν, ἐνεχ-θῆναι; see Schwyzer: 513. The simplex ἠνεκής (Emp.) arose by decomposition. See also δουρηνεκής (s.v. ▸δόρυ). On the long -η-, see Bonfante Riv. fil. class. 97 (1969): 189.

διηтανές [adj.] · λιτόν, διατεταμένον 'simple, stretched (out)' (H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From διά and τείνω, τανύω with lengthening of the α (cf. διηνεκής).

δῖθύραμβος [m.] name of a song at the festival for Dionysus (Archil.), also said of the god (E. Ba. 526 [lyr.]). ◂PG▸ •VAR διθυραμφος on a vase (SEG XVI (1959) no. 40).

•DER διθυραμβώδης (Ph.), -ικός (Arist.), -ιος month name (Gonni), διθυραμβέω 'to sing dithyrambs' (Hell.).
•ETYM Like ἴαμβος and θρίαμβος, διθύραμβος is Pre-Greek (thus also Frisk and DELG). See also Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 219f., contra Brandenstein IF 54 (1936): 34ff., who connects the word with Skt. áṅga- 'member'.

διϊπετής [adj.] 'fallen from heaven', then 'heavenly' (h. Ven. 4, οἰωνοί 'birds', perhaps from the root *peth$_2$- 'fly'), 'light, clear' (Emp.); see Leumann 1950: 311. ◄GR► •VAR Hom. only in διϊπετέος ποταμοῖο (verse end).
•ETYM The older form for διϊπετής may have been διειπετής (as also suggested by ancient sources such as sch. Od. 4, 477), like Διειτρέφης (inscr.) after Διϝεί-φιλος (epic διΐφιλος), where the dative was correct. See Bechtel 1914 s.v. On the verbal second member, cf. Fraenkel 1910: 63, Risch 1937: 82. See also Schmitt 1968: 221f.

δικασπόλος [m.] 'judge' (Il.). ◄GR► •DER Rare and late δικασπολία and δικασπολέω.
•ETYM Formation like ► αἰπόλος, ► βουκόλος, but here with a remarkable acc.pl. as the first member. δικασκόπος (Mytilene, Cyme, IV-III[a]) is formed after δικασπόλος. There is no relationship with Go. spillon 'to proclaim', etc. (pace e.g. Lagercrantz 1938: 59). See ► δίκη.

δικεῖν [v.] 'to throw' (Pi.) also 'to aim (on high)' (E. HF 498) with ἄνδικε· ἀνάρριψον 'throw!', ἀνδικά· ὁ βόλος 'throw, cast', ἀνδίκτης· τὸ ἀναριπτόμενον τῆς μυάγρας ξύλον 'the sprung holding bar of a mousetrap' (Call.; H.). ◄PG► •DER ► δίκτυον and ► δίσκος.
•ETYM Connection with ► δείκνυμι is defended by Brugmann IF 39 (1917-1921): 144ff. and Gonda 1929: 216ff., but this is semantically problematic. See under ► δίκτυον and ► δίσκος. Fur.: 297 compares λιχάξαι· ῥῖψαι, βαλεῖν. Κρῆτες 'throw (Cret.)' (H.), which points to a Pre-Greek word. LIV[2] s.v. 2. *dei̯k- 'werfen' connects the word with Khot. dīśś- 'werfen'.

δίκελλᾰ [f.] a two-pronged fork (trag., Delos III[a]). ◄PG► •DER δικελλίτης (Luc.).
•ETYM A technical term without established etymology. A connection with μάκελλα, μακέλη (Il.) requires an analysis as δί- and μά-κελλα, which is possible only for δί-κελλα: a prefix μα- (allegedly from IE *sem-) does not exist. The variation -ελλα/-ελη, as displayed by μάκελλα, μακέλη, is best explained from Pre-Greek *-alʸa vel sim. Therefore, μάκελλα, μακέλη is probably of Pre-Greek origin, and we can reasonably assume the same for δίκελλα.

δίκη [f.] 'custom, right, judgement, justice, lawsuit, trial, punishment' (Il.). ◄IE *deiḱ- 'show'► •COMP ► δικασπόλος 'judge' with an acc. pl.
•DER Diminutive δικίδιον (Ar.; see Fournier 1946: 116). δίκαιος 'just, lawful' (Il.); with δικαιότης 'justice' (X.) and δικαιοσύνη 'id.' (IA; see Porzig 1942: 225), secondary δικαιόσυνος (of Zeus); denominative δικαιόω 'consider to be right, claim, sentence' (IA) with δικαίωμα 'act of right' and δικαίωσις 'lawsuit, punishment'; also δικαιωτήριον 'place of punishment' (Pl. Phdr. 249a; like δεσμωτήριον, etc.) and δικαιωτής 'judge' (Plu.). δικανικός 'belonging to trials', often depreciative (Att.); the base form only in H.: δικανούς· τοὺς περὶ τὰς δίκας διατρίβοντας 'those who occupy themselves with justice' (H.). The long ᾱ (Ar. Pax 534) is from νεᾱνικός acc. to Chantraine Anales de filología clásica 6 (1952): 45ff.; see also Björck 1950: 256f., 279f. δικαϊκός 'rightly' (M. Ant.). Denominative δικάζω 'to judge', med. 'to go to law' (Il.; διαδικάζω Att.); from it δικαστής 'judge' (IA) with δικαστικός 'belonging to a judge/justice' (Pl.) and δικαστεία 'office of δικαστής' (inscr.); rare δικαστήρ 'id.' (Locr., Pamph., etc.), fem. δικάστρια (Luc.), with δικαστήριον 'law court' (IA) with the diminutive δικαστηρίδιον (Ar.) and δικαστηριακός (Phld.); from δικάζω also δικαστύς (Epigr. Samos; Fraenkel 1910: 32[2]), δικασμός (Ph.), δικασία (Aq.; διαδικασία Att.), διαδίκασμα (Lys.), δίκασις (sch.). Privative compound ἄδικος 'unjust' with ἀδικία and ἀδικέω, whence ἀδίκημα (all IA). On the hypostasis ἀδικίου 'because of unjustice' see Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 288; on ἀδίκιον Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 190f.
•ETYM Although it is morphologically identical with epic Skt. diśā- 'direction, part of heaven', δίκη is an independent formation. It is probably an extension of the root noun seen in Skt. díś- 'cardinal point' and preserved in Lat. dicis causā (Wackernagel in WH 1: 860). Pace Kretschmer Glotta 32 (1953): 2, the association with 'right' must be old, as it is also found in Lat. dicis causa, iūdex, and in Germanic; see δείκνυμι.

δικλίδες [f.pl.] 'double folding' (θύραι 'doors', πύλαι 'gates', etc.) (Il.); also substantivized (Theoc.). ◄GR► •VAR Late also sing.
•ETYM Compound of δι- (see ► δίς) and κλι- in ► κλίνω, κλί-σις. Cf. δίκλεις, s.v. ► κλείς.

δίκροος [adj.] 'forked, cloven' (IA; cf. Ilberg Arch. f. Pap. 4, 281f.). ◄IE *(dui)-ḱr-ou-o- 'two-horned'.►
•VAR Gen. δίκρους. Also δικρόος, gen. δικροῦς, or (with hyphaeresis) δίκρος.
•ETYM δίκροος goes back to *δί-κροϝ-ος 'two-horned', from δι- (see ► δίς) and a word for 'horn'. Nussbaum 1986: 2-18, assumes that there were forms without laryngeal (e.g. Skt. śṛṅga-, κάρνος H.) to explain the discrepancy between δίκροος without reflex of *h_2 and κερα[ϝ]-ός 'horned' (beside Lat. cervus 'deer', Av. srū- 'horn') from *ḱerh$_2$-uo- with *h_2. Note that κόρυς, κόρυμβα, etc. are not related, but rather of Pre-Greek origin.

δίκταμνον [n.] plant name, 'Origanum Dictamnus' (Arist.). ◄PG► •VAR Also δίκταμον (Arist.).
•DER δικταμνίτης (οἶνος, Dsc.); cf. Redard 1949: 96. Note the town Δίκταμ(ν)ον on the north coast of Crete.
•ETYM Formation like σφένδαμνος, κάρδαμον, etc. (Schwyzer: 524 and 494), and therefore Pre-Greek (Fur.: 396). Chantraine 1933: 216 hypothesizes that the word is from Δίκτη, mountain on Crete, which is possible; cf. Strömberg 1940: 126.

δίκτυον [n.] 'net, strick' (Od.). ◄PG(V)►

•DIAL Myc. de-ku-tu-wo-ko /dektuworgos/.
•COMP δικτυ-βόλος (AP, Opp.) beside δικτυο-βόλος (Poll.) after δικτυ-αρχέω (inscr.) with elided -o-?
•DER Diminutive δικτύδιον (Poll.); δικτυεύς 'fisher (with a net)' (Str.) with δικτυεία 'fishing' (Ael.); also δικτυΐα, see Scheller 1951: 41. - δικτυώδης 'like a net' (Hp. Ep.), δικτυωτός 'forming a net' (LXX); from δικτυόομαι? (LXX). PN Δίκτυς.
•ETYM Usually derived from an older u-stem derivative of ►δικεῖν 'throw' (δίκτυ only EM 275, 27; from the plural δίκτυα, Schwyzer: 460f.). However, the verb need not be related, and the Mycenaean form has -e- as a variant of -i-, which points to Pre-Greek origin (see Bader 1965: §23; Chadwick 1964: 19-21; see under ►δίσκος; on Pre-Greek u-stems, see Heubeck 1961: 36). Not with Chantraine REGr. 80 (1967): 1-5 or Ruijgh 1988: 450 should we explain the Mycenaean form from deiktu-*. The connection of Van Windekens KZ 100 (1987): 311f. with Hitt. ekt-, ikt- '(catching) net', which the initial δ- to be from δικεῖν, is implausible.

δίκτυς 1, -υος [m.] name of an unknown Libyan animal (Hdt. 4, 192). ◂LW Libyan▸ •ETYM Unexplained. See Gsell 1913: 128 and Gsell 1915: 97f.

δίκτυς 2 [m.] · ὁ ἰκτῖνος ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'kite (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Fur.: 392 connects ἰκτῖνος, assuming a Pre-Greek word with δ/zero. However, ►ἰκτῖνος is rather an IE word. ►δίκτυς 1 probably refers to a different animal.

δίλαξ · ἡ ἀρία, τὸ φυτόν. Λάκωνες (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR With prothetic vowel in MoGr. ἀζίλακες 'querens' (Fur.: 374).
•ETYM The word is Pre-Greek on account of the variant with a prothetic vowel.

δίλασ(σ)ον [n.] name of an article of clothing (BGU 814, 25; 816, 27 [II^p]). ◂GR▸ •DER τετρά-λασ(σ)ον as attribute of λέντι<ο>ν (PSI 8, 971, 17 [III-IV^p]), of flax (Ed. Diocl. 28, 61).
•ETYM The second member is perhaps connected to λάσιος 'hairy'; cf. τετρά-βιβλος from ►βιβλίον, s.v.

δινάκω [v.] 'to change, correct'? ◂?▸
•VAR Opt. δινακοι (Del.^{3} 412, Elis).
•ETYM Unknown. See Bechtel 1921, 2: 863 and Schwyzer l.c.

δῖνη [f.] 'whirlpool, eddy' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•DIAL Myc. qe-qi-no-to /g^{w}eg^{w}inōtos/, qe-qi-no-me-no /g^{w}eg^{w}inōmenos/ 'endowed with life'.
•COMP βαθυδίνης (Il.).
•DER δινήεις 'whirling' (Il.), Dor. δινάεις, Aeol. διννάεις (Alc.); δῖνος [m.] 'id.', also 'round vessel' (IA, etc.) with δινώδης 'eddying' (D. C.) and δινωτός 'with δ., rounded, covered with circles' (Hom.; δινόω only Eust.).
Verb δῖνέω, aor. δινῆσαι, etc., also δῖνεύω, (δίννηντες ptc. pl. Sapph. 1, 11; cf. below) 'turn around' (both trans. and intr., Il.) with δίνησις (Arist.), δίνημα (Man.), δίνευμα (conj. in Ar. Th. 122 and X. Eq. 3, 11; Orph.); rare δινέμεν (Hes. Op. 598), δινομένην (Call.), ἀπο-δινωντι [subj.] 'thresh' (Tab. Heracl.; uncertain, to be changed to ἀποδιδῶντι?); Aeol. δίννω (Hdn.; Διννομένης Alc.), δινάζω (Artem. apud Ath.). Perhaps Δινών month name (when the corn is threshed).
•ETYM Perhaps an old nasal present di-n-eu-* (cf. κῑνέω beside κῖνυμαι < ki-n-(e)u-*), of which the nasal was generalized (cf. κλίνη : κλίνω); the Aeolic form δίνν- is from -νϝ-.
According to García Ramón 1999b: 237-248, the Mycenaean forms are not related, but belong to ►βίος instead, because they mean 'endowed with life' and because δι- is not the expected reflex of g^{w}i-. The Homeric form δινωτός does not derive from the verb δινόω; it simply meant 'ornamented, enlivened' and belongs to βίος as well, acc. to García Ramón (with replacement of the reflex of the initial g^w- to avoid association with βινέω 'futuere').
The initial element δι- has nothing to with ►δίεμαι, because the connection is evident "ni pour la forme, ni pour le sens" (DELG). In view of the lack of a good etymology, we should rather consider the possibility of Pre-Greek origin.

δίξοος •VAR διξός. ⇒δίς.

δίον ⇒δείδω.

Διόνῦσος [m.] name of a god (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Dialectal Διώνυσος (epic, lyr.), Διόννυσος (Thess., Cret.), Ζόννυσος (Aeol.), ΔιΕνυσος (Amorgos), Δεύνυσος (Anacr.). Hypocoristic vocative Διονῦ (Phryn. Com. 10); cf. διον(ν)ύς· ὁ γυναικίας καὶ παράθηλυς 'weakling, effeminate' (H., EM); διοννύς· ἡ γυναικεία καὶ θῆλυς ἐσθής 'womanish clothing' (Eust.).
•DIAL Myc. di-wo-nu-so-jo [gen.?] /Diwo^{h}nusoio/, di-wo-nu-so [dat.].
•DER Διονύσιος PN, fem. Διονυσιάς; τὰ Διονύσια [n.pl.] 'festival for Δ.' (Att., etc.), Διονυσιακός (Th.); diminutive Διονυσίσκος, denomination of a person with bone-like outgrowths on the temples (medic.); denominative διονυσιάζω [v.] 'to celebrate the Δ.' (Luc.), Διονυσιασταί [m.pl.] worshippers of Δ. (Nisyros, etc.), cf. Ἀπολλωνιασταί s.v. ►Ἀπόλλων.
•ETYM The forms seem to point to *Διοσ-νυσος. Acc. to the tradition, Dionysus would have come from Thrace, and his father would be Zeus, his mother ►Σεμέλη. As the first member seemed to be the genitive of the Thracian Zeus, Kretschmer 1896: 241f. assumed in the second member a Thracian word for 'son' (found in Thracian names like Νῦσα; further Νῦσαι, Νύσιαι the nymphs who cared for him) and Nusatita (PN). This interpretation finds no support, however (see on ►νυός). Dunkel 1995: 1-21 assumed that the name contains suH-nu-* 'son', of which s and n were metathesized; this is improbable too.
García Ramón Minos 20-22 (1987): 183-200 concludes that Διεννυσία can represent an old genitive di̯es*, whereas Διοννυσιαν continues di̯os*. For the variants Διυυσος and Διννυσος, no definitive interpretation can be given.
Fur.: 250 recalls the PN Διονυτᾶς (beside -σᾶς on a coin from Teos; see Meyer 1896: 381) and stresses that the variation τ/σ points to a non-IE = Pre-Greek word. Since all attempts to find an IE etymology have failed, we have to accept that it is a foreign name.

δίοπος •ETYM From διέπω; see ►ἕπω.

δῖος [adj.] 'belonging to heaven, godlike' (Il.), also 'belonging to Zeus' (trag.); often as a month name (Thessaly, Macedonia, etc.). ◄IE dieu-* 'heaven'► •DIAL Myc. di-wi-jo, di-u-jo /diwjos/; di-wi-ja, di-u-ja /diwja/.
•ETYM Old adjective, identical with Skt. divyá- /div$_{(i)}$yá-/ 'heavenly', Lat. dīus 'godlike', IE diu-iHo-*; see ►Ζεύς. The adjective may replace the genitive of the basic word; see Schwyzer 1950: 176ff. The feminine was δῖα < *δῖϝ-ι̯ᾰ, which first appeared in the substantival function 'daughter of heaven, goddess', e.g. δῖα γυναικῶν 'goddess among women'; thence, δῖα θεάων, etc.; see Schwyzer 1950: 116. The meaning 'belonging to Zeus' is preserved well in tragedy, and probably in I 538 (DELG).

διοσκέω [v.] 'to spy around constantly' (Anacr. 3, 3; not quite certain); acc. to H., διαβλέπειν συνεχῶς τὴν ὅρασιν μεταβάλλοντα, τίθεται δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ διαφορεῖσθαι τῷ σώματι καὶ τῇ ψυχῇ 'to stare at sth. which continuously changes its appearance; to be weakened in the body and the soul'. ◄GR► •ETYM See Schwyzer: 541[7]. DELG proposes -ok^w-sk-*.

Διόσκουροι [pl.] 'sons of Zeus', name of the young gods Castor and Polydeuces (Ion. Hell.). ◄GR► •VAR Att. Διοσκόρω [du.]; also Διόσκοροι.
•DER Διοσκο(ύ)ρειον, -ριον 'temple of the Δ.' (Att., etc.), τὰ Διοσκο(ύ)ρ(ε)ια 'festival of the Δ.' (inscr.), also -ήϊα (after βασιλήϊα, etc.), Διοσκουριασταί name of the worshippers (pap.), cf. Διονυσιασταί; Διοσκουριάς TN.
•ETYM Univerbation of Διὸς κοῦροι (or κόρω), cf. Schwyzer: 427 and 445. See on ►Ζεύς and ►κόρος 2. The Dioscuri are the sons of Tyndareos and parallel to the Indic Aśvins. They are saviors and rescuers from danger, both at sea and in battle. In Lithuanian, they are called Diēvo sunēliai, sons of God. See the most recent treatment of the Dioscuri in West 2007: 186ff.

διόσπυρον [n.] 'fruit of the nettle-tree', name of the cherry-like fruit of the Celtis australis (Thphr.). ◄GR► •VAR Also διόσπυρος [m.] = λιθόσπερμον 'gromwell' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Univerbation of Διὸς πυρός with transition to the neuter gender, as in bahuvrīhi compounds like βούγλωσσον. Semantic parallels are recorded by Strömberg 1940: 128.

δίπλαξ, -κος [adj.] 'in two layers, double' (Il.); as a fem. substantive 'a mantle' (Hom., A. Pers. 277 [lyr.], Lyd.). ◄IE dui-plk̑-* 'two-fold'► •DER Cf. τρίπλαξ 'threefold' (Il.).
•ETYM Identical with U tuplak [n.] 'duplex' = 'furca', Lat. du-, tri-plex 'two-, three-fold'. The word is a bahuvrīhi compound, the second member of which was considered unclear by Frisk, who compared πλάξ 'flatness', πληγή 'hit' (cf. ἁ-πληγίς 'single mantle' [Herod.], δι-πληγίς 'double mantle' [Poll.]). However, the word is more probably connected with πλέκω 'to twine'; see De Vaan 2008 s.v. duplex. Cf. ►δίπλος and ►διπλάσιος.

διπλάσιος [adj.] 'twofold, double' (Thgn.). ◄IE dui-pl-to-* 'two-fold'► •VAR Also διπλασίων (Arist.); Ion. διπλήσιος.
•DER διπλασιάζω [v.] 'to double, reduplicate' (Att., etc.), whence διπλασιασμός and διπλασίασις, διπλασιαστικός.
•ETYM From a verbal adjective δί-πλατος, extended after the adjectives in -ιο- (like ἀμβρόσιος from ἄμβροτος, διφάσιος from δίφατος, etc.; Schwyzer: 466, Chantraine 1933: 41). The basis is a verb meaning 'to fold' (IE pel-; cf. ►ἁπλόος, etc.). Additionally, Go. ain-falþs 'one-fold > simple' and other Gm. formations also contain a word for 'fold', e.g. ON faldr < PGm. fálþa-* < IE pól-to-*. Ion. διπλήσιος is an innovation after παραπλήσιος, etc.; Hell. διπλασίων, after the comparatives in -ίων (Schwyzer: 598, 536); and διπλάδιος (AP, pap.), after διχθάδιος, etc. (Schwyzer: 467). Cf. ►δίπλαξ.

διπλόος •VAR διπλοῦς. ⇒ἁπλόος.

διρκαία [f.] = κιρκαία, 'Vincetoxicum nigrum' (Dsc.). ◄PG?►
•VAR δίρκαιον [n.] (Ps.-Dsc.) = ►δαῦκος and στρύχνον ὑπνωτικόν, 'Withania somnifera'.
•DER δίρκος [m.] 'seed of pine' (Paus. Gr.).
•ETYM According to Dsc. 4, 75, the plant was named after the sorceress Circe, ἐπειδὴ δοκεῖ ἡ ῥίζα φίλτρων εἶναι ποιητική 'because the root seems to produce philtres'. We do not know which of the two forms is original. διρκαι- may derive from the source Δίρκη. See Strömberg 1940: 93 and 152. Fur.: 255 points to Pre-Greek names in -αιο-.

δίς [adv.] 'twice' (Od.). ◄IE dui-s-* 'twice'► •VAR As a first member δι- 'two-' (Il.).
•COMP As a first member διχο-.
•DER Denominative δίζω 'hesitate' (Π 713, Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 65). Further διξός (Ion.), δισσός, Att. διττός 'twofold, double' with δισσαχοῦ, -ττ-, etc. (see below); δίχα [adv.] ([prep.]) 'apart, separated' (Il.) with διχῇ, διχοῦ, etc.; διχάς [f.] 'half, middle' (Arat.; after μονάς, etc.) and the denominative διχάζω 'distribute' (Pl.) with διχασμός, δίχασις (Hell.), διχαστῆρες ὀδόντες 'the cutting teeth' (Poll.); also διχάω (Arat.), διχαίω (Arat.). διχθά 'apart, in two' (Hom.) with διχθάδιος 'twofold, double' (Hom.), διχθάς [f.] (as an [adj.]) 'double' (Musae.). Isolated δισκάζεται· διαφέρεται 'quarrels [or: carries over, vel sim.]' (H.); for *διξάζεται, or dissimilated from διστάζεται?
•ETYM In its formation, δίς is identical with Skt. dvíḥ, Lat. bis (OLat. duis), MoHG zwir 'twice'; as a first member, di-* = Skt. dvi-, Lat. bi- (cf. on ►δύο), Go. twi-, Lith. dvi-. Examples include δί-πους, Skt. dvi-pád-, and Lat. bi-pēs. The velar derivation is unclear; beside Gr. δίχα, we have Skt. dví-dhā 'twofold', the dh of which might be found in δι-χ-θα. διξός and δισσός also presuppose velar derivatives: *διχθ-ι̯ο-, διχ-ι̯ο-? See Schwyzer: 598. After δίχα, διχθά were formed τρίχα, τριχθά, etc. (Schwyzer ibid.). See further ►διά, ►δοιοί.

δίσκος [m.] 'discus' (Il.). ◄PG?►

•COMP Compound δίσκ-ουρα [n.pl.] (Ψ 523) 'throwing distance', from δίσκου οὖρα (Ψ 431), see ► οὖρον 2.
•DER Diminutive δισκάριον (Orib.); further δισκεύς name of a comete (Lyd.; see Scherer 1953: 107). Denominative δισκέω 'to throw the discus' with δίσκημα 'throw, what is thrown' (cf. the nouns in -(η)μα in tragedy, Chantraine 1933: 184ff.); also δισκεύω 'id.' with δισκευτής (Arist. comm.). Unclear δίσκελλα· σπυρίς 'large basket' (H.), for which a Latin suffix (Frisk: cf. synonymous fiscella) seems improbable.
•ETYM Fur.: 297 pointed out that the traditional derivation of *δίκ-σκος from δικεῖν 'throw' (Frisk, DELG) is hardly possible: the suffix -σκο- is rare in nominal derivation, and an σκ-present from which it could have been taken is not attested. Therefore, Furnée concluded that we have to start from *δικσ-, a variant of δικ-εῖν, which has Pre-Greek origin. See under ► δίκτυον.

δισσός •VAR διττός. ⇒δίς.

διστάζω [v.] 'to hesitate, be uncertain, doubt' (Pl.). ◂IE dui-s-* 'double'▸ •VAR Fut. διστάσω.
•DER Analogical δισταγμός (Agatharch.), δίσταγμα (Phld.), διστακτικός (A. D.), διστάξιμος (Ptol.), διστασμός (Thphr.).
•ETYM Since Solmsen KZ 37 (1904): 20f. and Solmsen IF 14 (1903): 437, the word has been considered to be a denominative of *δι-στ-ος = Skt. dvi-ṣṭh-a- 'double', ON tvi-st-r 'sad', properly 'split in two', from IE dui-sth$_2$-o-, containing dui-* (see ► δίς) and steh$_2$-* 'stand' (see ► ἵστημι); cf. ► δύστηνος. However, it could also be a derivation of δίζω; cf. ἑρπυστάζω beside ἑρπύζω, κλαστάζω beside κλάω, etc. (Schwyzer: 706).

δίστροπον [n.] name of a vase for libations (pap.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unclear.

διττάμενον [n.]? · ἀρνούμενον. Κρῆτες 'refusing, denying (Cret.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. See Bechtel 1921(2): 783.

δίφακος [m.] · εἶδος βοτάνης 'kind of plant' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Fur.: 326 connects the word with δίψα 'thirst', but this is uncertain.

διφάσιος [adj.] 'twofold, double' (Hdt.); cf. τριφάσιος 'threefold' (Hdt.), also explained by H. as τρίφωνος 'three-voiced'. ◂?▸ •DER δίφατον· διφάσιον, δισσῶς λεγόμενον 'said ambiguously' (H.) and τρίφατος 'threefold' (Nic. Th. 102).
•ETYM Based on δί-, τρί-φατος (cf. ► διπλάσιος), but the second member is uncertain. On the basis of δισσῶς λεγόμενον and τρίφωνος in H., a connection with φημί could be suggested (e.g. von Skutsch IF 14 (1903): 488ff., who refers to Lat. bifāriam), whereas Brugmann IF 17 (1904-1905): 367 and Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916: 1, 186 rather connected πεφνεῖν, φόνος, θείνω, as in ἀρηΐ-φατος 'killed in battle', i.e. 'slayed twice' (cf. on δίπλαξ). However, in either case are the semantics compelling. No better is the connection with φαίνω as 'twice visible' (Walde 1910: 90, Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916: 2, 71) since one would rather expect *δίφαντος, like ἄφαντος (Il.).

δῑφάω [v.] 'to search after' (Π 747). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Only present, except δ[ε]ιφήσαντες· ψηλαφήσαντες 'one who searched after' (H.).
•DIAL Also διφέω (AP).
•DER διφαλέος 'searching' (Hymn. Is. 10), διφήτωρ (βυθῶν) 'who explores (the depths)' (Opp.), ἀστρο-δίφης 'astronomer' (Herod.). Denominative διφαδεύ<σ>ει· ἐξελεῖται 'will take out, choose' (H.), from *διφάς? Cf. φυγαδεύειν : φυγάς.
Further δίφας 'a snake' (Artemid. 2, 13), δίφα<ν>· τὸν ὄφιν. Κρῆτες 'serpent (Cret.)' (H.); δίφατον ὄφιν (cod.; corr. Salm.); Latte comments ad loc.: "scil. a rimas scrutando appellatus". Also δίβαν· ὄφιν. Κρῆτες (H.); cf. the snake name παρείας and the other names of animals in -ᾶς, -ης in Chantraine 1933: 30f.
•ETYM δῑφάω has no established etymology. The restoration of the H. entry to δίφα<ν> is uncertain: Fur.: 325 prefers to maintain δίφατον of the manuscript. Rather than being a mistake, the β of δίβαν is to be taken at face value; the variation between β and φ suggests Pre-Greek origin. However, a connection with δέφω (as suggested by Fur.: 315, 355) lacks semantic justification, whereas the appurtance of ► δίφακος remains in any event uncertain.

διφθέρα [f.] 'prepared skin, hide, leather', also of leather objects (IA). ◂PG(V)▸ •DIAL Myc. di-pte-ra (also di-pte-ra$_3$) 'leather' /dip^{h}t^{h}era(i)/; di-pte-ra-po-ro /dip^{h}t^{h}era-p^{h}oros/(?).
•DER Diminutive διφθέριον (Theognost.); διφθερίς = διφθέρα (AP); διφθέρωμα 'id.' (Thd.); διφθερίας 'man dressed in leather, farmer, etc.' (Com.); fem. διφθερῖτις (Poll.); διφθεράριος 'parchment maker' (Edict. Diocl. Asin.); διφθέρινος 'made of δ., of leather' (X.). Denominative διφθερόομαι 'to be dressed in hides' (Str.). Note διψάρα· δέλτος, οἱ δὲ διφθέρα 'writing-tablet; piece of leather' (H.). (cf Schwyzer: 326).
•ETYM Possibly, διφθέρα is with De Saussure MSL 7 (1892): 91 related to ► δέφω and δέψω, but the alternations ε ~ ι and φθ ~ ψ, typical for Pre-Greek, are proven by the variant δίψαρα in any case (Fur.: 308, 326). On Iranian loans from διφθέρα, like MoP daftar 'office', see Bailey TPS 1933: 50. Lat. littera, too, ultimately derives from the Greek, perhaps via Etruscan (cf. διφθεραλοιφός· γραμματοδιδάσκαλος παρὰ Κυπρίοις 'teacher of writing in Cypr.' [H.]).

δίφρος [m.] 'seat, chair, chariot-board, chariot' (Il.). ◂IE dui-b^{h}r-o-* 'two-bearer'▸ •DER Diminutives: διφρίσκος (Ar.), διφρίον (Tim. Lex.), διφρίδιον (EM). δίφραξ 'chair' (Theoc.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 379), δίφρακον 'id.' (Samos IV^a; see also Chantraine 1933: 384); δίφρις· ὁ ἑδραῖος, καὶ καθήμενος ἀεί, οἷον ἀργός 'sedentary, sitting all the time, as in idle' (H.).; cf. τρόχις 'runner', etc. Adjective δίφριος (AP). Denominative διφρεύω 'to drive in a car' (E.) with διφρευτής 'chariot-driver' (S.), διφρευτικός (Ephor.), διφρεία 'driving a chariot' (X.); more common διφρ-ηλάτης (Pi.) with διφρηλατέω and διφρηλασία.

•ETYM Properly meaning "two-bearer" (from δίς and φέρω), the δί-φρ-ο-ς was originally a chair with two handles carried by two people (one on each side); later it came to be used for the box of a chariot (cf. Fraenkel 1923: 282). The initial δι- (< *δϝι-) of δίφρος never makes position in Homer (Solmsen 1901: 211f.), which may be due to dissimilation from the following labial φ, or to the fact that as a vernacular word, δίφρος (like ἱδρώς; Schwyzer: 222[5]) originally was not part of the epic language.

δίχα •VAR διχθά. ⇒δίς.

δίψᾰ, -ης [f.] 'thirst' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷
•VAR Rarely δίψη (A. Ch. 756), also δίψος [n.] (Th.), after πνῖγος 'stifling', ῥῖγος 'frost', etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 420).
•DIAL Myc. di-pi-si-jo and di-pi-si-je-wi-jo (from *διψιευς?).
•COMP πολυ-δίψιος 'very thirsty, arid', of Argos (Hom.); metrical for *πολύ-διψος.
•DER δίψιος 'thirsty, dry' (trag.), διψηρός 'id.' (Hp.; after αὐχμηρός), διψώδης 'id.' (Hp.), διψαλέος 'id.' (Hell. and late; after ἀζαλέος, etc.), διψάς [f.] 'id.' (Thphr.), also name of a snake, whose bite caused a strong thirst (cf. Chantraine 1933: 354f.).
δίψακος [m.] the name of diabetes (medic.), because of the drinking of the patients, Strömberg 1944: 89; also the plant name 'Dipsacus silvestris' (Dsc., Gal.), see Strömberg 1940: 78, with διψακερός 'thirsty' (EM), acc. to H. = ταλαίπωρος 'suffering'; διψοσύνη = δίψα (Orac. apud Porph.).
Verbal forms: ptc. διψᾱ́ων (λ 584), inf. διψῆν (Hdt.), 3sg. διψῇ (Pi., Pl.), Hell. also διψᾶν, -ᾷ; also διψέω (Archil.) and διψώω (Tryph.); with δίψησις (Ath. 1, 10b; doubtful) and διψητικός (Arist.).
Beside these, there are forms with διφ-, like δίφας 'a kind of snake' (Artemid. 2,13), δίφατον and δίβαν· ὄφιν. Κρῆτες 'serpent (Cret.)' (H.); see ►διφάω.
•ETYM For διψᾱ́ων, διψῆν, compare πεινᾱ́ων, πεινῆν, which are close in meaning; the forms διψᾱ́ων, πεινᾱ́ων might be (Aeolic?) analogical formations based on the normal epic ending -ᾱ́ων, whereas διψῆν and πεινῆν are unexplained (Chantraine 1942: 21 and 362, Leroy 1954: 288f.; improbably, Meister 1921: 89 on διψῆν, πεινῆν; cf. further Fraenkel 1937: 376f.). Under an analysis δίπ-σα, the final element can hardly be IE. Therefore, it is probably a Pre-Greek word, which is further made likely by the variants with φ and β (Fur.: 326).

δῖψαι [v.] · βλάψαι 'to damage' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM DELG suggests that the form was coined by grammarians to explain δίψιον, which was explained as βλαπτικόν (H.) or βλαβερόν (Ap. Soph.); Chantraine adds: "cf. encore Hsch. sous δίψιον Ἄργος avec S. fr. 296."

δίω ⇒δείδω and δίεμαι.

διώκω [v.] 'to pursue, drive away, prosecute' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Aor. διῶξαι, διωχθῆναι, fut. διώξω, etc. (post-Hom.).
•COMP Compounds with ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, etc.
•DER δίωγμα 'pursuit, what is pursued' (trag., Pl.), διωγμός 'pursuit' (trag., X.) with διωγμίτης 'policeman' (inscr. II[p]; cf. Redard 1949: 45), διωγμιτικά = persecutiones (Cod. Just.); δίωξις 'persecution' (Att.), διωκτύς 'id.' (Call.; cf. Benveniste 1948: 72). Agent noun διώκτης 'pursuer' (NT), in γνωμιδιώκτης (haplological for γνωμιδιο-δι- Cratin. 307), see Fraenkel 1912: 81[1]; διωκτήρ 'id.' (Babr.). διωκτός (S.), διωκτικός (Iamb.). Lengthened διωκάθειν (-εῖν?), ἐδιώκαθον (Att.); cf. Schwyzer: 703[6] (διωκαθεῖν?).

•ETYM διώκει stands beside δίεμαι as ϝιώκει (Cor.) beside ϝίεμαι (see ►ἵεμαι). The origin of the ω is unclear (unconvincingly, Meillet MSL 23 (1923): 50f.). A κ-enlargement is also found in ἐρύ-κω, ὀλέ-κω, etc.; see Schwyzer: 702[5].

διωλύγιος [adj.] uncertain (Pl. Tht. 162a, Lg. 890e); διωλύγιον 'immense', acc. to H. = ἠχοῦν ἐπὶ πολύ, μέγα, καὶ σφοδρόν, διατεταμένον 'resounding much, heavily, etc.'; acc. to the sch. on Pl. = περιβόητος 'much discussed' and σκοτεινός 'dark, obscure', i.e. connected with ὀλολυγή 'loud cry' and ἠλύγη 'shadow'. ◁?▷ •ETYM The occurrences in Plato (διωλύγιος φλυαρία and μήκη διωλύγια) are ambiguous.

δμώς, -ωός [m.] 'slave, servant' (Il.; see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 71f.), ◁IE dem-* 'house', dm-ōu-*▷ •VAR Also thematicized δμῶος (Hes. Op. 430; also Call. Hec. 1, 4, 15 acc. to Gomperz); δμω-ιαί (δμῳαί) [f.pl.] 'slave-women' (Il.), secondary sing. δμῳή (Q. S.), for *δμῶ-ι̯ᾰ, *δμῷα? For the accent, cf. ἄγυια : ἀγυιαί and Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1914: 118f.; also δμωΐς (A.) and δμωϊάς, δμῳάς (Q. S.).
•COMP On the compound ὑπο-δμώς δ 386 see Sommer 1934: 26.
•DER Adjective δμώ-ϊος (AP). Abstract μνώ-ια (μνο-ΐα, μνῴα) serfs in Crete (Str.) with μνωΐτης, μνοΐτης, μνῴτης (Hermon apud Ath. 6, 267c, Poll.; cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 790); on δμ > μν cf. μεσό-μνη < μεσό-δμη; see Schwyzer: 208.
•ETYM Related to δόμος 'house', with the same formation as in πάτρως (ōu-stem; Schwyzer: 479f.). See also Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 23 and De Vaan 2008 s.v. domus, dominus.

δνοπαλίζω [v.] 'to shake, fling down' (Δ 472, ξ 512, etc.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Fut. δνοπαλίξω.
•DER δνοπάλιξις (sch. Opp.).
•ETYM The word has been analyzed as formed from the roots of δονέω and πάλλω, respectively, but the type of formation required is very improbable (see Schwyzer: 645[1]). Rather, I take the group δν- as typical of Pre-Greek words; perhaps we have to analyze as δνοπ-αλ- instead. See also Chantraine 1942: 340.

δνόφος [m.] 'darkness' (Simon.). ◁PG▷
•VAR In Hell. times ►γνόφος, etc. with δν > γν (Schwyzer: 208, Niedermann WuS 8 (1923): 64[1]; Bq. s.v.; Lejeune 1972: 78[4]).
•COMP Compound δνοφο-είμων 'in dark clothes' (Attica II[p]).
•DER δνοφερός 'dark' (Il.), also δνόφεος (B.), δνοφόεις (Emp.), δνοφώδης (E.), cf. S. Schmid 1950: 48.
•ETYM A form *δνέφος [n.] is presupposed by ἰο-δνεφής 'violet-dark' (δ 135, ι 426; cf. Porzig 1942: 300), but it is further isolated. The word recalls ►ζόφος as well as ►κνέφας and ►ψέφας, but these words have not been explained (see Güntert 1914: 112ff.; Petersen AmJPh. 56: 57ff.). Note δνόψ· χιτῶνος εἶδος βαθέος 'kind of depth (?) mantle', thus Latte (H.) As in ►δνοπαλίζω, the group δν- seems to point to Pre-Greek origin.

δοάν ⇒δήν.

δοάσσατο ⇒δέατο.

δοθιήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'small abscess' (Hp.). ◅PG▻ •VAR Also δοθιών, -όνος (medic., Hdn. Gr.).
•DER δοθιηνικόν 'medicine against δ.' (Paul. Aeg.).
•ETYM Cf. λειχήν, ἀδήν, πυρήν, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 166f., Schwyzer: 487) and βουβών, μυών (Chantraine 1933: 162, Schwyzer: 488); the word is further unclear. See Solmsen 1909: 137f. The retention of θι (as opposed to the development in e.g. μέσ(σ)ος < *μέθι̯ος) suggests borrowing. Fur.: 172[118], 355 plausibly points out that -ην is frequent in Pre-Greek words, and compares δολεών· ὁ δοθιήν (as a variant deriving from *δοδ-).

δοίδυξ, -ῡκος [m.] 'pestle' (Ar.). ◅PG(S)▻ •COMP As a first member in δοιδυκο-ποιός (Plu.) and in parodizing δοιδυκο-φόβα (Luc.).
•DER Denominative διαδοιδυκίζω 'clench the fist like a pestle' (Com. Adesp.), ἀναδοιδυκίζειν· ἀναταράσσειν 'to disturb' (H., EM).
•ETYM No etymology. The suffix -ῡκ- is typical of Pre-Greek (Pre-Greek, suffixes).

δοιοί [pl.] 'two, both' (Il.). ◅IE duoi-* 'twofold, double'▻ •VAR δοιώ [du.].
•DIAL Myc. PN du-wo-jo /dwoios/.
•DER δοιός [sg.] 'double' (Emp.). δοιάς [f.] 'group of two' (gloss.; after μονάς, etc.) and denominative δοιάζω, -ομαι, aor. δοιάξαι, also δοάσσαι (through blending with δοάσσατο) 'linger, deliberate', also (after δοάσσατο) 'imagine, believe' (B.). Fixed expression ἐν δοιῇ 'in dubio, in hesitation' (I 230), whence ἐνδοιάζω 'hesitate' (Th.) with ἐνδοιαστός, -ῶς 'doubtful' (Ion., Th.) and late derivations ἐνδοίασις, -άσιμος, -ασμός, -αστής, -αστικός.
•ETYM δοιοί is an old derivative of ►δύο (related to ►δίς), in its formation identical to Skt. dvayá-, OCS dъvojь 'twofold', OHG zweiio, Go. twaddje, ON tveggja [gen.pl.], IE duoiHó-*. The retention of the intervocalic ι in Greek, the short a of the Skt., and the Germanic "Verschärfung" (Go. ddj, ON ggj) point -iH-*.

δόκανα •VAR δοκάνη. ⇒δοκός.

δοκέω [v.] 'to seem, be of the opinion' (Il.). ◅GR▻
•VAR Aor. δοκῆσαι, fut. δοκήσω (Od.), δόξαι, δόξω (Pi., h. Merc.; see below), perf. δεδόκημαι (Pi.), δέδογμαι (Hdt.), δοκεῖ μοι 'it seems to me' (Il.); δοκεύω [v.] 'watch, observe' (Il.); προσ-δοκάω, aor. προσδοκῆσαι 'await' (Hdt.).
•DER δόκησις 'belief, opinion, appearance' (Hdt.), δοκησι-δέξιος, -νους, -σοφος 'appropriate [etc.] in one's own opinion' (Com.). δόκημα 'image, delusion' (E., see Chantraine 1933: 184ff.), 'decision' (Argos). δόγμα 'opinion, decision' (Att., Hell.; to δόξαι, δόξω after τάξαι, τάξω : τάγμα, etc.) with δογματικός 'dogmatic', δογματίας 'who pronounces δόγματα', δογματίζω 'give an opinion' (Hell. and late). Further δόξα 'opinion, consideration, excellence, glory', δόξις = δόξα (Democr.; after γνῶσις, Schwyzer: 505). δοκώ [f.] 'id.' (E. El. 747; Chantraine 1933: 116), δόκος [m.] 'id.' (Xenoph.), δοκή 'id.' (Hdn.). δόκιμος 'reliable, approved, distinguished, etc.' (IA, Dor.); compounds εὐ-, ἀ-δόκιμος ; with δοκίμιον, δοκιμεῖον 'proof' (Pl.) and the denominatives δοκίμωμι (Aeol.), δοκιμόω (Parm.) 'to believe', δοκιμάζω 'to try, approve' (IA) with δοκιμασία 'test' (Att.), δοκιμαστής, δοκιμαστήρ, -ήριον, δοκιμαστός, -ικός (Att., etc.); also deverbal δοκιμή 'test, proof' (Ep. Phil., Ep. Cor.). εὐδοκιμέω 'to have a good reputation' (Thgn.) with εὐδοκίμησις (Pl.). δοκικῶ = δοκῶ (Hermipp. 12) humorous extension, cf. Bechtel Glotta 12 (1923): 211. From προσδοκάω : προσδοκία 'expectation' also προσδόκημα (Pl. Phlb. 32c), προσδόκιμος (IA).
•ETYM δοκέω (and προσδοκάω) are deverbative derivations of primary (προσ-)δέκομαι (see ►δέχομαι). Like all secondary verbs, it originally occurred only in the present; for the other tenses, the primary verb was used. δόξαι, δόξω could belong to that primary verb if they have their -ο- after δοκέω and derive from older *δέξαι, *δέξω (Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 37; further, Schwyzer: 718). Because of their meaning, δοκεύω and δοκάζω 'to await' (Sophr., S. Fr. 221, 23) might alternatively rather belong together with -δοκάω, ►δέχομαι. The semantic relations are difficult to account for in detail. δοκέω agrees with Lat. doceō 'learn' (causative IE doḱ-éie-*). On δοκέω in general, see Fournier 1946 passim, especially 166f. For other IE cognates, see ►δέχομαι and ►δοκός.

δοκός [f.] 'bearing-beam' (Il.). ◅GR, PG?▻
•VAR Late also msc.
•DER δοκίς (Hp.), δοκίον (Arist., Delos IV[a]), δοκίδιον (Harp.). δοκίας (Phlp.), δοκεύς (Heph. Astr.) name of a comete (like δοκός, δοκίς; Scherer 1953: 107). δοκώδης 'like a beam' (gloss.). δοκόομαι 'to be fitted with beams' (pap., S. E.) with δόκωσις (LXX). From δοκός also δόκανα [n.pl.] name of two upright beams constructed with a cross-beam (Plu.), δοκάναι· αἱ στάλικες, αἷς ἵσταται τὰ λίνα, ἢ κάλαμοι 'stakes on which hunting nets are fastened, or reeds' (H.); cf. tool names in -ανον, -άνη in Schwyzer: 489f., Chantraine 1933: 198f.
•ETYM Connected to δέκομαι as an agent noun, so properly "which takes on [the covering]". Benveniste RPh. 58 (1929): 127, thinks that δοκός and δόκανα are Pre-Greek.

δολιχός [adj.] 'long' (Il.). ◅IE d(o)lh$_1$g^{h}ó-* 'long'▻ •DIAL Myc. PN do-ri-ka-o /Dolik^{h}āōn/, do-ri-ka-no /Dolik^h-ānōr/.
•COMP Often as a first member of compounds; note δολιχό-σκιος (Hom.) 'with a long shadow', of ἔγχος 'lance'.
•DER With regular accent change (Schwyzer: 420) δόλιχος [m.] 'the long course' (Att., etc.) with δολιχεύω 'run a long course', δολιχεύς 'long course runner' (Sparta II[p]); on δόλιχος as a plant name (Thphr.) see Strömberg 1937: 107[1], Strömberg 1940:

24. Poetical form with metrical lengthening δουλιχόεις (AP); TN Δολιχίστη, island before Lycia, properly a superlative, and Δουλίχιον island in the Ionic Sea (Hom.), cf. Seiler 1950: 101.
•ETYM Within Greek, we may further compare ἐνδελεχής 'continuous' (Att., etc.), together with ἐνδελέχεια, ἐνδελεχέω, -ίζω, -ισμός (like ἐν-τελής, ἐμ-μελής, etc.). δολιχός is related to Skt. dīrghá-, Av. darəya-, OCS dlъgъ, Serb. dȕg, Lith. ìlgas (with unexplained loss of d-), Hitt. talugi- (on the vocalism see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. taluki-), which derive from PIE d(o)lH-gʰo-. Further related are e.g. Lat. indulgeō 'be kind, indulgent', Go. tulgus 'firm, steadfast', and Alb. glatë, gjatë 'long' (with secondary -të?).

δόλος [m.] 'bait, any trick or device for catching, trick' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•DER δόλιος 'deceiving, tricky' (Od.) with δολιότης (LXX), δολιεύομαι 'deceive' (LXX) and δολιόω 'id.' (LXX); δολερός 'id.' (IA), δολόεις 'cunning' (Od.). Lengthened δόλευμα 'trick' (Aen. Tact.; see Chantraine 1933: 186f.). Denominative δολόω 'to beguile' (Hes.) with δόλωσις (X.) and δόλωμα (A.; Chantraine 1933: 186f.); also δολίζω 'to falsify' (Dsc.). Here also δολία = κώνειον 'hemlock' (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 64; cf. Latte ad loc.; δολάνα· μαστροπός. <Λάκωνες> 'pimp (Lacon.)' (H.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 199); also δόλοπα· κατάσκοπον, μαστροπόν 'spy, pimp' with δολοπεύει· ἐπιβουλεύει, ἐνεδρεύει 'plots, lies in wait for' (H.). On δολεών· ὁ δοθιήν 'small abscess' (H.), see ►δοθιήν.
•ETYM The identity of δόλος and Lat. dolus, Osc. dolom, -ud [acc., abl.] seems evident; yet the Italic word might have been borrowed from Greek. A group of Germanic words, ON tál [f.] 'deception, trick', OE tǣl [f.] 'blame, slander, derision', OHG zāla [f.] 'danger', which would require a lengthened grade dēlā-* (see Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916: 1, 153f.) is rather not related. Likewise, a connection with ►δαιδάλλω is quite hypothetical. Given its concrete basic meaning, it could well be a Pre-Greek word. The gloss δόλος· πάσσαλος 'stake, penis' (H.) is unclear (cf. Specht 1944: 157 and 219); cf. further ►δόλων.

δόλπαι [f.] · πλακούντια μικρά. Κῷοι 'little flat cake (Coan)' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Cf. δολβαί· θύματα· οἱ δὲ μικτὰ πλακούντια '[sacrificial] cake; mixed, little flat cake' (H.).
•ETYM Neumann 1961 compares Hitt. turpa 'kind of cake' (for offering); Anatolian or Pre-Greek origin thus seems likely.

δόλων, -ωνος [m.] 1. name of a front sail (Plb., D. S.) or the spar on such a sail (Poll.), Lat. loan dolō (Liv.); adj. δολωνικός (pap.). 2. 'secret weapon, stiletto' (Plu. TG 10). ◂GR/?▸
•DER Diminutive δολίσκος· δόλων, παραξιφίς 'dirk' (H.); Lat. dolō 'id.' (Varro).
•ETYM In the meaning 'secret weapon', δόλων (2) could be derived from ►δόλος. In the meaning 'sail', the origin is unclear; in any event, the connection with ►δέλτος, MoHG Zelt 'tent' is very weak. DELG unconvincingly argues that δόλων 1. and 2. are actually the same word. Cf. Rougé 1966: 59.

δόμος [m.] 'house, living, room' (Il.), also 'layer' (Hdt.). ◂IE dōm*, domo-* 'house'▸

•COMP Compounded substantives like ὀπισθό-, πρό- and adjectives like ἀγχί-, ἰσό-.
•DER δομόομαι 'be supplied with a house' (pap. VIᵖ).
•ETYM δόμος is related to Skt. dáma- [m.] 'house' and Lat. domus. Beside this obviously secondary o-stem, an old u-stem is found in Skt. dámū-nas- [m.] 'roommate' and Arm. tanu-tēr 'house-lord'. However, the u-stem inflexion of Lat. domus replaces older o-stem inflexion because of its feminine gender (De Vaan 2008 s.v.). See also ►δμώς. The root noun dōm*, gen. dems*, found in ►δεσπότης, ►δάπεδον (but less certainly in ►δάμαρ), is archaic. Originally, δόμος (just like ►δῶμα) is an adaptation of this root noun rather than a verbal abstract from ►δέμω. Δ(α)μία, Μνία s.v. ►Δημήτηρ are unclear.

δόναξ [m.] 'pole-reed, what is made of it, shaft of an arrow, pipe' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also δῶναξ, δοῦναξ, gen. -ακος (see below).
•DER δονακεύς 'thicket of reeds' (Σ 576 -κῆα, lengthening at verse end?; cf. Boßhardt 1942: 21f.), also 'bird-catcher' (Opp. K. 1, 73), deverbal to δονακεύομαι 'catch birds with a lime-stick' (AP); δονακών 'thicket of reeds' (Paus.); δονακήματα· αὐλήματα 'compositions for the flute' (H.); see Chantraine 1933: 178. δονακώδης 'rich in reed' (B.), δονακόεις 'id.' (E.), δονάκινος (H. s.v. κερκίδας; uncertain); δονακῖτις 'made of reed', also plant name (AP; Strömberg 1940: 36); δονακηδόν 'reed-like' (A.D.). Uncertain Δονάκτας epithet of Apollo (Theopomp. Hist. 281), perhaps for Δονακίτης (Redard 1949: 208).
•ETYM Frisk (with lit.) explains the variants δῶναξ (Theoc. 20, 29 beside δόναξ Ep. 2, 3 and Pi. P. 12, 25) and δοῦναξ (AP) as hyperdialectisms (for δοῦναξ, Schulze 1892: 205 has proposed metrical lengthening as an alternative). However, this can hardly be correct: more plausibly, they all are variants of a Pre-Greek word (see Pre-Greek 6.1 on vowels, where we find ο/ ου and ου/ ω). Pre-Greek origin is further confirmed by the suffix -αξ. Non-Greek origin was already advocated by Nehring Glotta 14 (1925): 181. A connection with δονέω 'to shake' (see the parallels in Strömberg 1940: 76f.) is most doubtful, whereas Latv. duonis 'reed' cannot be compared because it require long ō* (incompatible with δόναξ, which cannot have its short ο from δονέω). Nor is Go. tains 'twig', etc. related. As a semantic variant, δόναξ may also refer to the fish σωλήν (Ath.).

δονέω [v.] 'to shake' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. δονῆσαι.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἁλί-δονος 'driven around on sea' (A.).
•DER δόνημα (Luc.).
•ETYM No etymology.

δόξα [f.] 'opinion, glory, splendour' (Il. since K 324). ◂IE? deḱ-* 'accept', PG?▸
•DER Diminutive δοξάριον (Arr.); denominative δοξάζω 'to deem, praise' (trag., Th.) with δόξασμα, δοξασμός, δοξαστής, -αστός, -αστικός (Att., etc.), also δοξασία (D. C.) and δόξασις (Simp.); δοξόομαι 'to have the name' (Hdt.).
•ETYM The word is connected with δοκέω, but of unclear formation. Leumann 1950: 173ff. rejects the older proposals *δόκ-τι̯ᾰ, *δόκ-σᾱ, but his own theory is also improbable (see Fraenkel Gnomon 23 (1951): 374). With its short final -α, the word could be Pre-Greek (cf. Pre-Greek: C 3.1). Cf. Szemerényi 1964: 376[4].

δορά [f.] = δοκός 'beam' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM The gloss Cret. δορά = δοκός (EM, H.) is considered uncertain; see Latte. Derivation from δόρυ is difficult to maintain.

δορίαλλος [m.] (Ar. Fr. 367) ἔστι δὲ τὸ γυναικεῖον αἰδοῖον ἐφ' ὕβρει τραγῳδοποιοῦ Δορίλλου 'female genitals with reference to the insolence of the tragic poet Dorillos' (Et. Gen., Et. Gud. 375,8, EM 283, 46). H. has δορύαλλος. ◁?▷
•VAR Also δόριλλος.
•ETYM Unexplained. See Maas KZ 58 (1930): 127f. and Taillardat 1962: §105. The name of the poet is given as Δοριλᾶος in the life of Euripides of Satyros (P.Oxy. 9, 1176).

δόρκαι [f.] · κονίδες 'eggs of lice, fleas and bugs, nits' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. Frisk compared δερκύλλειν· αἱμοποτεῖν 'suck blood' (H.; beside δερμύλλειν from δέρμα).

δορκάς, -άδος [f.] 'a kind of deer, roe, gazelle' (Hdt. 7, 69). ◁LW Celt.▷
•DER Other forms: δόρξ (Call.; acc. δόρκᾰν E. H. F. 376 [lyr.]; δόρκα Dindorf), δόρκος (Dsc.), δόρκων (LXX); also ζορκάς (Hdt. 4, 192), ζόρξ (Call.); ἴορκος (Opp.), ἴορκες, ἴυρκες (H.). Diminutives: δορκάδιον (LXX, Delos III[a]), also a plant (André 1958 s.v.); δορκαλίς (Call.; on -αλ-ιδ- Chantraine 1933: 251f., 344); δορκαλῖδες 'dice from the bones of δ.' (Herod.; on -ῑδ- see Chantraine 1933: 346f.); δορκαλίδες· ὄργανόν ἐστι κολαστικόν τε· ἢ μάστιγες αἱ ἀπὸ ἱμάντων δορκάδων 'a corrective instrument; whips from the leather straps of deer' (Suid.); δορκάδε(ι)ος 'made from the bones of δ.' (ἀστράγαλος, Thphr., inscr., pap.; see S. Schmid 1950: 52), δόρκειος (Theognost.), δόρκιος (Edict. Diocl.). PN Δορκεύς, etc., see Boßhardt 1942: 130.
•ETYM Like δόρκος and δόρκων, δορκάς (built like κεμάς, etc.) was derived from the root noun δόρξ. If we start from the forms with ζ-, it agrees with a Celtic word for 'roe', Co. yorch, Bret. iourc'h 'roe', MW iwrch 'caprea mas', which points to IE iork-o-*. The δ-forms are perhaps folk-etymological, after δέρκομαι; ἴορκος, etc. may be a Celtic (Galatic) LW. See Sommer 1905: 147f.

δόρπον [n.] 'evening-meal' (Il.). ◁LW?▷
•VAR Hell. and late also -ος [m.].
•DIAL Myc. do-qe-ja /dorkʷeja/?
•DER δόρπιον 'time for dinner' (Hp. Epid. 5, 22 v.l.), δόρπιος 'ptng. to the δ.' (Nonn.); δορπήϊα [n.pl.] 'food, meal' (Nic.; cf. ξεινήϊα), Δορπία [f.] 'evening before a festival, especially the Apaturia' (Hdt.). Denominative δορπέω 'take the evening meal' (Hom.), δορπιάζειν· δειπνεῖν 'to take a meal' (H.; cf. συμποσι-άζειν). δορπηστός [m.] (scil. καιρός) 'time for dinner' (Hp.), cf. δειπνηστός s.v. ►δεῖπνον.
•ETYM δόρπον could be combined with Alb. darkë 'evening (meal)' as a hypothetical dorkʷ-o-* (Mann Lang. 26 (1950): 384f., Porzig 1954a: 178). Further connections are unknown. The limited distribution of the word (only Albanian and Greek) suggests that it is a borrowing of some sort.

δόρυ [n.] 'wood, tree (trunk), spear' (Il.; on the epic use Trümpy 1950: 52ff.). ◁IE doru* 'tree, wood'▷ •VAR Gen. δόρατος (Att.), δορός (trag.), δουρός and δούρατος (Hom.); dual δοῦρε (Hom.), plur. δόρατα, δοῦρα, δούρατα.
•COMP As a first member in several compounds (many PNs), beside δορυ- (δορατο-, δουρο-) also δο(υ)ρι-; as a dative (instrumental) in δουρι-κλειτός, etc., also analogical without case function. Note δορυ-σσόος 'throwing a spear' (Hes. Sc. 54; to σείω), δουρηνεκές < *δορϝ-ηνεκές [adv.] 'a spear's throw distant' (K 357, to ἐνεγκεῖν, cf. διηνεκής). Also δωρι- in PNs, e.g. in Δωρί-μαχος (Dor., Boeot.), Δωρι-κλῆς (Arc., Dor.); also ►ἀσχέ-δωρος, s.v.; (-)δωρ- is regular for -δορϝ-ος in some Doric dialects, and these names were probably borrowed by the other dialects.
•DER Diminutives δοράτιον (Hdt.), δορύδιον (auct. apud Orib. 47, 17, 5), δορύλλιον (Suid.); adjectives δουράτεος 'wooden' (Od.; of ἵππος, etc.), also δούρειος (E. Tr. 14), δούριος (Ar. Av. 1128), δορήϊος (AP 15, 14); epic reminiscences, see Schulze 1892: 102[516].
Denominative verb δορατίζομαι 'fight with the spear' (H.) with δορατισμός (Plu.). Uncertain ►δορά (< *δορϝ-ά) = δοκός. PNs Δορύλαος, Δορίμαχος; with Doric lengthening upon loss of ϝ: Δωρίμαχος, Δωρικλῆς (see above). Short names: Δοῦρις, Δορίης, etc.
•ETYM δόρυ is related to Skt. dā́ru, Av. dāuru 'wood', Hitt. tāru 'wood' and ToAB or 'id.' (with loss of d-* in forms with dr-), which reflect PIE doru, gen. dreus*. Beside this old neuter originally denoting only 'wood', there was a feminine word for 'tree, oak': ►δρῦς. Cf. also ►δρυμά and ►δένδρεον.

δορύκνιον [n.] plant name, 'Convolvulus oleofolius', etc. (Dsc.). ◁PG(V)▷ •DER Diminutive δορυκνίδιον (Gal.).
•ETYM No etymology. Fur.: 183 compares ►στρύχνον, ►τρύχνον (Nic., Gal.; see s.v), -ος (Theocr.). He remarks that, after σ-, we often find the voiceless variant. On the epenthesis, cf. (σ)κόνυζα/ κνύζα, κολυμβάς/ κλύβατις (ibid. 183[9]); thus he assumes that this word stands for *δρυκ(χ?)νιον.

δοῦλος [m.] 'slave, servant', also as an adjective with compar. δουλότερος (Hdt.); δούλη [f.] 'slave-woman, maid' (Il.); on the spread see E. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 74f. ◁PG?▷
•VAR δῶλος Cret.
•DIAL Myc. do-e-ro, do-e-ra /dohelos/, /dohelā/.
•COMP Many substantival and adjectival compounds.
•DER δουλίς [f.] (Hyp.; cf. Schwyzer: 127 and 465) with δουλίδιον (H.), δουλάριον (Ar.). δουλοσύνη 'servitude' (Ion., Od.) with δουλόσυνος (E. Hec. 448 [lyr.]); see Frisk Eranos 43 (1945): 220. δούλιος, -ειος 'slavish, of a servant' (Hom.), δούλεος 'id.' (A. R.), δουλικός 'id.' (Att., etc.), δουλικά (σώματα) [n.pl.] 'slaves' (Peripl. M. Rubr., pap.).
Denominative verb δουλεύω 'to be a slave, serve' (IA) with δουλεία, Ion. -ηΐη 'servanthood', δούλευμα 'id.' (trag.; see Chantraine 1933: 186), δουλεύτρια 'female servant' (Eust.); δουλόομαι, -όω 'to be made servant' (IA) with δούλωσις (Th.) and δουλωτικός (Plu.).

•ETYM The Mycenaean forms point to *δόελος, probably from *δοhελος. δοῦλος is certainly not inherited (pace e.g. Neumann 1986: 489-496), although a borrowing from Carian or Lydian (as argued by Lambertz Glotta 6 (1915): 1ff.; Benveniste RELat. 10 (1932): 438f.) is difficult to account for chronologically, since the word appears already in Mycenaean (Risch Kratylos 29 (1984): 96f.). Conversely, Pre-Greek origin is a good possibility.

δοῦμος [m.] an Anatolian religious community, connected with the Magna Mater (Hippon., inscr., AP). ◂LW Phr.▸ •ETYM A Phrygian word; it has been connected with Gr. θωμός 'heap' and Gm. words like Go. doms 'judgement', but without further confirmation. Cf. Wikander 1946: 1ff. Masson found the word in Hipponax (ed. 123). Cf. bibliogr. Bull. Ep. 1992 n° 202. The idea of Neumann 1999: 345-353 that the word primarily indicated the building in which the meetings are held is rejected by Lubotsky 1997a: 124-125.

δοῦπος [m.] 'dull, heavy sound' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•COMP In ἐρί-δουπος, also ἐρί-γδουπος 'thundering loud' (Il.); anlaut γδ- also in ἐγδούπησαν (Λ 45) and μασίγδουπον βασιλῆα· μεγαλόηχον 'with heavy sound', ... (H.), and also in ἀλί-, βαρύ-, μελί-γδουπος. Other compounds have -δουπος.
•DER δουπέω, aor. δουπῆσαι, perf. ptc. δεδουπότος [gen.sg.] (Ψ 679; innovation, see Schwyzer: 771) 'sound heavily', secondarily (through misunderstanding δούπησεν δὲ πεσών, Leumann 1950: 217) 'fall in battle' (Il.).
•ETYM δουπέω is an intensive like βρομέω, etc. It shows some resemblance to Latv. dupêtiês 'sound dead', SCr. dùpiti 'slay (with sound)', and ToAB täp- 'give a loud sound, announce', but the initial gd-* (found in the compounds) is not known from PIE. Therefore, the word is probably Pre-Greek. Cf. ►κτυπέω, ►κτύπος.

δοχμός [adj.] 'oblique, slanted' (Il., Delphi II^a). ◂IE dh₂ǵʰmo-* 'oblique'▸ •DER δόχμιος 'id.' (Ar.), also in metre 'versus dochmius' (Choerob.) together with δοχμιακός, δοχμικός, δοχμαικός, δοχμιάζω (sch.). δόχμη or δοχμή 'breadth of the hand', from 'oblique'. Denominative δοχμόομαι (δοχμωθείς) 'to turn sideways' (Hes., h. Merc.), aor. act. and med. δοχμῶσαι, -ώσασθαι (Nonn.). δοχμαλόν· χαμαίζηλον, ταπεινόν 'low' (H.), after χθαμαλός.
•ETYM In its formation, δοχμός is identical to Skt. jihmá- 'oblique', from PIE dh₂ǵʰmo-*. In Skt. jihmá-, the j- from d- must be due to assimilation to the velar (PIIr. jijʰmá- < dijʰmá-; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. jihmá-).

δραγατεύω [v.] probably 'to oversee a land with cereals or a vineyard' (Thess. III^a). ◂?▸ •ETYM From δραγάτης *'cutter, laborer in the fields', MoGr. 'id.' (ἀρχιδραγάτης, Ankyra II^p); connected by Zingerle Glotta 15 (1927): 70ff. to ►δράσσομαι after ἐργατεύομαι : ἐργάτης. Zingerle adduces δραξῶν· ἐν Σικελίᾳ ἱερόν ..., εἰς ὅ οἱ γεωργοὶ εὐχὰς ἔπεμπον, ὅθεν καὶ δραξόνες (δρασοντες cod.) ἐκλήθησαν 'temple in Sicily, to which farmer sent prayers; because of that, they were called δ.' (H.); see Latte ad loc. See Georgacas Orbis 4 (1956): 91ff.

δραϝεõς [acc.pl.f.] name of something dedicated to Athena (SGDI 1537, Phocis [VI^a]). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word has been compared with δραιόν· μάκραν, πύελον 'bath tub, trough' (H.) and ►δροίτη, but this is quite hypothetical.

δράκων, -οντος [m.] 'dragon, serpent' (Il.), also a fish, 'Trachinus' (Epich., cf. Strömberg 1943: 121f.). ◂IE dr̥ḱ-* 'look at'▸ •VAR Fem. δράκαινα 'female dragon' (h. Ap., A.) with δρακαινίς a fish name (Com.); see below.
•DER Diminutive δρακόντιον (Delos III^a), also a plant 'Arum dracunculum' (Hp.; after the color, Strömberg 1940: 38); δρακοντίς name of a bird (Ant. Lib.; see Thompson 1895: 91); δρακοντία a plant (Ps.-Dsc.); δρακοντίας (πυρός, σίκυς, πελειάς, Thphr.); δρακοντίτης (λίθος; Ptol. Chenn., see Redard 1949: 54). δρακόντειος and δρακοντώδης 'like a dragon' (E.). δρακοντίασις name of a disease (Gal.) as if from *δρακοντιάω, after the words in -ίασις, cf. Holt 1941: 137³.
•ETYM On the assumption that the dragon was named after his paralyzing sight (despite doubts by Fick BB 18 (1892): 99), δράκων is probably related to δέρκομαι. It could then be an original n-stem (cf. δράκαινα) of a root noun *δρά(κ) = Skt. dŕ̥ś- 'view' (cf. ►ὑπό-δρα s.v.), whereas the nt-stem was formed after the participles (Schwyzer: 526; Chantraine 1933: 268).

δράλαινα [adj.] ·λαμυρά. Κῷοι 'full of abysses (Coan)' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER PN Δραλᾶς (Maeonia) and Δράλιος (Ceos, Schwyzer: 764).
•ETYM Unknown.

δραμεῖν [v.aor.] 'run' (Il.). ◂IE drem-* 'run'▸ •VAR Fut. δραμοῦμαι (IA), perf. δέδρομα (Od.), δεδρόμᾱκα (Sapph.; see below), δεδράμηκα (IA); aor. to τρέχω.
•DER ►δρόμος 'course' with δρομή (Hdn.), δράμημα 'id.' (Hdt.), also δρόμημα (APl.). Deverbative δρομάασκε (Hes. Fr. 117 v.l.); δρομήσασα (Vett. Val.); δεδρόμᾱκε [perf.] (Sapph., fr. 31 LP; Aeolic zero grade?), δρομάσσειν· τρέχειν 'to run' (H.); also δρωμᾷ· τρέχει and δρωμίσσουσα· τρέχουσα (H.); see Schwyzer 718f.
•ETYM The aorist and perfect stem δραμ-, δρομ- are found beside δρᾱ- in ἔ-δρᾱ-ν, etc. (see ►ἀπο-διδράσκω), just as the present stem βαν- < *βαμ- in βαίνω is found next to βᾱ- in ἔ-βη-ν. Outside Greek, a good match is offered by Skt. pres. dramati (gramm.), intensive ptc.med. dandramyamāṇa- 'run'. However, the connection with OE trem 'footstep', etc. is uncertain. Thus, we have IE drem- : dreh₂-* like gʷem- : gʷeh₂-*; see ►βαίνω. A third variant is seen in Skt. drávati 'run' < dreu-*. As a present of δραμεῖν, Greek has τρέχειν; on the aspect, see Benveniste 1935: 120.

δράμις [f.] kind of bread, Macedonian acc. to Seleuc. apud Ath. 3, 114b. ◂?▸
•ETYM The word is reminiscent of ►δαράται; further details are unknown. Cf. Pisani Rev. Int. ét. balk. 3 (1937): 11, and Kalléris 1954: 158f.

δραπέτης ⇒διδράσκω.

δράσσομαι [v.] 'to grasp, take handfuls' (Il., IA). ◂IE? dregʰ-* (LIV² 126)▸ •VAR Att. δράττομαι; aor. δράξασθαι, perf. δέδραγμαι.
•COMP Compounds with δια-, ἐν-, κατα-.
•DER δράγμα 'handful, especially of corn stalks' (Il.), together with δραγμεύω 'collect sheaves' (Σ 555) as if from δραγμός (E. Cyc. 170) for metrically impossible δραγματεύω (Eust. 1162, 17); also δραγμίς 'small handful' (Hp. Morb. 2, 55, v.l. of δραχμίς), δραγμή 'id.' (EM); on ►δραχμή s.v.; δράγδην 'grasping with the hand' (Plu., Q. S.). Retrograde formation δράξ, -κός [f.] 'handful' (LXX); with metathesis δάρκες· δέσμαι 'handful' (H.). On ►δραγατεύω (δραξών), see s.v. Unclear δρακτόν 'small vase' (inscr.).
•ETYM δράσσομαι is a yod-present from a root *δρακ- or *δράχ-, of which the zero grade was generalized throughout the paradigm. A relationship with Arm. trcʻ-ak 'Reisigbündel' has been considered, where the original word-final -cʻ is supposed to continue a sequence of velars; an IE ē or ō (PArm. i or u) must have disappeared between t- and r (or between r and cʻ). OCS po-dragъ 'edge, border of cloth' is not related (rather, to Ru. dërgat' 'pull, tug' and OE tiergan 'annoy', etc.). LIV² s.v. dregʰ-* connects the word with Av. dražaite 'holds', etc., and analyzes the Greek as a formation dr-n-gʰ-i̯e-* or dr̥gʰ-i̯e-*. The latter solution seems the most attractive. See under ►δραχμή.

δραχμή [f.] 'drachm', weight and coin (IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR δαρχμα (Arc., El., Cnossos), δαρκνα (Gortyn, /-kʰnā/, < -χμά Schwyzer: 215f.).
•DER δραχμιαῖος 'worth a δ.' (Att., etc.; after ἡμιωβολιαῖος, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 49), also δραχμαῖος, -ήϊος (Nic.); Diminutive δραχμίον (Aristeas).
•ETYM Usually taken as a verbal noun in -(σ)μη/ᾱ from ►δράσσομαι, properly meaning 'grasp of the hand, handful' (of oboles), based on comparison with σπιθαμή, πυγμή, etc., with δραχ- and δαρχ- in the zero grade. However, the two variants δραχ- and δαρχ- suggest that this is not a zero grade from PGr. drkʰ-*, and therefore, that it is a Pre-Greek word (cf. also δάρκες s.v. ►δράσσομαι); this is not noted in Fur.: From δραχμή comes Arab. dirham, Arm. dram, etc.; see Bailey BSOAS 13 (1949-1950): 128f.

δρᾱ́ω [v.] 'to make, do' (Od.; Att. prose has πράττω and ποιέω). ◂?▸
•VAR Aeol. 3sg. δραῖσι, aor. δρᾶσαι, etc.
•COMP Compounds with ἀνα-, ἀντι-, ἐπι-, παρα-, συν-, ὑπο-.
•DER δρᾶμα 'action, spectacle, drama' (A.) with diminutive δραμάτιον (Plu.) and δραματικός 'dramatic' (Arist.); with analogical σ (cf. δρηστήρ below): δρασμάτων· πανουργημάτων 'tricks, villanies' (H.) and δρασματικός = δραστήριος (Cat. Cod. Astr.); lengthened form δραμοσύνη 'holy service' (Attica IVᵃ), beside δρησμοσύνη 'id.' (h. Cer. 476) from *δρήσμων, cf. Chantraine 1933: 174. δρᾶσις 'action, strength' (A. D.) with τὸ δράσιμον (A. Th. 554). Wwith analogical σ (Schwyzer: 531): δρηστήρ, fem. δρήστειρα (Od.), δρήστης, δράστης, δράστας (Archil., Pi.) 'servant (maid)' (Fraenkel 1910: 167f.) together with δραστήριος 'active' (A.), δραστηριότης (Eust.) and δραστηριώδης (Gal.), δραστικός 'active' (Pl.), δρηστοσύνη 'obligingness' (ο 321); denominative δρηστεύω 'to serve (at a sacred act)' (Lesbos). Desiderative δρᾱσείω 'want to do' (S.). Beside δράω, we find δραίνω (formed after βαίνω, φαίνω, etc.) 'want to do, can do' (K 96, Herod.; an Ionism acc. to Bechtel 1914, Chantraine 1942: 343) with ὀλιγο-δρᾰνέων 'who can do little' (Il.; from ὀλίγα δραίνειν to ὀλιγηπελέων, cf. Schwyzer: 724, Chantraine 1942: 349; different analysis in Bechtel 1914 s.v. ὀλιγοδρανέω), with ὀλιγοδρᾰνία (A.), ὀλιγοδρᾰνής (Ar.); innovation ἀδρᾰνής (LXX, Arr.) with ἀδράνεια (Hdn.), ἀδρανίη (A. R.), ἀδρανέω 'be inactive' (Arat.), ἀδρανίζω 'id.' (sch.); as backformation δράνος· ἔργον, πρᾶξις, ὄργανον, ἄγαλμα, κατασκεύασμα, δύναμις 'work, action, tool, sculpture, work of art, ability' (H.; also MoGr. δράνα 'tendril'?, Bogiatzides Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 27 (1888): 115ff.), δρανεῖς· δραστικοί 'active' (H.).
•ETYM If δραίνω is a younger form, then the root was δρᾱ- (cf. κρᾱ-, τλᾱ-, etc.). Connection with Baltic words like Lith. daraũ, darýti, Latv. darît 'do, make, build' is quite uncertain (cf. Schwyzer: 675): Fraenkel 1955 (s.v.) considers darýti to be a causative of derù, derëti 'be useful', and further connects Skt. dhár-ma-, dhāráyati 'hold', etc. On δράω, δρᾶμα, see Snell Phil. Suppl. 20:1 (1928): 1ff. and Snell Phil. 85 (1930): 141ff.

δράω 2 [v.] 'to see' (A.D. Adv. 139, 8, EM 287,7). ◂GR▸ •DER δρᾶσις = βλέψις; οἱ δρατοί = ὀφθαλμοί.
•ETYM These forms were invented by grammarians to explain ὑπόδρα.

δρέπω [v.] 'to pluck, cut off' (Od.). ◂IE? drep-* 'pluck'▸ •VAR Aor. δρέψαι (also δραπών Pi., δρόπωσιν [subj.] Alc.); pres. δρέπτω (Mosch.).
•COMP Compounds with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐπι-, κατα-. In composition often -η- for -ο-, e.g. δρεπανη-φόρος 'sickle-carrying' (X.); cf. Schwyzer: 438f.
•DER δρεπάνη (Il.), δρέπανον (Od.) 'sickle' (δράπανον epigr.) together with δρεπανηΐς 'id.' (Nic.; Chantraine 1933: 346), δρεπάνιον (Seleuc. apud Ath.); δρεπανίς the bird 'Alpine swift' (Arist., after the shape of the wings, Thompson 1895 s.v.; H. also has δραπανίδες· εἶδος ὀρνέου 'a kind of bird'), δρεπανώδης 'sickle-shaped' (Agath.). δρέμμα· κλέμμα ("about stealing fruit?", von Blumenthal 1930: 35, unless for κλῆμα), οἱ δὲ κλάσμα 'fragment' (H.). δρεπτεῖς (H.), δρεπεῖς (EM) = τρυγηταί, 'vintagers', see Boßhardt 1942: 81. Beside δρέπω stands (with lengthened grade) δρῶπαξ [m.] 'ichthyol', together with δρωπακίζω 'apply a depilatory' and δρωπακισμός, -ιστής, -ίστρια (medic.). Also δρώπτης· πλανήτης, πτωχός 'wanderer, beggar' (H.) ?
•ETYM The lengthened grade of δρωπ- is matched by a Slavic word for 'scratch, tear', e.g. Ru. drápat' (secondary drjáp-), Pol. drapać, SCr. drâpām, drápati, etc. (the ō-grade points to an old root noun, which may be secondary in Slavic); the zero grade (δραπών, etc.) occurs in Bulg. dъ́rpam, SCr. dȑpām, dȑpati. Very uncertain is the relation with ON trǫf [n.pl.] 'fringes', etc. (< IE drop-*) and Gallo-Rom. drappus 'cloth, linen', etc. δρέπω might be an extension of δέρω as dr-ep-*; compare ►τρέπω, ►κλέπτω. A parallel of δρεπάνη is Arm. artevan, -anacʻ 'eyebrow' (named after its shape); see De Lamberterie REArm. 17 (1983): 21f. and discussion in Clackson 1994: 109-112 (an old loan from Greek?). Alb. drapën 'sickle' is a loan from Greek.

δρηστεύω •VAR δρηστήρ, etc. ⇒ δράω.

δρῖλος [m.] 'circumcised man', = verpus in Latin glosses (AP, Amphissa; on the mg. Diels & Brugmann IF 15 (1903-1904): 4-6). ◄?►
•DER δρίλακες· βδέλλαι 'leeches' (H.; Chantraine 1933: 380).
•ETYM No etymology. M. Scheller (in Pok. 208) adduces δριάουσαν· θάλλουσαν 'flourishing' (H.), which, like δριάεντα· χλωρά, is based on δρίος, plur. δρία 'bush, shrubs'; the supposed meaning 'swelling' (whence both 'circumcised man' [: 'penis'] and 'leech') is a mere guess. See Kretschmer Glotta 14 (1925): 229, contra H. Petersson (Arm. titeṙn 'crocodile') . Other suggestions can be found in von Loewenthal WuS 10 (1927): 186 and Sapir Lang. 15 (1940): 185. See also ► κροκόδιλος.

δριμύς [adj.] 'sharp, sour, bitter' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•COMP δριμυλέων as a philosophical nickname (Gal.).
•DER δριμύλος 'piercing' (Mosch.; diminutive, cf. ἡδύλος, etc., Chantraine 1933: 250); δριμύτης, -ητος [f.] 'sharpness, etc.' (IA). Denominative δριμύσσω 'cause a biting pain' (especially medic.; Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 243) with δρίμυξις 'smarting' and δριμυγμός 'pungency'; also δριμεύω 'to itch' (Anon. in EN).
•ETYM The old interpretation (Persson 1912(2): 779) as 'splitting, cutting', from *δρῐσ-μύς (replacing *δρῐσ-μός), is not convincing. Since the word has no etymology, we might consider Pre-Greek origin.

δρίος [n.] 'bush, shrubs' (ξ 353; cf. ἄλσος 'grove', τάρφος 'thicket', etc.). ◄?►
•VAR Plur. δρία; δριοι [dat.pl.] (IG 14, 217: 43).
•DER Perhaps δριών 'δενδρών ("thicket")' in ἐν δριῶνας (Meineke; cod. ἐνδριώνας)· δρόμος παρθένων ἐν Λακεδαίμονι 'maidens' race in Laconia' (H.).
•ETYM Pedersen 1909: 80 compared OIr. driss 'vepres' (suffix -st-); this is unclear. The word is often combined with ► δρῦς, etc.; the formation remains unclear in any case. Not connected here (as per Osthoff 1901: 156ff.) is δρίς· δύναμις 'potential' (H.). Also unclear are δράεντα· χλωρά 'green' and δριάουσαν· θάλλουσαν 'flourishing' (H.).

δροίτη [f.] 'bathtub' (A.), also 'cradle' (Alex. Aet.), 'coffin' (Parth.), name of a dance (H.; see Lawler AmJPh. 71 (1950): 70ff.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Cf. δοῖτρον· πύελον 'trough', σκάφην 'trough, tray' (H.), dissimilated from *δροῖτρον?
•ETYM Although the word has no good etymology, its suffix -ιτα suggests Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 238[45]). Not attractive is the connection with OE trīg, MoE tray 'flat trough, dish' (from PGm. trau-i̯a-, IE drou-io- of 'wood'); indeed, any relationship with ► δρῦς) is probably due to secondary association. For example, the younger form δρύτη could be due to the pronunciation υ for οι, or else result from influence of δρῦς. Lat. durēta 'wooden bath tub' is probably borrowed from the Greek (Schwyzer KZ 62 (1935): 199ff.).

δρόμος [m.] 'run, race, course' (Il.); = γυμνάσιον 'school' (Crete; cf. on δρομεύς below). ◄IE drem-* 'run'►

•DER δρομεύς 'runner' (Att.), 'ἔφηβος' (Cret.); δρομάς [f.] (also [m., n.]) 'running' (S., cf. Schwyzer: 507, Chantraine 1933: 354), also used for the camel (D. S.), as a loan Lat. dromas with dromedārius, whence δρομεδάριος, δρομαδάριος 'dromedary' (pap.); δρομαῖος 'running' (S.), δρομικός 'for running, quick' (Pl.) with δρομικότης (Simp.); Δρόμιος epithet of Hermes (Crete), Δρομήϊος month name (Crete); late and rare δρομίας name of a fish and a crab (Eratosth.; see Strömberg 1943: 51f., Thompson 1947 s.v. δρόμων); δρομαλός epithet of λαγωός 'hare' (H.), δρόμων 'light ship' (Procop.), = ὁ μικρὸς καρκίνος 'the small crab' (H.), cf. on δρομίας; δρόμαξ 'good at running' (of κάμηλος 'camel', Gp.); δρόμιον 'running match' (Tab. Defix. Aud., Rome IV-V[p]). δρομή = δρόμος 'run, race, course' (Hdn. Gr.).
•ETYM Derived from ► δραμεῖν.

δρόξιμα [n.pl.] 'uncooked, raw fruits' (pap. V-VI[p]). ◄?► •ETYM = τρώξιμα 'id.' (from τρώγω), via a folk-etymological reshaping after δρόσος 'dew', δροσερός 'fresh' (e.g. of λάχανα 'vegetables' Ar. Pl. 298)?

δροόν [adj.] · ἰσχυρόν. Ἀργεῖοι 'strong (Arg.)' (H.). ◄IE drou-* 'wood'► •ETYM From *δροϝ-όν, properly 'made of heartwood', from the word for 'wood' in ► δόρυ, ► δρῦς. Compare OE trīg 'tray' < IE drou-io-* (see ► δροίτη); also, Go. trauan. The same word is supposed in PN Δρούθου [gen.], Telos II[a]. ἔνδροια· καρδία δένδρου καὶ τὸ μέσον 'heart of the tree, the middle part' (H.) may stand for ἔνδρυα. See Osthoff 1901: 145ff.

δρόσος [f.] 'dew', often of several fluids (Hdt., Pi.); in A. Ag. 141 (lyr., pl.) = 'young animals' (λεόντων), thus Call. Hec. 1, 2, 3; acc. to Bechtel 1914: 139 and Benveniste BSL 45 (1949): 102[1] metonymic; different Leumann 1950: 258[11]; cf. on ► ἔρσαι. ◄PG► •VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 32[4], 34[1].
•DER Adjectives mg. 'dewy, fluid': δροσόεις (Sapph.), δροσώδης (com.), δροσερός (E.), δροσινός (AP), δρόσιμος (Plu.). Abstract δροσία (Orac. apud Luc. Alex. 53, Cat. Cod. Astr., also MoGr.; on the mg. see Scheller 1951: 54f.). Hypocoristic δροσαλλίς name of a Bithynian wine (Gp.); see Chantraine 1933: 252. Denominative δροσίζω 'to sprinkle, make dew' (Ar.) with δροσισμός (Olymp. Alch.); δροσόομαι 'to be sprinkled with dew' (Anacreont.).
•ETYM The word is probably of Pre-Greek origin (note the intervocalic -σ-; for older views, cf. Bq; Sapir Lang. 15 (1940): 185).

δροτῆτα (Π 857, etc.) ⇒ ἀνήρ.

δρυάσαι ⇒ δενδρύω.

δρῠμά [n.pl.] 'wood, forest' (Il.). ◄IE dru-* 'wood, tree'► •VAR Late also δρῦμά, see below.
•DER δρυμός 'bush, thicket' (SIG 57, 28 [V[a]]); δρυμώδης 'forested', δρύμιος 'who passes a forest' (Cyprus); δρυμίους· τοὺς κατὰ τὴν χώραν κακοποιοῦντες (i.e. 'brigands living in the woods'); δρυμεῖτις (read -ῖτις?) scil. γῆ 'forested country' (pap.); δρυμών -ῶνος 'forest' (J.). δρυμίς -ίδος = δρυάς (An. Ox. 1, 225).

•ETYM Neutral collective of *δρῦμός = Skt. druma- [m.] 'tree', Ru. drom 'thicket, forest', an IE derivation in -m- of the word for 'wood, tree'; see ►δόρυ and ►δρῦς. The length of the vowel, seen in the sing. δρῦμός and the masc. plural forms only, is taken from δρῦς; see Wackernagel 1916: 184ff. On the ntr. plur., see Schwyzer: 581. Differently, Machek Listy filol. 72 (1948): 71.

δρυμάσσω [v.] 'to tear up, crush', intrans. 'to creak' (= ληκεῖν Poll. 5, 93), also obscene uses; cf. H.: δρυμάξεις· κυρίως μὲν σπαράξεις. χρῶνται δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ συνέσει καὶ προσομιλήσεις 'commonly: retching; also used for coition and sexual intercourse' (Com. Adesp. 986); δρυμάσσειν καὶ δρυμάξαι· τὸ τύπτειν ξύλοις 'to beat with clubs'. ἐδρύμαξεν· ἔθραυσεν, ἔσφαξεν 'he shattered, slayed'. ἀδρύμακτον· καθαρόν 'clear, clean'. ◂PG?▸
•VAR Att. -ττω; aor. δρυμάξαι, fut. δρυμάξω.
•ETYM Expressive formation. Nevertheless, a cross of δρύπτω with another verb (e.g. μάσσω, ἱμάσσω, as suggested by Frisk) does not seem probable. Rather, a derivation in -ακ- from δρύπτω, with -μ- for -π- (see Fur.: 224f., and cf. 326 on δρυφ-, δρυψ-). The explanation of 'τύπτειν ξύλοις' (H.) is probably folk etymological (based on δρυμός?).

δρῦμός ⇒δρῦμά.

δρυπεπής [adj.] 'having ripened on the tree', about black olives (Ar. Lys. 564). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From δρυ- and πέπων. δρύπιος, said of ἄγρος (IG 9(1), 61), is unclear; so too is δρύπεπα (AP 6, 191), which may be an isolated innovation. The same holds for δρύππα (AP 6, 299); can it be a Latin form? Note that Ath. 56 said that the accus. plur. δρυππας is Roman. Δρυπετής would be a later change in the form; it may have existed because of δρυπετεῖς· ἀπὸ δένδρου πεπτωκυίας 'fallen from the tree' (H.).

δρύπτω [v.] 'to scratch', especially as a sign of mourning (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. δρύψαι, opt. ἀπο-δρύφοι (Ψ 187 = Ω 21), probably pres., cf. δρυφόμενοι· φθειρόμενοι (H.).
•DER ἀμφι-δρυφής, ἀμφί-δρυφος 'scratched on both sides (cheeks)' (Il.); δρυπίς [f.] name of a thorn-bush (Thphr.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 76. Only lexical δρυφή· ἀμυχή, καταξυσμή 'scratch', δρυφάδες· ὄνυχες, καταξύσματα 'talons, scratchings'. λῦπαι, ὀδύναι 'pains'. ἢ τὰ ἀπὸ πληγῶν πελιώματα 'livid spots from blows', δρύφη· ξέσματα 'abrasion' (H.). δρυφάξαι· θακεῖν 'to sit' (H.). With -σ-: δρύψαλα 'leaves', δρύψελα· πέταλα δρυώδη 'tree-like leaves' (H.), δρύψια 'shavings'; δρυψόπαιδα· τὴν λαμυράν 'impudent female'· οἱ δὲ ἁπαλόπαιδα ἢ ἐλεεινόν 'delicate child; pitiable' (H.); δρυψογέροντας· τοὺς ἀτόπους πρεσβύτας καὶ οἱονεὶ ἀτίμους 'remarkable seniors, as if dishonored' (H.).
•ETYM Expressive form, usually connected with ►δέρω, ►δρέπω. However, the word was hardly reshaped after ►θρύπτω. The variants δρυφ-, δρυψ-, and ►δρυμ-άσσω clearly point to a Pre-Greek word (and therefore it is improbable that it derives from IE δέρω); see Fur. 326, 348, etc. Neither is the word Iranian (Schwarz 1970: 386).

δρῦς, -υός [f.] 'tree', especially 'oak' (Il.). ◂IE doru*, gen. dreus* 'wood, tree'▸

•DIAL Dialectal sometimes also [m.], see Schwyzer 1950: 37[2]; Myc. du-ru-to-mo /drutomoi/ 'woodcutters'.
•COMP ►ἄδρυα 'upright pieces', ►ἀμάδρυα 'sloe', ►γεράνδρυον 'old tree or stump', ἔνδρυον · καρδία δένδρου, καὶ τὸ μέσαβον 'heart of the tree; leathern strap' (H.), also Hes. (see below); μελάνδρυα 'hearts of oak', also 'slices of tunny'.
•DER δρύϊνος 'oaken' (Od.), δρυΐνᾱς name of a snake living in oaks (Nic.); δρυΐτης kind of cypress (Thphr.), name of a precious stone (Plin.); Δρυάς 'Dryad, tree-nymph' (Plu.), also name of a snake (Androm. apud Gal.; cf. δρυΐνας); them. lengthening in δρύου [gen.] 'bush' (POxy. 7, 1044, [7]; 8; 12, II-III[p]); but the them. endings in μελάν-δρυ-ον 'heart-wood', ἔν-δρυ-ον 'oaken peg' (Hes. Op. 469) belong to δόρυ. The same holds for δρύ-οχοι [m.pl.] 'ribs of a ship' (Od.; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 186), δρῠ(ο)-κολάπτης 'woodpecker' (Ar.), etc.; parallel mgs. in Schwentner KZ 73 (1956): 112f.; short form (after animal names in -οψ) δρύοψ (Ar. Av. 304); also as a PN (Υ 455) and as a people's name, see von Wilamowitz 1931: 52[1]. On ►δρύφακτοι, see s.v.
•ETYM Apart from the vowel length, which can be explained as from the feminine gender (Wackernagel l.c.), δρῦς is identical with Skt. dru- 'wood', found e.g. in dru-ṣád- 'sitting on wood (on a tree)', su-drú- 'of good wood'. Other cognates are OCS drъva [n.pl.] 'wood', Alb. dru [f.] (< druu̯ā*) 'wood, tree', and Go. triu < PGm. trewa-* < IE dreu-o-*. The feminine δρῦς (gender after other tree names; cf. Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 17) arose from the oblique case forms of the word for 'wood', Gr. δόρυ, Skt. dā́ru- (gen. drú-ṇ-aḥ next to dró-ḥ). Janda 1997 assumes a collective druh₂-* (with -s in the nom.). The meaning 'firm, strong', found in Greek in ►δροόν · ἰσχυρόν, is frequent in Gm., e.g. OE trum 'firm, strong, healthy' (formally = δρῦμά 'wood', Skt. druma- 'tree'), Go. triggws (< trewwa-, IE dreu(u)-o-) 'true, faithful'.

δρύφακτοι [m.pl.] 'railing or latticed partition, balcony, bar (in court)' (Ar.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Rarely sing. -ος; also δρύφρακτοι (Lib.) with restored ρ, and τρύφακτοι (Hell. and late inscr., Hdn. Gr.), with τ- acc. to Schwyzer: 257 from regressive assimilation, but alternatively (Frisk) after τρυφή 'delicacy' by folk etymology; doubtful.
•DER Denominative δρυφάσσω 'fence in' (Lyc.), δρυφάξαι· ++ δακεῖν 'to bite' (H.; at wrong alphabetical position). Also δρυθακτόω.
•ETYM Generally taken as a combination of δρῠ- (in ►δόρυ) and ►φράσσω with a suffix -το- (cf. e.g. ἀκμό-θε-τον). However, the τ- is hard to understand as assimilation.

δρωπάζειν [v.] · ἐμβλέπειν 'to look in the face' (H.), A. D. Adv. 139, 8; δρώπτειν· [διακόπτειν ἢ] διασκοπεῖν. Αἰσχύλος Ψυχαγωγοῖς '[cut through]; examine well [in Aeschylus's Psychagogoi]' (Fr. 278) (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Frisk suggests a cross of δέρκομαι, δρακεῖν and ὄπωπα, ὄψομαι, which is not very convincing. Comparable is δρωκτάζεις (δροκ-)· περιβλέπεις, for which Latte adduces the PN Δροκυλος (Argolis), but this may stand for Δρακυλος. See ►δράω 2 = ὁράω.

δρῶπαξ ⇒δρέπω.

δρώψ [m.] · ἄνθρωπος 'man' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Thought to be a compound *νρ-ώψ 'with manly face' (see ► ἀνήρ), but the absence of ἀ- is strange. Acc. to Latte, it is a creation of the grammarians. Kuiper 1956: 224f. accepts the gloss as Pre-Greek, explaining ἄνθρωπος as arising through prenasalization and prothetic vowel. His solution is supported by Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 13-5. Pisani Rev. Int. ét. balk. 3 (1937): 11f. considers δρώψ to be Macedonian (connected to ► τρέφω).

δύβρις [?] · κατὰ γλῶσσαν ἡ θάλασσα 'sea [gloss]', sch. Theoc. 1, 118c. ◂?▸ •ETYM If the word is Illyrian, one could connect Latv. dubra 'pit, marshy place', OCS dъbrь 'abyss', as well as MIr. dobur 'water' and other words for 'deep', like Lith. dubùs, Go. diups, etc. See Krahe 1955: 47. Acc. to Szemerényi Archiv. Linguist. 5 (1953): 77, also Lat. Tiberis (as Illyrian) is related. Cf. ► δύπτω.

δύη [f.] 'misery, anguish' (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR Dor. δύα.
•COMP As a first member in δυη-παθής (A. R.).
•DER δύϊος 'unhappy, painful' (A. Supp. 829 [lyr.]), δυερός 'id.' (metr. inscr., Attica); causative present δυόωσι [3sg.] 'cause misery' (υ 195), perf. ptc. δεδυημένη· κεκακωμένη 'distressed' (H.), with derivations.
•ETYM If it originally meant 'burning pain', δύη might derive from a zero grade of the root deh$_2$u-* 'burn', seen in Skt. dunóti 'burn (trans.), torment' and OHG zuscen 'burn'. In Greek, this root is perserved in ► δαίω < dau-i̯e/o-* and ► δήϊος. However, this remains uncertain, of course.

Myc. du-ma
•ETYM Probably the name of an official, on which see Fauth KZ 102 (1989): 187-206.

δύναμαι [v.] 'to be able, be equal to; to signify' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. δυνήσασθαι, δυνασθῆναι (Il.), δυνηθῆναι (trag.), fut. δυνήσομαι (Od.), perf. δεδύνημαι (Att.).
•DER δύναμις [f.] 'strength, power' (Il.; cf. θέμις and below) with δυναμικός 'powerful, effective' (Hell. and late), δυναμερός 'id.' (medic.), δυναμοστόν a fraction (Dioph.); δυναμόω 'make strong' (Hell. and late), with δυνάμωσις, δυναμωτικός, δύνασις 'id.' (Pi.). δυνάστης [m.] 'lord, master' (IA) with δυναστικός (Arist.), δυναστεύω (IA), with δυναστεία, δυνάστευμα, δυναστευτικός; fem. δυνάστις (Demetr. Eloc.), δυνάστειρα (Tab. Defix. Aud. III^p). δυνάστωρ 'id.' (E. IA 280 [lyr.]). Verbal adj. δυνατός 'able; possible' (Sapph.) with δυνατέω 'be strong' (2 Ep. Cor. 13, 3); δυνητικός 'potential' (A. D.).
•ETYM Probably to be analyzed as δύ-ν-α-μαι, a present with generalized nasal infix (δυ-ν-ά-σθην for *δυά-σθην, cf. λίναμαι : λιάσθην), δυ-ν-ήσομαι for δυή-σομαι, etc., as well as in nouns like δύναμις, etc. An -σ- was added in δυνά-σ-θην, δυνά-σ-της. LIV^2 reconstructs deuh$_2$- 'zusammenfügen' and connects the word with ToB tsuwa [3sg.pret.] 'join, adjust' and Go. taujan 'make'. This disyllabic root formally agrees with that of ► δήν and ► δηρός but, semantically, a connection is difficult. Cret. νύναμαι (Gortyn) must be the same word. The ν- may simply be due to assimilation.

δυνδεκάτη [num.] · ἡμέρᾳ δωδεκάτη 'on the twelfth day' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM According to Schulze 1892: 178, δυνδέκατος was formed after ἑνδέκατος, but Latte implausibly corrects to δυοδεκάτη, contrary to the alphabetical order.

δύο [num.] 'two'. ◂IE duu̯o, duu̯-eh$_3$ (?) 'two'▸ •VAR Epic eleg. also δύω, Lacon., etc. also δύ(ϝ)ε (after κύν-ε, etc.), oblique forms δυοῖν (Att. δυεῖν since IV-III^a), δυῶν, δυοῖσ(ι), δυσί; also indeclinable (Il.); see Schwyzer: 588f.
•DIAL Myc. dwo; du-wo-u-pi /dwōup^{h}i/.
•COMP As a first member (beside usual δι-, see ► δίς) e.g. in δυο-ποιός 'making two' (Arist.), and in univerbations like δυο-καί-δεκα (Il., etc.).
•DER δυοστός 'half' (sch.), after εἰκοστός 'twentieth', etc.
•ETYM The final short vowel of δύο is also seen in Arm. erko-tasan 'twelve' and in the Skt. derivative dva-ká- 'in pairs' (Lat. duo is due to iambic shortening). duu̯o* is also found in Go. twa and wit 'we two', as well as in OIr. da; see Cowgill MSS 46 (1985): 13-28, who demonstrates that the duu̯o* originally was an indeclinable next to the dual δύω (= Skt. duvā́, OCS dъva [m.]). A monosyllabic du̯ō(u)* is reflected in δ(ϝ)ώ-δεκα, Skt. dvā́(u), Hitt. dā- in dā-yuga- 'two years old', dān 'a second time'.

δυοχοῖ [v.] · πωματίζει παρὰ Δημοκρίτῳ (Fr. 136), ἤτοι πωμάζει, σκεπάζει 'to cover (with a lid) [Democr.], to protect or shelter'; δυοχῶσαι· πωμάσαι (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The explanation as from *δυοχος 'lid' is rejected by DELG, both because the meaning would not fit and because a compound with δυ(ό)- instead of δω- is improbable. Chantraine suggests reading *δρυοχοῖ from δρύοχος, which is 'the props or shores upon which the frame of a new ship is laid', or (LSJ Supp.) 'the ribs of a ship' (DELG s.v. δρῦς); it is then the same as δρύακες (H.). However, this does not seem to fit well for the present gloss.

δύπτω [v.] 'to dive in', mostly intr. (Antim. [?], Lyc., A. R.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. δύψαι.
•DER δύπτης [m.] 'diver', especially as a bird name (Call.); cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM From ► δυω, perhaps modelled after ► κύπτω; cf. also βύπτω (s.v. ► βάπτω).

δύρομαι [v.] 'to lament, bewail' (trag.). ◂?▸
•DER πάν-δυρ-τος 'wailing about everything' (trag. [lyr.]).
•ETYM A variant of ὀδύρομαι, perhaps as a rhyme with μύρομαι (Güntert 1914: 150).

δυσ- [pref.] inseparable prefix, 'mis-, un-, etc.' (Il.). Details in Schwyzer: 432, Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 295ff. ◂IE dus-* 'wrong, mis-'▸ •COMP E.g. δυσμενής, see DELG.
•ETYM Old element, also seen in Indo-Iranian (Skt. duṣ-, dur-, Av. duš-, duž-). Some compounds are found in both branches, like δυσ-μενής = Skt. dur-mánas-, Av. duš-manah-; see also under ► δύστηνος. The element is also found in other branches, e.g. in Germanic (Go. tuz-werjan 'hesitate', ON OE tor-, OHG zur-), Celtic (OIr. du-, do-), and Armenian (t-, e.g. t-gēt 'unknowing'). The Slav. word for 'rain', OCS dъždь, Ru. dožd', etc. is often connected with it (from "bad daylight" vel sim.); see Derksen 2008 s.v. *dъzdjь (dъždjь). IE *dus- is mostly connected with δεύομαι 'lack' (see ►δέω 2).

δυσ-ᾱής [adj.] 'blowing violently, stormy' (Il.). ◄GR► •VAR Ntr. -ές.
•ETYM From δυσ- and ἄημι with metrical lengthening. Cf. ὑπερᾱής (of ἄελλα, Λ 297).

δυσβήρης [adj.] · ὁ δύσβατος 'impassable' (EM 291, 43); δυσβηρές· δύσβατον, δυσχερές 'impassable, intractable' (H.); δυσβῆρες· οἱ δύσβατοι τόποι 'inaccessible places' (Suid.). ◄GR► •ETYM Acc. to EM, the form is syncopated from δυσβατήρης; however, it is rather directly from βῆναι after the adjectives in -ήρης. Otherwise, is it a mistake for δυσῆρες· δυσχερές (Suid.)? Such a solution is not in accord with von Blumenthal 1930: 3 (that the word is Illyrian, connected to φέρειν).

δύσγω ⇒δύω 2.

δύσεα [n.pl.] · τοῦ τοίχου τὰ πέριξ. Κύπριοι 'that which is around the wall (Cypr.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unexplained. See Solmsen 1909: 245.

δυσηχής [adj.] of πόλεμος 'war' and θάνατος 'death', so perhaps 'that which causes great pain, grief' to ἄχος 'distress', ἄχνυμαι 'to be distressed' (with Ap. Soph.). In h.Ap. 64 'of bad reputation'. Later mg. 'that which causes great noise'. ◄GR► •ETYM From ►ἄχος or from ►ἠχή.

δύσκηλος [adj.] 'unquiet, agitated'? Of χθών 'earth' (A. Eu. 825 hapax), opposite to εὔκηλος 'still' (see ►ἕκηλος). ◄IE *ueḱ- 'want'► •ETYM See ►ἕκηλος. Not connected with κηλέω 'to bewitch'; see sch.

δύσκολος [adj.] 'discontented, troublesome' (Hp., Att.). ◄?►
•DER δυσκολία 'discontentedness'. Opposite εὔκολος 'content' with εὐκολία.
•ETYM Unknown. Unconvincing are connections with ►κέλομαι, ►πέλομαι, etc.

δυσκρᾱής ⇒εὐκραής.

δυσοίζω [v.] 'to wail, be in fear' (A. Ag. 1316, E. Rh. 724 and 805). ◄?►
•VAR δυσοίζει· δυσχεραίνει, ὑπονοεῖ. Λάκωνες 'be unable to endure; suspect (Lacon.)' (H.), δυσοίζειν· φοβεῖσθαι, ὑποπτεύειν 'be afraid; be suspicious' (H.); δυσοίζοντος· οἰωνιζομένου καὶ ἄγαν ὑποπτεύοντος 'who takes [things] as omens and is very suspicious'; δύσοικτος· δυσθρήνητος 'loud-wailing'; ἐδύσοιξα· ὑπενόησα 'he suspected' (H.).
•ETYM Perhaps the explanation in H. with ὑπονοεῖν, ὑποπτεύειν, οἰωνίζεσθαι is based on an erroneous connection with οἴομαι. Because of the nominal prefix and the augmented aorist, we should start from δύσοικτος, which comes either from οἶκτος or from *οἰκτός to οἴζω (A. D.). See Debrunner GGA 172 (1910): 7 and Fraenkel 1950 ad 1316.

δυσπέμφελος [adj.] of the sea (Π 748, Hes. Th. 440), sailing (Hes. Op. 618), a man (Hes. Op. 722), etc., perhaps 'stormy, rough, raw'. ◄?► •ETYM Expressive word without etymology. The word recalls πέμφιξ, πομφός, πομφόλυξ, which are also semantically relatable. Further suggestions are found in Bechtel 1914 s.v. and in Schwyzer: 423, who assumes reduplication.

δύστηνος [adj.] 'unhappy, wretched' (Il.; cf. von Wilamowitz 1889 ad 1346); δυστηνία· μοχθηρία 'bad condition' (H.). ◄IE? *$steh_2$- 'stand'► •VAR Dor. δύστανος.
•DER ►ἄστηνος 'miserable', s.v.
•ETYM Probably 'who has a bad standing', from δυσ- and *στῆ-ν-, *στᾱ-ν-, corresponding to Skt. sthā́na- [n.], Av. OP stāna- [n.] 'stand, position'. Slavic has an old u-stem, e.g. CS stanъ 'lair', Ru. stan 'stature, standplace, camp'; other forms are mentioned in Derksen 2008 s.v. *stânъ. The form δύστος = δύστηνος, given by Hdn. Gr. 1, 217, may derive from *$dus\text{-}sth_2\text{-}o$-. See Osthoff 1901: 126, Bechtel 1914 s.v. δύστηνος.

δυσχερής [adj.] 'discontent, annoying, vexatious, unpopular' (IA). ◄IE *g^her- 'desire'► •DER δυσχέρεια 'annoyance, disgust' (Att., Hell.), denominative δυσχεραίνω 'to be displeased with, be disgusted at' (Att., Hell.; see Leumann 1950: 111) with δυσχέρασμα (Pl.), δυσχερασμός (Phld.), δυσχέρανσις (Hell. and late), δυσχεραντικός (M. Ant.). - Opposite εὐχερής 'tractable'.
•ETYM Not related to χείρ; see Leumann Phil. 96 (1944): 161ff., who correctly connects the word with ►χαίρω. We must depart from a form with -ε-, like *χέρος (cf. δυσ-μενής to μένος), or from a full grade of the verb, which is not preserved in Greek.

δυτη [f.] mg. uncertain, 'pit'? ◄IE? *deu- 'enter'► •VAR Accentuation unknown. Also δυτᾱ (Thebe, Troezen IV-III[a]).
•ETYM Perhaps the word must be connected with ἄ-δυτον 'place one may not enter, most sacred', from δύω, δύομαι 'enter'. See Frisk 1938: 16f. This contradicts the hypothesis of von Blumenthal Glotta 18 (1930): 154, who relates it to θύω as an Illyrian word for "place for sacrifice".

δύω 1 ⇒δύο.

δύω 2 [v.] 'to enter, dive', trans. 'to plunge', intrans. 'to get into, slip into, put on' (Il.). ◄IE *deu- 'go in, enter'► •VAR δύομαι, δύνω, aor. δῦσαι, δύσασθαι, δῦναι, perf. δέδῡκα, aor. pass. δυθῆναι, fut. δύσω, δύσομαι, δῠθήσομαι, unclear epic pret. δύσετο (cf. Chantraine 1942: 416f.); if trans. (δύω, δῦσαι, δύσω) mostly with prefix ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, κατα-δύω; otherwise intrans. (δύομαι, δύνω), often with prefix ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ὑπο-δύομαι, -δύνω, etc. (but rarely -δύω).
•COMP Often with nominal first member in compounds like τρωγλο-δύτης 'cave-dweller' (Hdt.) with -δυτικός, -δυτέω, λωπο-δύτης 'one who goes in other people's clothes, thief (of clothes)' (Att., etc.) with -δυτέω, -δυσίου (δίκη), -δυσία; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 225f.

•DER δύσις 'setting of sun and stars, West' (Hecat.) with δυτικός; often to the prefixed verbs ἔκ-, ἔν-, κατά-δυσις, etc. in different mgs.; δῦμα (POxy. 6, 929, 8; 15, II-III[p]) = ἔνδυμα 'garment' (V[a]), also ὑπόδυμα. δύτης 'diver' (Hdt. 8, 8); in different mgs. ἐν-, ὑπεν-, ἐκ-δύτης, etc. with ἐκδύσια [pl.] name of a festival in Crete (Ant. Lib.); ἐνδυτήρ 'for putting on' (S. Tr. 674 of πέπλος) with ἐνδυτήριος (S.), also ὑποδυτήρια [pl.] (Str. 14, 5, 6; v.l. ὑποδεκτ.). δυσμαί [pl.] (rarely [sg.], see Schwyzer 1950: 43) 'setting of sun and stars, West' (IA) with δυσμικός (Str.); also δυ-θμαί, -θμή 'id.' (Call.; on the suffix Chantraine 1933: 148f.). Cf. further ► δυτη. δυτῖνος name of a waterbird (Dionys. Av.; like ἰκτῖνος, κορακῖνος, etc.). δυτικός 'suitable for diving, westerly' (Arist.). Verbal forms with extension: ► δύπτω; δύσγω· ἀποδύω 'to put off' (H.), after μίσγω 'to mix' (Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 39); cf. also φύσγων (Alc., POxy. 18, 2165; see Specht KZ 68 (1943): 150).
•ETYM δύω is related to the rare Sanskrit verb upā-du- 'to put on' (only gerundive Ved. upādútya-); see von Schroeder WZKSM 13 (1899): 297f. and Brugmann IF 11 (1900): 274. The same root is possibly found in ► δείελος, etc. On the intransitive nasal present δύνω, see Schwyzer: 696 and Schwyzer 1950: 230. Cf. also ► ἀλιβδύω.

δῶ [n.] 'house' (Il.). ◄IE dōm* 'house'►
•VAR In Hom. always at verse end, always as accus. (ἡμέτερον δῶ, ἐμὸν ποτὶ χαλκοβατὲς δῶ, etc.) except α 392 δῶ / ἀφνειόν, where it has the nominative; further Hes. Th. 933 χρύσεα δῶ 'golden houses' [acc.pl.] (innovation).
•ETYM The ancients saw the word as a shortened form of δῶμα (δῶ· δῶμα, οἴκημα, σπήλαιον H.). Schmidt 1889: 222ff. derived it from dōm*, the root noun belonging to ► δόμος, etc.; thus, Schwyzer: 569 and (hesitantly) Chantraine 1942: 230, as well as Bartholomae 1895: 214 (dōm* = Av. dąm as an old locative). Fick 1874-1876(1): 458 and Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916: 1, 136, as well as Risch 1937: 359f., thought it was a local particle (adverb); cf. ἡμέτερόν δε = ἡμέτερον δῶ), thus dō* 'to(wards)', seen in OS tō, OHG zuo, and perhaps even in Lat. en-do. In Greek, it is simply a substantive. Cf. ► δῶμα.

δώδεκα [num.] 'twelve' (Il.). ◄IE duoHdeḱm* 'twelve'► •VAR Epic Ion. Dor. also δυώδεκα, Arc. δυōδεκo; Hell. also δεκαδύο.
•COMP δυωδεκά-βοιος 'worth twelve cows' (Il.), etc.
•DER δωδέκατος (δυω-; on ► δυνδεκάτη s.v.) 'the twelfth' (Il.) with δωδεκαταῖος 'of twelve days' (Hes.) from δωδεκάτη (ἡμέρα), and δυωδεκατεύς (μήν) 'the twelfth month' (Tauromenion); δωδεκάς (δυω-) [f.] 'group of twelve, the twelfth part' (Pl.) with δυωδεκαδικός; δωδεκαΐς, -ηΐς (δυω-) 'sacrifice of twelve animals', also name of a festive deputation (Delphi V[a], etc.; cf. Πυθαΐς); δωδεκεύς· χοεύς a measure, 'twelve cotylae' (H.); δωδεκάκις 'twelve times' (Ar.).
•ETYM From *δϝώ-δεκα = Skt. dvā́-daśa. It also appears as δυώδεκα, as in Lat. duodecim. See ► δύο.

δῶμα [n.] 'house, home, temple', often plur., see Schwyzer 1950: 43 (Il.; also Arc. [Tegea V[a]] as 'temple'). ◄IE dem-* 'house'► •DER δωμάτιον 'small house, room, chapel' (Att.); δωματίτης, fem. -ῖτις 'belonging to the house' (A.); δωματόομαι 'provide with houses' (A. Supp. 958).

•ETYM Derived from IE dem-*, also seen in ► δεσπότης. The nearest cognate is the Arm. n-stem tun 'house' < dōm*, gen. tan. See also ► δῶ.

δωμάω ⇒δέμω.

δωράκινον 'kingstone', a kind of peach (Gp. 3, 1, 4). ◄LW Lat.► •ETYM From Lat. dūracinum. See André 1956 s.v. MoGr. has ῥωδάκινον.

Δωριεῖς [m.pl.] 'Dorians', since τ 177 -ιέες, which is metri causa acc. to Debrunner 1923: 33[1]. ◄?►
•VAR Att. -ιῆς. Sing. Δωριεύς, as a PN (Hdt.) and as an adjective 'Dorian' (Pi.); thence Δωρίεια (Cnidos), Δώρεια (Cos) [n.pl.] names of festivals.
•DIAL Myc. do-ri-je-we /Dōriēwes/.
•DER Δώριος (Pi.), δωρικός (Hdt.), δωριακός (Orac. apud Th. 2, 24, metrically determined), see Chantraine 1956a: 107; fem. Δωρίς (Hdt.); δωρίζω 'to speak Dorian' (Theoc.), δωρισμός, δωριστί; δωριάζω 'to clothe oneself like the Dorians' •ETYM Some older proposals started from the IE word doru* for 'wood, tree', or (in Greek) 'spear' (see Frisk s.v.), but this may be doubted.

δῶρον 1 [n.] 'gift, present' (Il.). ◄IE deh₃-ro-* 'gift'► •COMP δωρο-δόκος 'accepting presents, corruptible' (see ► δέχομαι) beside δωροδοκέω 'accept presents, be corruptible' (IA) with δωροδόκημα, δωροδοκία 'corruption'.
•DER Diminutive δωρύφιον (pap.). Denominative δωρέομαι, δωρέω 'give presents' (Il.; on the diathesis Schwyzer 1950: 234) with δώρημα 'present' (Hdt.) and δωρηματικός (D. H.), δωρητής 'giver, benefactor' (Nesos IV[a]) and δωρητικός (Pl.), δωρητήρ 'id.' (AP), δωρητός 'prepared to accept presents' (I 526), 'presented' (S.). Also δωρύττομαι (Theoc. 7, 43; ad hoc formation; Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 242f.); perhaps also Thess. δούρραντα = δωρήσαντα like Hom. φίλατο beside φιλεῖν (Fraenkel Glotta 35 (1956): 91f.)? Beside δῶρον and δωρέομαι stands δωρεά, older -ειά (Attica V[a]), Ion. -εή 'gift, present' (Hdt.) with unclear formation; thence δωρεακός 'official of a fief' (pap. III[a]), δωρεαστικός, -ρετικός 'concerning presents' (pap. VI[p]).
•ETYM Old word, identical with Arm. tur, OCS darъ 'gift', from PIE deh₃-ro-*. It also appears with a suffix -no-: Lat. dōnum = Skt. dā́na- [n.]. For further details, see ► δίδωμι.

δῶρον 2 [n.] 'breadth of the hand' (Nic., Milete). ◄?►
•COMP As a second member in ἑκκαιδεκά-δωρος 'sixteen hands long' (Δ 109), δεκά-δωρος (Hes. Op. 426), ὀρθό-δωρον 'length of a hand' = 'the distance between the root of the hand and the finger ends' (Poll., acc. to H. also = σπιθαμή 'span between thumb and pinky').
•DER δάριν· σπιθαμήν. Ἀρκάδες (i-stem) and ► δάρ[ε]ιρ.
•ETYM The word has been compared with Alb. dorë (see La Piana IF 58 (1942): 98), which is, however, rather related to ► χείρ (see Demiraj 1997). Further Celt. words, like OIr. dorn, as well as Latv. dùre, dûris 'fist', have been connected, but both branches point to PIE u*, which excludes any relationship with δῶρον.

E

ἒ ἒ [interj.] expressing pain (trag., com.). ◂ONOM▸
•VAR Also repeated ἒ ἒ, ἒ ἒ •ETYM Onomatopoeic formation. Cf. Schwyzer 1950: 600.

ἐ- [pref.] the augment (Il.). ◂IE *h_1e- augment▸ •VAR Rarely ἠ- (see below).
•DIAL Rare in Mycenaean, only a-pe-do-ke /ap-e-dōke/.
•ETYM Old element indicating the past tense, also found in Indo-Iranian a-, ā- (< a* + root-initial H-*), Armenian e- and Phrygian e-, e.g. ἔ-φερε = Skt. á-bharat, Arm. e-ber; cf. further OPhr. e-daes, NPhr. ε-δαες 'ἔθηκε'. See Schwyzer: 651ff.; on the variant ἠ-, see Rix 1976: 226ff. Greek often gets a long vowel by contraction: h_1e-$h_2$eg-e-t* > ἦγε. From cases like ἤθελον < h_1e-$h_1$$d^h$el-* next to pres. (ἐ)θέλω, long augments arose analogically, e.g. in ἠβουλόμην. Probably all long augments are analogical; see Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 166.

ἕ, ἑ [refl. pron.] 'se', epic also 'eum, eam, id', 3sg. accus. of the reflective (and enclitic) anaphoric pronoun (Il.). ◂IE se, sue* 'himself'▸ •VAR Lesb. ϝε, Pamph. ϝhε, epic also ἑέ; gen. οὗ (οὑ), epic ἕο (εἷο), εὖ (ἑο, εὑ), ἕθεν, Lesb. ϝέθεν, Locr. ϝέος; dat. (and gen.; Schwyzer 1950: 189 with lit.; cf. Latte Glotta 35 (1956): 296) οἷ (οἱ), epic also ἑοῖ, Lesb., etc. ϝοῖ, Cret. (Gortyn), etc. ϝιν, Boeot. (Corinna) ἑίν. For the plur. see ►σφεῖς.
•DER Hence the possessive ὅς, epic also ἑός, Dor., etc. ϝός 'suus, one's own' (also referring to the first and second person), 'eius'.
•ETYM The epic forms ἑ, εὑ, ἕθεν, οἱ, where we find no trace of a digamma (Chantraine 1942: 146ff.), have been supposed to derive from an IE reflexive stem se-*, as seen in Lat. sē, OCS sę 'se', and Go. si-k. Additionally, it was thought that οἱ < soi* corresponds to OP -šaiy, Av. hē, Prakr. se; on the other hand, ἑο would be from se-so* (cf. τέο < k^we-so* to ►τίς).
However, it is now maintained that IE had only su̯e*; see Petit 1999: 126-8. In Greek, we find ϝhε, ϝοῖ < sue, suoi = Skt. sva- 'himself' (only in derivations and in compounds, e.g. sva-já- 'born from himself'). A disyllabic full-grade variant seems to be found in ἑέ < seue*. Adjectivized sue, seue gave rise to the possessive su-o-, seu-o-, which yielded ϝός, ἑός = Skt. svá- 'suus', OLat. sovos > Lat. suus.
Further details are in Schwyzer: 600ff. Cf. ►ἑαυτοῦ, ►ἑκάς, ►ἕκαστος, ►σφεῖς and ►σύ.

ἔα [interj.] expressing surprise and rejection (trag.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Originally just the 2sg. ipv. of ἐάω, but later taken as an independent interjection. See Schwyzer KZ 60 (1933): 141f.

ἐάν [conj.] 'if' (Att.), Hell. and late also modal pcl. = ἄν. ◂GR▸ •VAR With crasis ᾶ̆ν (Att.), ἤν (epic Ion.; also Att.?).
•ETYM From univerbation or crasis of ▸εἰ and ▸ἄν. The long vowel in ἐᾱ́ν can be due to a contamination of ἐᾰ́ν and ᾱ̆ν; see Lejeune 1972: 323.

ἑᾱνός 1 [m.] a woman's cloth (Il.). ◂IE *ues- 'wear clothes'▸ •VAR Verse-initially εἱανός (Π 9); late also ἑᾱνός.
•DIAL Myc. we-a$_2$-no-i /wehanoi^{h}i/ [dat.pl.].
•ETYM From *ϝεσ-ανός, a verbal noun of ▸ἕννυμι; for the suffix, cf. στέφανος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 196ff.).

ἑᾱνός 2 [adj.] of clothes (λιτί, πέπλος, ἱμάτιον), also of tin (Il., inc. auct. apud Greg. Cor., see Sapph. fr. 156). Mg. uncertain: 'supple'? Or 'fine'? ◂?▸
•ETYM No etymology. Cf. ▸ἰανογλέφαρος.

ἔαρ 1, -ρος [n.] 'blood', metaph. 'sap' (Call.; Cyprian acc. to H.). ◂IE *h$_1$esh$_2$-r 'blood'▸ •VAR Also εἶαρ, ἦαρ.
•COMP As a first member in εἰαροπότης· αἱμοπότης, ψυχοπότης 'blood-drinker, breath-drinker' (H.); acc. to sch. T, εἰαροπῶτις is v.l. for ἠεροφοῖτις (Ερινύς) T 87 (Fraenkel 1910: 114).
•DER None
•ETYM Old word for blood: Hitt. ešḫar, gen. išḫanāš, Skt. ásṛk, gen. asnáḥ, Lat. aser (gloss., Paul. Fest.; form uncertain), ToA ysār, ToB yasar, Latv. asins. An extended form occurs in Arm. ar-iwn (Kortlandt 2003: 131f.: < *esar-). The original r/n-stem is maintained in Hitt. and Skt. The length in εἶαρ, ἦαρ is metrical (but archaic, acc. to Schulze 1892: 165f.). Like in Greek (s.v. ▸αἷμα), the word was replaced in Latin and Sanskrit (sanguis, rudhirám; cf. under ▸ἐρυθρός), though Lat. san-guis probably contains the oblique stem *h$_1$sh$_2$-en- as its first element (cf. De Vaan 2008).

ἔαρ 2 [n.] 'spring' (Il.; cf Schwyzer: 251). ◂IE *ues-r- 'spring'▸ •VAR Gen. ἔαρος, also ἦρος, dat. ἦρι (Att., also Ion. and Alc.), with new nom. ἦρ (Alcm.).
•COMP As a first member in ἐαρί-δρεπτος 'plucked in spring' (Pi.), ἐαρο-τρεφής (Mosch.), etc.
•DER ἐαρινός (also εἰ-, ἠ- like εἴαρος through metrical lengthening), poet. also ἠρινός 'belonging to the spring' (Il.); likewise ἐάρτερος (Nic. Th. 380, with contrasting -τερος, Schwyzer 1950: 183); ἐαρίδας· τὰς κανθαρίδας 'beetles' (H.); on the semantics Strömberg 1944: 13. Denominative verb ἐαρίζω 'to bloom as in spring, etc.' (Pl.).
•ETYM Both the form γέαρ· ἔαρ (H.) and Homeric prosody (Chantraine 1942: 128) point to older ϝέαρ, from PGr. *wéhar, an old r/n-stem: Av. loc. vaŋri < *vasr-i 'in spring', Arm. gar-un 'spring', Lith. vasar-à 'summer'; OCS, etc. vesn-a 'spring', Skt. vasan-tá- 'id.' (cf. heman-tá- 'winter'; see ▸χειμών). On the Celtic forms, see Matasović 2008 s.v. *werr- / *wesn-. Beside IE *ues-r-, *ues-n-, we have Lat. vēr and ON vár [n.] (o-stem). Porzig 1954a: 110f. suggests that Lat. and Gm. created *uēr- after the word for 'year', IE *ieh$_1$r- (see ▸ὥρα). The formation of ἐαρινός is mirrored in Lith. vasarìnis 'of the summer' and Lat. vernus (like hibernus, hornus).

ἐαρα [pl.]? Mg. unknown (IG 12(3), 450: a1 [Old Theraean]). ◂?▸ •VAR Cf. ἐαρόν· λουτῆρα ἢ πρόχουν 'washing-tub or vessel for pouring out' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. See Sommer 1905: 119, who connects the word to U vestikatu 'libato'.

ἑᾱυτοῦ [refl. pron.] 'himself' (IA), 3rd sing. and plur. (but also referring to the first and second persons). ◂GR▸ •VAR Fem. -τῆς; dat. -τῷ, -τῇ, etc., Ion. ἑωυτοῦ (ἑωτοῦ), ὠὑτοῦ, Att. also ᾱὑτοῦ, etc., Hell. also ἑατοῦ, ἀτοῦ, Cret. ϝιαυτοῦ.
•DER ἑαυτότης 'being oneself' (Procl.).
•ETYM A univerbation of the reflexive ▸ἕ, ἑοῖ, etc. and ▸αὐτός, -τόν, etc.: ἕο αὐτοῦ > Ion. ἑωυτοῦ, Att. ἑᾱυτοῦ, ἑοῖ αὐτῷ > Ion. ἑωυτῷ, Att. ἑᾱυτῷ, etc.; thus also ἐμεωυτοῦ, σεωυτοῦ, ἐμᾱυτοῦ, σ(ε)ᾱυτοῦ, etc. (Hom. ἕ αὐτόν, ἔμ' αὐτόν, ἕο αὐτοῦ, ἐμοὶ αὐτῷ, etc.). Details are included in Schwyzer: 607 and 402 and Schwyzer 1950: 193ff. A remarkable parallel is found in Phrygian: OPhr. ven avtun, NPhr. οε αυται.

ἑάφθη [v.aor.] Mg. uncertain (of ἀσπὶς καὶ κόρυς N 543, I 419). ◂IE? *seng^{wh}- 'sing'▸ •ETYM The word was already unknown in antiquity: it was explained as 'ἥφθη' by Tyrannion (ap. sch. A); Aristarchus connected it with ἕπομαι; acc. to H. = ἐκάμφθη, ἐβλάβη. All of these are just speculations. Modern scholars proposed different explanations: that the word is connected to ▸ἰάπτω (Meister 1921: 110[2]), to Go. sigqan 'to sink', etc. (Schmidt 1895: 62ff.). Meier-Brügger MSS 59 (1989): 91-96 explains the forms from the root *seng^{wh}- in ▸ὀμφή 1 'song'. So it meant 'they sang', said of a shield and helmet. In a similar vein, ▸ἄαπτος would mean 'unsingbar'. None of these proposals is very convincing.

ἐάω [v.] 'to let (go), allow, leave alone' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Ipf. εἴων, aor. ἐᾶσαι (ind. εἴασα), fut. ἐάσω (originally ἐᾰ́σ(σ)αι, resp. ἐᾰ́σ(σ)ω?, see below); younger perf., etc. εἴᾱκα, εἴαμαι, εἰάθην (D., Isoc.).
•COMP Rarely παρ-, εἰσεάω.
•DER None.
•ETYM The glosses ἔβασον· ἔασον. Συρακόσιοι (H., EM; Συρακούσιοι <καὶ Λάκωνες> Latte) and εὖα· ... ἔα (H.) assure a digamma for ἐάω; the diphthongal augment points to an initial consonant (so probably σ-), but the absence of aspiration is unexplained (cf. Lejeune 1972: 93[4]). We have to assume a disyllabic root *(σ)εϝᾰ-, like ἐλᾰ-, τελᾰ-, etc., within the aorist *(σ)εϝᾰ́σαι > ἐᾰ́σαι, or ἐᾰ́σσαι with analogical -σσ- (like ἐλάσ(σ)αι, etc., after τελέσ-(σ)αι, etc.), fut. ἐᾰ́σ(σ)ω, forms that can be found in Hom. (ἐᾰ́σουσιν φ 233, εἴᾰσεν K 299 as v.l.); thus, one could read ἐάσσαι for ἐᾶσαι (Δ 42), etc., like ἐάσσω (v. l.) in Parm. 8, 7. Additionally, ἐάσομεν, ἔασον in Hdt. are understandable (cf. ἔησον· ἔασον H.). The length in ἐᾶσαι, etc. would then be from the denominatives in -άω. Therefore, the unique form ἔᾰ (E 256) would be the 3sg. of an athematic Aeolic ἔᾰ-μι. Previously, ἐάω was traced to IE *seuH-, with

Skt. savi- in savi-tár- 'impeller, etc.', pres. suváti 'impel', but the semantics do not really fit. Now Nussbaum 1998 reconstructs a root *h_1ueh_2- and connects the word with Lat. vānus 'devoid', Gr. εὖνις 'bereft' (although the latter seems phonetically difficult). He explains forms with initial εἰα- as renditions of older *EA-, with metrically long E; cf. θείομεν for ΘΕΟΜΕΝ, from older *θήομεν (> Att. θέωμεν). Cf. on ► εἰαμένη.

ἑβδομήκοντα [num.] 'seventy' (Hdt.). ◄IE septm-dḱmt- 'seventy'► •VAR Dor. (Delphi, Tab. Heracl. IV^a) ἑβδεμ-.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἑβδομηκοντ-άρουρος (pap.), etc.
•DER ἑβδομηκοστός 'the seventieth' (Hp.), ἑβδομηκοντάκις 'seventy times' (LXX).
•ETYM From *ἑβδμήκοντα, in turn from IE sebdm-dkmt-, where the vocalic -m- followed by the (glottalic element of the) preglottalized -d- yielded -μη-, just like -m̥h_1-. See Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 97-104. See further under ► ἕβδομος. Cf. ► ἐνενήκοντα and ► ἑκατόν.

ἕβδομος [num.] 'the seventh' (Il.). ◄IE s(e)ptm-os 'seventh'► •VAR OCor., Delph. ἑβδέμᾱ(ν).
•COMP ἑβδομ-ᾱγέτης 'leader of the seven'; ἑβδομᾱ-γενής 'born on the seventh day', epithet of Apollo (Plu. 2, 717d).
•DER ἑβδομαῖος (ἑβδεμ- Epid.) 'appearing on the seventh day, seventh-day fever' (Hp., etc.), -αῖον [n.] name of a festival for Apollo (Chios, Milete); ἑβδόμειος 'honoured on the seventh day' (of Apollo, IG 2, 1653), ἑβδομεύομαι 'to receive a name on the seventh day' (Lys.). ἑβδόματος (Il.) after δέκατος, ἑβδεμάται [dat.f.] (Argos; Herzog Phil. 71 (1912): 6). ἑβδομάς [f.] 'number of seven (days, etc.)' (Sol., Hp.) with ἑβδομαδικός 'belonging to the week' and ἑβδομάζω 'to keep the sabbath', ἑβδομάκις 'seven times' (Call.).
•ETYM The ordinal ἕβδομος, ἕβδεμος is from earlier sebdmos with a Greek prop-vowel; the cluster -bd- arose by assimilation from s(e)ptmos to septm 'seven'. The same form is reflected in OCS sedmъ 'seventh'. With influence of the cardinal, we have Lat. septimus, Skt. saptamá-, and Hitt. šiptamiịa- (a drink, < septm-io-; see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.); with loss of the *t and pm > km OLith. sēkmas. Cf. ► ἑπτά.

ἔβενος [f.] 'ebony (tree)' (Hdt.). ◄LW Eg.►
•VAR Also msc.; rarely also ἐβένη [f.].
•COMP ἐβενό-τριχον = ἀδίαντον (Ps.-Dsc.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 38, 158).
•DER ἐβένινος 'of ebony' (Str.), ἐβενῖτις 'kind of germander, πόλιον τὸ ὀρεινόν' (Ps.-Dsc.; see Redard 1949: 71).
•ETYM From Eg. hbnj 'ebony', ultimately perhaps Nubian (Spiegelberg KZ 41 (1907): 131); thence, Hebr. hobnīm (Lewy 1895: 35f.). From ἔβενος comes Arab. 'abnūs and Lat. ebenus, whence OHG ebenus, MoE ebon(y).

ἐβρατάγησεν [v.] · ἐψόφησεν 'produced a sound' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Cannot be separated from ῥάθαγος· τάραχος ... ψόφος (H.), but further details are unclear.

ἔβρος [m.] · τράγος βάτης· καὶ ποταμὸς Θρᾴκης 'a he-goat that treads; a river of Thrace' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM No etymology. Cf. Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 186f.

ἐγγαρεύω •VAR Also -έω, -ία. ⇒ ἄγγαρος.

ἐγγαροῦντες [v.] mg. uncertain (Inscr. Olymp. 335). ◄?► •ETYM Acc. to Dittenberger = ἐπιδημοῦντες, as a denominative of *ἔγγαρος = ἔγγειος; thus, Schwyzer: 482. Bechtel Gött. Nachr. 1920: 247f. prefers to identify -γαρος with Ion. (Att.) γεηρός 'earthly'. DELG holds that the meaning was 'transporting' and supposes it could be from the verb ἐγγαρεύω, as do Ernaut-Hatzfeld REA 14 (1912): 279-82.

ἔγγραυλις, -εως [f.] kind of anchovy (Ael., Opp.), also called ἐγκρασίχολος. ◄?► •ETYM Unexplained. Strömberg 1943: 68 starts from a verb *ἐγ-γραυλίζειν , beside γρυλίζειν 'grumble';. thus, ἔγγραυλις would mean "the grumbling one" (several examples of such fish names are found in Strömberg 1943: 63ff.). However, the variation αυ ~ υ is not convincing. The MoGr. name is γαῦρος; see Hatzidakis Glotta 2 (1910): 298.

ἐγγυαλίζω ⇒ γύαλον.

ἐγγύη [f.] 'surety, guarantee; nuptial contract' (Od.). ◄IE? $g^{(w)}ou$- 'hand'► •COMP In ὑπ-έγγυος 'under surety, responsible' (A., Hdt.), προ-έγγυος, πρώγγυος 'guarantee' (Heraclea, etc.) with προ-εγγυάομαι, πρωγγυεύω, προεγγύησις and in φερ-έγγυος 'giving surety, guaranteeing' (Hdt.), ἐχ-έγγυος 'giving surety, reliable' (S.).
•DER ἐγγυάω, -άομαι 'give surety, be surety, guarantee marriage, get engaged' (Od.), also δι-, ἐξ-εγγυάω, etc., with ἐγγύησις (δι-, ἐξ- ~) 'surety, engagement, etc.' (D., Is.), ἐγγύημα (δι- ~) 'id.' (pap.), ἐγγυητής 'surety' (IA; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 183 and 226f.), fem. ἐγγυήτρια (pap.); ἐγγυητή 'engaged' (Att.); ἐγγυητικός 'ptng. to the surety' (Heph. Astr.); deverbal ἔγγυος [m.] 'guarantor' (Thgn., inscr.), as an adjective 'guaranteed' (Them.; see below). Beside ἐγγυάω also ἐγγυεύω (Delph.).
•ETYM It is usually assumed that ἐγγύη and ἐγγυάω contain the preposition ἐν and a lost word for 'hand', which is preserved in YAv. gauua- 'hand', as well as in ὑπό-γυ(ι)ος 'imminent, sudden', prop. 'under the hands, at hand?' (IA). The YAv. form is ambiguous, however, as it can also continue gab^ha- and be related to Skt. gábhasti- 'hand, forearm'. This makes the etymology doubtful. Further, Greek has ► γύαλον, ► γύης, ► γυῖα, and from other languages, we may adduce Lith. gáuti 'get, obtain'. On the meaning of ἐγγύη, ἔγγυος, ἐγγυητής, cf. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 89f. and Gernet 1937: 395. See also ► ἐγγύς.

ἐγγύς [adv.] 'near', both spacial and temporal (Il.). ◄?► •VAR Compar. and superl. ἐγγυτέρω, -τάτω (-ύτερον, -ύτατα), also ἔγγιστα, ἔγγιον (see Seiler 1950: 107ff.); late adjective ἐγγύτερος, -τατος (LXX).
•DER ἐγγύθι 'nearby' (Il.), ἐγγύθεν 'from nearby' (Il.); ἐγγύτης [f.] 'proximity' (A. D.); ἐγγύδιον· ἔγγιον, πλησίον, προσῆκον 'nearer, near, at hand' (H.) after the diminutives in -ύδιον; denominative ἐγγίζω [v.] 'come near', trans. 'bring closer' (Arist., Hell.).

•ETYM Adverb in -ς like εὐθύς, ἄλις, etc. (Schwyzer: 620). In view of Lat. comminus, scholars often see in ἐγγύς an old word for 'hand' (in accordance with Bezzenberger BB 4 (1880): 321[1]), also attested in ἐγγύη, -άω. The first syllable seems to be the preposition (adverb) ἐν, but further interpretation is uncertain. Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 47 connected the word with βαίνω as "colui che va innanzi". This may chiefly be correct, but the second element is rather the neuter (= absolutive) of the root g^weu-* 'to go', "en allant vers, au milieu"; cf. De Lamberterie 1990: 326-37, who compares ►με(σ)σηγύ(ς).

ἐγείρω [v.] 'to awaken, rouse, raise'. ◄IE $h_1$ger-* 'awake'► •VAR Aor. ἐγεῖραι, fut. ἐγερῶ, late perf. ἐγήγερκα; med. ἐγείρομαι, aor. ἐγρέσθαι 'rise' with new present ἔγρομαι, ἔγρω (E.), perf. ἐγρήγορα 'I am awake' with epic forms ipv. ἐγρήγορθε, inf. -θαι, 3pl.ind. -θᾶσι, ptc. -ορόων (see Chantraine 1942: 429 and 359; Schwyzer: 800[8] and 540[4]); new pres. γρηγορέω (Hellenistic; Schwyzer: 768), also ἐγρηγορέω (Debrunner IF 47 (1929): 356).
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, etc. As a first member in ἐγρε-κύδοιμος (Hes.), ἐγρε-μάχᾱς (S.), etc.; cf. ἐγερσι- below.
•DER ἔγερσις 'awakening' (IA) with ἐγέρσιμος (ὕπνος Theoc. 24, 7; Arbenz 1933: 102), often with prefix ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-έγερσις; also as a first member in late compounds like ἐγερσι-μάχᾱς (AP); ἐγερτήριον 'awakening' (Ael.); ἐξ-εγέρτης 'who rises' (pap.); (δι-, ἐπ-)εγερτικός 'raising' (Pl.); ἀν-εγέρμων 'vigilant' (AP); ἐγερτί [adv.] 'id.' (Heraclit.). From the perfect: ἐγρήγορσις 'watch' (Hp., Arist.), ἐγρηγορικός 'watching' (Arist.), ἐγρηγορότως [adv.] 'id.' (Plu., Luc.), ἐγρήγορος 'id.' (Adam.), ἐγρηγορτί [adv.] 'awake' (K 182). Enlarged present ἐγρήσσω 'to be awake' (πάννυχοι ἐγρήσσοντες Λ 551) after the verbs in -σσω like πτήσσω, κνώσσω; see Chantraine 1942: 335 (doubtful Schwyzer: 648[3]).
•ETYM The perf. ἐγρήγορα is an old formation, parallel to Skt. jāgā́ra, YAv. jaγāra 'is awake', from h_1g(r)e-$h_1$gor-* (perhaps -γρ- from the aorist ἐγρέσθαι?). Uncertain is Lat. expergīscor. The word has also been connected with Alb. ngre 'rise'. See LIV[2] s.v. $h_1$ger-* 'erwachen'.

ἔγκαρ [?] = φθείρ 'louse' (Eust. 757, 27). ◄GR?►
•ETYM Uncertain. From the word for 'head'?

ἔγκαρος [m.] 'brains' (AP, Lyc.). ◄GR► •ETYM Scholarly hypostasis from ἐν and ►κάρᾱ, κάρη 'head', after ἐγκέφαλος : κεφαλή. Cf. ►ἴγκρος.

ἐγκάρσιος ⇒ἐπικάρσιος.

ἐγκάς [adv.] 'deep inside' (Hp., Gal.). ◄?►
•VAR Also ἔγκας.
•ETYM Related to ►ἔγκατα; formation like ἀγκάς, ἐντυπάς, etc. (Schwyzer: 631). DELG considers an analysis in ἐν- and -κας, as in ἕ-κας, ἀνα-κάς.

ἔγκατα [n.pl.] 'intestines' (Il.). ◄GR?►
•VAR Dat.pl. ἔγκασι (Λ 438); as a back-formation later sing. ἔγκατον (LXX, Luc.).
•DER ἐγκατόεις 'containing intestines' (Nic.), ἐγκατώδης 'like intestines' (sch.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Leumann 1950: 158[1] derives it from *ἔγκατος 'interior', which contains ἐν- just as ἔσχατος contains ἐξ-; ἔγκασι would then be an innovation based on γούνασι, etc. Lacon. ἔγκυτον· ἔγκατον (H.) is folk-etymological, based on ►κύτος 'skin, trunk, body'.

ἐγκίλλαφον [?] · οὐρά 'tail', also ἔγκιλλον· οὐράν (H.). ◄?► •ETYM The word has been compared with ►κιλλός 'grey' (κίλλος 'donkey, i.e. the grey one'), or ►κίλλ<ο>υρος· σεισοπυγίς 'wagtail' (H.). On -φος, see Chantraine 1933: 264.

ἐγκλίς [f.] · ἡ καγκελλωτὴ θύρα 'entrance furnished with a railing', (EM 518, 22). ◄GR► •ETYM Related to ἐγκλίνω, with the same formation as in δικλίς; see ►δικλίδες. Cf. also Strömberg 1944: 15.

ἐγκοακίσαι [?] · ἐγχέαι λάθρα 'pour in secretly' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 169 compares κοία· κλέψημα (H.).

ἐγκοιωταί [f.pl.] scil. δαρκναί, 'deposited money' (Gortyn).
•ETYM Derived from *ἐγκοιόω, -όομαι, which is probably a denominative from *ἔγκοιος, which belongs to κοῖον· ἐνέχυρον 'pledge' (H.). See there for further etymology.

ἐγκονέω [v.] 'to hurry, be quick and active in service' (Il.). ◄IE ken-* 'be active'► •DIAL Perhaps here Myc. ka-si-ko-no.
•DER ἐγκονητί [adv.] 'quickly' (Pi.), ἐγκονίς 'servant' (Suid.). Beside ἐγκονέω stands διακονέω (with ►διάκονος, s.v.); further perhaps ἀγκονέω 'hurry' in Ar. Lys. 1311; thence ἀγκόνους· διακόνους, δούλους 'servants, slaves' (H.). The simplex only in H. κόνει· σπεῦδε, τρέχε 'hasten, run [ipv.]' and κονεῖν· ἐπείγεσθαι, ἐνεργεῖν 'to hurry oneself, be in action' with κονηταί· θεράποντες 'attendants'. Note κοναρόν· ... δραστήριον and κοναρώτερον· δραστικώτερον 'more efficient' (H.). Uncertain is ἀ-κονῑτί (Olympia, Th.); cf. on ►κόνις.
•ETYM Iterative-intensive verb, mostly connected with Lat. cōnor, cōnārī 'exert onself, try' (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). Tremblay Sprache 38 (1998): 14-30, connects these words with the root k̂en-* 'to rise', assuming a lengthened grade adjective for Latin. Other comparanda come from Celtic, e.g. MW digoni 'to make', W dichon, digon 'can' (Pok. 564).

ἐγκρασίχολος [m.] 'kind of anchovy' (Arist.). ◄GR► •ETYM So called because the intestines are attached to the head? See Thompson 1947 s.v.

ἐγκρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'cake made of oil and honey' (Stesich., com.). ◄?►
•COMP ἐγκριδο-πώλης 'seller of ἐ.' (com.).

•ETYM A back-formation from ἐγκεράννυμι, ἐγκεράσαι 'mix in' is formally impossible. Neither is it connected to ἐγκρίνειν (Strömberg 1944: 15).

ἐγκυτί [adv.] 'to the skin' (Archil., Call.). ◁A compound of ἐν and κύτος, formed after other adverbs in -(τ)ί-(ς).▷ •VAR ἐγκυτίς (Hdn.). ⇒ κύτος.

ἐγρήσσω ⇒ ἐγείρω.

ἔγχελυς, -υος [f.] 'eel' (Il.). ◁PG(O)▷
•VAR Att. plur. -εις (to which nom.sg. -λις [Arist.]?).
•COMP ἐγχελυο-τρόφος 'nourishing eels' (Arist.), ἐγχελυ-ωπός 'with eyes like eels' (Luc.).
•DER Diminutive ἐγχελύδιον (middle com.), ἐγχελεών, -υών 'eel-trap' (Arist.), ἐγχέλειος 'of an eel', mostly substantivized -εια [n.pl.], scil. κρέα, τεμάχη, etc. (com.).
•ETYM Gr. ἔγχελυς recalls other words for 'eel', like Lat. anguilla, Lith. ungurỹs, etc., but no IE pre-form can be reconstructed. Acc. to an old interpretation, ἔγχελυς is a cross between ἔχις and a word like Lat. anguis (whence anguilla) 'snake'. Katz 1998 assumes taboo transformations. Note further Lesb. ἴμβηρις· ἔγχελυς. Μηθυμναῖοι H., beside which there is λέβηρις 'skin of a snake'. The words are no doubt non-IE. Cf. further Pok. 43ff. and Thompson 1947 s.v., as well as Strömberg 1943: 10ff.

ἐγχεσίμωρος [adj.] usually understood as 'famous for his spear' (Il.). ◁IE *meh_1-ro- 'great'▷ •DER Cf. ἰό-μωρος, epithet of the Αργεῖοι (Δ 242, Ξ 479). Imitation in ὑλακό-μωρος, of κύνες (ξ 29, π 4; cf Porzig 1942: 239); see also ► σινάμωρος.
•ETYM The second member is usually connected with Celt., Gm. and Slav. PNs like Gaul. Nerto-mārus, OHG Volk-mār, Slav. Vladi-měrъ, from IE *-moh_1-ro-, *-meh_1-ro-. Further one compares a denominative Gm. verb for 'proclaim', Go. merjan, etc. with waila-mereis [adj.] 'εὔφημος', OHG māri 'famous', etc., and a Celt. adjective for 'great', e.g. OIr. már. The ō-vocalism in Greek and Celt. agrees with the type ἄ-φρων : φρήν (Schwyzer: 355). The form of the first member may be metrically conditioned (cf. ἐγχέσπαλος s.v. ► ἔγχος). Ruijgh 1957: 93 wonders whether this compound could contain μωρός 'foolish'. Cf. Leumann 1950: 37 and 272[18].

ἐγχίδιον [?] · ἔγγιον 'nearer'; ἐγχόδια· ἀθρόα 'crowded together' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM The former word could be a cross of ἐγγύς and ἀγχίδιος, the latter that of ἐγγύς and ἀγχοῦ, -όθι, acc. to Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 379f., but this does not explain much. Latte considers these forms to be mistakes.

ἔγχος [n.] 'spear, lance' (Il.), also 'weapon' in general (Pi., S.); on the mg. Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 11, Trümpy 1950: 52ff. ◁PG?(O)▷ •COMP As a first member in ἐγχέσ-παλος 'spear drilling' (Hom.), -φόρος 'carrying a spear' (Pi.); ► ἐγχεσίμωρος; after it ἐγχεσί-μαργος· ἔγχει μαινόμενος 'raging with a spear' (H., EM), ἐγχεσί-χειρες [pl.] 'weaponed with a spear' (Orph. Fr. 285, 18).

•DER Also ἐγχείη (Hom.), probably formed after ἐλεγχείη : ἔλεγχος, ὀνειδείη : ὄνειδος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 86f.). Different Tovar Emerita 11 (1943): 431ff. Unclear is'Εγχώ· ἡ Σεμέλη οὕτως ἐκαλεῖτο.
•ETYM No etymology. See Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 10ff. (to ἀκαχμένος), as well as Tovar Emerita 11 (1943): 431ff. The word is possibly Pre-Greek.

ἐγω [pers. pron.] 'I'. ◁IE *h_1eǵ- + -e/oH, -h_1-om 'I'▷ •VAR Lesb. epic Dor. also ἐγών, Lacon. Tarent. ἐγώνη, Boeot. ἰώ(ν), ἰώνει (ῑ-?).
•ETYM Beside ἐγώ = Lat. egō, we find Venet. eχo (length of the -o uncertain), Lat. egŏ with secondarily short final vowel, as in the Gm. forms, e.g. ON ek (but see below); neither is there vocalic auslaut in the Balt., Armen. and Hitt. forms: OLith. eš, Arm. es, Hitt. uk (though in Armenian, -ŏ̄ may have been lost). Indo-Iranian and Slavic have forms in IE *-h_1-om, e.g. Skt. ahám (aspiration from *-ǵ- + -H-), OP adam, OCS azъ (lengthening by Winter's Law); enclitic ON -(i)ka (like proclitic ek, ik?), perhaps from IE *h_1eǵom. Were the variants *h_1eǵō, *h_1eǵ$h_1$om reshaped after the 1sg. verbal endings -ō (thematic), -om (secondary), or is -om a particle which is frequent in Old Indic (cf. t_u*vám* 'thou', etc.)? Gr. ἐγών seems to be a compromise between -ō and -om (or is it shaped after ἔγνων, *ἔδων, etc.?); in ἐγών-η (or ἐγώ-νη? Cf. τύνη), -νη is a deictic element; cf. ἔγω-γε. See ► ἐμέ.

ἐδανός [adj.] of ἔλαιον Ξ 172 (ἐλαίῳ / ἀμβροσίῳ ἑδανῷ). ◁?▷ •ETYM De Lamberterie 1999 adduces a second attestation in Nic. Alexiph. 162, 181, where ἐδανός qualifies two kinds of wine, and the gloss ἐδανός· εἶδος ἀμπέλου, perhaps to be corrected to ἑδανός. The meaning 'sweet' is quite possible for these contexts. De Lamberterie then proposes a reconstruction *sueh_2d-no- with IE loss of laryngeal before voiced (= glottalic) stop plus resonant (cf. Lubotsky's Law in Indo-Iranian). A parallel case in Greek would be ► κεδνός < *keh_2d-no-.

ἔδαφος [n.] 'ground, bottom' (ε 249; see Richel 1936: 212ff.), also 'text' (Gal.) as opposed to the commentary. ◁?▷
•COMP ἐδαφο-ποιέω 'equalize the ground' (J.).
•DER Late: ἐδάφιον 'text' (Arist.); ἐδαφικός 'belonging to the ground' (pap.), ἐδαφιαῖος 'id.' (sch., Tz.), ἐδαφίτης (Tz.). Denominative verbs: ἐδαφίζω 'to equalize, give a foundation' (Arist., Hell.); ἐδαφόω in ἠδάφωται· κατῴκισται 'has been established' (H.).
•ETYM For the nouns in -(α)φος, see Chantraine 1933: 262ff. and Schwyzer: 495. Is the word to be connected to ἕδος (see ► ἕζομαι)?

ἐδέατρος [m.] 'seneschal at the Persian court, steward'. ◁?▷
•VAR Also accented -τρός?
•COMP ἀρχ-εδέατρος 'upper seneschal at the Ptolemeian court' (Hell.)
•ETYM Reformation of ἐλέατρος (see ► ἐλεόν) after ἔδω. See Güntert 1914: 155 and Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 272ff.

ἔδεθλον [n.] 'ground, bottom, foundation' (Antim.; probably also A. Ag. 776 instead of ἐσθλά; or ἔσθλα, from *ἑδ-θλα?). ◁GR▷ •DER Also ἐδέθλιον 'id.' (Call.).

•ETYM From the verb for 'sit' (see ►ἕζομαι), with a suffix -εθλο- (Schwyzer: 533, Chantraine 1933: 375) and breath dissimilation.

ἕδνα [n.pl.] 'dowry' (Il.; on the mg. Köstler Wien. Ak. Anz. 81 (1944): 6ff., Theiler Mus. Helv. 7 (1950): 114). ◄IE *$h_1$ued- 'dowry'.►
•VAR Hom. also ἔεδνα (see below), rarely sing. ἕδνον (Pi., Call.).
•COMP ἀνάεδνος 'without ἕ.' (Il.; on the prefix Schwyzer: 432, Chantraine 1942: 182).
•DER Also ἄεδνον· ἄφερνον ἢ πολύφερνον 'without dowry; richly dowered' H.; ἑδνοφορέω 'bring dowry' (Eust.). Old denominative ἑδνόομαι (ἐεδν-), -όω 'to give dowry to one's daughter' (β 53) with ἐεδνωτής 'bride's father' (N 382). Several glosses in H.: ἕδνιος χιτών· ὃν πρῶτον ἡ νύμφη τῷ νυμφίῳ δίδωσιν 'first thing the bride gives to the bridegroom'; ἑδνάς· ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν ἕδνων ἐδητύς 'food from the wedding-gifts', ἑδνεύειν· ἐνεχυράζειν 'to take a pledge from'.
•ETYM ἕδνα, ἕδνον, from IE *$h_1$ued-no- (on the aspiration, see Schwyzer: 227), can be compared with a Slav. and WGm. word for 'bride-price', e.g. ORu. věno < *$h_1$ued-no- (lengthening due to Winter's Law); OE weotuma, OHG widomo m., from PGm. wet-man-*, IE *$h_1$ued-mon- (the Gr.-Slav. suffix -no- may reflect -mno-, thematization of -mon-). This old word for 'bride-price' is often derived from a verb meaning 'to take home, to marry (of the man)', seen in Lith. vedù, Ru. vedú (from *ued^h- because of the short e), and OIr. fedid, and to which Skt. vadhū́- 'bride, young woman, daughter-in-law' also belongs. However, this is impossible because of the *d^h. It is clear that ἕδν- is the younger and ἐεδν- the older form. The 'prothesis' (from *h_1-) must be old, while the -α- in ἀνάεδνος is somehow secondary (vowel assimilation is impossible).

ἕδος ⇒ἕζομαι.

ἕδρᾱ [f.] 'seat, abode (of the gods), temple' (Il.). ◄GR►
•COMP Many compounds: καθέδρα 'seat, chair' (Hp.); also ἐφέδρα, Ion. ἐπέδρη 'siege' (ἐφ-έζομαι), ἐνέδρα 'ambush, postponement' (ἐν-έζομαι, ἐν-ιζάνω), see Risch IF 59 (1949): 45f.; but ἐξ-έδρα 'seat outside the house' (E., Hell.). Bahuvrīhi with adverbial first member ἔφ-εδρος 'who sits by the side, reserve' (Pi.); thus πάρ-εδρος 'assistance' (παρ-έζομαι), ἔν-εδρος 'inhabitant', σύν-εδρος 'id.'; ἔξ-εδρος 'far from his residence' (S.); πολύ-εδρος 'with many seats' (Plu.).
•DER From ἕδρα: ἑδραῖος 'sedentary, fixed, steady' (IA) with ἑδραιότης and ἑδραιόω, ἑδραίωμα, -ωσις; ἑδρικός 'belonging to the anus' (medic.), ἑδρίτης 'fugitive' (Suid., EM); πρωτοκαθεδρίτης 'president' (Herm.). Denominative verbs: ἑδρ-ιάομαι 'to sit down' (Hom.), -ιάω 'id.' (Theoc.); see Schwyzer: 732, Chantraine 1942: 359; ἑδράζω 'to set, fix' (Hell. and late) with ἑδρασμός, ἑδραστικός, ἀν-έδραστος; ἕδρασμα = ἕδρα (E.), after στέγασμα (see Chantraine 1933: 177). But ἐφ-, ἐν-, παρ-, συν-εδρεύω from ἔφ-εδρος. In H.: ἑδρήεσσα· βεβαία 'steady', after τελήεσσα; see Schwyzer: 527, ἑδρίας· ἀεὶ πνέων 'always blowing', after wind names in -ίας; ἕδρια· συνέδρια, ἑδρίς· ἑδραῖος. After words in -ᾰνον arose ἕδρᾰνον = ἕδρα (Hes.); ἑδρανῶς = στερεῶς (Eust.).
•ETYM Derivative in -ρᾱ of ►ἕζομαι (*sed-reh_2-); cf. χώρα. No exact parallel formations.

ἔδω [v.] 'to eat' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1$ed- 'eat'►
•VAR Athem. inf. ἔδμεναι (Hom.), fut. ἔδομαι (Il.), perf.ptc.act. ἐδηδώς (P 542), med. ἐδήδοται (χ 56; after πέποται), with act. ἐδήδοκα (Att.); aor. pass. ἠδέσθην, perf. med. ἐδήδε(σ)μαι (Att.); new pres. ἔσθω (Il.), ἐσθίω (Od.).
•COMP With prefix κατ-έδω, -εσθίω (-έσθω), -έδομαι 'to eat up' (Il.), ἀπ-εσθίω, -έδομαι 'id.' (Att.).
•DER εἶδαρ < *ἔδ-ϝαρ 'food' (Il.; on ἔδαρ· βρῶμα H. see below). ἐδωδή 'food, meal' (Il.), ἐδώδιμος 'edible' (Hdt.; see Arbenz 1933: 50f.), ἐδωδός 'usable as food' (Hp.). ἐδητύς [f.] (only gen. -τῦος) 'food' (Hom.); -η- unclear, but cf. βοητύς, ἀγορητύς; see Porzig 1942: 183f., Benveniste 1948: 67. ἔδεσμα 'food' (Att.) with ἐδεσμάτιον (Procl.); ἐδεστής 'eater' (Hdt.). ἐδηδών· φαγέδαινα 'cancer' (H.), cf. ἐδηδώς.
•ETYM The old athematic present, seen in the inf. ἔδμεναι, in the fut. = subj. ἔδ-ο-μαι, and perhaps also in the ipv. ἔσθι (ρ 478?; see Chantraine 1942: 292), is found in several languages: Hitt. edmi [1sg.] 'eat', Skt. ádmi 'id.', 3sg. átti, Lat. ēst, Lith. ė̃sti, OCS jastь 'to eat'; all of these are from IE ed-mi, -ti*, with lengthening in BSl. acc. to Winter's Law. On younger thematic forms (cf. Go. itan, 3sg.pres. it-iþ), see Chantr. l.c. Acc. to Schwyzer: 713[6], the secondary presents ἔσθω and ἐσθίω developed from the ipv. ἔσθι (= Skt. addhí), but Hamp Glotta 59 (1981): 155f., simply derives ἔσθω from ἔδ-θ-. The other forms are Greek innovations: ἠδέσθην, ἐδήδε(σ)μαι (after ἐτελέσθην); thence ἔδεσμα, ἐδεστής (cf. ὠμηστής), ἐδεστός. As a suppletive aorist, Greek used φαγεῖν. The r/n-stem εἶδαρ < *ἔδϝαρ, plur. εἴδατα can be compared with Skt. vy-advar-á- m. 'rodent' and agrādvan- 'eating first' (agra-ad-van-). See also ►ἄριστον and δείπνηστος (s.v. ►δεῖπνον). Further, ►ὀδούς (ὀδών), ►ὀδύνη, and ►ὠδίς are traditionally connected with ἔδω, which is incorrect.

ἑδώλια [n.pl.] 'seat (especially of rowers in a ship); thwart, habitat' (Hdt.). ◄IE *sed-ōl 'seat'► •VAR Rare sing. -ιον.
•DER Backformation ἕδωλα 'thwarts' (Lyc.). Reshaped after the nouns in -ωλή is ἑδωλή (Naucratis). Denominative ἑδωλιάζω [v.] 'to provide seats' (Delos III[a], Lycurg.). Also ἑδωλός· λόχος Λακεδαιμονίων οὕτως ἐκαλεῖτο 'name of the Spartan camp' (H.).
•ETYM An l-derivative from the verb 'sit' (see ►ἕζομαι) is known in several languages: Lat. sella (< *sed-leh_2-) 'chair' = ἕλλα· καθέδρα. Λάκωνες H.; Gaul. caneco-sedlon (unknown first member); Go. sitls, OHG sezzal 'seat' (PGm. set-la-*); cf. also Arm. etł 'place, position' (the Slavic word, e.g. ORu. sedъ-lo, Ru. sedló 'saddle', is a borrowing from Germanic; cf. Derksen 2008: 443). The basis is an ablauting l-stem sed-ōl*, oblique sed-l-* (Schwyzer: 483), of which Greek has preserved both ablaut grades.

ἐέλδομαι [v.] 'to desire, want, long for' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1$ueld- 'wish, desire'► •VAR Only present stem.
•COMP Compound ἐπι-έλδομαι (A. R. 4, 783).
•DER ἐέλδωρ [n.] (only nom.acc.) 'desire, wish' (Il.; ἔλδωρ Hdn., H.), also ἐέλδω [f.] (Ibyc. 18; if correct).

•ETYM From ἐ(ϝ)έλδομαι (Chantraine 1942: 133 and 182). No cognates outside Greek. Homer has ἔλδ- only three times (Ε 481, Ψ 122, ψ 6); these may have undergone influence by ► ἔλπομαι. The form with 'prothesis' is the original one, as is proven by ἐέλδωρ; see Beekes 1969: 63f.

ἕζομαι [v.] 'to sit (down)' (Il.). ◄IE *sed- 'sit down'► •VAR With terminative prefix (see Brunel 1939: 83ff., 257ff.) καθ-έζομαι (Il.) 'to sit (down)'. Fut. καθεδοῦμαι (Att.), later καθεσθήσομαι (LXX), καθεδήσομαι (D. L.); aor. καθεσθῆναι (Paus.); other presents ἵζω, ἰζάνω (Schwyzer 700) 'to make sit, set', with ἵζησα, ἵζηκα (late), prefixed καθ-ίζω (Il.), Ion. κατ-ίζω, καθ-ιζάνω, Aeol. κατ-ισδάνω 'to put down, sit down', med. καθ-ίζομαι 'sit down', with fut. καθιῶ (D.), καθίσω (Hell.), κατίσω (Ion.), καθιξῶ (Dor.), med. καθιζήσομαι (Att.), καθιοῦμαι (LXX), καθίσομαι (NT., Plu.); aor. καθίσ(σ)αι, καθίσ(σ)ασθαι (X., wrong for καθέσ(σ)αι in Hom., see below), κατίσαι (Hdt., for κατέσαι), καθίξαι (Dor.), καθιζῆσαι (late.); late perf. κεκάθικα, late aor. ptc. pass. καθιζηθείς.
Beside these present forms and the aorists, there is a sigmatic aorist εἷσα 'I set', inf. ἕσ(σ)αι, med. εἱσάμην, ἕσ(σ)ασθαι, καθ-εῖσα, καθ-έσ(σ)αι (thus also in Hom. to be read for καθίσ(σ)αι; and also κατέσαι for κατίσαι in Hdt.); also fut. καθέσω (Eup.); see Wackernagel 1916: 63ff.
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀνα-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, παρα-, συν-, etc.; these were also prefixed to καθέζομαι, καθίζω, which were considered simplices (see Schwyzer: 656, Schwyzer 1950: 429).
•DER ἕδος [n.] 'seat' (see on ► εὐρυόδεια). The verbal nouns are largely independent from the verb, see on ► ἕδρα, ► ἑδώλια, ► ἕλλα; also ► ἔδαφος and ► ἕδεθλον; note ἕσμα 'stalk, pedicle' (Arist.) < *sed-sm-. Probably unrelated is ► ὄζος. Cf. also ► ἱδρύω.
•ETYM Both ἕζομαι and ἵζω are IE formations; ἕζομαι is a thematic yod-present *sed-ie/o-, also found in Gm., e.g. ON sitia, OS sittian, OHG sizzen 'to sit'; ἵζω derives from reduplicated *si-sd-e/o- = Lat. sīdō, U sistu 'sidito', Skt. sīdati. As the preterite ἑζόμην is often an aorist in Homer, it might derive from a reduplicated aorist *se-sd-; it could even represent zero grade *h_1e-sd- with an augment and secondary aspiration. In Homer, a present is furnished only by ἕζεαι (κ 378). Cf. Schwyzer: 652[5] and 716[3] and Chantraine 1942: 336. The aorist εἷσα from IE *h_1e-sed-s-m (with secondary aspiration) agrees with Skt. ní ... ṣátsat [subj.]. As a resultative perfect of (καθ-)ἕζομαι, (καθ-)ἵζω, Greek uses ► ἧμαι, κάθ-ημαι (see Schwyzer 1950: 258).

ἔθειραι [f.pl.] 'manes of a horse, crest' (Il.), 'hair on the head', also sing. (h. Ven., Pi.); 'manes of a lion, bristle of a boar', etc. (Theoc.). ◄?► •COMP χρυσο-έθειρος 'with golden hair' (Archil.), εὐ-έθειρα [f.] (Anacr.), etc.
•DER ἐθειράδες 'hair of the beard' (π 176 v.l. for γενειάδες); ἐθειράζω 'to have long hair' (Theoc.); also ἐθείρεται 'is covered (with scales)' (Orph. A. 929; see Schwyzer: 722f.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Taken with ► ἔθων 'pushing, tossing' vel sim. as "that which waves", formally like πίειρα to πίων. Frisk s.v. assumed a connection with the r-stem found in ► ἔθρις, and further connected ὄθη· φροντίς, ὥρα, φόβος, λόγος 'worry, care, fear, consideration' (H.), comparing Lat. iuba, crista, crīnis for the meaning. This is very unlikely. Perhaps the word is rather from *ued^h-, as per Chantraine 1942: 151 and DELG s.v.

ἐθείρω [v.] Mg. unknown, mostly taken as 'to care for' (see H.: ἐθείρῃ· ἐπιμελείας ἀξιώσῃ 'deem worthy of care'), or 'to work, cultivate'. ◄?► •VAR only Φ 347 χαίρει δέ μιν (sc. ἀλωήν) ὅστις ἐθείρῃ.
•ETYM Etymology unknown. On ἐθείρεται 'is covered', see ► ἔθειραι. See also Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 203.

ἐθέλω [v.] 'want, wish' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1g^{wh}el$- 'wish'► •VAR With aphaeresis θέλω (Aeol. Ion. Hell.; in Hom. only ο 317), aor. (ἐ)θελῆσαι, fut. (ἐ)θελήσω (Il.), perf. ἠθέληκα (X.), τεθέληκα (Hell.).
•COMP As a first member in ἐθελο-κακέω 'to play the coward, resign to the enemy' (Hdt.), 'to deliberately do wrong' (Ph.) with ἐθελοκάκησις (Plb.), cf. μνησι-κακέω, etc.; ἐθελό-δουλος 'voluntary slave' with -δουλεία (Pl.), ἐθέλ-εχθρος (Crat.), etc. PNs Ἐθελο-κράτης, etc. (inscr.).
•DER (ἐ)θελημός 'voluntary' (Hes.), (ἐ)θελήμων 'id.' (Pl.) with ἐθελημοσύναι [pl.] (PMag. Par.); θέλημα 'will' (Antipho Soph.; θελήμη Theognost.) with θεληματιον; -τικός, θέλησις, -ητής, -ητός (LXX, etc.). From the ptc. stem ἐθελοντ-: ἐθελοντής 'volunteer' (Hdt.) with -τήν [adv.] (Hdt.); rarely θελοντής (Hdt. v.l.); Hom. has ἐθελοντῆρας (β 292); ἐθελούσιος 'voluntary' (X., after ἑκούσιος). Adverbs ἐθελοντί, -τηδόν 'voluntarily' (Th.), ἐθελόντως (sch.). Isolated: θέλεος ἀθέλεος 'volens nolens' (A. Supp. 862 [lyr.]), poetic formation after the adjectives in -εος.
•ETYM (ἐ)θέλω is a primary thematic present indicative, which was extended by -η- in all non-presentic forms. It corresponds to OCS želéjǫ, -ěti 'wish, desire', from *$h_1g^{wh}el$-. The gloss φαλίζει· θέλει (H.) is unclear.

ἐθμή [f.] · ἀτμός, καπνὸς λεπτός, ἀτμή 'vapor, fine smoke' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM No etymology.

ἐθμοί [m.] · πολλοί, δεσμοί, πλόκαμοι 'multitudes, bonds, locks (of hair)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Lagercrantz KZ 35 (1899): 273 assumed *ued^h-mo-, related to Go. ga-widan 'συζευγνύναι, to connect', etc.

ἔθνος [n.] 'group, crowd, swarm' (of people, animals; Hom., Pi.), 'class, people' (Hdt.), 'foreign people' (Arist.), τὰ ἔθνη 'the pagans' (NT); on the mg. Chantraine BSL 43 (1946): 52ff. ◄?►
•COMP As a first member in ἐθν-άρχης 'governor, prince' (LXX, J., NT), as a second member in ὁμο-εθνής 'belonging to the same people' (Hdt.), ἀλλο-εθνής (Hell.), etc.
•DER ἐθνικός 'belonging to a (foreign) people, national, traditional, heathen' (Hell.), cf. γενικός to γένος; ἐθνίτης 'belonging to the same people' (Eust., Suid.), ἐθνισταί· οἱ ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἔθνους 'those who are from the same tribe' (H.); ἐθνυμών mg. unknown (Hdn. Gr.; after δαιτυμών?); ἐθνηδόν [adv.] 'per people' (LXX).
•ETYM Etymology unclear. If -νος is a suffix (cf. ἔρνος, σμῆνος; see Chantraine 1933: 420 and Schwyzer: 512), we may compare ► ἔθος and reconstruct *$sued^h$-nos-, which may be based on the reflexive *sue (see ► ἕ, ἑ). The word has also been connected with ► ὀθνεῖος 'foreign, alien' (Democr., Pl.) as 'belonging to the ἔθνος' (Fraenkel Gnomon 22 (1950): 238); but in this case, it can hardly be from sue-*. The word could be of foreign origin.

From ἔθνος (pronounced ἔθνος) comes Copt. hεθνος, Arm. het'anos, and also Go. haiþno 'heathen' (whence the other Gm. words).

ἔθος [n.] 'custom, usage' (IA). ◁IE? sued^h-* 'custom, character'▷ •DER Old only ἐθάς [m., f.] 'used (to)' (Hp., Th.); late ἔθιμος 'usual' (Amorgos I[a], D. S., etc.; after νόμιμος, Arbenz 1933: 99), ἐθικός 'usual' (Plu.), ἐθήμων 'id.' (Musae.) with ἐθημο-λογέω 'to collect as usual' (AP), ἐθημοσύνη (H., Suid.). Denominative verb ἐθίζω (not with Schwyzer 716 from *ἔθω, see ἔθων and εἴωθα) with ἔθισμα 'usage' (Pl.), ἐθισμός 'custom' (Arist.).
•ETYM If we assume ϝέθος, from IE sued^hos (with dissimilation by Grassmann's Law), the word can be compared with Skt. svadhā́- 'custom, nature'. Further, there is the Gm. word for 'custom', Go. sidus [m.], etc., which goes back to IE sed^hu-*. Additionally, Lat. sodālis 'comrade' has been compared as a reflection of sued^h-* with an Italic suffix -ālis. The basis of sued^h-, sed^h- may be the reflexive s(u)e* (see ► ἕ, ἑ); the enlargement d^h* may derive from the root d^heh₁-* 'to put, situate' (see ► τίθημι). See ► εἴωθα, ► ἦθος; also ► ἔτης and ► ἕταρος.

ἔθρις [adj.] · τομίας, κριός 'castrated ram' (H.). ◁?▷
•VAR Cod. ἐθρίς; cf. ἴθρις· σπάδων, τομίας, εὐνοῦχος 'eunuch' (H.) and ἄθρις (Suid.), ὄθρις (Zonar.).
•ETYM Traditionally, the word has been compared with Skt. vádhri- 'castrate'. Some suppose an r/n-stem, seen in Skt. vádhar-, Av. vadar- [n.] the weapon of Indra, but Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 498 rejects the connection with vádhri-.
Frisk assumed that the fluctuating vocalism was due to the non-literary character of the word. He thinks ἐ- is old, while ὀ- was created after ► ὠθέω, and ἀ- by association with privative ἀ-. Finally, ἰ- is explained away by vowel harmony. This is hardly credible. Given the variation of the initial vowel, it seems conceivable that the word stems from Pre-Greek. Both ε/ ι and α/ ο are frequent in such words. See ► ἔθων.

ἔθων [adj.] in χλούνην σῦν ἄγριον ... ὅς κακὰ πόλλ' ἔρδεσκεν ἔθων Οἰνῆος ἀλωήν (I 540), plur. σφήκεσσιν ἐοικότες ..., οὓς παῖδες ἐριδμαίνουσιν ἔθοντες (Π 260). ◁?▷ •ETYM Acc. to sources from antiquity, it means βλάπτων 'damaging', φθείρων 'destructive', or ἐρεθίζοντες 'annoying'; additionally, there is the gloss ἔθει· φθείρει, ἐρεθίζει (H.). Others analyzed it as a present ptc. of ► εἴωθα 'to be used to'. Contrary to the last interpretation, it can be stated that the old perfect εἴωθα, indicating a situation, has no present form; moreover, a present in the same meaning would be rather strange. Also, the construction conflicts with that of εἴωθα, and the translation 'acting in conformity with one's character' is a bit strange in these passages (of a swine and wasps).
The hypothesis of Schmidt KZ 45 (1913): 231ff., which connects ἔθων as a primary present to ► ὠθέω, is doubtful. Cf. also Leumann 1950: 212f. Bechtel 1914 s.v. connected ἔθω to εἴωθα, ἔθος.

DELG prefers the interpretation βλάπτων (which seems, however, to conflict with ἐριδμαίνουσι). Not related to ► ἔθρις.

εἰ [pcl.] 'if', introducing a wish, condition, or question (IA, Arc.). ◁?▷
•VAR Aeol. Dor. αἰ, sometimes εἰκ, αἰκ (after οὐ : οὐκ); Cypr. Dor. ἤ.
•ETYM Uncertain. For interjective origin of αἰ (partly also of εἰ), see Schwyzer 1950: 557 and 683. Perhaps a demonstrative εἰ 'then' also existed (Brugmann-Thumb 1913: 616), with which compare εἶ-τα, and which would originally be a locative of the demonstrative h₁e-*, h₁o- (Schwyzer: 550). See Schwyzer 1950: 557 and 683.

εἶα [interj.] adhortative 'hey, come on' (Att.). ◁ONOM▷ •VAR See Hdn. Gr. 1, 495, 14.
•DER εἰάζω 'call εἶα' (E. Fr. 844; cf. αἰάζω).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic; comparable with Lat. (h)eia and other cries. Cf. ► εἰέν.

εἰαμενή [f.] 'lowlands, humid pasture' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR ἴαμνοι [pl.] 'id.' (Nic., H.). Cf. ἰαμενή, -αί, also εἰαμένον· νήνεμον, κοῖλον, βοτανώδη 'without wind, hollow [valley], herbaceous' (H.).
•ETYM Frisk s.v. and others assume a participle, with accent shift as in ► δεξαμενή. Is initial εἰ- for ἰ- metrical? The word is probably Pre-Greek, given the variation -μεν-/-μν-, which could not occur in a participle.

εἴβω [v.] 'to drip, spill', med. 'to trickle down' (Il.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Mostly κατ-είβω, -ομαι; only present.
•DER Beside this (itacism or ablaut?) ἰβάνη· κάδος, ἀντλητήριον 'vessel for water or wine, bucket'; ἴβανον· κάδον, σταμνίον, χαλκίον 'id., wine-jar, copper vessel' with ἰβανεῖ (for -ᾷ?)· ἀντλεῖ 'draw water' and ἰβανατρίς· ἱμητήριον 'rope of a draw-well' (all H.); also ἴβδης 'peg to let out the water' (Eust.).
•ETYM Frisk suggests a cross of λείβω and ► ἰκμάς with *εἴκω. See Güntert 1914: 148, Walleser WuS 14 (1932): 165f. All of these are rather improbable guesses. ἴβδης may be unrelated, given the meaning. Is εἴβω Pre-Greek, with its β, interchange ει/ ι, and suffix -αν-?

εἰδάλιμος ⇒ εἶδος.

εἰδαλίς [?] · ὄρνις ποιός 'kind of bird' (H.). ◁?▷
•VAR Also ἰδάλιος.
•ETYM Unexplained.

εἶδαρ ⇒ ἔδω.

εἴδημα •VAR εἴδησις. ⇒ οἶδα.

εἴδομαι [v.] 'to appear, seem, resemble' (Il.). ◁IE ueid-* 'see'▷ •VAR Aor. εἴσασθαι (ptc. also ἐ-(ϝ)εισάμενος, Chantraine 1942: 182).
•COMP δια-είδομαι with factitive fut. δια-είσομαι 'make appear' (Θ 535; see Chantraine 1942: 442).

•DER εἶδος 'appearance, species, form, etc.', εἰδύλλιον 'poem, single song', εἰδάλιμος 'with beautiful appearance'; εἴδωλον 'picture, image', -λάτρης 'who reveres idols', εἰδάλλεται· φαίνεται 'appears' (H.).
•ETYM Beside (ϝ)είδομαι and the s-aorist, there is the thematic aorist ►ἰδεῖν and the perfect ►οἶδα, both of which are old. There is no exact equivalent of εἴδομαι in other branches; comparable are Celt. and Gm. forms like OIr. ad-féded 'narrabat', Go. fra-weitan 'to revenge', both from IE ueid-*, but with rather different meanings. Semantically, εἴδομαι agrees well with inherited εἶδος, by which it may have been influenced (or is it a back-formation from εἶδος?). εἶδος itself corresponds exactly to BSl. forms like Lith. véidas 'face' and OCS vidъ 'appearance', as well as to OHG wīsa 'way, manner' and other Gm. words, which were built on the IE s-stem ueid-s-*. Formally identical, but semantically farther off is Skt. védas- 'knowledge, insight'. The form ἐεισάμενος is found only in the formula (verse initial) τῷ μιν ἐ. προσέφη; it is therefore probable that an accident led to this unusual form: the formula must have had τῳ δε ϝε ϝεισάμενος. See Beekes 1969: 59f. Incorrect analysis in RPh. 71 (1997): 157. Cf. also ►ἰνδάλλεται.

εἴδωλον ⇒ εἴδομαι.

εἶέν [interj.] 'okay, alright!' (Att.). ◅ONOM▻ •VAR On the interaspiration, indicated by grammarians and the cod. Rav. of Ar., Schwyzer: 219 and 303.
•ETYM Froehde BB 10 (1886): 297 connected the word with Skt. evám 'okay', but perhaps this rather belongs to ►εἶα; was the ending taken from μέν? Differently, von Wilamowitz 1889: 320; cf. Barrett 1964: 297.

εἶθαρ [adv.] 'immediately' (Il.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Was the word originally a neuter noun in -αρ? It is difficult to connect it with ἰθύς, which has a long ῑ-; see Schwyzer: 350 and 519 and Schwyzer 1950: 70. Incorrectly, Pok. 892; there is no etymology.

εἴθε [pcl.] 'utinam, o that', in wishes (Il.). ◅IE (h_1)e(i)* dem. pron. + g^{wh}e* pcl.?▻
•VAR Also αἴθε (see ►εἰ).
•ETYM From εἰ, αἰ (see ►εἰ) and a particle -θε; however, the latter has no clear etymology. Meillet MSL 8 (1894): 238 compared the particles Skt. gha and OCS že; thus, is it from IE g^{wh}e*? Further, see Schwyzer 1950: 561[2].

εἰκάζω [v.] 'to picture, compare, suspect' (IA); on the mg. cf. Brunel 1939: 71, 155, 174, 184. ◅IE ueik-* 'resemble'▻ •VAR Lesb. ἐϊκάσδω; aor. εἰκάσαι, fut. εἰκάσω, perf. pass. εἴκασμαι (ᾐ-).
•COMP Prefixed especially with ἀπ-; also with ἐξ-, ἐπ-, προσ-, etc.
•DER (ἀπ-)εἰκασία 'picture, comparison, conjecture' (IA; on the formation Schwyzer: 469) with εἰκάσιμος 'aestimabilis' (gloss.; Arbenz 1933: 99), (ἀπ-)εἴκασμα 'representation' (A., Pl.), (ἀπ-, ἐπ-)εἰκασμός 'supposition' (D. H., Str.); εἰκαστής 'conjecturer, diviner' (Th. 1, 138; see Fraenkel 1912: 73f.), 'who represents' (D. H.); εἰκαστός 'comparable' (S., etc.), εἰκαστικός 'ptng. to portraying' (Pl., etc.).

•ETYM Like the synonymous Hom. (ϝ)ε(ϝ)ίσκω, tetrasyllabic ἐϊκάσδω presupposes an original ϝεϝικάζω*. Both formations are recent factitive presents of the perf. (ϝ)έ-(ϝ)οικ-α 'be like, resemble', with zero grade in (ϝ)έ-(ϝ)ικ-τον [du.], (ϝ)έ-(ϝ)ικ-το [plpf.med.] (Schwyzer: 735). See ►ἔοικα on the etymology.

εἰκάς ⇒ εἴκοσι.

εἰκῆ [adv.] 'just so, without deliberation', late also 'in vain' (IA). ◅IE ueik-* 'resemble, seem'▻ •COMP As a first member in εἰκο-βολέω 'shoot just so' (E.) with εἰκοβολία (Phld.).
•DER εἰκαῖος 'without plan, at random' (S.) with εἰκαιότης (Phld.) and εἰκαιοσύνη (Timo). Cf. σπουδῇ, κομιδῇ, etc.; so a nominal dative (Schwyzer: 622).
•ETYM Incorrectly, Wackernagel 1916: 137[1] who, based on Indic parallels, assumes *ἐ-ϝεκῇ 'arbitrarily' from ►ἑκών; this is impossible because of the prothetic vowel assumed. Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 169 starts from ueik-* 'resemble, seem', which seems possible.

εἴκοσι [num.] 'twenty'. ◅IE dui-dkmt-i(H)* 'twenty'▻ •VAR Hom. also ἐείκοσι (see below), Dor. ϝίκατι.
•COMP As a first member often εἰκοσα-, e.g. ἐεικοσάβοιος 'worth twenty cows' (Od.; after ἑπτα-, τετρα-, etc.). On εἰκοσινήριτος (X 349) see ►νήριτος.
•DER εἰκοσάκις 'twenty times' (Il.), εἰκοσάς [f.] 'twenty pieces' (late; cf. εἰκάς below), (ἐ)εικοστός (Boeot. ϝικαστός) 'the twentieth' (Il.); fem. εἰκοστή 'the twentieth' with εἰκοσταῖος 'belonging to the twentieth day' (Hp.; like δευτεραῖος, etc.); also εἰκάς [f.], Dor. ἰκάς, Ther. hικάς 'the number twenty, the twentieth day of the month' (Hes.), after δεκάς, τριακάς, etc. (not an original formation to (ἐ)ΐκατι, as per Schwyzer: 597); from here εἰκαδεῖς the members of a society that met on the 20th, eponymous founder Εἰκαδεύς (Athens; Fraenkel 1912: 71 and 180, von Wilamowitz 1932: 368[1]), εἰκαδισταί epithet of the Epicureans (Ath.), cf. δεκαδισταί to δεκάς (see ►δέκα).
•ETYM Hom. ἐείκοσι stands for ἐ(ϝ)ίκοσι (the prothetic vowel derives from the glottalic feature of the d-*; see Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 97-104). It was graphically influenced by contracted εἴκοσι; likewise, Heracl. ϝείκατι. The o-vowel in εἴκοσι is difficult to account for: it may have been taken from εἰκοστός (differently, Meillet MSL 16 (1910-1911): 217ff.; see Schwyzer: 344), which itself took it from τριακοστός, etc., with -ο- as in τριάκοντα, etc.
PGr. $^{(?)}$ϝίκατι, $^{(?)}$ϝῑκαστός gave Dor., Boeot. ϝίκατι after the loss of the first laryngeal by dissimilation; see Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 97-104. The word is identical with Av. vīsaiti, as well as with Skt. viṃśatí- [f.], which has secondary nasalization and i-flexion, as well as secondary stress. The -g- in Lat. vīgintī is difficult to explain; see Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 101, who states that it results from voicing after a nasal in the words for '70' and '90', and subsequent analogical introduction in the other decades.
The dual IE dui-dkmt-i(H)* properly meant 'two decades', from IE dui-* 'two' and ►δέκα. See also under ►ἑκατόν.

εἴκω [v.] 'to give way, yield'. ◅IE ueig-* 'give way, yield'▻

•VAR Aor. εἶξαι (ἔ(ϝ)ειξε Alcm., γῖξαι [i.e. ϝεῖξαι]· χωρῆσαι 'to give way' H.), fut. εἴξω, -ομαι (Il.; cf. Trümpy 1950: 229f.), perf. ptc. ἐεικώς (Chron. Lind.).
•COMP With prefix: ὑπ(ο)-, παρ-, συν-είκω, etc. Lengthened form (ὑπ-, παρ-)εικάθειν or -θεῖν (S., Pl.; Schwyzer: 703[6]).
•DER ὕπειξις 'yielding' (Pl.; cf. Holt 1941: 164; εἶξις Plu.) with ὑπεικτικός (Arist.; εἰκτικός Phld.).
•ETYM Among the many verbs based on IE ueik-*, there is no semantically convincing connection. Semantically, however, Skt. vijáte (younger vejate) 'flee, give way' and the Gm. pres. OS wīcan, OHG wīhhan 'give way, etc.' agree very well with (ϝ)είκω. As the former must go back to PIE ueig-, not to ueik-, we should assume that the different velar was generalized from forms with consonantal endings (cf. the Skt. aorist forms vik-thās, vik-ta) or from the σ-aorist. Thus, Frisk s.v. and LIV[2] s.v. u̯eig-*. ToAB wik- 'disappear; abstain from' belongs here as well. See also ► ἐπίεικτος.

εἰκών, -όνος [f.] 'representation, picture, resemblance' (IA). ◄IE ueik-* 'resemble'► •VAR Cypr. ϝεικονα, Ion. also εἰκώ, -οῦς [f.].
•COMP As a first member in εἰκονολογία 'speaking in resemblances, figuratively' (Pl.).
•DER Diminutive εἰκόνιον (Hell.) and -ίδιον (late); εἰκονικός 'picturing' (Hell.), εἰκονώδης (gloss.). Denominative verb (ἐξ-)εικονίζω 'imitate, record in documents' (LXX, pap., Plu.; cf. Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 146) with εἰκόνισμα = εἰκών (S. Fr. 573; cf. Chantraine 1933: 188), εἰκονισμός 'picture; description of persons' (pap., Plu.), εἰκονιστής name of an official, 'registrator' (pap.).
•ETYM Formation in -ών (Chantraine 1933: 159f.) as an agent noun related directly to ► ἔοικα, with the same vocalism as in εἰκώς, -ός, εἴκελος. On the innovation εἰκώ, see Schwyzer: 479[4].

εἰλαμίδες [f.pl.] name of two cerebral membranes (Poll. 2, 44). ◄IE uel-* 'turn, wind'► •DER Diminutive of *εἴλαμος (as πλόκαμος, etc.).
•ETYM The word is related to εἰλέω 'turn, wind', "ὅτι περὶ μυελὸν εἰλοῦνται" 'because they were wrapped around the marrow', with ει- (for *ϝέλ-αμος) as in ► εἰλεός.

εἰλαπίνη [f.] 'drinking-bout, festive eating' (Il.; Ael. ἐλ(λ)απίνα Hoffmann 1893: 487). ◄PG(S,V)► •DER εἰλαπινάζω 'to feast' (Il.; only present) together with εἰλαπιναστής (P 577).
•ETYM No etymology. A cultural word that may well be of Pre-Greek origin; cf. under ► δεῖπνον. Initial ει- is perhaps due to metrical lengthening; a suffix -απ- can hardly be IE.

εἶλαρ [n.] probably 'parapet, protective wall', εἶλαρ νεῶν [νηῶν Leaf] τε καὶ αὐτῶν 'shelter of the ships and of themselves' (H 338 = 437; Ξ 56 = 68, of πύργοι, and τεῖχος), κύματος εἶλαρ 'protection of a foetus' (ε 257, ῥῖπες οἰσΰϊναι 'mat of wicker-work'); in H. also ἔλαρ· βοήθεια 'aid'. ◄IE? ueru-* 'defend'► •VAR Only nom. and acc.
•ETYM Often considered to be an action noun *ϝέλ-ϝαρ (with dissimilation to *ἔλ-ϝαρ?). Perhaps from ► εἰλέω 1, aor. (ϝ)έλσαι 'press together', but this does not fit very well. Note βῆλημα· κώλυμα, φράγμα ἐν ποταμῷ 'impediment, defence in the river' (H.). Neither is it related to ► εἰλέω 2 'roll, wind'. See Schulze 1892: 121, Bechtel 1914 s.v., Chantraine 1942: 131, and Porzig 1942: 348. Blanc RPh. 70 (1996): 115f. proposes to derive the word from ϝερϝ-αρ, to ἔρυ-μα, etc.; however, the dissimilation to λ would then be difficult to account for. Cf. also Blanc BAGB 1 (1996): 4-5.

Εἰλείθυια [f.] name of the goddess(es) of birth, often in plur. (IA). Also Ἐλείθυια (Pi., inscr.), Εἰλήθυια (Call., Paus.), Ἐλεύθυια (Cret.), Ἐλευθίη (Paros), Ἐλευθία, with assibilation Ἐλευσία (Lacon.), and other variants. Short form Ἐλευθώ (AP) and (quite different) Εἰλιόνεια (Plu. 2, 277b; is it correct?). On the forms see Kalén 1918: 8. ◄PG(S)► •DIAL Myc. E-re-u-ti-ja.
•DER Εἰλειθυ(ι)αῖον 'temple of E.' (Delos), Ἰλύθυιον (ibid.).
•ETYM It has been assumed, starting from the assumption that Ἐλεύθυια is the old form, that Ἐλείθυια would have arisen by dissimilation and thence Εἰλείθυια with metrical lengthening. Schulze 1892: 260f. then connected ἐλευθ- with ἐλεύσομαι, ἤλυθον. Wackernagel too started from Ἐλεύθυια, but he considered it to be Pre-Greek because of the PN Ἐλευθέρνα. Güntert 1919: 38[3], 258 also takes Ε(ἰ)λείθυια as Pre-Greek, with secondary adaptation to ἐλεύθω 'to bring' (Dor.), in the sense 'she who brings forth'.
Beekes 1998: 24f. shows that the suffix -υια is Pre-Greek.

εἰλεός [m.] 1. as a medical expression 'intestinal obstruction, Bauchgrimmen' (Hp.; Lat. īleus); 2. (rarely) name of a vine (Hippys Rheg. [V[a]?]); 3. 'den, hole of animals, especially of snakes' (Theoc. 15, 9, Arc., Poll.). ◄IE? uelu-* 'turn, wind, cover, protect'► •VAR ἰλεός.
•DER From 1: εἰλεώδης 'ptng. to intestinal obstruction' (Hp.).
•ETYM Formation like φωλεός, κολεός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 51). An original meaning 'winding' (cf. H.: εἰλεός· ἡ τοῦ θηρίου κατάδυσις καὶ στρόφος 'lair of a wild animal, cord'), from εἰλέω 'to roll, wind', explains meanings 1. and 2. Also, the 'den' can be combined with 'winding'; however, note that εἰλυός (A. R.), like synonymous εἰλυθμός, is based on εἰλύω 'to envelop, cover'.

εἰλέω 1 [v.] 'to press together, draw together, fence in' (Hom.). ◄IE uel-* 'press together'► •VAR Epic Delph. also εἴλομαι in εἰλόμενος, εἰλέσθω(ν), Dor. El. ϝηλέω, Att. sometimes ἴλλω, εἴλλω (cf. below), aor. ἔλσαι, ἐέλσαι (Ep.), med.-pass. ἀλήμεναι, ἀλῆναι, ἀλείς, perf. med. ἔελμαι, -μένος (Ep.), perfect preterite ἐόλει? (Pi., see below); thence the new forms εἰλῆσαι, εἰλήσω, εἴλημαι, εἰλήθην (Ion. Hell.).
•COMP With prefix ἀπ(ο)-, e.g. ἀπο-ϝηλέω (El.); ἐξ-, e.g. ἐγ-ϝηληθίωντι (Her.) = ἐξ-ειληθῶσι; κατ(α)-, e.g. κατα-ϝελμένος (Cret.); also προσ- (προτι-), συν-ειλέω, -(ε)ίλλω, etc. with various shades of mg.
•DER Most of the derivatives have become formally and semantically independent: ► ἁλής, ► ἀολλής, ► ἐξουλή, ► ἴλη (εἴλη), ► οὐλαμός. Further: βῆλημα· κώλυμα, φράγμα ἐν ποταμῷ 'impediment, defense in a river' (H.), i.e. ϝήλημα; Mess. ἦλημα, κατ-, συν-είλησις 'pushing together, what is pressed' or 'what is drawn together' (Epicur. or Ael.), εἰληθμός (εἰδ- cod.) συστροφή, φυγή 'mass [of people], flight' (H.). From (ϝ)ίλλω probably ϝιλσιος [gen.] 'adversity' (Pamph. IV[a]); unclear ἰλλάς 'pressed together (?)' (S. Fr. 70, E. Fr. 837), cf. on ► εἰλέω 2; lengthened ἰλλίζει, see ibid. See also ► εἶλαρ.

•ETYM A nasal present *ϝελ-νέω can be posited on the basis of εἰλέω, ϝηλέω, and also on account of ἀπελλεῖν (?, cod. -ειν) ἀποκλείειν 'shut out (Aeol.)' (H.). This *ϝελ-νέω may be a variant of εἴλω < *ϝέλ-νω (Schwyzer: 720, see also 693, and Chantraine 1942: 130). Moreover, there is reduplicated ἴλλω < *ϝί-ϝλ-ω (mostly from ► εἰλέω 2, like ἰλλόμενος A. R. 2, 27). For εἴλλω, a prothetic vowel used to be assumed (so *ἐ-ϝέλ-νω or ἐ-ϝέλ-ιω), but this is no longer possible. It is probable that there was simply (graphical) influence by εἰλέω. Originally, the non-presentic forms were primary, as is to be expected: aor. (ϝ)έλ-σαι, perf. *(ϝ)έ-(ϝ)ολα in ἐόλει '(op)pressed' (Pi. P. 4, 233; a conj. by Boeckh)?, middle with secondary full grade (ϝ)έ-(ϝ)ελ-μαι, intrans. aor. with zero grade (ϝ)αλῆ-ναι; these forms were replaced by the innovations εἰλῆσαι, etc. Within Greek, it is not always possible to distinguish εἰλέω 'press (together)' from εἰλέω 'wind'. On the whole group of words, see Solmsen 1901: 224ff., 285ff. Many IE words contain an element *uel-, but there is no obvious counterpart to εἰλέω 1. For example, Balto-Slavic formations like Lith. veliù, vélti (Ru. valját' 'to felt, full', Ru. válom [ins.] 'in mass' (from a noun valъ), Lith. su-valýti 'to collect (grain), reap (together)' require a seṭ root, for which there is no evidence in Greek. LIV[2] s.v. 1. u̯el- 'einschließen, verhüllen' remarks that "Eine detaillierte Untersuchung aller *u̯el-Wurzeln wäre hilfreich". They connect Skt. var- [2] 'to cover, enclose, ward off', but Lubotsky 2000a pleaded against this connection because the Indo-Aryan evidence points to an initial laryngeal.

εἰλέω 2 [v.] 'to roll, turn, wind, revolve' (mostly Hell.). ◄IE uel-* 'turn, wind, revolve'►

•VAR ἴλλω, εἴλλω (Att.; see below). The non-presentic forms, most of which are compounds, are based on the presents: εἰλῆσαι, εἰλήσω, εἴληκα, etc.; from ἴλλω only ἰλλάμην (IG 5(2), 472: 11; Megalopolis II-III[P]).

•COMP Often with prefix, especially ἐν- and περι-ειλέω (X., Hell.), -(ε)ίλλω (Th. 2, 76; codd. Ar. Ra. 1066), also ἀπ-, δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, παρ-ειλέω (Hell.), ἐξ-, κατ-ίλλω (X., Hp.).

•DER From εἰλέω : ► εἰλεός (s.v.; secondarily adapted?); further (ἐν-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, περι-)είλησις 'winding, etc.' (Pl.), (ἐν-, περι-)είλημα 'id.' (J., Poll.), προσείλημα (κεφαλῆς) 'turban' (Creon Hist.); εἰλετίας kind of reed (Thphr.), εἰλητάριον 'winding, roll' (Aët.), εἰληδόν [adv.] 'in windings' (AP). From ἴλλω: ► ἰλλός 'squinting' with many derivations; ἰλλάς [f.] 'snare, rope' (N 572; Chantraine 1933: 351) with ἰλλίζει· δεσμεύει, συστρέφει, ἀγελάζει 'fetters, presses together, drives together' (H.). (also to ► ἴλλω 1); unclear ἰλλάδας γονάς· ++ἀγελειὰς καὶ συστροφάς 'herds; dense masses' (H.: S. Fr. 70 and E. Fr. 837); probably to ► εἰλέω 1. Here also belong several nouns that have become independent from the verb: see ► ἕλιξ, ► ὅλμος, ► οὖλος 2; further perhaps ► ἀλινδέω, ► ἑλάνη, ► εἴλιγγος; finally the u-enlargement ► εἰλύω with many derivatives. Not here ► ἔλμις, ► εὔληρα, ► λῶμα, ► εὐλή, ► αἰόλος.

•ETYM As in ► εἰλέω 1 and (ἐ)ίλλω 'press', a nasal present is also continued in εἰλέω 'roll, turn' < *ϝελ-νέω; a reduplicated formation *ϝί-ϝλ-ω is found in ἴλλω. The formal coalescence often led to semantic interference as well; for example, ἰλλόμενος, in A. R. 2, 27 λέων … ἰλλόμενός περ ὁμίλῳ, must have been identical with the ptc. in 1, 129 δεσμοῖς ἰλλόμενος, even if it originally did not mean 'surrounded', but 'pressed'. In the other branches, there are many words that go back to the unstable notion 'turn, wind, revolve', etc.: e.g., OIr. fillim 'to turn, bend' (see Matasović 2008 s.v. wel-n-o-*). A special group are the u-enlargements; see ► εἰλύω and LIV[2] s.v. 2. u̯el-* 'drehen, rollen'. Further, cf. Arm. gelum, aor. 3sg. egel 'turn' < u̯el-*.

εἵλη 1 ⇒ἵλη.

εἵλη 2 [f.] 'warmth, heat of the sun' (Ar. Ve. 772 [v.l. ἕλη], Luc.). ◄IE suel(H)-* 'burn, singe'►

•VAR Also εἵλη, ἕλη; βέλα (=ϝέλα)· ἥλιος, καὶ αὐγή, ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'the sun; sunlight (Lacon.)' (H.; likewise to ἕλα); unclear is the appurtenance of γέλαν (=ϝέλαν?)· αὐγὴν ἡλίου 'light of the sun', because of γελεῖν· λάμπειν, ἀνθεῖν 'to shine, to bloom' (H.), perhaps rather to ► γελάω, ► γαλήνη; but γελοδυτία· ἡλιοδυσία 'sunsets' (H.) belongs to ϝέλα.

•COMP As a first member in εἱλη-θερής 'warmed by the sun' (Hp., Gal.), ἐλαθερές· ἡλιοθαλπές 'warmed by the sun' (H.), rather to θέρομαι then to θέρος (see Schwyzer: 513); from there εἱληθερέω, -έομαι 'warm (oneself) in the sun' (Hp.); ► εἰλικρινής, ► εἰλόπεδον. As a second member in πρός-ειλος 'exposed to the heat of the sun, sunny' (A.), εὔ-ειλος 'id.' (Ar.), ἄ-ειλος 'sunless' (A. Fr. 334).

•DER εἰλήϊον· ἐν ἡλίῳ θερμανθέν 'heated in the sun' (H.; false explanation of Ἰλήϊον Φ 558 ?); denominative verb εἱλέω 'warm in the sun' (Eust.), pass. aor. ptc. εἱληθέντες; also ἐλᾶται· ἡλιοῦται 'is exposed to the sun', fut. βελ[λ]άσεται· ἡλιωθήσεται (H.).

•ETYM From PGr. *hϝέλα, whence ϝέλᾱ, ἕλᾱ, beside which a form with a prothetic vowel used to be assumed (*ἐ-ϝhέλᾱ > εἵλη, εἴλη), which however is impossible. These belong as a verbal noun to a verb 'to singe (intr.), burn without flame', which still exists in Gm. and Balt., e.g. OE swelan, MoHG schwelen (with full grade), Lith. svìlti (with zero grade of a root suelH-), with many derivatives. The Greek forms exhibit εἱλ- beside ἑλ-. There is no explanation for this, as a by-form h₁uel- from a root suel-* is hardly possible. Unless there is an unknown phonetic development, the problem cannot be solved. Could there have been an analogical spread of εἱλ-? From Greek, ► ἀλέα 1 (ἁλ-) 'heat of the sun' can also be connected. OHG swelzan 'to burn', OE sweltan 'to die', and ON svelta 'to starve, die' belong to an independent root IE sueld-* (also Arm. k'ałc').Cf. also ► ἥλιος 'sun' and ► ἑλάνη 'torch'.

εἴλιγγος [m.] 'dizziness', often plur. (Hp., Pl.), 'whirl(pool)' (Peripl. M. Rubr., A. R.). ◄?►

•VAR εἴλιγξ, -γγος [m.] (D. S., etc.); also ἴλ-, ἶλ-.

•DER Denominative verb εἰλιγγ-ιάω (ἰλ-) 'get dizzy' (Ar.); with εἰλιγγιώδης 'dizzy' (gloss.).

•ETYM Form in -ιγγ(ο)- (Schwyzer: 498, Chantraine 1933: 398ff.), either directly from ►εἰλέω 2 'to turn, wind' or via an unknown noun. Initial εἰ- was taken from the present (cf. ►εἰλέω 2); it is superfluous to assume a prothetic ἐ-. On ἰλ- for εἰλ-, cf. ►ἴλη. ToB wai walau 'vertigo' (cited by Frisk s.v.) is a mistake for waipalau, from wip- 'shake'. On account of the suffix, one could separate the word from εἰλέω as Pre-Greek.

εἰλικρινής [adj.] 'pure, absolute, genuine' (Hp., Att.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also εἰ-.
•DER εἰλικρίνεια 'purity', εἰλικρινέω 'purify' (Hell.), εἰλικρινότης (gloss.).
•ETYM Expressive word without a convincing etymology. It is mostly taken as a compound of κρίνω and εἵλη (with compositional -ι? Schwyzer: 447f.), in which case it would properly mean "distinguished in/by the sun" (Frisk); one should then take εἵλη not as 'heat of the sun', but as 'sunlight'. However, such a meaning is only known for Dor. ϝέλα and cannot be old. This makes the proposal highly improbable. Connection with εἰλέω (1 or 2) seems to make no sense either. DELG s.v. offers a difficult hypothesis.

εἰλίονες ⇒ἀέλιοι.

εἰλίπους [adj.] mg. uncertain, in Hom. only dat. and acc.pl. -πόδεσσιν, -ποδας of βόες; later (Anacr., Eup.) also of other nouns. ◂?▸
•VAR εἰλιπόδης (Nonn.); on the formation see Schwyzer: 451.
•ETYM Because the meaning is unclear, the proposed etymologies are uncertain, as well. As ἀερσίποδες ἵπποι (Σ 532) 'foot-lifting horses' suggests a contrastive use as 'dragging the feet', Osthoff BB 22 (1897): 255ff. assumed that the first member contained an element related to Lith. selù, selė̃ti 'drag', Skt. tsárati 'to sneak, steal'; thus, εἰλίπους would mean 'with sneaking feet'. This interpretation, however, is not as convincing as the inner-Greek connections. There seems to be no trace of digamma (Chantraine 1942: 132); however, see Shipp 1967: 60 (who suggests that it is a late formation without an old tradition). One might think of 'pressing the feet' (from εἰλέω 'press') as 'turning the feet' (from εἰλέω 'to turn'; thus also H.: διὰ τὸ ἑλίσσειν τοὺς πόδας κατὰ τὴν πορείαν 'because of their turning the feet in their mode of walking'). εἰ- can be metrical or taken from the present. On the -ι in compounds, see Schwyzer: 447f. and Knecht 1946: 31. The unclear gloss ἀνελλίπους· ὁ τοῖς ποσὶ μὴ ἀλ<λ>όμενος, ἤτοι χωλός 'not leaping with his feet, limping' (H.) does not help. See also ►εἰλιτενής.

εἰλιτενής [adj.] said of ἄγρωστις (i.e. 'dog's tooth grass'), mg. unknown (Theoc. 13, 42). ◂?▸ •ETYM Poetic formation, modelled after εἰλι-κρινής, -πους; the second member is probably related to ►τείνω (cf. ἀτενής), while the first member has been connected with εἰλέω 'turn, wind' (Frisk), but "die sich windend ausdehnende" is just a guess. Differently, Osthoff; see ►εἰλίπους.

εἰλόπεδον [n.] in η 123 ἀλωή ... 'vineyard' / τῆς ἕτερον μέν θ' εἰλόπεδον ... / τέρσεται ἠελίῳ 'dry up in the sun', read by Doederlein (details in Bechtel 1914, Leumann 1950: 44), for traditional θειλόπεδον. ◂?▸ •ETYM Analyzed in antiquity as 'sunny spot', with εἵλη 'heat of the sun' as a first member. The reading θειλόπεδον (thought to be false; see Frisk) was already accepted in antiquity (AP, Dsc.); thence θειλοπεδεύω 'to wither in the sun' (Dsc.). See also Ure Class. Quart. 49 (1955): 227. Nonetheless, an inscription in Mylasa has θειλοπε[, which rather suggests that θειλόπεδον was the correct reading after all; see Dubois RPh. 71 (1997): 162. See ►εἵλη.

εἰλυσπάομαι [v.] 'to sneak like a snake or a worm' (Hp., Pl.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Also ἰλ-.
•DER εἰλύσπασις and -σπαστικός (Arist.).
•ETYM Expressive verbal dvandva-compound from εἰλύομαι and σπάομαι (Schwyzer: 645).

εἰλῡφάω [v.] 'to roll, whirl about' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Only ptc. -φόων, -φόωντες (Λ 156, Hes. Th. 692, trans.; Nonn. D. 30, 81 intr.), -ῡφάζω only present (Υ 492 trans.; Hes. Sc. 275 intr.).
•ETYM Iterative-intensive formation in -άω with lengthening to -άζω (Schwyzer: 734, Chantraine 1942: 337), from εἰλύω, though unclear in detail (εἰλύω : *εἰλύπτω : εἰλυφάω like ἅπτω : ἀφάω?). Schwyzer 1937: 66[2] incorrectly believes that it consists of εἰλύω and ὑφάω; neither did it arise via an intermediate noun in -φος, -φη (Solmsen 1901: 235, Bechtel 1914). The varying length of the -υ- is metrically conditioned (Chantraine 1942: 360).

εἰλύω [v.] 'to wrap around, envelop, cover' (Il.). ◂IE uel-u-* 'envelop, cover'▸ •VAR (Arat. 432; καταείλυον Ψ 135 v.l. for -νυον, -νυσαν), perf. med. εἴλῡμαι, fut. κὰδ δέ ... / εἰλύσω Φ 319, aor. κατ-ειλύσαντε (A. R. 3, 206); εἰλύομαι 'to wind itself and curl, crawl forward' (S. Ph. 291 and 702), 'to swarm' (Com.), aor. pass. ἐλύσθη 'rolled', ἐλυσθείς 'ducking' (Il.; Theoc. 25, 246 has εἰλυθείς instead; A. R. 3, 296 εἰλυμένος).
•COMP Some prefixed compounds: κατ-ειλύω (Hdt.), δι-ειλυσθεῖσα 'sneaking through' (A. R. 4, 35), ἐξ-ειλυσθέντες (Theoc. 24, 17), συν-ειλύω (EM 333, 42).
•DER From ἐλῠ-: ἔλῠ-τρον 'envelope, shell, container' (IA) with ἐλυτρόομαι (Hp.); ἔλῡμα 'plough-beam' (Hes., secondary length, see below), in H. also = νύσσα 'turning point' καὶ τὸ ἱμάτιον 'mantle', cf. εἴλυμα; ἔλῠμος a Phrygian pipe (S., Com.), in H. also 'envelope'; ἔλυστα· ἄμπελος μέλαινα 'dark vine' (H.; -σ- like in ἐλύσθη, see below); deverbative ἐλύσσει· εἰλεῖται 'draw oneself up' (H.). From εἰλῠ-: εἴλῡμα 'envelope' (ζ 179, etc., cf. ἔλυμα); εἰλυθμός 'hiding-place, hole' (Nic.), in H. = ἕλκος, τρόμος 'wound, trembling', to εἰλύομαι; εἰλυός = ►εἰλεός s.v.; εἴλυσις 'sneaking forward' (sch. on εἰλύομαι); εἰλύτας, ἐλλύτας name of a cake' (inscr., H., ἐλύτης gramm.; see Fraenkel 1910: 171f.); deverbative εἰλύσσεται· εἰλεῖται (H.), cf. ἐλύσσει above, with εἰλυστήριον (gloss.). From ἀλῠ- (zero grade): ►ἄλυσις, ►ἀλύτας. See also ►πέλλυτρον and ►γολύριον.

•ETYM The gloss γέλουτρον· ἔλυτρον, ἤγουν λέπυρον 'pod' (H.) points to PGr. ϝέλυ-τρον, identical with Skt. varu-tra- [n.] 'over-garment' (gramm.). Theoretically, εἰλύω could derive from PGr. *ϝελ-ν-ύ-ω and agree with Skt. vr̥ṇóti 'envelop, cover' < IE ul-ne-u-ti, but the Greek word is late and rare, which makes the identification less probable; even less so, when we consider that the Skt. root contains an initial laryngeal (see Lubotsky 2000a). Disyllabic ϝελυ- in (ϝ)ελύ-σ-θη, etc. (with analogical -σ-; Schwyzer 761) is also found in Arm. gelu-m 'to turn' (formation uncertain) and in Lat. volvō; an iterative formation in Go. walwjan, OE wealwian 'to revolve' < uolu-eie-. Note (ϝ)έλῡ-μα, with the same secondary long vowel as in Lat. volūmen; further, Arm. gelumn 'turning'. In the formation of the Greek system, the perfect εἴλῡμαι < *ϝέ-ϝλῡ-μαι (with long vowel; initial ϝ- is uncertain, on which see Chantraine 1942: 131 and Schwyzer: 649e) played an important role; the late forms εἰλῦσαι and εἰλυσθείς and the many nouns in εἰλῡ- are derived from it. See LIV^2 s.v. 1. and 2. u̯el-.

εἴλω ⇒εἰλέω 1.

εἷμα ⇒ἕννυμι.

εἰμάδες [pl.?] · ποιμένων οἰκίαι 'houses of shepherds' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Formation like δειράς, etc.; is the word derived from *ϝεῖμα = Lat. vīmen 'rod, wickerwork'?

εἶμι [v.] 'to go' (perfective; cf. Schwyzer 1950: 265). ◂IE *$h_1$ei- 'go'▸ •VAR Only present active; inf. ἰέναι.
•DIAL Myc. i-jo-te /iontes/.
•COMP Very often with prefix: ἄν-, ἄπ-, δί-, εἴσ-, ἔξ-, etc.
•DER From the simplex: ἴ-θματα [pl.] 'step, pace' (E 778 = h. Ap. 114, of doves), = 'feet' (Call. Cer. 58); on the formation Schwyzer: 492^{12}, 523); ►ἰσθμός, also ἰταμός, ►ἴτης; cf. οἶτος, οἶμος. From the compounds: εἰσ-ί-θμη 'entry' (ζ 264, Opp.; cf. ἴθματα and Porzig 1942: 283); ἐξ-ί-τηλος 'perishable' (IA), acc. to H. ἴτηλον· τὸ ἔμμονον, καὶ οὐκ ἐξίτηλον 'abiding, not going' (A. Fr. 42); εἰσ-ί-τημα 'revenue' (Delos, Delphi); εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-ι-τήριος (D.); δι-, συν-ι-τικός (Arist.). On ►ἀμαξ-ι-τός, see s.v.; on the univerbation ἀταρπιτός see ►ἀτραπός. Iterative ἰτάω in ἰτητέον 'eundum est' (Att.) and ἐπανιτακώρ = ἐπανεληλυθώς (Elis); thence εἰσ-ιτητήρια [n.pl.] 'initiation sacrifice for an official' (Att.; also εἰσ-ιτήρια, see above), εἰσ-ιτητός 'accessible' (Alciphr.) and ἰτητικός = ἰταμός (Arist.). As a verbal noun to εἶμι, especially to the compounds, serves ὁδός (ἄν-οδος, etc.), Schwyzer 1950: 75, Porzig 1942: 201. See also ►φοιτάω.
•ETYM Old athematic root present with exact correspondences in several languages: εἶ-μι, εἶ (< *εἶ-hi), εἶ-σι = Skt. é-mi, é-ṣi, é-ti, Lith. ei-mì, ei-sì, eĩ-ti, Hitt. pāi-mi, pāi-ši, pāi-zi (with preverb pe-, pa-), Lat. ī-s, i-t (replacement of 1sg. with eō < *ei-ō), all of which are from IE ei-mi, -si, -ti. 1pl. ἴ-μεν : Skt. i-más; ipv. ἴ-θι = Skt. i-hí : Hitt. i-t; impf. Hom. ἤϊα = Skt. ā́yam from IE *h_1e-h_1ei-m. Iterative ἰτάω = Lat. itāre, MIr. ethaim. Further details are in Schwyzer: 674, etc. On the relation between εἶμι - ἔρχομαι - ἦλθον and other verbs of going, see Bloch 1940: 22ff.

εἰμί [v.] 'to be'. ◂IE *$h_1$es- 'be'▸ •VAR Inf. εἶναι (IA), Dor. ἠμί, inf. ἦμεν, Aeol. ἔμμι, inf. ἔμμεν, -αι; only present stem (with future).
•COMP Often with prefix: ἄπ-, ἔν-, ἔξ- (ἔξεστι), ἔπ-, πάρ-, σύν-, etc.
•DER ἐστ-ώ [f.] (to ἐστί) = οὐσία (to ὤν) 'substance' (Archyt. Philos.), ἀπ-εστώ 'absence' (Hdt. 9, 85; συν-εστώ 6, 128 v.l. to συνεστίη), see Schwyzer: 478 , Chantraine 1933: 117; cf. also on εὐεστώ; ἀπεστύς· ἀποχώρησις 'retreat; voidance' (H.; Chantraine 1933: 291). From the ptc. ὤν, ὄντ-ος : οὐσία (see above) with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, παρ-, συν-ουσία, etc. from ἀπ-ών, etc.; thence e.g. συνουσιάζω with συνουσιαστής, -αστικός, etc.
•ETYM Old athematic root present with exact correspondences in several languages: εἰμί, εἶ (epic and Dor. ἐσσί), ἐστί = Skt. ásmi, ási, ásti, OLith. esmì, esì, ẽsti, Hitt. ešmi, ešši (eši), ešzi, Go. im, is, ist, Lat. es(s), est (sum is an innovation), IE *es-mi, esi (< es-si, sometimes restored by analogy), es-ti; 3pl. with zero grade εἰσί, Myc. e-e-si /e^{h}ensi/, Dor. ἐντί (with psilosis after εἰμί, etc.) = Skt. sánti, U sent, Go., etc. sind, all of which are from IE *h_1s-enti. Hom. ἦα [ipf.1sg.] = Skt. ā́sam, IE *h_1e-h_1es-m, Dor. Aeol. Arc. Cypr. ἦς [3sg.] = Skt. (Ved.) ā́s, IE *h_1e-h_1es-t. Further forms are mentioned in Schwyzer: 676ff.

εἰνατέρες, -έρων [f.pl.] 'wife of the husband's brother' (Il.) ◂IE *(H)ienh$_2$-ter- 'wife of husband's brother'▸ •VAR Also sing. ἐνατηρ, -τρι, -τερα (late Anatolian inscr.), voc. εἴνατερ, gen. -τερος (Hdn.).
•ETYM Old, disappearing kinship term denoting a member of the extended family (see Risch Mus. Helv. 1 (1944): 117). Epic εἰν- is a metrical lengthening of psilotic ἐν-. The acc. ιανατερα is not Phrygian, but Greek.
The etymon is also seen in Lat. ianitrīcēs (after genetrīcēs, etc.; the vocalization -a(n)- in the root is not quite clear), OLith. jentė, CS jatry (ending after svekry 'mother-in-law'), and in Skt. yātar- (with zero grade of the root: iṇh$_2$-ter-). Arm. ner (also nēr), gen. niri is difficult to explain; see Kortlandt 2003: 120 and 163 on this word.

εἰνοσίφυλλος ⇒ἔνοσις.

εἶπον [v.aor.] 'say, speak' (Il.). ◂IE *h_1e-ue-uk^w-om 'I said'▸ •VAR Epic ἔειπον, Ion., etc. also εἶπα, inf. εἰπεῖν, εἶπαι, Cret. ϝεῖπαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e. g. ἀπ(ο)-, ἐξ-, μετ(α)-, παρ-, προ-(ϝ)ειπεῖν, -(ϝ)εῖπαι •ETYM The Skt. aorist á-vocam 'I spoke', from *h_1e-ue-uk^w-om, points to a Greek pre-form e-weuk^{w}om, whence by dissimilation eweik^{w}om > ἔ(ϝ)ειπον. On an uncertain trace of the digamma in an antique edition of Homer, see Kretschmer 1923: 190ff. Further, see ►ἔπος. On the meaning, use and inflexion, see Fournier 1946: 3ff., 99f., 227ff.

εἴργω [v.] 'to fence in, shut out' (on the mg. Brunel 1939: 27f., 122). ◂IE *$h_1$uerg- 'shut in, press'▸ •VAR Also εἴργω; εἴργνυμι, epic ἐέργω, ἐέργνυμι, epic Ion. ἔργω, ἔργνυμι, s-aor. εἶρξαι (also εἰρ-, ἔρ-, ἕρ-), them. aor. κατ-Ερο̄ργον (Cypr.), pass. εἰρχθῆναι (εἱρ-, etc.), fut. εἴρξω (εἵρξω, Heracl. ἀφ-, ἐφ-έρξοντι, συν-hέρξοντι), perf. med. εἷργμαι, ἔεργμαι (ἔργμαι), epic 3pl. ἔρχαται, -ατο with artificial extension ἐρχατόωντο ξ 15 (see Leumann 1950: 179ff.), lengthened pret. εἰργαθεῖν (-άθειν?; Schwyzer: 703).

•COMP Often with prefix: ἀπ(ο)-, ἀφ-, δι-, εἰσ-, ἐφ-, ἐξ-, κατ- (καθ-), συν-, etc.
•DER εἱρκτή (ἐρ-), often plur. 'enclosure, prison, women's apartments' (IA); εἰργμός 'prison' (Pl.); (σύν-, κάθ-, ἔξ-)εἶρξις 'shutting in, etc.' (Pl.) with -ειρκτικός; ἄφ-ερκτος 'shut out' (A. Ch. 446 [lyr.]).
•ETYM Except for the zero grade thematic aorist Cypr. κατ-Ϝόργον (-έ- or -ή-; Schwyzer 653 β), all forms, including the nouns, go back to a full grade ἐ-(ϝ)έργω, εἴργω; acc. to Sommer 1905: 127f., the aspiration in εἷρξαι, ἕρξω, εἵργω, etc. arose before voiceless ρ in ἑρκτ-, ἑρξ-(?). Details are included in Solmsen 1901: 221ff. There are no directly comparable formations in the other languages. Av. vərəziiąn [opt.] 'they should fence in' is perhaps cognate; Lith. veržiù, ver̃žti 'to narrow in, string' is not, but rather from uerǵʰ-* (see LIV² s.v. u̯erǵʰ-*). Further, there are some related Indo-Iranian nouns: Skt. vr̥jána- [n.] 'enclosure' = Av. vərəzəna-, varəzāna- 'community', OP vardana- 'town'; Skt. vrajá- [m.] 'fence' (as if from h₁u̯reǵ-o-*). It is unclear whether to connect it with an Irish word for 'wall, etc.': OIr. fraig, MoIr. fraigh 'wall of wickerwork, roof, fence'. Within Greek, the word has been compared with Myc. we-re-ke /wreges/ 'fences'; see Tichy 1983: 286 with fn. 163. This would presuppose that the prothetic ἐ- is secondary.

εἴρερον [acc.] 'imprisonment, servitude' (θ 529). ◂?▸
•ETYM Etymology uncertain. Frisk Eranos 50 (1952): 6ff. argues against the connection with Lat. servus, instead suggesting a basis *ϝερϝερον, and connecting the word with Arm. gerem 'to take prisoner'. It is probably not related to ▸εὑρίσκω 'to find' or ▸ἀρύω 'to draw water', although based on the meaning the word has been compared with Skt. gráha-, gráhaṇa- 'taking, emprisonment, scooping'. Other suggestions are in Bechtel 1914 and Brugmann IF 19 (1906): 382ff.

εἰρεσία ⇒ἐρέτης.

εἰρεσιώνη [f.] 'an olive or laurel twig adorned with red and white bands and decorated with fruits', as a symbol of fertility (Ar.), 'a song when carrying this twig around' (Hom. Epigr., Plu.), 'wreath (of honour)' (Hell.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also εἰρυσιώνη (Delos Iᵃ), folk-etymological reshaping after εἰρύομαι 'protect'.
•ETYM For the formation, cf. the plant names in -ώνη in Chantraine 1933: 207f.; Strömberg 1940: 81 points to ἰασιώνη, but further comparanda are unknown. The word is often derived from εἶρος, but without much reason. Chantraine thinks of Ἐρέσιος epithet of Apollo (H.); cf. Myc. We-we-si-je-ja /Werwes-/. Differently, Schönberger Glotta 29 (1942): 85ff. and Grošelj Živa Ant. 1 (1951): 122f.; cf. Meid IF 62 (1956): 277[22].

εἴρη [f.] taken as 'place of speaking or gathering', acc. to H. = ἐρώτησις, φήμη, κληδών 'questioning, speech, omen', acc. to EM 483, 3 = ἐκκλησία 'assembly' and μαντεία 'prophesying'. ◂?▸
•VAR Only εἰράων Σ 531 (verse-initial), also εἰρέας Hes. Th. 804 (conj. εἴραις, εἴρας).

•ETYM Traditionally connected with ἐρῶ, εἴρηκα (εἴρω) 'say', but with an unclear base form; is the nom. *εἶρα < *ϝέρ-i̯α? See also ▸εἰρήνη.

εἰρήν [m.] name of the full-grown youths in Sparta, 'κόρος τέλειος' 'full-grown boy' (H., IG 5(1), 279, Plu. Lyc. 17, etc.; on the mg., etc. Solmsen IF 7 (1897): 37ff.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also εἴρην, ἴρην, -ήν; gen. -ένος.
•COMP As a second member in μελλ-είρην 'a youth becoming εἰρήν' (Plu. Lyc. 17) together with μελλειρενεια (Sparta), τριτιρενες [pl.] 'third-year εἰρένες' (Messen.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Acc. to Solmsen IF 7 (1897): 37ff., the word is from ἐρσήν, and therefore differs from Ion. ▸ἔρσην 'man, male' only in accent; the loss of s with compensatory lengthening would be due to the oxytone accent (Wackernagel KZ 29 (1888): 127ff.). However, as a strictly Laconian form, one would expect *ἠρήν, as Bechtel 1921, 2: 370f. notes. Neither related to ▸ἦρι 'early', nor to ▸εἰρήνη.

εἰρήνη [f.] 'peace, time of peace' (Il.), cf. Trümpy 1950: 183ff., later 'peace treaty', in the LXX also '(wish) of blessing' as a Hebraism (Wackernagel IF 31 (1912/13): 263f.); as a goddess, daughter of Zeus and Themis (Hes.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR ἰράνα (Dor., Boeot., Arc., etc.), also ἰρήνα (Gort. IIᵃ: χ[ἰ]ρήνας [gen.] with secondary aspiration), ἰρείνα (Thess.), εἰρήνα (Delph. IVᵃ, Pi., B.), εἰράνα (NWGr., etc.), εἰρηνᾰ (Aeol., gramm.), Εἰρήνα, -άνη (PN, Lycia).
•COMP As a first member in εἰρηνο-ποιός (X.), etc.
•DER εἰρηναῖος 'peaceful' (Hdt.), εἰρηνικός 'belonging to peace' (Att., Hell.; after πολεμικός; Chantraine 1956a: 151); denominative εἰρηνεύω [v.] 'keep peace, live in peace' (Pl.) with εἰρήνευσις (Iamb.), εἰρηνέω 'id.' (Arist., after πολεμέω). On the Lacon. PN ϝειράνα see Kretschmer Glotta 7 (1916): 332, Bechtel 1923: 155.
•ETYM The many dialectal forms cannot be combined under one form, but must be loans with incomplete adaptation (Leumann 1950: 277). The original anlaut is perhaps, according to the hesitant suggestion of Wackernagel IF 25 (1909): 327[1], open ἰρ- in Ionic and elsewhere, which was first rendered in Attic by ἐ-, later by εἰρ-; the Attic orthography became dominant. The occurrence of -ρήνη (also Att.) versus -ρᾱνᾱ was explained by Whitney Tucker TAPA 93 (1962): there was an early dissimilation of *ǣ to *ē before ǣ in one of the following syllables. This prevented the so-called Attic Rückverwandlung of rǣ to ρα. No etymology; Pre-Greek origin is very probable, principally because of the ending (cf. Ἀθήνη, Μυκήνη, etc.); thus also Chantraine 1933: 206.

εἴρομαι [v.] 'to ask' (Il.). ◂IE h₁r(e)u-* 'ask, inquire'▸ •VAR Also ἐρέομαι, ἐρέω (epic), subj. (with short vowel) ἐρείομεν, imp. med. ἔρειο (from *ἔρευο? Chantraine 1942: 297), aor. ἐρέσθαι (Od.), fut. εἰρήσομαι (Od., Ion.), ἐρήσομαι (Att.). See Chantraine 1942: 394.
•DIAL Myc. e-re-u-te-re /ereutēres/.
•COMP With prefix: ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-.
•DER Agent noun ἐρευταί 'ζητηταί, inquirers', name of the state exactors on Crete (inscr.); secondary presents ▸ἐρεείνω, ▸ἐρευνάω, ▸ἐρωτάω.
•ETYM The verbal noun ἐρευ-ταί beside ἔρευε· ἐρεύνα 'search (Aeol.)' (H.) and the subjunctive ἐρείομεν (A 62, from *ἐρέϝ-ο-μεν) lead to the reconstruction ἐρέ(ϝ)-ω, athematic *ἔρευ-μι. Therefore, εἴρομαι is derived from zero grade *ἐρϝ-ομαι; for the aorist ἐρέσθαι, one also supposes *ἐρϝ-έσθαι (with Attic development): both of these are from IE $h_1$ru-e-. The shifting accentuation (ἔρεσθαι beside ἐρέσθαι, but also ἐπ-ειρέσθαι) shows the uncertainty of the speakers regarding the function of the zero-grade forms.

There are no direct cognates outside Greek. The form is perhaps seen in ON raun [f.] 'attempt, test', IE $h_1$rou-neh$_2$-; further, see ► ἐρευνάω and ► ἐρεείνω.

εἶρος [n.] 'wool' (Od.), also a plant name = γναφάλλιον 'cotton weed' (Ps.-Dsc.; on the name Strömberg 1940: 105) and name of a fever (Hp. apud Erot.; because of the temperature?, cf. Strömberg 1944: 74ff.). ◂IE *ueru-os- 'wool'▸ •DIAL Myc. we-we-si-je-ja /werwesieiai/ 'women who work the wool', from we-we-si-jo(-) /werwesios/.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in εἰρο-πόκος 'with woollen fleece', -κόμος 'preparing wool' (both Il.). As a second member in εὔ-ειρος (Hp., AP), Att. εὔ-ερος (with εὐερ-ία [Pl. Com.]) 'with beautiful wool', ἔπ-ερος 'sheep' (Del.[3] 644, 15, appr. 300[a], Aeolic Asia Minor); on the phonetics Schulze 1933a: 367f., Forster 1950: 41; on the second member (for *εὐ- and *ἐπ-ειρής) see Sommer 1948: 112; on uncertain εὔειρας acc. pl. f. (S. Fr. 751, v. k.) Fraenkel 1910: 130.
•DER εἴριον (epic Ion.), Att. Cret. ἔριον 'wool', ἔρι (Hell. poet) with artificial abbreviation (Schwyzer: 584[6]); thence εἰρίνεος 'of wool', Att., etc. ἐρεοῦς, ἐρειοῦς (for -ιοῦς) 'id.', with cross ἐρεινοῦς (pap. V-VI[P]); ἐρέα 'wool' (Hell.; after αἰγέα et al.; Chantraine 1933: 91); on the derivations Schwyzer: 468.
•ETYM Most interesting among the words compared with εἶρος is Lat. vervēx, -ēcis 'wether', a derivation in k- of ueru- (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). εἶρος ultimately continues *ϝέρϝος, a form now proven by Myc. we-we-. See further ► ἀρήν.

εἰροψ ⇒μέροψ.

εἴρω 1 [v.] 'to string, attach' (Pi.). ◂IE *ser- 'string together'▸ •VAR Mostly present; aor. εἶραι, ἔρσαι (IA; cf. Schwyzer: 753), perf. med. ptc. ἐερμένος, εἰρμένος (Ion., etc.), plpf. ἔερτο (Hom.), perf. act. δι-εῖρκα (X.).
•COMP Mostly with prefix, especially συν-είρω 'connect'; also with ἐν-, ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, etc. (IA).
•DER ἔρματα [pl.] 'earrings' (Od.), 'sling' (Ael.), also καθέρματα (Anacr.); ἔνερσις (ἐνείρω) 'insertion, fitting' (Th. 1, 6), δίερσις 'sting through' (Hell.); from the present εἱρμός 'connecting' (Arist.; on the spiritus asper see below), συνειρμός (Demetr. Eloc. 180); with o-grade ► ὅρμος 'chain, collar', whence ὁρμιά, ὁρμαθός.
•ETYM Beside the full grade yod-present εἴρω (as a simplex only in Pi. and Arist.), Latin has a thematic present serō, and Arm. y-erum 'to tie, link, string together', which probably derives from ser-s- or ser-nu- (Martirosyan 2010 s.v.). This etymology presupposes that εἴρω lost the spiritus asper; this can be understood from the fact that the simplex is rare in comparison with συν-είρω, etc. An aspirated εἵρω is mentioned by EM 304, 30 (see Solmsen 1901: 292[2]); the verbal nouns may also have the old aspiration. Further traces of the verbal root and nouns are found in Italic (Osc. aserum 'asserere'), in Celtic (OIr. sern(a)id 'serit', a nasal present which coincided with sern(a)id 'sternit'; see Thurneysen 1946: 133), and in OLith. sėris 'thread'; further, ON sørvi [n.] 'collar' < PGm. sarwija-, which belongs to the old Gm. word for 'weapon, equipment', e.g. Go. sarwa [n.pl.] < PGm. sarwa-, IE sor-uo-. ἔνερσις and Lat. insertiō are due to parallel innovation.

εἴρω 2 [v.] 'to say'. ◂IE *uerh$_1$- 'speak (solemnly)'▸ •VAR only 1sg. pres. (Od.) and 3sg. εἶρεν as an aorist (B. 16, 20; 74), but εἴρετο (A 513), -οντο (λ 342) rather mean 'asked' (cf. Chantraine 1942: 341[3]), εἴρεται (Arat.) for εἴρηται like sporadic Hell. εἴρεκα for εἴρηκα (to ἐρρέθην), fut. epic Ion. ἐρέω, Att. ἐρῶ, perf. med. εἴρηται (Il.; Arg. ϝεϝρημένος, Cret. ϝερημένος), with fut. pass. εἰρήσομαι (epic Ion. Il.), perf.act. εἴρηκα (A., Ar.), aor. pass. ptc. ῥηθείς (Od.), εἰρέθην (Hdt.), rather after εἴρηται (Lejeune 1972: 157[4]) than from *ἐϝρέθην (Schwyzer: 654); Att. ἐρρήθην, Hell. innovation ἐρρέθην, fut. ῥηθήσομαι (Att.). As an aorist, εἶπον is used, as a present, φημί, λέγω, Hell. also ἐρῶ (Schwyzer: 784[4]) with ipf. ἤρεον (εἴ-) 'said' (Hp.).
•COMP Often with prefix: προ-, προσ-, κατ-, also ἀν-, ἀπ-, δι-, ἐπ-, συν-, ὑπ-ερῶ, etc.
•DER Action nouns: ῥῆσις (IA φ 291), Arc. ϝρῆσις 'pronunciation, speech' (on the mg. Chantraine 1933: 283, further Holt 1941: 87f.), often to the prefixed verbs: ἀνά-, ἀπό-, διά-, ἐπί-, κατά-, παρά-, πρό-, πρόσ-ρησις (cf. Holt, see index); ῥῆμα 'statement, word, story' (Ion. Archil.), as a grammatical term 'predicate, verb', also ἀπό-, ἐπί-, πρό-, πρόσ-ρημα; ῥήτρα, -η (ξ 393, X., Dor.), El. ϝράτρα (Schwyzer: 679), Cypr. with dissimilation ϝρήτα (from where εὐϝρητάσατυ) 'agreement, treaty, law, pronunciation' (Chantraine 1933: 333), with ῥητρεύω 'pronounce' (Lyc.); on the suffix -τρᾱ- cf. ῥητήρ, ῥήτωρ.
Agent nouns: ῥητήρ 'speaker' (I 443), ῥήτωρ 'speaker', especially 'orator' in state affairs (trag., Att.).
Verbal adj. ῥητός 'agreed, settled' (Φ 445) < urh$_1$-to-; cf. Ammann 1956: 20, 'what can be said' (A., S.), often opposed to ἄρρητος (e.g. Hes. Op. 4), ἀπό-, ἐπί-, πρό-ρρητος; παρα-ρρητός 'convincing' (Il.; to παρά-φημι, -ειπεῖν). Adverb δια-ρρήδην 'expressly' (h. Merc., etc.; Schwyzer 1950: 450), ἐπι-ρρήδην 'open' (Hell.), ῥήδην only A. D., EM (from δια-ρρ.).
Note the juridical and official mg. of many of the nouns (cf. the outer-Greek cognates below); see Porzig 1942: 265f., Fournier 1946: 5ff., 94ff., 224ff.
•ETYM All forms derive from a disyllabic root *u̯erh$_1$-, including (ϝ)είρω < uerh$_1$-i̯e- by Pinault's rule (loss of laryngeal in the sequence CHi̯V), to which we may compare the Hitt. yod-present u̯eri̯e/a-[zi] 'to call, name, order'. Hitt. also has the particle -wa(r)- that indicates direct speech, properly 'said (he)'; additionally, Ru. vrat', 1sg. vru 'to lie' (< *vьrǫ, vьrati) has been connected. Among the nouns, compare Av. uruuāta- [n.] 'pronouncement, order', from IE ureh$_1$-to-? See also ► εἴρων.

εἴρων [m., f.] 'who suggests not to know what he does' (Ar., Arist.; cf. the description in Thphr. Char. 1, 1). ◂?▸
•DER εἰρωνικός 'like an εἴρων' (Pl.; cf. Fournier 1946: 88); denominative εἰρωνεύομαι [v.] 'simulate' (Att., Arist.) with εἰρωνεία 'irony' (Att., Hell.; cf. Büchner Herm. 76 (1941): 339ff.), εἰρωνεύματα [pl.] 'id.' (Max. Tyr.), εἰρωνευτής = εἴρων (Timo) and εἰρωνευτικός (sch.); also εἰρωνίζω 'id.' (Philostr. VS 7, 1; v.l).

•ETYM Substantivizing and individualizing fomation in -ων (Chantraine 1933: 161; see also Hoffmann MSS 6 (1955): 35ff.) from an unknown basis. Solmsen 1901: 263 connected the word with ►εἴρω 'say' as "one who only says sth. (but does not mean it)"; is it derived from the present? Taken by Prellwitz 1892 as "one who asks", from εἴρομαι 'ask'.

εἰς [prep., adv.] 'towards' (epic Il., IA, Lesb.). ◂IE *$h_1$en 'in'▸ •VAR Epic Ion. also ἐς < ἐνς (Cret., Arg.); details in Schwyzer 1950: 455f.
•ETYM Exists beside ἐν as ἐξ beside ἐκ, and was perhaps formed based on this opposition. Hence εἴσ-ω, ἔσ-ω [adv.] 'towards' (Il.), with added -ω (cf. ἄνω s.v. ►ἀνά).

εἷς [num.] 'one'. ◂IE *sem- 'one'▸ •VAR Dor. ἧς; fem. μία, ntr. ἕν, gen. ἑνός, μιᾶς, etc.
•DIAL Myc. e-me dat. /^{h}emei/.
•ETYM The pre-form *ἕνς (still visible in Gort. εν[δ] δ- < ἕνς δ-) derives from *ἕμ-ς, IE sem-s, beside which is a zero grade fem. ►μία < sm-ih_2. The gen. ἑν-ός replaced *ἑμ-ός after *ἕνς, ἕν. An old numeral, found in Lat. sem-per 'in one stroke, ever' and (though unclear in detail) in ToB ṣe(me), A sas [m.], etc.; in Gm., it probably occurs in Go. sin-teins 'daily', etc., as well as in Arm. mi 'one' (generalized from the feminine). An ablauting variant is ►ὁμός, ἀμός, ►ἅμα with derivatives; note further ἴγγια· εἷς. Πάφιοι H., with a velar suffix as in Lat. singulī.

ἐΐσκω ⇒ἔοικα.

εἴσομαι 1 ⇒οἶδα.

εἴσομαι 2 ⇒εἴδομαι.

εἴσομαι 3 [v.fut.] 'set oneself in movement, hurry'. ◂IE *uei(H)- 'track down' (?)▸ •VAR Aor. (ἐ)είσατο.
•COMP Also with prefix: ἐπι- 'hasten against', κατα- 'hasten down', μετ- 'drive inbetween' (Hom.).
•ETYM Originally from (ϝ)ἵεμαι, acc. to Bechtel 1914 s.v., so perhaps the word must be understood as (ϝ)ῑ́σομαι, ἐ(ϝ)ῑ́σατο, (ϝ)ῑ́σατο; the loss of the digamma facilitated the (semantic) connection with εἶμι 'go' (Chantraine 1942: 293 and 412). See ►ἵεμαι and LIV² s.v. *$\underset{\circ}{u}$e$\underset{\circ}{i}$$h_1$- 'sein Augenmerk richten auf, trachten nach'.

εἴσω •VAR ἔσω. ⇒εἰς.

εἶτα [adv.] 'then, thereupon'. ◂IE *h_1e(i)- dem. pron.▸
•VAR Ion. Mess. Boeot. εἶτεν; also ἔπ-ειτα, Ion. Dor. ἔπ-ειτε(ν).
•ETYM From ►εἰ and an adverbial element -τα, -τε(ν); there are no direct parallels outside Greek. Cf. Schwyzer: 629.

εἴτε 'sive – sive, whether – or', etc. (Il.). ◂IE *h_1e(i)- dem. pron.▸
•VAR Dor. αἴτε; often repeated εἴτε – εἴτε.

•ETYM From ►εἰ (Dor. αἰ) and enclitic ►τε < *k^we.

εἴωθα [v.] 'to be used to, use' (Il.). ◂IE *sue d^heh_1- 'character, custom'▸ •VAR ἔωθα (see Wissmann MSS 6 (1955): 124ff.), Lesb. εὔωθα, plpf. εἰώθειν, Ion. ἐώθεα.
•ETYM Old intransitive perfect of state. The denominative ἐθίζω (from ►ἔθος) functions as a transitive present with a complete inflexion (aor. ἐθίσαι, etc.); on supposed intr. *ἔθω, see ►ἔθων. H. offers the unclear glosses εὐέθωκεν· εἴωθεν (from *ἐθόω?, Bechtel 1921, 1: 88; 369; from *ἐϝϝεθ-), ἐθώκατι· εἰώθασιν; cf. Schwyzer: 775. The unexplained long vowel in *σέ-σϝωθ-α, whence εἴωθα (with Grassmann's dissimilation), etc., is also found in γέ-γων-α 'I can be heard', which is old, too. The long vowel also appears in ►ἦθος beside ►ἔθος. Cognate verbs are unknown, but the same univerbation of sue 'self' and *d^heh_1- 'to posit' is found in nominal formations: Lat. sodālis 'member of a fraternity' and Skt. svadhā́- [f.] 'custom, peculiarity, etc.'.

ἐκ ⇒ἐξ.

ἑκάεργος [adj.] epithet of Apollo (Il.), also of Artemis (Ar. Th. 972 [lyr.]). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Interpreted by the ancients as 'protecting at distance' or 'working at distance' (ἑκάς and εἴργω or ἔργον), but the word rather means 'freely working': i.e., it is a bahuvrīhi compound of *ἕκα < *ϝέκᾰ, an adverb in -ᾰ (σάφα, etc.) of ►ἑκών, and ἔργον. See Bechtel 1914 s.v., as well as Schwyzer: 439⁸. Cf. ►ἑκηβόλος. ἑκα- appears in a few PNs, such as Ἑκα-μήδη (Hom.) and Ἑκά-διος (Teos) (but Boeot. ϝhεκά-δᾱμος, together with Thess. ϝεκέ-δᾱμος and Att. ►Ἀκάδημος is rather Pre-Greek).

ἑκάς [adv.] 'far, far away', both local and temporal (Il.); βεκάς· μακράν 'far' (H.). ◂IE *sue-k̑ns ?▸
•COMP Compar. ἑκαστέρω, superl. ἑκαστάτω.
•DER ἕκᾰ-θεν 'from afar' (Il.; cf. ἑκά-τερος), ἀφ-εκάς 'far off' (Nic.).
•ETYM Cf. ἀνδρα-κάς 'man for man' (ν 14); the word is from the reflexive/anaphoric pronoun ►ἕ, ἑ, so properly 'on itself'? The same distributive suffix also occurs in Sanskrit, e.g. parva-śás 'limb by limb', śata-śás 'in hundreds, hundred by hundred' (AV+); cf. Schwyzer: 630 and Klingenschmitt 1975. The word εκαδι [dat.] (Dura, Hell.), name of an estate, is unclear; see Cumont RPh. 48 (1922): 104.

ἕκαστος [pron.] 'every one' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR ϝέκαστος (Gort., El., NWGr., Arc.).
•DER Several adverbial derivatives: ἑκάστοτε 'every time' (IA), ἑκάστοθι 'in every place' (γ 8), ἑκασταχοῦ 'everywhere' and several formations with a suffix -χ-, further ἑκαστάκις 'on every occasion' (Corc.), etc.
•ETYM The solution of Wackernagel KZ 29 (1888): 144ff. is probably correct (see also Schwyzer: 630⁴): viz., that the word is from *ἑκάς τις 'every one for himself' (cf. εἷς τις 'unusquisque'). From *ἑκάς τεο > ἑκάστου, *ἑκάς τῳ > ἑκάστῳ, the other cases (like ἕκαστος, etc.) were formed, along with the superlative in -ιστος. When ἕκαστος was analyzed as ἕκα-στος, this led to the creation of ἑκάτερος (IA), ϝεκάτερος (Gort., Delph.) 'each of both' (based on ἄτερος, πότερος, etc.), with several adverbial derivatives like ἑκατέρωθεν, -ωθι, -ωσε (IA, etc.); note the form ἑκάτερθε(ν) 'on both sides' (Il.), based on ὕπερθεν, ἔνερθεν, etc., for metrically awkward ἑκατέρωθεν. See Schwyzer: 627f., Lejeune 1939: 223f., Mastrelli Stud. ital. fil. class. 27 (1956): 8, and Lazzeroni Ann. Pisa 2:25 (1956): 136ff.

Ἑκάτη [f.] popular goddess originating from Anatolia (Hes. Th. 411ff.; h. Cer.), more specifically from Caria, and identified with Artemis (E. Supp. 676 [lyr.]); cf. Nilsson 1941: 722ff. ◂PG▸ •DER Ἑκαταῖος 'belonging to H.' (S., D.), also Ἑκατήσιος and Ἑκατικός 'id.' (late); Ἑκάταιον [n.] effigy of Hecate, which was put up in front of houses or on three-forked roads (Ar.), Ἑκατήσιον 'id.' (Plu.), Ἑκατήσια [n.pl.] festival in Cos. Several Anatolian PNs: Ἑκαταῖος, Ἑκατήνωρ, Ἑκατᾶς, etc. (Bechtel 1917b: 150f.).
•ETYM Originally an epithet, assumed to have resulted from a cross of ▸ἑκατηβόλος or ▸ἑκηβόλος. However, I see no reason to assume that it had an initial digamma. More probably, of Pre-Greek origin.

ἑκατηβελέτης [adj.] epithet of Apollo (A 75, Hes. Sc. 100, h. Ap. 157; always in gen. -έτᾱο). ◂GR▸ •VAR After this ἑκατηβελέτις (Theol. Ar.).
•ETYM Either from the old full-grade aorist stem g^welh_1- of ▸βάλλω, or (better) for older *ἑκατη-βελής, with enlarging -της as in αἰει-γενέτης, for *αἰει-γενής, etc. after the example of cases like ἀκαλα-ρρεϝέ-της (> ἀκαλαρρείτης), νεφελ-ηγερέ-τα, etc.; cf. Schwyzer: 451f. The synonymous ἑκατη-βόλος, Dor. -ᾱ- (Il.) is a compound with βάλλω. The word ἑκατηβελέτης was already compared with ἑκη-βόλος by the ancients, and interpreted as 'hitting from afar' or as 'with a hundred shots'. Contrary to the latter sense – which was proposed by Wackernagel IF 45 (1926): 314ff., who translated 'hitting hundreds' – it must be objected that one would rather expect ἑκατομ- as a first member; cf. the old word ἑκατόμ-βη. The attractive connection with ἑκη-βόλος suggests that ἑκατη-βελέτης, -βόλος are metrically lengthened "Streckformen", perhaps adapted to ἑκατόν. The word ἑκατη-βόλος could be a cross of ἑκη-βόλος and the Apollonian epithet Ἕκατος (Il.); compare e.g. Ἶφι-τος for Ἰφι-κράτης, -κλῆς, etc. Acc. to von Wilamowitz 1931: 325, Ἕκατος, Ἑκάτη are from an Anatolian language and adapted by the Greeks to ἑκατηβόλος, ἑκηβόλος; however, ἑκά-εργος is certainly Greek. See further Schwyzer: 439[8] and Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 235f.

ἑκατόμβη [f.] name of a large, official festive sacrifice (Il.). ◂IE $\hat{d}\hat{k}mtom$-g^wu-eh_2- 'sacrifice of hundred cows'▸ •DER Ἑκατόμβαια [n.pl.] (Delph., Arg.) with the month name Ἑκατομβαιών, -ῶνος (Att., etc.), also Ἑκατομβεύς (Lacon.); Ἑκατόμβαιος epithet of Zeus and Apollo (H., EM).
•ETYM Collective bahuvrīhi of ἑκατόν and the zero grade of βοῦς, gen. βο(ϝ)ός, with a suffix -ā- (Schwyzer: 450, Sommer 1948: 76); originally, *ἑκατόμ-βϝ-ᾱ. A counterpart is found in Indo-Iranian, e.g. Skt. śata-gu- 'possessing hundred cows', possibly through śata-gv-a-*, śata-gv-ín- 'id.'; counterparts with a thematic vowel are the PNs Dáśa-gv-a-, Náva-gv-a- 'having ten (nine) cows'. The word is traditionally explained as the 'sacrifice of a hundred cows'; cf. Oettinger 2008b. Differently, Thieme 1952: 62ff., who translates it as 'winning a hundred cows' (scil. δαίς). On the form, see Wackernagel IF 45 (1926): 319. After ἑκατόμβη was built the late (Jul.) χιλιόμβη.

ἑκατόν [num.] 'hundred'. ◂IE $\hat{d}\hat{k}mtom$ 'hundred'▸ •VAR Arc. ἑκοτόν.
•COMP As a first member in many compounds, like ἑκατόμ-πεδος 'measuring one hundred feet' (Ψ 164; see Sommer 1948: 28ff.); also ἑκατοντα- (after -κοντα-), e.g. ἑκατοντα-έτης 'one hundred years old' (Pi.).
•DER ἑκατοστός 'the hundredth' (IA) with ἑκατοστύς 'the hundred' (X.); ἑκατοστή [f.] 'contribution of one percent' with ἑκατοστ-ήριος, -ηρία, -ιαῖος, -εύω (Att.).
•ETYM Based on the comparison with Skt. śatám, Av. satəm, ToB kante, Lat. centum, OIr. cét, Go. hund, Lith. šim̃tas, and OCS sъto, we arrive at IE $\hat{k}mtóm$. It is likely, however, that this had an initial d- because of the relationship with de$\hat{k}$m*, etc. 'ten' (see ▸δέκα), so properly $\hat{d}\hat{k}mtóm$. This d- was a preglottalized stop (*ˀ*d-*), which was reflected as ε- in Gr. ἑκατόν (on Arc. ἑκοτόν, see Schwyzer: 88, 344); see Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 97-104. The aspiration was then taken from ἕν 'one' (see ▸ἑβδομήκοντα).

ἐκεῖ [adv.] '(over) there, to there' (Hdt.). ◂IE $(h_1)e$-$\hat{k}e(i)$*- 'there'▸ •VAR κεῖ (Archil., Herod.), κῆ (Sapph.), an old instrumental. From there (ἐ)κεῖθι, κῆθι 'id.', (ἐ)κεῖθεν 'from there', (ἐ)κεῖσε 'to there'.
•ETYM Ending as in πεῖ, πῆ 'where?', τεῖ-δε, τῆ-δε 'here', etc. (Schwyzer: 549f.) and, like these, probably an old locative/instrumental. The basis is a deictic particle, IE $\hat{k}e$, $\hat{k}i$, seen e.g. in Lat. ce-do, hi-c, ci-s and with pronominal function in Hitt. ki 'this', Lith. šis 'this', etc. (see also ▸τήμερον); the 3rd person deixis must then be a Greek innovation (cf. ▸ἐκεῖνος). The initial ἐ- (cf. ἐ-κεῖνος, ἐ-χθές) is an inherited demonstrative particle, as well: Oskc. e-tanto 'tanta', Ru. é-tot 'this', Skt. a-sáu 'that' (see ▸οὗτος).

ἐκεῖνος [dem. pron.] 'that one (over there), ille' (Il.), on the use Schwyzer 1950: 208f. ◂IE h_1eno*- 'that'▸ •VAR Also κεῖνος (Il.), κῆνος (Aeol., Dor.; Dor. also τῆνος); with added deictic pcl. ἐκεινοσ-ί (Att.).
•DER ἐκείνως, -νῃ; κήνο-θεν (Alc.), τηνῶθε(ν) (Dor.) 'ἐκεῖθεν', material adjective ἐκείν-ινος 'from that material' (Arist.).
•ETYM The formation consists of several demonstrative elements: *ἐ-κε-ενος (or *ἐ-κεῖ-ενος, acc. to Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 169); the last element h_1eno*- also occurs in the frozen form ▸ἔνη 'the third day', OCS onъ 'that', the Hitt. demonstr. pron. aši-, uni-, and Lat. enim 'for' (De Vaan 2008 s.v.). On ἐ-κε-, see ▸ἐκει.

ἐκεχειρία [f.] 'truce, festive time' (Th., Att. inscr., etc.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Dor. ἐκεχηρία.
•DER Hence ἐκεχειρο-φόρος 'who transfers an ἐκεχειρία, mediator' (Max. Tyr., Poll.). Backformation (cf. ▸βίβλος) ἐκέχειρον, -χηρον [n.] 'travel permit when transferring a truce' (Hell.), also ἐκεχείριον (Hell.); also ἐν-εκέχειρον, -χηρον 'id.' (Hell.); and μετ-εκέχηρον 'period between two festive times' (Olympia 24^a).

•ETYM From ἔχειν χεῖρας, with the suffix -ία (cf. Schwyzer: 441; on the dissimilation, 261). Cf. Sommer 1948: 118f.

ἐκηβόλος [adj.] epithet of Apollo (Il.), later also of Artemis (S.), again later of objects. ⊲IE *ueḱ- 'wish, want'⊳ •VAR Boeot. ϝεκαβόλος.
•DER ἐκηβολίη, -α (Ε 54 in plur.; Call., Str.) and denominative ἐκηβολέω (Max. Tyr.). Also ἐκηβελέτης 'id.' (Orph. Fr. 297, 11; cf. ἑκατηβελέτης).
•ETYM Metrical lengthening for *ἑκᾰ-βόλος, taken with ἑκάς in antiquity and interpreted as 'shooting/striking from afar' (thus Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 203f.). It is rather from ἑκών, as 'striking at will' (see ►ἑκάεργος); ἐκηβολίη means 'accuracy, precision', but was probably already taken as 'shots from afar' by the poet of Ε 54 (Trümpy 1950: 114; see also Porzig 1942: 204 and 210).

ἕκηλος [adj.] 'untroubled, at one's ease, quietly'. ⊲IE *ueḱ- 'wish, want'⊳ •VAR Dor. ἕκᾱλος.
•DER Also εὔκηλος, εὔκᾱλος (Il.). From it ἐκηλία· φιλοτησία 'of friendship', εὐκαλία· ἡσυχία 'quietness', εὐκαλεῖ· ἀτρεμίζει 'keeps quiet' (H.).
•ETYM Uncertain. The word is best taken, as per Buttmann 1825:1: 141, as *ϝέκᾱλος (= γέκαλον· ἥσυχον H.; on the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 129f.), from *ϝέκᾰ in ►ἑκάεργος, etc., with suffixal -ᾱλος, -ηλος (Chantraine 1933: 241f., Schwyzer: 484). Thus, it would properly mean "at will". εὔκηλος was formed after the numerous compounds with εὐ-; ►δύσκηλος was modelled after it. The semantically attractive connection with Skt. úcyati 'to find pleasure, be used to', ókas- [n.] 'abode, residence', etc. would be fine for εὔκηλος (root *h_1euk- 'get used to', see LIV²), but does not explain the form ἕκηλος.

ἕκητι [adv.] 'by the will of, for the sake of' (Od.). ⊲IE *ueḱ- 'wish, want'⊳ •VAR Also ἕκᾱτι.
•COMP ἀέκητι 'against the will' (Hom.).
•ETYM Related to ἑκα-, ἑκών and ἀέκων, but the formation is unclear. See Leumann 1950: 251ff., who states that it was created after (θεῶν) ἰότητι for (θεῶν) ἀεκόντων.

ἔκπαγλος [adj.] 'terrible, surprising, tremendous' (Il.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER ἐκπαγλέομαι 'be surprised' (Hdt., trag.).
•ETYM Both ἔκπαγλος and ἐκπλαγότητα· ἐξαισιότητα (H.) are usually derived from *ἔκπλαγ-λος, related to ἐκπλαγ-ῆναι 'frighten' with dissimilatory loss of the first λ; this is quite possible.

ἐκποδών [adv.] 'out of the way, away, far' (IA). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM From ἐκ ποδῶν with a shift of accent (Schwyzer: 389 and 625). Cf. ►ἐμποδών.

ἑκτικός [adj.] 'regarding the ἕξις, i.e. the situation, the state of the body, regarding the state, usual, skillful' (Hell.); also name of a continuing (literally "hectical") fever (medic.; cf. Strömberg 1944: 85f.). ⊲GR⊳

•DER ἑκτικεύομαι 'suffer from ἑκτικός (πυρετός)' (Alex. Trall.).
•ETYM From ἕξις, related to ►ἔχω.

ἐκτός [adv.] and [prep.] 'outside, far from' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_1eg^h-s 'out'⊳ •VAR ἐχθός (Locr., Delph.), [ἐ]κθός (Arg.).
•DER ἔκτο-θι 'id.' (Il.), ἔκτο-θεν (Od.), ἔκτοσ-θε(ν) (Il.) 'from outside', ἔκτο-σε '(to) outside' (ξ 277); ἐχθο-δαπός 'foreign, inimical' (Pergam. II^p, after ἀλλο-δαπός; associated with ἔχθος, ἐχθρός?), ἐχθόσ-δικος δίκα 'trial against a foreigner' (Arc. III^a; cf. Schwyzer 1950: 538); ἔχθοι 'outside' (Epid.; after οἴκοι, etc.), ἔχθω = ἔξω (Delph.). ἐκτό-της, -ητος [f.] 'absence, being far away' (Gal.).
•ETYM From ἐκ, shaped after ἐν-τός; ἐχθός derives from *ἐκσ-τός. See Schwyzer: 326 and 630 and Lejeune 1939 (see index). Cf. ►ἐξ and ►ἐχθρός.

Ἕκτωρ, -ορος [m.] son of Priamos and Hekabe, the greatest hero of the Trojans (Il.). ⊲IE *seg^h- 'hold'⊳ •DER Ἑκτόρεος 'regarding Hektor' (Il.), perhaps Aeolic for -ριος (see e.g. Wathelet 1970: 159ff.). Patronymic Ἑκτορίδης = Astyanax (Il.).
•ETYM Derived from the root of ►ἔχω, and identical with the agent noun ἕκτωρ (see on ►ἔχω). The root originally meant 'to overpower, keep in check', thence 'to hold' in Greek.

ἑκυρός [m.] 'father of the husband, father-in-law' (Il.). ⊲IE *sueḱuro- 'father-in-law'⊳ •DER ἑκυρά, -ή 'mother of the husband, mother-in-law' (Il.). Denominative Boeot. ἑκουρεύω 'be father-in-law' (Corinn.).
•ETYM Old kinship term, preserved in many languages: Skt. śváśura- (assimilated from *svaś-), YAv. x^vasura-, Lat. socer, OHG swehur, Lith. šešuras (assimilated from *seš-), all of which are from IE *sueḱuro-; the original anlaut can still be seen in the meter: φίλε (ϝh)ἑκυρέ Γ 172 (cf. Schwyzer: 304 and Chantraine 1942: 146). The oxytonesis must be a Greek innovation (after ἑκυρά; cf. also πενθερός). To ἑκυρά corresponds Arm. skesur (< *ḱueḱurā- with assimilation from *sueḱ-), with the ā-stem replacing an older ū-stem; cf. Skt. śvaśrū́-, MoP xusrū, Lat. socrus, MW chwegr, OHG swigar, OCS svekry, and IE *sueḱrúH- [f.]. Another innovation is Go. swaihro = ON sværa (ōn-stem), whence the new msc. Go. swaihra. In other languages, as well, the word for 'father-in-law' is sometimes derived from that for 'mother-in-law': thus clearly in Arm. skesr-ayr, lit. 'husband of the mother-in-law', MW chwegr-wn, MoHG Schwiegervater from Schwieger(mutter); and probably in OCS svekrъ. This explains the oxytonesis in ἑκυρός. The word probably contains the reflexive *sue (cf. ►ἀέλιοι); however, the ending is obscure. On ὑκερός, -ά with vowel metathesis (Lydia), see Schulze KZ 52 (1924): 152.

ἐκ-φλῆναι [v.aor.] 'bubble forward' (E. Fr. 470). ⊲IE?? *b^hleu- 'flow'⊳ •ETYM Cf. the opposite ἀπο-σκλῆναι 'dry up', related to ►σκέλλω; further forms are unknown. The word has been connected with ►φλέω, ►φλύω 1. See also ►φελλός, φληνύω s.v. ►φληναφάω and ►ἐκ-φλυνδάνω.

ἐκ-φλυνδάνω [v.] 'to break out, burst up' (Hp.). ⇒φλύω 1.

ἑκών [ptc.] 'deliberate(ly)'. ◄IE uek̂*- 'wish, want'► •VAR Cret., Locr. ϝεκών; fem. ἑκοῦσα (Cyren. IV[a] ἕκασσα, Cret. ϝεκαθ<θ>α in γεκαθά· ἑκοῦσα 'willing' H.), ntr. ἑκόν; opposite ἀέκων, Att. ἄκων, ἀέκουσα, ἄκουσα (Dor. ἀέκασσα in <ἀέ>κασσα· ἄκουσα H.), ἀέκον, ἄκον 'involuntary, unwittingly' (Il.).
•DER ἑκούσιος [adj.] 'voluntary' (IA) with ἑκουσιότης (late), ἑκουσιάζομαι '(be) sacrifice(d) voluntarily' with ἑκουσιασμός 'voluntary sacrifice' (LXX); ἀεκούσιος, ἀκούσιος 'unvoluntary, reluctant, forced' (IA); ἑκοντ-ί, -ήν, -ηδόν 'voluntarily' (post-classical), ἑκοντής [m.] 'volunteer' (Epict.), like ἐθελοντής; Denominative ἀεκαζόμενος [ptc.] (Od., h. Cer.), after ἀναγκαζόμενος (Wackernagel IF 45 (1926): 314[2]).
•ETYM Old participle (cf. Wackernagel 1920-1924(1): 283 and 286), identical with Skt. uś-ánt-, fem. uś-at-ī́ (cf. Cyren. ἕκασσα < *ϝεκ-ṇτ-ι̯α) except for the root vocalism (on the spiritus asper, see Schwyzer: 227). The Greek full grade must originate from the lost indicative *ϝέκ-μι = Hitt. u̯ekmi, Skt. váśmi 'want, desire'. The origin of ἕκα- (uek̂-nt-*?) is unclear. Cf. ► ἑκάεργος and ► ἕκητι.

ἐλαία [f.] 'the olive (tree)' (Od.), rare ἔλαιος [m.] '(wild) olive' (Pi. Fr. 46, S. Tr. 1197). ◄PG► •VAR Att. also ἐλᾶα, Ion. ἐλαίη; Cypr. ἔλαιϝον (Kadmos 3, 1965, 148).
•DIAL Myc. e-ra-wa, -wo /elaiwa/, /-won/.
•COMP Many compounds, especially since Hellenistic times. As a first member ἐλαιο- does not only refer to ἔλαιον, but also to ἐλαία, e.g. ἐλαιό-φυτος 'planted with olives' (A.). As a second member in bahuvrīhis like ἄν-ελαιος 'without oil (olives)' (Thphr., Str.); in determinative compounds like ἀγρι-έλαιος = ἄγριος ἔλαιος (Thphr., etc.), χαμ-ελαία 'Daphne oleoides' (Nic.), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 257, Strömberg 1940: 110; γλυκ-έλαιον 'sweet oil', ὑδρ-έλαιον "water-oil", i.e. 'oil mixed with water' (late).
•DER ἔλαιον [n.] 'olive oil, oil in general' (Il.); on the pair ἐλαία (-ος) : ἔλαιον (distinguishing the tree from the product), see Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 17, Schwyzer 1950: 30. Substantives: ἐλαΐς [f.], ἐλᾷδας [acc.pl.] 'olive trees' (Att.; see Chantraine 1933: 344), diminutive ἐλᾴδιον (-ίδιον) 'small olive tree', also (from ἔλαιον) 'a little oil' (Com., pap.); ἐλαιών, -ῶνος [m.] 'thicket of olives' (LXX, pap.), 'the olive mountain' (NT, J.), diminutive ἐλαιωνίδιον (pap.); ἐλαιεύς 'id.' (Chalkis; see Boßhardt 1942: 21f.). Adjective ἐλαΐϊνος, ἐλᾱ́ϊνος 'of olive wood, belonging to the olive' (Il.), 'of olive oil' (Orph. L. 717); -ίνεος 'of olive wood' (ι 320 and 394; metrically convenient contamination of -ινος and -εος, Risch 1937: 122, S. Schmid 1950: 38); ἐλαϊκός 'of olive' (Aristeas, pap.); ἐλαιηρός 'regarding oil' (Hp., Pl., pap.; see Chantraine 1933: 232); ἐλαιώδης 'oily' (Hp., Arist.); ἐλαιήεις 'belonging to the olive' (S.; on the formation Schwyzer: 527). Denominative verbs: ἐλαΐζω 'to cultivate olives' with ἐλαιστήρ, -τής 'collector of olives' (Poll.) and ἐλαιστήριον 'olive press' (Mylasa); ἐλαιόομαι 'to be oiled' (Arist.) with ἐλαίωσις (Zos. Alch.).
•ETYM Lat. olīva, which was borrowed from Greek, proves a basic form *ἐλαίϝᾱ, with ἔλαιϝον (which is now found in Cypriot) corresponding to Lat. oleum. All other European forms derive from Latin (see WH 2, 205f.). The word is no doubt Pre-Greek. Arm. ewł 'oil' may derive from the same source.

ἐλαίαγνος [m.] name of a shrub, Salix Capra (Thphr. HP 4, 10, 1; 2; Boeot.). ◄GR► •VAR Also ἐλέ- (H.).
•ETYM Perhaps a determinative compound from ► ἐλαία and ► ἄγνος; cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 305 and Strömberg 1937: 72.

ἐλάνη [f.] 'torch from reed, reed bundle' (Hell.). ◄PG(S,V)► •DER Also ἑλένη· λαμπάς, δετή 'torch, reed' (H.), also a twisted basket containing the sacred utensils for a festival of Artemis Brauronia, the so-called Ἑλενηφόρια (Poll.); to this ἑλένιος· ἀγγεῖον χωροῦν τέταρτον 'vessel containing a quarter' (H.).
•ETYM The plant name ἑλένιον is uncertain; see ► Ἑλένη. For the instrument suffix -άνη, cf. σκαπάνη, πλεκτάνη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 199). Since -ένη is very rare (only in ὠλένη and Aeol. φερενα), assimilation from ἐλάνη was assumed (Schwyzer: 255f.). Because of the meaning 'reed-bundle, twisted basket', ἐλάνη, -ένη is usually related to ► εἰλέω 'turn, wind', which can also account for the meaning 'torch' (cf. δεταί 'λαμπάδες, δράγματα'). Nevertheless, this etymology must be wrong, as ἐλάνη is most probably a Pre-Greek word (suffix -αν-, variation α/ε, meaning).

ἔλανος [m.] · ἰκτῖνος 'kite' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Unknown. It is hardly related to ἐλαύνω, thus probably Pre-Greek.

ἐλάργει [v.] · ἔλαβεν, ἐπόρ<θ>ησεν, καθεῖλεν 'took, destroyed, reduced' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 35, the word is a denominative of *λαργός = Lat. largus (?). Unknown.

ἐλασᾶς [m.] "chaser", name of an unknown bird (Ar. Av. 886). ◄PG?►
•VAR Accus. -ᾶ.
•ETYM Acc. to W. Petersen Class. Phil. 32 (1937): 129, the word is a formation in -ᾶς from ἐλάσαι, just as τρεσᾶς, χεσᾶς; it is hardly from *ἔλα-σος (Solmsen 1909: 245, Fraenkel 1912: 15f., Schwyzer: 461). Possibly Pre-Greek. DELG thinks that the word was coined by Aristophanes. See ► ἐλέα.

ἐλάτη 1 [f.] 'pine, fir', metonymical 'rudder, ship', etc. (Il.). ◄?►
•DER ἐλάτινός (metrical lengthening εἰλ-) 'made of fir' (Il.), ἐλατηΐς [adj., f.] 'like fir' (Nic.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 345f.).
•ETYM No certain etymology. If we reconstruct h_1l̥nteh$_2$, ἐλάτη might be connected with OHG linta 'linden', Lith. lentà 'board, plank', Lat. lentus 'pliant, flexible', etc. (cf. De Vaan 2008: 335).

ἐλάτη 2 [f.] 'the fruit enclosed by the spathe of the palm' (Dsc. 1, 109, 5). ◄?► •ETYM Etymology unknown. See DELG, Supp.

ἐλατίνη 'cankerwort, Linaria spuria' (Dsc. 4, 40). ◄?►
•ETYM Etymology unknown.

ἐλαύνω [v.] 'to drive, push, forge (metal)', intr. 'to drive, ride' (on the mg. in the Epic see Trümpy 1950: 95f., 115f.). ◄IE h_1elh_2*- 'drive, move'►

•VAR Also ἐλάω in ἐλάᾶν [inf.], ἐλάων [ptc.]; impf. ἔλων (Hom.), ipv. ἔλα (Pi.), ἐλάτω, -άντω, -άσθω (Dor. inscr.), etc. (further Schwyzer: 681f.); aor. ἐλάσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι, fut. ἐλάω, perf. med. ἐλήλαμαι (Il.), -ασμαι (Hp., etc.), act. ἐλήλακα (Hdt.), aor. pass. ἐλα(σ)θῆναι (Hdt.).
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀπ-, δι-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, περι-, προσ-, etc.
•DER Action nouns: ἔλασις 'march (of an army), ride, expulsion, etc.' (IA), often to the prefixed verbs: δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, περι-έλασις, etc.; rare ἐλασία 'ride, march' (X.) with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-ελασία (Hell.), after βο-ηλασία, etc. (from βο-ηλατέω, -άτης), cf. Schwyzer: 468f., Chantraine 1933: 83f.; ἔλασμα 'chased metal, tin, (medic.) probe' (Ph. Bel., Gal.) with ἐλασμάτιον (Delos II[a], Dsc.); ἐλασμός = ἔλασμα, ἔλασις (Aristeas); ἔλατρον 'flat cake' (Milete V[a]), cf. ἐλατήρ. Agent nouns: ἐλατήρ 'driver' (Il.) with ἐλατήριος 'driving off' (A. Ch. 968 [lyr.]), normally 'carrying away, purging', ntr. 'purgative' (Hp.; see Andre Les ét. class. 24, 41); ἐλατήρ 'flat cake' (Com.); ἐλάτης 'driver' (E. Fr. 773, 28 [lyr.]) from βοηλάτης (with βοηλατέω, -σία, see above), ἱππηλάτης, Fraenkel 1912: 31f.; ἐλάστωρ 'id.' (App. Anth. 3, 175); ἐλαστής 'id.' (EM); ἐλατρεύς· ὁ τρίτην πύρωσιν ἔχων τοῦ σιδήρου παρὰ τοῖς μεταλλεῦσιν 'thrice-forged iron' (H.); see Boßhardt 1942: 82f.; also as a PN (θ 111); see Boßhardt 1942: 120. Verbal adjective: ἐλατός 'malleable, beaten' (Arist.), ἐξ-ήλατος 'beaten' (M 295; several compounds like ἱππ-ήλατος, θε-ήλατος (IA); ἐλαστός 'id.' (pap.). Desiderative ἐλασείω (Luc.), iterative pret. ἐλάσασκεν (B 199). Cf. also ►ἐλασᾶς and '►Ελάστερος.
•ETYM The verbal root is ἐλᾰ- < *h_1elh_2-; ἐλαύνω derives from a verbal noun *ἐλα-ϝαρ, ἐλα-υν-ος (related to ἐλά-ω like *ἀλε-ϝαρ, ἀλέ-(ϝ)ατα to ►ἀλέω; s.v.). A secondary formation is ἐλαστρέω (see ►Ἐλάστερος). There are no certain cognates; connection with Arm. ełanim 'to become' is improbable, whereas Arm. elanem 'to go out, go up' belongs to the verbs in -anem = Gr. -άνω. The Celtic nā-present OIr. ad-ellaim 'to go to, visit' could belong to ►πίλναμαι. Other Celtic forms point to *(p)el-.

ἔλαφος [m., f.] 'deer, deer cow' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1*el-en*- 'deer► •COMP Note ἐλαφη-βόλος (with rhythmically preferable -η- for -ο-, Schwyzer 438f.) 'killing deer' (Σ 319, etc.) with ἐλαφηβολία 'deer hunt' (S.), ἐλαφηβόλια (sc. ἱερά) [n.pl.] name of a festival for Artemis (Phocis), whence the month name Ἐλαφηβολιών (treaty in Th. 4, 118). As a second member in determinative compounds like τραγ-έλαφος 'buck deer' (Ar., Pl.; cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 56), also ἱππ-, ὀν-, ταυρ-έλαφος (Arist.).
•DER Diminutive ἐλάφιον (Ar. Th. 1172), ἐλαφίνης 'young deer, deer calf' (Aq., H.; see Chantraine 1933: 203); ἐλαφῆ 'deerskin' (Poll.); ἐλαφίαι· οἱ τῶν ἐλάφων ἀστράγαλοι 'the neck vertebrae of the deer' (H.); ἐλαφίς name of a water bird (Dionys. Av. 2, 11); see Thompson 1895 s.v.; ἐλάφειος 'of a deer' (X., Arist.); ἐλάφειον and ἐλαφικόν as plant names (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 118, Strömberg 1944: 50. On Elaphe as a name of a kind of snake and on MoGr. dialectal forms λαφιάτης, etc., see Georgacas 1956: 119f., 124f.
•ETYM The by-form ἐλλός 'deer-calf' (τ 228, Ant. Lib. 28, 3), which (with Aeolic development?) may stand for *ἐλ-νος (Lejeune 1972: 153, Schwyzer: 284), can be connected with a widespread name for 'deer': Arm. ełn, gen. ełin, Lith. élnis, OCS jelenь, MW elain, the Gaulish month name Elembiu (:'Ελαφηβολιών?), ToA yäl, ToB yal 'gazelle'. Note also ἔνελος· νεβρός (H.) (if metathesized from elen-); the n-stem is probably also in ἔλαφος < *h_1*eln̥-b^{h}o*- (cf. Skt. vṛ́ṣan- : vṛṣa-b^{h}á- and see Schwyzer: 495 and Chantraine 1933: 263).

ἐλαφρός [adj.] 'light, nimble, quick, small' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1*leng^{wh}-ro*- 'light (of weight, movement)'► •COMP As a first member in ἐλαφρο-τοκία 'low rate of interest' (Pergamon II[a]).
•DER ἐλαφρότης 'lightness, speed' (Pl., Plu.); ἐλαφρία 'lightness' (NT); Ἐλάφριος (μήν) month name (Cnidos); denominative verbs: ἐλαφρίζω 'enlighten, lessen', intr. 'be quick' (Archil., E.); ἐλαφρύνω 'enlighten' (late; after βαρύνω; Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 84); ἐλαφροῦται H. as an explanation of ἀλεγύνεται.
•ETYM Identical with a Gm. word: OHG lungar, OS lungor 'quick', OE lungre [adv.] 'quickly, soon' < IE *h_1*lng^{wh}-ro*-. The root is also found in Skt. rārahāṇa- < *h_1*le*-*h_1*ln̥g^{wh}*- (García Ramón Sprache 34 (1988-90): 30); see further ►ἐλαχύς. Krahe 1955: 94 connects the Illyrian HN Lambros (Upper Italy) = ἐλαφρός.

ἐλαχύς [adj.] 'small' (Call. Hec. 3 K.). ◄IE *h_1*lng^{wh}-u*- 'light, quick'► •VAR ἐλάχεια h.Ap. 197 (on the accent Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1914: 115f., Schwyzer: 379; ι 116, κ 509 as a v.l. to λάχεια; cf. Leumann 1950: 54), ἐλαχύ (AP); msc. also ἔλαχος (Call., see Leumann 1950: 54).
•COMP As a first member in ἐλαχυ-πτέρυξ, [ἐλα]χύ-νωτος (Pi.).
•DER Grades of comparison: ἐλᾱ́σσων, -ττων [compar.] (Il.), ἐλᾰ́χιστος [superl.] (IA). From ἐλάσσων, -ττων (Schwyzer: 731f.): denominative ἐλασσόομαι, -ττόομαι 'to become smaller, be inferior, be damaged' (IA), -όω 'to diminish, damage' (Lys., Isoc.) with ἐλάττωσις 'diminution, disadvantage, want, loss' (Antipho Soph., Pl. Def., Arist.) and ἐλαττωτικός 'not insisting on his rights, diminishing' (Arist.), ἐλάσσωμα, -ττωμα 'id.' (D.). From ἔλασσον-, -ττον- : ἐλαττον-άκις 'less often' (Pl., Arist., after πλεον-άκις), ἐλαττον-ότης 'be inferior' (Iamb.; beside μειζον-ότης); ἐλασσον-έω, -ττονέω 'have or give less, to be defective' (LXX, pap.), ἐλαττον-όω 'diminish' (LXX). From ἐλάχιστος: ἐλαχιστ-άκις 'very rarely' (Hp.), ἐλαχιστ-ιαῖος 'of smallest size, infinitesimal' (Diog. Oen. 2).
•ETYM Old adjective, identical with Skt. laghú-, raghú- 'quick, light, small', YAv. rəuuī- [f.] 'agile, fast, quick' (< rayu̯ī-), all of which are from an IE zero grade *h_1*ln̥g$^{(w)h}$-ú*-. The full grade of the root *h_1*leng^{wh}*- is found in Av. rəṇjiiō [compar.], in Lith. lēngvas, in Go. leihts 'light, easy' (if it derives from PGm. linχta- [IE *h_1*leng^{wh}-to-*]), and in ToB laṅk$_u$tse 'light'. A form without the nasal and with short e is Lat. levis 'light, small, quick'; with problematic root vocalism, OCS lьgъ-kъ 'light'; with a-vowel, Celt., e.g. OIr. laigiu 'smaller, worse' [compar.] < PCl. lag-i̯ōs. There is no uniform explanation for all these forms, although it seems that the nasalless root is the oldest (cf. De Vaan 2008). We then have to assume that the forms with nasal were influenced by the old nasal present seen in Skt. rám̐hate 'hastens', OIr. -ling 'to leap'. In Greek, the long vowel in ἐλᾱ́σσων is secondary; see Schwyzer: 538 and Seiler 1950: 43f.

ἐλάω ⇒ ἐλαύνω.

ἔλδομαι ⇒ ἐέλδομαι.

ἐλέα [f.] kind of singing bird, perhaps 'reed warbler, Salicaria arundinacea' (Arist. HA 616b 13). See Thompson 1895 s.v. ◁PG?▷

•VAR ἔλεια (Call. Fr. 100c 14), ἐλεᾶς [m.] (Ar. Av. 302; on the formation Schwyzer: 461, Chantraine 1933: 31); also ἔλαιος [m.] (Alex. Mynd. apud Ath. 2, 65b).

•ETYM Formation and origin unclear. Compared with the Italo-Celtic name of the swan, Lat. olor, OIr. elae, as well as MoSw. al(l)a, al-fågel 'Fuligula glacialis' (Lidén Arkiv f. nord. Fil. 13 (1897): 30f.). Other European words for 'swan' have also been adduced, such as Ru. lébed' and OHG albiz, of which the analysis is unclear. If the latter really contained an element al-*, one may assume European substrate origin (acc. to De Vaan 2008 s.v. olor). However, the word is probably Pre-Greek (note ε/ ει/ αι).

ἐλέατρος ⇒ ἐλεόν.

ἐλεγαίνειν [v.] = παραφρονεῖν, ἀσελγαίνειν, ἀκολασταίνειν 'to be beside oneself, behave licentiously, be licentious', EM 152, 51; 327, 6. ◁PG?▷

•ETYM Reminiscent of λέγαι, an attribute of γυναῖκες (Archil. 179), which was connected with λάγνος by Solmsen 1901: 111. The word was subject to folk-etymological influence by ἔλεγος; cf. EM 327, 6: καὶ τὸ ἐλεγεῖον μέτρον ἀπὸ τούτου κληθῆναι τινὲς νομίζουσιν 'the elegiac meter was also named after this, according to some', but this is a mere guess. The word is probably Pre-Greek because of the prothetic vowel (Fur.: 376).

ἔλεγος [m.] 'mourning song (accompanied by flute)' (E., Ar.). ◁PG?▷

•COMP Compounds ἰαμβ-έλεγος and ἐλεγ-ίαμβος, names of verses (gramm.); see Risch IF 59 (1949): 284f.

•DER ἐλεγεῖον a verse, 'distichon', and a poem following this scheme; poetical 'inscription' (Att., etc.) with ἐλεγειο-ποιός, -γράφος (Arist.); diminutives ἐλεγ(ε)ίδιον and ἐλεγ(ε)ιδάριον (late); adj. ἐλεγειακός (D. H., Ath.); also ἐλεγεία (Str., Plu.) and, as an adjective, ἐλεγεῖον (δίστιχον, Ael.); also a fish, ἐλεγῖνος (Arist. HA 610b 6), named after its sound? See Strömberg 1943: 74.

•ETYM Anatolian (Phrygian?) origin was considered by Hommel RhM 88 (1939): 194. Incorrectly, Theander Eranos 15 (1915): 98ff. (who believes the word is related to ἐλελεῦ, ὀλολύζω); cf. Kretschmer Glotta 9 (1918): 228 and Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 220. From ἐλεγεῖον was borrowed Lat. ēlogium (influenced by λόγος); see WH s.v. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

ἐλέγχω [v.] 1. 'to revile, disgrace' (Hom.); 2. 'to cross-examine, bring to proof, accuse, question' (Hdt., Pi., Att.); on the mg. Daux REGr. 55 (1942): 252ff. ◁IE? $*h_1leng^h$- 'revile'?▷

•VAR ἐλέγξαι (Il.), fut. ἐλέγξω, aor. pass. ἐλεγχθῆναι with ἐλεγχθήσομαι, perf. ἐλήλεγμαι, 3sg. -γκται (Att.).

•DER To 1. ἔλεγχος [n.] (like ὄνειδος) 'revile, disgrace' (Hom., Hes., Pi.), plur. also of persons, 'coward'; msc. ἐλεγχέες (Δ 242, Ω 239; but see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἐλεγχής, Frisk 1935: 19f., Sommer 1948: 137); superlative ἐλέγχιστος (Hom.; Seiler 1950: 83f.); from ἔλεγχος also ἐλεγχείη 'id.' (Il.). To 2. ἔλεγχος [m.] (like λόγος) 'proof, refutation, examination' (Hdt., Pi., Att.); ἔλεγξις 'id.' (LXX, NT, Philostr.) together with jocular ἐλεγξῖνος (D. L.); ἐλεγμός 'id.' (LXX, NT); ἐλεγκτήρ 'who proves' (Antipho; Ionic? See Fraenkel 1912: 52); ἐλεγκτικός 'fit for ἐλέγχειν' (Att., etc.).

•ETYM The word used to be connected with ἐλαχύς, which is possible semantically (MoHG schmähen, 'disgrace', OHG smāhen 'make small', from smāhi 'small'), but phonetically, the etymology would imply that ἐλέγχω (for ἐλέμφω < IE $*h_1leng^{wh}$-) has its -χ- from ἐλαχύς, ἐλάσσων (< *ἐλάχ-ι̯ων), ἐλάχιστος. This is not very likely. Nowadays, it is mostly accepted that Hitt. li(n)k-^{zi} 'to swear' is related (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.), as well as OHG ant-lingen 'to answer' (Tischler).

ἐλεδώνη [f.] a kind of octopus (Arist. HA 525a 17), cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. ◁PG▷

•VAR Also ἐλ-. Further δελεδώνη· ὁ μύλλος ἰχθύς 'the fish Sciaena umbra'.

•ETYM Formation in -ώνη (seen in plant names; cf. χελώνη, γογγρώνη, etc.); further unknown. "Ohne Zweifel Mittelmeerwort" (Frisk).

ἑλεῖν [v.aor.] 'to take, seize', med. 'to take for oneself, pick out, choose' (Il.). ◁IE $*selh_1$- 'take'▷ •VAR Iterative preterite ἕλεσκον.

•COMP Often with prefix: ἀφ-, ἀν-, ἐξ-, προ-, etc. As a first member in ἑλέ-π(τ)ολις 'conquering cities', epithet of Helena (A. Ag. 689 [lyr.]); also name of a siege machine (Ph. Bel.); ἑλένα<υ>ς (A. ibid.) with reference to Helena.

•DER ἕλωρ [n.] (only nom.acc.sg. and pl.) 'plunder, capture, booty' (Il.); also ἑλώριον 'id.' (Schwyzer: 470[4]).

•ETYM As some attestations suggest an initial ϝ- (differently, Solmsen 1901: 251[1]), Chantraine 1933: 219, Chantraine 1942: 152 has proposed an alternation su̯el-/ sel-* and connection with ἁλίσκομαι, Lat. vellō, but this is impossible since the aor. ἑάλων points to $*-h_3$ (see LIV^2 s.v. $*u̯elh_3$-). Beside ἑλεῖν, Gm. has a yod-present in Go. saljan 'to offer, sacrifice', ON selja 'to render, sell', OHG sellen 'to render, give up', etc. with the deverbal nouns ON sal(a) 'rendition, sale', OHG sala 'rendering', etc. Because of its meaning, this Gm. word is generally considered a causative of ἑλεῖν ("nehmen machen"), but this is unnecessary; cf. ►αἴνυμαι 'to take' next to related ToA e-, ToB ai- 'to give', and also e.g. ON fá (= Go. fahan) 'to take' and 'to give'. The appurtenance of OCS sъlati 'to send' and Lat. cōn-silium 'counsel' is possible; see Derksen 2008 s.v. *sъlàti and De Vaan 2008 s.v. cōnsulō, as well as LIV^2 s.v. $*selh_1$- 'nehmen'. As a suppletive verb of ἑλεῖν, Greek has ►αἱρέω. Acc. to Schrijver 1995: 437[1], OIr. selb and W helw 'possession' are perfect cognates of Gr. ἑλεῖν. De Vaan (ibid.) also mentions OIr. ad-roilli, do-slí 'to earn', MW dyrllid 'to earn', Co. deleth 'to be appropriate', and MBret. dellit 'to earn' (< tu-ari/ro-) < PCl. -sli̯i̯e/o- (<< $*s(e)lh_1$-e/o-).

ἐλειός [m.] 'a kind of dormouse, Myoxus glis' (Arist. HA 600b 12); also = εἶδος ἱέρακος 'kind of hawk' (H.) (?). ◁PG?▷

•VAR Also ἐλ-.

•DER Beside it ὄλιος· σκίουρος, ἐλειός 'squirrel, ἐ.' (H.), together with lower Ital. oḍḍío, etc. 'id.'; Rohlfs 1930: Nr. 621.

•ETYM Unknown. Probably Pre-Greek.

ἐλελεῦ [interj.] cry of pain (A. Pr. 877), battle cry (Ar. Av. 364: ἐλελελεῦ), cry in general (Plu. Thes. 22). ⊲ONOM⊳ •DER ἐλελίζω, aor. ἐλελίξαι 'raise a cry of pain or of war (ἐλελεῦ)' (Ar., E.); also ἐλελύσδω (Sapph. 44, 31 LP; v.l. ὀλολύσδω).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic interjection; cf. ἀλαλά, -άζω, and ὀλολύζω. See Schwyzer 716 and Schwyzer 1950: 600f.

ἐλελίζω [v.] 1. 'to shake', med.-pass. 'to tremble, be shaken', 2. 'to turn round (trans. and intr.)' (Il.). ⊲IE *$h_1$leiǵ- 'tremble'⊳ •VAR Aor. ἐλελίξαι, pass. ἐλελιχθῆναι, 3sg.pret. ἐλέλικτο, perf. med. ἐλέλιγμαι (Hell.).
•COMP As a first member (cf. Schwyzer: 444: 3) in ἐλελί-χθων 'shaking the earth' (Pi. P. 2, 4), 'earth-shaker', epithet of Poseidon (Pi. P. 6, 50), of Dionysus (S. Ant. 153); also in ►ἐλελίσφακος, -ον.
•ETYM To be distinguished from ἐλελίζω 'to raise a cry' (see ►ἐλελεῦ). Two verbs seem to have merged in the aorist forms ἐλέλιξα, ἐλελίχθην: 1. a reduplicated present ἐλελίζω 'to shake'; 2. an augmented *ἐ-ϝέλιξα from the present (ϝ)ελίσσω 'to turn' (see ►ἕλιξ). The pret. ἐλέλικτο refers to a snake in Λ 39 and therefore belongs to 2. as *ϝεϝέλικτο 'twisted itself'; the expression ἔγχος ... σειόμενον ἐλέλικτο N 558 may represent the turning or whirling, as well as the shaking movement. It is no longer possible to distinguish the two. Cf. Chantraine 1942: 132, as well as Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἐλελίζω. In the meaning 'to shake', ἐλελίξαι, ἐλελίζω is connected with Skt. réjate 'to tremble, shake', réjati 'to make tremble', Khot. rrīys- 'to tremble', Go. laikan 'to jump', etc.; it presupposes that -ίξαι, -ίζω is part of the root, on which see Risch 1937: 298ff.
Formerly, a reduplicated aorist ἐ-λέ-λιξ-α was reconstructed, to which the passive aorist ἐ-λελίχ-θην was formed, but the ἐ- in the present ἐ-λελίζω cannot be explained in this way; the root had an initial laryngeal, *$h_1$leiǵ-. The reduplication may be a Greek innovation. Note the similarity in the formation of Skt. rejata kṣā̆ḥ 'the earth quaked' (RV) with Gr. ἐλελί-χθων.

ἐλελίσφακος [m.] kind of sage, 'Salvia triloba' (Thphr.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR ἐλελίσφακον [n.] (Dsc.). On the gender see ►διόσπυρον.
•DER ἐλελισφακίτης (οἶνος; Dsc., Plin.; Redard 1949: 96).
•ETYM Properly "trembling sage-apple", related to ►ἐλελίζω, because of the trembling fruits (Strömberg 1940: 76). On the apocopated form λελίσφακος (Dsc.) and MoGr. ἁλισφακιά (after ἅλς 'sea'), etc., see Strömberg 1944: 44.

ἔλεμος ⇒ἔλυμος.

Ἑλένη [f.] daughter of Zeus and Leda, sister of the Dioskouroi, wife of Menelaos (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Ἑλένεια· ἑορτὴ ἀγομένη ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'a festival celebrated by the Laconians' (H.).
•ETYM Nilsson 1941(1): 315 assumes that Helena is an old Minoan goddess of vegetation, who was connected with the tree-cult. The plant name ἑλένιον (Thphr., Dsc.) was derived from this use, acc. to Strömberg 1940: 130. Connection with the appellative ἑλένη (see ►ἑλάνη) is rather uncertain. See e.g. Linsay 1974: 209ff. De Simone Glotta 56 (1978): 40-42 argues that the form had a ϝ- and goes back to *suel- (Skt. svarati 'lights'), with a variant with *s-.

ἐλεόν [n.] 'table on which the roasted meat was put' (I 215, ξ 432 ἐλεοῖσιν, Ar. Eq. 152, 169 τοὐλεόν). ⊲?⊳ •COMP ἐλεο-δύτης 'cook at the Delian sacrifices' (Ath. 4, 173a: διὰ τὸ τοῖς ἐλεοῖς ὑποδύεσθαι διακονοῦντες ἐν ταῖς θοίναις 'because they dive under the ἐλεοί when serving at the meals'.
•DER ἐλέατρος 'seneschal, steward' (pap. III[a]), εἰλέατρος (Pamphil. in Ath. 4, 171b, metrically lengthened?), or oxytone -τρός as in δαιτρός, etc.
•ETYM Technical word without etymology. On the formation, cf. κολεόν, στελεόν, θυρεός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 51); on the meaning, Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 272ff.

ἔλεος 1 [m.] 'compassion, pity' (Il.); acc. to Schadewaldt Herm. 83 (1955): 131ff. rather 'pain, lament, commotion' than 'compassion'; criticism by Pohlenz Herm. 84 (1956): 49ff. ⊲IE? *$h_1$leu- 'compassion'?⊳
•VAR Hell. also ntr., see Schwyzer 1950: 38.
•COMP As a second member in νηλ(ε)ής, -ές 'without compassion, merciless' (Il.) < *n̥-$h_1$leu-es-; beside it ἀν-ηλεής 'id.' (And., Hell.).
•DER ἐλεόν [adv.] 'pitiful' (Hes. Op. 205), ἐλ(ε)εινός 'rousing compassion, plaintive' (Il.), (after ἀλ(ε)γεινός and the adjectives in -εινός (Chantraine 1933: 195f.) rather than from late τὸ ἔλεος; ἐλεήμων 'compassionate, pitiful' (ε 181, Att., Hell.), from ἐλεέω (cf. Chantraine 1933: 173), with ἐλεημοσύνη 'compassion' (Call.), 'alms' (LXX, NT); with internal shortening ἐλεημο-ποιός 'giving alms' (LXX); ἐλεητικός = ἐλεήμων (Arist.; from ἐλεέω). Denominative verbs: ἐλεέω, aor. ἐλεῆσαι 'show compassion' (Il.) with ἐλεητύς = ἔλεος (ξ 82, ρ 451; Porzig 1942: 182; on the semantics Benveniste 1948: 66); ἐλεήμων, ἐλεητικός see above; ἐλεαίρω 'id.' (Il.; ἐλέηρα A. R. 4, 1308) after ἐχθαίρω etc. (Risch 1937: 286; not from *ἐλε-ϝαρ as per Benveniste 1935: 112 and Schwyzer: 724); βλεερεῖ· οἰκτείρει. Βοιωτοί 'to pity (Boeot.)' (H.), mistake for ἐλεαίρει?
•ETYM No etymology. Origin as an interjection (cf. ►ἐλελεῦ, ►ὀλολύζω, etc.) is possible (see Pok. 306).

ἐλεός 2 [m.] an owl (Arist. HA 592b 11, see Thompson 1895 s.v.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unexplained. Onomatopoeic? Cf. e.g. Lat. ulula and ►ἐλελεῦ, ►ὀλολύζω.

ἐλεσπίδας [acc.pl.] of πίσεα, perhaps 'marsh-lands, swamp lands' (A. R. 1, 1266). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM The analysis in ἕλος 'swamp' and a root noun *σπίς (*ἐλε[σ]-σπίδ-), which would be cognate with ►σπίδιος, ►ἀσπιδής, and even with ►ἀσπίς, is morphologically far from convincing. See Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀσπίς and Schwyzer: 507. The connection with the gloss λέσπιν· μεγάλην, ὑδρηλήν 'large, moist' remains unclear. Δίδυμος τὴν καταδυομένην εἰς πέλαγος πέτραν. οἱ δὲ τὴν νοτεράν 'In D. a rock submerged into the sea, others: a wet [rock]'. ἄλλοι δὲ σπίδα (leg. λέσπιδα?) βαθεῖαν 'a deep cave[?]'. οἱ δὲ λόχμην 'a lair' (H.). See Taillardat REGr. 73 (1960): 13.

Perhaps -πιδ- is the same element as contained in πίδαξ 'source, geyser' (Van Beek p.c.). See ► ἕλος.

ἐλεύθερος [adj.] 'free, free man', opposed to δοῦλος 'slave' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_1leud^h- 'grow up, come out'⊳

•DIAL Myc. e-re-u-te-ro /eleut^{h}eros/.

•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. ἐλευθερό-στομος 'with free mouth' (A.); as a second member e.g. in ἀπ-ελεύθερος 'freed man' (Att.), mostly taken as deverbal to ἀπ-ελευθερόω 'liberate, make into a freed man' (Pl., Arist.); Schwyzer: 421, Strömberg 1946: 39f. with litt.

•DER ἐλευθερία 'freedom' (Pi.) with ἐλευθεριωτικός 'proclaiming freedom' (Him.); denominative verbs: ἐλευθερόω 'liberate' (IA) with ἐλευθέρ-ωσις, -ωμα, -ωτής; ἐλευθερεσθείς (Thess., Schwyzer 736 with lit.); ἐλευθέριος 'as a free man' (IA), also as an epithet of Zeus (Pi., Hdt., because of the victory on the Persians) with Ἐλευθεριών month name (Halicarnassus); ἐλευθεριότης 'open-heartedness, liberality' (Pl.) and the denominative ἐλευθεριάζω 'speak and act as a free man' (Pl.); ἐλευθερικός 'belonging to a free man' (Pl. Lg. 701e beside δεσποτικός; 919e beside the bahuvrīhi ἀν-ελεύθερος; cf. Chantraine 1956a: 146). Cret. ἐλούθερος with secondary voalism (Schwyzer: 194).

•ETYM An adjective in the meaning 'free' is also found in Lat. līber, -era; as a theonym = Venet. Louzera, Pelign. loufir, Osc. (Iúveis) Lúvfreis = (Iovis) Līberī; cf. Falisc. lōferta = līberta, OLat. loebertāt-em = Falisc. loifirtat-o. The starting point was an old word for 'people', which is found in Gm. and BSl.: OHG liut 'people', liuti [pl.], OE lēod 'people', Lith. liáudis 'lower people', OCS ljudije, Ru. ljúdi [pl.] 'men, people', all of which are from IE h_1leud^h-o-, -i-; from the same root with different suffixes are also Burgund. leudis 'a free man', OCS ljudinъ 'free man', so that ἐλεύθερος, līber (< IE h_1leud^h-ero-) must originally have meant 'belonging to the tribe', as opposed to subjected peoples. The root is probably the same as that of ► ἐλεύσομαι; see LIV^2 s.v. $h_1leu̯d^h$- 'steigen, wachsen', who assume a development 'frei' ← 'rechtsmündig' ← *'erwachsen' for ἐλεύθερος. A reflex of the initial laryngeal is also seen in Skt. vī-rúdh- 'plant', anū-rúdh- 'growing along' (Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 467ff.). Of foreign origin, but perhaps reshaped after ἐλεύθερος and with oppositive accent, is the PlN Ἐλευθεραί, whence Ἐλευθερεύς as an epithet of Dionysus; cf. on Εἰλείθυια and Ἐλευσίς. On the semantics, see Benveniste 1969:1: 321ff.

ἐλεύθω ⇒ ἐλεύσομαι.

ἐλεύσομαι [v.fut.] 'come, go' (epic Ion., trag.). ⊲IE h_1leud^h- 'grow up, come out'⊳

•VAR Aor. ἤλυθον, perf. εἰλήλουθα ('Attic reduplication' from h_1le-h_1loud^h-, with metrical lengthening), ptc. ἐ(ι)ληλουθώς (epic), ἐλήλυθα (post-Hom.), plur. also ἐλήλυμεν, -τε (Att. Com.), Cyren. ptc. κατ-εληλευθυῖα (Fraenkel Glotta 20 (1932): 88f.). Rare trans. (factitive) forms in Doric: ἐλευσίω· οἴσω 'I shall carry' (H.), 3pl.aor. ἐλεύσαν (Ibyc.), ἐπ-ελευσεῖ, ἐπ-ελεῦσαι (Gortyn) 'bring'. As a present, ► ἔρχομαι is used.

•COMP Often with prefix: ἀν-, ἀπ-, δι-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, etc.

•DER ἔλευσις 'arrival' (Act. Ap. 7, 52), also from the compounds (mostly rare, all late), e.g. συν-, ἐπ-έλευσις. Older the common noun ἤλυσις 'walk, way' (E.), ἐξ-, περι-ήλυσις (Hdt.), etc. (cf. Holt 1941: 58 and 149) with compositional lengthening (ἤλυσις after the compounds), and the same vowels as in the compounds νέ-ηλυς, -δος 'newly arrived' (Il.), ἔπ-ηλυς 'immigrated, foreigner' (Hdt., ἐπ-ηλύ-της Th.), etc.; προσ-ήλυ-τος 'newly arrived, proselyte' (LXX, NT), etc.; further the abstracts ἐπ-ηλυσίη (h.Hom.), κατ-, συν-ηλυσίη (Hell.).

•ETYM The best agreement (semantically and formally) to this old ablauting verb is found in Celtic, with the OIr. preterite lod, luid 'I, he went' (< h_1lud^h-om, -et : ἤλυθον, -ε); formally as good, but semantically less convincing, is the further comparison with Skt. ró(d)hati, Go. liudan 'to grow, rise' (whence the old word for 'people', OHG liut, etc.; see ► ἐλεύθερος). One must assume that -θ- (IE *-d^h-) disappeared analogically in ἤλυσις, ἐλήλυμεν, -τε as well as in (νέ)-, (προσ)-ήλυτος (in other words, these are built secondarily on ἐλεύσομαι); cf. Schwyzer: 704^2, 769^7. It seems less probable that the dental of Celtic, etc. was a secondary enlargement. Connection with Arm. eluzanem 'extract' is further possible. Cf. also ► ἐλθεῖν.

ἐλεφαίρομαι [v.] 'to deceive' (Ψ 388, τ 565), also 'to damage, destroy' (Hes. Th. 330). ⊲?⊳

•VAR Aor. ptc. ἐλεφηράμενος.

•DIAL Myc. PN e-re-pa-i-ro /Elep^{h}airōn/?

•ETYM In H. there are also active forms (ἐλεφαίρειν, ἐλεφῆραι), explained with (ἐξ)απατᾶν, βλάπτειν, ἀδικεῖν 'deceive, damage, do injustice'. Old, rarely occurring epic expression with unstable meaning, of unclear formation und uncertain etymology. The ending -αίρω seems to point to an r-stem (*ἔλεφαρ?), but could also be suffixal. The stem recurs in PN Ἐλεφ-ήνωρ, but possibly stands for *Ελεφηρ-ήνωρ with dissimilatory shortening (Sommer 1948: 170^2). Within Greek, it is compared to ὀλοφώϊος 'deceitful, noxious', which itself is unclear.

An acceptable connection would be with Lith. vìlbinti 'allure, befool'. Cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v. and Schwyzer: 724. Gotō 1995: 365-370 suggests that it be connected with Skt. upa-valhate 'to puzzle, confuse by means of riddles', if Skt. -valhate goes back to *-valbhate. However, if the Mycenaean PN is related, the comparisons with Skt. and Lith. are impossible (Myc. has no initial u̯-).

ἐλέφᾱς, -αντος [m.] 'ivory, elephant tusk' (Il.), 'elephant' (Hdt.), also as the name of a disease = ἐλεφαντίασις, see Strömberg 1937: 193. ⊲LW Eg.⊳

•DIAL Myk. e-re-pa, e-re-pa-to, e-re-pa-te /elep^{h}ans/, etc.

•COMP As a first member in both mgs., ἐλεφαντό-πους 'with ivory feet' (Pl. Com.), ~ -μάχος 'fighting elephants' (Str.).

•DER Diminutive ἐλεφαντίσκιον 'young elephant' (Ael.); adjectives ἐλεφάντινος 'of ivory' (Alc., Att.), -ίνεος 'id.' (inscr.; on the formation cf. Chantraine 1933: 203), ἐλεφάντ-ειος 'belonging to an elephant' (Dsc., Opp.), -ώδης 'elephant-like' (medic.), -ιωδής 'suffering from [the disease] ἐ-.' (medic.); substantives ἐλεφαντιστής 'elephant driver' (Arist.), also 'shield from elephant skin' (App.), ἐλεφαντεύς 'ivory worker' (pap.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἐλεφαντ-ιάω 'suffer from [the disease] ἐ-.'

(Phld., medic.) with -ίασις, also -ιασμός (EM); 2. -όω 'inlay with ivory' with -ωτός (inscr.).
•ETYM Like Lat. ebur, ἐλέφας is a foreign word. Except for the ντ-suffix, the final part recalls Eg. āb(u), Copt. εβ(ο)υ 'elephant, ivory'; the beginning recurs in Hamit. eḷu 'elephant' (whence through Egyptian mediation [article p-] MoP pīl, Arab. fīl); the details remain unclear. From ἐλέφας comes Lat. elephās, elephantus, whence the Gm. and Romance forms. See Lokotsch 1927: Nr. 605 and Mayrhofer EWAia(3): 28.

ἐλθεῖν [v.aor.] 'to come, go' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Ind. ἦλθον, epic lyr. also ἤλυθον (see ►ἐλεύσομαι), subj. ἔλθω, etc.
•DIAL See also on Dor. ►ἐνθεῖν.
•COMP Often with prefix ἀν-, ἀπ-, δι- εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, etc.
•ETYM Because of their semantic and functional identitity, ἤλυθον and ἦλθον can hardly be separated from each other. As ἤλυθον is limited to the epic and lyrics, and has an acceptable IE etymology, it is generally regarded to be the original form. Improbable suggestions about the origin of ἦλθον are given in Frisk s.v. (by Johansson, Wackernagel, Schulze). Szemerényi 1964: 3 takes ἐλθεῖν to be syncopated from ἐλυθεῖν. It is often believed that the υ was lost in the imperative ἐλθέ, which had oxytone accent. The form ►ἐνθεῖν probably arose by a dialectal Doric development, but it has also been connected with Skt. ádhvan- 'road', OAv. aduuan- (both from $h_1n̥d^h$-uen-).

ἑλίκη 1 [f.] 'willow' (IG 1², 864: hορος hελικης Att.); acc. to Thphr. HP 3, 13, 7, Arcadian for ἰτέα. ◂?▸ •DIAL Myc. e-ri-ka /helikā/.
•DER Ἑλικών, -ῶνος (Hes. Op. 639, ϝελ- Corinna) "willow-mountain, Viminalis" (Boeotia) with Ἑλικών-ιος, [f.] -ιάς, -ίς (Υ 404 Ἑλικώνιος ἄναξ of Poseidon, s.v. von Wilamowitz 1931: 213 and 336², Nilsson 1941(1): 447⁶) Hes., Pi.; on Ἑλικωνιάς as a plant name Strömberg 1940: 126.
•ETYM Boeot. ϝελικών precludes the connection with Lat. salix. Furthermore, the comparison with an old WGm. word for 'willow', OE welig, OS wilgia, MHG wilge, is impossible because of the Mycenaean form. DELG reconstructs su̯el-* / sel-*, which solves nothing.

ἑλίκη 2 ⇒ἕλιξ.

ἑλίκωψ [adj.] said of the Ἀχαιοι (Il., verse-final). ◂GR?▸
•VAR Always plur. nom. or acc. -ωπες, -ωπας, fem. ἑλικῶπις, -ιδος (Α 98 κούρη, Hes. Th. 298 νύμφη; also Sapph., Pi.).
•ETYM From ►ἕλιξ and ὠπ- (on the second member, see Schwyzer: 426⁴ and Sommer 1948: 1), so properly 'with eyes that constitute a winding', i.e. 'with winding eyes', formed like ἑλικο-βλέφαρος (h. Hom. 6, 19, etc.) and expressing beauty (cf. H. ἑλικοβλέφαρος· καλλιβλέφαρος)? See Bechtel 1914, Düntzer KZ 12 (1863): 17. Differently, Prellwitz Glotta 15 (1927): 128ff. reads "with curls" (comparing H. ἑλίκωπες· οὐλότριχες 'curly-haired').

On the basis of ἑλίκωπες as μελανόφθαλμοι 'black-eyed' in H., an adjective ἑλικός = μέλας was coined; thus not only H., but also Call. Fr. 299, etc., on which see Leumann 1950: 152¹²⁶.

ἔλῖνος [m., f.] 'tendril, vine' (Hell.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ἐλενοί· κλήματα τὰ τῶν ἀμπέλων 'twigs of vines' (H.).
•ETYM The word has been connected with ἕλιξ, ἕλμις, ἑλένη, etc. and ►εἰλέω 2 'turn, wind', from an ι-stem; cf. γέλιν (= ϝ-) ὁρμιάν 'fishing line of horse hair' (H.). However, the interchange ε/ι rather points to a Pre-Greek word.

ἐλῑνύω [v.] 'to rest, pause, stop doing something' (Ion.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Aor. ἐλινῦσαι, fut. ἐλινύσω. Cf. ὀλινύει· λήγει, ἀργεῖ 'to stop, be idle' (H.).
•DER ἐλινύες [f.pl.] (scil. ἡμέραι) 'festive days' (Plb. 21, 2, 1, = Lat. supplicatio).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. All earlier proposals are impossible or highly questionable. The variant in Hesychius may point to a Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 376).

ἕλιξ, -κος [f.] 'convolution, volute, tendril, curl, spiral' (Il.); also as an adjective of βόες et al. (ποταμός, δρόμος), see below. ◂PG?▸
•COMP As a first member in ►ἑλίκωψ, ἑλικ-άμπυξ (Pi.), ἑλικο-στέφανος (B.) et al., also (referring to ἑλίσσω) ἑλι- in ἑλί-τροχος 'turning a wheel' (A. Th. 205 [lyr.]); cf. further ►ἑλίχρυσος. As a second member in τετρα-έλιξ kind of thistle (Thphr., H.), also in ἀμφι-έλισσα, epic adj. of νηῦς (Hom.), later also of other things (e.g. ἱμάσθλη), properly 'forming a ἕλιξ on both sides'.
•DER ►ἑλίκη 1 'willow' s.v.; ἑλίκη 2 'spiral, turning' (Arist.), also name of the Great Bear (because of its turning movement; cf. Scherer 1953: 133, but not as an adjective); 3. εἰλικόεις 'provided with coils' (Nic., Opp.; metrically lengthened). Denominative verb ἑλίσσω, -ίττω, Ion. also εἱλίσσω after εἱλέω (not with Solmsen 1901: 230ff. from *ἐ-ϝελίσσω), aor. ἑλίξαι, εἱλίξαι 'make a turning, wind, turn' (Il.); also with prefix ἐν-, περι-, etc.; from there ἑλιγμός (εἱ-) 'turning, whirl' (Hdt.), ἕλιγμα (εἵ-) 'bracelet, curl' (Sapph. [?], Com.), ἕλιξις 'turned binding, turning' (medic.), ἑλικτήρ 'ear-pendant' (Att.), -ελίκτης in compounds like ἱμαντ-ελίκται 'turner of straps' (Democr.), see Fraenkel 1910: 244; ἑλίγδην (εἱ-) [adv.] 'turning'. Cf. ►ἐλελίζω in its second mg.
•ETYM Formation like ἧλιξ, χόλιξ, δέλφιξ et al. (Chantraine 1933: 382f.), so probably from a noun, which was perhaps derived from ►εἰλέω (*ϝελ-νέ-ω) 'turn, wind'. The epic epithet ἕλιξ is probably (cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v. and Risch 1937: 162) a shortened compound (*ἑλικό-πους, -κραιρα?). Note that the suffix -ικ- mostly makes Pre-Greek words (like -υκ-; cf. on κῆρυξ).

ἑλίτροχος ⇒ἕλιξ.

ἑλίχρυσος [m.] plant name 'Heliochrysum siculum, goldflower' (Alcm., Ibyc.); also ἑλειόχρυσος (Thphr.). ◂GR?▸
•VAR Also -ον [n.] (see on ►βούτυρον).
•ETYM Named after its golden yellow flower (Strömberg 1940: 25). Like e.g. ἑλειοσέλινον, ἑλειόχρυσος is understandable as a compound of ἕλειος and χρυσός (related to ἕλος?), after the compounds in ἀγρι(ο)-, e.g. ἀγρι-έλαιος = ἄγριος ἔλαιος (see Risch IF 59 (1949): 257). The form ἑλι- is a further shortening after ἄγρι-, αἰγι-, καλλι-, etc. Strömberg 1940: 153 thinks it is a loan. The locus in Alcman (16) has no digamma; cf. Solmsen 1901: 146. DELG considers the variant ἐλειό- either a mistake or an 'étymologie populaire déraisonnable'.

ἕλκος [n.] 'wound, ulcer' (Il.). ⋖IE $h_1$elḱ-os 'ulcer'⋗ •COMP As a first member in ἑλκο-ποιός 'making wounds' (A.) with ἑλκοποιέω (Aeschin.).
•DER Diminutive ἑλκύδριον (Hp., Ar.; on the suffix Chantraine 1933: 72f.); ἑλκώδης 'ulcerated' (Hp., E.), ἑλκήεις 'id.' (Man.); denominative verbs: ἑλκόομαι 'to fester', -όω 'to wound' (Hp., E.; also with prefix: ἀν-, ἀφ-, ἐξ-, ἐφ-, καθ-, προ-); thence (ἀφ-, ἐξ-, ἐφ-)έλκωσις 'festering' (Hp., Th.) together with ἑλκωτικός, ἕλκωμα 'wound, ulcer' (Hp., Thphr.) with ἑλκωματικός; from ἐφελκόομαι also ἐφελκίς 'scab of a wound' (medic.); ἑλκαίνω 'fester' (A. Ch. 843) with deverbal ἕλκανα· τραύματα 'wounds' (H.); also ἑλκανῶσα· ἡλκωμένη ἢ ἡλκοποιημένη ὑπὸ πυρός 'wounded by fire' (H.; Schwyzer: 700).
•ETYM Old noun, identical with Lat. ulcus, -eris (< $h_1$elḱos-) 'ulcer', Skt. árśas- [n.] 'haemorrhoids'. Is the spiritus asper from ἕλκω 'draw'?

ἕλκω [v.] 'to draw, drag' (Il.). ⋖IE selk- 'draw'⋗ •VAR The non-presentic forms show three stems: 1. a lengthened stem ἑλκη-: ἑλκήσω, ἑλκῆσαι, ἑλκηθῆναι (Hom.), with ipf. εἵλκεον (P 395; cf. Chantraine 1942: 348; see also below); 2. ἑλκυ- (after synonymous ἐρῦσαι): ἑλκύσαι (Pi., Att.), ἑλκυσθῆναι, εἵλκυσμαι (IA), ἑλκύσω (Hp.), εἵλκυκα (D.); 3. ἑλκ-: fut. ἕλξω (A.) and late aor. ἕλξαι, ἑλχθῆναι; details in Schwyzer 721.
•COMP Often with prefix: ἀν-, ἀφ-, ἐξ-, παρ-, etc. As a first member in the epithets ἑλκε-χίτωνες, ἑλκεσί-πεπλος, and ἑλκε-τρίβων (Pl.), ἑλκεσί-χειρος (AP); on ἑλκε(σι)- Knecht Τερψίμβροτος 29.
•DER From ἑλκ-: (ἔφ-)ελξις 'drawing, dragging' (Hp., Pl.) with (ἐφ-)ελκτικός (Pl.) and the plant names ἑλξίνη, ἑλξῖτις 'bindweed' (Dsc., Ps.-Dsc., Redard 1949: 71), also ἑλκίνα [acc.?] (Ps.-Dsc. 4, 85), ἕλκιμος 'what can be drawn' (Olymp.; cf. Arbenz 1933: 76, directly from ἕλκω); with o-vocalism ► ὁλκός, ὁλκή, see s.v. From ἑλκη- (old but rare) ἑλκηθμός 'the drawing' (Z 465; cf. Benveniste 1935: 201, Porzig 1942: 236f.), ἕλκημα 'what was dragged, booty' (E. HF 568; Chantraine 1933: 178), ἕλκηθρον 'coulter' (Thphr. HP 5, 7, 6; Strömberg 1937: 170); ἑλκητήρ 'drawer' (AP 6, 297); ἑλκηδόν [adv.] 'drawing' (Hes. Sc. 302). From ἑλκυ-, mostly late: (ἀφ-, ἐφ-, παρ-)έλκυσις 'the drawing' (LXX, Aret.), ἕλκυσμα = ἕλκημα (Man.), also 'dross (of silver)' (Dsc., Gal.), (ἐξ-, ἐφ-, δι-)ελκυσμός 'attraction, etc.' (Chrysipp., medic., pap.); ἑλκυστήρ 'drawer', 'instrument for drawing out, etc.' (Hp.), ἕλκυστρον 'id.' (Apollod. Poliorc.); ἑλκύσιμος, ἑλκυστήριος; secondary verb ἑλκυστάζω 'draw' (Ψ 187 = Ω 21), expressive form after ῥυστάζω (Schwyzer: 706, Risch 1937: 298).
•ETYM A cognate verb is ToB sälkā- 'to draw out' (pret. sälkāte; innovated nasal present slaṅktär); nominal formations are found in Arm. hełg 'slow' (a-stem), Lat. sulcus 'furrow' (see ► ὁλκός), and OE sulh 'furrow, plow'. An old iterative is perhaps reflected in Alb. helq, heq 'draw (off)', if from IE solk-ei̯e-; cf. Porzig 1942: 236f. Not related to ► ἄλοξ.

ἔλλα ⇒ἐδώλια.

ἐλλέβορος [m.] 'hellebore, Helleborus, Veratrum album' (Hp., Ar.; on the mg. Dawkins JHS 56 (1936): 3f.). ⋖PG⋗ •VAR Ion. ἐλ-.
•COMP As a first member in ἐλλεβοροποσία 'drinking ἐ.' (Hp.); ἐλλεβορο-σήματα plant name = λειμώνιον (Ps.-Dsc. 4, 16), an original bahuvrīhi: 'plant that shows symptoms of Helleborus', Strömberg 1944: 51.
•DER ἐλλεβορίνη 'Herniaria glabra' (Thphr., Dsc.), ἐλλεβορίτης 'κενταύρειον τὸ μικρόν' (Ps.-Dsc.), also name of a wine (Dsc., Plin.), cf. Redard 1949: 71 and 96; denominative verb ἐλλεβορίζω 'treat with hellebore, bring to sense' (Hp., D.) with ἐλλεβορισμός (Hp.).
•ETYM Taken as "eaten by deer", from ἐλλός (ἐλλός) and βιβρώσκω (see ► βορά); see Strömberg 1944: 48ff. (full discussion). The compositional -ε- remains problematic. Amigues RPh. 72 (1998): 125, stresses that the plant is fatally poisonous. It has been suggested that the first element be identified with ἐσθλός; Girard 1988 assumes original ἐλλο-, which is hardly correct. The traditional etymology seems very doubtful; the word could well be non-IE, i.e. Pre-Greek. The double -λλ- may then represent the phoneme -l^y-, which at the same time explains the two first ε's: /a/ was pronounced [ä] in contact with the palatalized l, and [ä] is reproduced by ε; after the β, it may have been realized as ο, which gives us a pre-form /al^{y}abar-/.

ἐλλεδανοί [pl.m.] 'band for binding corn sheaves' (Σ 553, h. Cer. 456, Hes. Sc. 291). ⋖IE? uel- 'press'⋗ •VAR Or -ά [n.]? All attestations have dat.pl. ἐν ἐλλεδανοῖσι, but H., Suid. have -οί, -ός.
•ETYM From Aeol. *ἐλλέω < *ϝελνέω 'turn, wind' (see ► εἰλέω 2) with suffixal -δανός, possibly via *ἐλλεδών (cf. τυφεδών beside τυφεδανός). See Solmsen 1901: 244 and Schwyzer: 530. Chantraine 1942: 131 objects that there is no evidence for ϝ-.

ἔλλερα [adj.] said of ἔργα (Call. fr. 434); acc. to Hes. ἐχθρά, πολέμια, ἄδικα 'unfriendly, ptng. to war, unjust', acc. to Suid. φόνια, χαλεπά, κακά 'murderous, troublesome, bad'; details in Pfeiffer 1949-1953 ad loc. ⋖?⋗ •ETYM Unexplained. DELG adds that the etymologists explain the word as ὄλλυρα or ὀλλύντα.

ἔλλετε = ἔρρετε (Call. fr. 1, 17 [Pf]). ⇒ἔρρω.

ἐλλός 1 ⇒ἔλαφος.

ἐλλός 2 ⇒ἔλλοψ.

ἔλλοψ, -οπος [m.] 1. poetical epithet of ἰχθῦς (Hes. Sc. 212), in this function also ἔλλοπος (Emp. 117) and ἐλλός (S. Aj. 1297, Ath. 277d); also of κούρα (Theoc. Syrinx 18); 2. poetical for 'fish' in general (Lyc.); 3. name of a large, rare and expensive fish, which is compared (and identified) with the sturgeon (Arist.); in this mg. usually written ἔλοψ (Epich., Archestr., Plu.), Lat. (h)elops; 4. name of a snake (Nic. Th. 490). ⋖PG⋗

•DER Denominative ἐλλοπιεύω [v.] 'fish' (Theoc. 1, 42); note ἐλλόπιδας [acc.pl.] (Crat. 408 acc. to H.; -οδες EM 331, 53), acc. to H. and others = τοὺς στρουθοὺς ἢ νεοττοὺς ὄφεως 'sparrows or the young of a snake'; unclear is ἀλλοπίης, epithet of τράχουρος (Numen. apud Ath. 7, 326a).
•ETYM The ancients explained the word either as 'dumb' or as 'scaly', the former by means of impossible etymological connections. The meaning 'scaly' is interpreted as ἔλλοπος < *ἔν-λοπος, a prepositional bahuvrīhi of λοπός 'scale'; the shortened form ἔλλοψ would have been adjusted to animal names in -οψ (metri causa?); a second analogical shortening (cf. αἶθοψ : αἰθός) would then have given ἐλλός. Then the single λ in ἔλοψ, Lat. (h)elops remains; as this notation seems to indicate a special fish, ἔλοψ could be of foreign origin. Acc. to Frisk, this could point to a cross of a foreign fish name with an inherited adjective. Cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. and Strömberg 1943: 30f. However, the interchange λ/ λλ is frequent in Pre-Greek (Fur.: 387); further, we find ε/α and π/β in ἀλ(λ)άβης (Str. 17, 2, 4; Ath. 7, 312b; PTeb.) and ἔλαψ (Gp.). An interchange of the suffix -αβ-/ -οπ- is well known in Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 107. In a similar vein, ἀλλοπίης can be understood. Therefore, we probably have a pre-Greek word for a great fish. In Pre-Greek, I reconstruct *$al^y a/op$-.

ἐλλύτας [m.] name of something baked, a kind of cake, 'pretzel' vel sim. (Thera). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR ἐλλυτίς (for -της?)· πλακοῦς τις 'a flat cake' (H.), εἰλύτας [acc.pl.] (Boeotia), ἐλύτης (gramm.).
•ETYM Traditionally connected (see Frisk) with ►εἰλύω, either from the verbal stem (ϝ)ελυ- or from the present stem *ϝελνυ- or the perfect stem *ϝεϝλῦ-. Other attempts to accomodate the different forms by Solmsen 1901: 240, as well as Bechtel 1921, 1: 304. The connection with εἰλύω may well be wrong, however; the interchange λ/λλ rather points to a Pre-Greek word, in which case the word had initial *el^y-.

ἕλμις [f.] 'intestinal worm, parasitic worm' (Hp., Arist.); MoGr. forms in Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 56f. ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •VAR Gen. ἕλμινθος (to which a new nom. ἕλμινς Hp.), also ἕλμιγγος, etc.; further acc. ἕλμιθα (epid.); nom.pl. ἕλμεις (Dsc.); λίμινθες· ἕλμινθες. Πάφιοι (H.).
•COMP As a first member in ἑλμινθο-βότανον 'herb used against worms' (medic.).
•DER Diminutive ἑλμίνθ-ιον; -ώδης [adj.] 'worm-like', -ιάω [v.] 'suffer from worms' (Hp., Arist.).
•ETYM Traditionally connected with two other names for 'worm', Skt. kŕ̥mi-, Lith. kirmìs, OIr. cruim, etc. < IE *$k^w rmi$-, on the one hand, and Lat. vermis, Gm. wurma-* on the other. Greek would have innovated its form by folk-etymologically adjusting it to the root uel-* 'turn, wind' (see ►εἰλέω 2), which gave two further forms for 'worm', ►εὐλή and ϝάλη (spelled ὑάλη). It seems obvious, however, that the latter forms are clearly unrelated to ἕλμις. Our word is not IE, as per Fur.: 290. It is unclear why Fur.: and DELG hesitate to take the -νθ- as an indication of Pre-Greek origin. Note that the form ἕλμιγγος also shows typical Pre-Greek prenasalization (cf. acc. ἕλμιθα IG 4²(1), 122: 10], Epidauros). The form λίμινθες also suggests a Pre-Greek variant. Was it *$l^y mi(n)t$-, with prothetic vowel a- which became e- before the palatal l (see Beekes 2008)? Note that the MoGr. forms λεβίθα, -ίδες confirm the vowel after the l (see DELG).

ἐλξίνη •VAR ἐλξῖτις. ⇒ἕλκω.

ἕλος [n.] 'marsh meadow, marshy ground' (Il.). ⊲IE *selos- 'marsh'⊳ •VAR ἕλη· σύνδενδροι τόποι 'thickly-wooded places' (H.); cf. the etymology below.
•COMP As a first member thematically lengthened in ἑλεό-θρεπτος 'grown on marshy meadows' (B 776), ἑλεο-σέλινον 'celery from marshy meadows' (Thphr., Dsc.), also ἑλειο- by contraction from ἕλειον σέλ.; also in ἑλειο-βάτης 'traversing (living in) marshes' (A. Pers. 39 [anap.]), from τὰ ἕλεια or with metrical lengthening; with elision in ἑλεορέω 'be a surveyor of marshes' (Erythrae IVᵃ; or 'forester'? See below), from *ἑλεο-(ϝ)όρος. Unclear ►ἐλεσπίδας; cf. also ►ἑλίχρυσος.
•DER ἕλειος 'marshy' (IA), Ἑλεία epithet of Artemis (Cos), ἑλώδης 'id.' (Hp., Th.), ἑλείτης 'growing in marshes' (Dion. Byz.), also an epithet of Apollo (Cyprus; cf. Redard 1949: 12, 24, 208; on the formation see Schwyzer: 500); ἑλει-ήτης (λέων, Call. fr. 748).
•ETYM Inherited word, identical with Skt. sáras- [n.] 'pond', IE sélos-;* Gr. ἕλειος = Skt. sarasíya-. Not related to Lat. silva or ὕλη, in spite of H. and Thess. ὑλορέων exists beside Erythr. ἑλεορέων; see Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 165.

ἔλοψ ⇒ἔλλοψ.

ἔλπομαι [v.] 'to expect, hope, suppose' (Il.). ⊲IE *uelp- 'expect'⊳ •VAR Act. ἔλπω 'make hope' only β 91 = ν 380 πάντας μὲν (ϝ)έλπει. Epic also ἐέλπομαι (see below), perf. (with present mg.) ἔολπα, plpf. ἐώλπει (for *(ϝ)ε(ϝ)όλπει, see below and Debrunner Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 199, Chantraine 1942: 479f. with Add. et corr.).
•COMP As a second member in ἄ-ελπ-τος 'unexpected, unhoped for' with ἀελπτ-ία, -έω (Il.), also ἀ-ελπ-ής (ε 408); as a first member in Ἐλπ-ήνωρ (Od.; on the formation Schwyzer: 441, Sommer 1948: 175 with lit.).
•DER ἐλπωρή 'hope' (Od.; for -ωλή?; cf. Porzig 1942: 235); ἐλπίς, -ίδος [f.] 'id.' (π 101 = τ 84; cf. Porzig 353; on the mg. Martinazzoli Stud. ital. fil. class. N.S. 21 (1946): 11ff.) with εὔ-, ἄν-ελπις, etc.; denominative ἐλπίζω [v.] 'id.' (IA) with ἐλπιστικός, ἐλπισμός, ἔλπισμα (Arist.). On ἐλπίς, ἔλπομαι see Myres Cl. Rev. 63: 46.
•ETYM There is no counterpart to (ϝ)έλπομαι (see Chantraine 1942: 133 and 182) and the old perfect with present meaning (ϝ)έ(ϝ)ολπα in the other languages; Homer has a few forms from ἐέλπομαι, after ἐέλδομαι (Beekes 1969: 64). A verbal adjective connected with Gr. ἐλπίς is supposed in Lat. volup est 'it is pleasant to me' (whence volup-tas); IE u(e/o)lp-i-*.

ἔλπος [n.]? · ἔλαιον, στέαρ, εὐθηνία 'olive oil, rendered fat, abundance'; ἔλφος· βούτυρον. Κύπριοι 'butter (Cypr.)' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER On ►ὄλπη 'oil-bottle', see s.v.
•ETYM The word has been compared with an IE word for 'fat', selp-*: Skt. sarpíṣ- [n.] 'molten butter, lard', ToB ṣalype 'fat, oil', PGm. salba-* 'salve', as well as Alb. gjalpë 'butter'. Nevertheless, one would expect a spiritus asper in Greek. The variation π/φ rather points to a Pre-Greek word. Cypr. ἔλφος is unexplained; see DELG. The word ►ὄλπη indicates a bottle, and therefore has nothing to do with the word for 'oil, fat'.

ἐλύδριον [n.]? = χελιδόνιον, 'celandine' (pap.). ◄?►
•ETYM Formation in -ύδριον (Chantraine 1933: 72f.). It has been connected with ►ἕλος 'marsh' ("somit nach dem Standort benannt", acc. to Frisk), but this has spiritus asper.

ἔλυμος 1 [m.] 'millet' (Hp., Ar.). ◄?►
•VAR In H. also ἔλεμος· σπέρμα ὅπερ ἕψοντες Λάκωνες ἐσθίουσιν 'seed which the Laconians boil and eat'. Frisk (s.v. εἰλύω) notes that the word also means 'container': καὶ ἡ τῆς κιθάρας καὶ τοῦ τόξου θήκη 'case for the kithara and the bow' (H.; s.v. ἔλυμοι).
•ETYM Unknown (see Schwyzer: 494). Connection with ὄλυραι 'rice-wheat' and οὐλαί 'barley groats' is uncertain. Fur.: 246 suggests connection with ἐλίμαρ· κέγχρῳ ὅμοιον [ἐλινή] ἢ μελίνη ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'millet (Lacon.)' (H.), assuming ϝ- > μ-; however, this is very unclear. Perhaps Pre-Greek. See ►εἰλύω.

ἔλυμος 2. [f.(m.)] name of a Phrygian pipe (S.). ◄?► •ETYM There appears no reason for connection with ►εἰλύω.

ἕλωρ ⇒ἑλεῖν.

ἐμβάδες ⇒βαίνω.

ἔμβρυον ⇒βρύω.

ἐμέ [pron.] 'me'. ◄IE *$h_1$me 'me'►
•VAR Encl. με [acc.] 'me', ἐμοί (Dor. Phoc. ἐμίν), encl. μοι [dat.] (also gen.) 'to me' ('mine'); varying genitive forms: Ion., etc. ἐμέο (Hom. also ἐμεῖο), ἐμεῦ, μευ, Att. contr. ἐμοῦ, μου; Dor. also ἐμέος, ἐμεῦς, etc.; Lesb. Hom., etc. ἐμέθεν; more in Schwyzer: 602.
•ETYM Old pronoun: for με, cf. Lat. mē, Skt. mā, Go., etc. mi-k (after ik 'I'; not = *μέ γε), IE *$m\breve{\bar{e}}$; μοι = Skt. me, Lat. mī (used as vocative), OLith. -mi, etc.; ἐμίν after ἁμίν, etc. The genitives are all innovations: ἐμέο (whence ἐμεῖο analogically or with metrical lengthening), modelled after τέο, etc. (gen. of ►τίς), whence ἐμέο-ς, ἐμέ-θεν (like οἴκο-θεν, etc.). Adjectivized ἐμέ gave the possessive ἐμός 'meus'; likewise, Av. ma-, Hitt. -miš, Lat. meus. On the acc. *$h_1$me, see Beekes, Sprache 33 (1987-9): 7-12; it is also seen in Arm. im [dat.] 'mei'.

ἐμέω [v.] 'to vomit'. ◄IE *$uemh_1$- 'vomit'► •VAR Aor. ἐμέσ(σ)αι (Il.), perf. ἐμήμεκα (Hp., Luc.), fut. ἐμέσω (Hp.), ἐμῶ, ἐμοῦμαι (Att.), pres. ἐμέθω (Hdn.).
•COMP Prefixed with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ἐν-, ὑπερ-, etc.
•DER Verbal nouns: ἔμετος 'vomiting' (Ion., Arist.) with the bahuvrīhis ἀν-, δυσ-, εὐ-έμετος, -ήμετος (Hp. et al.; also, directly from ἐμέω, δυσ-, εὐ-εμής, -ημής), κοπριήμετος (Hp.); to ὑπερεμέω: ὑπερέμετος (Hp.). From ἔμετος: ἐμεσία 'qualm, inclination to vomit' (Hp.), ἐμετ-ικός, -ώδης, -ήριος, -ιάω (Hp., Arist. et al.); ἔμεσις and ἔμεσμα 'id.' (Hp.); ἐμίας "spitter" (Com.; see Chantraine 1933: 93). See also ►ἐμύς and ►περιημεκτέω.
•ETYM In Skt., there is the athematic vámi-ti; additionally, Lat. vomit, vomimus (beside vomi-tus), which were reinterpreted as thematic forms, with which compare reg-i-mus. The disyllabic root is also represented in Lith. vémti (new yod-present vemiù). The root also occurs in North Gm., but only in metaphorical meaning, e.g. OSw. vami [m.] 'disgust'. Schwyzer: 222[5] sees an element of the living language in ἐμέω, which would explain why the verb does not show a ϝ- in Homer (a similar explanation exists for lack of ϝ in ►ἱδρώς, as well as in ►δίφρος).

ἔμμᾰνις ⇒μῆνις.

ἐμμαπέως 'immediately' (epic since Il.).
•ETYM From *ἐμμαπής 'grasping', to *ἐμ-μαπεῖν. See ►μαπέειν.

ἐμματέω ⇒ματεύω.

ἔμμοτος ⇒μοτός.

ἐμπάζομαι [v.pres.] 'care about something, for something' (Il.; mostly with negation). ◄IE? *peh_2- 'protect, feed'► •COMP Act. κατ-εμπάζω 'take hold of' (ὁπόταν χρειώ σε κατεμπάζῃ Nic. Th. 695).
•ETYM No good etymology. Connection with ►ἔμπης 'in any case' is semantically difficult. In view of the MoSw. expression for 'care for something', fästa sig vid något, properly "to attach yourself to", one may consider (as Frisk does) an original *ἐμ-πάγ-ιομαι, to ἐμ-πᾰγῆναι (Ion. πᾰκ-τός, πᾰκτοῦν). The gloss ἐμπαστῆρας μύθων· πιστωτάς, μάρτυρας 'confirmers, witnesses' (H.) is unclear; Latte corrects it to *ἐμπιστῆρας. Blanc RPh. 70 (1996): 1996 connects it with *peh_2- 'protect' (Beekes 1969: 173); however, cf. Pok. 787 *peh_2k/g- 'fit together'.

ἔμπαιος 1 [adj.] 'bursting in, sudden' (A. Ag. 187 [lyr.], also Emp. 2, 2?). ◄GR?► •ETYM From ἐμπαίω 'burst in' (S. El. 902; see ►παίω); cf. Schwyzer: 452: 2.

ἔμπαιος 2 [adj.] 'experienced, skillful' (υ 379, φ 400; Lyc. 1321). ◄GR?► •ETYM Not well explained. Schwyzer: 467[6] and 620 derives it from ἔμπης as *'fully master of' (related to ἐμ-πάομαι; see ►πάομαι). Differently, Lagercrantz KZ 34 (1897): 395; see also Sommer 1905: 80f.

ἔμπεδος ⇒πέδον.

ἔμπειρος ⇒πεῖρα.

ἔμπης [adv.] 'in any case, really, all the same, nevertheless' (Il.). ◄GR?►
•VAR Dor. ἔμπᾱς, also ἔμπαν, ἔμπᾰ.
•ETYM Origin uncertain. Acc. to Brugmann IF 27 (1910): 274ff., prop. a nom.-acc.ntr. 'validity, reality, truth', related to El. ἐμπάω (ἐμπῷ, ἐπ-εμπήτω) 'execute (a fixed punishment), realize', πέπᾱμαι, πᾶς, etc. It is improbable that ἐμ- is from IE *sem- in εἷς (Schwyzer: 620). The ending of ἔμπᾰ is like ἠρέμᾰ, ἀτρέμᾰ; ἔμπαν (ᾱ or ᾰ), as in ἅπαν (Brugmann IF 27 (1910): 274ff.); see also Björck 1950: 123f. Radt 1958: 200-208 suggests ἐν πᾶσιν 'in all cases'.

ἐμπίς, -ίδος [f.] 'gnat' (Ar., Arist.). ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM Popular derivation from ἐμπίνειν 'to drink oneself full (of blood)'; cf. e.g. δικλίδες from κλίνειν. See Strömberg 1944: 14 for full argumentation. Older interpretations, all wrong, are recounted in Strömberg and Bq. Cf. Gil Fernández 1959: 26. Differently, Szemerényi 1964: 143[1].

ἐμπλατία [f.] name of a kitchen (IG 5(2), 4 [IV^a]). ⋖?⋗ •VAR Only Arc. ἰμπ-.
•ETYM Perhaps related to πλάτος 'breadth', from ἐμπλατής (only Anon. in Tht. 30, 1) or to ἐμπλατύνειν 'broaden' (LXX). It has been compared with ἐπίπλατορ· πλακοῦντος εἶδος 'kind of flat cake' (H.), but is this really useful? Cf. on ► πέλανος.

ἔμπλην ⇒πλήν.

ἐμποδών ⇒πούς.

ἐμπολή [f.] 'trade, trade goods, purchase, profit' (Pi., Att.). ⋖IE? *k^wel- 'turn, move'⋗ •VAR Arc. ἰνπολα (IV^a).
•COMP Compounds: on ἀπεμπολή see below. Also with prefix: ἀπ-, δι-, ἐξ-, παρ-, προσ-.
•DER Note ἐμπέλωρος· ἀγορανόμος 'clerk of the market' (H.; probably for ἐμπολ-; for Chantraine's opinion, see below). ἐμπολαῖος 'belonging to trade, etc.', epithet of Hermes (Ar.), ἐμπολεύς 'buyer' (AP). Denominative verb ἐμπολάω, -άομαι 'trade, buy, sell, win' (Od.), with impf. ἠμπόλων, aor. ἠμπόλησα (ἐνεπόλησα Is.), ἠμπολήθην, perf. ἠμπόληκα (ἐμπεπόληκα Luc.), med. ἠμπόλημαι. ἐμπόλημα 'goods, profit' (S.), (ἀπ-)ἐμπόλησις (Hp., Poll.), ἀπεμπολητής 'seller' (Lyc.); deverbal ἀπεμπολήν· ἀπαλλαγήν, πρᾶσιν, ἐμπορίαν 'deliverance, sale, trade' (H.).
•ETYM Also (ἐξ-)ἐμπολέω 'id.' (Herod., J.). Cf. ἐντολή, ἐντομή, etc.; based on a verb *ἐμπέλω, -ομαι. It has been compared with the iterative (with lengthened grade) πωλέω 'sell'. ἐμπολάω is a denominative, as appears from the augmented and reduplicated forms. Connection with πέλομαι, -ω 'turn, move' (root *k^wel-) is semantically possible; ἐμπολή would then be 'traffic'. However, IE also has an old root *pel- 'sell, earn, etc.' in several nominal derivatives, e.g. Skt. paṇa- [m.] 'salary' (with paṇate 'trade, buy'), Lith. peĩnas 'wages, salary', OHG fāli, ON falr 'sal(e)able'; it has been connected with πωλέω, as distinct from ἐμπολή. See Schwyzer: 720[8]. On ἐμπολή, ἐμπολάω, see Chantraine RPh. 66 (1940): 11ff. with various suggestions (πελάζω, πέλας, etc.). Recently, De Lamberterie has argued for connection with *k^wel- and πωλέομαι (see DELG Supp. s.v. πωλέω).

ἔμπορος [m.] 'who travels on a ship, passager' (Od.), 'traveller' in general (B., trag.), usually 'merchant' (IA; on the mg. beside κάπηλος, ναύκληρος Finkelstein Class. Phil. 30 (1935): 320ff.). ⋖GR⋗ •COMP Several compounds, e.g. συν-, οἰν-, μικρ-έμπορος.

•DER ἐμπορία 'sea-trade, wholesale trade' (Hes.), ἐμπόριον 'commercial town' (IA), ἐμπορικός 'belonging to a merchant (to trade)' (Stesich., IA; see Chantraine 1956a: 115); denominative verb ἐμπορεύομαι 'be ἔμπορος, travel, trade' (IA), also 'be (more) cunning' (2 Ep. Pet. 2, 3), with ἐμπόρευμα, -εῖον, -ευτικός.
•ETYM Hypostasis from ἐν πόρῳ (ὤν), "being in transit"; see ► πόρος and Porzig 1942: 258. See De Lamberterie RPh. 71 (1997): 159.

Ἔμπουσα [f.] name of a popular phantom (Ar., D.). ⋖PG?(S)⋗ •ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek figure, see Fur.: 197[55]; for the use of the suffix, cf. αἴθουσα, ἄγχουσα, κάδουσα, νήθουσα, Ἀκίδουσα; Κηλοῦσα = Κήλωσσα.

ἔμπροσθε(ν) •VAR ἔμπροσθα. ⇒πρόσθεν.

ἐμπυριβήτης, -ου [m.] 'which goes into the fire', of a τρίπους Ψ 702. ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM Compound of the prepositional phrase ἐν πυρί and βῆ-ναι, with suffix -τη-; cf. Schwyzer: 452. Cf. πυριβήτης Arat. 983, a false archaizing form. On the matter, see Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 366f.

ἐμύς, -ύδος [f.] 'freshwater tortoise' (Arist.) (in LSJ only in Suppl.) ⋖PG?⋗
•VAR Also ἑ- (LSJSuppl.), msc. and fem. Also ἀμύς 'id.' (Archig. apud Gal. 12.575).
•ETYM See Chantraine 1933: 126 and 347; origin unknown. Sommer 1905: 100 derives it from ἐμέω because the animal, when breathing out below the surface of the water, continuously releases air bubbles. However, *-ud- is not an IE suffix, so the word is probably Pre-Greek; see Chantraine 1933: 348: πηλαμύς "sans doute préhellénique", χλαμύς "arrangement d'un mot emprunté." Cf. also Pre-Greek on the suffix -υδ-. It has apparently escaped researchers that there are two forms; this probably points to Pre-Greek origin (cf. Fur.: 346f.), where the variants ἀ-/ ἐ- are different reflexes of a single Pre-Greek phoneme. There is no support for the suggestion that πηλαμύς contains ἐμύς as a second member, but this makes no difference for our interpretation.

ἔμφωτον ⇒φῶς.

ἐν [adv., prep.] 'in, within' (Il.), as a preposition usually with the dat. (loc.) to indicate the rest at the attained goal; in NWGr., El., Arc., Cypr., Thess., Boeot. also with accus. indicating the direction, for which the other dialects have ἐν + ς, see ► εἰς. ⋖IE *$h_1en(i)$ 'in'⋗ •VAR Also ἔνι; as a preposition ἐν, poetic ἐνί, metrically lengthened εἰν(ί), Arc. Cypr. Cret. ἰν.
•ETYM Old adverb, also seen in OLat. en (> in), Osc.-U en, Gm. (e.g. Go.) in, OIr. in, OPr. en, Arm. i, etc., all from IE *h_1en, *h_1eni (identical with the loc. in -i, like ἔπι, πέρι, etc.?). On ἔνι as a copula (certainly since V-VI^p), whence MoGr. εἶναι (εἶνι, ἔνι, etc.) 'is, are', see Debrunner Mus. Helv. 11 (1954): 57ff.

ἔναγχος ⇒ἄγχι.

ἐναλίγκιος ⇒ἀλίγκιος.

ἔναντα •VAR ἔναντι, ἐναντίως. ⇒ἄντα and ἀντί.

ἐναντίβιον ⇒βία.

ἔναρα [n.pl.] 'the weapons of a fallen opponent' (Il., Hes. Sc. 367). ◂?▸
•COMP As a first member in ἐναρο-κτάντας, of death (A. Fr. 151 [lyr.]), ἐναρη-φόρος 'carrying the ἔ.' (APl.); also ἐναρσ-φόρος epithet of Ares (Hes. Sc. 192), also name of a hero (Alcm.) with σ in the compound after ἐγχεσπάλος (Leumann Glotta 15 (1927): 155f., Schwyzer: 336).
•DER Denominative verbs: ἐναίρω, aor. ἐναρεῖν (ἐξ- Hes. Sc. 329) 'take away the ἔ.', euphemistic for 'kill' (Il.); also ἐναρί-μβροτος 'killing men' (Pi.; after φθεισί-μβροτος); (younger) ἐναρίζω, aor. ἐναρίξαι (Il.; in Hom. often ἐξ-; also ἀπ-, ἐπ-, κατ-) 'id.'.
•ETYM Unknown. Schwyzer IF 30 (1912): 440f. compared Skt. (1x) sánara- (RV 1, 96, 8), of uncertain meaning. Connection with Skt. sanóti 'win' (cf. ►ἄνυμι) would impart ἔναρα the original meaning 'gain, booty'; one would have to accept psilosis. Hardly an r/n-stem, as per Schwyzer: 518. On the meaning, see Trümpy 1950: 86ff. See also ►ἔντεα.

ἐναργής, -ές [adj.] 'clear, visible, recognizable, living' (Il.); on the mg. Mülder RhM 79 (1930): 29ff. ◂IE *$h_2$erǵ- 'shining, white'▸ •DER ἐνάργεια 'clearness' (Pl., Hell.), ἐνάργημα 'outward appearance', also in plur. -ήματα 'recognizable facts' (Hell.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 190); ἐναργότης (Poll.); also ἐναργώδης (Aret.).
•ETYM Formations like ἐν-τελής from τέλος demonstrate for the second member of ἐν-αργής an s-stem *ἄργος 'shining', which is also found in ἀργεστής and ἀργεννός (see ►ἀργός 1 and Schwyzer: 512). Further details are difficult to ascertain, but it is probably a bahuvrīhi with adverbial first member: 'having ἄργος, having splendor'. See Strömberg 1946: 118f.; differently, Sommer 1948: 108.

ἐνάτηρ ⇒εἰνατέρες.

ἐναυλίζομαι ⇒ἔναυλος 3.

ἔναυλος 1 [m.] 'bed of a stream, torrent' (Il.); post-Hom. 'hole, grotto, ravine' (Hes., h. Ven. 74, 124, E. [lyr.]), also in sea (Opp.). ◂IE *$h_2$eulo- 'tube, longish hole'▸ •ETYM Properly 'with ►αὐλός', so 'hollow area', from αὐλός 'hole, tube'. For the meaning 'torrent', cf. the analogous development of χαράδρα (properly related to ►χέραδος 'gravel').

ἔναυλος 2 [adj.] 'accompanied by the flute' (Att.). ◂IE *$h_2$eulo- 'tube, longish hole'▸ •ETYM Bahuvrīhi compound of ►αὐλός and adverbial ►ἔν.

ἔναυλος 3 [adj.] 'sleeping in the open air' (E.). ◂IE *$h_2$eu- 'pass the night'▸ •DER Also ἐναύλιος with the substantive ἐναύλιον 'abode' (Hell.).
•ETYM Hypostasis of ἐν αὐλῇ (ὤν) 'living in the open air'; also, of λέοντες (E. Ph. 1573 [lyr.]).

ἐνδάπιος [adj.] 'indigenous' (Hell.). ◂GR▸

•ETYM From ἔνδον, modelled after ἀλλοδαπός, τηλεδαπός, etc., and reshaped after the adjectives in -ιος (ἐντόπιος, etc.). Cf. Schwyzer: 625.

ἐνδελεχής ⇒δολιχός.

ἔνδινα [n.pl.] 'intestines'. ◂IE? *$h_1$endo- 'in(side)'?▸
•VAR Only ἐνδῖνων [gen.pl.] (Ψ 408).
•ETYM Derived from ἔνδον with a suffix -ινο-. Metrical lengthening (as per Schulze 1892: 253)? Cf. Chantraine 1933: 204 and Meid IF 62 (1956): 275[16]. Vendryes MSL 15 (1908/09): 358 accentuates ἐνδῖνος like ἀγχιστῖνος, etc.; differently, Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 176 (accent as in ἔντερα).

ἔνδιος [adj.] 'in (of) the afternoon' (Il.), as a substantive -ον [n.] (-ος [m.]) '(after)noon' (Call., A. R.); rarely 'belonging to heaven, coming from heaven' (ὕδωρ, Arat. 954), 'in the air' (AP 9, 71); in Hom. ῑ, later (from εὔδῐος?) also ῐ, see Sommer 1948: 75[5] with litt. ◂IE *dieu- 'bright sky'▸ •ETYM Hypostasis of *ἐν διϝί (: ἔν-διϝι-ος, cf. ἐν-νύχι-ος), locative of the word for 'bright sky, day' (see ►δῖος, ►Ζεύς). Whether the expression ἔνδιον ὕδωρ (Arat.), etc. contains a trace of 'heaven' is doubtful; it rather arose by blending with δῖος.

ἐνδεδιωκότα ⇒βίος.

ἐνδοιάζω ⇒δοιοί.

ἔνδον [adv.] 'inside, at home' (Il.). ◂IE *$h_1$endon 'inside'▸ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἐνδο-μάχᾱς 'fighting at home' (Pi.), ἐνδό-μυχος 'who has his hiding place inside' (S.), -μενία, ἐνδουχία 'furniture, movables' (Plb.; ἐνδυμενία Phryn., pap.; after δύομαι 'enter'?).
•DER ἔνδο-θεν (like οἴκο-θεν, etc.) 'from inside, from the house' (Il.), ἔνδο-θι = ἔνδον (Hom.); on ἐνδοθίδιος see below; ἐνδοσε (acc.?) = εἴσω (Keos), ἔνδω (Delph.; after ἔξω). Compar. and superlative ἐνδοτέρω (Hp., post-classical), -τάτω (postclassical); late ἐνδότερος, -τατος (VI[p]). By confusion with ἐντός arose ἐνδός (Dor.; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939):11) with ἐνδοσθίδια [pl.] 'intestines' (Epidaur.), with Cretan development ἐνδοθίδιος 'living at home' (Gort.), ἐνδόσθια (LXX) = ἐντόσθια. After οἴκοι et al. ἔνδοι (Lesb. Dor.; see Solmsen 1909: 114); on ►ἐνδάπιος s.v.; unclear is ἐνδύλω· ἔνδοθεν (H.), like μικκύλος, δριμύλος? See Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 383. On ►ἔνδινα, see s.v.
•ETYM ἔνδον is identical with Hitt. andan 'within'; also, anda 'id.' = Lat. endo. Often explained as 'indoors', from ἐν and an endingless locative of the root noun for 'house' found in ►δάπεδον, ►δεσπότης, ►δόμος; the expression Διὸς ἔνδον ἀγηγέρατο (Υ 13) has been adduced, but the genitive can just as well be elliptic, on which see Vendryes MSL 15 (1908/09): 358ff. See Schwyzer: 625f., Schwyzer 1950: 546f., Lejeune 1939 (see index), and Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:2, 723.
DELG rejects this view: it fits neither the form nor the meaning. Cf. Meid AAHG 27 (1974): 54. Leumann 1977: 562 assumes that endo was borrowed from Greek: indigena would be a calque on Gr. ἐνδογενής, after which endo became separated. Acc. to De

Vaan 2008 s.v. endo, this "seems unlikely in view of the recent date of indigena, and because of the generally archaic look of the words indi/u- is combined with."

ἔνδορα [n.pl.] properly 'what is wrapped in the skin [when sacrificing]' (SIG 1025, 48; 1026, 8); Cos: ἔνδορα ἐνδέρεται. ◄IE der-* 'flay'►

•ETYM From ἐνδέρομαι 'wrap in the skin', referring also to δορά; note the explanation of ἔνδρατα (after ἔγκατα?) in H.: τὰ ἐνδερόμενα σὺν τῇ κεφαλῇ καὶ τοῖς ποσί 'what is wrapped in the skin together with the head and the feet'. Stengel Herm. 54 (1919): 208ff. explained it as σπλάγχνα 'internal organs'; however, his connection with δέρτρον 'retina' is correctly rejected by Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 220f. The word is a hypostasis of ἐν δορᾳ, acc. to Jones Class. Rev. NS 9 (1959): 132. See ►δέρω.

ἔνδρυον ⇒δρῦς.

ἐνδυκέως [adv.] 'careful' (Il.), explained in Hp. as 'continuously'. ◄?►

•DER Also ἐνδυκές (Nic. Th. 263, H. [beside ἐνδύκιον]; probably also A. R. 1, 883 for metrically impossible -έως).

•ETYM Perhaps related to ►ἀδευκής with uncertain analysis; both a verb *ἐν-δυκεῖν and a noun *δύκη are possible. Cf. Strömberg 1946: 90; on the meaning, see Leumann 1950: 311f., who explains its use in Hp. as from a false interpretation of Homer.

ἐνεγκεῖν [v.aor.] 'bring', resultative (Att., Pi., B., Hp.). ◄IE *h_1*neḱ-* 'bring' and *h_2*neḱ-* 'attain, reach'► •VAR Also ἐνέγκαι; aor. pass. ἐνεχθῆναι with fut. ἐνεχθήσομαι, perf.act. ἐνήνοχα, med. ἐνήνεγμαι; as a present there is φέρω, as a fut. οἴσω.

•COMP Often with prefix: ἀπ-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, προσ-, etc.; As a second member with compositional lengthening in δι-, δουρ-, ►ποδηνεκής, etc. (cf. also ►δόρυ).

•DER Verbal noun ►ὄγκος, s.v.

•ETYM Beside ἐγκ- (old zero grade *h_1*nḱ-*), there is also ἐνεκ- (old full grade *h_1*neḱ-*). With old o-grade, Attic reduplication, and aspiration, we have ἐνήνοχ-α < *h_1*ne*-h_1*noḱ-* (but no reduplication in κατ-ήνοκα H.). The crossing of ἐγκ- and ἐνεκ- yielded ἐν-ήνεγκται; influence of ἐνεῖκαι resulted in ἐν-ήνειγκ-ται, ἤνειγκαν, etc. (Att. inscr.). There are no exact parallels in other languages: Skt. has the reduplicated perf. ān-áṃś-a 'I have attained' (He-Hno(n)ḱ-*); however, an additional problem is that there were probably two roots, *h_1*neḱ-* 'carry' and *h_2*neḱ-* 'reach, attain' (see LIV[2] s.vv. for various forms in the separate branches).

There is a fundamental discussion of the separation of these two different roots and their respective semantics in García Ramón 1999a: 47-80. The Greek verb derives from *h_1*neḱ-* 'bring, carry', like a BSl. verb (Lith. neš-ù, OCS nes-ǫ 'I bring'), while most Indo-Iranian forms (Skt. náśati 'attains' < IE *h_2*neḱ-*, aś-nó-ti 'reaches' < *h_2*nḱ-*) derive from the second root meaning 'reach, attain', as do Go. ga-nah 'ἀρκεῖ, it suffices, "es reicht"', OIr. t-ānac 'I came' < *(-)h_2*e*-h_2*noḱ-*, Lat. na-n-c-īscor (nasal infix present), nactus sum 'attain', and Arm. has-anem, aor. has-i 'reach'. ToB eṅk-, ToA ents- 'take' (LIV[2] s.v. *h_1*neḱ-*) have also been included with the etymon *h_1*neḱ-*, although the semantics are not straightforward. Gr. ►διᾱνεκής probably belongs to *h_1*neḱ-*. The aorist ἐνεγκεῖν is most difficult. A basic form *h_1*ne*-h_1*nḱ-o-* would develop into ἐνεγκ- with shortening of the vowel by Osthoff's Law; cf. Beekes MSS 38 (1979): 18ff. See LIV[2] s.v. for further litt.

ἐνεῖκαι [v.] 'to carry (off)' ◄IE *h_1*neḱ-* 'take away'►

•VAR Aor. ind. ἤνεικα (Il.), also ἤνικα (Lesb. Dor.; partly = ἤνῑκα for ἤνεικα) subj. with short them. vowel ἐνίκει (Cyren.); sigmatic 3pl. εἴνιξαν (Boeot. for ἤνειξαν); aor. pass. ἐν(ε)ιχθῆναι, perf. med. ἐνήνειγμαι. Also συν-ενείκομαι (Hes. Sc. 440).

•COMP Also with prefix: ἀν-, ἀπ-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, etc.

•ETYM Derived from ἐν-εῖκαι (related to ►ἵκω) by Frisk et al.; see also Chantraine 1942: 395. However, ἐνεῖκαι is discussed by Meier-Brügger KZ 100 (1987): 313-322. He concludes that ἐνεγκ- is the original form, and ἐνεικ- a secondary development, pointing out that nominal derivations are from ἐνεγκ-. The root is now reconstructed as *h_1*neḱ-* 'to take away', and the Greek form reconstructed as a reduplicated aorist *h_1*ne*-h_1*nḱ-* > enēnk-*, in which the long vowel was shortened by Osthoff's Law. On demarcation against *h_2*neḱ-* 'to reach', see García Ramón 1999a: 47-80.

ἕνεκα [postp.] 'because, because of' (Il.), with gen. On the mg. in Hom. see Porzig 1942: 169; on the final -α cf. εἶτα: εἶτεν, ἔπειτα: ἔπειτε(ν); ἕνεκον after ἔνδον et al.; by crossing ἕνεκο, -καν, see Schwyzer: 627, 406, Schwyzer 1950: 552. ◄?►

•VAR ἕνεκεν (especially postclassical); εἵνεκα, -κεν (Ion.), ἕννεκα (Aeol.; see below); Hell. also ἕνεκε, -κο(ν), -καν.

•DIAL Myc. e-ne-ka.

•ETYM The analysis as ἕν-ϝεκα, related to ►ἑκών, etc., is refuted by the Mycenaean form. Note the interchange ἕν-, εἵν- (is ἕνν- hyperaeolic? or a metrical lengthening?). See Schwyzer: 228, Chantraine 1942: 161, and Bolling Lang. 30 (1954): 453f. The form οὕνεκα = ἕνεκα especially in Att. poets, by reanalysis of a preceding genitive in -ου: τούτοὕνεκα was conceived of as τούτου οὕνεκα (Schwyzer: 413). Since it is Mycenaean, there is no etymology; connection with *h_1*neḱ-* has been suggested.

ἔνελος [m.] · νεβρός 'young of the deer, fawn' (H.). ◄?►

•ETYM From ἔνελος comes Lat. inuleus 'young deer' (WH s.v. hinuleus with lit.); further uncertain. Niedermann IF Anz. 18: 78f. thought it was a metathesized form of *ἔλενος, related to ►ἐλλός, ►ἔλαφος.

ἐνενήκοντα [num.] 'ninety' (B 602). ◄IE *h_1*neun-*►

•COMP On the η see ►ἑβδομήκοντα.

•DER hενενηκοντα (Heracl.; like hογδοηκοντα after hεβδεμηκοντα), ἐνηκοντα (Delos, Phocis [III or II[a]]; probably haplological); uncertain ἐννήκοντα (τ 174); innovation after ἐννέα, ἐννῆμαρ, etc.; gen.pl. ἐνενηκοντων (Chios; Aeolizing).

•ETYM Acc. to Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 99, a pre-form *h_1*neu̯n̥-dḱomt-* regularly developed into *ἐνεϝνήκοντα, in which the -ϝ- was lost at an early stage. See ►ἐννέα.

ἐνεός [adj.] 'speechless, dumb, stupid' (IA). ◄PG?►

•VAR Also ἐννεός.

•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἐνεο-στασίη 'speechlessness' (A. R. 3, 76).

•DER ἐνεότης 'dumbness' (Arist.).
•ETYM The form recalls κενεός, but has no etymology. Acc. to Brugmann 1912: 1ff., it is related to εὔνις, etc.; this is correctly rejected by Kretschmer Glotta 6 (1915): 305. Fur.: 392 recalls νενός· εὐήθης 'meek, silly' (H.), and further νενίηλος (also ἐνίηλος), but does this prove Pre-Greek origin?

ἔνερθε(ν) [adv., prep.] '(from) below, below'. ◂IE ner-(ter-o-)* 'the lower one'▸ •VAR Also νέρθε(ν) (Hom.), ἔνερθα (Dor. Lesb.).
•COMP Also ὑπ-, ἐπ-ένερθε(ν). See Lejeune 1939, especially 341ff.
•DER ἔνεροι 'those below, those below the earth', of the dead below the earth and the chthonic gods (Hom.), compar. ἐνέρτερος, νέρτερος 'below (the earth)' (Hom.), superl. ἐνέρτατος 'the lowest' (Emp.).
•ETYM Cf. the opposites ὕπερ-θε(ν), ὑπέρ-τερος, -τατος, from ►ὑπέρ; also, ὕπερον, ὑπέρα. A good formal agreement with νέρτερος is found in Italic: U nertru 'sinistro', Osc. nertra-k 'a sinistra'. It has been cmopared with further Gm. words for 'north', e.g. ON norðr [n.], which require zero grade: PGm. núrþra-, IE nr-tro-, with basic meaning 'region where the sun is below [the earth]', or 'left side of someone who turns to the east when praying'. Another formation in Arm. ner-kʿ-in 'the one below' (cf. i nerkʿoy, i nerkʿust '[from] below'). Also different is Skt. naraka- 'hell' (Wackernagel-Debrunner 1954: 150). Without consonantal suffix, there is ToB ñor 'below' < nēr-* (see Adams 1999). As Armenian has no e-*, this is probably a Greek innovation. Further, one connects Lith. neriù, neȓti 'plunge, slip into', etc. (see ►δενδρύω); see also ►νειρός. The Gr. ἐ- may be compared with that of ἐκεῖ.

ἐνετή [f.] 'pin, brooch'. ◂IE (H)ieh₁-* 'throw; make, do'▸ •VAR ἐνετήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'clyster syringe'.
•ETYM Verbal noun of ἐν-ίημι; see ►ἵημι.

ἐνέωρα [adv.] acc. to Baunack Phil. 65 (1906): 637f. 'in the air' (inscr. Milete), comparing μετέωρα (cf. ►μετέωρος). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Hypostasis of ἀερ-?

ἔνη [f.] sc. ἡμέρα, only in adverbial expressions mg. 'the day after tomorrow'. ◂IE h₁eno-* 'that one'▸ •VAR e.g. ἔς τ' αὔριον ἔς τε ἔνηφιν (Hes. Op. 410), with surprising hiatus; ἔνης, εἰς ἔνην, τῇ ἔνῃ (Att.), ἔνας (Theoc.), ἔναρ (Lacon.)· ἐς τρίτην 'on the third day', ἐπέναρ· εἰς τετάρτην. Λάκωνες 'on the fourth day (Lacon.)' (H.).
•ETYM Old pronoun, seen in ►ἐκεῖνος.

ἐνηής [adj.] 'mild, soft, benevolent' (IG 14, 1648: 8; metrical tomb inscription). ◂IE? h₂eu-* 'enjoy, desire', or h₁euH-* 'help, assist'▸ •VAR Gen. and acc.sg. ἐνηέος, -έα (Hom., Hes.), nom.pl. -ῆες, -έες (Opp.).
•DER ἐνηείη 'mildness, benevolence' (P 670, Opp.).
•ETYM Uncertain. Formations like ἐν-τελής (from τέλος) point to a second member *ῆος, which can be PGr. *ἄϝος or *ἤϝος, the latter of which would differ only in ablaut from Skt. ávas-, Av. auuah- [n.] 'favor, benevolence, help' (h₁euH-os-*), in which case ἐνηής would properly mean "having benevolence". However, it is rather perhaps related to Lat. aveō 'be eager', Skt. āvay- 'consume', etc. with initial *ᾰ-. For the ablaut, it has been compared with ἄγος beside Skt. ā́gas- (from decomposition?). It has additionally been compared with ἀΐτης (s.v. ►ἀ'ΐτᾱς), from *ἄ(ϝ)ος with short α-.

ἐνήνοθεν ⇒ἐνθεῖν.

ἐνηρόσιον [n.] 'rent on ploughed land' (Delos, Halic.; since IV[a]) ◂IE h₂erh₃-* 'plough'▸ •VAR In the same mg. ἐναράτιον (Rhodos III[a]).
•ETYM Hellenistic technical term, hypostasized from ἐν ἀρότῳ or ἀράτῳ (cf. on Ἀράτυος) by means of a suffix -ιο-: "[rent] on the ploughed land"; the -η- is from compositional lengthening. Likewise, προ-ηρόσιός 'before the time of ploughing' (Hell.).

ἔνθα [adv.], demonstrative and relative 'there, here, where', first local, but secondarily also temporal; also 'to there, to here; where to' (on the use Hom. see Bolling Lang. 26 (1950): 371ff.); ◂IE h₁eno-* 'there'▸ •VAR ἔνθεν 'from there, from where' (Il.). On the difference between ἔνθα and ἔνθεν see Lejeune 1939: 375ff.
•DER ἐνθά-δε 'to there, here', ἐνθέν-δε 'from here' (Il.); also ἔνθινος 'from here' (Megar.; cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 204), ἐνθάδιος· ἐντόπιος 'local' (H.). From crossing of ἔνθα and αὐτά (with elision or shortened from *ἐνθᾶυτα) arose Ion. ἐνθαῦτα (cf. τοῖα : τοιαῦτα); with transfer of aspiration after ἔν-θα, ἔν-θεν arose Att. ἐνταῦ-θα (and ἐντεῦ-θεν) 'there, (to) here' (since I 601; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 23; Att. inscr. also ἐνθαῦθα, -θοῖ); secondary loss of aspiration (after ν) in Arg. ἐντάδε, El. ἐνταῦτα. Ion. ἐνθεῦτεν, Att. ἐντεῦθεν 'from here, from there' (τ 568) is cross of ἔνθαῦτα and ἔνθεν (Wackernagel IF 14 (1903): 370[1]); different Schwyzer: 628[7]: *ἐνθᾶυτα > *ἐνθηυτα > *ἐνθευτα: ἐνθεῦτεν. After τοῦτο, etc. ἐντοῦθα (Cyme, Oropos).
•ETYM No parallel formations in other languages. For ἔν-θεν, cf. πό-θεν, etc. An old suffix -θα is found in ►ἰθαγενής, but other material (Arm. and 'there', OIr. and 'there', Lat. inde, OCS kǫdu 'from where?') is doubtful; see WH s.v. inde and ēn. It has been compared with the deictic element h₁eno-*; see ►ἔνη.

ἐνθεῖν [v.] 'to come, go' (Dor., Delph., Arc). ◂IE? h₁nedʰ-* 'come about'▸ •VAR Aor. ind. ἦνθον, ptc. ἐνθών, etc. Compare the epic perf. and plpf. forms: ἀνήνοθεν (Λ 266), of αἷμα; ἐνήνοθεν (ρ 270), of κνίση (v.l. ἀν-); ἐπ-ενήνοθε (B 219, K 134 of λάχνη; θ 365 of ἔλαιον), κατ-ενήνοθεν (Hes. Sc. 269 of κόνις; h. Cer. 279 of κόμαι [pl.]), παρ-ενήνοθε (A. R. 1, 664 of μῆτις); the mg. is perhaps 'to bubble up, spring' or 'to spread out'.
•ETYM Since ἐνθεῖν is widespread in Doric, it is not from ἐλθεῖν (with a limited dialectal development λτ > ντ). There is no good verbal connection for ἐνθεῖν outside Greek. The forms ἐν-, ἀν-ήνοθε have been compared with ἐνθεῖν (ablaut ἐνεθ- : ἐνοθ- : ἐνθ-); ἀνήνοθεν could go back to ἀν-ενήνοθεν by haplology. Formally, we may reconstruct a root h₁nedʰ- 'to come about' vel sim. The Indo-Iranian group of Skt. ádhvan- 'road', OAv. aduuan- [m.] 'id.' < h₁ndʰ-uen-* is probably related. The connection with ON ǫndurr 'snowshoe' seems more dubious. Not related to ► ἄνθος.

ἔνθινος 1 ⇒ἔνθα.

ἔνθινος 2 [adj.] 'godlike', ἔνορκόν τε ... καὶ ἔνθινον (Hierapytna, Crete). ◄GR► •ETYM Contaminated from ἔνθεος (Cret. *ἔνθιος) and θεῖνος (Cret. *θί-ινος > θῖνος; built after ἀνθρώπινος). Cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 724.

ἐνθουσιάζω [v.] 'to be possessed by a god' (Pl., Hell.). ◄GR► •VAR -ιάω (A., E.), aor. ἐνθουσιάσαι, -ᾶσαι.
•DER ἐνθουσίασις (Pl., Ph.), ἐνθουσιασμός (Democr., Pl.), ἐνθουσία (Procl.; deverbal); ἐνθουσιαστικός 'possessed' (Pl., Arist.), -αστής 'somebody who is possessed' (Ptol.); ἐνθουσιώδης [adj.], -δῶς [adv.] 'possessed' (Hp.).
•ETYM From ἔνθεος, after the verbs in -σιάζω (θυσιάζω, etc.) and the verbs of illness in -ιάω (Osthoff MU 2 (1879): 38); on εο > ου, see Schwyzer: 251. On ἔνθεος, properly "in whom is a god", see Schwyzer: 429 and 435 and Strömberg 1946: 115.

ἐνθύσκει [v.] · ἐντυγχάνει 'meets with'; ἀποθύ<σ>κειν· ἀποτυγχάνειν 'to miss'; συνθύξω· συναντήσω 'I shall meet with' (H.). ◄IE *d^heug^h- 'fit'► •ETYM From *θύχ-σκ-ει to τυχεῖν (see ► τυγχάνω). See Schwyzer: 708; doubts in Brugmann IF 9 (1898): 348[1].

ἔνι ⇒ἐν.

ἐνιαυτός [m.] 'anniversary, year' (Il.; Risch Mus. Helv. 3 (1946): 254). ◄?►
•DER ἐνιαύσιος, Delph. Coan -τιος '(one) year, a year long, every year' (π 454), ἐνιαυσιαῖος 'a year long' (Arist.; see Chantraine 1933: 49); denominative verb ἐνιαυτίζομαι, -ίζω 'pass a year' (Pl. Com.).
•ETYM A new expression for 'year', properly 'anniversary' (cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v.). For the formation, cf. κονι-ορ-τός, βου-λυ-τός, etc. (Schwyzer: 501); it seems to contain a word ἔνος 'year' (H., Sch. Theoc. 7, 147), seen in several compounds : δίενος 'two years old' (Thphr.), ἑπτάενον· ἑπταετῆ H., τετράενος (Call.); as an s-stem, in τετράενες [n.] (Theocr. 7, 147), ὕπενες· εἰς τετάρτην H.; see also ► ἦνις. The same word also perhaps occurs in Baltic and Gm., e.g. as a second element in Lith. pér-nai 'last year' (*per-h_1n-, with acute from the laryngeal), perhaps in Ru. loní < ol-ni 'of the past year', Go. fram fair-nin jera 'from the past year'. The second member seems to contain ἰαύω, either the present-stem ἐν-ιαυ-τός (Meillet MSL 23 (1923): 274f.) or the verbal root (cf. κονι-ορ-τός, etc. above), in which case -ι- would be a compositional vowel: ἐν-ι-αυ-τός (Schwyzer: 424[5], 448). This is hardly probable; neither are the semantics (*"pause of the year"?) evident. Acc. to Brugmann IF 15 (1903-1904): 87ff., Brugmann IF 1 (1892): 319f.), and many others, it belongs to ἐνιαύω as *"Rast-, Ruhestation der Sonne, Jahreswende"; a το-formation from a present would, however, be remarkable.

ἔνιοι [adj.] 'some, a few'. ◄IE? *$h_1$eno- 'that'► •DER ἐνίοτε 'sometimes', ἐνιαχῆ, -οῦ 'in some places, sometimes', originally Ionic words (only in prose), that were taken up in Attic; late Dorianizing reshaping ἐνίοκα (Archyt.), also ἐνιάκις 'sometimes' (Sor.; after πολλάκις, etc.).

•ETYM Uncertain. The explanation by Ebel (KZ 5, 70f., taken over by Schwyzer 614), starting from ἔνι οἵ, ἔνι ὅτε = ἔστιν οἵ, ἔσθ' ὅτε, must be given up: ἔνι in the function 'is, are' is ascertained only since V-VI[p] (see ► ἐν). The best solution seems to be the hypothesis of Benfey, further advocated by Wackernagel 1907: 6, assuming ἕν 'one' (like HG einige to eins and MoE some to sem*); the psilosis would be Ionic. For the ending, cf. μύριοι, χίλιοι; then ἐνίοτε, ἐνιαχῆ, -οῦ would be formed after ὅτε, πότε, πολλαχῆ, -οῦ, etc. Improbably, Brugmann IF 28 (1911): 355ff. connects it with the demonstrative *ἐνος in ἔνη 'the third day', ἐκεῖνος, etc.

ἐνῑπή [f.] 'reproach, menace, threat' (Il.). ◄IE? *h_1eni-h_3k^w- 'reproach'► •DER Beside it the yod-present ἐνίσσω, aor. ἐνένῑπον, ἠνίπαπον (Schwyzer: 648 and 748, Chantraine 1942: 398), new present ἐνίπτω (Il.; ἐνίπτω also A. Ag. 590, cf. on ► ἐννέπω) 'reproach, revile'; lengthened present ἐνιπτάζω (A. R.). Here also the river name Ἐνιπεύς (Hdt.) as "rager" (Boßhardt apud Frisk)?
•ETYM As a verbal noun of ἐνίσσω, ἐνῑπή must have had a labiovelar *k^w. Brugmann connected it with ► ὀπῑπεύω, Skt. ī́kṣate 'see', etc. (root *h_3k^w- 'see'), which he substantiated (IF 12, 31) by referring to ὄπις 'reverential look', also 'retribution, punishment'. Likewise, Porzig 1942: 228: ἐνιπή as 'malign look'. Brugmann further connected it (in a rather unclear way) with ἴψαο, ἴψεται (see ► ἴπτομαι) 'to oppress, punish' vel sim. This in turn has been connected with ► ἰάπτω 'shoot, hurt, etc.' < *h_2i-h_2ek^w-i̯e/o-; thence ἴπτομαι from *h_2i-h_2k^w- (Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 282ff; Kuiper MKNAW 14: 5 (1951): 25[1]), and ἐνῑ-πή from *h_1eni-h_2k^w-.

ἐννέα [num.] 'nine' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1n(e)un$ 'nine'► •VAR Also hεννέα (Heracl.; after ἑπτά, ὀκτώ), ἐννῆ or -ή (Delph., Cyren., etc.; cf. Fraenkel Glotta 20 (1932): 88).
•COMP As a first member beside ἐννεα- (e. g. Hom. ἐννεά-βοιος) also older ἐνα-, Ion. εἰνα-, e.g. Hom. εἰνά-ετες [adv.] 'nine years long', εἰνά-νυχες 'nine nights long', ἐνα-κόσιοι (εἰνα-) 'nine hundred'.
•DER In derivatives: ἔνα-τος 'the ninth', Ion. εἴνατος, Argiv. Cret. ἤνατος, Aeol. ἔνοτος; εἰνάς [f.] 'the ninth day' (Hes. Op. 810) beside ἐννεάς 'set of nine' (Theoc.); ἐνάκις (εἰ-) 'nine times' et al.; but ἐννῆμαρ 'nine days long' (A 53), see Sommer 1950: 28f., 33 with details, e.g. Boeot. ἐνακηδεκάτη and ἐνναετήρω (Hes. Op. 436). On ► ἐνενήκοντα, see s.v.; on ἔνατος cf. δέκατος s.v. ► δέκα.
•ETYM The Greek form exists beside Skt. náva, Lat. novem (with -m after decem, septem), Go. niun, Lith. devynì, OCS devętь (with d- by dissimilation from -n- or after dẽšimt, desętь), etc., all from IE *h_1neun. The *h_1- is reconstructed because both Gr. ἐννέ(ϝ)α, ἐνϝα- ($h_1n̥un̥$, whence εἰνα-, ἐνα-, etc.) and Arm. inn (= inən, disyllabic) show forms with initial vowel. Thrac. ενεα is unclear (von Blumenthal IF 51 (1933): 115). A special problem is presented by the geminate in ἐννέα. Acc. to Ward Lang. 24 (1948): 50ff., it was caused by the syllable length in ἑπτά, ὀκτω (improbable); acc. to Sommer 1950: 27, *ἐν|ϝα- changed *ἐ|νέϝα to *ἐν||νέϝα (which is improbable). Differently, Wackernagel KZ 28 (1887): 132ff.); see Schwyzer: 591. Connection with ►νέος 'new' is impossible in view of the *h_1-. Incorrectly, Szemerényi 1964: 107-118 (who does not accept the laryngeal).

ἐν(ν)έπω [v.] 'to say, recount, announce' (Il.). On the mg. Fournier 1946: 47f. ◄IE sek*^{w}- 'say'► •VAR Aor. ἐνισπεῖν, ipv. pl. ἔσπετε (epic), fut. ἐνισπήσω (ε 98), ἐνίψω (Η 447; for *ἐνέψω? Chantraine 1942: 443), new present ἐνίπτω (Pi. P. 4, 201; cf. s.v. ►ἐνῑπή).
•COMP Also with preverb: ἐξ-, προσ-, παρ-, etc.
•DER ►ἄσπετος; also ►θεσπέσιος, ►θέσπις. Note προσ-εψία (cod. -ιά; leg. -ις?)· προσαγόρευσις 'greeting' (H.). On ►ἐνοπή, see s.v.
•ETYM The imperative ἔννεπε is identical with Lat. inseque, insece 'say, recount' (with inquam, inquit); -νν- in this form is attributable to metrical lengthening (Solmsen 1901: 35, Chantraine 1942: 100f.), or rather to Aeolic assimilation from -νσ- (e.g. Schulze 1892: 128 A. 2, 173 and Lejeune 1972: 128; also, Schwyzer: 300)? The zero grade of (σ)επ- (IE sek*^{w}-) is found in the aorist ἐνι-σπ-εῖν (ipv. ἔσπετε < *ἔν-σπ-ετε). On the preverb ἐν-, see Chantraine RPh. 68: 117 and Schwyzer 1950: 457. A verbal noun appears in OIr. insce 'discourse' < IE en(i)-sk*^{w}-iā; Celtic has other forms like OW hepp 'inquit'. In Lith., there is only dialectal sekù, sèkti 'say', but otherwise this formation was replaced in Balto-Slavic by Lith. sakaũ, -ýti 'say', Ru. sočít' 'indicate' < caus. sok*^{w}-eie-, which is also found in Gm., e.g. ON segja, OS seggian, etc., PGm. pres. sagje-* < IE sok*^{w}-éie-. OHG sagēn is an innovation. The future ἐνίψω arose from h*$_1$eni-sk^{w}-s-ō, with dissimilation of the first s (not from *ἐνέψω, which is not authentic); see Waack-Erdmann MSS 41 (1982): 199-204.

ἐννεσίαι [pl.] 'counsels, plans' (Il.), only dat. -ῃσι(ν) (Ε 894) except A. R. 3, 1364 (gen. -άων). ◄IE Hieh*$_1$- 'send, throw; make, do'► •ETYM Prop. 'inspirations' ("in-givings"), from ἐν-ίημι with metrically necessary double -ν- (Chantraine 1942: 100). On the suffix -σίη (instead of -σις), see Schwyzer: 469, Risch 1937: 124, and Porzig 1942: 99. Likewise, ἐξεσίη (Hom.) 'sending out, message', from ἐξ-ίημι. See ►ἵημι.

ἐννότιος [adj.] 'humid' (Call. Fr. 350). ◄GR► •ETYM Acc. to Leumann 1950: 51f., the form arose by false division from Λ 811 κατὰ δὲ ννότιος ῥέεν ἱδρώς. However, other explanations are possible: that it is a cross of νότιος and ἔν-υγρος vel sim.; or a bahuvrīhi of ἐν and νοτία, on which see Strömberg 1946: 124.

ἕννυμι [v.] 'to clothe, dress (oneself)' (Il.). ◄IE ues-* 'cloth'► •VAR Med. -μαι; Ion. εἵνυμι, -μαι, impf. κατα-είνυον Ψ 135 (v.l. -νυσαν, -λυον; cf. εἰλύω), aor. ἕσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι, fut. ἕσ(σ)ω, -ομαι, Att. ἀμφιῶ, -οῦμαι, perf. med. εἷμαι, ἕσσαι, εἷται or ἕσται, εἱμένος, plpf. ἕστο, ἕεστο (Il.; cf. below), Att. ἠμφίεσμαι, ἠμφιεσμένος, poet. ἀμφεμμένος, aor. pass. ptc. ἀμφιεσθείς (Hdn.).
•COMP Often with preverb, especially ἀμφι- (always in Attic); also ἐπι-, κατα-, περι-, ἀπαμφι-, etc. New presents: ἀμφι-έζω, ►ἀμφιάζω.

•DER ►ἑανός name of a woman's cloth s.v.; εἵματα [pl.] (rarely sing.) 'clothes, cover' (Il.), Aeol. (ϝ)έμματα (γέμματα· ἱμάτια 'clothes' H.), Cret. ϝῆμα (γῆμα· ἱμάτιον H.), also ϝῆμας [gen.sg.] to ϝῆμᾱ [f.] (cf. γνῶμα ~ γνώμη et al.); often as a second member, e.g. εὐ-, κακο-είμων. Diminutive εἱμάτια [pl.], Att. ►ἱμάτιον, often plur. -ια, with ἱματίδιον, -ιδάριον, ἱματίζω, ἱματισμός, etc. Further ἔσθος [n.] 'clothes, dress' (Ω 94, Ar. [lyrical and Dor.]), formation like ἄχθος, πλῆθος, etc. (Schwyzer: 511, Benveniste 1935: 199); denominative perfect ἤσθημαι, mostly in ptc. ἠσθημένος (ἐ-) 'clothed' (Ion.) with ἐσθήματα [pl.] 'clothes' (trag., Th.), ἐσθήσεις 'id.' (Ath.); cf. Fraenkel 1910: 106f. More usual than ἔσθος is ἐσθής (Pi. ἐσθάς), -ῆτος [f.] 'id.' (Od.); attempts at an explanation by Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 527, Schwyzer IF 30 (1912): 443; lengthened dat.pl. ἐσθήσεσι (Hell.). γέστρα (= ϝέστρα; cod. γεστία, see below)· ἔνδυσις, στολή, ἱμάτια 'putting on, apparel, clothes' (H.); see Latte; to ἐφ-resp. ἀμφι-έννυμι: ἐφεστρίς [f.] 'upper garment, coat' (X.), ἀμφι-εστρίς [f.] 'coat, sleeping garment' (Poll.); on the formation Schwyzer: 465, Chantraine 1933: 338. From ἀμφι-έννυμι further ἀμφίεσμα (IA), -ίεσις (sch.), -ιεσμός (D. H. 8, 62; v.l. -ιασμός, from ►ἀμφιάζω).
•ETYM The present ἕννυμι, εἵνυμι < *ϝέσ-νυ-μι (Att. -νν- from restored -σν-; Schwyzer: 284, 312, 322, Lejeune 1972: 123) is identical with Arm. z-genum 'to put on' (aor. z-gec'ay, med.). Beside this nu-present, there is also an athematic root present in Indo-Iranian and Hittite: Skt. vás-te 'clothes himself', Hitt. impv.act. 2pl. u̯eš-ten, ind.pres.med. 3sg. u̯eš-ta. Exactly parallel are the Greek perfect forms 1sg. εἷμαι < *ϝέσ-μαι (to which belongs analogical 3sg. εἷται), 2sg. ἕσ-σαι (Od.), 3sg. ἐπί-εσται (Hdt. 1, 47 = Skt. vás-te); these are perhaps reinterpreted old presents (cf. ptc. εἱμένος); see Chantraine 1942: 297, Schwyzer: 767. For the Greek σ-aorist, cf. ToB pret. wässāte 'he put on'. The nominal derivatives could be old: ἑανός [m.]: Skt. vás-ana- [n.] 'cloth'; εἷμα = Skt. vás-man- [n.] 'cloth'; ϝέστρᾱ : Skt. vás-tra- [n.] 'id.', MHG wes-ter 'christening dress'. Except for uncertain γεστία (see above), Greek does not have the normal derivative in -t- seen in Lat. ves-ti-s, Arm. zges-t (u-stem), Go. wasti. The idea that IE ues-* 'dress, wear' is a derivative of h*$_1$eu- 'put on', seen in Lat. ind-uō, etc., is impossible because of the initial h*$_1$-.

ἐνόπαι [f.pl.] 'ear pendant' (S. Fr. 54). ◄GR► •ETYM Hypostasis from ἐν ὀπαῖς, properly "in the holes"; in the same meaning, διόπαι (Attica, Ar.), from δι' ὀπῶν "(fitted) through the holes". With oppositive accent, δί-οπος 'with two holes' (Epid., Ath.), a bahuvrīhi. See further ►μετόπη and ►ὀπή.

ἐνοπή [f.] 'cry, battle cry, sound(s), voice(s)' (Il.; on the mg. Trümpy 1950: 154f., but hardly all correct). ◄IE sek*^{w}- 'say' or uek*^{w}- 'speak'► •ETYM A connection with ἐν(ν)έπω 'say' (cf. Schwyzer: 460) is perhaps better than that with ►ἔπος, etc. as *ἐν-ϝοπ-ή (Brugmann KZ 25 (1881): 306[2]) for semantic reasons; however, DELG holds that a connection with ἐννέπω is impossible, and prefers the other etymology. This presupposes a verb with ἐν-; cf. Lat. in-vocō, OPr. en-wackēmai 'we invoke'. Cf. Porzig 1942: 251.

ἐνοργείας [f.] · τὰς νεοσσείας. Κρῆτες 'breedings, nestlings (Cret.)' (H.). ◄GR►

•ETYM Acc. to Bechtel 1921, 2: 784 (who writes ἐνοργία), it is abstracted from ἔνοργος 'who is ἐν ὀργῇ, i.e in the rutting season'. See ►ὀργή.

ἔνος [adj.] 'old' as opposed to 'new', only in fixed expressions about fruits and officials of the past year, also of the last day of the preceding month, indicating the new period (Hes.; ἔνη the first day of the month, with Ion. psilosis?); in the last sense mostly ἔνη καὶ νέα (sc. σελήνη; Att. since Solon). ◄IE *seno- 'old'►

•ETYM The common IE word for 'old', *sénos, is still found in most branches, in opposition to 'new': Gr. ἔνος, Arm. hin, Skt. sána-, Lith. sēnas, OIr. sen; here also ON sina [f.] 'withered grass of last year' (cf. ἔνος βλαστός, etc.). Some languages also use it in opposition to 'young': thus e.g. Celtic and Lithuanian, but also Gm., e.g. Go. sineigs 'πρεσβύτης', as well as Iranian, Av. hana- 'old, grey'; nevertheless, Skt. sána- is not used in this way. The latter meaning became dominant in Italic: Lat. senex, Osc. senateís 'senātūs'. In the Eastern languages, sénos* was replaced in this meaning by derivatives from the root of ►γέρων. Cf. Porzig 1954b: 343ff.

ἔνοσις [f.] 'shaking, quake' (Hes., E. [lyr.]). ◄?►

•DIAL Myc. e-ne-si-da-o-ne, with a difficult -e-.

•COMP As a first member in the epic compounds ἐνοσί-χθων, ἐννοσί-γαιος 'earth-shaker', epithets of Poseidon; in the same mg. ἐννοσίδᾶς (Pi.; with δα- in Δα-μάτηρ (see Δημήτηρ and von Wilamowitz 1931: 203); after this εἰνοσί-φυλλος 'shaking off foliage' (Hom.; ἐνν-, εἰν- with metrical lengthening; cf. Chantraine 1942: 100); cf. Knecht 1946: 26.

•DER ἐνοσιζεται· τρέμει, σείεται 'tremble, shake' (Cyr.).

•ETYM Uncertain. The explanation as *ἔν-ϝοθ-τις from ►ὠθέω (see also ►ἔθων, ►ἔθειρα) by Pott, followed by many scholars, meets with several objections: the sequence -θ-τ- should have given -στ- (cf. e.g. πύσ-τις beside πεῦ-σις); the o-grade as in ἄ-φρων: φρήν is not expected in a τι-derivative (and refuted by Mycenaean anyway); finally, a prefix ἐν- is not well explained ("bump against"?). If ἔνοσις is indeed a primary τι-derivative (cf. Holt 1941: 94f.), we would rather expect a formation like ἄρο-σις; however, ἔνοσις may have been derived from the compounds. Incorrectly, Janda 1999: 183-203 (followed by Stüber 2002: 88), who assumes a root *h_1enh_3- 'to move', with which he connects Skt. ánas, Lat. onus 'burden'). However, no such root is attested: the Lat. o-grade points to *h_3en- and the apparent lack of Brugmann in Skt. is explained by Lubotsky 1990: 132. Kloekhorst 2008: now connects anii̯e/a-[zi] 'work, produce, etc.' with these words as *h_3n-ie/o-. Finally, the root meaning of *h_3en- would rather be 'carry on a cart or an animal', which does not seem adequate for Greek; neither does it solve the problem posed by Mycenaean. Thus, the Greek words remain without etymology.

ἐνοχερώ ⇒ἐπισχερώ.

ἐνταῦθα •VAR ἐντεῦθεν. ⇒ἔνθα.

ἔντε ⇒ἔστε.

ἔντεα [n.pl.] 'equipment', especially 'defensive weapons' (Il.; cf. Trümpy 1950: 79ff.). ◄?►

•VAR ἔντος [sg.] (Archil. 6).

•COMP As a first member in ἐντεσι-μήστωρ (also ἐντεο-)· ἔμπειρος ὅπλων 'experienced with tools/weapons' (H.), further in ἐντεσι-εργούς [acc.pl.] 'working harnessed'(?), epithet of ἡμιόνους (Ω 277).

•ETYM Beside ἔντεα, there is ἐντύνω, -ομαι, ἐντύω, aor. ἐντῦναι 'to equip, prepare' (Il.). As it recalls ἀρτύ(ν)ω, it may have been built after this verb (Porzig 1942: 338). A basic noun *ἐντύς could be assumed. Connection with ►ἄνυμι, ἀνύω is impossible (see Frisk). Compare ►ἔναρα and ►αὐθέντης (on the psilosis, see Chantraine 1942: 186).

ἐντελέχεια [f.] philosophical notion created by Aristotle, 'completion, fullness' (opposed to δύναμις). ◄GR?►

•ETYM Compound from ἐντελὲς ἔχειν (cf. συνέχεια, νουνέχεια, etc.), hardly from the rare and doubtful ἐντελεχής; the resemblance to ἐνδελεχής, -εια has led to mistakes in the mss.

ἔντερα [n.pl.] 'intestines, bowels', also sing. 'gut' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1$entero- 'inside part'► •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἐντερο-κήλη 'breach of the intestines, hernia' (Dsc., Gal.; see Risch IF 59 (1949): 285, Strömberg 1944: 69).

•DER Diminutive ἐντερίδια (Com.); also ἐντέριον (M. Ant. 6, 13?; form and mg. uncertain); ἐντεριώνη 'inside of a fruit, heartwood of a plant or tree' (Hp., Thphr.; Strömberg 1937: 127f.); formation like ἰασιώνη, εἰρεσιώνη (Chantraine 1933: 208); ἐντερόνεια (Ar. Eq. 1185) mg. unclear; acc. to H. and Suid. = ἐντεριώνη 'innermost part'; adjectives ἐντερικός 'of the ἔ.' (Arist.), ἐντέρινος 'made from bowels' (sch.); denominative verb ἐντερεύω 'gut fishes' (Com.).

•ETYM Old word for intestines, identical with Arm. ənder-kʿ [pl.], -acʿ [gen.pl.] and with ON iðrar [pl.] < PGm. inþerōz*. Hübschmann 1897: 447f. suggested that the Arm. word was borrowed from Greek. The original adjectivial meaning is preserved in Skt. ántara-, Av. antara- 'being inside', with Osc. Entraí [dat.sg.] *'Interae', name of a goddess; in Latin, it was replaced by interior. IE *$h_1$enter-o is an adjective derived from an adverb *enter, preserved in Skt. antár 'inside', Lat. inter 'between'. Besides OHG untar, there is also Osc. anter 'under' = 'amongst' from the zero grade *h_1n̥ter. At the basis is the adverb *$h_1$en (see ►ἐν) with the comparative suffix -ter; see Benveniste 1948: 120f.

ἐντολή ⇒τέλλω 1.

ἔντος [n.]⇒ἔντεα.

ἐντός [adv.] and [prep.] 'inside' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1$en-tos '(from) inside'►

•DER ἔντοσθε(ν), rare ἔντοθεν (after ἔνδοθεν, ἔκτοθεν, etc.) '(from) inside' (epic Ion., Il.;) with ἐντόσθια and ἐντοσθίδια [n.pl.] 'intestines' (Hp., Arist.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 39), with the adjective ἐντόσθιος, -ίδιος 'of the intestines' (medic.); cf. below. Compar. ἐντότερος 'inner' (LXX).

•ETYM Identical with Lat. intus '(from) inside'; IE formation in -tos (e.g. Skt. i-táḥ 'from here', Lat. peni-tus '[from] inside') from the adverb $h_1$en; see ► ἔν. Cf. also ► ἐκτός. ἐντόσθια is not (as per Vendryes REGr. 23 (1910): 74) from *ἐντόστια (after ἔντοσθε) = Skt. antastya- [n.] 'intestines'; the word belongs to Skt. antár 'inside' (see ► ἔντερον) with regular replacement of -r by -s- in sandhi before the suffix -tya-.

ἐντροπαλίζομαι [v.] 'to turn around (often), turn back' (Il.). ◂IE trep-* 'turn'▸ •VAR Only ptc. -όμενος. In the same mg. also μετατροπαλίζεο [impv.med.] (Υ 190).
•ETYM Expressive formation from τροπέομαι, τρέπομαι, modelled on these like στροφαλίζω on στροφέω, στρέφω and κροταλίζω on κροτέω. The original starting point was a noun in -αλ(ο-); cf. κρόταλον, στροφάλιγξ. Chantraine 1942: 340. An adjective ἐντροπαλός 'shameful, afraid' is attested in MoGr.; cf. Schwyzer: 32. Differently, Bechtel 1914: 318f.

ἔντυβον [n.] 'andive' (Gp.). ◂LW Lat. (Sem.)▸ •VAR ἴτυβος (Edict. Diocl.); ἴντουβος (Ps. Dsc.).
•ETYM The Latin word seems to be a loan from Semitic (see André 1956: 170, Hiltbrunner 1958: 174-177, and Hiltbrunner Archiv für das Studium der neueren Sprachen 197 (1960): 22f.).

ἐντύνω •VAR ἐντύω. ⇒ἔντεα.

ἐντυπάς [adv.] uncertain, but probably 'wrapped in' (Ω 163 ὁ δ' ἐν μέσσοισι γεραιὸς || ἐντυπὰς ἐν χλαίνῃ κεκαλυμμένος; later A. R., Q. S.). ◂IE? tup-* 'squat'?▸
•DER ἐντυπαδία H; ἐντετύπασται 'is wrapped (in)' (BSA 16, 107 [Pisidia]).
•ETYM The meaning was already uncertain in antiquity, as appears from the explanations in Hesychius: ἐντυπάς· ἐντετυπωμένος. ἐγκεκαλυμμένος τὸ πρόσωπον τῷ ἱματίῳ, τὴν χεῖρα ἔχων πρὸ τοῦ προσώπου. ἢ κεκυφώς 'formed, molded. With the face wrapped in the mantle, holding the hand before the face. Or with the head down (in shame)'. Mostly (with the schol.) connected with ► τύπτω, τύπος and taken as 'well enveloped in', i.e. in such a way that the outline of the bodily members and the head could be distinguished. Taken by Kurschat apud Prellwitz as 'squatting', related to Lith. tūpti, tupė́ti 'id.'. On the adverbs in -ας, see Schwyzer: 631 and Chantraine 1942: 251.

ἐνῴδιον 'earring' (Att. inscr. since 399^a; Meisterhans 1900: 65 and 79), often dual (Schwyzer 1950: 47).
•ETYM Hypostatic diminutive formation from *ἐν-ου(σ)-ίδιον, with transfer of the ω from ὦτα, etc. (Wackernagel Phil. Anz. 15 (1885): 199ff.; see also Schulze 1892: 38[1]). Since Hellenistic times, it has instead been ἐνώτιον, fully adapted to ὦτα (inscr. Delos 279^a, etc.) with the new diminutive ἐνωτίδιον (inscr. Delos, Tanagra); further, ἐνωτάριον after ὠτάριον (H. s.v. βοτρύδια). Beside it exists a formation in -άδιον in ἐξωβάδια· ἐνώτια. Λάκωνες (H.), from *ἐξ-ωυh-άδια; cf. Schwyzer: 520). See ► οὖς.

ἐνῶπα [adv.] 'in the face, openly; against' with gen. (Ο 320, Orph. L., Epigr.). Univerbation of ἐν ὦπα, cf. ► ἔναντα and Schwyzer: 619. ◂IE $h_3$ek^w-* 'eye'▸ •VAR Only in κατενῶπα (κατ' ἐνῶπα, κατένωπα).

•DER ἐνωπα-δίως 'face to face, in the flesh' (ψ 94), -δίς (A. R. 4, 351), -δόν (Q. S. 2, 84) 'id.'.
•ETYM The form ἐνώπ-ιος 'in the face, visible' arose by hypostasis, mostly in its neuter form ἐνώπιον as an adverb and preposition (with gen.) 'in person, face to face' (Hell.), κατενώπιον 'id.' (Hell.). Additionally, there is ἐνώπια [n.pl.] 'front wall, outside wall, front of a house' (Hom.), also in sing. (Delos II^a); 'face' (A. Supp. 146 [lyr.]). The form ἐνωπῇ 'in the face, openly' (Ε 374), an isolated dative, is from ἐνωπή 'look, face' (only in ἐνωπῆς γλήνεα Nic. Th. 227; simplex ὠπή A. R.), if not a reformation of ἐνῶπα after the adverbial datives in -ῇ (σπουδῇ, etc.; Schwyzer: 622); cf. Chantraine 1942: 249. See ► ὤψ, and cf. ► πρόσωπον and ► μέτωπον.

ἐνώτιον ⇒ ἐνῴδιον.

ἐξ [adv., prev., prep.] 'out' (Il.). Details in Schwyzer 1950: 461ff. ◂IE $h_1$eg^h-s* 'out' (or h_1eḱ-s*)▸ •VAR Before consonant ἐκ (ἐγ, ἐχ), dialectally ἐς (Boeot. always ἐ(σ)ς).
•DER ἔξω [adv., prep. with gen.] 'outside' (cf. ἄνω, εἴσω); thence ἔξωθεν 'from outside' (IA), etc. Variants: ἐξεῖ· ἔξω (H.) with locative ending, Cret. εξοι, Delph. εξος; on ἔξουθα, ἔξεσα see Lejeune 1939: 329, 355. Cf. ► ἐχθός (Locr., Delphi) from ἐξ.
•ETYM Exact agreements with ἐξ are found in Italic and Celtic, e.g. Lat. ex (ē, ec-), MW ex-, OIr. ess-; further, in Baltic and Slavic forms with unclear i-, e.g. Lith. iš, iž, OCS is, iz; doubtfully, Arm. i, y- 'out, from' (beside i, y- 'in'). Because of the aspirates in ἔσχατος, ἐχθός (= ἐκτός), etc., one has posited an IE pre-form $h_1$eg^h-s* instead of h_1eḱ-s*. This assumption is unnecessary for ► ἐχθός, but seems unavoidable for ► ἔσχατος. Cf. also ► ἐχθρός.

ἕξ [num.] 'six'. ◂IE sueḱs* 'six'▸ •DIAL Myc. we-pe-za /^{h}wekspeza/, see Viredaz SMEA 23 (1982): 310-313; Dor., etc. ϝέξ.
•COMP As a first member, beside rare ἑξ-, ἑκ-, usually ἑξα- (ἑξά-μετρος, ἑξα-κόσιοι, etc.) after ἑπτα-, τετρα-; ἑξή-κοντα after πεντή-κοντα; on second members -κοντα and -κόσιοι see on ► διᾱκόσιοι.
•DER ἑξίτης (scil. βόλος) 'throw of six in the game of dice' (Epigr., Poll.); ἑξᾶς, -ᾶντος [m.] (Sicil.) formed after Lat. sextans, together with ἑξάντιον (Epich.). Ordinal ἕκτος, Cret. ϝέκτος; adverb ἑξάκις (after πολλάκις, etc.); collective ἑξάς [f.] 'number of six' (Ph.) with ἑξαδικός.
•ETYM The IE numeral 'six' has two variants: Lat. sex, Germ., e.g. Go. saihs, Lith. šeš-i, OCS šes-tь, Alb. gjash-të, ToA ṣäk seem to go back to IE seḱs*. On the other hand, Gr. ϝέξ, Arm. vecʿ, Celt., e.g. MW chwech, Skt. ṣáṣ-, Av. xšuuaš point to sueḱs*. However, although some details remain unclear, the form with -u̯- is certainly original, while the loss of -u̯- may have been triggered by 'seven', septm*. Gr. ἕξ (Dor. ϝέξ) continues sueḱs* with loss of the digamma or the aspiration; on Boeot. ἕξ (beside ϝικαστῆ), see Schwyzer: 226.
The ordinal ἕκτος, ϝέκτος is probably from su̯eḱ-to-s*, as su̯eḱs-to-s* would give -χθ-. An original sequence -ḱt-* also seems necessary for certain Germanic forms, OHG sehto (beside sehsto), ON sétti. Other forms, however, show -s-: Lat. sextus, Go. saihsta, ToA ṣkäṣt. Yet other forms are ambiguous: Skt. ṣaṣṭhá-, Lith. šẽštas, OCS šestь; note Gaul. suexos. On unclear ξέστριξ κριθή· ἡ ἐξαστιχος. Κνίδιοι H., see Schwyzer: 269, 590. See Lubotsky 2000b on the IIr. and IE reconstruction.

ἔξαιτος ⇒αἴνυμαι.

ἐξαίφνης ⇒ἐξαπίνης.

ἔξαλος [adj.] 'out of the sea, far from the sea' (λ 134 = ψ 281), weakly attested v.l. for ἐξ ἁλός; also Emp. 117 (ἰχθύς; from ἐξάλλομαι?) and Hell. ◂GR▸ •ETYM Hypostasis of ἐξ ἁλός. Hardly correctly, Leumann 1950: 55[24].

ἐξάντης ⇒ἄντα.

ἐξαπίνης [adv.] 'suddenly' (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Dor. -ᾶς; Hell. ἐξάπινᾰ (after the adverbs in -ᾰ).
•DER ἐξαπιναῖος, together with the adverb -αίως 'id.' (Hp., Th.).
•ETYM Formation like ἐξαίφνης. These words clearly have something to do with ►ἄφαρ, ►ἄφνω: Fur.: 158, etc. recognized that the whole group is Pre-Greek (π/φ). The variants -ιφ-/-πι- show that the i is part of the consonant, so we may assume a PG phoneme *p^y for these forms (Pre-Greek: B 1). For the same Pre-Greek phenomenon, cf. ►κνωπεύς / ►κινώπετον, ►πινυτός; also, ►ἀκραιφνής / ►ἀκραπνής. See further ►αἶψα, ►αἰπύς.

ἔξαστις, -ιος [f.] 'hem of a fabric' (Samos IV^a), plur. 'threads coming out of a fabric', especially 'selvage of linen' (medic.). ◂IE? $h_2$et-ti- 'stitching'▸ •VAR Also ἔξεστις (Gal.).
•ETYM Derived by Schmidt 1895: 89[1] from *ἔξ-αν-στ-ις, a verbal noun from ἐξανίστημι, for which he assumed apocope and loss of the nasal like in Epid. ἀ-στάς = ἀν(α)-στάς. However, apocope is unmotivated in a Ionic word, and the ending -ις is unexpected.
Boisacq considered connection with ►ἄττομαι 'to set the warp in the loom', ἄσμα 'warp', etc. Given the new etymological proposal for ►ἄττομαι, this is quite attractive, as ἔξαστις may simply mean 'what sticks out'.

ἐξαυστήρ ⇒αὔω 2.

ἐξαυτῆς [adv.] 'immediately' (Hell.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Probably from ἐξ αὐτῆς τῆς ὁδου; see Wackernagel 1916: 41[4].

ἐξεράω ⇒ἀπ-εράω.

ἐξετάζω ⇒ἐτάζω.

ἑξῆς [adv.] 'in a row, one after the other' (Od., Att.). ◂GR▸ •COMP ἐφ-εξῆς, Ion. ἐπ- ~ 'id.', καθ-εξῆς 'id.' (Ev. Luc. 1, 3, Plu., Ael.).
•DER Also ἑξείης (Hom.), ἐφ-, καθ-εξείης (Orph., Opp.); ἑξαν (Dor., accentuation?) 'id.'.
•ETYM The adverbial genitive ἑξῆς must derive from a nominal formation of ἔχεσθαι 'connect, follow', but the details are uncertain. Schulze 1892: 293 detects in ἑξῆς and ἑξαν forms of a noun *ἑξᾰ with the same inflexion as μίᾰ, μιᾶς, μίᾰν; Bechtel 1914 s.v. starts from an adjective *ἑξός. Solmsen 1909: 240[1]) supposes that ἑξῆς was contracted from earlier ἑξείης (metrical lengthening for *ἑξέης?); however, this does not explain Dor. ἑξαν. ἑξε(ί)ης is from an adjective *ἑξε(ι)ος (cf. ἑξεῖα· τα ἑξῆς H.); is this in turn from ἕξις? The synonymous ἐπεχές (Arg.), ἐπεχεῖ (Delph.), and ποτεχεῖ (Heracl.) are from ἐπ-, ποτ-έχεσθαι. See ►ἔχω.

εξιστων [adj.] 'fringed'? Adjunct of χιτωνίσκον [acc.], together with κτενωτόν (IG 2^2, 1514: 30, 1516: 9 [middle IV^a], in lists of clothes given to Artemis, containing several technical words). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Without a doubt for ἐξ ἱστῶν 'consisting of six woven pieces'; on the matter, see Preisigke 1925 s.v. ἱστός.

ἐξονομακλήδην [adv.] 'by name' (Hom.). ◂IE ḱlh$_1$- 'call'▸ •ETYM Also ἐκ δ' ὀνομακλήδην, a hypostasis of the expression ὄνομα καλεῖν (τινα) 'to call (sbd.) by name' with κλήδην (I 11) and ἐξ as in ἐξονομαίνω (-άζω). See ►καλέω.

ἐξουλή [f.] 'ejectment, dispossession' (Att.), almost only in ἐξουλῆς δίκη; rarely ἐξουλήν and -άς. ◂IE uel-(H)- 'press together'▸ •ETYM Juridical term, from *ἐκ-ϝολνᾱ from *ἐκ-ϝελνέω 'push out' (see ►εἰλέω 1); cf. also on ἀλής and ►οὐλαμός. On the oxytonesis, see Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 178f.

ἔξω ⇒ἐξ.

ἐξωφάκαι [pl.] 'a kind of outward Haemorrhoid knots, resembling lentil fruits' (Cyran.). ◂EUR?▸ •ETYM Related to ►φακός 'lentil'; cf. ►ἀφάκη.

ἔοικα [v.] 'to resemble' (Il.); see Chantraine 1942: 424f., 479f., Schwyzer: 769, 773, 541. ◂IE? ueik- 'be fitting'?▸ •VAR Epic du. ἔϊκτον, Att. pl. ἐοίκαμεν, pret.sg. ἐῴκειν, epic du. ἐΐκτην, Att. pl. ἐῴκεσαν, epic med. ἔϊκτο, ἤϊκτο, ptc. εἰκώς (Φ 254, Att., beside ἐοικώς), fem. ἐϊκυῖα, ntr. εἰκός; 1sg. οἶκα, ptc. οἰκώς (Hdt.).
•COMP Also with prefix ἐπ-, ἀπ-έοικα, etc.
•DER Innovation factitive ►εἰκάζω and ἐΐσκω (Il., only present stem, ipf. ἴσκε(ν), ptc. ἴσκοντ-) 'to equate, compare, suppose'.
•ETYM The old intransitive perfect ἔοικα (whence by hyphaeresis οἶκα, etc.; differently, Schwyzer: 766f.) continues *ϝέ-ϝοικ-α, du. *ϝέ-ϝικ-τον, plpf. *(ἐ-)ϝε-ϝοίκ-ει (> ἐῴκει), which is shown by the meter (Chantraine 1942: 129). Innovations were *ϝε-ϝίκ-σκ-ω (> ἐΐσκω), *ϝε-ϝικ-άζω > ἐϊκάζω, ►εἰκάζω. A form *ϝίκ-σκ-ω without reduplication is supposed in ἴσκε(ν), ἴσκοντ' (e.g. Schwyzer: 708; Chantraine 1933: 317). No reduplication in ►εἰκών; for εἰκώς, however, a reconstruction *ϝε-ϝικ-ϝώς instead of *ϝεικ- is also possible. On εἴκελος, see ►ἴκελος; on ►ἐπιεικής see s.v. There are no certain cognates outside Greek. The comparison with the Baltic root of Lith. į-vỹkti 'to occur, happen, get real', pa-véikslas 'example', etc. is doubtful.

ἐόλει [v.3sg.] 'oppressed' (Pi. P. 4, 233, conj. Boeckh). ◂IE uel- 'press together'▸

•DER Hence ἐόλητο 'be surrounded, oppressed' (A. R.).
•ETYM See ►εἰλέω 1.

ἔορ [f.] · θυγάτηρ, ἀνεψιός 'daughter, cousin' (H.). ◄IE suesor-* 'sister'► •VAR ἔορες· προσήκοντες, συγγενεῖς 'kinsmen, relatives' (H.).
•ETYM Old relic of the IE word for 'sister', seen in Skt. svásar-, Lat. soror, Germ., e.g. Go. swistar, all from IE suésor-*. The Greek forms must come from a psilotic dialect; ἔορ seems to be a vocative. In Greek, the word was replaced by ἀδελφή, like φράτηρ by ἀδελφός.

ἔοργα ⇒ἔρδω.

ἐόργη [f.] 'τορύνη, stirrer, ladle'. ◄IE uerǵ-* 'work'►
•DER Denominative ἐοργῆσαι· τορυνῆσαι 'to stir' and ἐοργίζεται· τορυνᾶται (Poll., H., Eust.). Further εὐέργη, εὐεργέτις (Poll., H., EM). Semantically and formally close is ὀργάζειν 'to weaken, knead, tan' (Att.), cf. εὐεργής of ἄρτος 'well-kneaded loaf' in Andromachos (apud Gal. 14, 38, 9).
•ETYM The formation ἐόργη (accent for *ἐοργή like δείλη, δέρη? See below), like ἐδ-ωδ-ή, etc., may derive from reduplicated *ϝε-ϝοργ-η. The variants εὐέργη, -έτις seem to be folk-etymological reshapings (cf. εὐεργής above). The form ὀργάζω replaced original ὀργάω (Schwyzer: 718). The words belong to ►ἔργον, ►ἔρδω; for the meaning, cf. HG (Teig) wirken = 'knead'.

ἑορτή [f.] 'feast, religious festival' (Od.). ◄?►
•DIAL Ion. ὁρτή (with hyphaeresis).
•COMP As a second member in φιλ-έορτος (Ar. [lyr.]), etc.
•DER Adjectives ἑορταῖος 'ptng. to the festival' (D. H.), ἑορτώδης 'festive' (J., Ph.) and denominative ἑορτάζω, ὁρτάζω 'celebrate a festival' (IA) together with ἑόρτασις (Pl.), -ιμος (J.), ἑόρτασμα (LXX), ἑορταστής (Poll., Max. Tyr.), ἑορταστικός 'appropriate for a festival' (Pl. Lg. 829b, etc.).
•ETYM Traditionally analysed as a verbal noun in -τή (e.g. *ϝε-ϝορ-τή), but without further cognates. Also taken as related to ►ἔροτις, ►ἔρανος; not, however, to ►ἦρα.

ἑός ⇒ἕ, ἑ.

ἐπαινή [adj.] adjunct of Persephone (Hom.), late also of other goddesses (Hecate, Demeter). ◄?► •ETYM Perhaps arisen by false split (in I 457?) from ἐπ' αἰνὴ Π. 'and also the terrible P.'. See Buttmann 1825:2: 101, Leumann 1950: 72, and Schwyzer: 102.

ἐπᾱλής [adj.] epithet of λέσχη (Hes. Op. 493 ἐπαλέα λέσχην). ◄?► •ETYM Connected with ►ἀλέα 'heat of the sun', or (alternatively) with ►ἁλής as 'pressed together'. Chantraine rejects the latter interpretation for a number of reasons: ἁλής is said of persons or things, not of places; the prefix ἐπ- is difficult to understand; and a reading ἐπ' makes no sense. However, this does not mean that the other interpretation is correct. See Bechtel 1914: 129.

ἔπαλπνος [adj.] 'pleasant' vel sim. (Pi. P. 8, 84, from νόστος). ◄?►

•ETYM One hypothesis derives it from ►ἀρπαλέος < *ἀλπαλέος, and connects it with *ἄλπιστος (see ►ἄλπνιστος), which would derive from an r/n-stem *ἄλπαρ, gen. ἄλπνος. The word would then be a bahuvrīhi with adverbial prefix; this is improbable.

ἐπάντης, -ες [adj.] 'steep' (Th. 7, 79). ◄GR► •ETYM Like ἀν-, κατ-άντης, etc., from a noun ἀντ- 'front', seen in ►ἄντα, ►ἀντί, with adjectivial s-stem inflexion; thus, it properly means 'facing frontally, head-on'.

ἐπαρετέω [v.] 'to take in service, in use' (PTeb. 5, 182; 252; IIa; κτήνη, πλοῖα, of officials, etc.). ◄GR► •ETYM From ἀρετή in the sense of 'service', with ἐπί as in ἐπι-χειρ-έω, ἐπι-θυμ-έω, etc.

Ἐπάριτοι [pl.] name of the soldiers of the Arcadian League (X., Ephor.), originally = ἐπίλεκτοι 'those selected' (D. S. 15, 62). ◄IE h₂ri-* 'count'► •ETYM Compare the PNs Πεδ-άριτος (Arc., Lac.), Ἐπ-ήριτος (ω 306), Μετ-ήριτος (Ion.), and further the adj. ►νήριτος from n̥-h₂ri-* 'uncoountable, countless', from a verbal root h₂ri-* 'count', seen in ἀρι-θμός, and prefixed with ἐπι- as in ἐπι-λέγειν 'to select'. See Leumann 1950: 247, Schwyzer: 502.

ἐπασσύτεροι [pl.] 'one after the other, as a group' (epic since Il.). ◄IE ki-eu-* 'set in motion'► •VAR Also sing. -ος.
•COMP As a first member in ἐπασσυτερο-τριβής 'following one another quickly' (A. Ch. 426 [lyr.]).
•ETYM Uncertain. Some (see Frisk) derived it from an adverb *ἐπ-αν-(σ)σύ of *ἐπ-αν(α)-σσεύομαι 'hurry after one another', comparing ἀνά-σσυτος 'rising' (Hp.), ἐπί-σσυτος 'urging' (A., E.), and παν-συ-δίῃ 'full of impulse'; Ehrlich RhM N.F. 63 (1908): 109 proposed haplological shortening from ἐπασσυ[τό]-τερος. Acc. to Risch 1937: 95 and Seiler 1950" 44, however, it is a contamination of *ἀγχύτερος and ἀσσοτέρω; thus also Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 387, who asserts that it is a contamination of ἀσσοτέρω and ἐγγύτερος.

ἐπαυρίσκω [v.] 'to touch, participate, enjoy' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Mostly med. -ομαι; ἐπαυρεῖ (H. Op. 419), aor. ἐπαυρεῖν, -έσθαι, fut. ἐπαυρήσομαι.
•DER ἐπαύρεσις 'pleasure, gain' (Hdt., Democr., Th.).
•ETYM No etymology. Schwyzer: 709[3] proposes *ἐπ-ᾱ-ϝρ-, related to ►εὑρίσκω. A form with another prefix occurs in ἀπαυρίσκομαι 'derive nourishment' (Hp. Nat. Puer. 26).

ἔπαφος 2 [adj.] adjunct of ἄμπελος; meaning unknown (PAvrom. 1 A 26, 1 B 27; Ia). ◄?►
•VAR Also -ον.
•ETYM Perhaps 'with ἀφή, i.e. grip', 'supported, bound up' (Moulton JHS 35 (1915): 55).

ἐπεί [conj.] 'as, when, because' (Il.). ◁IE *$h_1$ei 'when'▷ •VAR Also with added particles, e.g. ἐπεί τε (epic Ion.), ἐπεὶ δή, ἐπειδή (Il.), epic also ἐπεὶ ἤ (ἐπειή); with ἄν: ἐπεὶ ἄν, ἐπεάν (Ion.), ἐπήν (IA), ἐπάν (Hell.); ἐπεὶ δ' ἄν, ἐπειδᾶν (Att.).
•ETYM From ἐπ-εί (see ►εἰ); probably originally a demonstrative, like εἶτα, ἔπ-ειτα. Details in Schwyzer 1950: 658ff.; also, Chantraine 1953: 258f.

ἐπείγω [v.] 'to press, urge; hurry' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Also med.; impf. ἔπειγον (Od.), ἤπειγον (Pi., S.); the non-presentic forms are a minority: aor. ἤπειξα (Hp. Ep. 17), pass. ἠπείχθην (Th., Pl.), fut. ἐπείξομαι (A.), perf. med. ἤπειγμαι (J.). Hdn. Gr. 2, 436 notes ἐποίγω as Aeol.
•COMP Also with prefix, notably κατ-επείγω (Att.).
•DER ἔπειξις 'pressure, hurry' (J., Plu.) with ἐπείξιμος 'urgent' (POxy. 531, 9, II^{p}); ἐπείκτης 'who urges, urgent' with ἐπεικτικός 'urgent' (EM, Sch.); ἐπειγωλή 'hurry' (EM); Ἐπειγεύς PN (Π 571).
•ETYM Uncertain. Acc. to Brugmann IF 29 (1911-1912): 238ff., it is related to οἴγνυμι 'open' (from *ϝο-(ε)ιγ-?, Lesb. ὀείγην).

ἔπειτα •VAR ἔπειτε(ν). ⇒εἶτα.

ἐπενήνοθε ⇒ἐνθεῖν.

ἐπενπέτω [v.impv.] uncertain, perhaps 'put upon'? Elis, see Schwyzer: 409. ◁?▷
•VAR ἐπένποι [opt.].
•ETYM Unknown. Cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 864.

ἔπερθα [adv.] 'above' (Alc.). ◁IE *$h_1$epi 'upon'▷ •VAR κατ-έπερθεν.
•ETYM From ►ἐπί, modelled on ►ἔνερθε(ν), -θα, ὕπερθε(ν), -θα. Cf. also ἐπέρτερα· μείζω καὶ ὑψηλότερα 'more and higher', which is analyzed by Mastrelli Stud. ital. fil. class. 27-28 (1956): 272ff. as ἐπερ-τερα, but which may also be a mistake for ὑπέρ-τερα (DELG).

ἔπερος [m.] 'ram' (Aeol., Asia Minor, Schwyzer: 644, 15). ◁IE? *ueru-os- 'wool'▷ •ETYM Not related to κάπρος, Lat. aper, etc. (as per Meillet Rev. ét. slav. 5 (1925): 9). Neither, as per Mastrelli Stud. ital. fil. class. 27 (1956): 1ff., relatd to ἐπέρτερα· μείζω, καὶ ὑψηλότερα 'more and higher' (H.), Alb. epërë 'what is up high'. DELG translates 'who has wool on him', and connects it with ►εἶρος.

ἐπεσβόλος [adj.] 'throwing words, reviling' (B 275, A. R., AP). ◁IE *uek^w-os- 'word'▷ •DER also ἐπεσβολίη 'slander' (δ 159) and ἐπεσβολέω 'revile' (Lyc., Max.).
•ETYM Compound of ἔπος and βάλλειν, with ε-vocalism of the s-stem and o-vocalism of the second member (Schwyzer: 440 and 449).

ἐπέτοσσε [v.aor.] = 'ἐπέτυχε, hit, reached'. ◁?▷ •VAR ἐπιτόσσαις [ptc.sg.m.] (Pi. P. 4, 25; 10, 33).
•ETYM Unexplained; cf. Schwyzer: 755[2].

ἔπεφνον ⇒θείνω.

ἐπήβολος [adj.] 'who gets something, participates, has possession of' (Od.), also 'attainable' (A. R.). ◁IE *g^welh_1- 'throw'?▷ •VAR επαβολα [f.] 'share' (Gortyn), ἐπηβολή· μέρος 'share' (H.).
•DER Cf. ἐπηβολία· συνηβολία 'occurrence' (EM 357,29). κατηβολή· τὸ ἐπιβάλλον 'which is put upon' (E. Fr. 614, 750).
•ETYM Verbal nouns from ἐπι-, κατα-βάλλω, with -η- after ἐπ-, κατ-ήκοος, ἐπ-ημοιβός, etc. (lengthening in compounds). See Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 53 (1901): 103.

ἐπηγκενίδες [f.pl.] 'part of a ship' (ε 253). ◁IE *$h_2$enk- 'bend'▷ •ETYM Acc. to Doederlein (see Bechtel 1914 s.v.), "what rests on the ἀγκόνες 'ribs of a ship'?", i.e. 'the planks', thus a noun in -ίδ-ες with compositional lengthening, for which σανίδες has been compared (cf. ἄγκοιναι). The factual meaning remains unclear.

ἐπηετανός [adj.] probably 'sufficient, rich, everlasting' (Od.). ◁IE? *uet-os- 'year'▷ •VAR ἐπητανός h. Merc. 113, Hes. Op. 607.
•ETYM Properly 'lasting the whole year' (like ἐπ-έτ-ειος, ἐπ-ετ-ήσιος), with -η- as in ►ἐπήβολος, etc., and suffixal -ανος as in ►σητάνιος. It is unnecessary to suppose haplology from *-ϝετι-τανος or *-ϝετο-τανος. Acc. to Benveniste 1935: 45, an old suffixal interchange with ►ἔταλον, s.v.

ἐπηλυγάζομαι •VAR ἐπῆλυξ. ⇒ἠλύγη.

ἔπηλυς ⇒ἐλεύσομαι.

ἐπήρεια [f.] 'bad treatment, offence, threat' (Att.). ◁?▷
•DER ἐπηρεάζω 'to treat presumptuously, revile, threat' (Hdt., Att., Arc.), also -ει- in IG 5(2), 6: 46 (Tegea [IV^{a}]) ἐπηρεασμός (Arist.), -αστής (Sm., pap.), -αστικός (Com. Adesp. 202, etc.).
•ETYM Abstract of an adjective *ἐπ-ηρής, for which relationship with ►ἀρειή, ►ἀρή is suggested. However, if the form from Tegea is genuine Arcadian, this connection is impossible because it presupposes PGr. *-ēr-, not *-ār-. Acc. to Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 57, it belongs to *ἔρος, which he finds in ►ἐρεσχηλέω. Blanc RPh. 71 (1997): 159 thinks the basic meaning is 'to look for problems' and connects it with ►ἐρέθω, ἐρεθίζω, but gives no further details.

ἐπήρετμος ⇒ἐρέσσω.

ἐπητής, -οῦ [adj.] 'sedate, behaving well, benevolent' vel sim. (ν 332, σ 128; A. R. 2, 987; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 32[2]). ◁IE? *sep- 'care, honour'▷ •VAR ἐπητέες [f.pl.].
•DER ἐπητύς [f.] (φ 306) 'good behaviour, benevolence'.
•ETYM Uncertain. Acc. to Wackernagel 1916: 42[2], it is from ►ἕπω in the meaning of Skt. sápati 'care, honor', with η-enlargenent as in ἐδ-η-τύς, as well as psilosis. Teffeteller Dale Glotta 60 (1982): 207-214 suggests that the word is derived from ἔπος and ἐπετύς 'conversation, good at speaking'.

ἐπήτριμοι [adj.] 'near one another, in heaps' vel sim. (Il., A. R., only plur.; in Q. S. and Opp. sing. 'prominent, powerful'). ◂?▸ •ETYM Connected with ἤτριον 'warp' by the ancients, which is further explained by Bechtel 1914 s.v. Doubts to this are expressed by Arbenz 1933: 25f. Comparable meaning in ►ἐπασσύτεροι.

ἔπι [adv.] 'on it, at it' (Il.). ◂IE $h_1$epi 'on'▸ •VAR ἐπί [prep.] 'on, at, by, at the same time, because' with gen., dat. and acc.
•DIAL Myc. e-pi.
•ETYM IE adverb $h_1$épi: Skt. ápi, Av. aipi, OP apiy 'also, at it; by, in', Arm. ew 'also, and'. Ablauting ὄπι- occurs in ►ὄπιθεν, also dialectal. *πι- (Lith. -pi) is supposed in ►πιέζω and ►πτυχή, but this seems improbable, as a zero grade $h_1$pi would also have given ἐπι in Greek. On the different forms, see the extensive discussion by Hamp MSS 40 (1981): 39-60.

Ἐπίασσα [f.] epithet of Demeter (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Old ptc.with zero grade = ἐπ-ιοῦσα (like ἔασσα = (ἐ)οῦσα, ἔκασσα = ἑκοῦσα) from the root $h_1$ei- 'go', parallel to Skt. yatī́ 'going' < IE h_1i-n̥t-ih$_2$ beside h_1i-ont- in ἰόντος, etc. This etymology is doubtful, as it finds no support on the semantic side.

ἔπιβδᾰ [f.] 'the day after the festival' (Pi. P. 4, 140); mostly in plur. ἔπιβδαι or ἐπίβδαι (Cratin. 323, Aristid., EM 357, 54); in H. ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐπι<βι>βάζεσθαι ταῖς ἑορταῖς οὐκ οὔσαις ἐξ αὐτῶν (meaning unclear to me). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •ETYM Properly 'following the trace', with assimilated zero grade of the word for 'foot' (see ►πούς, as well as ►πεδά), like in Skt. upa-bd-á- 'trampling', Av. fra-bd-a- 'front foot'. The formation of ἔπιβδα is not clear: Schwyzer: 475 pleads for a suffix -i̯α- with lost yod; Solmsen 1909: 269 thinks that ἔπιβδᾰ is a secondary shortening for *ἐπί-βδ-ᾱ.

ἐπιεικής [adj.] 'proper, fitting, suitable; solid' (Il.). ◂IE ueik-* 'be fitting'?▸ •DER also ἐπιείκεια 'equity, reasonableness' (IA) and ἐπιεικεύομαι (LXX 2 Es. 9, 8 [v.l.], H.).
•ETYM Opposite ἀ-εικής (see ►ἀϊκής), related to ἔπέοικα; full grade as in ►εἰκών. Beside this also exists ἐπι-είκελος 'comparable' (Hom., Hes.) after εἴκελος; cf. Strömberg 1946: 91 and Schwyzer 1950: 466.

ἐπιείκτος [adj.] mostly with negation, οὐκ ἐπιείκτον (μένος, σθένος, πένθος) = 'invincible, unindulgent' (Hom.); also = ἐπιεικής 'fitting, suitable' (θ 307, late). ◂IE ueik-* 'give way'▸ •ETYM As there is no compounded verb *ἐπι-(ϝ)είκω 'yield', Schulze 1892: 495[1] connected the adjective with Lat. vincō 'conquer', Go. weihan, OIr. fichim 'battle', for which he compared EM 638, 39: οὐκ ἐπιείκτον = οὐ νικώμενον. However, there is ►εἴκω (DELG).

ἐπι-είσομαι →εἴσομαι 1.

ἐπιζαρέω [v.] 'to rush upon, press on' (E. Ph. 45, Rh. 441 [codd. here -ζάτει]), Arcadian acc. to Eust. 909, 28. ◂?▸

•ETYM No convincing etymology.

ἐπιζάφελος [adj.] 'vehement, violent', of fury (χόλος I 525). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also adverbial -ῶς (χαλεπαίνειν, μενεαίνειν, ἐρεείνειν I 516, ζ 330, h. Merc. 487; on the shift of accent Schwyzer 618), -ον (κοτέουσα A. R. 4, 1672).
•DER With archaising suppression of the prefix ζάφελος (Nic. Al. 556, EM), ζαφελές, -ῶς (H.), -ής (Suid.).
•ETYM Expressive word without etymology. ζα- is probably the Aeolic form of δια-; it is further unclear. Not better, Strömberg 1946: 89. Fur.: 176 suggests connection with ►ζάψ 'surf', and takes it as Pre-Greek.

ἐπιήρανος 1 'welcome'. →ἐπίηρος.

ἐπιήρανος 2 'ruling, governing'. →ἤρανος.

ἐπίηρος [adj.] 'graceful, pleasant' (Emp., Epich., etc.).
•VAR ἐπίηρον [n.sg.] Marc. Sid. (Glotta 19, 176); otherwise ἐπίηρα [n.pl.].
•DER Compar. ἐπιηρέστερος; as an adverb = χάριν (Antim. 87, etc.), ἐπίηρα δέχθαι (AP 13, 22), φέρεσθαι (A. R. 4, 375), φέροντα (S. OT 1094 [lyr.]).
•ETYM From ἐπὶ ἦρα φέρων (A 572, etc.) by univerbation; thence ►ἐπιήρανος 1 'charming, welcome' (τ 343). See Sommer 1948: 139 with litt. See further ►ἦρα.

ἐπίθυμβρον →θύμβρα.

ἐπικάρσιος [adj.] 'transverse, crosswise, at a right angle' (ι 70, of ships, Hdt., Plb., etc.). ◂IE (s)ker-* 'cut'▸ •ETYM Also occurs as ἐγκάρσιος (Th.), after ἐναντίος? Secondary simplex κάρσιον· πλάγιον 'athwart, sideways' (H.), -ίως Suid. Ultimately related to κείρειν, ἐπικείρειν 'cut', but unclear in detail. Strömberg 1946: 92 starts from a verbal adjective ἐπίκαρτος, whence ἐπικάρσιος like ἀμβρόσιος from ἄμβροτος (see also on διπλάσιος). Derivation from the root IE kers- (in κορσόν· κορμόν H., ἀ-κερσε-κόμης; see ►κόρση) seems less likely. The overall resemblance with Lith. skeȓsas 'transverse', OPr. kirscha 'across', Ru. čérez 'through, across' can be explained as parallel formations of the root (s)ker- 'cut'. Not from *ἐπὶ καρσί, a plur. of ἐπὶ κάρ (Π 392) 'on its head', as supposed by Bechtel 1914 s.v. See ►κείρω.

ἐπίκερας [n.] plant name = τῆλις, 'Trigonella' (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 99). ◂IE ḱerh$_2$s-* 'horn'▸ •ETYM Called 'horn-like' or 'with horn', after its long sickle-shaped shell. See Strömberg 1944: 33. On the retained ending -ας, cf. πάγκρεας (s.v. ►κρέας) and ►ἐρυσίπελας.

ἐπικοκκάστρια [f.] adjunct of ἠχώ, 'mimicking, reverberating' vel sim. (Ar. Th. 1059). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR ἐπικοκκαστής (uncertain conj. in Timo 43).
•ETYM Formation in -τριᾰ (frequent in the language of comedy; Chantraine 1933: 106) as if from *ἐπικοκκάζω (Ar. Byz. apud Eust. 1761, 26); onomatopoeic.

ἐπικόκκουρος [m.] · ὁ παρατηρητὴς ἐν σταδίῳ παρὰ Λάκωσιν 'spectator at the racecourse (Lacon.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. There seems no basis for Latte's "an ἐπικομματωρός, scl. pugilatus legitimi custos?".

ἐπίκουρος [adj., m.] 'helper', 'support; helping, protecting'; plur. 'auxiliary troops' (Il.). ◄IE *kr̥s- 'walk'► •DER ἐπικουρικός 'consisting of auxiliary troops' (Th., Pl.), ἐπικούριος 'coming to help' (Paus.), ἐπικουρία, -ίη 'help, support' (IA), denominative ἐπικουρέω [v.] 'to come to help, support' (E 614; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 98f.) with ἐπικούρησις, -ημα, -ητικός.
•ETYM The word stands completely isolated within Greek. Probably for *ἐπίκορσος, from a lost verb equivalent to Lat. currō 'walk, run' (< *kr̥s-e/o-). Cf. the related Celtic word for 'car', OIr. carr, MW carros (whence Lat. carrus, Arm. kaṙ-k' [pl.] 'wagon'; from Galatic). Further perhaps related is σάρσαι· ἅμαξαι as Illyrian (Lagercrantz IF 25 (1909): 367); doubtfully, MHG hurren 'move quickly'.

ἐπιλαΐς, -ίδος ⇒ὑπολαΐς and λᾶας.

ἐπιμήδιον [n.] a plant (Dsc., Gal.). ◄?►
•ETYM Named after the plant ► μήδιον. The parasitic nature of the plant may also have given rise to the name; cf. synonymous ► ἀμαμηλίς and ► ὁμομηλίς.

ἐπιμηλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'medlar, mespilus germanica' (Dsc., Gal.).
•ETYM Derived from μῆλον, because of the similarity with the apple tree (Strömberg 1944: 32f.). See ► μῆλον, ► ἐπιμήδιον.

ἐπίνητρον ⇒νέω.

ἐπίξενος 1 'foreigner'. ⇒ξένος.

ἐπίξενος 2 [m.] · ἐπιχθόνιος 'upon the earth' (H.). ◄IE *$d^h\acute{g}^h$em- 'earth'?► •ETYM Unclear. Acc. to Hoffmann 1921: 80, it is from χθών with a special development; cf. Schwyzer: 326. Because of ξενῶνες· οἱ ἀνδρῶνες ὑπὸ Φρυγῶν 'men's appartments (Phrygian)' (H.), Pisani AnFilCl 6 (1953-54): 213 considered it to be Phrygian, which is rejected by DELG.

ἐπίξηνον [n.] 'chopping block, hangman's block' (A., Ar., Eust., H.). ◄IE? *k̑es- (*kses-) 'cut, split'► •DER Cf. ξηνός = 'κορμός, trunk' (Suid.) from ► ξέω 'carve, polish'.
•ETYM ἐπίξηνον is rather from ► ξαίνω, modelled on ἐπικόπανον 'chopping-block' (Hell.), than from ἐπι-ξέω.

ἐπίορκος, -ον [adj.] 'perjurious' (T 264), later msc. 'perjurer' (Hes., Gortyn, etc.). ◄GR► •VAR In Hom. only in ἐπίορκον ὀμόσσαι 'to swear a false oath'.
•DER ἐπιορκέω [v.] 'to break an oath, perjure' (since T 188), together with ἐπιορκία 'perjury' (D., X.), ἐπιορκοσύνη 'id.' (AP).

•ETYM As the verb ἐπιορκέω is frequent, it is obvious to consider the much rarer ἐπίορκος 'breaking the oath' as a back-formation from the verb (thus Strömberg 1946: 86ff.). The form ἐπιορκέω derives directly from ὅρκος, with ἐπι- like ἐπιθυμέω from θυμός, ἐπιχειρέω from χείρ, etc.; ἐπιορκέω then properly means 'act against the oath' (opposite εὐορκέω 'keep the oath' from εὔορκος [since Hes.]); on the preservation of the -ι-, see Fraenkel 1910: 237. Differently, Leumann 1950: 79ff. (with discussion): the expression ἐπίορκον ὀμόσσαι 'perjure' (whence ἐπιορκέω) would be due to a false analysis of epic ἐπὶ ὅρκον ὀμόσσαι 'swear an oath on top'; against this view, Luther 1954: 86ff. with a different explanation; see also Fraenkel Gnomon 23 (1951): 373 and Bolling AmJPh. 76 (1955): 306ff., who start from (ὁ) ἐπὶ ὅρκῳ (βάς). Leumann 1950: 88 is similarly inclined to see ἐπίορκος as a back-formation from ἐπιορκέω. See ► ὅρκος.

ἐπίουρος ⇒ὄρομαι.

ἐπιούσιος [adj.] of ἄρτος (Ev. Matt. 6, 11, Ev. Luc. 11, 3), translated with 'quotidianus' in the vulgate, afterwards as 'daily'; also ἐπιουσι[ων (Sammelb. 5224, 20; economic message), meaning unknown. ◄GR► •ETYM The most obvious interpretation as ἡ ἐπιοῦσα (ἡμέρα) suggests 'for the coming day', but this seems improbable. If we start (just as Debrunner Glotta 4 (1913): 249ff.) from ἐπι τὴν οὖσαν (ἡμέραν), we get the more acceptable translation 'for the day in question'. See Blass-Debrunner-Funk 1961 §123 and Koerster in Kittel 1935: 587-595.

ἐπιπακτίς, -ίδος [f.] 'rupture wort, Herniaria glabra' (Dsc. 4, 108); Pliny has epicactis (13,114), see André 1956 s.v. ◄?► •ETYM From *ἐπίπᾰκτος 'fixed, closed', related to ἐπιπήγνυμι (cf. ἐπιπᾰκτόω 'to close'), because of its healing function. Cf. the plant name πηκτή = σύμφυτον and Strömberg 1940: 89. On the short α in (ἐπι)πακτόω, see Wackernagel 1916: 11.

ἐπιπατρόφιον [n.] 'father's name' (Schwyzer: 462 rem. 28, Tanagra III^a). ◄GR► •ETYM Univerbation of *ἐπὶ πατρόφι with a suffix -ιο-; cf. Schwyzer: 551 and 451. See Morpurgo Davies Glotta 47 (1970): 46f.

ἔπιπλα [n.pl.] 'movable goods, utensils' (IA). ◄IE *k^wel- 'turn'► •VAR Rarely -ον.
•ETYM Old expression, probably as ἔπι-πλ-α, properly "what has been added" as opposed to fixed possessions, from ἐπι-πέλομαι; for the formation, cf. δί-φρ-ος and Schwyzer: 449. Because the word was not transparent, reshapings like ἐπίπλοα (Hdt. 1, 94, pap.; modelled on ἐπιπλεῖν, for which cf. on ► ἐπίπλοον) and ἐπίπολα (Dodona; modelled on ἐπιπολή, for which see ► ἐπιπολῆς) occurred.

ἐπίπλοον [n.] 'fold of the peritoneum, omentum' (Ion., Hell.). ◄IE *pleu- 'swim'► •VAR Also -οος [m.].
•ETYM The word has been compared with Lith. plėvẽ 'fine, thin skin' (on milk, below the egg-shell, etc.), Ru. plevá 'id.', Sln. pléva 'eyelid'; however, the prefix then remains unexplained. So it is probably a purely Greek creation: a verbal noun from ἐπι-πλεῖν 'swim upon' (see Strömberg 1944: 65f.); ἐπίπλοον is then 'the organ that floats on top'. The form ἐπιπόλαιον (Eub. 95, 3) arose from connection with ἐπιπόλαιος; see ►ἐπιπολῆς.

ἐπιπολῆς [adv.] and [prep.] 'on top of, above' (IA). ◁?▷
•DER ἐπιπόλαιος 'on top of' (Hp., D.), ἐπιπολάζω 'be on top, have the upper hand, be usual' (Hp., Att., Arist.) with ἐπιπόλασις, -ασμός, -αστικός; also ἐπιπολή [f.] 'surface' (Argos III[a], Aret., Gal.) with ἐπιπολεύω 'be at the surface' (Ael.).
•ETYM Probably from *ἐπὶ πολῆς (Schwyzer: 625), thus from a noun *πολή. A connection with πέλομαι, πόλος, τέλος is not semantically evident: *πολή like τέλος (γονή : γένος) would then properly be the 'turning point' > 'culminating point' or 'walking around, place where one walks'? Better connections seem to be with MoSw. fala [f.] '(treeless) plain, heathe', OCS polje 'field' from ORu. polъ 'open, free' (Persson 1912(1): 228); additionally, Ἐπιπολαί [pl.] name of the heights near Syracuse (Th.).

ἐπίρροθος [m.] and [f.] 'helper, helping' (Δ 390, Ψ770; Hes. Op. 560); 'abusive language' (S. Ant. 413, Fr. 583, 10), as an adjunct of ὁδός = 'where the cars rage' (AP 7, 50). ◁?▷
•VAR As an adj. also -ον [n.].
•DER ἐπιρροθέω 'shout in answer, rage against' (trag., D. H.). Not to be separated from ῥόθος 'noise', ῥοθέω 'rage'; in the epic 'come with noise to somebody' = 'coming to help with noise', cf. Brugmann BPhW 39 (1919): 136ff.
•ETYM Acc. to Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 15f., ἐπίρροθος 'helper' is wrong for usual ►ἐπιτάρροθος in Hom.

ἐπίσιον [n.] = ἐφήβαιον, euphemistic designation of the pubic region (Hp., Arist.). ◁?▷
•VAR ἐπείσιον.
•ETYM Unknown.

ἐπισκῦνιον [n.] 'skin of the brows' (Il.), metaph. 'proud, severity' (Plb. 25, 3, 6). ◁IE sku(H)-* 'cover'▷ •ETYM If the simplex σκύνια [n.pl.] 'eyebrows' (Nic. Th. 177, 443, Poll. 2, 66) was not derived from ἐπισκύνιον, the word would come from *ἐπι-σκύνιος 'upon the brows'. In any case, we have to start from a nominal stem *σκυν-, which belongs together with OHG scūr 'protecting roof', Lat. ob-scūr-us *'covered', dark', so that an r/n-stem is supposed. With a suffix -l-, there is σκύ-λος [n.] 'flayed skin of an animal', σκῦλα [n.pl.] 'spolia'. Perhaps the root is seen in Skt. sku-nā-ti, sku-no-ti 'cover'. Differently on obscūrus, De Vaan 2008 s.v.

ἐπίσκυρος 1 [m.] name of a ball-game (H. = ὁ μετὰ πολλῶν σφαιρισμός 'playing ball with many people', Poll. 9, 103, sch. Pl. Tht. 146a); also called ἐπίκοινος. ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown. Identical with ►ἐπίσκυρος 2?

ἐπίσκυρος 2 [?] uncertain word in Call. Fr. 231 (see Pfeiffer 1949-1953: 567) and Fr. anon. 135; explained by H. with ἄρχων, βραβευτής, βοηθός, ἐπίσκοπος, ἔφορος, ἐπήκοος 'ruler, arbiter, assistant, guardian, overseer, witness'. ◁?▷
•ETYM No etymology.

ἐπισμύγερος ⇒σμυγερός.

ἔπισσαι [f.pl.] 'later born daughters' (Hecat. 363 J.); H. also ἔπισσον· τὸ ὕστερον γενόμενον 'the later-born'. ◁?▷ •ETYM For the formation, cf. μέτασσαι [f.pl.] 'lams of middle age' (ι 221); perhaps also the geographical names Ἄμφισσα, Ἄντισσα. Derivation uncertain; perhaps suffixes -τ-ι̯ο- or -κ-ιο-. Acc. to Giles *Class. Rev.*3 (1889): 3f., ἔπι-σσαι would be analogical after μέτ-ασσαι = μετ-οῦσαι with archaic disappearance of the zero grade of the fem. ptc. See Schwyzer: 472.

επισσοφος [m.] name of an official (Thera, Schwyzer: 227, 199). ◁?▷
•DER Perhaps [επι]σσοφευω (IG 9(1), 691: 15 [Corcyra]).
•ETYM Unknown.

ἐπίσσωτρον [n.] 'metal hoop upon the felloe, tyre of a wheel' (Il., Poll.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Derived from σῶτρον 'felloe' (Poll.), also in ἐΰ-σσωτρος (Hes. Sc. 273; v.l. Ω 578); further σωτρεύματα· τὰ τοῦ τροχοῦ ξύλα. καὶ ὁ ἐπὶ τούτοις σίδηρος ἐπίσωτρον (H.); on the enlargement -(ευ)μα see Chantraine 1933: 186f.
Usually derived from ►σεύομαι, ἔσσυτο 'to hurry', but the long root vowel that has to be assumed in the reconstruction ki̯ō(u)-* is problematic. One compares Skt. cyautná- [n.] 'enterprise, deed' = Av. šyaoϑna- 'deed', which are then taken as thematicized enlargements of a noun in -tr, -tn-*. Doubtful.

ἐπίσταμαι [v.] 'be assured, know how' (Il.), also 'believe' (Heraclit., Hdt.), first intr. as in ἐπιστάμενος μὲν ἄκοντι Ο 282. ◁IE si-steh₂-* 'stand'▷ •VAR Fut. ἐπιστήσομαι (Il.), aor. ἠπιστήθην (Hdt., Att.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐξ-, συν-επίσταμαι.
•DER ἐπιστήμων 'knowing about, expert' (Od.) with ἐπιστημονικός 'of the ἐπιστήμων', usually 'ptng. to knowing, to knowledge' referring to ἐπιστήμη (Arist.), ἐπιστημοσύνη (Xenocr.); also ἐπίστημος (Hp.; Chantraine 1933: 152); denominative verbs, both rare and late: ἐπιστημονίζομαι (Al.), ἐπιστημόομαι (Aq.) 'become ἐπιστήμων'. ἐπιστήμη 'understanding, knowing, knowledge' (IA); the -η- of the derivatives was favored by the adjectives in -ήμων, or by μνή-μη, φή-μη respectively (Chantraine 1933: 173, 148; Schwyzer: 522); likewise in the verbal adjective. ἐπιστητός 'what can be understood' (Pl., Arist.).
•ETYM From *ἐπι-hίσταμαι with early loss of the breath and vowel contraction (hyphaeresis). Through the semantic development *'stand before something' > 'be confronted with sth., take knowledge of sth.'; likewise, OHG firstān, OE forstandan. The word ἐπίσταμαι was also formally separated from ἵσταμαι, which already in Homer had lead to a new verb ἐφ-ίσταμαι 'stand at'. Acc. to others, it is an old fomation without reduplication (litt. in Schwyzer: 675[2]); acc. to Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:3, 160, it is a recent formation from an aorist ἐπι-στάμενος, -σταίμην.

ἐπίστής [?] 'prop' (inscr. Delos 340, 11, II^a). ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM Probably from ►ἵστημι.

ἐπίστιον [n.] 'staple-town, slip or shed for a ship' (ζ 265). ⋖?⋗
•ETYM Term from shipbuilding, explained by Aristarchus as κατάλυμα and identified with ἐφέστιος, -ον as Ionic; from ἱστίον, acc. to the sch. on the passage. Schwyzer: 425 suspects enlargement of a root noun *ἐπι-στᾱ (comparing OP upa-stā 'help'). The phrase πίνουσα τὴν ἐπίστιον (Anacr. 90, 4), the joking name of a drink, is unclear.

ἐπισχερώ [adv.] 'in a row, one after the other, uninterrupted, gradually' (Il., Simon.). ⋖IE *seǵ^h- 'hold'⋗ •DER Besides ἐνσχερώ (A. R. 1, 912) and, in two words, ἐν σχερῷ (Pi.) 'id.'; so a compound of ἐπί and an instrumental σχερώ (Schwyzer: 550 and 625).
•ETYM From the middle voice of the noun *σχ-ερός (on the formation, see Schwyzer: 482 and Chantraine 1933: 224; *σχερόν [n.] 'continuum'), i.e. σχ-έσθαι, ἔχεσθαι 'join, follow'; cf. ἑξῆς from the same stem. With an s-stem, there is ὁλο-σχερής 'complete' (Hell.; Schwyzer: 513); thence a derivation Σχερ-ίη, "uninterrupted coast, continent" vel sim., name of the land of the Phaeacians (Od.).

ἐπιτάρροθος [m.] and [f.] 'helper' (Hom.). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM Unknown. Resembles the synonymous ἐπίρροθος; is it a cross from this and another word, or a "Streckform" (cf. on ►ἑκατηβελέτης, -βόλος)? Acc. to Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 15f., a compound of *ἐπι-τάρρο-θος = ταρσῷ (-οῖς, -οῦν) ἐπιθέων, -θέουσα [meaning?]; however, -ρρ- for -ρσ- remains to be explained. The solution of Brugmann BPhW 39 (1919): 136ff. is no better: *ἐπ-ιθά-ρροθος, from ἰθα- in ἰθα-γενής. The form τάρροθος (Lyc.) is secondary.

ἐπίτεξ, -εκος [f.] 'close to delivery' (Hp., Hdt., Gortyn). ⋖IE *tek- 'give birth, bring forth'⋗ •VAR Acc. ἐπίτοκ-α (Andania, Hdt. 1, 108 as a v.l.).
•ETYM From ἐπί (ἔπι) and an unattested second member, probably a root noun *τέξ, either as a hypostasis of ἐπὶ *τεκ-ί [dat.] (Schwyzer: 424), or as per Sommer 1948: 111 and 115 as a bahuvrīhi of the type ἔνθεος: "with the delivery approaching". Modelled on this form is late ἀγχί-τεξ 'id.' (Theognost.). The o-vowel in ἐπίτοκ-α is rather from later ἐπί-τοκος than old ablaut. Further, see ►τίκτω.

ἐπιτηδές [adv.] probably 'of set purpose, deliberately' (A 142, ο 28); on the proparoxytonon Schwyzer: 380. ⋖?⋗
•VAR ἐπίτηδες (IA), ἐπίτᾱδες (Theoc. 7, 42).
•COMP ἐξεπίτηδες 'id.' (IA).
•DER Adjective ἐπιτήδειος (Att.; Ion. -εος) 'appropriate, suitable, fitting' with ἐπιτηδειότης (IA); denominative verb ἐπιτηδεύω 'do sth. on purpose' (IA) with ἐπιτήδευμα, ἐπιτήδευσις 'profession, action' (Att.; on the meaning Röttger 1937: 22ff.), Cret. ἐπιτάδουμα; ἐπιτηδευ(μα)τικός (Hell.).
•ETYM Presupposes a noun *τῆδος, *τᾶδος; no further connection.

ἐπιτηλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'horned poppy, Glaucium flavum' (Nic. Th. 852). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM So called because of the resemblance to τῆλις 'Trigonella'; see Strömberg 1944: 33. Cf. on ►ἐπιμήδιον.

ἐπίτυρον [n.] 'confection of olives', only as a Lat. LW epityrum in Cato RR 119, Plaut. Mil. 24; acc. to Varro LL 7: 86, a Sicilian delicacy. ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM From τυρός, because it was eaten together with or after the cheese.

ἐπιωγαί [f.pl.] 'places of shelter for ships' (ε 404, A. R. 4, 1640 [sg.], Opp. H. 1, 602). ⋖IE *uh$_2$g- 'break'⋗ •ETYM As a verbal noun from ἐπι-(ϝ)άγνυμαι 'break against sth.', so properly 'place where wind and waves are broken'; compare κυματωγή < *κυματο-ϝαγή (Hdt.), and βορέω ὑπ' ἰωγῇ (ξ 533), properly "under the breaking of Boreas", i.e. 'protected against Boreas'. The latter has the reduplication *ϝι-ϝωγ-η, *ui-uoh$_2$g-; thus, ἐπιωγή is probably from *ἐπιϝιϝωγή. Bechtel 1914 s.v. prefers *ἐπι-ϝωγή without reduplication, beside ϝαγή. On the formation, see Jacobsohn Gnomon 2 (1926): 384.

ἕπομαι [v.] 'to follow, accompany'. ⋖IE *sek^w- 'follow'⋗
•VAR Ipf. εἱπόμην, fut. ἕψομαι, aor. ἑσπόμην, inf. σπέσθαι (Il.); ἑσπ-έσθαι, -όμενος, -οίμην certain only since A. R., who also has the innovated present ἕσπεται (see Braswell Glotta 58 (1980): 205-213).
•DIAL Myc. e-qe-ta /hek^{w}etās/, e-qe-si-jo /hek^{w}esios/, see Gérard-Rousseau 1968: 91-94.
•COMP Also with prefix ἐφ-, παρ-, συν-, μεθ-.
•DER ἑπέτᾱς 'who accompanies' (Pi.) = Myc. e-qe-ta; -τις [f.] (A. R.); further derivatives ►ἀοσσέω, ►ὀπάων, ►ὀπάζω; cf. ►ὀπηδός.
•ETYM Identical with Skt. sácate, Av. hacaitē (= ἕπεται, IE sek^w-e-toi); further, to Lat. sequor = OIr. sechur, Lith. sekù, sèkti 'follow'. The Gm. word for 'to see', Go. saiƕan, etc. deviates semantically – perhaps 'to follow with the eyes'? See LIV^2 s.v. *sek^w- 'sich anschliessen'. It has mostly been assumed that the aorist ἑσπόμην stood for *ἐ-σπ-, with secondary aspiration after ἕπομαι (like εἱπόμην), and that the form ἑσπέσθαι, which was considered certain only for Hell. times, was secondary. However, Braswell (l.c.) shows that Pindar has some non-indicative forms with ἑσπ-, so Frisk and Chantraine mistakenly reject the form .

ἐπωμμάδιος ⇒ὦμος.

ἔπος [n.] 'word, speech' (Il.). ⋖IE *uek^w- 'speak'⋗ •VAR Plur. also 'song, epic poem' (Pi., Hdt.; on meaning and use Fournier 1946: 212ff.).
•DIAL El. Cypr. ϝέπος.
•COMP As a first member in ►ἐπεσβόλος, ἐπο-ποιός (with analogical compositional vowel); as a second member e.g. in ►ἀπτοεπής.
•DER ἐπύλλιον 'small song, small verse' (Ar.; after this other diminutives in -ύλλιον, Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 214 and 225); ἐπικός 'belonging to epic poetry' (D. H.).
•ETYM El. and Cypr. ϝέπος is identical with Skt. vácas-, Av. vacah- 'word'; IE uék^w-os- [n.]. Greek further has the root noun *ὄψ (in ►ὄπ-α [acc.], etc.), in addition to ► ὄσσα and probably ► ἐν-οπή, as well as the aorist ► εἶπον. A primary athematic verb is preserved in Skt. vák-ti 'he speaks'.

ἔποψ, -οπος [m.] 'hoopoe, Upupa epops' (Epich., Ar.), also ἔποπος· ὄρνεον 'bird', ἔπωπα· ἀλεκτρυόνα ἄγριον 'wild cock', ἄπαφος· ἔποψ τὸ ὄρνεον 'hoopoe', after the animal names in -φος (H.). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM Formation like δρύοψ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 259) on an onomatopoeic basis; cf. ἐποποῖ, πόποπο of the call of the bird (Ar. Av. 58 resp. 227). Parallel names exist in other languages: Arm. popop, Lat. upupa, Latv. pupukis, etc. The word probably cannot be called Indo-European. On ἔποψ, see further Thompson 1895 s.v.

ἑπτά [num.] 'seven' (Il.). ◂IE septm* 'seven'▸ •COMP As a first member in copulative ἑπτακαίδεκα, in ἑπτακόσιοι (cf. on διᾱκόσιοι) and in several bahuvrīhis like ἑπτα-βόειος.
•DER ἑπτάκι(ς), -ιν 'seven times' (Pi.), ἕπτᾰχᾰ 'in seven parts' (ξ 434), ἑπτάς [f.] 'a group of seven' (days, years; Arist.); ἑπταδεύω 'belong to the ἑπτά' (Olbia III[a]).
•ETYM Gr. ἑπτά, Skt. saptá, Lat. septem, Arm. ewtʿn, Gm., e.g. Go. sibun, etc. go back to IE septḿ̥* (accent after IE oktō̆[u]* > ὀκτώ, aṣṭáu). Cf. also ► ἑβδομήκοντα, ► ἕβδομος.

ἕπω 1 [v.] 'to care for, occupy onself' (Il., Ion., Hell.); in the epic sometimes confused with ἕπομαι, or semantically influenced by it (Chantraine 1942: 309[1], 388). ◂IE sep-* 'occupy with, care for'▸ •VAR ἕποντα Z 321; further only with prefix (adverb): ἀμφ(ι)-, δι-, ἐφ-, μεθ-, περι-έπω, mostly present stem, further future and aorist forms like ἐφ-έψω, ἐπ-έσπον, ἐπι-σπεῖν, μετα-σπών.
•DER ► ὅπλον, ► δίοπος, probably also ► ἐπητής, -τύς.
•ETYM Old thematic root present, identical with Skt. sápati 'care, honor'; Iranian features athematic forms, viz. Av. haf-šī [2sg.], hap-tī [3sg.] 'hold (in the hand), support'. An old enlargement is Lat. sepeliō 'bury' = Skt. saparyáti 'honor'.

ἔπω 2 [v.] 'to name'. ◂GR▸ •VAR in ἔπουσιν (Nic.).
•ETYM Artificial present of ► εἶπον.

ἐπωτίδες [f.pl.] 'catheads of warships, beams projecting like ears on each side of a ship's bows' (E., Th., Str.). ◂IE h₂ous-* 'ear'▸ •ETYM Forms based on οὖς, ὠτός, like ἐπωμίς 'upper part of the shoulder' on ὦμος and ἐπιδορατίς 'point of a lance' on δόρυ, etc. (Strömberg 1946: 99). Thus it is properly 'tips of the ear', because of their projecting position. Differently, Forster 1950: 70.

ἐπῴχατο [v.] only in M 340 πᾶσαι γὰρ ἐπῴχατο (scil. πύλαι) 'they were all closed'. ◂IE h₃ueig-* 'open'▸ •ETYM Perhaps a 3sg.med.plpf. to ἐπ-οιγνύναι in the meaning 'close', with aspiration of the velar. For the meaning, cf. especially (τὴν θύραν) προσέῳξεν 'they shut (the door)' (LXX Ge. 19, 6). Wackernagel 1955(1): 127ff. also discusses the analysis as a plpf. ἐπώχατο (the inferior reading in the mss.) derived from ἐπέχω. See also Bechtel 1914 s.v. ► οἴγνυμι.

ἔρα [f.] explained by Erot., Str., etc. with γῆ 'earth', in ἔραζε, Dor. ἔρασδε 'on the earth' (Il.); ἔρας· γῆς (H.). ◂IE? h₁er-* 'earth'▸ •COMP The word is further assumed in compounds, e.g. as a second member in πολύ-ηρος· πολυάρουρος, πλούσιος 'with many fields, rich' (H.), as a first member in ἐρεσι-μήτρην· τὴν γεωμετρίαν 'geometry' (H.); on the last Hoffmann 1921: 82ff., who wants to read in H. ἔρας· γῆ and takes the word as a neuter; ἔραζε then from *ἔρασ-δε.
•DER ἐράναι· βωμοί 'altars' (H.; Schwyzer: 489; very doubtful); denominative verb in ► ἀπ-εράω, etc. Cf. also on ► ἔνεροι.
•ETYM A general resemblance is shown by a few Gm. and Celt. expressions for 'earth, etc.': OHG ero 'earth', ON jǫrvi 'sand(bank)', MW erw 'field', all with a suffix -u̯- (old u-stem?); with a suffix -t-, Go. airþa, ON jǫrð, MIr. ert 'earth'. Arm. erkir 'earth' is unclear.

ἔραμαι [v.] 'to desire, love' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Lengthened form ἐράασθε Π 208 (cf. Chantraine 1942: 83); IA ἐράω; aor. ἐράσ(σ)ασθαι, ἐρασθῆναι, fut. ἐρασθήσομαι (epic Ion.).
•DER Verbal adj. ἐρατός 'desired, loved' (Il.), with Ἐρατώ [f.] name of one of the Muses (Hes.) and ἐρατίζω 'desire' (Λ 551); lengthened form ἐρατεινός 'lovely' (Il.; after the adjectives in -εινός, e.g. ἀλγεινός; ποθεινός; Pi.); on ἐραστός see below. Further ἔρως (Il.), gen., etc. -ωτος [m.] (Hdt., Pi.), epic also ἔρος [m.] '(carnal) love, the god of Love', with several derivatives: beside the hypocoristics Ἐρώτ-ιον, -άριον, -ίσκος, -ιδεύς also ἐρωτικός 'ptng. to love' (Att.), ἐρωτύλος 'lovely, darling', ἐρωτίς [f.] 'id.' (Theoc.); ἐρωτ-ιάδες (Νύμφαι; AP); ἐρωτίδια (-εια, -αια) 'festival for Eros' (Ath., inscr.); denominative verb ἐρωτ-ιάω 'be sick of love' (Hp.). From ἔρος: ἐρόεις (Hes., h. Hom.); cf. Treu 1955: 245. From a stem ἐρασ-: Aeol. ἐραννός 'lovely, charming' < *ἐρασ-νός (Il.), ἐράσμιος 'id.' (Semon., Anacr.; cf. Schwyzer: 493[10], Chantraine 1933: 43), ἐραστής 'lover' (IA), also in compounds, e.g. παιδ-εραστής, fem. ἐράστρια (Eup.); ἐραστός = ἐρατός (Att., etc.); denominative verb ἐραστεύω = ἐράω (A. Pr. 893 [lyr.]). The frequent formations in -σ-, which can hardly all be analogical, point to an original s-stem ἔρως, ἐρασ- (like γέλως, γέλασ-), which was subsequently enlarged by -τ- or thematicized.
•ETYM No etymology. Thus Pre-Greek?

ἔρανος [m.] 'meal on joint account, meal of friends' (Od., Pi.); 'contribution, benefactory society' (Att., Hell.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Compounds: ἐραν-άρχης 'president of an ἔρανος' together with -έω [v.] (pap., etc.), also ἀρχ-έρανος = ἀρχ-ερανιστής together with -ίζω [v.] (inscr.).
•DER ἐρανικός 'regarding an ἔρανος' and denominative ἐρανιζω, -ομαι 'collect contributions' (Att., Hell.) with ἐράν-ισις (Pl.), -ισμός (D. H.), ἐρανιστής 'participant or member of an ἔρανος' (Att., Hell.), also ἐρανεστής (Achae.) after κηδεστής, etc.
•ETYM Uncertain. Traditionally grouped together with ► ἔροτις 'feast' (Cypr., etc.) and ► ἑορτή, and combined with ► ἦρα 'service'; the latter connection is phonetically improbable, however. We should assume the basic forms *ϝέρα-νος, *ϝέρο-τις, but their origin is unknown: so is the word Pre-Greek?

ἔραχος [?] · τὸ δράγμα· Βοιωτοί 'handful (Boeot.)' (H.); also ἐραχάται· οἱ δεσμεύοντες 'the fettering ones'. ⊲?⊳ •ETYM See Bechtel 1921, 1: 305f.

ἐράω 1 ⇒ἔραμαι.

ἐράω 2 ⇒ἀπ-εράω.

ἔργον [n.] 'work, labour, work of art' (Il.). ⊲IE *uerǵ- 'work'⊳ •DIAL Myc. we-ka-ta /wergatās/.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἐργο-λάβος 'undertaker'; further PN Ἐργα-μένης (Bechtel 1917a: 23f.; cf. ἐργά-της but also Ἀλκαμένης); very often as a second member -εργός (or -οργός), e.g. γεωργός 'farmer' (see ►γῆ), ►δημιουργός.
•DER ἐργώδης 'laborious, heavy' (Hp., X.). ἐργάτης [m.] (from the plur. ἔργα; Schwyzer 500; cf. ἐργάζομαι) 'labourer', especially 'farmer'; also adj. 'laborious' (IA), fem. ἐργάτις, with ἐργατικός 'ptng. to an ἐργάτης, laborious', ἐργατίνης = ἐργάτης (Theoc.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 203, Schwyzer: 490), διεργάτινος (Mytilene), ἐργατήσιος 'profitable' (Plu. Cat. Ma. 21; uncertain; cf. Chantraine 1933: 42); ἐργασία, to ἐργάζομαι, see below; denominative verb ἐργατεύομαι, -εύω 'work hard' with ἐργατεία (LXX, pap.). Ἐργάνη, Delph. ϝαργάνα epithet of Athena (Delphi VI-V^a, etc.), also = ἐργασία (pap., H.); ἔργανα, ϝέργανα (written γέργ-)· ἐργαλεῖα (H.); ἐργαλεῖον, usually plur. -εῖα, Cret. ϝεργ- 'tool, instrument' (IA); there is no *ἔργαλον (cf. Chantraine 1933: 60). Denominative verb ἐργάζομαι 'work' (Il.; Schwyzer 734), Cret. ϝεργάδδομαι, often with prefix ἀπ-, ἐν-, etc.; several derivatives: ἐργαστικός 'busy, productive, labourer' (IA); ἐργασία, Cret. ϝεργ- '(heavy) labour, fieldwork, profession' (IA) with ἐργάσιμος 'in business, cleared (land)' (also to ἐργάζομαι; cf. Arbenz 1933: 44f.); ἐργαστήρ 'field labourer' (X.), ἐργαστής 'id.', also 'negotiator' (A. D., Rom. inscr.); ἐργαστήριον 'workshop' (IA; cf Chantraine 1933: 62f.; thence [after vinculum] Lat. ergastulum, though acc. to Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 207^{11}, from ἔργαστρον) together with ἐργαστηριακός 'labourer' (Plb.), diminutive ἐργαστηρίδιον (pap.); ἔργαστρα [pl.] 'wages' (pap.; Chantraine 1933: 332). Desiderative ptc. ἐργασείων 'who wants to do' (S.).
•ETYM Dor. ϝέργον (thence regularly El. ϝάργον) is identical with Av. varəzəm [n.], OHG werc, ON verk [n.] 'work'; IE *uérǵo- [n.]; with secondary o, Arm. gorc 'id.' (from deverbative gorcem 'work'). Connecion with W vergo-bretus 'highest official of the Aeduans' is uncertain. Primary verbs from this root are ►ἔρδω and ►ῥέζω; see LIV^2 s.v. 2. *u̯erǵ- 'wirken, machen'. See further ►ὄργανον, ►ὄργια, ►ἑόργη.

ἔργω ⇒εἴργω.

ἔρδω [v.] 'to do, make, finish', also 'to sacrifice'. ⊲IE *uerǵ- 'work'⊳ •VAR Aor. ἔρξαι (Cypr. ἔϝερξα), perf. ἔοργα (Il.), med. ἐ]ργμένος (B. 12, 207; uncertain), fut. ἔρξω (Od.).
•DIAL Myc. wo-ze /worzei/ continues the original zero grade.

•COMP Rarely with prefix ἀπ-, προσ-, συν-. In prose replaced by ποιέω, πράττω, ἐργάζομαι, etc.
•DER ἔργμα 'deed' (h.Hom., Archil.), ἔρκτωρ 'perpetrator' (Antim.).
•ETYM The present (ϝ)έρδω (Cret. βέρδηι; cf. Schwyzer: 224; on the digamma, see also Chantraine 1942: 135; on the secondary aspiration in ἕρδω, ibid.1, 187f.) can go back to *ϝέργι̯ω via *ϝέρzδω, and differs only in ablaut grade from the zero grade yod-presents Av. vərəziieiti = Go. waurkeiþ, OHG wurchit, all from IE *urǵ-ie-. The full grade could be taken from (ϝ)έργον; likewise, OS wirkiu after werk; cf. Schwyzer: 716^2. The non-presentic forms show the expected full grade, with regular o- in the perfect. Cf. ►ῥέζω.

ἐρέα ⇒εἶρος.

ἐρέας · τέκνα. Θεσσαλοί 'children (Thess.)', ἐρέεσφι· τέκνοις (H.). ⊲IE? *h_1(e)r- 'arise'⊳ •VAR ἐρέων [gen.pl.], ἔρεσσι [dat.pl.] (Puchstein Epigr. Gr. p. 76).
•ETYM With the exception of ἐρέας, all forms can be explained from *ἔρος [n.], which together with ἔρνος 'sprout' may belong to ►ὄρνυμι. So it is probably to be corrected to ἔρεα. Note that one expects generalized ὀρ- from *$h_3$er-, however, so that the e-vocalism of the s-stem nouns must be secondary. A msc. *ἐρής would be difficult, in spite of Bechtel 1921, 1: 205.

ἐρέβινθος [m.] 'chickpea' (Il.). ⊲LW Eastern Mediterranean?⊳
•DER Diminutive ἐρεβίνθιον (pap.) and ἐρεβινθ-ώδης (Thphr.), -ειος (Zen.), -ιαῖος (Dsc.), -ινος (H., Phot., Suid.).
•ETYM Related to ►ὄροβος 'id.' with the Pre-Greek suffix -ινθος. Further related to Lat. ervum 'a kind of vetch', to which some Celt. and Gm. words for 'pea, etc.' are compared: OHG araweiz, arwiz 'pea', MIr. orbaind 'grain', etc. The word may come from the eastern Mediterranean area; see WH s.v. ervum. Skt. aravinda- [n.] 'lotus flower' does not belong here; cf. Mayrhofer KEWA s.v.

ἔρεβος [n.] 'the dark of the underworld' (Il.). ⊲IE *$h_1$reg^w-os- 'darkness'⊳ •DER ἐρεβεννός, Aeol. < *ἐρεβεσ-νός properly 'belonging to ἔρεβος, dark' (Il., Hes.); more common ἐρεμνός < *ἐρεβ-νός (cf. Risch 1937: 99; see also on ►δεινός) 'id.' (Il.); ἐρεβώδης 'id.' (late).
•ETYM Old word for 'darkness, etc.', also found in other branches: Skt. rájas- [n.] 'dark (lower) air, dust', Arm. erek, -oy 'evening', Go. riqiz, ON røkkr [n.] 'dark, dusk', all from IE *$h_1$rég^w-os- [n.].

ἐρέγματα ⇒ἐρείκω.

ἐρεείνω [v.] 'to interrogate, hear out' (epic since Il.).
•VAR Only present.
•ETYM Like in the similar case of ἀλεείνω (see ►ἀλέα 2), a denominative formation has been assumed: an r/n-stem *ἐρεϝ-εν-. The form ►εἴρομαι is a primary present. Cf. also ►ἐρευνάω, ►ἐρωτάω.

ἐρέθω [v.] 'to stir, provoke' (Il.) ⊲?⊳

•VAR Also pres. ἐρεθίζω, with aor. ἐρεθίσαι (A.), pass. ἐρεθ-ισθῆναι, -ισθεῖς (Hdt.), -ίξαι (AP), perf.pass. ἠρέθ-ισμαι, -ισμένος (IA), act. ἠρέθικα (Aeschin.), fut. -ίσω, -ιῶ (Hell.).
•COMP With prefix ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, προσ-ερεθίζω, etc., also ἐξ-, κατ-ερέθω.
•DER From ἐρεθίζω: ἐρεθισμός (Hp.), ἐρέθισμα (Ar.) 'provocation, irritation', ἐρεθιστής 'agitator' (LXX), -ιστικός 'irritating' (Hp.) From ἐρέθω perhaps *ὄροθος in ► ὀροθύνω.
•ETYM The present ἐρέθω may have a formantic -θ-, like θαλέθω, φλεγέθω, etc. (Schwyzer: 703, Chantraine 1942: 327ff.); the primary verb from which it is derived is unknown. Note the forms in H., ἔρετο· ὡρμήθη, ἔρσεο· διεγείρου, and ἔρση· ὁρμήση, that might have formed the basis of ἐρέθω.

ἐρείδω [v.] 'to prop, support'. ◄?►
•VAR Also med. -ομαι; aor. ἐρεῖσαι, -είσασθαι, pass. ἐρεισθῆναι (Il.), perf. med. ἐρήρεισμαι (Il.), 3pl. ἐρηρέδαται, -έδατο (Hom.) for -ίδαται, -ίδατο (Aeolism?, cf. Schwyzer: 106), ἐρήρεινται, ἠρήρειντο (A. R.; Schwyzer: 671), act. συν-, προσ-ήρεικα (Hp., Plb.), (προσ-)ἐρήρεικα (Dsc., Plu.), fut. ἐρείσω, -ομαι (Arist.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀντ-, ἀπ-, ἐπ-, προσ-, συν-, ὑπ-, etc.
•DER (-)ἔρεισις, (-)ἔρεισμα, (-)ἐρεισμός, (-)ἐρειστικός. Cf. ἀντηρίς, Szemerényi 1964: 143[1].
•ETYM No certain correspondences outside Greek. Connected with Lat. ridica [f.] 'stake, wine prop' by Froehde KZ 22 (1874): 263, which is deemed 'very uncertain' by De Vaan 2008 s.v. One could mechanically reconstruct *$h_1$reid-.

ἐρείκη [f.] 'heather, Arica arborea' (A., Eup.). ◄?►
•COMP As a second member probably in ὑπ-έρεικος [f.] (Nic.), -ον [n.] (Hp., Dsc.; written ὑπερικόν) 'Hypericum'; Strömberg 1944: 42.
•DER ἐρείκια [n.pl.] 'heather plants', ἐρείκινος 'made of heather' (pap.), ἐρεικηρός 'id.' (medic.), ἐρεικαῖον (scil. μέλι) [n.] 'honey from heather' (Plin.). PN Ἐρείκεια with Ἐρεικειεύς (Attica IV[a]; written Ἐρικ-, probably itacistic; cf. Meisterhans 1900: 42 and 53), Ἐρεικοῦς λόφος (Asia Minor IV[a]), Ἐρεικοῦσσα island near Sicily (Str. et al.).
•ETYM Celtic and Balto-Slavic designations of heather resemble ἐρείκη (supposing that this derives from *ϝερείκᾱ), but they do not agree completely: OIr. froech, MW grug < IE uroiko-; Latv. virši [pl.], Lith. viržis, Ru. véres, véresk, etc. with unclear final velar. Acc. to Machek Ling. Posn. 2 (1950): 158f., ἐρείκη and véres, etc. were borrowed from a common source.

ἐρείκω [v.] 'to break, bruise, crush, burst' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1$reiḱ- 'break, tear off'? (cf.)► •VAR ἐρεικόμενος intr. (N 441), aor. ἤρῖκε (P 595, intr.), ἐρεῖξαι (IA), perf.pass. ἐρήριγμαι, -μένος (Hp., Arist.).
•COMP Rarely with prefix κατ-, δι-, ὑπ-.
•DER ἐρεικίδες [pl.] (Gal.), ἐρεικάς (H.) 'pounded barley, groats', ἐρείκιον 'crumbly pastry' (Gal.; formation like ἐρείπια), ἐρεικίτας (ἄρτος, Ath.; Redard 1949: 89), all often itacistically written ἐρικ-; thus ἐρίγματα [pl.] (Hp.), ἐρίγμη (sch.) 'bruised beans' instead of ἐρειγ-; in the same meaning with unexplained ε: ἐρέγματα (Thphr., Erot.), ἐρεγμός (pap., Gal., Erot.) together with ἐρέγμινος (Dsc., Orib.).

•ETYM With the full grade root present ἐρείκω and the clearly old weak grade aorist ἤρικε, there are no formal and semantic agreements in other branches. The nearest relations are Skt. rikháti, likháti 'scratch' (with aspirated velar), Lith. riekiù, riẽkti 'cut loaf, plough for the first time', Skt. riśáti, liśáti 'pluck, tear away'. One might consider connection of nominal forms like OHG rīga, MHG rīha 'row, line', Lat. rixa 'quarrel', and perhaps also rīma 'cleft, crack' (see De Vaan 2008: s.vv.).

ἐρείπω [v.] 'to ruin, tear down' med. 'to collapse' (Il.). ◄IE? *$h_1$reip- 'throw down, dash'?►
•VAR Aor. ἐριπεῖν (Il., intr.), ἐρεῖψαι (Hdt., Pi.), ἐριπέντι [ptc.dat.] = ἐριπόντι (Pi. O. 2, 43), pass. ἐρειφθείς (S. Aj. 309), perf. ἐρήριπε (Ξ 55, intr.), plpf. ἐρέριπτο (Ξ 15); ἐρήριμμαι, ἠρίφθην (Arr.); fut. ἐρείψω (S.).
•COMP With prefixes ἐξ-, κατ- et al.
•DER ἐρείπια [pl.] 'ruins' (Hdt., Arist.; on the formation Schwyzer: 470, Chantraine 1933: 55), adjectivized ἐρείπιος (οἰκία Ph.; ἐρείπιος γῆ· ἡ χέρσος 'dry land' Suid.); ἔρειψις of unclear meaning (Att. inscr.) with ἐρείψιμος 'ruined' (E. IT 48), ἐρειψιπύλα̃ς [m.] (B.), -τοιχος (A. Th. 883 [lyr.]) 'tearing down towers, especially walls'; with zero grade ἐρίπναι [pl.] 'broken cliff, steep ascent' (E., A. R.; sg. Nic.); on the suffix cf. κρημνός, κραιπνός and Chantraine 1933: 192.
•ETYM Beside full grade ἐρείπω, we have ON rífa 'to tear down' (trans.), like ἐρείπω also of buildings; with verbal noun, Lat. rīpa 'steep border, shore' (cf. ἐρίπναι and ἐρείπιος γῆ = χέρσος, i.e. 'shore'); additionally, ON ríp 'upper side of a boat', EastFris. rip(e) 'shore', MoHG rīf 'id.'. Analysis of ἐρείπω and ἐρείκω as IE *(h_1)rei-p-, *(h_1)rei-k- (Pok. 857ff.) is too far-fetched. See LIV[2] s.v. *(h_1)rei̯p-.

ἐρέπτομαι [v.] 'to devour, eat', of animals and men, properly 'tear away, snatch away'. ◄IE *$h_1$rep-? 'catch, snatch away'► •VAR Only ptc. ἐρεπτόμενος (Hom., AP; ἐρέπτων Nonn.). With ἀν- the aor.3pl. ἀν-ηρέψαντο (Hom.; codd. everywhere -ρειψ-; corrected by Fick; thus also A. R. [beside -ρεψ-], Orph.), ptc. ἀναρεψαμένη (Hes. Th. 990, cod. Ven.). ἀνερεψάμενοι (AB 401, 27); ἀνερέψατο (Pi. Pae. 6, 136) 'snatch away'.
•COMP With ἀν-.
•ETYM The yod-present ἐρέπτομαι resembles Lith. ap-rẽpti 'take, catch' (which mechanically requires *(H)reh₁p-) and Alb. rjep 'tear off, rob'; cf. Lat. rapiō, -ere 'tear, snatch' with a-vocalism, on which see De Vaan 2008 s.v. It has also been compared with ► ἁρπάζω. See Szemerényi 1964: 203-5 and Beekes 1969: 35-7; LIV[2] s.v. *(h_1)rep-.

ἐρεσχηλέω [v.] 'to joke, tease' (IA). ◄PG?►
•VAR Only present; also -χελέω v.l.
•DER From the verb: ἐρεσχηλία, -χελία (pap., EM 371, 1, Suid.). Also ἐρίσχηλος· λοίδορος 'slanderous' (EM, Parth. Fr. 18).
•ETYM Like ► βλασφημέω, probably from a nominal first member and a verbal second member; further derivation unclear. Acc. to Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 57, ἐρεσ- is a neuter synonymous with ἔρις and is also found in ἐπήρεια; he compares the second member with χηλεύειν· ῥάπτειν, πλέκειν 'sew, stitch; braid' (H.); ἐρεσχηλεῖν would then mean 'start a feud'. Fur. (index) considers ε/η Pre-Greek; note also the form with ἐρι-, though this could also be analogical based on ►ἔρις.

ἐρέτης [m.] 'rower' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1erh_1-, h_1reh_1- 'row'► •VAR Myc. e-re-ta /eretās/; inf. e-re-e /ere^{h}en/ (Perpillou Minos 9:2 (1968): 208-212).
•COMP As a second member in ►ὑπηρέτης.
•DER ἐρετικός 'concerning the rowers' (Att.); collective abstract εἰρεσίη, -ία 'the rowers' (Od.), where the metrical lengthening εἰ- was maintained in prose); denominative verb ἐρέσσω, rare Att. ἐρέττω, aor. ἐρέσ(σ)αι 'row' (Il.).
Further the instrument noun ἐρετμόν [n.] 'oar' (Il.) with ἐρετμόω [v.] 'to equip with oars' (E.), PN Ἐρετμεύς (θ 111), also the TN Ἐρέτρια as "the rowing (town)". Formally isolated are the nouns in -ηρης and -ερος, -ορος, like τρι-ήρης 'trireme' (IA), ἁλι-ήρης 'rowing the sea' (κώπη E. Hec. 455 [lyr.]), πεντηκόντ-ερος, πεντηκόντ-ορος 'ship with fifty oars' (IA), etc., see below.
•ETYM The agent noun ἐρέ-της points to a disyllabic primary root *h_1erh_1-/ *h_1reh_1- 'row', like synonymous Skt. ari-tár- (which would be Gr. *ἐρε-τήρ, perhaps in Ἐρέτρ-ιᾱ). In Greek, this verb was replaced by the denominative ἐρέσσω (uncertain Myc. e-re-e), but it is still present in other languages: Lith. iriù, ìrti (from zero grade *h_1rh_1-), Gm., e.g. ON róa, Celt., e.g. OIr. imb-rá 'row, sail' (both from *rō-, as opposed to rē- in Lat. rēmus, and go back to *h_1reh_1- versus *h_1roh_1-). Traces of the verb in Greek occur in τρι-ήρης, etc. (with compositional lengthening and ending after the s-stems), πεντηκόντ-ερος, -ορος, etc. (after the o-stems, with root vocalism -ο- after -γονος, -φορος, etc.; there is no vowel harmony, as per Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 327). Perhaps, with a suffix -το-, (Lesb.) τέρρητον· τριήρης H., if haplological for *τερρ-έρητον < *τρι-έρητον as per Brugmann IF 13 (1902-1903): 152f. The form ἐρετμόν is reminiscent both of Skt. arí-tr-a- 'oar', Lith. ìrklas 'oar' < *h_1rh_1-tlo- and of Lat. rēmus, which perhaps has *-smo-; see De Vaan 2008 s.v.

ἐρεύγομαι 1 [v.] 'to belch out, disgorge, discharge, vomit', also metaph., e.g. of the sea (Il.). ◄IE *h_1reug- 'belch'► •VAR Pres. also ἐρυγγάνω (Hp., Att.); aor. ἤρυγον (Ar., Arist.), ἠρευξάμην (Procop.), fut. ἐρεύξομαι (Ev. Matt. 13, 35).
•COMP Also with prefix ἀν-, ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, προσ-, etc.
•DER ἔρευξις, ἐρευγμός, also ἔρυξις, ἐρυγμός, ἔρυγμα together with ἐρυγματώδης (also ἐρευγματώδης); ἐρυγή 'belching out, etc.' (Hp.).
•ETYM The word ἐρεύγομαι (the nasal present ἐρυγγάνω like πυνθάνομαι beside πεύθομαι, etc.) belongs to an expressive group of words found in several languages, e.g. Lat. ē-rūgō, Lith. riáugmi, riáugėti, Ru. rygát' (iter.) 'have belches, ruminate'; with zero grade as in ἤρυγον: OHG ita-ruchjan 'ruminate', OE rocettan (< PGm. rukatjan-*) 'belch', Arm. orcam (< o-ruc-am < erucam, corresponding to Gr. ἐ-); also, MoP ā-rōy 'belch'. Cf. ►ἐρεύγομαι 2.

ἐρεύγομαι 2 [v.] in Hom. only of the sea ἐρευγομένης ἁλὸς (Ρ 265), κῦμα ... δεινὸν ἐρευγόμενον (ε 403), (κύματα) ἐρεύγεται ἤπειρόνδε (ε 438); to be translated with 'roar' in the last two passages (cf. Ξ 394 κῦμα ... βοάᾳ ποτὶ χέρσον), but here, like in Ρ 265, a translation 'belch out' (= ►ἐρεύγομαι 1) is also possible. The sense of 'roaring' seems certain in the aorist ἤρυγεν (Υ 403f.): ἤρυγεν ὡς ὅτε ταῦρος ἤρυγεν, 406 τόν γ' ἐρυγόντα λίπε ... θυμός; thus also in Theoc. 13, 58. The present and future are also used in the meaning 'roar' in LXX (σκύμνος ἐρευγόμενος, λέων ἐρεύξεται). ◄IE *h_1reug- 'belch' (also 'roar'?)►
•DER ἐρύγμηλος Σ 580 (from ἐρυγμή H. or *ἐρυγμεῖν) is also used as an adjunct of ταῦρος 'bull'; differently, EM 379, 27 ἐρυγμήλη (H. ἐρυγηλή)· ἐπίθετον ῥαφανίου, ἴσως ἀπὸ τῆς ἐρυγῆς 'epithet of the radish, perhaps called after the belch'. H. mentions also ἐρυγμαίνουσα· ἡ βοῦς ('ruminator'? Cf. on ►ἐρεύγομαι 1). καὶ ὁ ταῦρος ἐρυγμαίνων, ἀπὸ τῆς ἐρυγμῆς 'also the bull, after ἐ., and ἐρυγήτωρ· βοητής 'clamorous'.
•ETYM Clearly, ἐρεύγομαι 1 and 2 are not always kept apart in Greek, e.g. ἡμέρα τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐρεύγεται ῥῆμα (LXX Ps. 18 [19], 2), ἐρεύξομαι κεκρυμμένα (Ev. Matt. 13, 35), where 'to belch out' is used expressively for 'to cry', etc. Nonetheless, ►ὀρυμαγδός and ὠρῡγή, ὠρυγμός (see ►ὠρῡ́ομαι) clearly refer to 'roaring'.
Other languages have comparable words in the meaning 'roar': Lat. rūgiō 'to roar'; with a different auslaut (IE *-k-), OCS rykati 'roar', OE rȳn 'id.' (PGm. rūhjan-*), OHG rohōn < PGm. ruhōn-; in Latin, the expected form would be rucāre, but we instead have runcāre 'to snore' (s.v. ►ῥέγκω).

ἐρεύθω [v.] 'to make red, paint red' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1reud^h- 'red'► •VAR Aor. ἐρεῦσαι.
•COMP Also with prefix συνεξ-, κατ-.
•DER ἔρευθος [n.] 'redness' (Hp., Ph.) with ἐρευθής 'red-colored' (Str., Arat.), furthermore the poetical ἐρευθήεις (-ιόεις) 'id.' (A. R.), ἐρευθαλέος 'id.' (Nonn.), probably innovation, like PN Ἐρευθαλίων (Hom.; cf. Δευκαλίων, Πυγμαλίων et al.), Ἐρευθαλία town in Argos (sch.; cf. Οἰχαλία). Denominative verbs: ἐρευθέω 'get red' (Luc., pap.) with ἐρεύθημα (Gal.), ἐρευθιάω 'id.' (Hp.; after the verbs of disease). On the plant name ἐρευθέδανον [n.] 'red dye, Rubia tinctorum' (Hdt., Thphr.), also ἐρυθρόδανον, see ►ἐρυθρός.
•ETYM The word ἐρεύθω is identical with ON rjóða 'to make bloody', OE rēodan 'to paint red'; ἔρευθος may also have an equivalent outside Greek, i.e. in Lat. rōbus, rōbur, -oris 'heartwood' (with ō < *eu, a non-Roman dialectal trait; see De Vaan 2008 s.v.), as heartwood is more red or brown than sapwood. Forms from an s-stem have been assumed in Greek, but see discussion on ►ἐρυσίβη 'rust'. An old formation is ►ἐρυθρός.

ἐρευνάω [v.] 'to search for (after), inquire' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1reu- 'search, inquire'► •VAR Hell. (LXX, pap., NT, etc.) also ἐραυνάω with ευ > αυ (cf. Schwyzer: 126 and 198); aor. ἐρευνῆσαι.
•COMP Also with prefixes ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, κατ- et al.
•DER (δι-)ἐρευνητής 'inquirer' (X.) with ἐρευνήτρια [f.] (Corn.), (δι-)ἐρεύνησις 'inquiry' (Str.), (δι-, ἐξ-)ἐρευνητικός (Str.). Also the back-formation ἔρευνα [f.], late also ἔραυνα (cf. above) 'id.' (S., E., Arist.).
•ETYM Like ►ἐρεείνω, ἐρευνάω is derived from a verb εἴρομαι, ἐρέ(ϝ)-ω 'ask' via a noun *ἐρεϝ-(ε)ν-, and modelled on the verbs in -νάω. A transformation of this noun could be seen in ON raun [f.] 'attempt, test, inquiry', from IE $h_1$rou-n-eh_2-. Further see ►εἴρομαι, ►ἐρωτάω.

ἐρέφω [v.] 'to cover, provide with a roof' (Pi., Ar.). ◁IE $h_1$reb^h- 'cover, roof'▷ •VAR Also ἐρέπτω (Pi., B., Cratin.); aor. ἐρέψαι (Il.), fut. ἐρέψω (A., E.).
•COMP Sometimes with prefix ἀμφ-, ἐπ-, κατ-; as a second member e.g. in ὑψ-όροφος 'with high roof' (Hom.); also ὑψ-ερεφής, -ηρεφής 'id.' (Hom.), κατ-ηρεφής 'with a roof, vaulted' (Il.), πετρ-ηρεφής 'vaulted with rocks' (A., E.) et al.
•DER ἔρεψις 'roofing' (Thphr.) with ἐρέψιμος (Pl.); with ablaut ὄροφος [m.] 'cover, roof' (Orac. apud Hdt. 7, 140, A.), also 'thatch for a roof' (Ω 451), ὀροφή [f.] 'roof', especially 'ceiling' (IA, Od.) with ὀροφίας name of a snake (Ar. V. 206), = ὄφις τῶν κατ' οἰκίαν H.; cf. Georgacas 1956: 126; ὀρόφινος 'covered with thatch' (Aen. Tact.), ὀροφ-ιαῖος, -ιος, -ικός 'ptng. to the ὀροφή (ὄροφος)' (Att., Hell.); denominative verb ὀροφόω 'roof, cover' (Hell.) with ὀρόφωμα, ὀρόφωσις.
•ETYM The only correspondences are the second member in OHG hirni-reba 'skull' (properly "brain-cover") and the Gm. word for 'rib' (as "cover of the breast"): OHG rippa, rippi, OE ribb, ON rif [n.], IE $h_1$reb^h-io-, and also Ru. rebró 'id.' < $h_1$reb^h-ro-. Both ὀροφή and ὄροφος contain two o-grades, the first of which must be secondary (double ablaut?); there is no vowel assimilation.

Ἐρεχθεύς ⇒Ἐριχθόνιος.

ἐρέχθω [v.] 'to rend, break' (Ψ 317, ε 83, h.Ap. 358). ◁PG(V)▷
•VAR Only present.
•DER Plant name ἐρεχθῖτις = ἠριγέρων (Ps.-Dsc.); see André RPh. 45 (1971): 216f.: 'the one that breaks'. On ►Ἐρεχθεύς, Att. vases Ερεχσες, etc. see ►Ἐριχθόνιος.
•ETYM Connected with Skt. rákṣas-, Av. rašah- 'destruction, damage', YAv. rāšaiieṇte [3pl.pres.] 'damage'. Semantic objections are voiced by Kretschmer KZ 31 (1892): 432f. The connection is 'unglaubhaft' to Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 423 and Gunnarsson NTS 24 (1971): 64ff. Improbable analysis of -χθ- from -ḱs-d^h- by Lipp, followed by LIV² s.v. (h_1)reḱs-.

ἐρέω 1 'ask'. ⇒εἴρομαι.

ἐρέω 2 [v.fut.] 'say'. ⇒εἴρω 2.

ἐρῆμος 'lonely, uninhabited, deserted', of places and things, people and animals (Il.). ◁IE h_1r(e)h_1- 'loose, rare, separate'▷ •DIAL Myc. e-re-mo /erēmos/ describing land. Younger Att. ἔρημος.
•COMP Also in compounds, e.g. ἐρημο-νόμος 'living in loneliness' (A. R.), late. As a second member in παν-, φιλ-, ὑπ-έρημος et al.
•DER Poetical derivatives ἐρημ-αῖος (Emp., A. R.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 49), -εῖος (Mykonos); fem. ἐρημάς (Man.; Chantraine 1933: 354f.). Abstract ἐρημία 'loneliness, solitude, lack' (IA) with ἐρημίτης, ἐρημικός 'id.' (LXX). Denominative verbs ἐρημόομαι, -όω 'to become or make desolate, destroyed or looted' (Pi., IA), together with ἐρήμωσις (LXX), ἐρημωτής (AP); also with prefix ἀπ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, with ἀπέρημος (sch.). ἐρημάζω [v.] 'to live in solitude' (Thphr.).

•ETYM The Greek form mechanically requires $h_1$reh_1-mo- (zero grade would have given two short vowels, cf. ὄνομα < h_3nh_3-mn-); the root would agree with Lith. ìrti 'disintegrate', 1sg. yrù. It has been connected with Lat. rārus, which would have to be from h_1r̥h_1-ro- (Schrijver 1991: 310f. is undecided between zero grade and full grade, but the latter would require *Hreh_2- which would not be compatible with the Greek evidence); Lat. rēte 'net' could be from $h_1$reh_1-t- (Beekes 1969: 36), but is now also connected with Lith. rētas 'rare, thin, slow' et al. (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). Skt. r̥-té 'with exception of, without' is unclear; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.

ἐρητύω [v.] 'to keep back, hinder'. ◁?▷
•VAR Aor. ἐρητῦσαι (Il.; rare S., E.), ἐρατύει S. OC 164 (lyr.), ἐράτοθεν (= ἐρήτυθεν B 99)· ἀνεπαύσαντο 'they stopped' (H.), on which cf. Schwyzer: 182, Hoffmann 1891: 166; 283, Bechtel 1921, 1: 401; DELG thinks it is not Cyprian.
•COMP Also with ἀπ-, κατ-.
•ETYM No etymology. Cf. on ►ἐρωή, ►ἐρωέω. If the -α- is reliable, we could reconstruct $h_1$reh_2-tu-.

ἔρθει [v.] · φθέγγεται 'utters' (H.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

ἐρι- [pref.] 'very, high' (Il.). ◁IE ser- 'high'▷ •DIAL Perhaps in Myc. e-ri- /eri-/.
•COMP Especially in bahuvrīhis like ἐρί-(γ)δουπος, -σθενής, -τιμος, -αύχην; also ἐρι-βρεμέτης, -δμᾶτος (A. Ag. 1461 [lyr.]) et al.; cf. Chantraine REGr. 49: 406.
•ETYM Willi KZ 112 (1999): 87-100 follows Heubeck in connecting Hitt. šēr 'high, up', and separates ►ἀρι-. Some semantic traces of this etymology may be found, e.g. ἐρι-αύχην 'with the neck high, in height', etc. (ibid.: 96f.).

ἐρίηρες [adj.] perhaps 'faithful'. ◁IE ueh$_1$r- 'true'▷ •VAR Acc.pl. -ας; secondary sing. ἐρίηρος, said of ἑταῖρος (Hom., formulaic), also of ἀοιδός (α 346, θ 62 = 471).
•ETYM A bahuvrīhi compound of ►ἦρα and ἐρι-. It has also been compared with βρίηρον· μεγάλως κεχαρισμένον (H.).

ἐριθάκη [f.] 'bee bread' (a kind of wax) (Arist. Varr. Plin.). ◁PG?▷ •ETYM Hesychius comments: ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν μελισσῶν παρατιθεμένη τροφή καὶ τὸ ἐγκοίλιον τῶν ἰχθύων τῶν μαλακῶν· καὶ τὰ τῶν ὑῶν ἔμβρυα, 'the food provided by bees; the intestines of fish; the young of swine'. DELG remarks: "The gloss gives two informations: on the one hand the meaning 'interior of crustaceans', which arose from the resemblance between the two materials, explains the adjective ἐριθακώδης 'full of ἐριθάκη', epithet of γραῖαι 'crabs' (Epich. 61); on the other hand, it appears that the 'bee-bread' was (be it wrongly) considered as food of the bees [in reality they use it to close openings in the walls of the bee-hive], which would explain the connection with ἔριθος." The latter remark is not very clear; perhaps Chantraine refers to the fact that ἐριθακίς means 'drone'. Pre-Greek, acc. to Nehring Glotta 14 (1925): 183. See ►ἔρῖθος.

ἐρίθακος [m.] name of a bird, probably 'robin redbreast, Erithacus rubecula' (Arist.), see Thompson 1895 s.v. ⊲PG?⊳ •VAR ἐριθεύς (Thphr.), ἐρίθυλος (sch.).
•DER Adj. ἐριθακώδης (γραῖαι Epich. 61; meaning unclear; see ►ἐριθάκη).
•ETYM Connection with ►ἔριθος suggested by Frisk, but DELG does not understand why. See Boßhardt 1942: 67ff. and Thompson 1895 s.v.

ἔρῑθος [m., f.] 'day-labourer', of reapers, sheaf-binders (Σ 550, 560), 'spinner' (S., D. with folk-etymological connection with ἔριον), 'servant, etc.' in general (h.Merc. 296, etc.). ⊲PG⊳ •COMP Comp. συν-έριθος [m., f.] 'helper, labourer' (Od.), φιλ-έριθος 'who loves spinning' (Theoc., AP). With the familiarizing suffix -κ-: ἐριθακίς [f.] (Theoc.).
•DER Denominative verb ἐριθεύομαι (rare -εύω, also with ἐξ-) 'to be a day-labourer, work for wages, try to obtain a favour or a job' (LXX, Arist.) with ἐριθεία 'trying to get a position' (Arist.), ἐριθευτός 'bribed' (Creta, Delphi). Unclear Ἐριθάσεος epithet of Apollo (Attica IV[a]).
•ETYM No etymology; in the same semantic sphere as δοῦλος, thus Pre-Greek? Cf. the suffix -ιθ- (Pre-Greek: suffixes).

ἐρῑνεός [m.] 'wild fig-tree, Ficus caprificus' (Il., Hes., Arist.), opposed to συκῆ; cf. Strömberg 1937: 166[1]. ⊲PG⊳ •VAR ἐρινός [m.] (Stratt., Theoc., Delos, etc.; cf. ἀδελφεός : -φός), Att. also ἐρινεώς (Delos, Com.; after other tree-names in -εώς).
•DIAL Myc. e-ri-no-wo, -wo-to /erinwos, -otos/.
•DER ἐρινεόν, -νόν 'wild fig' (com., Arist., Thphr.); ἐρινάς [f.] = ἐρινεός (Nic.; like κοτινάς, etc.; Chantraine 1933: 353); adjective ἐρίνεος, -νοῦς 'belonging to a fig-tree' (Epich., E.), ἐρινεώδης 'full of fig-trees' (Str.); denominative verb ἐρινάζω 'to caprificate', with ἐρινασμός (Thphr.): to hang branches of wild fig near the cultivated one, so that insects will bring over pollen (see Thphr. s.v. ψήν; Perpillou RPh. 71 (1997): 160 adds: "le figuier sauvage serait alors le figuier-bouc, fécondateur considéré le mâpe de l'espèce", but this is hardly understandable as an etymology).
•ETYM Recalling Messen. τράγος = ἐρινεός (Paus. 4, 20, 2) and Lat. caprificus, Prellwitz BB 22 (1897): 284f. compared an old word for 'he-goat', which is also found in ►ἔριφος. This is now accepted by Perpillou. Acc. to Chantraine 1933: 203 and Schwyzer: 491, however, the word is Pre-Greek (cf. κότινος 'wild olive'; ὄλυνθος 'wild fig').

ἔρῑνος [m.] plant name (Nic., Ps.-Dsc.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unexplained. See André 1956 s.v. erineos.

Ἐρῑνῦς, -ύος [f.] name of an avenging goddess; as an appellative 'revenge, curse' (Il.), name of Demeter in Arcadia (Antim., Call., Paus. 8, 25, 6). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR On the length of the υ see LSJ. Ερινυυς is rejected by LSJ.
•DIAL Myc. E-ri-nu.
•DER ἐρινυώδης 'like the E.' (Plu.); ἐρινύω = θυμῷ χρῆσθαι (Arc., Paus. l.c., EM), cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 390.

•ETYM A connection with the mythical stallion Ἐρίων (Ἀρίων, Ὀρίϝων; Bechtel 1921, 1: 349) requires further demonstration. Pre-Greek origin can be expected, cf. Herter Lexis 3 (1954): 232 and Arena Helikon 6 (1966): 144f.
Neumann Sprache 32 (1986): 43-51 proposes an IE reconstruction eri-snh₁-u-* 'who provokes struggle', from sneh₁-* as in νεῦρον. This would give, however, eri-san-u-* > eri-(h)anu-*; this could be avoided by assuming that the laryngeal was lost in the compound. However, does 'provoke struggles' fit the Erinyes? Heubeck Glotta 64 (1986): 164 states that such a meaning "zwar nicht restlos geschwunden, aber doch... weitgehend zurückgedrängt worden ist".
In sum, there is no good IE etymology and the word is probably Pre-Greek. For an Indo-European etymology, the ending -ῦς would have to be from -uH-s, i.e. -u-h₂-, but a "Motions-femininum" of this type is not known in Greek. Thus, the ending seems to be Pre-Greek. Moreover, the variation ν/νν may represent a palatalized phoneme nʸ (cf. lʸ in Ἀχιλ(λ)εύς; for the phenomenon see Pre-Greek: B 1).

ἔριον ⇒εἶρος.

ἐριούνης [adj.] of Hermes (Υ 34, θ 322), late of θεοί (Ant. Lib. 25, 2), νόος (Orph. L. 199). ⊲?⊳
•VAR ἐριούνιος (Il., h.Merc., Ar. Ra. 1144).
•ETYM The ancient scholars wrongly associated this word with various simplicia, connecting it with different qualities of Hermes: e.g., οὔνης· κλέπτης, οὔνιος· [εὔνις,] δρομεύς, κλέπτης 'runner, thief' (H.); cf. Leumann 1950: 123. Better glosses are οὖνον· [ὑγιές.] Κύπριοι δρόμον 'course' and οὔνει (for οὔνη?)· δεῦρο, δράμε. Ἀρκάδες 'Over here! Run! (Arc.)'. Here further belongs the Cypr. PN Φιλουνίου [gen.], cf. Φιλόδρομος. Would Ἐρι-ούνης, -ούνιος then be the quick messenger of the gods? Thus Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 192ff., but doubted by O. Masson 1961: 256[1]. See also Ruijgh 1957: 136, 142.

ἔρις, -ιδος [f.] 'strife, quarrel, contention' (Il.); on the mg. in Hom. Trümpy 1950: 139ff. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Acc. also -ιν.
•COMP As a second member in δύσ-ερις (Att.), also with compositional lengthening δύσ-ηρις (Pi.) 'arousing [bad] struggle'.
•DER Denominative verbs: ἐρίζω 'to fight, wrangle, quarrel' (Il.; enlarged from *ἐρί-ω?), whence ἔρισμα 'quarrel' = 'object of the quarrel' (Δ 38), ἐρισμός 'id.' (Timo), ἐριστικός 'quarrelsome' (Pl., Arist.), ἐριστής 'quarreler' (LXX Ps. 138 [139], 20; v.l.). ἐριδαίνω 'id.' (Il.; only present beside unclear ἐρῑδήσασθαι Ψ 792; cf. Chantraine 1942: 416). ἐριδμαίνω 'to provoke, irritate' (Π 260), = ἐριδαίνω (Hell.); after the verbs in -μ-αίνω like πημ-αίνω; see Schwyzer: 724.
•ETYM Unknown etymology. Because of the PNs Ἀμφ-, Ἀν-ήρι-τος (Bechtel 1917a: 7; also -ιστος), ἔρις must be an original ι-stem; therefore, connection with ἐρείδω 'prop, support' is excluded. Neither is there evidence for relation to ►ὀρίνω, ►ἐρέθω, ►Ἐρινύς. Hardly related to Skt. ári-, arí- [m.] 'stranger, enemy, etc.'.

ἐρίσφηλος [adj.] epithet of Heracles (Stesich. 82). ⊲?⊳

•DER Beside it ἄσφηλοι· ἀσθενεῖς. σφηλὸν γὰρ τὸ ἰσχυρόν 'weak, for σφηλὸν means strong' (H.), but the mg. does not fit.
•ETYM Unexplained; ►σφάλλω has an entirely different meaning.

ἔριφος [m. f.] 'young goat, kid' (Il., Crete); in plur. name of a constellation of stars (Democr., Theoc.; see Scherer 1953: 124f.). ◄?►
•DER Hypocoristic diminutive ἐρίφιον (Athenio Com.) with ἐριφιήματα· ἔριφοι. Λάκωνες 'kids (Lacon.)' (H.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 178, Schwyzer: 523); adj. ἐρίφειος 'belonging to ἔριφος' (Com., X.); Ἐρίφιος epithet of Dionysus in Metapontum (Apollod.; cf. on Εἰραφιώτης); ἐριφέας (for *ἐριφίας?)· χίμαρος 'he-goat' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like ►ἔλαφος 'deer' et al. Resembles a word for 'goat, deer' in OIr. erp (erb), probably < PCl. erbā-*; see Matasović 2008 s.v.; Arm. oroǰ 'agnus, agna' < er-oǰ*, also erinǰ 'young cow' (unclear) and Lat. ariēs, -ētis, U erietu 'arietem' are much farther away. In ►ἐρῑνεός 'wild fig', an old word for 'buck' has also been supposed.

Ἐριχθόνιος [m.] name of a hero and king of Athens, son of Ge, father of Pandion (A., E.); also name of a Trojan, son of Dardanos, father of Tros (Υ 219, 230). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Cf. Ἐρεχθεύς (Β 547, η 80), which is also an epithet of Poseidon (inscr.); on Attic vases Ἐρεχσες, together with Ἐρεχθηΐς [f.] name of an Att. phyle (D., inscr.), Ἐρεχθεΐδαι [pl.] name of the Athenians (Pi.). These names were taken to mean 'who tears apart, shaker [of the earth]', but see below. Also Ἐριχθευς (Pape and Benseler 1911: 379). Note the soothsayer Ερıχθώ in Thessaly (Luc. Phars., see also Ov. Her. 15, 139), which confirms (Pre-)Greek origin.
•DIAL Att. vases Ερεχσες (Schwyzer 326) a hero and king of Athens (Β 543, η 81).
•DER οἱ Ἐριχθονίδαι = Ἐρεχθεΐδαι (IG 3, 771; poet., Roman times).
•ETYM Probably a very old name; already the fact that Erichthonios is called the son of the Earth, points to Pre-Greek origin. There is no good explanation for the coexistence of Ἐρεχθεύς and Ἐριχθόνιος, cf. the by-form in -ων of Hermes, and cf. Ἐρυσίχθων. Is the form with -χσ- an Atticism, or does it have a wider spread? Connection with ἐρέχθω is improbable. Ἐρεχθεύς, etc. are rather short forms of Ἐριχθόνιος, and were later connected with ►ἐρέχθω by folk-etymology. Ἐρεχθεύς / Ερεχσες is clearly a Pre-Greek name; more forms are given by Fur.: 263. It continues a pre-form Erektʸeu-*, cf. the alternation in μόροχθος / ►μόροξος.

ἐριώλη [f.] 'whirlwind, hurricane' (Ar. Eq. 511, A. R.). ◄?► •VAR On the accent see Hdn. Gr. 1, 324.
•ETYM Unexplained. Perhaps from *ϝελι-ϝωλη (from εἰλέω 'roll, turn, wind'), with intensive reduplication and dissimilation λ-λ > ρ-λ?

ἕρκος [n.] 'fence, enclosure, courtyard; net' (Il.). ◄IE? serk-* 'twine'► •COMP As a second member e.g. in εὐ-ερκής 'well-fenced' (Il.); as a first member in ἑρκο-θηρ-ικός 'ptng. to the hunt with a net' (Pl. Soph. 220c).
•DER ἑρκίον 'fence' (Il., cf. τειχίον: τεῖχος et al.); ἕρκειος, ἑρκεῖος (after οἰκεῖος et al.) 'belonging to the ἕρκος, court-yard', especially as an epithet of Zeus protecting the house, whose altar is in the courtyard (χ 935); ἑρκίτης 'a slave belonging to the place' (Amer. apud Ath. 6, 267c, H.).
Further ἑρκάνη 'fence' (late) from cross with ὀρκάνη 'id.' (A., E.), which has o-grade like ►ὅρκος; cf. Chantraine 1933: 198. Glosses ἕρκατος· φραγμός 'fence', ἑρκάτη· φυλακή 'watch, guard' (H.), Ὅρκατος locality in Calymna (inscr. IIᵃ; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 147); on the suffix cf. ὄρχατος; see also ►ἔρχατος.
•ETYM Apparently a verbal noun (like τέλος, γένος, etc.), but there is no corresponding verb. Meringer IF 17 (1904-1905): 157f. connected it as *'wicker-work' with Lat. sarciō, -īre 'to twine, restore', properly *'to sew together'; cf. sartum tectum 'unviolated, complete', properly *'twined and covered', sarcina [f.] 'bundle'. Lat. sarciō belongs to Hitt. šar-nin-k- (nasal infix present) 'to restore damage, make amends'. On ἕρκος ὀδόντων, see Humbach MSS 21 (1967): 24ff. (it denotes the lips, not the teeth).

ἕρμα 1 [n.] 'prop, support', of the stones or beams put under the ships when drawn ashore (in plur., Il. and h.Ap. 507); metaph. of men, 'support, column' (Il.); 'underwater cliff on which a ship gets stuck' (Alc. Supp. 26, 6, Hdt. 7, 183, Th. 7, 25); 'stone (or any other weight) that can serve as ballast' (Ar., Arist.); 'heap of stones' (S. Ant. 848 [lyr.], AP 9, 319). ◄?►
•DER ἑρμῖς (or -ῖν), acc. ἑρμῖνα, dat.pl. -ῖσιν 'post of a bed' (θ 278, ψ 198, Hdt. 3, 16; cf. ῥηγμῖν- from ῥῆγμα, σταμῖν-, etc.); cf. Hdn. Gr. 2, 431 with etymological speculations. ἕρμαξ [f.] 'heap of stones' (Nic. et al.), MoGr. ἑρμακιά (ἀρ-) 'wall of dry stones', many derivatives in the dialects of lower Italy, see Rohlfs 1930: 78f.; ἕρμακες· ὕφαλοι πέτραι 'rocks under the sea' (H.: cf. λίθαξ, μύλαξ, etc.). ἑρμεών· σωρὸς λίθων 'heap of stones' (H.), cf. βολεών s.v. βάλλω, etc. ἑρματίτης πέτρος 'stone serving as ballast' (Lyc. 618). ἑρματικός 'fixed' (κράββατος, PGen. 68, 10; IVᵖ). ἑρμαῖος λόφος 'heap of stones' (π 471; uncertain, cf. on Ἑρμῆς). Denominative verbs: ἑρμάζω 'to support, make stable' (Hp.) with ἕρμασμα, -σμός (Hp.), ἕρμασις (Erot., also Troezen IVᵃ [-σσ-]; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 149); ἑρματίζω 'id.' (Hp.). See ►Ἑρμῆς (Ἑρμείας, Ἑρμάων).
•ETYM Formally, ἕρμα seems to be a verbal noun in -μα with regular e-vocalism of the root. For an etymology, one might think of Lith. sveriù 'weigh' and relatives, in which case it would originally mean 'heavy weight, stone', from IE suér-mn*. However, because of the divergent meanings, two or three different words have been assumed: thus, ἕρμα 'cliff' was considered a separate word and connected with Skt. várṣman- [n.] 'height, hill, top, point' (e.g. in WP 1, 267). However, this etymology disregards the fact that cliffs under the sea surface are denoted. On the other hand, ἕρμα has been connected as ballast of a ship with Lith. 1sg. sveriù 'to weigh', svarùs 'heavy', OHG swār(i) 'heavy'. In the meaning 'support, prop', words for 'pole, etc.' have been connected, e.g. Skt. sváru- 'sacrificial post', OE swer 'post, column', Lat. surus 'twig, sprout, pole'. However, it is doubtful whether ἕρμα ever meant 'pole'. An attempt to combine all meanings was made by Porzig 1942: 266: the original meaning would be 'stone [for supporting a ship]', whence 'stones for ballast', and on the other hand, sarcastically, also 'cliffs under the sea'. Kretschmer Kleinasiatische Forschungen 1 (1927): 4 thinks that ἕρμα is Anatolian, pointing to the Lydian river Ἕρμος (πολυψήφιδα παρ' Ἕρμον Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 55) and to Lycian PNs in Erm-, Arm-. Chantraine Ant. class. 22 (1953): 69 is also in favor of non-IE origin. There seems no reason, however, to assume foreign origin.

ἕρματα 2 ⇒εἴρω 1.

ἕρμαιον ⇒Ἑρμῆς.

ἑρμηνεύς [m.] 'interpreter, translator' (Pi. O. 2, 85), also 'interpreter' in general (IA). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἑρμανεύς (Pi.).
•DER Denominative verb ἑρμηνεύω (-μαν- Epid.), also with prefix δι-, ἐξ- et al., 'interpret, translate', also 'explain' (IA) with several derivatives: ἑρμηνεία 'interpretation, explanation, way of expression, style' (Pl., X., Arist.); ἑρμήνευσις 'id.' (D. C., Longin.); ἑρμηνεύματα [pl.] 'id.' (E., Ph.); ἑρμηνευτής = ἑρμηνεύς (Ph Plt. 290c, LXX Ge. 42, 23, Poll. 5, 154; cf. Fraenkel 1912: 63) with ἑρμηνεύτρια [f.] (sch.); ἑρμηνευτικός 'ptng. to interpretation' (Pl.), cf. Chantraine 1956a: 134 und 137.
•ETYM Technical expression without etymology, probably of Anatolian origin (so possibly Pre-Greek); cf. Boßhardt 1942: 36f. and Krahe Die Antike 15 (1939): 181. Wrong attempts at an IE explanation, connecting it with to εἴρω 'string, attach', εἴρω 'say', Lat. sermō, are found in old dictionaries like Bq. See also ►Ἑρμῆς.

Ἑρμῆς, -οῦ [m.] Hermes, son of Zeus and Maia; also 'herm, head of a herm' (Il.). ◄PG► •DIAL Myc. E-ma-a₂ (dat.), Ἑρμείας, -έας, Ἑρμείης (Call.), Ἑρμᾶς (Dor. Boeot.), Ἑρμάων (Hes.), Ἑρμάν, -ᾶνος (Lac. Arc.), Ἑρμάου, -άο, -ᾶ (Thess. dat.), Ἕρμαον (Cret. acc.).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἑρμο-γλυφεῖον (Pl.) with backformation ἑρμογλυφεύς, -ικός, -ος (Luc. et al.), see ►γλύφω.
•DER Hypocoristic diminutive Ἑρμίδιον (Ar.), -άδιον (Luc.; also 'small herm' [Lydia]), after the nouns in -ίδιον, -άδιον. Ἑρμαῖος 'belonging to H., of H.', also as a month name (A., S.), probably also Ερμαῖος λόφος (π 471), if not from ►ἕρμα; ntr. Ἕρμαιον 'temple of Hermes' (Ephese), on the accent Hdn. Gr. 1, 369; plur. Ἕρμαια (ἱερά) 'festival for Hermes' (Att.); as an appellative ἕρμαιον [n.] "gift of Hermes", i.e. 'chance find, unexpected advantage' (Pl., S.); also a plant name (Strömberg 1940: 129); fem. Ἑρμαΐς (Hp.); Ἑρμαιών name of a month (Halicarn., Keos); Ἑρμαϊσταί [pl.] name of the worshippers of H., Mercuriales (Rhodos, Cos, Delos), cf. e.g. Ἀπολλωνιασταί and Chantraine 1933: 317; Ἑρμαϊκός (late). Ἑρμεῖα [pl.] mg. uncertain (Str. 8, 3, 12).
•ETYM Ἑρμῆς derives from epic Ἑρμέας < Ἑρμείας; cf. Αἰνείας. Myc. e-ma-a₂ /Hermāhās/ shows the original form, and excludes an old form with the suffix *-ᾱϝων, which has been suggested for e.g. Ἑρμάν and Ἑρμάων (Hes.). Thus, connection with ►ἕρμα 1 should be rejected, since the model for a suffixation in -āhās is unclear. The Mycenaean form shows that it is an unanalysable Pre-Greek name. See Ruijgh REGr. 80 (1967): 12.

ἔρνος [n.] 'sprout, offshoot', originally of trees, also of men (Il.). ◄IE? $h_1$er- 'go'?► •VAR Also ἕρνος with secondary aspiration.

•COMP As a first member in ἐρνεσί-πεπλος (Orph. H. 30, 5; after ἑλκεσί-πεπλος), ἐρνοκόμων· παραδεισαρίων 'gardener' (H.). As a second member in εὐ-ερνής 'with good offshoots' (E., Str.), δυσ-ερνής (Poll.).
•DER Diminutive ἐρνίον (Hell.); ἐρνώδης [adj.] 'like a sprout' (Dsc.), ἐρνόομαι [v.] 'to sprout' (Ph.); two glosses in H.: ἔρνατις· ἀναδενδράς 'vine that grows up trees' (see Schwyzer 464) and ἔρνυτας· ἔρνη, βλαστήματα, κλάδοι 'sprouts, offshoots, shoots broken off', wrong for ἔρνυγας (Arist. Po. 1457b 35; after πτέρυξ, etc.; Schwyzer: 498).
•ETYM Formation in -νος (Schwyzer: 512, Chantraine 1933: 420), commonly derived from the root of ►ὄρνυμι, etc. (to which belongs synonymous ὄρμενος), but this had h_3- (and not h_1-), which means that the initial ε- would have to be secondary. Alternatively, simply from $h_1$er- 'go', for the semantics of which one might compare MoNw. run(n)e 'twig' to renna 'to run, shoot up, grow'. On the separation of $h_1$er- and $h_3$er-, see ►ὄρνυμι. One is further reminded of ►ἐρέθω and ►ἐρέας. For the suffix -νος, cf. ►τέρχνος. Formally, ἔρνος agrees with Skt. árṇas- [n.] 'flood, stream', but the reminiscence is probably secondary.

ἔρος ⇒ἔραμαι.

ἔροτις [f.] 'festival' (Aeol. acc. to H., Cypr. acc. to Eust.), epigraphically of king Nicocreon (Kaibel 1878: 846); perhaps in Chalcedon (SIG 1009); E. El. 625; ἐροτή (P.Oxy. 2084); on the use Bechtel 1921, 1: 119 and 447. ◄?►
•ETYM Perhaps related to ►ἔρανος and ►ἑορτή. "Aeolic" in Hesychius may mean "Arcado-Cypriot".

ἔρπις [?] 'wine' (Hippon. 79, 18, Lycophr.). ◄LW Eg.► •ETYM As the scholia indicate, this is the same word as Egyptian irp 'wine'. See Masson RPh. 88 (1962): 46-50.

ἕρπω [v.] 'to crawl, slink, go on all four', in Dor. also 'go' in general (Il.). ◄IE serp- 'crawl'► •VAR Aor. ἑρπύσαι (Att.; cf. ἑρπύζω below), ἕρψαι (LXX), fut. ἕρψω, also ἑρπύσω, Dor. ἑρψῶ.
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, ἐφ-, προσ-. As a first member in ἑρπ-άκανθα = ἄκανθος (Ps.-Dsc.).
•DER ἑρπετόν [n.] 'animal that goes (or crawls) on all fours' as opposed to birds (πετεινά) and men (IA, δ 418; Aeol. ὄρπετον with zero grade, on the formation see Vine 1998: 73f., who thinks the zero grade is secondary in this form); ἕρπης, -ητος [m.] 'shingles' (Hp.), ἑρπήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'id.' (Ph.; after λειχήν, etc.; also ἑρπήνη EM) with ἑρπηνώδης (Ph.); ἕρπηλα a shell-fish (Ath.; form uncertain); ἑρπηδών, -όνος [f.] 'crawling' (Nic.; Chantraine 1933: 360f.); ἑρπηστής 'crawling animal' (Nic., AP; rare like τευχηστής et al.; Chantraine 1933: 317); ἕρπυλλος [m., f.] 'tufted thyme' (Com.; after this Lat. serpullum) with ἑρπύλλ-ιον, -άριον 'id.' and ἑρπυλλίς 'grasshopper' (H.); uncertain ἑρπυξή (Dsc. 3, 69). ἕρψις 'crawling' (Pl., Arist.). An expressive enlargement is ἑρπύζω 'to crawl' (Il.; cf. Chantraine 1942: 336), to which belongs the Attic aorist ἑρπύσαι (after ἐρύσαι, ἑλκύσαι?); thence ἑρπυστικός (Hp., Arist.) and rare and late ἕρπυσις, -υσμός, -υστήρ, -υστής, -υστάζω. See also ► ὅρπηξ 'sprout, twig'.

•ETYM The word ἕρπω is identical with Skt. sárpati 'id.', Lat. serpō 'id.'. Several languages have derived the name of the snake from this root: Skt. sarpá- [m.], Lat. serpens, Alb. gjarpër. On meaning and spread of ἕρπω, see Bloch 1940: 71ff.

ἔρραος [m.] 'ram' (Lyc. 1316), 'wild boar' (Call. Fr. 335). ◄?►
•VAR H. has ἔρρα<ο>ς· κριός 'ram'.
•ETYM No etymology. See Meid AAHG 27 (1974): 53-55.

ἐρρεντί [adv.] unknown (Alc. Fr. 407 L.P.); cf. Hdn. Gr. 1, 505, 7 ἀπὸ τοῦ ἔρρω ἢ ἐρρῶ περισπωμένου ἡ μετοχὴ ἐρρείς, ἐρρέντος ὡς παρὰ τὸ ἐθέλοντος ἐθελοντί 'from ἔρρω or ἐρρῶ, with perispomenon, the participle ἐρρείς, ἐρρέντος, and like ἐθελοντί to ἐθέλοντος'. ◄?►
•VAR Cf. ἐρόντι· μάλα, λίαν, πάνυ 'very, much, certainly' (H.).
•ETYM See Brugmann IF 17 (1904-1905): 11 and Schwyzer: 623.

Ἐρρηφόρος ⇒ἀρρηφόρος and ἔρση.

Ἔρρος [m.] · ὁ Ζεύς (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unclear. Earlier proposals: to uorso-* in ► οὐρανός; or 'the god of Dew', an Att. msc. corresponding to Ἕρση 'Sister Dew'. Cf. also Ἑρσαῖος· ἄκριος Ζεύς (H.).

ἔρρω [v.] 'to go (away), disappear, go to ruin', mostly perfective 'to sod off, get lost' (Il.), mostly ipv. and in imperatival expressions. ◄IE uert-ie/o-* 'turn'► •VAR Locr. ϝερρέτω [ipv.], El. ϝάρρεν [inf.] (in imperatival function); non-presentic forms are rare: fut. ἐρρήσω (h.Merc. 259, Com.), aor. ἤρρησα (Com.), perf. εἰσ-ήρρηκα (Ar. Th. 1075).
•COMP Also with prefix ἀν-, ἀπ-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, περι-.
•ETYM Expressive word of the common and the poetic language, unknown to prose. The geminate -ρρ-, common to all dialectal forms, excludes derivation from uers-*. A reconstruction *ϝέρσ-ι̯ω and connection with Lat. verrō 'sweep', OCS vrъchǫ, vrěšti 'thresh', Hitt. u̯arš-^{i} 'reap, harvest, wipe' is semantically and formally difficult. Forssman 1980: 180ff. therefore proposes a pre-form uert-ie/o-, together with a new proposal for the development of the cluster -rti̯- (as opposed to -rs-*).

ἔρσαι [f.pl.] 'young animals, small lambs' (ι 222).
•ETYM Probably simply metonymic for ► ἔρση 'dew'; cf. the use of ► δρόσος in A. and Call. Cf. also μητέρες ψακαλοῦχοι (S. Fr. 793) to ψάκαλον (Ar. Byz.), from ψακάς 'fine rain, drops'; more details in Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἔρση. Acc. to Leumann 1950: 25[11], δρόσος in the meaning 'young animal' in A. and Call. stems from imitation of ι 222; ἔρσαι would be a homonym of ἔρση 'dew'.

ἔρση [f.] 'dew', plur. 'dewdrops' (Il.). ◄IE $h_1$uers-* 'rain'► •VAR Epic poet. ἐέρση, Dor. ἔρσᾱ, Pi. N. 3, 78 ἔερσᾰ (see Solmsen 1909: 240[1]); with different anlaut ἄερσαν· τὴν δρόσον. Κρῆτες 'dew (Cret.)' (H.), ἀέρσην (PLit. Lond. 60 [Hell.]).
•COMP As a second member perhaps in ► Λιτυέρσης, s.v.

•DER ἐρσήεις, ἐερσήεις 'dewy' (Il., AP), ἐρσαῖα· ἐαρινά, νέα, ἁπαλά, δροσώδη 'vernal, young, tender, dewy'; ἐρρήεντα· δροσώδη, καταψυκτικά 'dewy, cooling' (H.) with Att. -ρρ-, as against the hieratic Ionicism in Ἕρση, name of the daughter of Cecrops; ἐρσώδης 'dewy' (Thphr.).
•ETYM The name Ἐρρηφόροι is unclear; acc. to H., οἱ τῇ Ἕρσῃ ἐπιτελοῦντες τὰ νομιζόμενα 'who give to E. what is due', together with ἐρρηφορέω; also, ἐρσηφόροι, -ρία beside ἀρρη-φόροι; s.v.; see Nilsson 1941(1): 441. The normal form is ἐ(ϝ)έρση < $h_1$uers-;* forms like ἀέρση cited above are unexplained, as is ἔρσαι. Sanskrit has varṣá- [n.] 'rain' and várṣati [v.] 'it rains', IE $h_1$uérs-e-. Beside it exists the iterative-intensive $h_1$uors-eíe- > Gr. οὐρέω 'urinate' (euphemistically), with deverbal οὖρον; the laryngeal may have been lost here before the o-vocalism (Saussure effect); see also on ► οὐρανός. Because of the accent and because of the ε-vowel, ἔρση cannot be a verbal noun (one would expect οὐρά < u̯orsā); rather, it is a collective deriving from a neutral noun $h_1$uer-os-, $h_1$uer-s-*, and further cognates in e.g. MIr. frass 'rain'. The words ► ἄρσην and Skt. vṛ́ṣan- 'masculine, man, bull, stallion' are not to be connected (T. Pronk fthc.). Cf. DELG Supp.

ἔρσην ⇒ἄρσην.

ἔρτις [?] · κρημνός 'overhanging bank' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Acc. to DELG, the plant is meant in H.: κριμνούς· λευκάς τινας βοτάνας 'any pale grass'.
•DIAL Myc. e-ti-we /^{h}erti-went-/ and a-e-ti-to /a-^{h}erti-to-/.
•ETYM See the discussion in DELG Supp., referring to Duhoux 1993: 103, and in RPh. 74 (2000): 257.

ἐρυγγάνω ⇒ἐρεύγομαι 1 and ἐρεύγομαι 2.

ἐρυθρός [adj.] 'red' (Il.). ◄IE $h_1$reud^h-* 'red'► •VAR Myc. e-ru-to-ro, e-ru-ta-ra /eruthros, -ā/.
•COMP As a first member, e.g. ἐρυθρό-πους 'with red feet' (bird-name, Ar.); ἐξ-έρυθρος 'reddish' as a sign of illness (Hp., Arist.), λευκ-έρυθρος 'white-red, flat-red' (Arist.; Risch IF 59 (1949): 60).
•DER ἐρυθρίας [m.] "the red one", epithet after the red color (Arist.), cf. ὠχρίας, etc. and Chantraine 1933: 93; ἐρυθρῖνος, also ἐρυθῖνος (with dissimilation or after ἐρυθαίνομαι, see below) name of a fish (Arist.; Strömberg 1943: 21); Ἐρυθῖνοι [pl.] name of a town (B 855; cf. Ἐρυθραί below); ἐρυθρόδανον, -ος plant (Dsc.), also ἐρευθέδανον, see ► ἐρεύθω; ἐρυθραῖος = ἐρυθρός (D. P.); ἐρυθρότης 'red color' (Gal.). Ἐρυθραί [f.pl.] town in Ionia (Hdt.; after the red-colored rocks inside the town), together with Ἐρυθραϊκὸν σατύριον plant-name (Dsc., Plin.), also ἐρυθρόνιον (Ps.-Dsc.; after Ἰόνιον and other nouns in -όνιον); Ἐρυθραϊκός also from ἡ Ἐρυθρά (θάλασσα; adjunct of κυβερνήτης, inscr. I^P).
Denominative verbs: ἐρυθριάω 'to become red' (Att.; after the verbs of disease in -ιάω; Schwyzer: 732) with ἐρυθρίασις, -ησις (Hp., H.); ἐρυθραίνομαι, -ω 'to become, make red' (X.). Also ἐρυθαίνομαι, -ω, aor. ἐρύθηνα 'id.' (Il.) together with ἐρύθημα 'becoming red, redness' (Hp., Th.); see below.

•ETYM Old adjective in -ro-, a suffix also encountered in Lat. ruber, CS rъdrъ, ToA rtär, ToB ratre, Skt. rudhirá- (reshaped after rudhi- in rudhikrā́- name of a demon); ON roðra [f.] 'blood'. Other languages have a different stem: ON rjóðr, OE rēod have the same vowel as the verbs rjōða resp. rēodan (= ►ἐρεύθω, s.v.) and may therefore be secondary. Lith. raũdas, (dialectal) Lat. rūfus, rōbus, OIr. rúad, Skt. lohá- 'reddish' [m./n.] 'red metal, copper, iron' probably continue IE $h_1$roud^{h}o- rather than $h_1$reud^{h}o-, because of the vocalism found in most Gm. forms: Go. rauþs, ON rauðr, OE rēad, OHG rōt. Together with ἐρυθρός, the old denominative ἐρυθαίνομαι points to an original r/n-stem rud^h-r-, rud^h-n-. Perhaps a neutral s-stem $h_1$réud^h-os- (= ἔρευθος) existed, as well as a verb $h_1$réud^h-e/o- (= ἐρεύθω). Cf. also ►ἐρυσῖβη.

ἐρῦκω [v.] 'to hold back' (Il.). ◂IE ueru-* 'ward off, defend'▸ •VAR Aor. ἐρῦξαι, epic also ἠρύκακον, ἐρυκακέειν (Chantraine 1942: 398).

•COMP Also with prefix, notably ἀπ-, κατ-.

•DER κατερυκτικός 'holding back' (pap.). Enlarged presents ἐρυκάνω, -ανάω (Chantraine 1942: 316 and 360).

•ETYM Enlargement with -κ- like in ὀλέ-κω, διώ-κω et al. (Schwyzer: 702, Chantraine 1942: 329), from ἔρυμαι, ἐρύομαι 'ward off' rather than from ἐρύω 'draw'.

ἔρυμαι [v.] 'to keep off, protect, save' (Il.). ◂IE ueru-* (or uruH-*) 'ward off, defend'▸ •VAR Inf. ἔρυσθαι; impf. ἔρῡ-το, -σο; them. ἐρύομαι (ἐρύεσθαι, ἐρύετο), also ῥύομαι, inf. ῥῦσθαι, aor. ἐρύσ(σ)ασθαι, ῥύσασθαι, fut. ἐρύσσομαι, ῥύσομαι; also with anlauting εἰ-: εἴρῡτο, εἰρῡ́αται, -ατο, -ντο, perhaps reduplicated perfects with present-meaning (inf. εἴρυσθαι); thence, or through metrical lengthening, εἰρύσσασθαι, εἰρύσσονται, εἰρύομαι; cf. also below; aor. pass. ἐρρύσθην (Ev. Luc. 1, 74, 2. Ep. Ti. 4, 17, Hld. 10, 7).

•DIAL Myc. -u-ru-to /-wru(n)toi/ or /-wrust^{h}ōn/.

•COMP As a first member: ἐρυ- in'Ερύ-λαος,'Ερύ-μας, -μηλος (also Εὐρυ-, either after εὐρύς or from ϝερυ- (?); see below); ἐρῡσι- in ἐρυσίπτολις 'protecting the town' (Z 305 et al.), ►'Ερυσίχθων; Aeol. Εὐρυσί-λαος (cf. above). ῥῡσί- e.g. in ῥῡσί-πολις (A. Th. 129 [lyr.] et al.).

•DER ἔρῡμα [n.] 'defence' (Il.), diminutive ἐρυμάτιον (Luc.); from there ἐρυμν-ός 'for defence, protected' (IA) with ἐρυμνότης 'defensive force' (X., Arist.), ἐρυμνόω 'defend' (Agath.). ἐρυσμός 'defence, protection' (h.Cer. 230). ἐρῡ́σιμον (εἰ- by metrical lengthening), name of a kind of mustard (Thphr., Dsc.), because of its protection (Strömberg 1940: 81); from *ἔρῡ-σις or directly from the verb. ῥῡτήρ [m.] 'protector, watcher' (ρ 187, 223), ῥῡ́τωρ 'id.' (A. Th. 318 [lyr.], AP). ῥῡ́σιος 'saving' (A. Supp. 150 [lyr.], AP), after the adjs. in -σιος (Chantraine 1933: 41) or from ῥῦσις 'saving' (Epigr. Gr. 200 [Cos], LXX). ῥῦμα 'defence' (Hp., trag.).

•ETYM The Skt. nouns varū-tár- [m.] 'protector', várū-tha- [n.] 'defense, protection' (with vṛṇóti 'avert', Go. warjan 'ward off', etc.) speak in favor of the assumption of original *ϝέρυ-μαι. Doubts arise because of the absence of a trace of the digamma in Homer; attempts at a solution are in Solmsen 1901: 245ff. Therefore, we have two ablaut grades, ϝερυ- and ϝρῡ-, the latter of which is certainly in εἴρῡται < ϝέ-ϝρῡ-ται, etc. (cf. above), but with otherwise unclear distribution. The initial vowel in the Ionic present εἰρύομαι and in Εὐρυσί-λαος form an unsolved problem. Hackstein 2002: 123-131 offers a new interpretation. He derives the forms from the root suerh$_3$-, which he reconstructs for ὁράω. Essential to him is the assumption that the zero grade sur̥h$_3$-* became sruh$_3$-* > srū-*, according to the rule that in some cases, -ur- was metathesized to -ru- (like in k^{w}etur̥-* > k^{w}etru-). I suppose that he assumes that seru-* arose secondarily from sru-*. In Myc. -u-ru-to /-wruntoi/, sru- was restored to wru-. Myc. o-ro-me-no would represent an athematic sur̥h$_3$-, which according to him gave suoro- (but he also speaks of o-vocalism in this form, p. 128). This hypothesis is difficult to assess.

ἐρυσῖβη [f.] 'rust in plants' (Pl., X., Arist.; long ī in Orph. L. 600). ◂PG▸

•DER ἐρυσιβώδης 'eaten by rust' (Arist., Thphr.), ἐρυσίβιος epithet of Apollo in Rhodos (Str.). Denominative verb ἐρυσιβάω, -όομαι 'suffer from rust', also factitive -όω (Thphr.). There is an epithet of Apollo 'Ερυθῖβιος (Str. 13,1,64, v.l. 'Ερεθίβιος; with ἐρεάζω),'Ερεθῖμιος,'Ερεδῖμιος (inscr. Rhodes),'Ερεθυμιάζω (Lyc. inscr.); further ἐρυσῖβη epithet of Demeter (Et. Gud. 210, 25); Str. 13, 1, 64 says: 'Ρόδιοι δὲ 'Ερυθιβίου Ἀπόλλωνος ἔχουσι ἐν τῃ χώρᾳ ἱερὸν, τὴν ἐρυσίβην καλοῦντες ἐρυθίβην 'The Rhodians, who say ἐρυθίβην instead of ἐρυσίβην, have a sanctuary of Apollo 'Ερυθίβιος on their territory'. See below.

•ETYM Popular word with a suffix -β- (Chantraine 1933: 260ff.). The stem ἐρυσι- is also found in ►ἐρυσίπελας and in the plant name ἐρυσί-σκηπτρον (Thphr., Dsc.). It recalls verbal first members of the type τερψίμβροτος (Schwyzer: 443), but it has also been considered an old s-enlargement of the word for 'red' (see ►ἐρυθρός, ►ἐρεύθω), which may also be found in Lat. russus (but see De Vaan 2008 s.v.), Lith. raũsvas 'red', OCS rusъ 'reddish blond', Gm. words like OHG rost 'rust', etc.; IE $h_1$reud^h-s-* ($h_1$roud^h-s-, $h_1$rud^h-s-) derived from the s-stem in ἔρευθος? However, Fur.: 214, 255f. correctly saw that the word is Pre-Greek, because of the alternations of dental (θ, δ) with s and β/μ (ibid. 248-263 and 203-221). The long ī is also typical for Pre-Greek word formation (Pre-Greek: suffixes -īβ-, -īγ-, -īδ-, īθ-, -īκ-, -īν-). The word must have been folk-etymologically influenced by Gr. ἐρυθ-.

ἐρύσιμον ⇒ἔρυμαι.

ἐρυσίπελας, -τος [n.] name of a skin disease, 'Erysipelas'. ◂PG▸

•VAR Often in plur.

•DER Adjective -ατώδης (Hp., Gal.).

•ETYM Medical term of unusual formation; a learned compound? The first member also occurs in ►ἐρυσῖβη (?) and in the plant name ἐρυσί-σκηπτρον (Thphr.); a word πέλας is further unknown, but cf. however on ►πέλμα. Therefore, properly "what reddens the skin" (Schwyzer: 443[5])? Of course, it may also be of Pre-Greek origin, like the beginning of the word (there seems no reason for the suggestion by Fur.: 214[60] that it would be from ἐρύω).

ἐρύω, -ομαι [v.] 'to draw, tear, draw towards one' (Il.). Details in Chantraine 1942: 30, 136f., etc. ◂IE ueru-* 'draw' ?▸

•VAR εἰ- (Hdt., Hp.), inf. εἰρύμεναι (Hes. Op. 818, verse-initially; cf. Chantraine 1942: 294), aor. ἐρύσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι (also εἰ- Hdt., Hp.), pass. ἐρυσθῆναι, εἰ- (Hp.), Dor. ϝερυσάτω [ipv.] (Delphi IV^a; uncertain), fut. ἐρύω, -ομαι (Hom.), ἐρύσω (Opp.), ἐρύσσω, -ομαι (Orph.; as a v.l. in Φ 176), perf. pass. εἴρῡμαι, εἰρῡ́αται.
•COMP Also with prefix ἀν- (ἀϝ-), ἐξ-, κατ-, προ-, etc. As a first member in ἐρῠσάρματες [ἵπποι] '[horses] drawing the chariot' (Hom.); on the formation Sommer 1948: 11f.
•DER Rarely ἐρυ-: ἔρῠ-σις 'the drawing' (Max. Tyr.), ἐρῠ-τήρ 'the drawer' (Nic.), ἐρυ-σ-τός (S.). Various old words have ῥῡ- (ῥῠ-): ῥῡ-τήρ [m.] 'rein, rope' (Il.), also 'bow-stretcher, archer' (Od.); ῥῡ́-τωρ 'bow-stretcher' (Ar. Th. 108 [lyr.]); ῥῡ-μός [m.] 'pole of a chariot, etc.' (Il.); ῥῦ-μα 'that which is drawn' (A., X.); ῥῡ́-μη 'force, pressure' (Hp.); ῥῡ-τός 'drawn' (ῥυτοῖσι λάεσσι ζ 267; ξ 10), ῥῡ-τά [n.pl.] 'reins' (Hes. Sc. 308); with a suffix -ιο- ῥύσιον, Dor. ῥύτιον *'what is drawn forth', i.e. 'deposit, retribution' (Il.); see further ► ῥῠτίς 'fold, wrinkle', ► ῥῡσός 'wrinkly'. Enlargement ῥυστάζω 'to draw to and fro, maltreat' (Hom.) together with ῥυστακτῦς (σ 224), ῥύσταγμα (Lyc. 1089).
•ETYM In the perfect, *ϝέ-ϝρῡ-μαι gave εἴρῡμαι. For the initial digamma in (ϝ)ερύω, note especially epic (Aeol.) αὐερύω = ἀϝ-ϝερύω, ἀν-ϝερύω, βρυτῆρες = ῥυτῆρες (A. D.). This undoubtedly old verb has no certain correspondences outside Greek. On ambivalent Lat. rŭdēns 'sail of a ship', see WH and E-M s.v.

ἔρφος [n.] 'skin' (Nic. Al. 248, Th. 376). ◄?►
•ETYM Rhymes with better known στέρφος, τέρφος 'id.' (A. R., Nic., etc.), but further unclear. Perhaps a cross of στέρφος and ἔριον? Güntert 1914: 139f. suggests that ἔρφος is a younger reshaping of (σ)τέρφος to *ἔρεφος (from ἐρέφω 'cover [with a roof]').

ἔρχατος [m.] · φραγμός 'fence' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Also ἔρκατος· φραγμός, ἐρκάτη· φυλακή 'watch' (H.).
•ETYM In itself, the change κ/ χ might point to a Pre-Greek word, but the words may also have been influenced by ► ἕρκος. Other forms are ἐρκάνη, ὀρκάνη. Latte corrects ἐρκάτη to ἐρκάνη, but this remains uncertain. Cf. also ὄρχατος 'orchard'; perhaps adapted to ἐρχατόωντο (ξ 15), which belongs to ► εἴργω; s.v. Fraenkel KZ 72 (1955): 193ff. compares Lith. sérgėti 'to protect, guard'.

ἔρχομαι [v.] 'to come', also 'to go, travel' (Il.). ◄ IE *$h_1$erg^h-, *$h_1$er- 'move, go'► •VAR Only present stem.
•COMP Very often with prefix ἀπ-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, etc.
•ETYM One has compared OIr. eirg [ipv.] 'go!', regaid [fut.] 'he will go', and Skt. ṛghāyáti 'tremble, rage', and within Greek as an iterative ► ὀρχέομαι 'dance'.
Alternatively, one has connected it with Skt. ṛccháti 'to reach, arrive at', Hitt. arške/a-^{zi} [iter.] 'to reach repeatedly, make incursions'. This presupposes that ἔρχομαι continues PIE *h_1r-sk-e/o-, which seems quite possible; thus Rix MSS 27 (1970): 79-110. Unrelated to ὀρ- in ► ὄρνυμι, which requires *$h_3$er-.

ἐρῳδιός [m.] 'heron' (K 274). ◄?►

•VAR Thus Hdn. Gr. 2, 924 and most mss.; also ἐρωδιός (mss. and pap.); also ῥωδιώς (Hippon. 63) and ἀρωδιός (LXX as a v.l.). Worthless is the gloss ++ἐρωγάς· ἐρωδιός (H.).
•ETYM Ending like in αἰγωλιός, αἰγυπιός, χαραδριός, and other bird names. The resemblance with Lat. ardea 'heron' cannot be coincidental; one has further compared Serb. róda 'stork'; very doubtful, however, is ON arta 'teal'. Is the writing with iota subscriptum secondary (after the nouns in -ίδιος)? The word could be Pre-Greek because of the variants (without or with different prothetic vowel).

ἐρωή [f.] 1. 'rush, impulse, force, throw', in the Il. mostly of spears (δουρός, βελέων ἐ.), also of men (ἀνδρός, λικμητῆρος, Πηνελέοιο), after Hom. of other objects (πετράων A. R. 4, 1657, πυρός AP 9, 490, γαστρός Opp. K. 3, 175, περὶ Κύπριν AP 10, 112). 2. 'withdrawal, rest', in the Il. of battle (πολέμου Π 302, Ρ 761), thus Theoc. 22, 192 (μάχης), also δακρύων (Mosch. 4, 40), also 'rescue' (D. P. 601). ◄ IE *$h_1$reh_1-(u-) 'rest', *$h_1$reh_1s- 'impulse'►.
•DER Beside it ἐρωέω, aor. ἐρωῆσαι, also in two meanings: 1. 'draw back, withdraw, leave, rest from' (intr.), also with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ὑπ-, mostly with ablatival gen. πολέμοιο, χάρμης (Il.), καμάτοιο (h. Cer. 301) et al., also absolutely 'escape a disease' (Nic.); 2. trans. 'force back, push back' (N 57, Theoc., Call.), also 'quit' (Theoc.); also of blood αἷμα κελαινὸν ἐρωήσει περὶ δουρί (A 303 = π 441), translated with 'flow, stream'. From ἐρωέω: ἐρωΐα [f.] 'respite, rest' (Theoc. 30, 9); from ἀπερωέω: ἀπερωεύς 'who hinders, who frustrates' (ἐμῶν μενέων, Θ 361).
•ETYM Two homonyms are distinguished: 1. ἐρωή 'impulse, etc.' with ἐρωέω 'flow, stream' (A 303 = π 441) from IE *$h_1$roh_1s-eh_2- in Gm. *rōsā: MLG rās [n.] 'strong flow', OE rǣs [m.] 'run, attack', ON rás [f.] 'run' ; also, ON rasa 'to fall down' with ras [n.] 'falling down', MoHG rasen, IE *h_1rh_1s-. Perhaps Lat. rōrāriī [pl.] 'lightly-armed skirmishers who start battle with slings' from *rōsā 'impulse, throw' = ἐρωή; 2. ἐρωή 'rest' with ἐρωέω 'rest, etc.', probably from IE *$h_1$roh_1-u-eh_2- = Gm. *rōwō in OHG ruowa, OE row, ON ró [f.] 'rest', beside OHG rāwa 'id.' < PGm. *rēwā-. Note that ἐρωή 'impulse, etc.' and the verb ἐρωέω 'to rest, etc.' are much more frequent than ἐρωή 'rest' and notably ἐρωέω 'flow'.

ἔρως ⇒ἔραμαι.

ἐρωτάω [v.] 'to ask, question' (Od.), Hell. also 'to request'. ◄?►
•VAR Epic Ion. εἰρωτάω, after Hom. also non-presentic forms like ἐρωτήσω, ἐρωτῆσαι, etc.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπ-. On the use see Fournier 1946: (index).
•DER ἐρώτημα (ἐπ-) 'question, demand' (IA) with ἐρωτημα-τικός (D. T.) and -τίζω (Arist.); ἐρώτησις (ἐπ-) 'questioning' (IA); ἐρωτητικός 'pertaining to questioning, clever in q.' (Pl., Arist.); ἀν-ερωτίζω (Telecl. 52).
•ETYM The present ἐρωτάω, Ion. εἰρωτάω < *ἐρϝωτάω replaced primary *ἔρϝ-ομαι > Ion. ► εἴρομαι, especially in Attic. Vine Glotta 78 (2002): 203-221 explains the formation from *erowōtó- to *$h_1$rów-o- 'questioning, inquiry', which was replaced by *erwōtó-, whence the agent noun *erwōtā-. Other secondary presents of this root are ► ἐρεείνω and ► ἐρευνάω.

ἐς [prep.]⇒εἰς.

ἐσθής •VAR ἔσθος. ⇒ἕννυμι.

ἐσθίω •VAR ἔσθω. ⇒ἔδω.

ἐσθλός [adj.] 'good, brave, stout, noble' of men and objects (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aeol. Pi. ἔσλος, ἐσλός, Arc. ἐσλός.
•COMP As a first member in ἐσθλο-δότης (Man.).
•DER ἐσθλότης (Chrysipp.).
•ETYM Unknown. Some have connected it with Skt. édhate 'thrive' (< azdh-*), Av. azd-iia- 'well-fed, stout', from IE Hes-d^h-. Schwyzer: 533[5] prefers a compound Hes-d^hl-ó- 'ἀγαθοεργός', from ἐσ- in ἐΰς and a zero grade variant of OCS dělo 'deed' (IE d^heh₁-lo-*; see ► τίθημι). This analysis remains improbable.

ἔσκον [v.] 'I was' (Hom.). ◂IE h₁es-* 'be'▸ •VAR Also augmented ἦσκε (Alcm.).
•ETYM From *ἔσ-σκον, an iterative preterite of εἰμί with the same suffix as in OLat. 3sg. escit, plur. escunt 'will be' and in ToB skente 'they are' < h₁s-sko-nto*. Most uncertain is Thrac. ησκο 'I am(?)' (Kretschmer Glotta 7 (1916): 89).

ἔσμα ⇒ἕζομαι.

ἑσμός [m.] 'swarm (of bees)' (IA). ◂IE (H)ieh₁-* 'throw'▸ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἑσμο-τόκος 'producing swarms of bees' (AP).
•DER ἔσμιον· νόστιμον 'ptng. to return' (H.; does it belong here?), also ἀφεσμός 'swarm' (Arist. HA 629a 9) as a cross with ἄφεσις 'id.' (Arist. HA 625a 20; plur.).
•ETYM From ἵημι (or ἀφ-ίημι) with a suffix -σμο-. Derivation from ἕζομαι (cf. DELG) does not seem probable, as a swarm does not sit down.

ἕσπερος [m.] 'evening' (Od.), adjectival 'of the evening, western', also substantivized 'the evening star' (Il.); ἑσπέρα, Ion. -ρη [f.] 'evening, west' (Pi., IA, after ἡμέρα). ◂IE ue-k^wsp-er-o-* 'to(wards) the night, evening'▸ •COMP As a second member in ἐφέσπερος 'western' (S. OC 1059 [lyr.]), ἀκρ-έσπερος 'on the edge of evening, at nightfall' (Arist., Theoc., Hp., etc., -ιος AP), ποθ-έσπερα [adv.] (Theoc.), προσ-εσπέριος (Arist.).
•DER ἑσπέριος 'of the evening, western' (Φ 560), substantivized Ἑσπερία 'the West, Hesperia' (Agathyll. apud D. H. 1, 49), ϝεσπάριοι name of the western Locrians (V[a]), fem. ἑσπερίς, especially in plur. as a PN 'the Hesperides' (Hes.); later ἑσπερινός 'id.' (X., LXX); ἑσπερικός 'id.' (Juba), ἑσπερίτης, -ῖτις (χώρα; D. L.). Denominative verb ἑσπερίζω 'to pass the night' (Doroth.; MoGr. σπερίζω) together with ἑσπέρισμα (Lex. apud Ath. 1, 11d).
•ETYM Inherited word, identical with Lat. vesper, 'evening'; further, with Lith. vākaras, OCS večerъ 'evening', which derive from uekero-*, and also found in Celtic, e.g. MW ucher, and in Arm. gišer. The difficult puzzle of reconstructing this word for PIE has recently been solved. Armenian had e* which became ei > i before š, ž. The -š- can derive from a cluster -k^(w)s- (cf. vecʿ 'six' < ueks* beside veš-tasan); see Beekes 2004: 59-62. Combined with the -k- and -sp- reconstructed for the other languages above, this points to a group -k^(w)sp-. It has been identified with Skt. kṣáp- 'night', of which the zero grade has been found in Hitt. išpant- 'night'. MW ucher may continue u̯e-* followed by ks(p) or sp. The first element had been connected with Lat. uē- in uē-sanus 'mad' et al., but this is now rejected (see De Vaan 2008). The meaning may have been '(stretching) towards night'. The suffix -er- is also found in words connected with time like Gr. νυκτερός.

ἔσπετε ⇒ἐν(ν)έπω.

ἐσσήν, -ῆνος [m.] name of the priests of Artemis in Ephesus (inscr. IV-III[a], Paus.), also 'prince, king' (Call.); acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 923, 8 = οἰκιστής, acc. to EM 383, 30 properly 'king-bee'. ◂PG▸ •DER ἐσσηνία, ἐσσηνεύω (inscr. Ephesus).
•ETYM Formation in -ήν like βαλ(λ)ήν 'king', κηφήν 'drone', etc. (Schwyzer: 487, Chantraine 1933: 167f.). Probably Anatolian and Pre-Greek; see Frisk for bibliography with proposals for substrate and IE origin. Nouns in -ην are discussed by Fur.: 172[118].

ἔστε [conj., adv., prep.] 'until', later also 'as long as' (since Hes. Th. 754, not entirely certain; also Ion., southern Dor., Aetol., trag. and X.). ◂IE h₁ens* 'in'▸ •VAR Boeot. ἔττε, Locr. ἔντε, Delph. hέντε (also εἴστε mid IV[a]), Dor. ἔστε (EM 382, 8; v.l. in Theoc.). On the use Schwyzer 1950: 675f. Cf. ἔσκε (Archil. 13, if for εἰς ὅ κε).
•ETYM From ἐν(σ)-τε, clearly containing h₁en(s) 'in(to)', but the final element -τε is ambiguous, as DELG remarks: it may derive either from -τε (in ὅτε 'when', Myc. o-te, so IE -te*), or alternatively from IE -k^we*, for which the form ἔσκε would plead (see above). IE -k^we* is also found in Lat. dōnec 'until, while' < dō-ne-k^we*. Cf. Monteil 1963: 316f.

ἑστία [f.] 'hearth, fireplace, altar', metaph. 'house, family, etc.' (Od., Att., Pi., Delph., etc.), later identified with Lat. Vesta (Str.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Ion. ἱστίη, Aeol. Boeot. Locr. Dor. Arc. ἱστία.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἑστι-οῦχος 'containing the hearth' = 'domestic', 'protecting the hearth' (trag., etc.); as a second member in ἐφ-έστιος, Ion. ἐπ-ίστιος 'located by the hearth, belonging to the hearth' (B 125), ἀν-έστιος 'without hearth' (I 63), συν-, ὁμ-έστιος, etc.; on Att. -έστιος in Homer see Wackernagel 1916: 9ff., Chantraine 1942: 15; diff. Solmsen 1909: 214.
•DER Ἱστιήϊα [n.pl.] 'monetary means of an Ἱστίη-temple' (Milete V[a]); ἑστιῶτις 'belonging to the hearth (house)' (S. Tr. 954 [lyr.]); Ἑστ-ιασταί [m.pl.] name of worshippers of Hestia (Rhod.; cf. Ἀπολλων-ιασταί et al.); ἔστιος 'belonging to the hearth' (Hld., after ὁμέστιος et al.). As a translation of Lat. Vesta, Vestālēs: Ἑστιαῖον 'Vesta-temple' (D. C.), Ἑστιάδες [pl.] 'Vestales' (D. H., Plu.). Usual denominative ἑστιάω, ἱστιάω (augmented εἱσ- in εἱστίων [Lys.], etc.), also with prefix, e.g. συν-, 'receive at the hearth, feed, receive as guest' (IA, Dor.) with several derivatives: ἑστί-ασις, -ᾶμα, -ασμός 'entertainment', ἑστιάτωρ (ἱστ-) 'host', with ἑστιατόριον (ἱστια-, ἱστιη-), also ἑστιατήριον (after the nouns in -ήριον) 'dining room'; ἑστιατορία (ἱστ-)

'party'. Also ἑστιόομαι (E. Ion 1464 [lyr.] δῶμα) 'to be provided with a hearth, get settled'.
•ETYM As a collective or abstract formation in -ία (cf. especially οἰκ-ία, κλισ-ία), ἑστία presupposes a noun ἑστο-, -ᾱ vel sim. For the etymology, an important question is whether the word had an anlauting ϝ-. In favor of ϝ- speak ϝιστιαυ (PN, Mantineia IV^a) and γιστία· ἐσχάρη (cod. -τη) (H.). However, there are dialectal forms where ϝ- fails; see Solmsen 1901: 213ff. Therefore, the old, but still often defended connection with Lat. Vesta is probably incorrect. Moreover, ε > ι is unusual and unexpected, whereas an interchange ε/ ι is frequent in Pre-Greek. Alternatively, one has proposed that ἱστία, -ίη may have arisen secondarily after ἵστημι, but this remains a conjecture. The most probable conclusion is that the word is of Pre-Greek origin. Cf. Fur.: 358, A. 2. Other explanations, such as connection with ἐσχάρα (Solmsen l.c.) or Slav. jestěja 'hearth' (Machek Ling. Posn. 5 (1955): 59ff.), are unconvincing.

ἑστώ, -οῦς ⇒εἰμί.

ἕστωρ 1, -ορος [m.] 'peg at the end of a chariot pole' (Ω 272, v.l. ἕκτορι after ἔχειν; Aristoboul.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Frisk lists a number of proposals, of which only that of Schwyzer 1939: 531[12] makes sense: that the word is an agent noun of sed-* 'sit'. As DELG remarks, the suffix -τωρ is surprising in an instrument noun.

ἕστωρ 2 [m.] 'founder' (IUrb. Rom. 1155.88). ◂IE sed-* 'sit'▸ •ETYM From ►ἕζομαι.

ἐσχάρα [f.] 'hearth, house, sacrificing hearth' (Il.), metaph. 'platform, stand' (Ph. Bel., etc.), in medical language 'scab, eschar on a wound by burning' (Hp., Arist.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Ion. -ρη.
•DIAL Myc. e-ka-ra.
•DER ἐσχαρίς, -ίδος 'pan of coals, brazier' (Com., Plu.) with -ίδιον (Delos III^a), ἐσχάριον 'id.' (Ar.), also 'platform, stand' (Plb.) beside ἐσχαρεῖον 'id.' (Attica); ἐσχαρ(ε)ών 'stove' (Delos IV^a, Theoc.; after the indications of place in -(ε)ών, Chantraine 1933: 164); ἐσχαρεύς 'ship's cook' (Poll.); ἐσχαρίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread baked over the fire' (Com., LXX); ἐσχάριος 'belonging to the hearth' (AP). Unclear ἐσχάρινθον name of a dance in Sparta (Poll.). As a medical term, basis of the denominative ἐσχαρόομαι 'form an ἐσχάρα (eschar)' with ἐσχάρωσις, -ωμα, -ωτικός; in the same sphere also ἐσχαρώδης (Poll., Gal.). On the fish-name ►ἔσχαρος see s.v.
•ETYM Formation in -ρᾱ (like χώρᾱ, τέφρᾱ), but without cognates. Fur.: 376 points out that σχάρα (gloss.) may have lost the first vowel secondarily. As there are no cognates and as an IE proto-form can hardly be posited, the word is most probably Pre-Greek.

ἔσχαρος [m.] name of a fish, = κόρις, perhaps a kind of sole (solea; Com., Dorio apud Ath. 7, 330a). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Derived from ἐσχάρη as 'frying fish' (Strömberg 1943: 89)? See also Thompson 1947 s.v. The word may be Pre-Greek.

ἔσχατος [adj.] 'the uttermost, last' (Il.). ◂IE $h_1e\acute{g}^hs$* 'out'▸ •COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. ἐσχατό-γηρως (-ος) 'in the last age' (Hell.), παρ-έσχατος 'the last but one' (Ph.).
•DER ἐσχατιά, -ιή 'uttermost part, frontier, extreme position' (Ion., Hes., Att.); poetical enlargement ἐσχάτιος (Nic.). Denominative verbs: ἐσχατάω 'to be the uttermost, the last', only in ἐσχατάων, -όων [ptc.] (Il.; cf. Shipp 1967: 62); ἐσχατεύω 'id.' (Arist.); ἐσχατίζω 'to come too late' (LXX).
•ETYM Adjectival derivative of ἐξ, but unclear in detail. The opposite ►ἔγκατα (to ►ἐν) points to a formation *ἔξ-κατος, for which the aspirate χ then requires a proto-form ἔχσ-κατος. This is taken to point to an IE basis $h_1e\acute{g}^hs$ for ►ἐξ; however, note the notation χσ = ξ in older alphabets (Schwyzer: 210), which suggests aspiration of any velar before σ. The suffix -κατος would consist of a velar element (cf. πρό-κα, Lat. reci-pro-cus; *ἐχσ-κο- 'what is outside') and a dental element (μέσ(σ)-ατος, τρίτ-ατος, etc.).

ἐτάζω [v.] 'to examine, test' (Hdt. 3, 62 v.l., Democr. 266, Pl. Cra. 410d, LXX). ◂IE set-* 'be stable'▸ •VAR Aor. ἐτάσαι.
•COMP Most frequent ἐξ-ετάζω, aor. ἐξετάσαι, -άξαι (Theoc.), etc. 'find out, inquire exactly' (IA); also with prefix, e.g. ἐπ-, συν-, προ-εξετάζω; Arc. παρ-hετάζω in παρ-hεταξάμενος, παρ-ετάξωνσι 'have approved' (Tegea IV^a; unless from παρ-ίημι 'approve', πάρ-ετος).
•DER ἔτασις, ἐτασμός 'proof, test' (LXX), ἐταστής = ἐξετ- (Lampsakos). ἐξέτασις 'enquiry, test' (Att.), -σία 'id.' (Astypalaea, imperial period; cf. Schwyzer: 469), ἐξετασμός 'id.' (D.); ἐξεταστής 'inspector, controller' (Aeschin., Arist., inscr.; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 227) with ἐξεταστήριον 'inspection' (Samos II^a), ἐξεταστικός 'ready for control, belonging to control' (X., D.), Ἐξεταστέων PN (Bechtel 1917a: 22).
•ETYM Denominative of ἐτός, which is only found in ἐτά· ἀληθῆ, ἀγαθά 'true, good' (H.); therefore, properly 'verify, check the truth'. Formerly, it was suggested that ἐτός is a verbal adjective of εἰμί 'to be' (one has compared e.g. ON sannr < PGm. sánþa-*, Skt. satyá- 'true'), from ἐτός < IE s-e-tó-. However, the correct pre-form in laryngealistic terms would be h_1s-nt-* or h_1s-eto-*, which would not produce the Greek words. De Lamberterie RPh. 71 (1997): 160, following Pinault, assumes a stem set-u-*. See on ►ἐτεός and ►ὅσιος.

ἑταῖρος [m.] 'comrade, companion, friend'. ◂IE se-* reflexive pronoun▸ •VAR Also proparoxytone ἕταιρος; fem. ἑταίρα (Ion. -ρη) 'female comrade' (Il.); also ἕταρος (Il., Dor.), fem. ἑτάρη (Δ 441).
•COMP As a second member e.g. in φιλ-έταιρος 'loving his friends' (Att.) with φιλεταιρ-ία et al.
•DER ἑταιρήϊος, -εῖος (on the formation Chantraine 1933: 52) 'regarding the friend' (IA), ἑταιρικός 'id.', -όν [n.] 'political society' (Th., Hyp., Arist.), ἑταιρόσυνος 'friendly' with -σύνη (late); fem. ἑταιρίς = ἑταίρα (X. HG 5, 4, 6 v. l.), ἑταιρίδιον (Plu.); ἑταιρηΐη, -ρεία, -ρία 'comradeship, friendship, political society, etc.' (IA). Denominative verbs: ἑτα(ι)ρίζω, -ομαι 'be(come) comrade' (Il.), late 'be prostitute', with ἑταίρισμα, -ισμός, -ιστής (late); also ἑταιρίστρια = τριβάς (Pl. Smp. 191e; contemptuous); ἑταιρέω 'keep company with' (Att.) together with ἑταίρησις; ἑταιρεύομαι 'prostitute oneself' (Hell.).

•ETYM The different forms can be understood as follows: from ἕταρος, a fem. *ἕταιρᾰ was first made with a suffix -ια- (cf. e.g. χίμαρος : χίμαιρα), which was reshaped into ἑταίρη, -ρα and then gave ἑταῖρος, ἕταιρος; after ἑταῖρος: ἕταρος, a form ἑτάρη was ultimately made beside ἑταίρη (Schulze 1892: 82). As ἕταρος, etc. show no trace of a digamma (Chantraine 1942: 150, Solmsen 1901: 203), the connection with ϝέτης 'relative, friend' (see ►ἔτης) must be abandoned. We have to start from the reflexive *se (see ►ἕ, ἑ), with an enlargement -t- like in OCS po-sětiti 'visit' (from sětъ* 'guest', IE s(u)et-o-*, cf. Lith. svēčias [m.] 'guest'), beside sue-t-* in ϝέτης. For the ρ-suffix, cf. e.g. νεαρός, γεραρός (partly from ρ-stems). See now Pinsent 1983: 311-328. De Lamberterie connects the word with ἐτεός and ὅσιος; see DELG Supp.

ἔταλον [n.] a young animal, 'yearling' (Del.[3] 644, 18; Aegae IV-III[a]). ◄IE uet-* 'year'► •VAR Also ἔτελον (ibid. 252, 11; Cos III[a]: τοῦ μὲν ἐτέλου as opposed to τοῦ δὲ τελείου 'full grown animal').
•ETYM Identical with Lat. vitulus 'calf', U vitluf 'vitulōs' (with irreglular i for e), except for the gender. The starting point is the IE word for 'year' (Gr. ►ἔτος), IE uét-os-*, to which belongs Skt. vats-á- 'calf'. For the pattern ἔτος: ἔτελον, ἔταλον, the word has been compared with e.g. νέφος: νεφέλη, ἄγκος: ἀγκάλη, suggesting that the change -αλο-: -ελο- could be old. See on ►ἐπηετανός, s.v. An r-stem is found in Gm., e.g. Go. wiþrus '(one-year-old) lamb', MoHG Widder, from IE uet-r(u)-*.

ἔτελις [m.(f.)] name of a fish, 'gilthead' (Arist. HA 567a 20, H.)? ◄?►
•VAR Also accented ἐτελίς.
•ETYM Lat. attilus 'a fish like a sturgeon in the river Po' (Plin.; also atillus*), shows a general resemblance; it is probably Gaulish, perhaps a Ligurian word. Farther away is the name of the turbot, Latv. ãte, Lith. atìs; see WH s.v. attilus, Pok. 70. Strömberg 1943: 39 rather envisages derivation from ἔτελον (►ἔταλον). DELG calls both suggestions improbable.

ἐτεός [adj.] 'true, real', mostly in sing.ntr. ἐτεόν (ἐτεά [pl.] Υ 255, reading quite uncertain); also adverbial 'really' (Hom., Theoc.); in interrogative sentences 'really' (Ar.); ἐτεῇ [adv.] 'in reality', also ἐτεή [nom.f.] 'reality' (Democr.). ◄IE set-* 'stable, true'?►
•DIAL Myc. PN e-te-wo-ke-re-we-i-jo, to Ἐτεϝοκλέϝης.
•COMP Often as a first member in names like Ἐτεό-κρητες [pl.] 'Cretans in a strict sense, original Cretans' (τ 176), Ἐτε-άνωρ (Thera VII[a]), Ἐτέϝ-ανδρος (Cyprus VII[a]), cf. Sommer 1948: 185 and 199; Ἐτεο-κλῆς (Tegea, etc.; probably rendered in Hitt. Tau̯ag(a)lau̯aš; cf. Schwyzer: 79); also ἐτεό-κριθος [f.] 'real barley' (Thphr.; determinative compound formally adapted to a bahuvrīhi; cf. Strömberg 1940: 28f.).
•DER Beside it ἔτυμος 'true, real' (Il.; prose has ἀληθής) with ἐτυμό-δρυς [f.] 'real oak' (Thphr.); τὸ ἔτυμον 'the true (original) meaning of a word, the etymology' (Arist.); as a first member in ἐτυμο-λογέω 'discover the true meaning' with ἐτυμολογία, -λογικός (Hell.; formally after ψευδο-λογέω et al.; cf. Schwyzer: 726); ἐτυμό-της = τὸ ἔτυμον (Str.). Reduplicated formation with lengthening of the original initial syllable: ἐτήτυμος 'true, real, authentic' (Il.; the form remains surprising, cf. Schwyzer: 447[2]), together with ἐτητυμία (Call., AP). Lengthened form ἐτυμώνιον· ἀληθές H.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 42f.
•ETYM When we compare the ending of κενε(ϝ)ός 'empty, idle', ἐτε(ϝ)ός presupposes an original u-stem, the zero grade of which is seen in enlarged ἔτυ-μος. Beside this u-stem, we have ἐτάζω and ἐτά· ἀληθῆ, ἀγαθά (H.), which seem to point to an o-stem. Further analysis is uncertain; see ►ἐτάζω. De Lamberterie RPh. 71 (1997): 160 follows Meillet in assuming set-u-* (also supposed in Arm. stoyg 'real'); he further connects the word with ►ὅσιος from sot-*.

ἕτερος [adj.] 'one of two; the one (...) the other' (Il.). ◄IE sm-tero-* 'one of two'► •VAR ἅτερος (Dor. Aeol.; also Att. in crasis ἅτερος, θἄτερα, etc.); cf. Dor. ατροπανπαις Bourguet 1927: 117; Meillet BSL 28 (1927-1928): 116f assumed a zero grade as in ἀλλότριος and Lith. añtras.
•DIAL Myc. a_2*-te-ro* /ʰateros/.
•COMP With negation οὐδ-, μηδ-έτερος, -άτερος 'none of both' (Hes., IA, Dor.). Very frequent as a first member in bahuvrīhis with various meanings, e.g. ἑτερ-αλκής 'who helps one of two parties' (Il.; cf. on ἀλέξω), ἑτερ-ήμερος 'living day by day' (λ 303 of the Dioscuri; Ph.), ἑτερό-πτολις 'coming from another town' (Erinn. 5).
•DER ἑτέρ-ωθεν, -ωθι, -ωσε, -ωτα 'from the other side', etc. (Hom.); ἑτεροῖος 'of another kind' (IA; after τοῖος, ἀλλοῖος et al.) with ἑτεροιότης (Pl., Ph.), ἑτεροιόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to become different, change' (Ion., etc.), -οίωσις 'change' (Hell.); ἑτερότης 'being different' (Arist.).
•ETYM From IE sm-tero-, the zero grade of sem- in ►εἷς 'one' (cf. further►ἅπαξ), with the same comparative suffix as in ►ἀριστερός, etc.; cf. especially Skt. eka-tara- 'alteruter'; the ε-vowel in ἕτερος is rather after εἷς or after ►ἕ, ἑ than by vowel assimilation. An identical formation is probably represented by a Celtic word for 'half': MW hanther, Co. Bret. hanter; see Gonda 1953: 33f. Gonda also tries to connect the Gm. group of Go. sundro 'on itself, κατ' ἰδίαν', OHG suntar 'separated; however', etc. (cf. ►ἄτερ).

ἔτης [m.] 'clansman' (Hom., only plur.), 'citizen, private person' (El., Dor., also A. and E.); on the meaning see DELG. ◄IE sue-t-* 'own, relative'► •DIAL Dor. ἔτας, El. ϝέτας.
•ETYM Beside ϝέτᾱς, Slavic has a word for 'relative by marriage', e.g. ORu. svatъ, QIE suōt-o-*, and Baltic a word for 'guest', Lith. svēčas, IE suet-io-. These are derived from the reflexive sue (Gr. ϝ(h)ε, see ►ἕ, ἑ), enlarged with a suffix -t-, thus IE sue-t-*. On the Greek psilotic anlaut and loss of digamma, cf. Fraenkel 1912: 125 and Chantraine 1942: 150 and 185. Therefore properly meaning "one's own", whence 'belonging to the (own) clan', 'private person'. On the formation, see Schwyzer: 500, Chantraine 1933: 312, and Bechtel 1914. See also ►ἑταῖρος and ►ἴδιος.

ἐτήτυμος ⇒ἐτεός.

ἔτι [adv.] 'still, also, further', of time and grade (Il.). ◄IE *h₁eti '(and) also'► •ETYM Old adverb, also preserved in Indo-Iranian, e.g. Skt. áti 'id.', in Italic, Lat. and U et 'and', and in Germanic, e.g. Go. iþ 'δέ, καί', all from IE *h₁éti, which might be the loc.sg. of a root noun from *h₁et- seen in Skt. at- 'to wander'.

ἔτνος [n.] 'soup of beans' (Ar., Hp.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member in ἐτν-ήρυσις 'spoon for soup' (Ar.; cf. on ►ἀρύω 1), ἐτνο-δόνος 'stirring the soup' (of τορύνη, AP).
•DER ἐτν-ηρός 'like soup' (Ath.; Chantraine 1933: 232f.), ἐτν-ίτης (ἄρτος; Ath.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. On the connection with Celt., e.g. MIr. eitne 'kernel' (Pedersen 1909: 160), see the objections in Pok. 343. Arm. und 'soup, corn' can not be connected phonetically with ἔτνος.

ἑτοῖμος [adj.] 'prepared, ready, certain' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Younger ἕτοιμος.
•COMP As a first member in ἑτοιμο-θάνατος 'prepared for death' (Str.); as a second member in ἀν-έτοιμος 'unprepared' (Hes. Fr. 219, Hell.).
•DER ἑτοιμότης 'willingness, readiness' (D., Plu.); ἑτοιμάζω 'prepare' (Il.) together with ἑτοιμασία (LXX, NT).
•ETYM No etymology. Acc. to Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 278ff., it is from a locative *ἑτοῖ to *ἑτός = ἐτός, with a suffix -μο-; this is a mere guess.

ἐτός 1 [adv.] only with negation οὐκ ἐτός 'not in vain' (Att.); beside it ἐτώσιος [adj.] 'useless, fruitless' (Il.). ◄?► •ETYM Though the formation is unclear (cf. Chantraine 1933: 42, Schwyzer: 466, and Mezger Word 2 (1946): 229), ἐτώσιος for *ϝετώσιος is probably an adjectivizing enlargement of ἐτός (cf. περιώσιος beside περί). The latter stands for *ϝετός, and formally belongs to the adverbs in -τός (►ἐντός, etc.). Further unclear; semantically close is Alb. hut 'useless, empty, idle', which was derived from IE *uto- (Jokl Wien. Ak. Sb. 168: 1: 31). The connection of αὔτως in the meaning 'idle, useless' is formally impossible. Others have connected Skt. svatá-, Av. xᵛatō 'by itself, automatically' (IE *sue-tó-), which seems possible in spite of the difference in meaning ('of itself' > 'without an outside cause'?).

ἔτος 2 [n.] 'year' (Il.). ◄IE uet-os- 'year'► •VAR Dial. ϝέτος.
•DIAL Myc. we-to [acc.], we-te-i [dat.].
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. τρι-ετής (τρι-έτης) 'three years old' (IA) with τριετία 'space of three years' (Hell.), τριετίζω 'be three years old' (LXX); also τρι-έτ-ηρος 'three years old' (Call.) together with -ηρίς [f.] 'every third year (inclusive)', i.e. 'in alternate years' (ἑορτή; Pi., IA; after the nouns in -ηρός, -ηρίς; Chantraine 1933: 346); thence τριετηρικός 'belonging to a τριετηρίς' (late).
•DER ἔτειος 'yearly, lasting the whole year, one year long' (Pi., A.); by hypostasis ἐπέτειος 'id.' (IA, from ἐπ' ἔτος); ἐτήσιος 'id.' (Att.; after the adjectives in -τήσιος; Schwyzer: 466, Chantraine 1933: 42) with ἐτησίαι [m.pl.] 'periodic winds' (IA, Arist.); also ἐπετήσιος 'id.' (η 118, Th.); ►ἐπηετανός, s.v.

•ETYM An old word for 'year', preserved in several languages. An exact agreement is Alb. vit 'year', plur. (also sg.) vjet, from IE uetes- (Mann Lang. 26 (1950): 383). As a second member, the neutral s-stem is preserved in the zero grade in Skt. tri-vats-á- 'of three years'; the full grade of the suffix is supposed in Messap. atavetes (perhaps = αὐτό-ετες 'in the same year'; Schwyzer: 513[3]) and is also found in Hitt. šaudišt- / šāu̯itišt- 'nurseling' (*"of this year"; details in Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). Beside the latter, Hitt. has a root noun u̯itt- < *uet- 'year'. Thematicizations of the s-stem appear in HLuw. usa/i-, CLuw. ušša/i- 'year' < *uet-s-o- (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. u̯itt-). A semantic problem is Lat. vetus 'old', which formally equals ϝέτος; for an explanation, cf. Beekes 1985: 59-61 (previously, Benveniste RPh. 74 (1948): 124ff.). Old enlargements of the s-stem are found in words for (one-year-old) animals: Skt. vats-á- 'calf', Alb. vic' 'calf' (IE uetes-o-), Celt., e.g. Ir. feis 'swine' (PCl. *wessi < uet-s-i-, Matasović 2008). By itself stands a Balto-Slavic word for 'old', Lith. vẽtušas, OCS vetъchъ, IE uetus-o- (here also Lat. vetus?). A new name for 'year' in Greek is ►ἐνιαυτός. See also ►ἔταλον, ►νέωτα, ►οἰετέας, ►πέρυσι, ►σῆτες.

ἐττημένος ⇒διαττάω.

ἔτυμος ⇒ἐτεός.

ἐτώσιος ⇒ἐτός 1.

εὖ ⇒ἐύς.

εὐᾱγής [adj.] 'bright, clear, in full view' (Parm., Pi., A.). ◄GR► •ETYM For εὐ-αυγής (v.l. Pi. Pae. Fr. 19, 25 et al.), from εὖ and αὐγή 'beam of light', with transition to an s-stem and compositional lengthening. The second υ was lost through dissimilation. By decomposition arose ἅγέα (κύκλον Emp. 47, of the sun); cf. Björck 1950: 148 A. 1. A poetical enlargement appears to be found in εὐᾱ́γητον (φύσιν Ar. Nu. 276 [lyr.], of the clouds which are visible from afar); see Björck 1950: 148 A. 1.

εὐάζω [v.] 'to cry εὖα, εὐαί' (S. and E. [lyr.], AP). ◄ONOM► •DER Together with εὐάσματα [pl.] (E. [lyr.]), εὐασμός (Hell.); εὐαστής, -τήρ with εὐάστειρα, εὐαστικός (late).
•ETYM From the interjection εὖα· ἐπιφημισμὸς ληναϊκὸς καὶ μυστικός 'word belonging to the Bacchanal rites and to the mysteries' (H.), εὐαί (-αῖ) 'cry at the festival of Bacchus' (Ar.); also, εὐᾶν (E. et al.), εὐοί, -οῖ (Ar. et al.). Additionally, with intermediate aspiration, εὐαῖ, εὐᾶν, εὐοῖ (D. T., Hdn.). Borrowed as Lat. euhoe, euhān. The same call also appears in Lat. ovō, -āre 'to exult, jubilate', which cannot be a borrowing, as it reflects the PIt. change of *eu̯ > *ou̯ (De Vaan 2008). Cf. ►εἰάζω, ►αἰάζω and Schwyzer: 303.

εὐδείελος [adj.] epithet of places (since Od.), in the Od. almost only of Ithaca, also of Κρίση (h. Ap. 438), of the mountain Κρόνιον (Pi. O. 1, 111), etc. ◄?►
•VAR Further εὔδειλον (Alc. G I 2, POxy. 2165 I 2; unclear. The emendation [λόφος] by Gallavotti is uncertain).

•ETYM One previously posited metrical lengthening of *εὐ-δέελος 'well-visible', from δέελος (K 466). However, see now on δείελος, δείλη 'evening' which are mostly connected with εὐδείελος, which would mean 'with beautiful evenings' vel sim.

εὐδία [f.] 'bright weather, calm (of wind), quiet (of the sea)' (Pi., trag., IA). ◄IE *diu- 'day'► •VAR Also -ίη.
•DER εὐδιᾱνός 'calm, bringing rest', of φάρμακον (Pi. O. 9, 97); εὐδίαιος of the fish-name τριγόλας (Sophr. 67), 'caught in beautiful weather'(?) with εὐδιαίτερος (X.); as a msc. substantive 'outlet in the bottom of a ship' (Plu., Poll.); εὐδιεινός 'bright, calm, quiet' (Hp. Aph. 3, 12 v.l. beside εὔδιος, Pl. Lg. 919a, X. Cyn. 5, 9, Arist.; after φαεινός, ἀλεεινός); εὔδιος 'id.' (Hp., Hell.; to εὐδία after αἰθρία: αἴθριος). Denominative verbs: εὐδιάω 'be quiet, calm', of the sea and weather (A. R., Arat.; only ptc. εὐδιόων); εὐδιάζω 'calm down, be quiet' ([Pl.] Ax. 370d, Ph.).
•ETYM Compound (collective bahuvrīhi) of εὖ and the zero grade of an old word for 'day, heaven' (see ►Ζεύς), thus εὐ-δίϝ-ᾱ. Cf. ἑκατόμ-β(ϝ)-ᾱ, μεσό-δμ-η for the formation with zero grade. An old counterpart is Skt. su-dív- 'bringing a beautiful day' with su-div-á- [n.] 'id.'.

εὕδω [v.] 'to sleep' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR The simplex is only found as a present, except for εὑδήσω [fut.] (A. Ag. 337).
•COMP With prefix ἐν-, συν-, especially καθ-εύδω (Il.), ipf. καθ-εῦδον, -ηῦδον, Att. also ἐ-κάθευδον, fut. καθ-ευδήσω (Att.), rare aor. καθ-ευδῆσαι (Ion.); also with double prefix, e.g. ἐν-, ἐπι-, παρα-, συγ- καθεύδω, etc. As an aorist we find (κατα-)δαρθεῖν, (-)δραθεῖν, see ►δαρθάνω.
•ETYM Several unconvincing suggestions: 1) related to Go. sutis 'quiet, calm', and further to Lat. sūdus 'soft' (cf. Mayrhofer KZ 73: 116f.), but the latter is now reconstructed as suoid-o-* by Nussbaum 1999: 381. 2) from IE seu-d-* beside su-ep-* in Skt. svapiti 'sleeps', etc. (Benveniste 1935: 156f.; cf. on ►ὕπνος), which is very unlikely because of the Schwebeablaut involved; 3) related to OE swodrian 'to sleep tight' (Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 42).

εὔεξος ⇒ἔχω.

εὐηγενής [adj.] see below (Λ 427, Ψ81 with v.l. εὐηφενής, h.Ven. 229, Theoc. 27, 43, IG 14, 1389: 1; 29. ◄GR► •ETYM The reading εὐηγενής = εὐγενής (mss., Aristarchus) is strongly suspected to be a misreading for εὐηφενής in Hom. (as a PN in IG 12(8), 376: 14), a compound from ἄφενος which apparently was not transparent. Secondary εὐηγενής was supported by several forms in -γενής with a preceding -η-, and taken over by post-Homeric poets. On ►εὐηφενής, see Bechtel 1914 s.v. and Leumann 1950: 117[83]. See on ►ἄφενος and Masson RPh. 91 (1965): 239f.

εὐθενέω [v.] 'to thrive, flourish', of animals and plants, also metaph. of towns, peoples, etc. (A., Arist.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member in εὐθηνι-άρχης 'commissioner of (corn) supplies', together with -αρχέω, -ία, -ικός (pap.; also εὐθενι-).

•DER εὐθένεια, -ία (-ίη inscr. I^a) 'state of prosperity, fullness, supply' (Arist. as a v.l. beside εὐθηνία, pap. of Roman times) with εὐθενιακός (pap.).
Also εὐθηνέω 'id.' (h.Hom. 30, 10, Hdt., Hp., LXX) together with εὐθηνία = εὐθένεια, -ία (Arist. as a v.l., LXX, late inscr. and pap.); rare and late adjectives: εὐθενής· εὐπαθοῦσα, ἰσχυρά 'enjoying herself, strong' (H.) whence εὐθενέστατος (pap. VI^p), εὐθηνός 'thriving' (Hdn. Epim. 175, Lyd. Ost. [VI^p]).
•ETYM The explanation depends on the relation between these forms. If the forms with -ε- in the root are original, then εὐθενέω is a denominative of εὐθενής, from which the abstract εὐθένεια, -ία was made. We would have to start from a noun *θένος beside ►φόνος in the hapax φόνον αἵματος (Π 162), if this means 'mass of blood' – but this is uncertain. This would give an analogy *θένος : εὐθενής : εὐθένεια : εὐθενέω like μένος : εὐμενής : εὐμένεια : εὐμενέω. However, εὐθενής is rare and late, while εὐθενέω is older. Therefore, the agreement with Skt. ā-hanás- 'thriving, full', IE *$g^{wh}enes$- becomes doubtful. With the IE root *$g^{wh}en$- supposed in ā-hanás- and εὐθενής, one scholar further connected Skt. ghana- 'solid, thick, full of' (epic and class.; very doubtful RV 1, 8, 3), MoP ā-ganiš 'full', ā-gandan 'fill on'; from Balto-Slavic, Lith. ganà 'enough', OCS goněti 'be enough' have been adduced; finally, Alb. zânë 'solid, thick' (Jokl 1937: 131) and Arm. y-ogn 'multum, very, much'. The PNs in -φόντης like Κρεσ-φόντης (cf. on ►κράτος), Πολυ-φόντης are unclear, as is φανᾶν· θέλειν 'wish, want' (H.). Unclear ►ἄφενος must be separated, as well as ►παρθένος. Secondary lengthening of -η- in εὐθηνέω, etc. cannot be excluded. If we assume original -η- < $-eh_1$-*, however, εὐθενέω could either be after σθένος (Sommer 1905: 66) or a zero grade $-d^hh_1n$-*. A hypothetical Gr. *θῆνος has been compared with Lat. fēnus 'interest' (related to fē-līx; see ►θῆλυς and ►θῆσθαι), root *$d^heh_1$- 'suck, be fed with milk', which could be phonetically and semantically identical if the connection with Skt. ā-hanás-, etc. is given up.

εὐθύς [adj.] 'straight', also metaph. 'just'; εὐθύς, -ύ also adverbial (beside εὐθέως) 'straightaway, directly', of place and time (Pi., Att.). ◄?►
•VAR Fem. -εῖα, ntr. -ύ.
•COMP Very frequent as a first member, e.g. in ►εὐθυωρία.
•DER εὐθύτης 'straightness' (Arist.) and the denominative εὐθύνω 'straighten, direct, steer, chastise, punish' (Pi., Att.) with several derivatives: εὔθυνσις 'straightening' (Arist.), εὐθυσμός 'id.' (Ph.); εὐθυντήρ 'director, corrector' (Thgn., A., Man.) with εὐθυντήριος 'straightening, directing' (A. Pers. 764), εὐθυντηρία [f.] 'the part of a ship where the rudder was fixed' (E. IT 1356), 'base wall, base' (inscr.), -ιαῖος (Didyma); εὐθυντής = εὔθυνος (Pl. Lg. 945b, c), -τικός (Arist., D. H.). More common are deverbal expressions like εὔθυνος [m.] 'revisor of the state' (Pl., Arist., inscr. since V^a, etc.), also 'judge, punisher' in general (A., E.); εὔθυνα [f.] 'public responsibility, revision' (Att.).
•ETYM No correspondences outside Greek. It may have taken the place of ἰθύς 'id.'. Perhaps a cross of ►εἶθαρ and ►ἰθύς with assimilation ει : υ > ευ : υ (see Schwyzer: 256). The word ►εὐρύς is semantically farther. DELG suggests influence of εὖ 'good' (s.v. ►ἐύς).

εὐθύφλοιος [m.] 'straight-barked', a kind of oak (Thphr. H.P. 3, 8, 2). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From εὐθυ- and ▸φλοιός? Also ἁλίφλοιος, from ▸ἅλις?

εὐθυωρία [f.] 'straightness, straight direction' (Pl., Arist., Aetol., Cret., etc.), almost only in adverbial expressions like (ἀν', κατ') εὐθυωρίαν, εὐθυωρίᾳ 'in straight line, directly'; also εὐθύωρον [adv.] 'id.' (X.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Heracl. -ωρεία, Arc. -ορϝία, Epid. -ορία; Ion. ἰθυωρίη (Hp.).
•ETYM Expression from the language of surveyors, from ▸εὐθύς (▸ἰθύς) and ▸ὅρος, ὅρϝος 'boundary' as a bahuvrīhi: 'with straight boundaries, along straight lines'. The long vowel may be due to compositional lengthening, or to Doric influence (development of -ορϝ-). Incorrectly, Bechtel 1921, 1, 345: related to Av. auruua- 'quick', etc.; εὐθύωρος would then properly mean 'hurrying straight'.

εὔκηλος ⇒ἕκηλος.

εὔκολος ⇒δύσκολος.

εὐκρᾱής [adj.] 'temperate', epithet of τόποι (Arist. Mete. 352a 7), of ἀήρ (Thphr. CP 1, 11, 6; 2, 3, 3), of ἔρως (Opp. H. 4, 33); but also 'blowing well', of οὖρος and ἄνεμος (A. R. 2, 1228; 4, 891); also v.l. for ἀκραής (ξ 299, Hes. Op. 594). ◂IE *$\acute{k}erh_2$- 'mix'▸ •VAR Also ἐΰκρᾱής.
•ETYM Reformed from εὐκρᾱ́ς (related to ▸κεράννυμι) after the s-stems, perhaps by influence of ἄημι, which at any rate influenced the meaning in A. R. At the same time, in opposition to ἀκρ-ᾱής 'sharp blowing' (properly 'blowing on the heights'), it was analyzed as ἀ-κρᾱής; cf. Marxer 1935: 46f. - On this basis, δυσκρᾱής (Opp.).

εὐλάκᾱ ⇒ἄλοξ.

εὐλή [f.] 'worm, maggot' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Mostly plur. -αί. Cf. εὐλάζει· σαπριᾷ, σκωληκιᾷ 'make rotten, be worm-eaten' (H.). Sometimes, also ὑάλη· σκώληξ 'worm' (H.) is mentioned, supposedly standing for ὑαλή; it is doubtful that this form is cognate.
•ETYM Taken by Frisk et al. as an old verbal noun from ▸εἰλέω 2, ▸ἴλλω 'turn, wind', properly meaning 'that which winds or coils'. However, a prothetic vowel *ἐ-ϝλ-ή is no longer possible, unless one assumes *$h_1$uel-; however, *$h_1$ul- would give ὑλ-. It is improbable to assume metathesis from *ϝελ-ή (cf. on ▸εὐρύς). The word may well be Pre-Greek. The recent attempt by Balles 2007: 15-24 is pure speculation. Cf. ▸ἕλμις.

εὔληρα [n.pl.] 'reins' (Ψ 481, Q. S.). ◂PG▸ •DIAL Dor. αὔληρα (Epich. 178, H.).
•DER Unclear is εὐληρωσίων· πληγῶν 'strokes' (H.; perhaps from *εὐλήρωσις, to *εὐληρόομαι, -όω).
•ETYM One scholar has assumed *ἐ-ϝληρ-ο-, *ἀ-ϝληρ-ο- (Schwyzer: 224) with prothetic vowel, combining Lat. lōrum 'rein', Arm. lar 'strick, rope, band', from IE ulēr-, ulōr-, ulHr-*, supposed to be a derivation in -r- from a primary verb for 'turn, wind, twine' in ▸εἰλέω 2. Given the variation, which cannot be explained in IE terms, the words are probably Pre-Greek. For the interchange ἀ-/ ἐ-, cf. ἀμύς/ἐμύς and Fur. 347ff. See also ▸λῶμα.

εὐμαρής [adj.] 'light, without pain' (Alc., Pi.). ◂IE?▸
•DER εὐμάρεια, -(ε)ίη, -ία 'ease' (IA), εὐμαρότης 'id.' (Callistr. Soph.), εὐμαρέω 'have easy access' (B. 1, 175).
•ETYM Bahuvrīhi of ▸εὖ and ▸μάρη 'hand', which yielded a stem in -σ- (Schwyzer 513). Blanc REGr. 105 (1992): 548-556 rejects this explanation and assumes a meaning 'accordé en abondance', from smer-* in ▸μείρομαι 'accorder comme part'; this is uncertain. His comparison with the reduced grade in εὐ-τραφής does not work, as one would rather expect -μερής beside μείρομαι and μέρος.

εὔμᾰρις, -ιδος [f.] name of an Asiatic shoe or slipper of deerskin (A. and E. [lyr.], AP 7, 413 [ᾰ], Poll.); εὐμᾰρίδας [acc.pl.] as attribute of ἀσκέρας, so probably adjectival (Lyc. 855). ◂?▸
•VAR Acc. -ιν.
•ETYM Foreign word of unknown origin; cf. the foreign names for shoes in Schwyzer: 61, as well as Björck 1950: 68.

εὐνή [f.] 'lair, bed' (of animals and soldiers), 'bed, matrimonial bed', metaph. 'marriage' and 'tomb', as a nautical expression in plur. 'anchor stones' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP As a first member in εὐνοῦχος [m.] "protector of the bed", 'chamberlain, eunuch' (IA; on the mg. Maaß RhM 74 (1925): 432ff.) with εὐνουχίζω, -ίας, etc. As a second member in χαμαι-εύνης et al. (on the formation Schwyzer 451), fem. -ευνάς 'having its bed on the earth' (Hom.); also χαμ-ευνάς 'id.' (Lyc.), as a determinative 'bed on the earth' (Nil. Th. 23); in this mg. further χαμ-εύνη, -α (trag.) with χαμεύνιον (Pl.), -ευνίς (Theoc.), -ευνία (Ph., Philostr.).
•DER εὐναῖος 'belonging to the εὐνή' (trag.), εὔνια [pl.] = εὐνή (App.), εὐνέτης 'bedfellow, wife' (E.), -έτις [f.] (Hp., A. R.), εὐνάτας 'id.' (E. Med. 159, conjecture), εὖνις [f.] (S., E.). Denominatives: εὐνάομαι, εὐνηθῆναι, -άω 'lie down, go to bed, sleep' especially 'bring to rest' (Il.) together with εὐνήματα [pl.] 'marriage' (E. Ion 304; cf. Chantraine 1933: 184ff.), εὐνήτωρ, -ᾱ́τωρ, -ητήρ, -ᾱτήρ = εὐνέτης (trag.), fem. εὐνήτειρα, -άτειρα, -ήτρια (trag.), εὐνατήριον 'sleeping room' (A.). εὐνάζομαι, εὐνασθῆναι, εὐνάζω 'id.' together with τὰ εὐνάσιμα 'sleeping places' (X. Cyn. 8, 4; after ἱππάσιμος et al., cf. Arbenz 1933: 48), εὐναστήρ = εὐνέτης (Lyc.), εὐνάστειρα λίθος (Opp.), εὐναστήριον = εὐνατήριον (S., E.). Details on the tragedians in Fraenkel 1912: 17, Björck 1950: 139f.; also Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 227f.
•ETYM Unexplained. Lidén IF 19 (1906): 320f. compares OIr. (h)uam 'hole' and Av. unā [f.] 'hole, slit (in the earth)'. Arm. unim 'to have, own' remains far. Unconvincing recent attempts are Balles 2007: 15-24 and Ziegler KZ 117 (2004): 1-12.

εὖνις, -ι(δ)ος [adj.] 'robbed, lacking' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Acc. -ιν.
•ETYM The word has been compared with adjectives starting in u(H)-* or uā-*: Skt. ūná-, Av. ŭna- 'deficient, lacking', Arm. unayn 'empty' (anlaut uncertain; IE eu-* is also possible), Lat. vānus 'empty, idle', Go. wans 'defective, missing', etc. However, $h_1$euh$_2$-n- would have given *ἐ(ϝ)αν-.

εὐνοῦχος ⇒εὐνή.

εὔοχθος [adj.] epithet of δαῖτες (B. Fr. 18, 4), βορά (E. Ion 1169), γῆ (Hom. Epigr. 7, 2), perhaps 'rich, luxuriant, fruitful'. ◀PG▶ •DER Denominative verb εὐοχθέω 'to be rich, luxuriant', of people (Hes. Op. 477, Rhian. 1, 9).
•ETYM Connection with ὄχθος, ►ὄχθη 'height, steep shore' is semantically unsatisfactory. Either εὔοχθος must be separated, or ὄχθος had an additional, unknown, meaning. Fur.: 127 connects ►ἀκτή 'corn' with ὄχθος, which is quite acceptable (cf. ἀκτή / ὄχθη 'cliff', etc.).

εὐπέμπελος [adj.] 'easily dismissed', of the μοῖρα of the Eumenides (A. Eu. 476: οὐκ εὐπέμπελον). ◀GR▶ •ETYM The second member is derived from ►πέμπω with a suffix -ελο-.

εὐπετής ⇒πίπτω.

εὐράξ [adv.] mg. uncertain, in στῆ δ' εὐράξ (Λ 251, Ο 541), perhaps 'near, at the side'; further Lyc. 920 Ἀλαίου Παταρέως ἀνακτόρων 'near the temple of A. P.'; as an interj. in Ar. Av. 1258 εὐράξ, πατάξ. ◀?▶
•ETYM Uncertain. For the formation, cf. λάξ, ὀδάξ, μουνάξ, διαμπάξ, etc. (Schwyzer: 620). It has been connected with εὐρύς and explained as ἐκ πλαγίου, i.e. 'from the side' (e.g. by H.). Acc. to Bq, it is to be read as δὲ ϝράξ, and to be understood as 'en heurtant', from ῥάττειν, ῥάσσειν, ῥήσσειν 'nudge, bump'; on the meaning, cf. ►ἴκταρ 'near' and the parallels mentioned there.

Εὔρῖπος [m.] 'straits, narrows' (X., Arist.); especially the straits between Euboea and Boeotia (h. Ap. 222, Hdt.); later also 'canal' in general (D. H.); 'ventilator, fan' (Gal. 10, 649) is probably a homonym, derived from ῥιπή in the sense 'blow'. ◀PG(S)▶ •DIAL Myc. TN E-wi-ri-po.
•DER εὐριπώδης 'like straits, like the Euripos', etc. (Arist.); εὐριπίδης name of a wind, blowing from the Euripos (E. Maaß KZ 41, 204), also PN; εὐριπική (σχοῖνος Dsc., Plin.); Εὐρίπιος· Ποσειδῶν (H.).
•ETYM The etymology 'with strong current', from εὖ and ῥιπή (since Fick) must be rejected, even if the straits between Euboea and Boeotia are well known for their strong currents of water and wind.
Forssman MSS 49 (1988): 5-12, explains the form from euru-h_2p-o-* 'breite Wasser(läufe) habend'. The assumed dissimilation of the second u in eurū-po-* does not convince; neither does the meaning fit for a narrow strait. The word may well be Pre-Greek, cf. already Ruijgh 1967a: 172[374]. Note that the long ῑ in this position is typical for Pre-Greek forms, cf. Pre-Greek s.v. -ῑβ-, -ῑγ-, ῑδ-, -ῑθ-, -ῑν-).

εὑρίσκω [v.] 'to find, uncover' (τ 158). ◀?▶
•VAR Aor. εὑρεῖν, ind. εὗρον (Il.; later also ηὗρον), fut. εὑρήσω (h. Merc. 302, IA), perf. εὕρηκα, -ημαι (ηὕρ-), aor. pass. εὑρεθῆναι with fut. εὑρεθήσομαι (IA).

•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, ἐξ-, ἐφ-. As a first member εὑρησι- (later εὑρεσι-) in εὑρησι-επής 'who finds ἔπη, epic poet' (Pi.), εὑρησι-λογέω 'find reasons, find excuses' and -λογία 'ability to find reasons, eristics, creation of empty words' (Hell.; after the compounds in -λογέω, -λογία); with εὑρησί-λογος (Corn. et al.).
•DER Derivatives, also from the prefixed verbs (not indicated): εὕρημα, later εὕρεμα (Schwyzer 523) 'invention' (IA), εὕρεσις 'discovery' (IA; εὕρησις Apollod.); εὕρετρα [pl.] 'finder's reward' (Ulp.); εὑρετής 'discoverer' (Att.) with fem. εὑρετίς, -έτις (S. Fr. 101 [uncertain], D. S.); also εὑρέτρια (D. S., pap.; Chantraine 1933: 104ff.); Εὑρέσιος epithet of Ζεύς = Iupiter Inventor (D. H.; after Ἱκέσιος et al.); εὑρετικός 'ingenious, inventive' (Pl.), εὑρετός 'which can be found' (Hp., S.).
•ETYM Given the perfective meaning of εὑρίσκω, the aorist εὗρον is probably old. An old perfect seen in εὕρη-κα probably existed next to it. After this, εὑρήσω arose, and the latest member of the paradigm (beside εὑρεθῆναι) was the present εὑρίσκω (quantity of the ι unknown). The aorist εὗρον may be a thematic root formation standing for the augmented ind. *ἔ-ϝρ-ον; on this form, see Vara Emerita 61 (1993): 177-9. The aspiration is perhaps secondary after ἑλεῖν etc. Alternatively, was it a reduplicated aorist u̯e-u̯r-e/o-* from ue-urh_1-e/o-*, with dissimilatory loss of the anlauting ϝ- and secondary aspiration, in which case, according to Beckwith Glotta 72 (1994): 24-30, the root-final laryngeal was lost in a reduplicated formation?
A reduplicated formation is also found in the OIr. preterite -fúar 'I found' < IE ue-ur-* (pres. fo-gabim); the pass. -frīth 'inventum est' agrees with ϝρη- in -ϝέ-ϝρη-κα (> εὕρηκα) as IE urh_1-to-. IE ureh_1-t-* has also been supposed in OCS ob-rětъ 'I found'. A full grade uer-* is seen in Arm. gerem (with secondary aorist gerec'i) 'take prisoner'. Taillardat RPh. 34 (1960): 232-235 assumes suer-, with sesure > εὗρε.

εὐρυάγυια ⇒ἄγυια.

εὐρυόδεια [adj.] only in ἀπὸ χθονὸς εὐρυοδείης (Hom., always verse-finally). ◀IE sed-* 'sit'▶ •ETYM Schulze 1892: 487f. (followed by Bechtel 1914 s.v.) reads εὐρυ-εδείης 'with broad seats' (i.e. places for settling, ἕδος), recalling Simon. 5, 17 εὐρυεδοῦς ... χθονός. Thus also R. Schmitt 1967: 246ff.

εὐρύοπα [acc.] = [voc.] epithet of Ζῆν (Κρονίδην), also in nom. and voc. εὐρύοπα Ζεύς, Ζεῦ (Il.), later of κῆρυξ, κέλαδος, ἥλιος; bahuvrīhi of ὄπ-ᾱ- 'with far-reaching sight, far-seeing'. ◀IE $h_3$ek^w-* 'see'▶ •ETYM The formula was adapted to formulae like κυανοχαῖτα, with a vocative in -α < *-h_2. In the case of εὐρύοπα, we are probably dealing with an old accusative. Thus Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 416f. and Beekes 1969: 148-150.

εὐρύς [adj.] 'broad, wide' (Il.). ◀IE $h_1$urH-u-* (?) 'broad'▶ •VAR Epic also acc. -έα (under formulaic pressure).
•COMP Very often as a first member.
•DER εὐρύτης 'broadness, width' (Hp.) and denominative εὐρῡ́νω 'broaden, widen' (θ 260; on the formation Schwyzer: 733). Also εὖρος [n.] 'breadth, width' (λ 312), as a second member in ἰσο-ευρής 'with the same breadth' (Phot.).

•ETYM Indo-Iranian has Skt. urú-, Av. vouru- 'broad', and Skt. váras- [n.] 'breadth', from which εὐρύς and εὖρος differ only regarding their anlaut. We have to start from IE urH-ú-* and uérH-os-*, which should have given Gr. *ϝαρύς, *ϝέρος; cf. βαρύς = Skt. gurú-. It has been assumed that εὐρύς has a prothetic vowel from *h_1-, *ἐ-ϝρύ-ς, but then one would rather expect *ἐϝ(α)ρυς < *h_1*u̯r(H)us*. Alternatively, it has been supposed that it stands with metathesis for a secondary full grade *ϝερύς (after the primary comparative, Skt. várī-yān 'broader'); εὖρος, beside Skt. váras-, could also be explained in this way, if not secondary after εὐρύς (cf. βάρος, βάθος, τάχος, etc.). ToA wärts, ToB wartse 'broad' contain a suffix -ts, -tse and reflect a preform wər(ə)-*. The reconstruction remains problematic.

εὐρώς, -ῶτος [m.] 'mould, dank decay', also 'rust'? (Thgn., Simon.); on the mg. Aly Glotta 5 (1915): 63ff. ◂PG?▸ •VAR ἔρβως· εὔρως 'fair-flowing' (H.).
•DER εὐρώεις 'mouldy, musty' epithet of the underworld (Hom., Hes.), also of πηλός (Opp.); εὐρωτιάω 'to be mouldy' (Ar., Thphr.).
•ETYM εὐρώεις (see Schwyzer: 527 and Chantraine 1933: 274) should not be changed into ἠερόεις; see the remarks by Solmsen 1901: 121f. Based on comparison with ἱδρώς, γέλως, ἔρως, etc., an original s-stem has been concluded (Schwyzer: 514). No convincing etymology. Etymologies assuming a prothetic vowel (see Frisk) must be discarded. Fur.: 242 refers to the form given by H. and thinks the form is Pre-Greek, which seems quite plausible.

ἐύς [adj.] 'good, brave, strong (in war)' (epic since Il.), only of men, never in fem.; ntr. ἐΰ, εὖ 'good' (A., E.), mostly as an adverb 'well' (Il.). ◂IE uesu-* 'good', and/or h_1(e)su-* 'good'▸ •VAR Also ἠΰς, ἠΰ (see below), gen.sg. ἐῆος, ἑ-, gen.pl.n. ἐᾱ́ων (verse-final, e.g. δωτῆρες ἐάων θ 325).
•DIAL Myc. names with e-u-, e.g. e-u-me-ne /Eumenēs/.
•COMP Very often as a first member, both adjectical and adverbial.
•DER ἐυτής (cod. ἐητής)· ἀγαθότης 'goodness' (H.); on the accent see Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 177. Note further ἠέα· ἀγαθά (H.).
•ETYM The Greek forms present several problems. As for ἠΰς beside ἐΰς, old ablaut is highly improbable, and a metrical solution has been sought (ἠΰς occurs mostly in verse-final expressions). In combination with the analogical introduction of the length from compounds where metrical lengthening was necessary (e.g. ἠΰ-κομος), this is certainly possible. Metrical lengthening could also be assumed in ἐῆος, if this stands for *ἐέος; often, ἑῆος (thus most mss.) seems to represent *ἑῆο = *ἑεῖο, *ἑέο 'sui', from ►ἕ, ἑ 'se'; cf. ἐμεῖο = ἐμέο from ἐμέ. The comparison of ἐυ- with Skt. su- points to *h_1*su-*, with which Hitt. āššu- 'good, useful, pleasant', ntr. 'goods, possession, prosperity' is also ultimately connected. On the other hand, there is also Skt. vásu-, Av. vohu- 'good', to which further Gaulish PNs like Bello-vēsus and Ir. feb [f.] 'eminence' belong, as well as Illyr. Ves-cleveses [gen.] (cf. Εὐ-κλέης, Skt. vásu-śravas-). Further, there is the expression δωτῆρες (δῶτορ) ἐάων, which may have a pendant in Skt. dātā́ vásūnām (beside dā́tā vásu [acc.]). Unambiguous traces of the digamma fail, as ἕτερος δὲ ἐάων Ω 528 is young. We must also reckon with the merger of IE esu-* and uesu-*. See Chantraine 1942: 201; 254; 274. Not related to ►ὑγιής, which is rather from *h_2*iu-*. Hoffmann 1975-6: 593-604 suggests that ἐῆος continues hysterodynamic *h_1*u̯esu̯-os*. On the ablaut of the compounds, see Zimmer MSS 55 (1994): 157-171.

εὐσωπία ⇒σιωπάω.

εὖτε [conj.] '(as soon) as', rarely causal 'because' (Il.); also as a compar. adverb 'like', see ►ἠΰτε. ◂?▸ •ETYM Debrunner IF 45 (1927-1928): 185ff. suggested it was in origin a paratactic exclamation εὖ τε 'and rightly!'. Acc. to Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:2, 731f., it is from ἠ or εἰ and *υτε; see ►ἠΰτε. Cf. Monteil 1963: 286-290.

εὐτράπελος ⇒τρέπω.

εὐτρόχαλος ⇒τρέχω.

εὐφρόνη [f.] 'night' (Hes. Op. 560, Pi., A.). ◂IE *g^{wh}ren- 'diaphragm'▸ •DER Patronymic Εὐφρονίδης (Epigr. Gr. 1029, 6, Cios).
•ETYM Properly 'the benevolent', a substantivation of εὔφρων; cf. Ἡγεμόνη epithet of Artemis (Call.) and PNs like Ἠριγόνη, Ἠπιόνη; also, Μναμόνα (Ar. Lys. 1248) for Μνημοσύνη; and δυσφρονέων [gen.pl.] v.l. for -οσυνέων Hes. Th. 102. See further ►φρήν.

εὐχερής ⇒δυσχερής.

εὔχομαι [v.] 1. 'proclaim, boast' (Il.); 2. 'promise solemnly' (Il.; also e.g. Pl. Ph. 58b); 3. 'pray' (Il.). ◂IE *h_1*ueg*^{wh}- 'speak solemnly'▸ •VAR Aor. εὔξασθαι, pret. εὖκτο (see below).
•DIAL Myc. e-u-ke-to (= εὔχεται) 'declares'.
•COMP Often with prefixes like ἀπ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, προσ-, συν- et al.
•DER εὖχος 'glory' (cf. κλέος), rarely and secondarily 'fulfilment of a prayer' (Il.); εὐχωλή 'proclamation, cry of joy, boast, vow, prayer' (Il.; also Arc.-Cypr., see Bechtel 1921, 1: 391 and 447) with εὐχωλιμαῖος 'bound by a vow' (Hdt. 2, 63; cf. Chantraine 1933: 49); εὐχή 'vow, prayer' (κ 526); εὔγματα [pl.] 'boasts' (χ 249), 'vows, prayers' (trag., Call.); cf. ῥήματα; πρόσ-ευξις 'prayer' (Orph.). Verbal adjective εὐκτός 'asked for' (Ξ 98 εὐκτά [n.pl.]), 'desired' (Att.); together with ἀπ-ευκτός, πολύ-ευκτος (A.); also ἀπ-, πολυ-εύχετος (A., h. Cer., etc.); εὐκταῖος 'containing a prayer' (trag., etc.); εὐκτικός 'belonging to a prayer', ἡ εὐκτική (ἔγκλισις) = (modus) optativus (Hell.); εὐκτήριος 'belonging to a prayer', -ιον [n.] 'house of prayer' (Just.); on -τικός : -τήριος Chantraine 1933: 13. Multi-interpretable is the first member in Εὐχ-ήνωρ (N 663), see Sommer 1948: 175. Lengthened forms of the present stem εὐχετόωντο, -τάασθαι = εὔχοντο, -εσθαι (Il.); explanation uncertain, see Leumann 1950: 182ff., Chantraine 1942: 358. On εὖχος, εὐχή, εὐχωλή, etc. see Porzig 1942: 231f., 235, Chantraine 1933: 183, 418f.; also Steinkopf 1937, Greindl 1938, Benveniste 1969:2: 237-243.

•ETYM Greek εὔχομαι is identical with Av. aojaite 'proclaim solemnly, invoke', Skt. óhate 'boast, praise', from reduplicated IE h_1é-$h_1$ug^{wh}-e-toi (with *g^{wh} > χ after υ). It is an old term of the religious language. Beside it stands the athematic preterite 3sg. εὖκτο (Thebaïs Fr. 3), which corresponds to OAv. aogədā, LAv. aoxta, and perhaps also the 1sg. εὔγμην (S. Tr. 610). Lat. voveō 'to promise solemnly, implore', Skt. vāghát- 'the vower, who prays', Arm. gog [impv.] 'say!' show an unreduplicated formation, so the regular full-grade was IE $h_1$ueg^{wh}- (cf. LIV² s.v. h_1u̯eg^{wh}-). Arm. uzem 'I will', y-uzem 'I search' is semantically divergent.

εὕω [v.] 'to singe' (Il.). ◂IE $h_1$eus- 'burn'▸ •VAR Aor. εὗσαι.
•COMP Also with prefix ἀφ-, ἐφ-.
•DER εὕστρα (εὗσ-) [f.] 'place for singeing' (Ar. Eq. 1236), 'roasted barley' (PTeb. III^a), 'id.' (Paus. Gr.); εὑστόν (εὗσ-) [n.] 'singed sacrifice' (Miletus IV-III^a); εὔσανα = ἐγκαύματα 'sores from burning' (Poll., H.). Very unclear ►Εὖρος, s.v.
•ETYM An old verb which was ousted by καίω. Like other verbs with a diphthong -ευ- (see ►γεύομαι), it lost its ablaut. Gr. εὕω is identical with Lat. ūrō 'burn', Skt. óṣati 'id.', so it may have metathesis of aspiration from older *εὔhω < IE $h_1$éus-e/o-. The -σ- returns in εὑσ-τόν (with secondary full grade against Skt. uṣ-ṭá- = Lat. us-tus 'burned') and in εὗσ-τρα (with analogical aspiration; on τρᾱ-, cf. Schwyzer: 532 and Chantraine 1933: 333), and was introduced in εὔσ-ανα based on these forms. On the aspiration, see DELG s.v. The root occurs elsewhere, too, e.g. in the Gm. zero grade l-derivative ON usli [m.], MHG usel(e) [f.] 'glowing ashes'.

εὐώνυμος [adj.] 'of good name, of good reputation, renowned' (Hes. Th. 409, Pi.); 'left' (Ephesus VI-V^a); τὸ εὐώνυμον (κέρας) = 'the left wing' (Hdt., Th.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Euphemistic replacement of older σκαιός, λαιός, as well as ἀριστερός. Cf. ►ὄνομα.

εὐωχέω, -έομαι [v.] 'to treat, regale', med.-pass. 'to get satisfied, feast, be treated' with εὐωχία 'entertainment, feasting' (IA); συνευωχέομαι 'to feast together' (Arist.). ◂IE seǵʰ- 'hold, have'▸ •VAR Aor. -ῆσαι, -ηθῆναι, -ήσασθαι.
•DER δυσωχεῖν· δυσχεραίνειν 'be unable to endure' (H.).
•ETYM Long grade deverbative of intransitive εὖ ἔχω 'I am in a good state' with causative meaning (cf. Schwyzer: 720), an expression which was perceived as a unity, whence it became univerbated, perhaps under the influence of expressions like εὐπορέω (from εὔπορος).

ἐφελιωμένος [adj.] epithet of oxen, of unknown mg. (Mitylene I^a). ◂?▸
•VAR -ώ- in DELG.
•ETYM DELG suggests MoFr. 'tacheté' as a meaning. Perhaps related to ►ἔφηλις, with ε instead of η?

ἐφέται [m.pl.] 1. 'commander' (A. Pers. 79 [lyr.]); mostly 2. name of a board of judges in Athens (Att.). ◂IE (H)ieh₁- 'throw'▸ •DER ἐφετμή, mostly in plur. 'command, order' (Il.); cf. ἐρέτης : ἐρετμόν.

•ETYM In the meaning 'commander', it was derived from ἐφίεμαι 'order, command'; in the juridical meaning, probably from ἐφίημι = 'decide something (about somebody)'. See DELG.

ἔφηλις, -ιδος [f.] technical term of uncertain mg., 'rivet, clinch' vel sim.? Acc. to H. ἐφήλιδες· περόναι 'pins', ἔπηλις· τὸ πῶμα τῆς λάρνακος 'the lid of a coffer' (S. Fr. 1046, Hell.); usually metaph. as the name of a rash (Nic.), in this mg. mostly in plur. (Hp., Thphr.), also explained as 'freckles' and connected with ἥλιος, cf. αἱ τοῦ ἡλίου ἐπικαύσεις 'burns from the sun' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also oxytone -ίς, -ίδος, plur. also -εις.
•DIAL Ion. ἔπηλις, -ιδος [f.] (barytone acc. to Hdn. Gr. 1, 91).
•ETYM On the stem in -ι(δ)-, see Schwyzer: 450, 464f. and Chantraine 1933: 113f. Morphologically uncertain because of the unclear meaning. Proposals: 1. as a hypostasis of ἐφ' ἥλου (ὤν): a) 'what is upon a ἧλος ('pin')'; b) 'upper (part of a) ἧλος'. 2. as a bahuvrīhi: 'equipped with a ἧλος'. 3. deverbal of ἐφηλοῦν 'pin down, fix': 'what has been pinned down'; cf. ἔφηλος· ὁ ἡλωμένος 'sharpened' or 'callous person' (Suid.). See also ►ἔφηλος.

ἔφηλος [adj.] '(equipped) with a ἧλος', of people (and eyes?) that have a certain eye disease (LXX, Call. Fr. anon. 106, Ael.). ◂GR▸ •DER ἐφηλότης [f.] name of that disease (S. E.).
•ETYM From ἧλος in the meaning 'wart, callus'; see Strömberg 1944: 93 and Forster 1950: 44. Cf. also H. ἔφηλος· (...) ἐφήλιδας ὡς ἥλους ἔχων εἰς τὴν ὄψιν (the gloss may be partly corrupt). Cf. ►ἔφηλις.

ἐφιάλτης, -ου [m.] 'nightmare, phantom' (Phryn. Com., Dsc.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also ἐπιάλτης (Alc. in Eust. 1687, 52); in the same mg. also ἠπιάλης, acc. -ητα (Sophr.), ἠπιόλης (Hdn. Gr.). As a PN: 1. Ἐφιάλτης (Ἐπι-), a mythical figure, son of Aloeus (or of Poseidon) and Iphimedeia, famous for his unusual size and strength (E 385, λ 308, Pi. P. 4, 89); 2. regular PN (Hdt., etc.).
•DIAL Myc. E-pi-ja-ta (?).
•DER ἐφιαλτικός 'suffering from nightmare' (medic.), plant name ἐφιάλτιον, -τία (Ps.-Dsc., Aët., because of its prophylactic use, Strömberg 1940: 90).
•ETYM No etymology. The name of the 'nightmare', originally being the name of a demon, is clearly identical with the mythical name (cf. Nilsson 1941(1): 226). In antiquity the name was connected with ἐφάλλομαι 'throw oneself onto sbd.'; cf. ἐφιάλτης· ὁ ἐπιπηδῶν 'assaulting' (H.). This explanation is not without problems phonetically and must therefore be considered to be folk-etymological. Leumann 1950: 80[45] defended the suggestion that ἐφιάλτης came from ἠπίαλος, name of a fever, which was reshaped via ἐπίαλος, whence ἐπιάλτης, to ἐφιάλτης, by folk-etymology after ἐφάλλομαι. Acc. to Frisk, this is not very probable because of the difference in meaning. Leumann separates the PN Ἐφιάλτης from that of the demon and connects it with ἐπ-ιάλλειν (but this does not explain the -φ-). The forms ἠπιάλης, -όλης are based on crossing with ►ἠπίαλος. Other folk-etymological reshapings (ἐφέλης, ἐπωφέλης, etc.) in H. s.v. ἐπιάλης. If the name is identical with the noun ἠπίαλος, as Leumann 1950: 80[45] and Fur.: 159, 258, 342 assume, it is Pre-Greek, which is what one might expect for such words.

ἐχενηΐς [adj.] 'detaining or holding back ships' (A., Arist.); a fish, Lat. nemora. ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM See Keller 1913: 378f., Thompson 1947 s.v.

ἐχεπευκής [adj.] epithet of βέλος (Α 51, Δ 129), of σμύρνα or ῥίζα (Nic. Th. 600 and 866), of ἀϋτμή (Orph. L. 475). ⋖IE peuk̂-* 'sting'⋗ •DER Beside it περιπευκής (Λ 845), also of βέλος, and ἐμπευκής (Nic. Al. 202), of ὀπός.
•ETYM Compound (Schwyzer: 441) of ἔχειν and a noun *πεῦκος vel sim. In any case, it has close relatives in ►πεύκη, πευκεδανός, and πευκάλιμος. The meaning 'bitter' (Eust.), also found in Nic., clearly derives from 'sharp, stinging'. The proper meaning of ἐχε-πευκής therefore is probably 'having a point'. For cognates outside Greek, see ►πεύκη.

ἐχέτλη ⇒ἔχω.

ἐχθές ⇒χθές.

ἐχθοδοπέω [v.] 'to make oneself hated (to somebody), become enemies'. ⋖IE *h$_1$eǵ^{h}s 'out'⋗ •VAR Only aor. ἐχθοδοπῆσαι (Α 518).
•DER ἐχθοδοπός 'hated, inimical' (S.).
•ETYM For the formation, cf. οἰνοχοέω (Schwyzer: 726); ἐχθοδοπέω presupposes a noun ἐχθοδοπός, which indeed exists, but the form may be rather deverbal because of its late appearence. If it stands for ἐχθοδαπός (Pergam. IIᵖ; here probably an innovation for ἐχθοδοπός), it must be compared with ποδαπός, ἀλλοδαπός, and should then be from ἐχθός 'outside', ἐχθο-δοπός properly meaning 'located outside, foreign', and ἐχθοδοπέω 'to become a foreigner to sbd.'. Bechtel 1914 s.v. compares κυδοιδοπᾶν (Ar. Pax 1152, Nu. 616) 'make a hubbub' and assumes an unknown verb depō*, which is not very convincing. See ►ἔχθος.

ἔχθος [n.] 'hatred, enmity' (Il.). ⋖IE *h$_1$eǵ^{h}s-to- 'outsider'⋗ •COMP As a second member in φιλ-εχθής 'who is inclined to hatred' (Theoc. 5, 137).
•DER ἐχθρός [adj.] 'hated' (thus always in Hom.), 'hateful', substantivized [m.] 'enemy' (Hes., Pi.); grades of comparison ἐχθίων (A.), ἔχθιστος (Il.); ἔχθρα, Ion. -ρη [f.] 'hate, enmity' (IA, Pi.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 226). Verbs: ἔχθομαι (only present stem) 'to be hated' (Od.), act. ἔχθω 'to hate' (trag.); ἀπ-εχθάνομαι (β 202), aor. ἀπ-εχθέσθαι (Il.), fut. ἀπ-εχθήσομαι (Hdt.), late present ἀπ-έχθομαι (Theoc., Lyc.) 'to make oneself hated' with ἀπεχθής 'hated' (S., D.), ἀπέχθεια 'to be hated, hate' (Att.), ἀπέχθημα 'object of hate' (E. Tr. 425; cf. Chantraine 1933: 177f.); ἐχθαίρω, aor. ἐχθῆραι (also with ἀπ-, ὑπερ-, συν-) 'to hate' (Il.); ἐχθραίνω, aor. ἐχθρᾶναι (X.) 'to be an enemy, hate' with ἔχθρασμα· ἔχθρα (H.); ἐχθρεύω 'to be an enemy' (LXX, Phld.).
•ETYM The relation of the words cited is not always clear. Clearly, ἐχθραίνω and ἐχθρεύω are late derivations of ἐχθρός; ἐχθαίρω is much older and also a denominative of ἐχθρός (Schwyzer: 725). Also, ἀπ-εχθάνομαι could be related to ἐχθρός with interchange -r/n- (Benveniste 1935: 16), although it could just as well be a nasal enlargement of ἔχθομαι, ἀπ-εχθέσθαι (Schwyzer: 700, Chantraine 1942: 315f.). Acc. to Schwyzer: 725, ἔχθομαι is a back-formation from ἐχθαίρω, but it is better taken with ἔχθος, like σθένω to σθένος (Schwyzer: 723). More difficult is the interpretation of ἔχθος and ἐχθρός, for which we may compare αἶσχος: αἰσχρός, κῦδος: κυδρός. If we start from ἐχθρός and consider ἔχθος (together with ἔχθομαι, ἐχθίων, ἔχθιστος) to be an innovation, perhaps modelled on κυδρός, κυδίων, κύδιστος, τὸ κῦδος, we can connect ἐχθρός with Lat. extrā 'outside', exterus 'being outside', and so also with ἐχθός = ἐκτός 'outside'; ἐχθρός would then properly mean 'located outside, being in foreign territory, foreigner, enemy' (cf. Lat. hostis).

ἔχιδνα ⇒ἔχις.

ἐχῖνος [m.] 'hedgehog', also 'sea urchin', and metaph. as a technical term in several professions, e.g. 'vessel', especially 'vessel to keep juridical documents', 'the third stomach of ruminants', 'the rounded part of the Doric capital' (IA). ⋖IE *h$_1$eǵ^{h}i- 'hedgehog'⋗ •DIAL Myc. e-ki-no /Ekʰīnos/.
•COMP As a first member in ἐχινομήτρα 'the greatest kind of sea urchin, Echinus melo' (Arist.; cf. Strömberg 1944: 23).
•DER Diminutives: ἐχινίς 'vessel' (Hp.), -ίσκος 'id.', also 'hollow of the ear' (Poll.); ἐχίνιον plant-name (Dsc.); ἐχινέα, -ῆ 'skin of the hedgehog' (Hdn.), also a vessel (Delos IIIᵃ); ἐχινέες [m.pl.] a kind of Libyan spinous mouse (Hdt.); Ἐχῖναι or -άδες [f.pl.] name of a group of islands in the Ionian Sea (Β 635). ἐχινώδης 'rugged' (Arist., Str.).
•ETYM Probably derived from ἔχις 'snake' with suffixal -ῖνο- (i.e. -iHno-), so properly "snake-animal" = "snake-eater", as a taboo word for ►χήρ. A suffix -n- is also found in Arm. ozni 'hedgehog' (IE *h$_1$oǵ^h-i(H)-n-), with o-grade; beside it, we find Gm. words with -l-, e.g. OHG igil < PGm. egila-, which could replace older egīna-. Balto-Slavic has a derivative in -io-, e.g. Lith. ežỹs, SCr.CS ježь, IE *h$_1$eǵ^h-io-. The interpretation of Phr. εξις (= εζις?) remains uncertain.

ἔχις, -εως [m.] ([f.]) 'viper' (Att.). ⋖IE *h$_1$eǵ^{h}i- 'snake'⋗ •DER Diminutive ἐχίδιον (Arist.) and the plant name ἔχιον (Dsc.; because of the resemblance of the fruit to the head of a snake, Strömberg 1940: 54), ἐχίειον (Nic.); further ἐχιῆες [pl.] = ἔχεις (Nic. Th. 133, only a metrical variant?); ἐχῖτις [f.] name of a stone (Plin., after the color; cf. Redard 1949: 54). Fem. ἔχιδνᾰ 'viper' (IA, Hes. Th. 297), mostly considered to be a derivative in -ια- from *ἐχιδνός (Schwyzer: 475), together with ἐχιδν-αῖος and -ήεις (Hell.); but this is not very probable, as -δνα is a typical Pre-Greek suffix; ἔχιδνᾰ must have been a loan from Pre-Greek.
•ETYM If the interpretation of ►ἐχῖνος is correct, ἔχις must contain a palatal ǵʰ. Similar words for 'snake', Skt. áhi- = Av. aži- and Arm. iž, should rather be connected with ὄφις (*h$_3$eg^{wh}i-), since Av. and Arm. exclude a palatovelar.

ἐχυρός [adj.] 'strong, tenable, secure' (Th., X.). ⋖IE *seǵ^h- 'hold, have'⋗ •COMP ἐν-έχυρον [n.] 'pledge, security' (IA), hypostasis of ἐν ἐχυρῷ; besides ἐνεχυράζω [v.] 'to take a pledge' with ἐνεχυρ-ασία, -ασμα, -αστής et al.; also ἐνεχυρόω [v.], -ωμα [n.].

•DER ἐχυρότης 'tenability, etc.' (Ph.), ἐχυρόω [v.] 'to fasten' (Phot., Suid.). ὀχυρός 'id.' (Hes., A., E.), ἀν-ώχυρος 'not fortified' (X. Ages. 6, 6, SIG 569, 7 [III[a]]) with compositional lengthening, beside ὀχυρότης (Plb.), ὀχυρόω (X., Arist.) together with ὀχύρ-ωμα, -ωμάτιον, -ωσις, -ωτικός.
•ETYM Skt. sáhuri- 'victorious, strong' (RV) seems to be comparable; an old stem in -u(s)- is found in Gm., e.g. OHG sigu [m.] 'victory'. Beside the rebuilt u-stem in ὀχυ-, ἐχυ-ρ-ός, there is the neutral s-stem in Skt. sáhas- 'power, might, victory', Go. sigis 'victory', IE séǵ^{h}os-* (would be Gr. *ἔχος). The adverb ὄχ-α 'widely, by far' belongs here as well (cf. ταχύς : τάχα et al.; Schwyzer: 622f.). The interchange ὀχ- : ἐχ- may be due to old ablaut, but secondary influence of ἔχω is also possible. See ►ἔχω.

ἔχω 1 [v.] 'to possess, retain, have', aor. 'to conquer, take (into possession)', frequently also intr. 'to hold oneself', med. 'id.'. ◄IE seǵ^{h}-* 'hold, have'► •VAR Also pres. ἴσχω, aor. σχεῖν, ἔσχον, fut. ἕξω, σχήσω (Il.), perf. act. ἔσχηκα (Pl. Lg. 765a), med. ἔσχημαι, aor. pass. ἐσχέθην (late).
•DIAL Myc. e-ke /^{h}ek^{h}ei/.
•COMP Very often with prefix in various mgs., e.g. ἀν-, ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, μετ-, προσ-, συν-. As a first member in e.g. ἐχέ-φρων, ἐχ-έγγυος, ►ἐχεπευκής, ►ἐκεχειρία; also ἰσχέ-θυρον et al. (Hell.); cf. Schwyzer: 441; as a second member e.g. in προσ-, συν-εχής with προσ-, συν-έχεια.
•DER With e-grade (= present-stem): ἔχμα 'obstacle, support, defence' (Il.) with ἐχμάζω (H., sch.; cf. ὀχμάζω below); Myc. e-ka-ma? ἕξις 'attitude, state, situation, etc.', often in derivatives of the prefixed compounds, e.g. πρόσ-, κάθ-εξις from προσ-, κατ-έχειν (IA); together with (προσ-, καθ-)►ἑκτικός; ἑξῆς s.v.; ἐχέ-τλη, -τλιον 'plough handle', cf. the explanations καὶ ἡ αὖλαξ, καὶ ἡ σπάθη τοῦ ἀρότρου 'furrow; the blade of a plough' and ἐχελεύειν· ἀροτριᾶν 'to plough' in H.; ἕκτωρ 'holder' (Lyc. 100; also Pl. Cra. 393a as an explanation of the PN [s.v.]; Sapph. 157 as an epithet of Zeus); ►ἐχυρός. From εὖ ἔχειν: εὐεξία 'good condition' (IA; opposite καχεξία from κακῶς ἔχειν) with εὐέκ-της, -τικός, -τέω, also -τία (Archyt.); retrograde formation εὔεξος· εὐφυής 'well-grown' (H.). From the reduplicated present (see below): ἰσχάς [f.] 'anchor' (S. Fr. 761, Luc. Lex. 15); lengthened forms ἰσχάνω, -νάω (Il.). From the zero grade (= aorist stem): σχέσις 'situation, character, relation, restraint' (IA), often in derivatives from prefixed compounds, e.g. ἀνά-, ἐπί-, ὑπό-, κατά-σχεσις from ἀνα-σχεῖν, -έσθαι, etc.; σχῆμα (cf. σχ-ήσω) 'attitude, form, appearance' (IA; Schwyzer: 523); secondarily σχέμα (H.), Lat. schēma [f.] (Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 206); besides σχηματίζω, with σχημάτ-ισις, -ισμός, etc.; verbal adjective ἄ-σχετος 'uncontainable, irresistable' (Il.); abstract formations like ἐπισχεσίη 'attitude, pretext' (φ 71), ὑποσχεσίη 'promise' (N 369, A. R.) also derive from virtual verbal adjectives, cf. Schwyzer: 469, Holt 1941: 86f.; here also belong *σχερός (see ►ἐπισχερώ), ►σχεδόν, ►σχέτλιος, ►σχολή, ►σκεθρός; further ►ἰσχῦς. From the o-grade: ὄχοι [m.pl.] 'keeper, container' (λιμένες νηῶν ὄχοι ε 404); ὀχός 'firm, certain' (Ph. Byz.), further in verbal adjectives to prefixed compounds like ἔξ-, κάτ-, μέτοχος (from ἐξ-έχειν, etc.); ὀχή [f.] 'holding, support' (Call., Lyc., Ath.); to the prefixed compounds συν-, μετ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-οχή, etc. (from συν-έχειν, etc.); ὀχεύς "holder", 'strap of a helmet, clasp, bolt of a door, etc.' (Il.; cf. ►ὀχεύω 'to mount', etc.); ὄχανον 'holder of a shield' (Anacr., Hdt.), also ὀχάνη (Plu.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 198); ὀχυρός, see ►ἐχυρός; ὄχμος 'fortress' (Lyc.), ὄχμα· πόρπημα 'garment fastened with a buckle-pin' (H.) with ὀχμάζω 'hold fast' (A., E.); adverb ὄχα 'widely, by far' (ὄχ' ἄριστος Il.), ἔξοχα 'in front of' (ἔ. πάντων Il.). Reduplicated formation: ►ἀνοκωχή, also (ἐν) συνεοχμῷ? With compositional lengthening ►εὐωχέω. See further ►συνοκωχότε (B 218).

•ETYM The present ἔχω, reduplicated ἴ-σχ-ω (< *ἴ-σχ-ω < *(σ)ί-σχ-ω), has an exact agreement in Skt. sáhate [pres.3sg.med.] 'overpower, conquer' < séǵ^{h}-e-). The zero grade aorist and the other verbal forms are isolated, however (cf. LIV^{2} s.v. seǵ^{h}- 'überwältigen, in den Griff bekommen'). In Greek, the word group underwent a strong development of meaning; cf. Porzig 1954a: 115f. Moreover, the neutral s-stem of Skt. sáhas- 'force, strength, victory', Av. hazah- 'id.', Go. sigis (cf. on ►ἐχυρός) is missing in Greek. The root is also represented in Celtic, e.g. in the Gaulish names Σεγο-δουνον, Sego-vellauni.

ἔχω 2 [v.] 'to transport'. ◄IE ueǵ^{h}-* 'transport, drive'► •VAR Pamph. ϝεχετω, Cypr. aor. ϵϝεξε (also Pamph. ἰσ-ϝεξε̄?).
•DER From there ἔχεσφιν· ἅρμασιν 'with chariots' (H.), also ὄχος 'chariot, cart', ►ὄχλος, ►ὀχετός, ►ὀχέω.
•ETYM An old verb, represented in several IE languages, of which Greek preserves only traces. Several parallel forms exist: ϝεχέτω = Lat. vehitō; Skt. váhati = Av. vazaiti = Lat. vehit 'carries, rides' (IE uéǵ^{h}-e-ti*), Lith. vežù = OCS vezǫ = Lat. vehō; Cypr. ϵϝεξε corresponds with the old s-aorists Lat. vēxī, OCS věsъ, Skt. ávākṣam. Some Gm. words are also connected, e.g. ON vega 'move, weigh', Go. ga-wigan 'move', etc.; less certain are ToB wäsk- 'stir' and Alb. vjedh 'to steal', as alternative derivations can be given. See ►ὄχος for further formal correspondences. LIV^{2} follows Schlerath SII 20 (1996): 379-87 in assuming an original meaning 'float, be suspended', whence 'be carried (on a vehicle, boat, etc.)', which I find doubtful.

ἐψία [f.] 'joy, play' (S. Fr. 3, Nic. Th. 880). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Ion. -ίη. Also ἔψια (EM 406, 8), ἀψίαι· ἑορταί. Λάκωνες 'festivals (Lacon.)' (H.); ψιά (H.), ψιάδδειν = παίζειν (Ar.). Perhaps ψίνθος· τέρψις 'enjoyment' (H.).
•COMP As a second member in φιλ-έψιος (com.), ὁμ-έψιος (AP). Also ἔψεια· παίγνια 'playthings' (H.) [n.pl.], ἔψια (EM). Deverbal from ἑψιάομαι, -άσασθαι [v.] (also with ἀφ-, ἐφ-, καθ-) 'to enjoy, play' (Od.).
•DER Without anlauting vowel: ψιάδδειν = παίζειν (Ar. Lys. 1302 [lyr.], H.), ψιά· χαρά, γελοίασμα, παίγνια 'joy, laughter, plaything', also (see DELG s.v. ψιάδδοντι): ψίης· μάκαρος, εὐδαίμων 'blissful, happy'; ψίεσσα· εὐδαίμων, μακαρία; ψίεντα· τὰ αὐτά 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like the "verbs of disease" in -ιάω (Schwyzer: 732). Note the variations: ἐ-, ἑ-, ἀ, the varying accentuation and ψιά (H.), ψιάδδειν. For these reasons, the word must be Pre-Greek (Fur.: 139, 352, 376). Meier-Brügger MSS 50 (1989): 91-96 assumes a noun seng^{wh}-ti- 'singing', with *ἕψις from *ἕμψις, but one must wonder why *ἕμψις was not retained. This view does not explain the attested variations, and there is no reason to assume that the word primarily referred to music. Acc. to Dettori Glotta 74 (1996): 159-163, the gloss προσεψιά· προσαγόρευσις, καὶ ἡ πρός τινα ὁμιλία 'greeting, also a gathering with sbd.' (H.) belongs here as well. Dettori stresses the oxytone accent and the gloss ὁμιλία, so that the word does not belong to ἐν(ν)έπω. The word would belong to the informal language; Scheller 1951 assumes that the initial vowel was lost due to the final accent, but the variation would be better explained under the assumption that the word is Pre-Greek. The forms ψίεσσα, ψίεντα (with α beside ε) may be explained if we assume a palatalized cluster ps^{y}-*.

ἕψω [v.] 'to boil, seethe' (IA). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Aor. ἑψῆσαι, fut. ἑψήσω (IA), perf. ἥψηκα (Ph.); new presents ἑψέω, -άω.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀφ-, συν-.
•DER ἕψημα 'what has been boiled, meal, soup' (IA) with ἑψηματώδης (Dsc.), Hell. ἕψεμα (LXX; cf. Schwyzer 523), ἕψησις 'cooking' (IA); ἑψητήρ, -τήριον, -τής, -τικός (Hell.); ἑφθός 'boiled' (IA; with ἄπ-εφθος et al.), ἑψητός 'id.', also name of a fish (Ar., X.; cf. Strömberg 1943: 89), ἑψανός 'boiled, to be boiled' (Hp.), ἑψαλέος 'id.' (Nic.; after ὀπταλέος [Hom.] et al.); also ἑψεῖνα [n.pl.] of unclear mg. (PLond. 3, 1177, 217; II^{p}). From ἄπεφθος MoGr. ἀπόχτι (via ἀπόφθι(ον)) 'dried food' (Crete), 'salted meat' (Cyprus), see Hatzidakis Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 72f.; from ἑψανός MoGr. ψανός 'which is roasted', ψάνη 'wheat', see Georgacas ByzZ 41 (1941): 380f.
•ETYM Cannot be separated from Arm. ep'em 'cook'. However, as Arm. p' can hardly represent IE ps* (Pedersen KZ 39 (1906): 428), a pre-form IE sep^{h}-* has been posited, which would have had an s-enlargement in Greek (Schwyzer: 706). Yet PIE did not have a phoneme p^{h}*. This means that the word is from a substrate, probably Pre-Greek (cf. Fur.: 327, who compares δέφω / δέψω 'soften').
This Greco-Armenian isogloss ousted old ►πέσσειν. Cf. Porzig 1954a: 156. Another expression for 'boil, seethe' is ►ζέω.

ἕως 1 [f.] 'dawn, break of day' (Il.). ◂IE h$_2$eus-ōs* 'dawn'▸ •VAR Acc. -ω; Ion. (also Hell.) ἠώς, -οῦς, Dor. ἀϝώς, ἀϝώρ, gen. ἀϝῶ, Aeol. αὔως.
•COMP As a first member in ἑωσ-φόρος, Dor. ἀωσ-φόρος 'bringer of dawn, morning star' (Ψ 226, Pi. I. 4 (3), 24); see Wackernagel 1916: 100ff., where Hom. ἑωσ-φόρος is considered to be an epic Atticism; see also Chantraine 1942: 72 and (with improbable hypothesis) Schwyzer: 440^{8}.
•DER ἑώϊος, ἑῷος, ἠοῖος, ἠῷος (see Wackernagel 1916: 106f.) 'of the morning, eastern' (Il.), ἕωλος 'belonging to dawn, a night long', of food, etc. (Att., etc.; on the pejorative suffix -λ- Chantraine 1933: 239); adverb ἕωθεν, epic ἠῶθεν, Dor. ἀῶθεν 'from the morning on, early in the morning' (Il.) with ἑωθινός 'of the morning' (Hdt., Hp.; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 104, Schwyzer: 490); Hom. ἠῶθι in ἠῶθι πρό 'early in the morning'; explanation uncertain, cf. Schwyzer: 628^{6}, Chantraine 1942: 246.

•ETYM Wackernagel 1955(2): 1151ff. thinks that the barytonesis in ἕως (as opposed to ἠώς) can be explained from frequent ἕωθεν, where it is regular (Schwyzer: 383). The initial aspiration would be due to metathesis, as in ►εὕω (Schwyzer: 219; however, acc. to Sommer 1905: 11f., it was taken from ἑσπέρα). PGr. ἀυhώς < IE h$_2$eusṓs* is identical with Lat. aurōr-a (except for the added -a; cf. flōs : Flōr-a). With zero grade, we find Skt. uṣás- [f.] 'dawn'. A corresponding r-stem, IE h$_2$eus-r-*, h$_2$us-r-, is seen in ►αὔριον, together with ἄγχ-αυρος 'near the morning' (A. R. 4, 111), in Lith. aušr-à 'dawn', Skt. usr-á- 'of the morning', uṣar-búdh- 'waking at dawn'. Of the other cognates, OCS za ustra 'at dawn', Gm., e.g. OHG ōst(a)ra, -ūn 'Easter' should be mentioned. A full grade h$_2$u̯es-r-* with Schwebeablaut is found in e.g. Skt. vasar-hā́ (RV 1, 122, 3) epithet of the wind, meaning uncertain, vāsar-á- 'of the morning', and in Celt., e.g. MIr. fáir 'sunrise', IE h$_2$uōs-r-i-*. There is a verbal root in Indo-Iranian with sḱ-present: Skt. uccháti = Av. usaiti 'lights up (of the morning), appears', from IE h$_2$us-sḱ-é-ti*, and a full-grade athematic root aorist a-vas-ran. LIV^{2} s.v. h$_2$u̯es-* '(morgens) hell werden' connects Lith. aũšta, aũšti 'to dawn, break (of day)'. Cf. ►ἠϊκανός.

ἕως 2 [pcl., prep.] 'until, as long as' (Il.); prep. with gen. (rarely acc.) 'till' (Hell.). ◂IE ieh$_2$uot* 'as long as, until'▸ •VAR Epic ἧος (written εἵως, ἕως, see Chantraine 1942: 11, but also West Glotta 44 (1967): 135), Aeol. ἆος, Dor. ἇς, Hom. also demonstr. 'for some time'.
•ETYM From PGr. *ἇϝος and identical with the Skt. relative yā́vat 'as long as', except for the final consonant (adverbial -ς, which was added in Greek, but not always in Doric; see on ►ὡς 1). See ►τέως, ►ὅς 1.

Z

ζά- 'very', mostly strengthening in epic compounds like ► ζαής, ζά-θεος 'very godlike', ζά-κοτος 'very angry', Ζά-λευκος PN. ◄GR► •ETYM Aeolic form of διά. Under unclear conditions, we find δα- for ζα-, but conversely we also find (with inverse spelling?) ζα- for expected δα-, like in ζά-πεδον for δά-πεδον, ζα-κόρος for *δα-κόρος, and probably also in ► ζακρυόεις.

ζάγκλη [f.] 'sickle' (Nic. Al. 180). ◄?►
•VAR ζάγκλον [n.] (Th. 6, 4, Call. Aet. Oxy. 2080, 73); δάγκλον· δρέπανον 'id.' (H.).
•DER ζάγκλιον = σκολιόν acc. to Str. 6, 2, 3. Ζάγκλη is also the name of a town in Sicily (later Μεσσήνη), after the sickle-like shape of its harbour (Th. 6, 4); Ζαγκλαῖοι 'inhabitants of the town' (Hdt.).
•ETYM A Sicilian word (Th. l.c.) without etymology. According to Niedermann (see WH and E-M s.v. falx), it is a Ligurian word, from which Lat. falx would be a loan as well (doubted by De Vaan 2008 s.v. falx).

ζάδηλος adjunct of λαῖφος 'garment, rug' (Alc. 18, 7), perhaps 'transparent'. ◄GR► •ETYM Probably = διά-δηλος, 'transparent' = 'perforated', as per Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 52, who pleads against connection with ► δηλέομαι. See ► δῆλος.

ζάει [v.] · βινεῖ. καὶ πνεῖ. Κύπριοι 'has intercourse, breathes (Cypr.)' (H.). ◄IE *g^weiH- 'force'► •ETYM In its first meaning, explained from *g^wi̯ā-i̯ei (Kretschmer KZ 31 (1892): 383), a denominative of *g^wi̯ā (Skt. jyā́) beside βίᾱ < *g^wii̯ā 'force' (see ► βινέω), but this requires a high age for the separation from βία. In the meaning πνεῖ, the gloss is supposed to stand for ζάη = *δι-ά(ϝ)η, from ἄ(ϝ)ημι with thematic inflection (litt. in Frisk).

ζᾱής [adj.] 'blowing strongly' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2ueh_1- 'blow'► •VAR Also acc. -ῆν (see Chantraine 1942: 209), gen. -οῦς (AP 9, 290).
•ETYM From *δι̯α-αής, with contraction of διά and the root of ► ἄημι, or with compositional lengthening of the ᾰ after ► δυσ-ᾱής.

ζακελτίς ⇒ ζεκελτίς.

ζακόρος [m., f.] 'temple servant' (Att. inscr. V[a], Hyp., Men., etc.); ὑπο-ζακόρος [f.] 'subaltern temple-servant' (Hdt.), ἀρχι-ζακόρος 'higher temple-servant' (Laodiceia). ◄?►
•VAR The accentuation is probably more correct than ζάκορος; see below.

•DIAL Myc. da-ko-ro.
•DER ζακορεύω, ὑπο- 'be a temple servant' (Delos, Thebes).
•ETYM Hieratic professional term. Semantically related and formally comparable is νεω-κόρος 'temple-guardian', which makes the analysis in ζα-κόρος very probable. Here, ζα- may stand for δα- (cf. on ►ζά), as in ζά-πεδον for δά-πεδον; then ζα-κόρος would properly mean "cleaner of the house" (related to ►κορέω; Solmsen IF 31 (1912/13): 453ff.)? This seems rather doubtful. In antiquity, the word was analyzed as *δια-κορος; cf. the prefix in διᾱ́-κονος. The word must in any case be Aeolic; cf. Solmsen IF 31 (1912/13): 453ff.

ζακρυόεις [adj.] adjunct of θάνατος (Alc. Supp. 12, 8 = LP B 2a 8), probably replacing δακρυόεις 'with many tears' (influence of κρυόεις 'horrible'). ◄GR► •ETYM See on ►ζά and Risch Mus. Helv. 3 (1946): 253ff.

ζάλη [f.] 'whirlwind, whirlpool, downpour' (Pi., trag., Pl.). ◄?►
•VAR ζάλος 'whirlpool' (Nic. Th. 568).
•DER Denominative ptc. ζαλόωσα (χάλαζα, Nic. Th. 252). Here also ζάλακες· ἐχῖνοι 'sea urchin; a vessel' (H.)?
•ETYM Poetic word without etymology. Bq connected it with ►δίνη, etc.; this is formally difficult. In MoGr., it merged with σάλος; cf. Hatzidakis IF 36 (1916): 301.

ζάπεδον [n.] = δάπεδον (Xenoph., Paros). ◄GR► ⇒ζά and ζακόρος.

ζαχρηής [adj.] 'rushing violently, furious' (Il.); verse-initially always plur. ◄IE? *g^hreh_2u- 'oppress'► •VAR Also written -χρει-. Verse-initial ζαχρηές (Nic. Th. 290), -ᾶής (Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 6 Fr. 3, 1).
•ETYM From intensifying ζα- < δια- and a second member belonging to the aor. ἔχρᾰ(ϝ)ον 'to assault, oppress'. If -ηεῖς, -ηῶν are replaced by ζαχρᾰέες, -αέων (cf. ζαχράσεις· ἐξαπιναίους 'sudden' [H.] which may stand for -αέας), immediate connection with the zero grade aorist may be obtained. Otherwise, it is necessary to assume a full grade noun *χρῆϝος (*χρᾱϝος) or a full grade verbal form. See Bechtel 1914 s.v. and Chantraine 1942: 41.

ζάψ [f.] 'surf' (Hell. poetry). ◄PG?► •ETYM Expressive word. The supposed contamination of ζάλη and λαῖλαψ is an improbable guess. Cf. Fur.: 176: Pre-Greek?

ζάω ⇒ζώω.

ζειαί [f.pl.] 'one-seeded wheat, spelt, Triticum monococcum' (Od., Hdt.), Hell. and late also sing. ζειά (Thphr.), ζεά (ζέα), -η (pap. III^a, D. H.; Dsc. and Gal. as a v.l.). ◄IE *$ieuh_1$- 'wheat, spelt'► •COMP As a first member in ζεί-δωρος 'giving spelt (wheat)' (Il.; of ἄρουρα), ζεό-πυρον n. 'kind of Triticum' (Gal.); as 2. member in φυσί-ζοος 'producing wheat' (Hom., Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 67; of αἶα), Οἰσε-ζέα PN (Lesb.). Both as a first and a second member ζει-, -ζοος were early (Emp., A.) associated with ζῆν, ζωή and understood as 'lifegiving'.

•DER ζῆνος = ζέϊνος 'of spelt' (pap. II^a)?
•ETYM Related to Skt. yáva-, Av. yauua- [m.] 'wheat, etc.', Lith. plur. javaĩ 'wheat', sing. jāvas. If the diphthong in ζειαί is real, we have to start from PGr. *ζεϝ-ι̯ᾰ́, so a ι̯ᾰ-derivative of IE *ieuo- found in Skt. yáva-, etc. The monophthongal forms would be secondary. However, if ζειαι has metrical lengthening for ζε(ϝ)αί (and if the epic orthography was retained in this word, which was rare and probably exclusively literary), then the Greek word agrees with the Indo-Iranian and Lithuanian forms. The second member -ζο(ϝ)ος (with regular o-grade of the root) contradicts a ι̯ᾰ-derivative. The first member ζει- may stand for ζε(ϝ)ε- (from *$\underline{i}e\underline{u}h_1$-). See Bechtel 1914 s.v. ζείδωρος and Chantraine 1942: 31. Cf. also Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 404; DELG s.v. is unclear. Cf. ►δηαί.

ζειγάρη [f.] · ὁ τέττιξ παρὰ Σιδήταις 'cicala (Sid.)' (H.). ◄PG?, LW► •ETYM Pamphylian? See Gil Fernández 1959: 126. Onomatopoeic, acc. to Brandenstein Kratylos 6 (1961): 169f. Not related to cicāda (Dressler Arch. Orbis 33 (1965): 185) as a Mediterranean word. Neumann 1961: 42 connects it with ►σιγαλφοί. Cf. Fur. index.

ζειρά [f.] 'long robe kept by a belt', worn by Arabs and Thracians' (Hdt. 7, 69, 75). ◄LW► •DER Cf. ζειροφόρος (Antim. 98, Wyss).
•ETYM Probably a loan. Latte refers to ζτεραῖον [sic] λῶπος in an Arcadian inscription, SEG 11, 1112.

ζειρατίς [m./f.] · ἱμάτιόν τι Σύριων 'Syrian garment' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ζεκελτίδες [m./f.] Aeol. for γογγυλίδες 'turnips' or κολοκύνται 'gourds' (Nic., apud Ath. 369 a). ◄PG► •ETYM Unknown. Cf. ζακελτίδες = ζεκελτίδες (Amerias and Timachidas apud Ath. 9, 369 a), ζακελτίδες κολοκύνται, ἢ γογγυλίδες (H.) and ζακυνθίδες· κολοκύνται (H.). Fur.: 256 compares θικέλιον· τὴν γογγυλίδα. Λάκωνες (H.), and believes the word is Pre-Greek. Is ζε- from *d^ya- (with influence of the palatal on the vocalism)?

ζεύγνυμι [v.] 'to bring under the yoke, harness; to join, unite' (Il.). ◄IE *ieug- 'yoke, connect'► •VAR Also them. -ύω; aor. ζεῦξαι, pass. ζυγῆναι, ζευχθῆναι, fut. ζεύξω, perf. pass. ἔζευγμαι (Il.), perf. act. ἔζευχα (Philostr.).
•COMP Often with prefix, like ἀνα-, ἀπο-, δια-, ἐπι-, κατα-, συ-, ὑπο- et al.
•DER 1. ζεῦξις 'yoking, bridging' (Hdt.), often with prefix, e.g. σύ-, διά-, ἐπί-ζευξις (IA). 2. ὑπο-, ἀνα-, παρα-, ἀπο-ζυγή, etc. (since V^a), as a simplex only pap. (IV-VI^p) meaning 'pair'. 3. ζεῦγμα 'what is used for joining, bridge of boats, canal lock, etc.' (Th., E., Plb.) with ζευγματικόν 'payment for passing through a canal-lock with a ship' (pap.). 4. ζεύγλη part of the yoke ('yoke-cushion, collar', cf. Delebecque 1951: 60 and 179), etc. (Il.; see below). 5. ►ζεῦγος, s.v. 6. ►ζυγόν, s.v. 7. -ζυξ, see ►ζυγόν. 8. ζευκτήριος 'fit for yoking, connecting', ntr. 'yoke' (A.), ζευκτηρίαι [pl.] 'ropes for strapping up a rudder' (Act. Ap. 27, 40); later 9. ζευκτήρ 'connector' (J.), fem. -ειρα (Orph.); cf. Chantraine 1933: 45, 62f. and below. 10. (δια-, etc.) ζευκτικός (Hell.). 11. ζευκτός (Str., Plu.; see below).

•ETYM Beside the athematic νυ-present ζεύγνυμι (with full grade, for which cf. ► δείκνυμι), the other languages have forms with nasal infix, e.g. Skt. yunák-ti 'yokes, connects' (athem.), Lat. iungō (them.), Lith. jung-iù (yod-present) 'id.', or forms without nasal, like Av. yaog-ət̰ [3sg.pret.] (athem.), yuǰ-yeite [3sg.pres.] (zero grade yod-present). Most other Greek forms also show a full grade: the future and the σ-aorist, in addition to the late agent noun ζευκτήρ (cf. Skt. yoktár-), the τι-derivative ζεῦξις, and the late verbal adj. ζευκτός (as against Skt. (prá-)yukti-, yuktá-). The only exceptions are the pass. aorist ἐζύγην and the nouns in -ζυγη. The λ-derivative ζεύγλη is unconnected with Lat. iugulum 'throat' and Skt. yúgalam 'pair'.

ζεῦγος [n.] 'yoke, team, pair' (Il.). ◄IE ieug-* 'yoke, unite'►

•DIAL Myc. ze-u-ke-u-si [dat.pl.] 'men who look after the span'.

•COMP As a first member e.g. in ζευγο-τρόφος 'who keeps a pair' (Att. inscr. IV^{a}, etc.), ζευγ-ηλάτης 'driver of a span' (S., X.).

•DER ζευγίτης, fem. -τις 'owner of a span', name of one of the Solonic classes (Arist.), also 'walking in a span', etc. (Hell.); thence ζευγίσιον 'tax of the ζευγῖται' (Arist.). ζευγίον 'door panel' (Hell. inscr.); ζευγίς [f.] 'knot' (pap.). Denominative verb ζευγίζω 'yoke together, unite' (LXX, pap.).

•ETYM The plur. ζεύγεα, -γη is formally identical with Lat. iūgera, -um (secondary sing. iūgerum) and MHG jiuch 'a land measure'. For the meaning, cf. MoHG Joch, Juchert as a measure of land; properly 'the amount of land a span can plough in one day'. Beside the s-stem IE iéug-os-* (whence also OLat. plur. iouxmenta > iūmenta, sing. -um 'span'), there is also an l-stem in ζεύγ-λη (see ► ζεύγνυμι); cf. on ► ἔταλον for the change of suffix. See further ► ζυγόν.

Ζεύς [m.] Zeus (Il.). ◄IE dieu-* 'heaven'►

•VAR Boeot. Lac., etc. Δεύς, voc. Ζεῦ, gen. Δι(ϝ)ός, dat. (loc.) Δι(ϝ)ί, dat. also Διϝεί (e.g. Διϝεί-φιλος), Myc. di-we, acc. Ζῆν, since Hom. also Δί-α and Ζῆν-α (whence Ζην-ός, -ί); nom. Ζήν (A. Supp. 162 [lyr.]; or perhaps voc.), Ζάν (Pythag., Ar.), Ζάς (Pherec. Syr.), gen. Ζανός (inscr. Chios IV^{a} [?] etc.); note Δᾶν (Theocr. 4, 17); more forms in Schwyzer: 576f., Leumann 1950: 288ff.

•DIAL Myc. dat. di-we /diwei/.

•COMP As a first member in univerbations: with gen. Διόσ-κουροι, also Διεσ-κουρίδου (Priene etc.), with dat. Διϝεί-φιλος, with various stem forms e.g. in διο-γενής; also Ζηνό-δοτος (for Διόσ-δοτος), etc. As a second member in ► ἔνδιος, ► εὐδία, etc., see also ► αὐτόδιον.

•DER See on ► δῖος.

•ETYM The old Indo-European word for 'heaven' and name of the god of heaven and of daylight, preserved especially in Anatolian, Indo-Aryan, Greek and Italic: Ζεύς = Skt. dyáuḥ '(god of) heaven, day', Lat. Iovis, from IE diēus*. Also related is Hitt. šīu-, šīuna- 'god' (on which see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.), with cognates Pal. tiuna- 'god', Lyd. ciw- 'id.'.

Other old correspondences are Ζεῦ πάτερ = Lat. Iūpiter, Ζῆν = Skt. dyā́m, Lat. diem (whence a new nom. diēs, Diēspiter). The other oblique cases Διϝ-ός, -εί, -ί, and Δία agree with Skt. diváḥ, divé, diví, dívam, of which Δία and dívam are parallel innovations.

Recent formations in Greek are Ζῆνα (after Δία), whence Ζηνός, -ί, which continues the old acc. diē(u)m* with early loss of the u*, which is also seen in Skt. Dyā́m. The α in Ζάς, Ζάν, Ζανός spread from Elean Olympia, where η became ᾱ, see Leumann 1950: 288ff. (following Kretschmer Glotta 17 (1929): 197).

It is has been assumed that IE dieu-* is an agent noun of the verb seen in Skt. dī́deti 'shine', Gr. ► δέατο 'shone'. However, this is doubtful as the verb was deih₂-, with final laryngeal, which is absent from dieu-. Beside dieu-*, there is an old appellative for 'god' in Skt. devá-, Lat. deus, Lith. diẽvas, etc., all from thematic IE deiuo-, which probably meant 'the heavenly one', as a derivative from the noun for 'heaven'. It is probable that this thematization started from an older nominative dei-u- (see Beekes 1985: 85); we are dealing with an original hysterodynamic u-stem. After separating the suffix, it is possible to compare IE di-n-* 'day' as well, as found e.g. in Proto-BSl. d(e)in-* 'day', Lat. nūn-dinae 'market-day', Skt. madhyám-dinaṃ 'mid-day', etc.

ζέφυρος [m.] 'west wind', also personified (Il.). ◄IE? $h_3$ieb^h-* 'futuere'► •DIAL Myc. ze-pu₂-ro; uncertain is the interpretation of ze-pu₂-ra₃ (see Aura Jorro).

•COMP As a second member in Ἐπιζεφύριοι Λοκροί name of the western (Italic) Locrians (Hdt.), also ἐπι-ζέφυρος 'lying towards the west, western' (Hell.); both hypostases from ἐπὶ ζέφυρον; φιλο-ζέφυρος 'loving the west wind' (AP).

•DER ζεφύριος 'belonging to the west wind' (Od., Arist.); with the same meaning ζεφυρ-ικός (Arist., Thphr.), -ήϊος, fem. -ηΐς (Nonn.), -ίτης, -ῖτις, also epithet of Aphrodite as the goddess of cape Ζεφύριον ἄκρον in Lower Egypt (Call.); patronymic Ζεφυρίδης (Thasos; Bechtel 1921(3): 140).

•ETYM Perhaps, as per Buttmann 1925: 114[4], related to ζόφος 'dark, west', which DELG calls 'certain'; see ► ζόφος. Likewise, Risch Mus. Helv. 25 (1968): 205-213, with a suggestion for the formation. Peters 1980a: 96f. counters that Schwebeablaut $h_3$eib^h-* beside $h_3$ieb^h-* has no motivation, but Cheung 2007 now suggests a reduplicated present h_3e-$h_3$ib^h-. However, a development Hi̯- > ζ- is unlikely, as most evidence rather points to the contrary (note ► ὑγιής < $h_2$iu-g^wih_3-). The root $h_3$ieb^h- is found in Skt. yábhati 'copulate', Ru. jebú 'id.', ToB yäp- 'enter', etc. Alternatively, is the word Pre-Greek, with PG a* turning up as ε after the palatal d^y*?

ζέω [v.] 'to boil, seethe' (mostly intrans., see Brunel 1939: 198f.). ◄IE ies-* 'boil, foam'►

•VAR Aor. ζέ(σ)σαι (Il.), late forms ζέννυμι (to ζέσαι after σβέσαι : σβέννυμι et al.), ἔζεσμαι, ἐζέσθην.

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, ὑπερ-.

•DER (ἀνά-, ἔκ-, ὑπέρ-)ζεσις 'seething, boiling' (Pl., Arist.); (ἐπί-, ἀπό-)ζεμα 'boiling, decoction' (LXX, medic.), also ἀπό-ζεσμα 'id.' (PHolm.); ἔκ-ζε(σ)μα 'eczema' (medic.); ἀνά-ζεσμος 'boiling up' (Aët.); verbal adj. (ἔκ-, ὑπέρ-)ζεστός 'boiled, seething, hot' (Arist., Str.) with ζεστότης 'heat' (Paus.). With ablaut, but nevertheless probably late: ζόη· τὸ ἐπάνω τοῦ μέλιτος H., according to Eust. 906, 52 'foam on the milk'.

•ETYM The thematic root present ζέω, from PIE *i̯es-oH (cf. ζεσ-τός, ζέσ-μα), is identical with Skt. yasati (gramm.) 'seethe, boil' and Gm. verbs like OHG jesan 'ferment, foam'. In Skt., a yod-present yás-ya-ti and a reduplicated yéṣati < *i̯a-i̯s- are found; Av. yaēš-iia- (in yaēšiiantīm [ptc. acc.sg.f.]) 'boil' seems to be a mix of these formations. The verb is also found in ToA yäs- 'boil', 3sg.pres. ysäṣ, ToB yayāsau [ptc.pret.]; further, in Alb. ziej < IE *ies-eie/o-), according to Mann Lang. 28 (1952): 38. Celtic has nominal formations, e.g. Gallo-Rom. *i̯estā 'foam', MW ias 'boil, foam'.

ζῆλος [m.] 'zeal, emulation, jealousy' (Hes. Op. 195). ⊲IE? ieh_2- 'pursue, avenge'⊳ •VAR Dor. ζᾶλος (late also ntr.; cf. ὄνειδος, μῖσος et al.; see Schwyzer: 521, Schwyzer 1950: 38).
•COMP As a first member in ζηλό-τυπος 'formed by zeal, jealous' with -τυπέω, -τυπία (Att.); often as a second member, e.g. ἄ-, κακό-ζηλος, Dor. Πολύ-ζαλος PN.
•DER ζηλήμων 'jealous' (ε 118, Call., Opp.; after the adj. in -ήμων, see Chantraine 1933: 173), together with ζηλημοσύνη (Q. S.); ζηλαῖος 'id.' (AP); ζηλοσύνη = ζῆλος (h. Ap. 100; cf. Porzig 1942: 227); ζήλη [f.] 'female rival' (X. Eph. 2, 112, Aristaenet. 1, 25 codd.). Denominative verbs: 1. ζηλόω 'vie with, emulate; admire, praise' (IA since Hes. Op. 23) with ζήλωσις 'emulation, zealous pursuit, jealousy' (Th.), ζήλωμα 'emulation, object of ambition' (E., D.), ζηλωτής 'emulator, zealous admirer', "zealot" (Att., Hell.), -ωτικός 'emulating' (Arist.); 2. ζᾶλέω 'be zealous for' (Delphi I[a]); 3. ζηλεύω = ζηλόω (Democr. 55 [v.l.], Simp. in Epict. [VI[p]]), -ευτής (Eust.).
•ETYM Belongs to ►ζητέω, ►δίζημαι, etc.; see ►Ζητήρ for an etymology.

ζημία [f.] 'loss, damage, penalty' (IA). ⊲?⊳
•DIAL Dor. ζᾱμία.
•COMP As a second member in ἀ-, ἐπι-ζήμιος (-ᾱ-) et al.
•DER ζημιώδης 'damaging' (Pl., X.) and the denominative ζημιόω 'damage, punish' (IA) together with ζημίωμα 'penalty, fine, loss' (Pl., X.), -ωσις 'punishment' (Arist.), -ωτής 'executioner' (Eust., Sch.), -ωτικός 'subject to a ζ.' (Vett. Val.).
•ETYM Sommer 1905: 157f. analyzed it as ζη-μία and connected it with ►ζῆλος, ►ζητέω, ►δίζημαι; for the semantics 'zeal', 'fine', cf. OE anda 'zeal' with OHG antōn 'punish'. Connection with Skt. dīná-, Gr. ►δειλός from IE *dei̯H- (Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 281f.) is quite uncertain. See also ►Ζητήρ.

ζῆτα [n.] the sixth letter of the Greek alphabet (Pl.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳ •ETYM From Semitic, cf. Hebr. zajit, Aram. zētā (Lewy 1895: 169f.; see Schwyzer: 140[4]). The idea that ζῆτα continues Hebr. zajin and was subsequently reshaped after βῆτα, ἦτα, θῆτα is unnecessary.

ζητέω [v.] 'to search, research, inquire, investigate' (Ξ 258). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. ζητῆσαι, ζητηθῆναι (IA), perf. ἐζήτηκα (Din.); Dor. ptc. ζάτεισα (Theoc. 1, 85).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐπι-, συ-ζητέω.

•DER Also ζητεύω (Hes., h. Hom.), ζατεύω (Alcm.). Derivatives: (ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, συ-)ζήτησις 'search, query, inquiry, consideration' (IA) with ζητήσιμος (X.); (ἐπι)ζήτημα '(object of) inquiry' (IA) together with ζητημάτιον (Arr., Lib.), ζητηματικός (sch.); (ἐκ-, συ-)ζητητής 'researcher', in plur. the name of a juridical official in Athens (Att.), together with (ἐπι-, συ-)ζητητικός 'leaning towards inquiry' (Att.). Cf. further ►Ζητήρ.
•ETYM Formation like αἰτέω, δατέομαι, ἀρτάω, etc. (Schwyzer: 705f.), thus derived from a nominal form in -to-; cf. especially Arc. ζατός (IG 5(2), 4: 22). The primary verb is found in reduplicated ►δίζημαι, and the root left traces in ►ζῆλος, ►ζημία. For the etymology (from the IE root ieh_2-, as established by García Ramón, in: Isebaert 1993: 71-84), see ►Ζητήρ.

Ζητήρ [m.] · Ζεύ<ς> ἐν Κύπρῳ (H.). ⊲IE ieh_2- 'search, inquire'⊳ •VAR Ζατήρ; further ζήτωρ in ζητόρων· ζητούντων. γράφουσι δὲ ἔνιοι ζητητόρων (H., Phot.); ζητρόν· τὸν δημόκοινον 'executioner' (H.) with ζατρεύω· ἐν μυλῶνι βασανίζω 'to labor in a treadmill' EM 408, 12 and ζητρεῖον· τὸ τῶν δούλων κολαστήριον 'instrument for correcting slaves' (H., Phot., com., Herod.; ζήτρειον acc. to Hdn. Gr. 1, 372, 7; 515, 24); details in Fraenkel 1910: 144f.
•ETYM The gloss is interpreted admirably by García Ramón 1999c: 77-96, who shows that ζητήρ means 'avenger', just like Ved. yātár- (I 32, 14ab). The latter is derived from yā- 2 'to ask, pray, require, desire'. This meaning agrees well with that of ζητέω, and further ζῆλος and ζημία 'punishment'. The PIE root was ieh_2-. See ►δίζημαι, ►ζῆλος, ►ζημία, ►ζητέω.

ζιγγίβερι [n.] 'Arabian spice-plant, ginger' (Dsc., Gal.). ⊲LW Ind.⊳
•VAR Also -ις [m., f.] (Edict. Diocl.).
•ETYM From MInd. (Pāli) siṅgivera- 'id.', Skt. śṛṅgavera- [n.], in turn from Tamil; see Turner 1966 n°. 12588. From Lat. zingiberi came French gingembre, whence MoE ginger.

ζίγγος [noun] · ὁ τῶν μελισσῶν ἦχος, ἢ τῶν ὁμοίων 'the sound of bees, or of like animals' (H.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •ETYM Onomatopoeic; see Schwyzer: 331. It is probable that ζιγγόω 'to drink' (Nicostr. Com. 38; Cilician) belongs here as well. D'Arcy W. Thompson Class. Quart. 40 (1946): 44 reads μυιῶν for ὁμοίων, and refers to Lat. zinzala 'gnat'.

ζιγνίς, -ίδος [f.] a kind of lizard (Arist. HA 604b 24). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR v.ll. ζίγνης, ζιγνύς, διγνύς; δειμνύς may be a simple mistake; see below.
•ETYM Unknown. The variants with -υς, -ης may be unimportant, but the form with δ- may be a (real, spoken) simplification of original d^yign-. Clearly a Pre-Greek word. Is δειμνύς a mistake for *διμνυς or διγνυς?

ζιζάνιον [n.] 'darnel, Lolium temulentum' (Ev. Matt. 13, 25, Gp., EM). ⊲LW Orient. (Sum.)⊳ •ETYM A loanword; cf. Lewy 1895: 52. Strömberg 1944: 43f. recalls the plant name ζάνη (Σαρδιανή; Hippiatr.) and ἀμαζανίδες· αἱ μηλέαι 'apple trees' (H.). DELG states that the word entered Greek from the Jews and Christians, and thus ultimately goes back to Sum. zizān 'wheat' (as the plant resembles wheat).

ζίζυφον [n.] 'a tree of which the fruit is the jujube, Rhamnus jujuba' (Colum., Edict. Diocl., Gp.). ⊲LW Orient.⊳ •ETYM Of unknown origin. MoFr. jujube (from MLat. jujuba) derives from Greek, as well as perhaps Syr. zūzfā; see Sommer 1905: 154, WH s.v. jujuba. I see no reason for Szemerényi's suggestion (from Durante AION-L 8 (1968): 25f) of original *ζυζυφον. Acc. to Barnhart 1988, it is from MoP zayzafūn. It could be Pre-Greek (cf. σέσυφος, Σίσυφος).

ζόρξ ⇒ δορκάς.

ζόφος [m.] 'darkness, west' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ζοφο-ειδής 'dark-colored' (Hp.).
•DER ζοφερός 'dark' (Hes., Hp., Arist.), ζοφώδης 'id.' (Hp., Arist.), also ζόφιος (AP), ζόφεος (v.l. Nic. Al. 501). Denominative verb ζοφόομαι, -όω 'to get, make dark' (AP, Hld.) with ζόφωσις (sch.). Cf ▶ζέφυρος; cf. γνόφος, ▶δνόφος, etc.
•ETYM Improbable hypotheses from Vendryes REGr. 23 (1910): 74 and Petersen AmJPh. 56: 59. There is no IE etymology. It is often connected (DELG) with ζέφυρος, which seems possible but is not certain; δνόφος has also been compared.

ζυγόν [n.] 'yoke' (Il.), also metaph., e.g. of a crossbeam, of the rowing benches connecting the two ship sides, of the tongue of a balance, of a pair, of a row or a rank of soldiers (oppos. στοῖχος), as a land measure. In western Eurasia, from antiquity until quite recently, a single pole was used with a crossbeam at the end, i.e. the yoke, which originally "joined" two draught animals. The oldest use of yokes was for "paired draught" of oxen. ⊲IE ieug-* 'connect'⊳ •VAR Hell. mostly -ός [m.], rarely earlier, see Schwyzer 1950: 37.
•COMP Often in compounds, e.g. πολύ-ζυγος 'with many rowing benches', ζυγόδεσμον 'yoke-strap' (Il.), also ζυγη-φόρος 'carrying a yoke' (A., metrical beside ζυγοφόρος; Schwyzer: 439[1]).
•DER Several derivatives: 1. ζύγιον 'rowing bench' (Hell.). 2. ζυγίσκον (IG 2^2, 1549: 9 [Eleusis approx. 300^a], meaning unclear). 3. ζύγαινα the hammer-headed shark (Epich., Arist.; after the shape of the skull, Strömberg 1943: 35). 4. ζυγίς 'thyme' (Dsc.; naming motive unknown, Strömberg 1940: 56). 5. ζούγωνερ (= *ζύγωνες)· βόες ἐργάται. Λάκωνες 'working oxes (Lacon.)' (H.). 6. ζυγίτης name of a rower (sch.), fem. ζυγῖτις Hera as goddess of marriage (Nicom. apud Phot.). 7. ζυγία 'maple' (Thphr.) properly "yoke-wood" (see Strömberg 1937: 114), because the hard maple was mainly used to make yokes (even in southern Italy to our day), see the refs. in Frisk; different Strömberg 1940: 56 (after the fruits attached in pairs). 8. ζύγαστρον 'wooden cist, chest' s.v. ▶σίγιστρον. Adjectives: 9. ζύγιος 'of the yoke, etc.' (Att., etc.; also as a nautical expression, Morrison Class. Quart. 41 (1947): 128ff.). 10. ζύγιμος 'id.' (Plb.). 11. ζυγικός 'of the tongue of a balance' (Nicom. Harm.). Adverbs: ζυγ-άδην (Ph.), ζυγ-ηδόν (Hld.) 'pairwise'. Denominative verbs: 1. ζυγόω 'to yoke, connect (by a crossbeam); to shut, hold the balance' (A., Hell.) with ζύγωμα 'bar, crossbeam' (Plb.), ζύγωσις 'balancing' (Hell.), *ζύγωθρον in the denominative aor. ipv. ζυγώθρισον (Ar. Nu. 745; meaning uncertain, 'weigh' or 'shut'?). 2. ζυγέω 'to form a row or rank' (Plb.). Beside ζυγόν, as a second member, the root noun -ζυξ, e.g. ἄ-ζυξ 'unconnected, unmarried', ὁμό-, σύ-ζυξ 'yoked together, connected' (also ἄ-, ὁμό-, σύ-ζυγος), see Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 231f.
•ETYM Old name of a device, retained in most IE languages, e.g. Hitt. iugan, Skt. yugám, Lat. iugum, Germ., e.g. Go. juk, IE iugóm*; more forms in Pok. 509f. and WH and E-M s.v. iugum. The root noun -ζυξ also in Lat. con-iux 'spouse', Skt. a-yúj- 'not forming a pair, uneven' (formally = ἄ-ζυξ except for the accent), sa-yúj- 'connected, companion', etc. Cf. ▶ζεύγνυμι and ▶ζεῦγος. Rix 1976: 60, 70 suggests Hi̯-, but more likely seems plain i̯-* on account of the reflex of Hi̯-* in ▶ὑγιής.

ζῦθος [m., n.] 'Egyptian or northern [LSJ] beer' (Thphr., Str.; the Egyptians did not know wine acc. to Hdt. 2, 77, A. Supp. 952f., but this is wrong, see Masson RPh. 88 (1962): 50). ⊲LW? Egypt.⊳
•VAR Pap. almost only ζῦτος (-ύ-; see LSJ); the υ is long in verse, LSJ.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ζυτο-ποιός, -έω, -ία 'beer-brewer, brew, brewing' (pap.).
•DER ζύθιον· ἀλφίτου πόσις 'drink from barley' (H.), ζυτᾶς 'brewer', ζυτηρά 'beer-tax', ζυτικός, ntr. -όν 'id.' (pap.).
•ETYM The meaning suggests Egyptian origin (Sommer 1905: 153, Peruzzi Humanitas 1 (1947): 138f., Nencioni Stud. ital. fil. class. 16 (1939): 21[2]). The comparison with ζύμη might point to IE origin (Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 143). The variation θ/τ seems to point to Pre-Greek, but there is no confirmation. A Greek suffix -θος is doubtful; cf. Chantraine 1933: 365-8. Henning (Henning BSOAS 11 (1943-1946): 720 and Henning BSOAS 28 (1965): 245) thinks that the word was taken from Scythian; cf. Sogd. zwtk (read: zute) 'alcoholic drink, beer', as in the case of ▶ἀκῑνάκης.

ζῦμη [f.] 'leaven, beer-yeast' (Arist.). ⊲IE iuHs-* 'mix, bring in movement' ?⊳
•COMP Compounds like ζυμ-ουργός 'who prepares leaven' (pap.), ἄ-ζυμος 'unleavened' (Pl., Hp.).
•DER ζυμίτης (ἄρτος) 'leavened bread' (Cratin. 99 [?], Hp., X.); ζυμώδης 'like leaven' (Arist.). Denominative verbs: 1. ζυμόομαι, -όω 'to be leavened; ferment' (Hp., Plu.) with ζύμωσις 'fermentation' (Pl. Ti. 66b usw.), ζύμωμα 'fermented mass' (Pl. Ti. 74b, Nic.); ζυμ-ωτός 'fermented', -ωτικός 'inducing fermentation' (Diocl. Med.). 2. ζυμίζω 'be like leaven' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Like ἅλ-μη 'salt water' et al. (Chantraine 1933: 148), ζύμη may be derived from a noun: an IE word for 'fermentation, soup', Skt. yū́ṣ-, Lat. iūs [n.]. Thus, Greek would continue QIE iuHs-meh*$_2$ (on the phonetics, see Schwyzer: 333). Other derivatives (or reshapings) of this s-stem are Skt. yūṣ-án-, yūṣ-á- 'id.', Lith. jū́š-ė 'fish soup, bad soup', SCr. júha 'soup', Finn. juusto, ON ostr 'cheese' (PGm. jus-ta-*), etc. At the basis is probably a verb with the meaning 'mix', Skt. yáuti, Lith. jáuju, jáuti (jaũti). See also ▶ζωμός.

ζωάγρια [n.pl.] 'ransom for a living person' (Il.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER ζωάγριος 'pertaining to a ransom' (Babr.).

•ETYM Formed like ἀνδρ-άγρια 'what is taken upon the capture of a man, exuviae' (Ξ 509), μοιχ-άγρια 'fine for a caught adulterer' (θ 332), et al.; see Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 47. Univerbation from ζωὸν ἀγρεῖν with the suffix -ιο-. Thence also the verb ζωγρέω 'take somebody prisoner, grant a prisoner his life', in Hom. (Il.) only pres. ζώγρει, -εῖτε, aor. ἐζώγρησα, -ήθην (IA; Hom. has ζωοὺς ἕλον, ζωὸν ἕλε). From ζωγρέω: 1. ζωγρία, -ίη 'take sbd. prisoner alive' (Hdt., Plb., Str.) with ζωγρίᾱς [m.] 'who was taken prisoner alive' (Ctes.); 2. ζωγρεῖον 'cage, especially for fishes' (Aq., Str., Plu.). Here also ζάγρη 'pit to catch animals'? See ►Ζαγρεύς. Cf. Chantraine 1956a: 51 and Janni Quaderni Urbinati di Cultura Classica 4 (1967): 3, 20.

ζωμός [m.] 'sauce, soup' (Asios, Ar., Arist.). ◄?► •COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. εὔ-ζωμον [n.] 'Eruca sativa' (Thphr.; properly 'making good sauce'; cf. Strömberg 1940: 107).
•DER Diminutives ζωμίον (pap. II[a]), -ίδιον (Ar.), -άριον (med.); ζωμίλη· ἄνηθον 'dill' (H., Phot.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 249). Denominative verb ζωμεύω 'boil into soup' (Ar., Hp.) with ζωμεύματα [pl.] 'soups' (Ar. Eq. 279; cf. Chantraine 1933: 188).
•ETYM Generally connected with ζύμη, but ablaut ō(u) : ū (Schwyzer 346) is improbable. On the suffix -μο-, see Schwyzer: 492 and Chantraine 1933: 132ff. Differently, Bréal MSL 12 (1903): 314f. (to ζέω). See discussion on ►ζύμη. Connection with ζέω presupposes that ios-mo-* developed into ζωμός regularly.

ζώννυμι, -μαι [v.] 'to gird' (Il.). ◄IE ieh$_3$s-* 'gird'► •VAR Aor. ζῶσαι, -ασθαι (Il.), fut. ζώσω, perf. med. ἔζω(σ)μαι, aor. pass. ζωσθῆναι, perf. act. ἔζωκα; -ύω (Hp.).
•COMP Often with prefix: δια-, ὑπο-, περι- et al.
•DER 1. (διά-, περί-, ὑπό-, σύ-)ζῶμα (Hell. also ζῶσμα; see below and Schwyzer: 523) 'girdle, loincloth' (Il.) with περιζωμάτιον 'id.' (Hell.) and περιζωματίας 'forming a girdle' (of erysipelas; Orib.). 2. ζώνη 'girdle', also 'waist' (Il.) with the diminutive ζώνιον (Ar., Arist.), -άριον (comm. Arist.); ζων-ιαῖος 'with the size of a girdle' (Ath. Mech.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 49), ζωνῖτις 'striped' (καδμεία; Dsc.); περιζώνιον, -ίδιον 'dagger worn on the girdle' (Hell.). 3. ζωστήρ 'warrior's belt' (Il.; see von Wilamowitz 1889 313, Trümpy 1950: 89), often metaph., also as a name of a promontory on the west side of Attica (Hdt.) with Ζωστήριος, -ια epithet of Apollo and Athena (inscr. V[a] [Athens, Delphi], etc.). 4. ζῶστρα [pl.] 'girdle' (ζ 38), (δια-, περι-)ζώστρα [f.] 'loincloth, headband' (Hell.). 5. ζωτύς (or ζωγύς)· θώραξ 'armour' (H.). 6. (ἄ-, εὔ-, etc.)ζωστός '-girded' (Hes.).
•ETYM The verbal adjective ζωστός has an exact parallel in Av. yāsta-, Lith. júostas, all from IE ieh$_3$s-to-*. In Balto-Slavic, we find yod-presents Lith. júosiu (inf. júosti), OCS po-jašǫ (inf. -jasati) 'gird'; in Iranian, a secondary formation aiβi-iāŋhaiiāṇte [3pl.pres.med.] 'id.' (IE ieh$_3$s-eie-*). A relic of the athematic root present is perhaps found in ζούσθω· ζωννύσθω (Thess.) (H.); it agrees with OLith. juos-ti [3sg.pres.]. The Greek nasal present ζώννυμι is a recent formation after the aor. stem. Further close correspondences are ζῶμα (< IE i̯eh$_3$s-mn̥*) and Lith. juosmuō 'girdle' < IE ieh$_3$s-mṓ[n], ζώνη < ieh$_3$s-neh$_2$* and Ru.CS po-jasnъ 'id.' < ieh$_3$s-ni-); cf. further Skt. rā́snā- 'girdle' for yā́snā-* after raśanā́- 'knot, gird'.

ζωρός [adj.] 'vehement, strong, unmixed', of wine (I 203). ◄IE ieh$_3$-ro-* (or ioH-ro-*) 'strong'► •COMP E.g. ζωρο-πότης 'drinker of unmixed wine' (late), εὔ-ζωρος 'completely unmixed' (IA).
•ETYM Solmsen IF 14 (1903): 426 compared it with OCS jarъ 'strong, hard, serious', which seems unobjectionable. See also ►ἐπιζαρέω.

ζωρυαί [pl.] (IG 4, 823: 46 [Troezen]) = διωρυγαί. ◄GR► •ETYM See von Blumenthal Glotta 18 (1930): 154[2]. Cf. ζῶρυξ = διῶρυξ (pap.). So is it simply a dialectal form?

ζώω [v.] 'to live' (Il.). ◄IE g^{w}eih$_3$-, g^{w}ieh$_3$- 'live'► •VAR Homer has only uncontracted forms: ζώω, ζώεις, ζώει, inf. ζωέμεν, ζώοντ-; *ζάω is a grammarians' construction.
•DIAL Myc. PN zo-wo, zo-wi-jo, probably /zōwos, zōwios/. Cret. δώ-ω, Att. ζῶ, ζῇς, ζῇ, ζῶμεν, etc., ipf. ἔζων (ἔζην), ἔζης, -η, inf. ζῆν, fut. ζήσω, -ομαι (beside βιώσομαι), aor. ζῆσαι, ζῶσαι, βιῶσαι), perf. ἔζηκα (Arist.), ptc. ἐζωκότα (Kyzikos) for βεβίωκα (Att.).
•COMP Sometimes with ἀνα-, δια-, ἐπι-. From ζωός: Ζωϝό-θεμις (Cyprus V[a]; Masson Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 8 (1957): 161ff.); ζωγράφος 'painter'.
•DER ζωή (Od.), also ζόη, Dor. ζωά, ζόα, Aeol. ζοΐα (Theoc.) 'life'. 2. ζωός (ζοός, ζώς) 'alive' (Il.). ζώϊον, ζῷον (from ζώς; Leumann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 7) 'living being, animal'; ζώσιμος 'viable' (late); (ἀνά-)ζῆσις 'reviving' (Theol. Ar., Dam.). Ἀζησία (S. Fr. 981), Ἀζοσία (Epid.) epithet of Demeter (?), Fraenkel Lexis 3:1 (1952): 59f.
•ETYM Derived from the root g^{w}eih$_3$-* / g^{w}ieh$_3$-* (see the reflexes under ►βιω-). Homer has only uncontracted forms ζωε/ο-. Attic, etc. ζῶ, ζῇς, ἔζησα must be innovations; cf. DELG on ἔζησα.

H

ἦ 1 [pcl.] 'certainly, really' emphasizing and interrogative particle (Il.), mostly combined with other particles and adverbs, e.g. ἦ ἄρα, ἦ γάρ, ἦ που, ἦ μήν, sometimes in second position: ἐπεὶ ἦ, τί (ὅτι) ἤ, (ὁ)τιή, etc. ◁IE? h_1e '?'▷ •ETYM Origin unclear; perhaps identical in origin with the interjection ἤ►. Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:3, 983 connects it with Skt. ā́ (affirmative, after nouns and adverbs), OHG ihh-ā 'I', nein-ā 'no', et al. as the instr.sg. of the demonstratives h_1e-, h_1o- (cf. ►εἰ).

ἦ 2 [v.] 'said he'. ⇒ἠμί.

ἤ 3 [pcl.] interjection expressing dissatisfaction and impatience (Ar. Nu. 105, Ra. 271, E. HF 906 [lyr.]). ◁IE? $h_1\bar{e}$ vocative pcl.▷
•ETYM It has been compared with Lat. ē- in ēcastor 'by Castor'. Cf. Schwyzer 1950 600[4] and WH s.v. ēcastor.

ἤ 4 [pcl.] disjunctive and comparative particle: 'or', also 'as', ἢ .... ἤ 'either .... or' (Il.), contracted from ἠέ, ἦε (epic). ◁IE $h_1\bar{e}$-ue▷ •ETYM For *ἠ-ϝέ, *ἦ-ϝε, univerbation of deictic ἦ (see ►ἦ 1) and a disjunctive particle found in Lat. -ve and (with long vowel) Skt. vā, OIr. vá 'or' grown together. Skt. iva 'like, as if', etc. diverges semantically (see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.).

ἠ 5 'if' (Cypr. Dor.). ⇒εἰ.

ἠβαιός [adj.] 'little, small', in the Il. only with the negation οὐδ' ἠβαιόν 'not even a little' (5 times), οὐδ' ἠβαιαί (Ξ 141), later also without negation (ι 462, Opp.). ◁GR?▷
•ETYM According to Leumann 1950: 50, it arose by false split from οὐ δὴ βαιόν (perhaps οὐδὲ βαιόν). A prefix ἠ- is improbable.

ἥβη [f.] 'youth, prime, vigour of youth, sexual maturity', also as a PN 'Hebe', daughter of Zeus and Hera (Il.). ◁IE? $(H)i\bar{e}g^w$-eh_2- 'youth, (youthful) vigour'▷ •VAR Dor. ἥβα, hyperaeolism (?) ἄβα.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἔφ-ηβος (IA, Dor.; hyperdorism (?) ἔφ-αβος) 'fullgrown youth', hypostasis from ἐφ' ἥβης (ὤν) or a bahuvrīhi ('on whom is ἥβη'), with ἐφηβ-άω (after ἡβάω), -εύω, -ικός, -ειος, etc.
•DER 1. ἡβητής (h. Merc. 56), ἡβατάς (Locr. V[a]), εἱβατάς (Thess.), ἁβατάς (Call. Lav. Pall. 109) 'being a youth, youth' with ἡβητικός (X.); Hell. poets have ἡβητήρ, ἡβήτωρ (cf. Fraenkel 1910: 121) as if from ἡβάω. 2. ἡβηδόν [adv.] 'being fullgrown' (Heraclit., Hdt.; see Benveniste RPh. 81 (1955): 9). 3. ἡβοτά 'youth' (Pamphyl., after βιοτή according to Fraenkel KZ 43 (1910): 207ff.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἡβάω (Il.), epic also ἡβώω (with metrical lengthening according to Chantraine 1942: 76 after Wackernagel; different Schwyzer: 730), Cret. ἡβίω (< -έω) 'be in one's prime, be full-grown', also with prefixes like ἀν-, ἐν-, ἐφ-; thence ἀνηβητήριος 'rejuvenating' (E. Andr. 552), ἐνηβητήριον 'place of amusement' (Hdt. 2, 133), ἡβητήριον 'id.' (Plu.); on ἡβητήρ, -τωρ see above. 2. ἡβάσκω 'become mature, become a man' (Hp., X.; after γηράσκω, cf. s.v. and Schwyzer: 708). 3. ἡβυλλιάω in ἡβυλλιῶσαι (ὀρχηστρίδες, Ar. Ra. 516; κόραι, Pherecr. 108, 29) '(female dancers) in the prime of youth', hypocoristic formation of the language of comedians after the diminutives in -ύλλιον (μειρακύλλιον et al.); hypothesis in Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 215.

•ETYM One usually reconstructs a preform IE iēg^w-eh$_2$* vel sim. on account of Lith. jėgà 'power, stength', Latv. jęga 'power, sense'. However, one may doubt the connection with Baltic (cf. Derksen 1996: 136-7) on account of the Greek forms with initial ἁ-. On the other hand, there are also Doric and Aeolic forms with ἡ- and ει-. Lat. Iegius = Osc. Ieíis are unclear (see WH s.v.). The word ► ἁβρός is not related.

ἤβολος [adj.] in ἤβολον ἦμαρ· καθὸ ἀπαντῶσιν εἰς ταὐτόν, ἢ εὔκαιρον, ἱερόν 'opportune (of time or place), hallowed' (H. = Call. Fr. anon. 170). ◁GR▷

•ETYM Probably an archaizing shortening of ἐπήβολος. Differently, Prellwitz Glotta 19 (1931): 126 (see on ► ἀβολέω).

ἠγάθεος [adj.] 'most holy' (Il.). ◁GR▷

•VAR ἀγάθεος (Pi. P. 9, 71).

•ETYM From ἀγά-θεος with metrical lengthening; cf. ἠνεμόεις from ἄνεμος (Schwyzer: 104 fn.1, Bechtel 1914 s.v., Chantraine 1942: 98).

ἠγανές [adj.] · καθαρόν, νέον 'pure, young' (H.).

•VAR ἠγάν<ε>ος· νεανίσκος 'little boy' (H.).

•ETYM Shortened from ► διηγανές.

ἤγανον [n.] 'casserole' (Anacr. 26). ◁GR▷

•DER Thence ἠγάνεα· πέμματα τὰ ἀπὸ τηγάνου 'dressed food from a pan' (H.).

•ETYM From τήγανον by false split (taken as τ' ἤγανον); see Schwyzer: 413.

ἡγέομαι [v.] 'to lead, direct', post-Hom. also 'to suppose, believe'. ◁IE seh$_2$g-* 'trace, search'▷

•VAR Dor. ἁγ-, aor. ἡγήσασθαι, fut. ἡγήσομαι (Il.), perf. ἥγημαι, ἅγ- (Hdt., Pi.), aor. pass. ἡγήθην (Pl. Lg. 770b).

•COMP Very frequently with prefixes, in various meanings: δι-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-, καθ-, περι-, ὑφ-, etc. As a first member in governing compounds like Ἡγησί-λεως, Ἁγησί-λαος (Hdt.; also as an appellative). Also as a second member in formations in -της, e.g. κυν-ηγέτης "leader of dogs", 'hunter' (Od.), ἀρχ-ηγέτης, fem. -τις 'who is in charge, originator' (Hdt.), partly beside -ηγός and connected with ἄγω, see Chantraine 1956a: 88ff., Sommer 1948: 12[1]. Another compound with s-stem is περι-ηγής 'forming a circle' (Emp., A. R.).

•DER Many derivatives, also from the compounds (Dor. forms are not given separately). Action nouns: 1.ἥγησις 'guidance, direction' (LXX), older and more usual εἰσ-, ἐξ-, δι-, περι-, ὑφ-ήγησις, etc. (cf. Holt 1941: index); 2. ἥγημα 'guidance, opinion' (LXX, Pergamon), older and more usual ἀφ-, εἰσ-ήγημα, etc. together with -ηγημάτιον, -ηγηματικός. Agent nouns: 3. ἡγεμών, -όνος [m.] 'leader' (Il.; on the formation Schwyzer: 522, Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 25f.; also from compounds, e.g. καθηγεμών) together with ἡγεμονεύω 'lead, rule' (Il.; like βασιλεύω), rarely -έω (Pl.; cf. Fraenkel 1906: 184f., Schwyzer: 732), ἡγεμον-ία, ἡγεμόνευ-μα, ἡγεμον-ικός, etc.; fem. ἡγεμόνη epithet of Artemis, etc. (Call.; Schwyzer: 490[4], Sommer 1948: 145). 4. Ἡγήμων Att. PN (cf. ἥγημα). 5. ἡγήτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'id.' (Il.), Ἁγήτωρ epithet of Zeus in Sparta (X.), also name of the priests of Aphrodite in Cyprus (Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 87). 6. ἡγητήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'id.' (Pi., S.; also ὑφ-, προ-, καθ-ηγητήρ [trag.]) with (προ-)ἡγήτειρα (A. R.), -τήριος (Ath.). 7. ἡγητής 'id.' (A. Supp. 239), usually εἰσ-, ἐξ-, δι-, καθ-, προ-ηγητής (IA); on semantic differentiation of ἡγήτωρ, -ητήρ see Benveniste 1948: 46; on ἡγητής Fraenkel 1912: 13. Adjective: 8. (ἐξ-, δι-, etc.) ἡγητικός (Hell.). On ► ἠγηλάζω, see s.v.

•ETYM An iterative present ἡγέομαι, ἁγέομαι, from which all other forms were derived. It has a close correspondence in the yod-presents Lat. sāgiō 'to trace, track down' = Gm. sāgie/o-* in Go. sokjan 'search, attack', etc., as well as in OIr. saigim, -id 'trace something, search', probably a yod-present (from sh$_2$g-*), on which see Thurneysen 1946: 354; for the vowel, cf. Lat. sāgāx. Hitt. šāgāi- / šāki- 'sign, omen' < seh$_2$g-* belongs here as well, but šākk-^{i} 'know' is from sekh$_1$-* (Lat. secāre); see Kloekhorst 2008: s.vv. The root may derive from the language of hunters, and properly mean 'search, track down'. See ► ἠγηλάζω.

ἠγερέθοντο •VAR ἠγερέθονται, -θεσθαι. ⇒ ἀγείρω ἠγηλάζω [v.] 'to lead, drag' (κακὸν μόρον 'bad fate', βίοτον βαρύν 'heavy life', etc.; λ 618, ρ 217, A. R. 1, 272, Arat. 893, Orac. apud Zos. 1, 57). ◁GR▷

•ETYM An enlargement of ἡγέομαι. Perhaps (thus Bechtel 1914 s.v.) by univerbation with ἐλάω, with productive -άζω, rather than via a noun *ἠγηλός, *ἠγήλη (thus Chantraine 1942: 338 et al.). However, compare ἀγέλη to ► ἄγω.

ἠδέ [pcl.] 'and' (Il.), with or without preceding ἠμέν. ◁GR▷

•VAR Also ἠδὲ καί, τ'ἠδέ, etc. (Il.).

•ETYM From ► ἦ 1 'really' and ► δέ. See Ruijgh 1957: 55-57.

ἤδη [adv.] 'already, immediately, (precisely) now' (Il.). ◁GR▷

•ETYM From ► ἦ 1 'really' and ► δή 'even'.

ἥδομαι [v.] 'to rejoice'. ◁IE sueh$_2$d-* 'sweet'▷

•VAR Dor. ἅδ-, Boeot. (Corinn.) ϝάδ- (γάδεται· ἥδεται H.), aor. ἡσθῆναι (IA), fut. ἡσθήσομαι (S., Pl.), aor.med. ἥσατο (ι 353).

•COMP Also with prefix, especially συν-; rarely active ἥδω, ἧσαι, ἥσω 'gratify' (Antipho Soph., Hell.; after τέρπω, etc. acc. to Schwyzer 1950 228). As a second member, -ηδής may be connected either with ἡδύς or with ἥδομαι: ἀ-ηδής 'unpleasant' (IA), μελι-ηδής 'as sweet as honey', θυμ-ηδής 'pleasing the heart', etc.

•DER 1. ἧδος [n.] 'pleasure' (Il.; on the absence of aspiration and the doubtful traces of the digamma Chantraine 1942: 184 and 151); in the meaning 'vinegar' a back-formation from ►ἡδύς, s.v.; 2. ἡδονή, Dor. ἁδονά 'pleasure' (IA, Dor.) with ἡδονίς = ἀφύδιον (Cyran. 18), ἡδονικός (Arist.). 3. ἁδοσύνα· ἡδονή (H.). 4. ἥσθημα 'id.' (Eup.). 5. ἡστικός 'pleasant' (S. E.).

•ETYM An exact formal counterpart is the Skt. hapax svādate 'becomes tasteful' (RV 9.68.2; of soma); much more usual however is svadate 'enjoy, taste well', svadati 'make savory, sweeten'. On the -a-, see Lubotsky MSS 40 (1981): 133-8. The second member -ηδης agrees with Skt. prá-svādas- 'pleasant'; the nasal suffix in ἡδ-ονή is seen in Skt. svắd-ana- 'making tasteful'. See ►ἡδύς and ►ἀνδάνω, also ►ἀδημονέω.

ἡδύς [adj.] 'sweet, tasteful, pleasant, pleasing' (Il.). ⋖IE *$sueh_2d$-ú- 'sweet'⋗ •VAR Dor. ἁδύς, El., etc. ϝαδύς.
•COMP Very frequent as a first member, e.g. ἡδυ-επής 'with sweet words, sounding nice' (Il.); as a second member -ηδής, see ►ἥδομαι. On ἡδίων (rare and late ἡδύτερος), ἥδιστος see Seiler 1950: 57f.
•DER ἥδυμος 'sweet, comforting', dactylic variant of ἡδύς, said of ὕπνος (Il.; in Hom. always incorrectly νήδυμος, see Bechtel 1914 s.v., Leumann 1950: 44f.), also Ἄδυμος as a PN; cf. ἔτυμος and Schwyzer: 494, Chantraine 1933: 151f.; ἡδύλος 'id.', hypocoristic enlargement (A. D., EM) with ἡδυλίζω 'flatter, tempt' (Men.), ἡδυλίσαι· συνουσιάσαι, ἡδυλισμός· συνουσία H.; also as a PN with Ἡδυλίνη (Attica IV[a]), Ἡδύλειος (Delos III[a]); further Ἡδυτώ (Attica V[a]; after Ἐρατώ et al.), Ἡδάριον (Rhodes; after the diminutives in -άριον). Backformation ἧδος 'vinegar' (Ath.), cf. γᾶδος (= ϝ-)· γάλα, ἄλλοι ὄξος 'milk, others: vinegar' (H.), cf. Pisani KZ 68 (1944): 176f. (where unclear Arm. kʿacʿax 'vinegar' is discussed). Denominative verb ἡδύνω 'sweeten, make tasteful, savour' (IA) with ἥδυσμα, -μάτιον 'spice' (IA), ἡδυσμός, ἡδυν-τός, -τικός, -τήρ 'spiced, etc.' (also of salt).
•ETYM Old word for 'sweet', identical with Skt. svādú-, Gaul. Suadu-rīx, -genus, IE *$sueh_2d$-ú-; reshaped in Lat. suāvis, Gm., e.g. OHG suozi, OE swēte 'sweet'. The full grade perhaps comes from the comparative ἡδίων, Skt. svắdīyas- (cf. also ἥδιστος = svắdiṣṭha-). The zero grade occurs in Lith. súdyti 'to spice, salt', Skt. sūdáyati, perf.pl. su-ṣūd-imá 'make tasteful'. See ►ἥδομαι, ►ἀνδάνω.

ἠέ 'or'. ⇒ἤ 4.

ἠερέθονται [3sg.pres.med.] 'they float in the air' (Il.). ⋖IE *$h_2uer$- 'bind, hang'⋗ •VAR Ipf. -ντο.
•ETYM Related to ►ἀείρω 'raise' like ἠγερέθοντο, -ται to ►ἀγείρω.

ἠέριος [adj.] 1. 'early, of the morning', connected with ἦρι 'early, in the morning' (e.g. A. R. 3, 417: opposed to δείελον ὥρην); 2. 'misty' = ἠερόεις, 'in the air, airy' (Simon. 114, Hp. Vict. 1, 10, A. R., Arat., Opp.). ⋖IE *$h_2euser$- 'morning'⋗ •ETYM An etymological distinction used to be drawn between ►ἀήρ 'air' and ἦρι 'early' (e.g. Frisk). However, Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 619-635 has shown that both words derive from the root for 'dawn', ἀήρ < *$h_2eus$-ēr still meaning 'mist, haze' in Homer. He convincingly shows that αὔρη 'breeze' still means 'morning mist' in ε 469. Therefore, we have to start from an adverb *ἦερι (cf. Ἠερί-βοια Ε 389); see ►ἦρι. See further ►αὔρα.

ἠερόεις 'misty, cloudy'. •VAR ἠεροειδής. ⇒ἀήρ.

ἠερόφωνος [adj.] Σ 505 κηρύκων … ἠεροφώνων, after this Opp. H. 1, 621 γεράνων … ἠ., properly 'whose voice(s) sound(s) through the mist (in the air), loud crying', = μεγαλοφώνων, πληρούντων φωνῆς τὴν ἀέρα (H.). ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM Ahrens Phil. 27 (1868): 590 proposes (after Alcm. 26, 1) to write ἱεροφώνων.

ἠθέω [v.] 'to sift, strain' (IA). ⋖IE *$seh_1$- 'strain'⋗ •VAR Aor. ἠθῆσαι (ptc. ἤσας Hp. apud Gal. 19, 103), perf. pass. ἤθημαι.
•COMP very often δι-ηθέω (ἐκ-, προσ-διηθέω, etc.), also ἀπ-, ἐξ-ηθέω.
•DER ἠθμός (*h*εθμος Sigeion VI[a], Hdn.) 'filter, strainer' (Att.) with ἠθμάριον· διυλιστήριον 'filter' H., διηθμεύοντες s.v. ►διυλίζοντες; (δι-)ἤθησις 'straining' (Arist.), (ἀπ-, δι-, παρ-)ἤθημα 'what has been strained' (medic.), ἠθήνιον· ἠθάνιον, ἠθμός H.; ἠθητήρ (Marc. Sid.), -τήριον (Str.) 'strain'; ἠθητός 'strained' (pap. III[a]), ἠθητικός 'fit for straining' (Thphr.).
•ETYM Starting from the aor.ptc. ἤσας and the noun ἠθμός, one may suppose an older present *ἤθω. Then we have ἠθέω beside *ἤθω, just as στερέω beside στέρομαι, etc. (Schwyzer 721). If we separate the -θ- (as in ἀλή-θω : ἀλέ-ω, πλή-θω : πλῆ-το et al., on which see Schwyzer: 703; also ἠ-θμός, like ῥυ-θμός, etc.?), we may connect the OCS yod-present pro-sějǫ, inf. -sějati 'strain', from which Lith. sijóju, -ti 'id.' cannot be separated. These presuppose a present *$seh_1i$-. Cf. also ►σήθω with the same meaning.

ἦθος [n.] 'custom, usage' (Hes., Pi.), plur. ἤθεα 'accustomed place, haunts' (Il.). ⋖IE? *$sued^h$- 'custom, use'⋗ •COMP As a first member, with analogical compositional vowel, e.g. in ἠθο-ποιός 'edifying' (Arist.), as a second member e.g. in κακο-ήθης 'with bad habits' (IA).
•DER ἠθεῖος 'reliable, beloved' (Hom., Hes.), also ἠθαῖος (Pi., Antim.), after γενναῖος et al.; ἠθάς, -άδος [m., f.] 'usual, reliable' (Hp., S.) with ἠθάδιος 'id.' (Opp.); ἠθικός 'ptng. to the character' (Arist.); ἠθαλέος 'usual' (Opp., Epigr.).
•ETYM Differs from ►ἔθος only by its long vowel; the ō-grade appears in ►εἴωθα (s.v. for further etymology). See Petit RPh. 73 (1999): 87, who refers to Schindler 1975: 259-267. For traces of the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 150.

ἤϊα 1 [n.pl.] 'provisions for a journey' (Ν 103, Od.); = βρώματα, ἄχυρα 'food, chaff', see ►ἤϊα 2, ἐφόδια 'travelling supplies' (H.). ⋖?⋗
•VAR Also ἦα.
•ETYM Uncertain. Acc. to Thumb KZ 36 (1900): 179ff., it belongs with ἤϊος· πορεύσιμος 'passable; able to travel' (H.). Vendryes REGr. 23 (1910): 74 compared Skt. sasyá- [n.] 'produce of the fields', which is formally unconvincing. Froehde's comparison (see Bechtel 1914) with Skt. avasá- [n.] 'food' is mistaken (as it rather belongs to ávati 'protect, refresh, etc.'; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.).

ἦα 2 [n.pl.] 'heap of husks or chaff' (ε 368, Pherecr. 161), = ἄχυρα H.; cf. εἰαί· τῶν ὀσπρίων τὰ ἀποκαθάρματα 'what has been cleansed off the pulse'; εἶοι· ὀσπρίων τὰ καθάρσια (H.). Here also ἤϊα κριθάων = ἄλευρα 'flour' (Nic. Al. 412), but "le sens ne s'impose pas", as DELG rightly remarks. ⋖?⋗

•ETYM Unexplained.

ἤϊε [voc.] epithet of Φοῖβε of unknown meaning or origin (O 365, Y 152, h. Ap. 120). ◄?► •ETYM Several hypotheses (see Frisk). From the interjection ἤ, like ἰήϊος from ἰή (LSJ); cf. ἤϊος· παιανιστής 'chanter of paeans' (H.) beside πορεύσιμος (see ►ἤϊα 1). Not from ἠώς (cf. ἠΐ-κανός) as 'shining in the morning' (Ehrlich KZ 40 (1907): 364). Nikolaev 2005 now connects the root $*h_2ns$- (Skt. ásu-ra-, ON áss, etc.), claiming that Lex Rix did not operate before nasals. If this is correct (which seems implausible), we would have an old vocative of the word for 'god'.

ἠΐθεος [m.] 'unmarried youth' (Il.; see Leumann 1950: 305 and 316f.), rarely also 'unmarried young woman' (Eup. 332), in this meaning also ἠϊθέη (Nic., AP). ◄IE $*h_1uid^heu$- 'unmarried'► •VAR Also ἤθεος (or ἠΐθεος?; B. 16, E. Ph. 945; ᾄθεος Cerc. 9, 11, see below).
•ETYM An old and poetic word, connected with Skt. vidhávā, Ru. vdová, etc., Go. widuwo, etc., Lat. vidua, from a pre-form $*h_1uid^heu$-. A masculine expression for 'widowed, unmarried' was made from this pre-form, like in Lat. viduus, Ru., etc. vdóvyi, but perhaps only in the separate languages. Greek ἠΐθεος presupposes an earlier feminine, which was replaced by χήρα in prehistoric times. Anlauting ἠ- is easily explained as a metrical lengthening of a prothetic ἐ- from $*h_1$-; the ἀ- in Cerc. is a hyperdorism (cf. ἠΐθεος Sapph. 44, 18). See recently Beekes KZ 105 (1992): 171-6.

ἠϊκανός [m.] · ὁ ἀλεκτρυών 'rooster' (H.). ◄IE $*h_2ues$- 'lighten' + $kh_2n$- 'sing'► •ETYM Properly 'early-singer', a compound from ἠι- (from PGr. awhi-, an old loc. of $*h_2eus$- 'dawn'; cf. ►ἕως) and a verb 'to sing', found in Lat. canō, MoHG Hahn, etc. On the accent, see Wackernagel Phil. 95 (1943): 182f. Synonymous formations with cognate elements are found in Skt. (Lex.) uṣā-kala- and ON ár-gali [m.] 'cock'.

ἠϊόεις [adj.] in ἐπ' ἠϊόεντι Σκαμάνδρῳ E 36 (verse end); after this as an adjunct of Πάνορμος, of πεδίον (Q. S. 1, 283; 5, 299), and of κόλλουρος (name of a fish, Marc. Sid. 22). ◄?► •ETYM In later antiquity, the word was connected with ἠϊών 'shore' and interpreted as 'with (high) shores, on the shore'; cf. ἠϊόεντι· ἠϊόνας ἔχοντι 'having shores' (H.). This is formally impossible, as there is no trace of the -ν-. Others take it as 'with reed' and arbitrarily connect it with ►ἦα 2, or even as 'fertile' (and suppose connection with ►ἤϊα).

ἤϊος ⇒ἤϊε.

ἠϊών [f.] 'shore' (B 561). ◄?►
•VAR ἠών E. Or. 994; Dor. ἀϊών, -όνος.
•ETYM Names in -ών may refer to features of the landscape (see Chantraine 1933: 164). Of unknown origin. See also ►ἠϊόεις.

ἦκα [adv.] 'slowly, quietly, a little' (Il.). ◄IE? $seh_1k$- (or sēk-?) 'slow' ?►
•VAR Grades of comparison: ἥττων, Ion. ἥσσων 'smaller, weaker' (Il.), sup. ἥκιστος 'slowest' (Ψ 531), ἥκιστα [adv.] 'not at all' (IA), ἥκιστος 'weakest, worst' (Ael.).

•DER Derived from ἦκα: ἤκαλος = ἀκαλός (Call.), ἠκαλέον γελόωσα· πράως, οὐκ ἐσκυθρωπακυῖα 'mild, not looking angry'; ἠκαῖον· ἀσθενές 'weak' (H.). From ἥσσων, ἥττων: ἡσσάομαι, ἡττάομαι [v.] 'to be less, be weaker' (after νικάομαι), with the back-formation ἧσσα, ἧττα [f.] 'defeat' (trag., Th., IA); Ion. (Hdt., Herod.) has ἑσσόομαι, from ἕσσων*, an innovation after κρέσσων.
•ETYM With ἦκα (with epic psilosis like ἥκιστος; cf. Chantraine 1942: 187), we may compare ὦκα and other adverbs in -ᾰ (cf. Schwyzer: 622). It has been connected with Lat. sēgnis 'slow' < sēc-ni-*, but see the doubts in De Vaan 2008 s.v. Frisk compares the alternation in πύκ-α : πυκ-νός, as does Benveniste 1935: 89f. Discussed in Seiler 1950: 65ff.

ἤκεστος [adj.] only in ἤνις ἠκέστας (βοῦς, Z 94 = 275 = 309), meaning uncertain. ◄?►
•ETYM Based on comparison with ἠκέστης· ἀδάμαστος (Suid.), ἤκεστος is mostly taken as 'undomited, uncontrolled', from κεντέω, κένσαι ("unincited") with metrical lengthening for ᾰ-κεστος*. This explanation should be rejected; instead, Schwyzer RhM 80 (1931): 213 assumes original (βοῦν) ἦνιν νηκέστην (like νη-κερδής, etc.), with single writing of the ν and false split. Others translate 'full grown', connecting it with ἀκμαῖος, ►ἠκή. Improbable suggestion by Szemerényi Sprache 11 (1965): 6-12.

ἠκή [f.] · ἀκωκή, ἐπιδορατίς, ἀκμή 'arrowhead, point' (H.); ἡ ὀξύτης τοῦ σιδήρου 'sharpness of iron' (EM 424, 18 following Archil. 43: ἵστη κατ' ἠκὴν κύματός τε κἀνέμου). ◄IE? $*h_2e\acute{k}$- 'sharp'► •COMP As a second member in the epic epithets ἀμφ-ήκης 'cutting on both sides', τανυ-ήκης 'with a thin edge': perhaps a secondary s-stem, and the -η- can be due to compositional lengthening. Backformation from the compounds: ἠκές· ὀξύ (H.), see Leumann 1950: 111f.
•DER ἠκάδα· ἠνδρωμένην γυναῖκα 'mature woman' (H.); on the formation Chantraine 1933: 351f., on the meaning cf. ἀκμαῖος.
•ETYM Appears to be a form with lengthened grade beside ►ἀκή, ►ἄκρος, etc.; an o-grade is found in reduplicated ►ἀκωκή.

ἥκω [v.] 'to have come, be present' (IA, also Dor.; Hom. only E 478, ν 325; elsewhere ἵκω). ◄?► •VAR Hell. also with perfect inflexion: ἧκα, ἡκέναι; fut. ἥξω (A.), Dor. ἡξῶ (Theoc.), aor. ἧξαι (late).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. καθ- (κατ-), προσ- (ποθ-), ἀν-, προ-, παρ-ήκω.
•ETYM Beside ἥκω with perfective meaning stands ►ἵκω with present meaning (epic, Dor., Arc.). It is difficult to connect the two, however, since the ē-vocalism cannot be easily accounted for (IE sēik-* is impossible), nor can the aspectual difference. Ample discussion in Johansson 1890: 62ff. No cognates (incorrectly, Pok. 893). LIV² posits $*seh_1k$-, but disassociates ἱκ-.

ἠλακάτη [f.] '(wool on the) distaff', also metaph. of comparable objects (Z 491). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἠλεκάτη (Delos, Cyrene, etc.), Aeol. ἀλακάτα (Theoc. 28, 1; but ἠλακάτα E. Or. 1431 [lyr.]) and χρυσᾱλακ. (Pi., three times), εὐαλάκατος (Theoc. 22).
•DIAL Myk. a-ra-ka-te-ja [nom.pl.f.] 'spinsters'.

•COMP As a second member e.g. in χρυσ-ηλάκατος (-ᾱλ- Pi.) 'with golden distaff' (Il.).
•ETYM Unknown. Solmsen 1909: 121f. assumed an Anatolian loan, but it is probably just Pre-Greek.

ἠλάσκω [v.] 'to wander, stray, roam' (B 470, N 104, Emp.). ◄?►
•DER By a cross with ἀλαίνω arose ἠλαίνω 'id.' (Theoc., Call.).
•ETYM ἠλάσκω (called expressive by Frisk) differs from ►ἀλάομαι by the length of the initial vowel, something which cannot be explained within Greek or Indo-European. The etymology is therefore unclear. Connection with ►ἠλεός, ἠλίθιος, etc. is not very likely.

ἠλέκτωρ [m.] name of the sun and adjunct of Ὑπερίων (Z 513, T 398, h. Ap. 369; and Emp. 22, 2). ◄PG?►
•VAR Acc. -τορα (Euph. 110), dat. -τωρι (Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 4), gen. -τωρος (Choerob.).
•DER ἠλεκτρίς [f.] adjunct of the moon (Orph. H. 9, 6); ἤλεκτρον [n.], -ος [m., f.] (on the gender cf. LSJ and Schwyzer 1950: 34[4]) 'gold mixed with silver, amber' (Od.) with Ἠλεκτρίδες νῆσοι 'the amber islands' (Str., Plin.), ἠλεκτρώδης 'like amber' (Hp., Philostr.), ἠλέκτρινος (Dor. ἀλ-) 'of amber' (Call., Luc., Hld.), ἠλεκτρόομαι 'become ἤ.' (Zos. Alch.); ἠλέκτραι· τὰ ἐν τοῖς κλινόποσι τῶν σφιγγῶν ὄμματα (Phot.). Several PNs: Ἠλέκτρα, Ἀλεκτρώνα (Rhodos), Ἠλεκτρύων (after Ἀμφιτρύων; cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 656).
•ETYM Unexplained. von Wilamowitz 1931: 255 assumed Carian origin, but without sufficient grounds. Improbable IE etymologies in Bq. There seems no basis for DELG's statement that the word is IE. Leroy and Halleux Glotta 52 (1974): 36-52 stress that ἤλεκτρον has two meanings: 'white gold', i.e. gold with a high percentage of silver, like the Lydian gold from which the first coins were made, and 'amber'. However, ἠλέκτωρ cannot mean 'brilliant', as amber is not brilliant, and the meaning and etymology of this word are unknown. They then derive the word ἤλεκτρον from the verb ►ἀλέγω, which they interpret as λέγω 'count' plus copulative ἀ-. This is wrong: see there. The word has nothing to do with the verb, as its meaning does not fit. Thus, the word remains without etymology. On the words, see also Ruipérez 1972: 231ff.

ἠλέματος ⇒ἠλεός.

ἠλεός [adj.] 'distraught, crazed' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Also ἠλέ [voc.] (Il.); ἀλεός (-αι- cod.)· ὁ μάταιος, ἄφρων. Αἰσχύλος 'foolish' (H.), ἀλεόφρων· παράφρων (H.).
•DER Denominative verb ἀλεώσσειν· μωραίνειν 'be foolish' (H.). Abstract ἠλοσύνη (Nic., late Epic; Pfeiffer Phil. 92 (1937): 1ff. and 8), Aeol. ἀλοσύνα (Theoc. 30, 12), probably metrical for ἠλεο-, ἀλεο-. Further ἤλιθα [adv.] 1. 'very much, exceedingly' (Hom. always ἤλιθα πολλή(ν); A. R.), 2. 'in vain, to no avail' (Call., A. R.); the formation has a parallel, be it incomplete, in the local and temporal adverbs in -θα (ἔνθα, δηθά, μίνυνθα) and in the numeral adverb διχθά, etc. Thence ἠλίθιος (Dor. ἀλ-) 'idle, vain, foolish' (Pi., IA), *h*ελιθιον [adv.] (IG 1², 975 [VI^a]), ἠλιθι-ώδης (Philostr.), -ότης (Att.), -όω (A.), -άζω (Ar.). Here probably also ἠλέματος (Aeol. Dor. ἀλ-) 'idle, foolish' (Sapph., Alc., Theoc.), of unclear formation, but improbable is haplology for *ἠλεμόματος (Bechtel 1921, 1: 44). Difficult to analyze are the verbs ἀλλο-φρονέω 'to be senseless' (Hom., Hdt.) and ἀλλο-φάσσω 'to be delirious' (Hp.). Acc. to Fick (see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀλλοφρονέω, ἠλεός and Leumann 1950: 116[82]), the first member contains an Aeolic variant of ἠλεός, i.e. *ἄλλος < *ἄλ̯ιος (whence voc. *ἄλλε = ἠλέ O 128); cf. ἀλεό-φρων above. Later it was construed as derived from ἄλλος (thus Hdt. 7, 205). As the medical expression ἀλλοφάσσω cannot be Aeolic, it must have been formed after ἀλλοφρονέω or contain the pronoun ἄλλος; see Leumann 1950: 309[82].
•ETYM Formed like ἐνεός, κενεός, ἐτεός, etc., ἠλεός recalls ►ἠλάσκω, ►ἀλάομαι, but has no further cognates. Lat. ālea 'game of dice' does not continue Dor. *ἁλεά. The variants ἠλεός, ἀλαιός (H.) point to a noun with PG suffix *-ay-(os), with *ay > *ey > *e; see Pre-Greek: suffixes (6. αι/ει). Moreover, the suffix -ιθ- is Pre-Greek. The form ἀλλ(ο)- seems to have been derived from *al^y(o)- with palatalized -l^y-, which resulted in -λλ-; however, the relation between ālay- and $āl^y$- remains unclear. Does it derive from alyo-, a reduced form of ālayo-?

ἠλιαία [f.] 'supreme court at Athens'. ⇒ἁλής.

ἠλίβατος [adj.] Meaning unknown (Il.), in Hom. always (and later frequently) of πέτρη (-α) 'rock', but also of several other objects, e.g. δρύες, ἄντρον, Τάρταρος, κῦμα; interpreted as 'steep, high, deep', later also as 'enormous, big', see Buttmann 1825:2: 176ff. ('steep' or 'slippery'), which may all easily be later guesses. ◄?►
•VAR Dor. ἀλ-.
•DER Beside it ἠλιβάτᾱς (τράγος, Antiph. 133, 3).
•ETYM Unexplained. Another unclear epithet of πέτρη is ►αἰγίλιψ. Cf. also ἠλιτενὴς πέτρα· ὑψηλή 'high' (Suid.). Acc. to Buttmann 1825:2: 176ff., it is from *ἠλιτό-βατος, meaning ἄβατος, δύσβατος vel sim. (by comparison with ἠλιτό-μηνος), with "Silbendissimilation".

ἤλιθα •VAR ἠλίθιος. ⇒ἠλεός.

ἡλίκος [adj.] 'as old, as large', relative and indirect interrogative pronoun (IA). ◄IE *k^weh_2-li- 'how (big)?'► •VAR Dor. ἁλ- (Theoc.).
•DER Beside it the demonstrative τηλίκος, Dor. τᾱλ- 'thus old, thus large' (Il.) with τηλικόσδε, τηλικοῦτος (Att.) and the interrogative πηλίκος 'how old?, how large?' (IA).
•ETYM From the relative stem ὁ-, ἁ- (see ►ὅς 1), after ►πηλίκος and ►τηλίκος. A parallel formation is OCS je-likъ '(tantus) quantus'. See also on ►ἧλιξ.

ἧλιξ [m., f.] 'of the same age, as old' (σ 373). ◄IE *$sueh_2$-lik- 'as old'► •VAR Dor. ἇλιξ.
•COMP As a second member in παν-αφ-ῆλιξ 'without any companions of his own age' (X 490). Mostly only as an indication of age, e.g. ὁμ-ῆλιξ 'of the same age' (Il.;

with ὁμηλικ-ίη 'age group, generation' (Il.), ἀφ-ῆλιξ, Ion. ἀπ- 'beyond youth, elderly' (h. Cer. 140), but also 'youthly' (Phryn. Com.).
•DER Abstract ἡλικία, -ίη 'group of the same age' (Π 808), 'manhood'; ἡλικιώτης, fem. -τις 'of the same age' (IA), Cret. ϝαλικιώτας (β-της cod.)· συνέφηβος 'id.' (H.). On ἧλιξ, ἡλικία see especially Chantraine 1956a: 155ff.
•ETYM Cret. ϝαλικιώτας points to original *σϝᾶλιξ, from the IE reflexive sue (in ϝhe; see ►ἕ, ἑ) with the same suffix as in ►ἡλίκος, ►τηλίκος, ►πηλίκος. Thus it is properly "who is of the same kind". For the semantics, cf. Skt. sva-ka- 'relative, friend' and ►ἔτης, as well as ►ἀέλιοι.

ἥλιος [m.] 'sun' (Il.). ◄IE *seh$_2$u-el- 'sun'► •VAR Epic ἠέλιος, Dor. Aeol. Arc. ἀέλιος, Dor. (trag.) also ἅλιος.
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. in plant- and animal names like ἡλιο-τρόπιον, -κάνθαρος (Strömberg 1940: 48 and 75, Strömberg 1944: 11).
•DER ἡλιώτης (ἠελ-), fem. -τις 'belonging to the sun' (S., AP), ἡλιακός (ἀλ-) 'id.' (Hell.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 393f.); Ἡλιάδες [f.pl.] 'daughters of the sun' (Parm., A. R.; also sing. as an adj. [Luc.]) with masc. Ἡλιάδης 'son of the sun' (Str., D. S.); see Chantraine 1933: 356 and 362f.; ἡλιώδης 'sunlike' (Chaerem.), Ἡλιών [m.] month name (Termessos), ἡλίτης (λίθος Dam. Isid. 233). Denominative verbs: 1. ἡλιόομαι 'be in the sun, be sun-struck' (IA) with ἡλίωσις (Hp., Thphr.), -όω 'to expose to the sun' (Aët.). 2. ἡλιάζομαι 'bake in the sun' (Arist.), -άζω 'id.' (Str.) with ἡλίασις 'exposure to the sun' (Gal., D. C.), ἡλιαστήριον 'place in the sun' (Str., pap.). 3. ἡλιάω 'expose to the sun, be like the sun' (Arist.).
•ETYM Cretan ἀβέλιος in H. (Pamphyl., acc. to Heraclid. Mil.; cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 667), i.e. ἀϝέλιος, points to an original *σᾱϝέλιος, differing only in ablaut from Skt. sū́rya- 'sun' (beside sū́ra-). Both languages have an l-stem, IE *seh$_2$u-el-, *sh$_2$u-l- (cf. Skt. svàr [n.] < *suHl̥ < *sHul) with a personifying suffix *-i̯o-. The full grade is also found in Lith. sáulė, MW haul; the zero grade, e.g. in OIr. súil 'eye'. The basis is a neuter l/n-heteroclitic, still seen in Av. huuarə, gen. x^{v}ə̄ng (< PIIr. *suHan-s), as well as in Germanic in the interchange between Go. sauil, ON sól, OE sōl, and Go. sunno, OE sunne 'id.'. Connection with IE *suel- 'burn' (see ►εἵλη) is formally impossible.

ἠλιτόμηνος [adj.] properly "missing the right month" (Schwyzer: 442; thus Vos Glotta 34 (1955): 290ff.), i.e. 'born prematurely' (T 118; after this AP, Plu.). ◄IE *h$_2$leit- 'make a mistake, miss'► •COMP Late analogical formations are ἠλιτο-εργός (AP), ἠλιτόμηνις· ὁ μάτην ἐγκαλῶν 'who brings in a charge in vain' (H.), -μητιν (Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 5, Fr. 1 R. 49; see ad loc.).
•ETYM Verbal governing compound from the aorist ἀλιτεῖν (see ►ἀλείτης) and μήν, with metrical lengthening of ᾰ- to ἠ- (ἀλιτόξενος Pi. O. 10, 6).

ἧλον [n.] plant-name, = βράβυλον or κοκκύμηλον (Seleuc. apud Ath. 2, 50a). ◄?►
•ETYM Unexplained.

ἧλος [m.] 'nailhead; wart, callus' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Dor. ἆλος.

•COMP E.g. ἀργυρό-ηλος 'adorned with silver nails' (Hom.), ἡλο-κόπος 'nailsmith' (pap.).
•DER Diminutive ἡλάριον (pap.); ἡλῖτις adjunct of λεπίς (Dsc., Aët.); denominative verb ἡλόω, mostly with prefix, e.g προσ-, ἐφ-, καθ-ηλόω 'nail on' (IA, Hell.) together with καθήλω-σις, -μα.
•ETYM Because of γάλλοι· ἧλοι, which may stand for Aeolic ϝάλλοι, ἧλος may be derived from *ϝάλνος, *ϝάλσος, vel sim. (cf. on ►Ἦλις), and could be equated with Lat. vallus 'pole, stake of a palisade' (Wackernagel KZ 25 (1881): 261; thus still Schrijver 1991: 170). There are no certain traces of the digamma in Hom., as ἀργυρό-ηλος can be metrically conditioned; see Chantraine 1942: 155f.

ἠλύγη [f.] 'shadow, darkness' (Ar. Ach. 684, H., Erot. s.v. ἐπηλυγάζονται). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also ἦλυξ (Choerob.); note λυγαῖος (S., E.).
•DER ἠλυγαῖος 'shadowy, dark' (Suid.), ἠλυγισμένος· κεκρυμμένος, ἐπεσκιασμένος 'hidden, overshadowed' (H.). More usual is ἐπηλυγάζομαι, -ίζομαι (-ζω) 'to overshadow, cover up' (Hp., Th., Pl.), whence ἐπηλυγισμός (H. s.v. ἠλύγη); further ἐπήλυγα [acc.] 'overshadowing' (of πέτραν, E. Cyc. 680; deverbal?), ἐπηλύγαιος 'shadowy, dark' (AB, H.).
•ETYM To ἠλύγη belongs the poetic adjective λῡγαῖος 'dark' (S., E.), which differs in anlaut; an explanation remains to be found. As ἠλύγη is much rarer than ἐπηλυγάζομαι, perhaps we should start from the verb. In this case, the -η- could be secondary, like in ►ἐπήβολος, ►ἐπηετανός, etc. There is no convincing etymology. Fur.: 378 assumes a prothetic vowel ἠ-, for which, however, there is little or no evidence. Nevertheless, the co-occurrence of λυγαῖος and ἠλυγαῖος is remarkable (was it *alug-? with lengthened prothetic vowel ā-?). The word might be Pre-Greek.

Ἠλύσιον [adj.] epithet of πεδίον (δ 563, A. R. 4, 811, Str., Plu.), also without a head substantive (IG 14, 1750); rarely Ἠλύσιος λειμών, χῶρος (Luc., late inscr.), the abode of the Blessed after death. ◄PG► •DER Ἠλύσιος 'Elysian' (αὖραι, etc., IG 14, 1389). Also ἐν-ηλύσιος· ἐμβρόντητος, κεραυνόβλητος 'struck by lightning' (H.), ἐνηλύσια (A. Fr. 17)· τὰ κατασκηφθέντα χωρία (H.)? taken as "being in Elysion", as those hit by lightning acc. to folk belief would come in a higher form of life (thus Cocco, see below). In the same mg. also the simplex ἠλύσια [n.pl.] (Polem. Hist. 93).
•ETYM Traditionally analyzed as Pre-Greek (on Elysion as a Pre-Greek conception see Nilsson 1941(1): 324ff.). However, it was often connected with ἐλεύσομαι, ἤλυθον too (e.g. Campanile 1969: 30ff.), but against this view was argued by Wackernagel 1889: 5, Güntert 1919: 38[3]. Explanations from Semitic (e.g. Lewy 1895: 219ff., Cocco Biblos 31 (1955): 401ff.) are also to be considered wrong. Beekes 1998: 19-23 argued against the idea that somebody struck by lightning would go to Elysion (against Burkert Glotta 39 (1961): 208-213). The word is a derivative in -ιο- from a geographical name *Alut- or *Elut-, with a long initial vowel which may be metrically conditioned.

ἧμα 'dart'. ⇒ἵημι.

ἧμαι [v.] 'to sit' (epic, Hdt.). ◁IE *h_1eh_1s- 'sit'▷ •VAR 3sg. ἧσται, 3pl. εἵαται (for ἧαται), ἕαται, ipf. ἥμην (Il.); IA has κάθ-ημαι (κάτ-), κάθηται, 3pl. κάθηνται, κατ-έαται, ipf. (ἐ-)καθήμην.
•COMP With prefix ἔφ-, rarely ἄφ-, ἔν-, μέθ-, ὕφ-ημαι (Il., Od.). A second prefix was frequently added to κάθημαι, because it was seen as a simplex: e.g. ἐγ-, ἐπι-, προ-, συγ-κάθημαι (IA).
•ETYM Old verb for 'to sit', also found in Indo-Iranian and Anatolian: Skt. ā́ste, Av. āste = ἧσται < IE *h_1eh_1s-toi, Skt. ā́sate = ἧαται < IE *h_1eh_1s-ntoi (Av. ā̊ŋhənte is a secondary thematization); with (probably more original) stative inflexion, Hitt. 3sg. eša(ri), 3pl. ešanta(ri); for the other Anat. languages, see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. eš-$^{a(ri)}$ / aš-. Anatolian also has an active in the meaning 'to sit', e.g. Hitt. ešzi. This suggests that the root is identical to *h_1es- 'to be (present)'. The aspiration comes from ἕζομαι, ἵζω.

ἥμαιθον [n.] Name of a coin, acc. to H. = ἡμιωβέλιον. διώβολον παρὰ Κυζικηνοῖς (Herod., Phoen., Rhodes, etc., Bechtel 1921(2) : 654 and 1921(3): 301). ◁?▷
•ETYM Related to (or connected with) ἡμι-, with remarkable elision of the ι- (cf. Schwyzer: 434); further unclear.

ἦμαρ [n.] 'day' (Il.). ◁IE *Heh_2mer 'day'▷ •VAR Cypr. ἀματι-ἀματι 'day after day' (cf. Myc. we-te-i-we-te-i).
•DIAL Dor., Arc. ἆμαρ, -ατος; note Arc. ἄματα πάντα 'all days'. Myc. a-mo-ra-ma /āmōr-āmar/ 'day after day', di-wi-ja-me-ro perhaps /dwi-āmeron/ 'period of two days', see De Lamberterie BSL 94 (1999): 264.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἐνν-, ἑξ-, αὔτ-, παν-, προ-ῆμαρ 'nine days long', etc. (Hom.); on this type of compound see Leumann 1950: 100f. (against Wackernagel Glotta 2 (1910): 1ff.). As a first member e.g. ἡμερό-κοιτος 'sleeping by day' (Hes.); as a second member e.g. in ἐφ-ήμερος (Pi., IA; -έριος Od.) 'living only a day, transient, daily' together with ἐφημερίς, -ία, -εύω, -ευτήριον.
•DER ἠμάτιος 'daily, at day' (Hom., Hes.).
Lengthened form ἡμέρα, Ion. -ρη, Dor., etc. ἁμέρα, Locr. ἀμάρα 'id.' (Il.). See also on ►τήμερον, ►μεσημβρία. Thence: ἡμέριος (ἁμ-) 'living only one day, daily' (trag.), ἡμερινός 'belonging to the day' (IA; Chantraine 1933: 201), ἡμερήσιος (or -ίσιος? See Debrunner Glotta 13 (1924): 169) 'lasting one day, belonging to the day, daily' (IA), ἡμεραῖος 'id.' (pap.), ἡμερούσιος [adv.] 'daily' (pap. IV^{p}; after ἐπιούσιος; Debrunner Glotta 13 (1924): 169). Denominative verb ἡμερεύω 'to spend the day', also with prefixes δι-, παν- (IA); thence ἡμέρευσις 'spending the day' (Aq.).
•ETYM A cognate of ἦμαρ is Arm. awr 'day' < āmōr. The ending -ωρ, like in τέκμαρ : -μωρ, is also supposed for the first member of Myc. a-mo-ra-ma. The word is not found in any other branch. The extension ἡμέρα, on which see Chantraine 1933: 228, may have its aspiration from ἑσπέρα (Schwyzer: 305, Wackernagel 1916: 45). On ἦμαρ and ἡμέρη in Homer, see Debrunner Mus. Helv. 3 (1946): 40ff.; on ἦμαρ used as a plural, Leumann 1950: 100, who considers it to be an innovation. See further Clackson 1994: 96f.

ἡμεδαπός [adj.] 'of our land, native' (Att.). ◁IE *nsme- 'we'▷ •ETYM The synonymous form Skt. asmad-ī́ya- 'our' points to a suffix -απος (cf. on ἀλλοδαπός). On the stem of ἡμεδ- = asmad-, cf. ►ἡμεῖς. Szemerényi KZ 73 (1956): 59f. assumes old ablaut.

ἡμεῖς [pron.pers.] 'we, us' (Il.). ◁IE *ne/os 'we'▷ •VAR Accus. ἡμᾶς, Ion. ἡμέας, Dor. ἁμές, acc. ἁμέ, Aeol. ἄμμες, acc. ἄμμε.
•DER Possessive ἡμέ-τερος, Dor. ἁμέ-τερος, ἁμός, Aeol. ἀμμέ-τερος, ἄμμος 'our'.
•ETYM The accusatives ἁμέ, ἄμμε go back to *nsme (see below) and, by adopting nominal inflexion, they resulted in the paradigm nom. ἁμές, ἄμμες, later also ἡμεῖς < -έες, with a new accus. ἡμέας, and with irregular contraction ἡμᾶς. Then came the genitives ἡμῶν, ἡμέων, ἁμέων, ἀμμέων. On the datives ἡμῖν, etc., see below.
The archaic forms ἁμέ, ἄμμε < *ἀσμε agree exactly with Av. ahma 'us'; in Skt. asmā́n 'id.', it received the nominal ending. Other forms like Skt. nas (enclitic), Lat. nōs, Go. uns (< IE *nŏs, *ns) show for *ἀσμε = Av. ahma IE basis with added element -(s)me: *n̥sme < *n̥s-sme. The spiritus in ἁμ-, ἡμ- could be analogical after ὑμ-. The dative ἡμῖν, Dor. ἁμῖν, Aeol. ἄμμι(ν), from *ἀσμι(ν), recalls the Indo-Iranian demonstratives and interrogatives Av. ahmi, ásmin 'in eo', Av. kahmi, Skt. kásmin 'in quo?'; cf. Cret. ὅτι-μι, μήδι-μι. The long -ῖν is an innovation (after the long-vocalic endings in ἡμ-ῶν, -εῖς, etc.?).
Like Latin and Celtic, Greek lost the specific nominative for 'we', Go. weis, Hitt. u̯ēš, Skt. vay-ám, etc., and used the accusative.

ἡμέν [pcl.] in ἡμέν ... ἠδὲ ..., 'both ... and also ...' (Il.). ◁IE *h_1e ?▷ •ETYM From ►ἦ 'really' and μέν. Cf. on ►ἠδέ.

ἥμερος [adj.] 'tame, civilized, cultivated' (ο 162, also Tab. Heracl. 1, 172; codd. Pi. and A. wrongly ἅμ-). ◁?▷ •COMP Negated ἀν-ήμερος 'uncultivated, rough, wild' (A., Hell.). As a first member in ἡμερό-φυλλος "with improved leaves", 'improved' (ἐλαία; Isyll. 20).
•DER ἡμερίς (sc. ἄμπελος) 'improved vine' (ε 69) with ἡμερίδης 'regarding the ἡμερίς' (οἶνος, Διόνυσος; Plu.); ἡμερότης 'tameness, gentleness, cultivation' (IA), ἡμερία 'id.' (pap.); denominative verb ἡμερόω 'tame, cultivate, improve' (IA) together with ἡμέρ-ωσις 'improvement, cultivation' (Thphr., D. S.), -ωμα 'cultivated plant' (Thphr.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.), -ωτής 'tamer' (Max. Tyr.). On the accent cf. ἐλεύθερος; like this (: ἄγριος) expressing an opposition.
•ETYM Unclear. Several hypotheses (litt. in Frisk): (1) related to Skt. yámati 'tame, subdue'; (2) to Skt. sāntva- [n.] 'gentleness', MoHG sanft, etc.; (3) to a WGm. word for 'sad, sorrowful': OHG jāmar, etc. The form ἅμερος is a hyperdorism (Forssman 1966: 41ff; Bonfante Riv. fil. class. 99 (1971): 68 denies this).

ἠμί [v.] 'to speak' (Il.). ◁IE *$h_1eh_1\acute{g}$- 'say'▷ •VAR 3sg. ἠσί, Dor. ἠτί, almost only in ipf., especially 3sg. ἦ 'he said' (to 1sg. ἦν).
•ETYM New forms were built in Greek on the petrified form ἦ < *ἦκ-τ < IE *$h_1eh_1\acute{g}$-t, after φημί, φησί, ἔφην. Cf. also ablauting ►ἄνωγα 'command, order'.

ἡμι- comp. element 'half' (Il.). ◁IE *sēmi- 'half'▷

•COMP In compounds, e.g. ἡμισύ-τριτον [n.] 'the third half = one and a half' (Archil. 167), ἡμιτυεκτο [gen.] 'half a ἑκτεύς' (Cret.).
•DER 1. ἥμισυς (-τυς) 'half', properly substantival [m.] (ὁ ἥμισυς τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ; plur. ἡμίσεις Φ 7), τὸ ἥμισυ (Il.; after τὸ ὅλον), adjective fem. ἡμίσεια, Epid., Ther. ἡμίτεια (Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 447). With regressive assimilation ἥμυσυς (Erythrae V[a], etc.). Lesb. αιμισεων is a reverse spelling for ημι-, see Hodot 1990: 71. An o-stem ἥμισσον [n.] 'half' < -τϝ-ον, found in Dor. and Arc. Denominative verbs ἡμισεύω 'halve, cut in half' with ἡμίσευμα 'half' (LXX), with aphairesis μίσευμα 'id.' (Perga); ἡμιοιάζω [v.] 'to halve, cut in half' (Hero; cf. the verbs in -ιάζω in Schwyzer: 735). 2. ἡμῖνα [f.] 'half' (Cret., Cypr.; Bechtel 1921, 1: 448), also as a measure (Sicily; thence borrowed into Lat. hēmina); for the formation cf. δωτῖνη and Chantraine 1933: 205. 3. ἡμίχα· ἡμιστατῆρα (H.), cf. ► δίχα.
•ETYM Old expression for 'half', also in Skt. sāmi-, Lat. sēmi-, Gm., e.g. OHG sāmi- 'id.'. The functional identity is reflected in parallel compounds (that need not be inherited, however): Skt. sāmi-jīva- = Lat. sēmi-vīvus, cf. ἡμί-βιος and OHG sāmi-queck "half-living", 'half-dead'. An old locative of the root sem-* 'one' (see ► εἷς), thus properly meaning 'in one half (of two)'.

ἥμορος [adj.] · ἄμοιρος 'bereft' (H.). ◄IE smer-* 'receive as a share'► •VAR Thence ἡμορίς· κενή, ἐστερημένη 'empty, bereft'. Αἰσχύλος Νιόβῃ (Fr. 165); ἡμόριξεν· ἄμοιρον ἐποίησεν 'made possessionless' (H.).
•ETYM The regular Ionic-Attic outcome of *ἄ-σμορος, and identical with Hom. (Aeol.) ἄ-μμορος; see ► μείρομαι (μόρος, ► μοῖρα) and ► κάμμορος.

ἦμος 'when, while'. ⇒ τῆμος.

ἠμύω [v.] 'to bow down, perish' (Il.); rarely transitive 'sink, ruin' (A. R., Musae.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἠμῦσαι.
•COMP Also with κατ-, ἐπ-, ὑπ-.
•DER Also ἀμύω 'id.' (Hes. Fr. 216). Here probably also the perfect ὑπεμνήμῦκε (Χ 491) for *ὑπ-εμήμῦκε (with metr. length.), see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἠμύω.
•ETYM Unexplained.

ἤν [interj.] interjection calling attention: 'hey!, look over there', also ἠνίδε (ἤν ἴδε), ἤν ἰδού (Ar., Herod., Hell.). Added in Argiv. ταδ-έν, τōνδεōν-έν. ◄IE? h₁ēn* 'see there'► •ETYM Acc. to Frisk, the formally identical Lat. ēn is a Greek loan, at least in part.

ἠνεκής ⇒ διηνεκής.

ἡνία [n.pl.] 'reins, bridles' (Hom., Hes., Pi.). ◄IE h₂ensieh₂* 'rein'► •VAR ἡνίαι [f.pl.], also -ία [sg.] (post-Hom.), Dor. ἀν- (ἀν-).
•DIAL Myc. a-ni-ja /an[h]iai/, anijapi /an[h]iāp[h]i/ [dat.pl.f.]. Is the Homeric neuter secondary?
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἡνί-οχος "driver", 'charioteer' (Il.; epic also -ῆα, -ῆες, metrically conditioned) with ἡνιοχ-ικός, -έω (epic -εύω), -ησις, -εία. As a second member e.g. in χρυσ-ήνιος 'with golden reins'.

•ETYM As Lacon. ἀνιοχίōν = ἡνιοχέων (IG 5(1), 213) seems to point to original psilosis (the origin of the aspiration is unknown), ἀνία may go back to *ἀνσία and be identical with a Celtic word for 'rein', MIr. éis(s)i [m.pl.] < ansio-*. It has further been connected with Lat., Balt. and Gm. expressions for 'grip, handle': Lat. ānsa = Lith. ąsà; semantically more doubtful is ON æs [f.] < ansiā* 'hole for shoe-strings'.

ἠνίκα [conj.] 'when, at the time when' (χ 198). ◄IE io-* relative pron.►
•VAR Dor. Aeol. (Pi., Theoc.) ἁνίκα, also ἀν-. A form without -κα in koinè-Cypr. a-ni /hani/ (Kafizin 267).
•DER Beside it τηνίκα, πηνίκα; cf. on ► ἡλίκος.
•ETYM From the relative ὁ-, ἅ- (see ► ὅς 1) with the same adverbial ending as in αὐτί-κα, ὅ-κα. The element -νι- is found in the Arc. dem. ὀ-νι. For the -eh₂-*, cf. ► ἦλιξ.

ἦνῑς [acc.pl.] epithet of βοῦς, βοῦν (Hom.). ◄?►
•VAR ἦνῑν (ἦνιν?) [acc.sg.] Hom., ἤνιος [gen.sg.] A. R. 4, 174.
•ETYM Probably with sch. A 1 'yearling, one-year-old', for which Wackernagel 1955(2): 1171[1] suggested a lengthened grade formation of a word for 'year' also seen in ► ἐνιαυτός, with criticism of other ideas. Not very probable; criticism by Szemerényi Sprache 11 (1965): 6-12.

ἠνορέη ⇒ ἀνήρ.

ἦνοψ, -οπος [adj.] of χαλκός (Π 408, Σ 349 = κ 360), of οὐρανός and πυρός (Call. Fr. anon. 24, 28); also PN (Il.). Meaning debated, already in antiquity, cf. ἤνοπα· λαμπρόν, πάνυ ἔνηχον, διαφανῆ (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Formation in -οψ, but further unclear; originally *ϝῆν-οψ (Chantraine 1942: 152). Cf. νῶρ-οψ, αἶθ-οψ, which are also said of χαλκός, but remain without clear interpretation. Older literature in Frisk.

ἤνυστρον [n.] 'the fourth stomach of ruminants, rennet stomach'; also a dish (Ar., Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἐν- (LXX).
•ETYM The form with ἐν- perhaps arose under the influence of ἔντερα, ἐγκοίλια (but it is late in any case). Assuming *ϝήνυστρον, ἤνυστρον is traditionally connected with a NGm. word for 'rennet stomach', e.g. MoNw. dial. vinstr [f.], but it differs regarding the quantity of the first syllable and the color of the intermediate vowel (although Gr. -υ- might be analogical after ὑστέρα). As a pre-form, IE u̯ĕnes-tro-, -trā-* has been assumed. Further, with a different suffix, there is OHG wanast 'belly', also 'the first stomach of ruminants', Skt. vaniṣṭhú- [m.] 'entrails' vel sim. (used as an offering). However, a digamma is uncertain, and the connection with the Germanic and Sanskrit words seems most improbable, as the forms are not well comparable. I think the ending in -στρον is Pre-Greek (Pre-Greek: suffixes s.v. -στρ-). Fur.: 258[42] points to the variation ε/ η, for which he gives parallels.

ἠπανᾷ [v.] and ἠπανεῖ· ἀπορεῖ, σπανίζει, ἀμηχανεῖ 'is at loss, is in need of' (H.). ◄?►
•DER Further ἠπανία· ἀπορία, σπάνις, ἀμηχανία H., EM 433, 17; conj. in AP 5, 238.

•ETYM Reminiscent of πανία 'πλησμονή', so metrical lengthening for *ἀ-πανία (WP 2, 8) has been suggested. However, cf. σπανία 'lack, shortage'. DELG wonders how ἠ- can reflect a n ἀ- privative.

ἠπάομαι [v.] 'to mend, repair' (Hes. Fr. 172, Ar. Fr. 227, Gal., Aristid.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. ἠπήσασθαι, perf.ptc.pass. ἠπημένος.
•DER ἠπητής 'mender, repairer' (X. Cyr. 1, 6, 16 [worse v.l. ἀκεσταί], Batr., pap.; rejected by Atticists, cf. Fraenkel 1912: 15), fem. ἠπήτρια (pap.); ἤπητρα [pl.] 'mender's wages' (pap.), ἠπητήριον 'mender's instrument, needle' (Ael. Dion.).
•ETYM For the formation, cf. πηδάω and other deverbatives with lengthened ē-vowel (Schwyzer: 719); further unclear. The root shape is reminiscent of Hitt. ḫapp-^{zi} 'to join, attach' (connected with Lat. aptus by Puhvel).

ἦπαρ, -ατος [n.] 'liver' (Il.). ⊲IE *(H)iekʷ-r 'liver'⊳ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἡπατοσκοπέω 'inspect the liver' (to predict the future)' (LXX).
•DER ἡπάτιον name of a dish (Ar.); ἡπατῖτις [f.] 'belonging to the liver' (Hp.), also name of a stone and a plant (Plin., Ps.-Dsc., Strömberg 1940: 41); ἡπατ-ικός, -ιαῖος, -ίας, -ηρός 'ptng. to the liver' (Hp.); ἥπατος [m.] name of a fish (com., Arist.; Strömberg 1943: 45f.; acc. to Thompson 1947 s.v. Egyptian [?]).
•ETYM The IE word for 'liver', iekʷ-r*, gen. iekʷ-n-és* (-ós), is also retained in Skt. yákr̥-t, yakn-ás and indirectly in Lat. iecur, iecin-or-is. In other languages the r/n-stem led to a paradigm split: e.g., OAv. yākarə, MP jakar, MoP jigar (but Pashto yīna, and perhaps Old Iran. huyāyna-, for ha-yākana-*, properly "of common liver", acc. to Krause KZ 56, 304ff.), or Lith. (j)ēknos 'fish egg; calf; (plur.) spawn', Ru. ikrá 'id.' < *(H)ikʷ-r-. In some branches, we find initial l-*, which may have been taken from the word for 'fat' (cf. on ►λίπος): Gm., e.g. OHG lebara, Arm. leard (with the ending of iekʷr̥*); attempts to connect the l-forms with i̯ekʷr̥* by assuming an anlaut li̯-* have failed (Schmidt 1889: 198f., Benveniste 1935: 132). Hitt. li-i-ši is probably a loan (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). Szemerényi KZ 73 (1956): 191 suggested that the Greek long vowel must be secondary, e.g. from ἦτορ; this is also advocated by Kortlandt.

ἠπεδανός [adj.] 'weak, light, slight, halting' (Il.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Formation like ῥιγεδανός, πευκεδανός (Chantraine 1933: 362, Schwyzer: 530, Risch 1937: 106), but further unclear, like several emotional adjectives. An Ionic word, acc. to DELG. Pokorny maintains the uncertain comparison with Lith. opùs 'soft, receptive, invalid' (beside which *ἦπος [n.] has been assumed, like ῥῖγος to ῥιγεδανός); it has also been compared with Skt. ap$_u$vā́- 'mortal fear' (see Hoffmann 1955: 80ff., who also connects it with OP afuvā and h$_1$ep-* 'to seize').

ἤπειρος [f.] 'continent' as opposed to the sea and the islands, 'coast', also in opposition to the inland (Il.), as a TN Epeiros. ⊲IE? Heh$_2$per-* 'shore'⊳ •VAR Dor. ἄπειρος, Aeol. ἄπερρος.
•COMP As a first member in ἠπειρο-γενής 'born on the mainland' (A. Pers. 42).
•DER ἠπειρώτης, fem. -τις 'inhabitant of the continent, of Asia Minor, of Epeiros' (IA; on the formation Fraenkel 1912: 128 n. 1) with ἠπειρωτικός (X.); denominative verb ἠπειρόομαι, *όω 'become (part of the) continent, connect with the mainland' (Th., Arist.).

•ETYM Except for the suffixal yod, PGr. *ἄπερι̯ος agrees with the WGm. word for 'shore', OE ōfer [m.], MoHG Ufer, etc., PGm. ōfera-, which points to IE āpero- < Heh$_2$pero-*. Arm. ap'n 'shore' (Benveniste 1935: 13) cannot be compared phonetically (so is it a substrate word?).

ἠπεροπεύς [m.] 'cheat, deceiver' (λ 364, A. R. 3, 617, AP 9, 524, 8). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR -ῆς [f.] (Hom., apud Str. 1, 2, 4).
•DER ἠπεροπεύω (only present stem) 'cheat, deceive' (Hom., Hes.) together with ἠπεροπευτής (only voc. -τά Γ 39 = N 768, h. Merc. 282, etc.; on the formation Fraenkel 1910: 20f., Fraenkel 1912: 34) and ἠπερόπευμα (Critias).
•ETYM Because of the rarity of the attestations, ἠπεροπεύς could be a back-formation from ἠπεροπεύω. The basic form *ἠπερ-οψ, *ἠπερ-οπός, -ή that was assumed received various explanations (see Frisk). Kuiper's connection (Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 283f.) with ►ἀπάτη is semantically attractive, but an IE reconstruction is excluded in this case. A loan from Pre-Greek is quite possible (thus also DELG), especially in view of suffixal -op-.

ἠπίαλος [m.] 'ague, ague from fever' (Thgn., Ar., Hp., etc.; on the meaning Strömberg 1944: 82ff.); 'nightmare'. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR ἐπίαλος Alc. apud EM 434, 6 (probably after ἐπί). Cf. ἠπίολος 'moth' (Arist. HA 605b 14; v.l. -όλης) with ἠπιόλιον· ῥιγοπυρέτιον 'ague' (H.).
•DER ἠπιαλώδης 'ague-like' (Hp.), ἠπιαλέω 'suffer from agues' (Ar., Arist.), ἐξ-ηπιαλόομαι 'turn into an ague' (Hp.).
•ETYM Acc. to Strömberg 1944: 82ff. (with parallels), it is from ἤπιος, so properly "mild fever", which would be a taboo paraphrase. This seems an improbable hypothesis. On the suffix -αλο-, see Chantraine 1933: 246f. The word ἠπίολος 'moth' (better, -όλης; after the nouns in -όλης) should not be separated from ἠπίαλος, as is shown by the words adduced by Bugge BB 18 (1892): 166: Lith. drugỹs 'fever, malaria, butterfly, moth' (related to Ru. drožát' 'shiver'), Alb. ethe 'fever' with ethëzë 'moth' ("feverbird"). In folklore, butterflies, etc. bring fever (Frisk). Given the variation α/ ο, it is probably a Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 258, 342). See also on ►ἐφιάλτης.

ἤπιος [adj.] 'friendly, gentle, kind, mild, soothing' (Il.). ⊲IE? h$_2$e-h$_2$p-i-* 'friendly'⊳ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἠπιό-φρων 'with mild intention' (Emp.).
•DER ἠπιότης 'mildness' (Hell.) and the rare denominatives ἠπιόομαι 'to become mild' (Phld.), ἠπιαίνω 'id.' (Arist. Mu. 397b 1; uncertain).
•ETYM Mostly connected with Skt. āpí- 'friend'. Floyd Glotta 71 (1993): 10-16 confirms this connection and compares the uses in Homer and the Rigveda, especially the turn of phrase πατὴρ ὣς ἤπιος. As Pinault LALIES 6 (1987): 111-128 convincingly shows, the central meaning of ἤπιος in Homeric Greek is 'favorable, well-disposed' (French propice, favorable), not 'mild'. Van Beek (p.c.) suggests that we should reconstruct h$_2$e-h$_2$p-i-* 'fitting, allied' (of the type Skt. cákri- 'doing' < kʷé-kʷr-i-*) on the basis of Greek and Sanskrit; this is more convincing than a lengthened grade locative *h_1ēp-i 'proche', from which Pinault departs, a formation which would be isolated.

ἠπύω [v.] 'to sound loudly, cry loudly' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Dor. Arc. ἀπύω, aor. ἠπῦσαι.
•COMP Also with ἀν-, ἐπ-; βρι-ήπυ-ος 'crying loudly' (N 521).
•DER ἠπύτᾰ 'cryer', as an epithet (H 384, Q. S., Opp.), Ἠπυτίδης name of a herold (P 324).
•ETYM It is possible that ἠπύω is based on a noun *ἦπυς 'loud cry' (Fraenkel 1910: 165). On the ending, cf. γηρύ-ω, οἰζύ-ω, ἀῦ-σαι; further unclear. The comparison with Lat. vāpulō 'to be beaten' (probably properly 'lament, cry') and Gm. words like Go. wopjan 'cry' (which suppose a deviating labial) supposes an initial digamma. However, there is no trace of it in Homer. Improbable comparison by Fur. 236 with ► αὔω 'to cry, call'.

ἦρα [acc.sg.] (or [n.pl.]?) 'service, favor' in (ἐπὶ) ἦρα φέρειν 'do a favor' (Il.); post-Hom. as a postposition with gen. = χάριν 'for the sake of, on account of' (B., Call.). ⊲IE *ueh_1r- 'true' ?⊳
•DER ► ἐρίηρες [pl.] 'faithful', also ἐπίηρος (perhaps a reinterpretation of ἐπὶ ἦρα φέρειν in e.g. A 572 and 578). Also βριηρόν· μεγάλως κεχαρισμένον 'highly charming' (H.; perhaps βρι- is a mistake for ἐρί-); PN Πολυ-ήρης, etc. The appurtenance of Lesb. ► ἠρώνα and ► ἐπιήρανος 'pleasant' is doubtful.
•ETYM A pre-form *ϝῆρ-α (on the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 152; on the formation, Sommer 1948: 138) can be connected in several ways. First, with words for 'friendly': Lat. sevērus 'earnest', if < sē vērō "without friendliness" (but see now Nussbaum 1998 apud De Vaan 2008 s.v. sevērus on this word), Gm., e.g. ON værr 'friendly', OHG ala-wāri 'friendly'. Alternatively, it can be connected with the word for 'true': Lat. vērus = OIr. fír = OHG wār, OCS věra 'faith', etc., from ueh_1-ro-. Within Greek, some have tried to connect it with ► ἑορτη, ► ἔρανος, ► ἔροτις.

Ἥρα [f.] Hera, the wife of Zeus (Il.). ⊲PG⊳
•DIAL Myc. E-ra, Ion. Ἥρη; Cypr. Ἠραι [dat.] (see *Del.*³ 681, 4).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in Ἡρα-κλέης, -κλῆς (Il.), explanation in Kretschmer Glotta 8 (1917): 121ff., with βίη Ἡρακληείη (probably an Achaean formula, see Ruijgh 1995: 82f.), also -κλήϊος, -κλειος and Ἡρακλείδης (Il.).
•DER Ἡραῖος 'belonging to H.' (IA); fem. -αία, -άα place name (Arcadia VI^a) with Ἡραιεύς inhabitant of Heraia; also Ερϝαõιοι (El.); Ἡρα(ι)ών month name (Tenos, Eretria).
•ETYM The Mycenaean, Cyprian and Arcadian forms without digamma make El. Ερϝαõιοι suspect. Therefore, the connection with Lat. servāre, etc. is quite improbable. Other proposals are highly doubtful: e.g. to IE $Hieh_1$-r- 'year' (see ► ὥρα). As with most theonyms, Pre-Greek origin is most probable.

ἠράνθεμον [n.] "spring anthemon" (Dsc.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM From ἔαρ 'spring'; cf. Strömberg 1940: 72. On the formation, see Risch IF 59 (1949): 53f.

ἤρανος [m.] 'keeper, lord, helper' (Hell. poetry), in H. = βασιλεύς, ἄρχων, σκοπός, φύλαξ 'king, ruler, overseer, guardian'. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Found as ἐπι-ήρανος 'powerful, ruling, protecting' in earlier sources (Emp., Pl. Com., AP).
•DER ἠρανέων· βοηθῶν, χαριζόμενος 'helping, charming' (H.).
•ETYM For the suffix, cf. ► κοίρανος. Since Fick 1874-1876(2): 270, it has been compared with Skt. vāraka- 'who wards off, opponent' (or, rather, vāraṇá- 'averting, strong' RV), from the root of ► ἔρυμαι. Frisk compares ἐπι-ήρανος with ἐπι-βουκόλος and asks whether ἤρανος is an archaizing simplex. Connection with ► ἦρα, ► ἐπίηρος seems semantically improbable.

ἠρέμᾱ [adv.] 'quietly, gentle, slowly, a little' (Pl., Ar., Arist.); also ἠρέμᾰς (A. R. 3, 170; antevocalic), -μῖ (Ar. Ra. 315). ⊲IE? $h_1$remH- 'rest, be quiet'⊳ •DER Comp. ἠρεμέστερος (X., Thphr.; innovation, not an old s-stem to Go. rimis), together with ἠρεμαιότης (Hp.); ἤρεμος 'id.' (Thphr.; back-formation from ἠρεμέω) with ἠρεμότης (late); further ἠρεμαῖος 'quiet' (Pl., Hp.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἠρεμέω 'be quiet' (Pl., Hp., etc.) with ἠρέμησις 'rest' (Ti. Locr., Arist.), also ἠρεμία 'id.' (Arist.; after the type ἐπιδημέω : ἐπιδημία; Schwyzer: 469; cf. also ἤρεμος [: ἐπίδημος]); 2. ἠρεμίζω 'calm' (X., Arist.) with ἠρέμισμα (Comm. Arist.); 3. ἠρεμάζω 'be quiet' (LXX).
•ETYM See Schwyzer: 622 on the formation: ἠρέμᾰς, like ἀτρέμᾰς (ibid. 620); on ἠρεμῖ (-εί), ibid. 623. The word ἠρέμα cannot be separated from a widespread group for 'rest, quiet': e.g., Skt. rámate 'to rest, etc.', Lith. rimti 'to be quiet' (the acute accent pointing to a root-final laryngeal), Go. rimis [n.] 'rest', OIr. fo-rimim 'to set, lay'. A prefix ἠ- cannot be assumed (cf. ► ἠβαιός); neither is a lengthened prothesis attractive (the archaic epic word ► ἠΐθεος, with metrical lengthening, is not a parallel).

ἦρι [adv.] 'early' (Il.). ⊲IE $h_2$eus-er-i '(early) in the morning'⊳ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἠρι-γένεια 'born early' (Il.), epithet of Ἠώς, also as a substantive denoting dawn; later also -ής (A. R.); ἠρι-γέρων "early grey", also the plant 'Senecio' (Thphr.; Strömberg 1940: 56).
•ETYM Seems to stand for *ἧερι (cf. ἠέριος, Ἠερί-βοια). This used to be explained as from *ἄιερι as a locative with lengthened grade, beside a full grade ai̯er-i seen in Greek in ► ἄριστον 'breakfast', as well as in Go. air, ON ár [adv.] 'early'. The noun is seen in Av. aiiarə, gen. aiiąn 'day'. However, the lengthened grade assumed for Greek is found nowhere else. Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 624-6 convincingly derived the form from a locative aus-er-i 'in the early morning', belonging to the root $h_2$eus- of ► ἠώς, to which ► ἠικανός also belongs. The old explanation should be rejected.

ἠρίον [n.] 'burial mound, barrow' (Ψ 126). ⊲?⊳
•COMP As a first member in ἠρι-εργής· τυμβώρυχος 'grave digger' (H.).
•DER Not here the river name Ἠριδανός.
•ETYM Formation like κηρίον : κηρός, μηρία : μηρός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 59). By the ancients, it was connected with ἔρα 'earth' (cf. Schwyzer: 424, where unclear πολύηρος· πολυάρουρος, πλούσιος 'having much farmland, rich' [H.] is adduced), but given μέγα ἠρίον in Ψ 126, we should rather reconstruct *ϝηρίον. Often derived from a root *uer- 'cover', with reference to Gm. words like ON vǫr [f.] 'hill or bank of stones or gravel', ON ver [n.] 'dam' < IE *uorio-, which derive in the first place from a verb for 'avert', Go. warjan, etc. This is not convincing, as it supposes a lengthened grade for Greek.

ἦρος [m.] with ἠρίσκος of unknown meaning (Delos IV -III^{a}). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unexplained.

ἤρυγγος 1 [f.] name of a thistle-like plant, 'Eryngium' (Nic. et al.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Mostly ἠρύγγιον (Thphr.), also ἠρύγγη (Plin.) and ἠρυγγίτης (Plu.).
•DER ἠρυγγίς [f.] 'belonging to E.' (Nic.).
•ETYM Formation like εἴλιγγος and πίσυγγος; the suffix -Vγγ- is much more frequent in athematic forms like φάρυγξ, etc. Acc. to Strömberg 1940: 72, it derives from ἔαρ, ἦρος 'spring', as "spring flower". Clearly a Pre-Greek word.

ἤρυγγος 2 [m.] 'goat's beard' (Arist. HA 610b 29). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Although the meaning 'goat's beard' is unexplained beside those of ἤρυγγος 1, the word is clearly Pre-Greek.

ἠρώνα [f.] 'consecrated object' = ἱερωνία (inscr. Thermi near Mytilene, IG 12(2), 242, cf. also 251).
•ETYM For ἱερωνία, a Lesbianized form. See Hodot ZPE 49 (1982): 187-9.

ἥρως [m.] 'lord, hero' (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Gen. -ωος, rarely -ωνος, -ωνι, -ωτι, etc. (details in Schwyzer: 479f., 557, 582).
•DIAL Myc. ti-ri-se-ro-e /tris-ērō^{h}es/.
•DER ἡρώϊος, ἡρῷος 'heroic' (Pi., Pl.) together with ἡρώϊον, -ῷον 'sanctuary of a hero' (IA); ἡρωϊκός 'id.' (Att., Arist.). Several feminine formations (cf. on βασιλεύς): 1. ἡρωΐς (Pi.); 2. ἡρωΐνη, ἡρῴνη, ἡροΐνα (Ar., inscr.); 3. ἡρώϊσσα, ἡρῷσσα (A. R., inscr.); 4. ἡρώασσα (Creta); 5. ἧρυς (Lilybaeum II^{a}), probably an innovation (after θῆλυς or γρηῦς?); ἡρωϊασταί, ἡρωϊσταί (-οϊσταί, -ωσταί) [pl.] 'adorer of heroes' (inscr. IV^{a}); after the nouns in -αστής, -ιστής, see Fraenkel 1910: 175ff.; ἡρωϊσμός 'adoration of heros' (Mytilene); the verb ἡρωΐζω only in Eust. 4, 1 in the sense of 'write epic poems'. PN Ἥρυλλα (Chantraine 1933: 252).
•ETYM Not from ἡρωϝ-, as previously assumed, because of the Mycenaean form. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

Ἡσίοδος [m.] PN Hesiod (since Pi.). ◂?▸
•DER Ἡσιόδειος (Pl.).
•ETYM Solmsen 1901: 81 supposed a governing compound to ἵημι *ϝοδήν 'to start a song'. See on ►αὐδή; further Knecht 1946: 48f. A survey of the proposals is given by Meier-Brügger Glotta 68 (1990): 66-67.

ἥσυχος [adj.] 'quiet, silent, slow' (Hes.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also ἡσύχιος (Φ 598), ἡσύχιμος (Pi. O. 2, 32; analogical to ἡσυχία, Arbenz 1933: 77), ἡσυχαῖος (Att.; to ἡσυχῆ).

•DIAL Dor. ἅσυχ- is not a hyperdorism, see Forssman 1966: 48ff.
•DER ἡσυχῆ, -ῇ [adv.] 'quiet, softly, secretly' (IA; Schwyzer: 550); ἡσυχία, -ίη 'rest' (σ 22); ἡσυχάζω, -άσαι 'be quiet, rest, bring to rest' (Att.) with ἡσυχαστικός 'calming' (late).
•ETYM Unexplained. A hypothesis by Osthoff and Brugmann is given in Pok. 890 and WH s.v. sinō: that it is from the root $*seh_1$- in Lat. sēmen. This is now viewed as impossible, as the word had initial hā-.

ἦτα [n.] the seventh letter of the alphabet (Hp., Pl.). ◂LW Sem.▸ •ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. ḥēth. See Schwyzer: 140.

ἦτορ [n.] 'heart' (Il.); on the meaning Bolelli Ann. d. Scuola Norm. di Pisa 17: 65ff. and Biraud LAMA 10: 1-32. ◂IE $*h_1eh_1t-r$ 'heart, intestines'▸ •VAR Only nom.-acc. except ἤτορι (Pi., Simon.).
•COMP As a second member in μεγαλ-ήτωρ, -ορος 'magnanimous' (Il.).
•DER ἦτρον [n.] 'abdomen' (IA; on the formation Schwyzer: 461) with ἠτριαῖος 'belonging to the abdomen' (Ar.); cf. e. g. νεφρ-ιαῖος and Chantraine 1933: 49.
•ETYM Old r-stem with Aeol. -ορ from zero grade *-r̥. The word is also found in Gm. and Celt., e.g. ON æðr [f.] 'vein', OHG ād(a)ra, MHG āder 'vein', plur. 'intestines', OIr. inathar (< *en-ōtro-) 'intestines'. On the meaning 'heart' ~ 'intestines', cf. e.g. OE hreðer 'breast, belly, heart' next to OHG herdar 'intestines'. See also ►κῆρ, ►καρδία.

ἤτριον [n.] 'warp' (Pl., E., Theoc.). ◂?▸
•VAR ἄτριον Theoc. 18, 33 (better -ίον?).
•ETYM For the formation, cf. ἠρίον. Semantically, connection with ►ἄττομαι 'set the warp in the loom' is probable; cf. the derivatives ἆσμα, δίασμα with related meaning. It is difficult to give a precise derivational model, however. The word ►ἐπήτριμοι 'closely woven, thronged' perhaps also belongs here.

ἥττων •VAR Ion. ἥσσων. ⇒ἦκα.

ἠΰτε [pcl.] 'as, just like' (Il.). ◂IE $*h_1ē$ 'or'▸ •ETYM From ἤ, ἠ(ϝ)έ 'or' and *(H)ute, found in Skt. utá 'and, also'. See Schwyzer 1950: 564 and 576. Cf. ►εὖτε.

Ἥφαιστος [m.] the divine smith, god of fire, also meton. for 'fire' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Dor. Aeol. Ἄφ-, Ἆφ-, Att. vases Hε̄φαστος (Schwyzer: 276; on the form of the name also Kretschmer Glotta 30 (1943): 115ff.).
•DIAL Myc. A-pa-i-ti-jo PN /(H)āp^{h}aistios/.
•COMP Ἡφαιστό-τευκτος 'made by H.' (S.), ἀν-ήφαιστος 'without H., without warmth' (πῦρ, E. Or. 621).
•DER Ἡφαίστιος, -ιών month-name (Thess.), Ἡφαιστῖτις (scil. λίθος) name of a stone (Plin.). Ἡφαίστια [pl.] 'festival for Hephaestus' (Att.), -εῖον 'temple of H.' (IA), also -ιεῖον (pap. I^{a}, after Ἀσκληπι-εῖον), etc.; -ιάς 'a plaster'.
•ETYM A Pre-Greek theonym; the form without -i- shows a typical Pre-Greek variation (Fur.: 296, 336) and points to original s^{y}.

ἠχή [f.] 'sound, noise' (Il.). ◄IE *(s)ueh₂gʰ- 'sound'► •VAR Dor. ἀχά.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ὑψ-ηχής 'with high neighing' (ἵππος, Il.); ἄντ-ηχος 'sounding towards' (Ph.), to ἠχή, ἦχος or ἠχέω.
•DER ἠχήεις 'sounding, making noise' (Il.; with shortening ἠχέεντα Archil. 74, 8; see Schwyzer: 246). ἠχώ [f.] 'sound, noise' (Dor. ἀχώ), also personified (h. Hom., Hes. Sc., Pi., A.). ἦχος [m.] (secondarily [n.], Schwyzer: 512) = ἠχή, together with ἠχώδης (Hp., Hell.); also as a PN ϝᾶχος (Arc.), short name like ϝᾶχυς (Cor. Chalcid.). Verb ἠχέω, aor. ἠχῆσαι, often with prefix, e.g. ἀντ-, ὑπ-, 'sound, rustle, give a sound' (Hes.); with ἀντ-ήχημα, -ήχησις, ἠχέτης, -τᾶ (ἀχ-) 'who sounds, cicada' (Hes.; also from ἦχος, Schwyzer: 500, Fraenkel 1910: 165), ἠχητής Hes. with ἠχητικός 'sounding' (late), ἠχεῖον 'drum' (Ph., Plu.). See also on ►ἰάχω, ►ἰαχή.
•ETYM ἠχή (from *ϝᾱχᾱ́), ἠχώ, and secondary ἦχος (cf. κόμπος, τάραχος) continue a root noun or an uncharacterized verb. These were replaced by innovations ἠχή and deverbative (or denominative?) ἠχέω. Beside it stands a primary zero grade reduplicated present ϝι-ϝάχ-ω; see ►ἰάχω.
The forms ἠχή, ἠχέω have no exact parallels in other languages. The closest are Lat. vāgīre 'wail' (though with IE *-g-) and a few Baltic and Germanic words with initial *su̯-, e.g. Lith. svagiù, -ėti 'to sound' (IE *-g⁽ʰ⁾-), OE swōgan 'sound' (IE *-gʰ- as in ἠχή).

Θ

θαιρός [m.] 'pivot of a door' (M 459, Q. S., Agath.), also 'axle of a chariot' (S. Fr. 596). ◄IE *dʰuer- 'door'► •COMP θαιροδύται· οἱ ἐν τῷ ζυγῷ δακτύλιοι, δι' ὧν οἱ ῥυτῆρες 'the rings on the yoke, whence the reins' (H.).
•DER θαιραῖος (Poll.).
•ETYM A technical term, which Brugmann IF 17 (1904-1905): 356ff. derived from *θϝαρ-ιό-ς (thus IE *dʰu̯r̥-i̯ó-) as "Türgänger", from ►θύρα and ἰέναι 'to go'. The form reconstructed for Greek would rather contain the suffix *-i̯o-, thus *dʰur-io-. This remains uncertain. MoNw. (dial.) darre 'pivot of a door, small standard in the corner of a sledge' (Falk & Torp 1910: 178) is remotely related at best.

θᾶκος [m.] 'seat, chair' (Att.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Epic Ion. Dor. θῶκος (since Il.), lengthened θόωκος (β 26, μ 318 verse-finally; see below).
•COMP As a second member e.g. in σύν-θακος, -θωκος 'who shares his chair with someone else' (S., E.).
•DER Denominative verbs: 1. θάσσω, epic θαάσσω (only present stem) 'sit' (Il.) < *θαϝακ-i̯ω, see below; θοάζω for *θοάσσω; 2. θᾰκέω, θωκέω (also with prefix, e.g. συν-, ἐν-) 'sit' (post-Hom.) together with θάκημα 'sitting' (S.), ἐνθάκησις 'sitting' (S.), ἐνθακη 'ambush' (Pompeiopolis; deverbal), θακεῖον 'seat' (Attica IVᵃ; cf. ἀρχεῖον, Chantraine 1933: 61). 3. θακεύω 'go to stool' (Plu., Artem.). On ►θοάζω, see s.v.
•ETYM From θάβακον· θᾶκον ἢ θρόνον H., it appears that *θᾶκο was contracted from *θά(ϝ)ακος; θῶκος would then come from θό(ϝ)ᾱκος (not from θώ(ϝ)ακος, as per Frisk et al.), shortened *θό(ϝ)ακος; it yielded θόωκος after diectasis. Details on θᾶκος, θῶκος in Björck 1950: 349ff. Connection with *dʰeh₁- (comparing θωμ-ός 'heap') as zero grade and ō-grade is impossible because of *θαϝακ-ος. In accordance with Schulze 1892: 435, *θάϝακος has been explained as assimilated from *θόϝακος, but this is most improbable. The word must be Pre-Greek, as was observed by Fur.: 342. A suffix -ακ- is frequent in Pre-Greek (Pre-Greek: Suffixes); the variation *-αϝ-/-οϝ- is normal in substrate words.

θάλαμος [m.] 'inside room at the back of a house' (as opposed to μέγαρον, δῶμα); room for women and bedroom, also a room for provisions (Il.; on the meaning Wace JHS 71 (1951): 203ff.), in mariners' language 'the lowest deck of a ship' (Timae., Poll.). ◄PG(V)►

•COMP As a first member e.g. in θαλαμη-πόλος [f.], late [m.] 'chamber maid, lady's-maid; eunuch' (Od.; -η- metrically conditioned). θαλάμη [f.] 'lair, den, cavity of the body' (ε 432, E., Hp., Arist.), as a nautical term = θάλαμος (Luc.); on θάλαμος ~ -μη see Porzig 1942: 284.
•DER θαλαμιά 'oar hole' (Hdt. 5, 33), also 'oar at the lower deck' (Ar. Ach. 533, inscr.); θαλαμίας [m.] 'rower in the θάλαμος or θαλαμιά' (Th. 4, 32, App., Them.), in this meaning also θαλάμᾱξ (Ar. Ra. 1074) and θαλαμίτης (sch. ad loc.). From θάλαμος also the rare θαλαμήϊος (Hes. Op. 807, A. R.), θαλαμαῖος (Ph.), θαλαμίς (An. Ox.) and denominative θαλαμεύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'to (be) take(n) into the θάλαμος, as a wife' (Ph., Hld. et al.) with θαλαμεύτρια = νυμφεύτρια (Poll.); θαλάμευμα = θάλαμος E. Ba. 120 (lyr.), cf. Chantraine 1933: 185; θαλαμευτός (Tim. Pers. 245).
•ETYM Reminiscent of ►θόλος 'circular building', but further unknown; Pre-Greek origin is quite possible, as its structure (CaC-aC-) is typical for such words. It could be cognate with θόλος (Fur.: 342). Not related to ►ὀφθαλμός.

θάλασσα [f.] 'sea' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•DIAL Att. θάλαττα, Late Cretan θάλαθθα (Buck 1955: §81b), Lacon. in σαλασσο-μέδοισα Alc. 84.
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. θαλασσο-κράτωρ (Hdt., Th.), ἀμφι-θάλασσος 'surrounded by the sea' (Pi.; bahuvrīhi); often in hypostases, mostly with -ιος (-ίδιος), e.g. ἐπι-, παρα-θαλάσσιος, -ίδιος (IA).
•DER θαλάσσιος 'belonging to the sea, maritime' (Hom.), -ία [f.], -ιον [n.] as a plant name (Dsc.; Strömberg 1940: 114), θαλασσ-ίδιος (Hdt.), -αῖος (Simon., Pi.) 'id.', θαλασσώδης 'sea-like' (Hanno Peripl.), θαλασσερός [m.] 'kind of eye-salve' (Gal.); θαλασσίτης (οἶνος Plin.). Denominatives: θαλασσ-εύω 'be in the sea' (Th.), -όομαι, -όω 'to be filled by sea water, turn into sea' (Arist., Hell.) with θαλάσσωσις 'inundation' (Thphr., Ph.), -ίζω 'to be like sea water, wash in sea water' (Ath., pap.).
•ETYM For the notion of 'sea', the Greeks did not use the stem mor-i-*, limited to the European languages (Lat. mare, MoHG Meer, etc.), but they used old words in a new meaning (ἅλς properly 'salt', πόντος properly 'path'), or borrowed words from Pre-Greek, like πέλαγος. The latter is the case for θάλασσα. It belongs to the gloss Maced. (?) δαλάγχαν· θάλασσαν (H.). Fur.: 195 notes that it is uncertain that δαλάγχαν is Macedonian (Kalléris 1954 does not give it). The word, with its prenasalized variant, is typically Pre-Greek. Fur. further connects σάλος, ζάλος, which seems possible but remains uncertain. Acc. to Lesky Herm. 78 (1943): 258ff., θάλασσα was originally a foreign word for 'salt water'. See Beekes fthc. [on PG *ky].

θάλλω [v.] 'to flourish, grow' (Hes., h. Cer. 402). ◄IE $d^h(e)h_2$-l-, d^hh_2l-* 'flourish, green'► •VAR Them. aor. ἔθᾰλον (h. Hom. 19, 33, Hell.), perf. with present meaning τέθηλα, Aeol. Dor. τέθᾱλα (Il.); later forms s-aor. ἀν-έθηλα (Ael.), fut. ἀνα-θᾱλήσομαι (AP).
•COMP Also with prefix (ἀνα-, etc.).
•DER 1. From the root aorist: θάλος [n.] 'sprout', only metaph. (Il.) with ἀμφι-θαλής 'surrounded by θάλος (θάλεα), rich' (X 496; also to θαλεῖν); adj. fem. θάλεια 'flowering, rich' (Il.; on the accent cf. ἐλάχεια, see ►ἐλαχύς), while *θαλύς [m.], -ύ [n.] is found only in θαλέων [gen.pl.] (X 504); instead of it we find θαλερός (Il.), like γλυκερός to γλυκύς. θαλία, -ίη 'flower, abundance', plur. 'festival' (Il., Hdt.; Scheller 1951: 39 with different analysis) with θαλιάζω [v.] 'to amuse oneself' (Plu.). PN Θάλης (-ῆς), gen. Θάλεω, Θάλητος, etc. (Schwyzer: 461f.). See also on ►θαλύσια. 2. From the present: θαλλός [m.] 'green twig, especially of the olive; sprout', also '(festive) gift' (ρ 224) together with θαλλία [f.sg.] 'foliage' (Thphr.), θαλλία [n.pl.] 'gifts' (pap.), θάλλῖνος 'consisting of θαλλοί' (Rhodes). Θαλλώ [f.] 'goddess of growth' (Iusi. apud Lycurg. 77, Paus. 9, 35, 2).
Secondary presents: 1. to the root aorist: θᾰλ-έθω (Il.; see Chantraine 1942: 327, Shipp 1967: 39); 2. to the perfect: θηλέω, θᾱλέω, aor. θηλῆσαι, θᾱλ- (Il.), together with ἐρι-θηλής 'richly growing' (Il., Hes.), etc. (but cf. ἐριθαλίς· εἶδος δένδρου 'kind of tree' H., erithales [n.] Plin. to θάλος). Lengthened from θηλέω: τηλεθάω, old only the ptc. τηλεθάων (Il.; Chantraine 1942: 359).
•ETYM Ascertained correspondences are found only in Albanian and Armenian: present Alb. dal 'to sprout' < d^hal-n-* (which may even be identical with θάλλω, cf. on ►βάλλω), aor. dol(l)a < IE d^heh_2l-* as in τέθᾱλα, and the Arm. adjective dalar 'green, fresh', which has been compared directly with θαλερός. The Celtic material (MW deillyau 'to emanate, proceed, etc.'), and the Germanic even more so (see Pok. 234), is best considered separately. See LIV² s.v. d^halh_1-* (which cannot be the correct reconstruction, however).
Clackson 1994: 118ff. argues concerning the comparison Arm. dalar : θαλερός that -ar- is a productive suffix in Armenian and that 'the semantic development may be independent'.

θάλπω [v.] 'to warm', rarely intr. 'to be warm' (Od.). ◄PG► •VAR Aor. θάλψαι.
•COMP Also prefixed with ἀνα-, ἐπι-, συν-, ὑπο-, etc.
•DER θάλπος [n.] 'warmth' (IA) with δυσ-θαλπής 'with bad warmth, shivery' (P 549); or from θάλπω; θαλπωρή 'refreshment' (Hom.); θάλψις 'warming' (Hp.); θαλπνός 'warming' (Pi.; cf. τερπνός; Chantraine 1933: 193); θαλπεινή 'Iris' (Strömberg 1940: 82); PN Θάλπιος B 620. Lengthened ptc. pres. θαλπιόων 'warm' (τ 319, Arat. 1073; on the formation see Risch 274).
•ETYM Connection with θάλλω as 'make flourish' is improbable. The root is also found in ►θαλυκρός, d^hal-uk^w-*; the syncopated form, without -u-, yielded θάλπω. Thus Kuiper Lingua 21 (1968): 270-275 and Fur.: 384, 391. On syncope in Pre-Greek, see Fur.: 378-385.

θαλυκρός [adj.] 'warm, glowing' (Call. Fr. anon. 69, AP 5, 219), in H. = ἰταμόν, λαμπρόν, βλοσυρόν, ἀναιδές, πανοῦργον 'rash, splendid, hairy, shameless, knavish', with θαλυκρέονται· ψεύδονται 'they are deceived' (H.). ◄PG► •DER θαλύ<πτ>εσθαι· φλέγεσθαι 'to be burnt [up]'; θαλύψαι· θάλψαι, πυρῶσαι 'to [soften by] heat, burn'; θαλυσσόμενος· φλεγόμενος 'who is burnt (up)' (H.).
•ETYM Beside the present θαλύσσομαι, the aorist had θαλύψαι (Schulze GGA 1897: 874; Schwyzer: 704). Brugmann connected it with ►θάλπω 'to heat', assuming that -π- represents k^w*, and that its labial element found as -υ- in θαλύσσομαι, etc. in the preceding syllable, after which -κ- was retained. Although (as Frisk remarks) this is not convincing from an IE point of view, such mechanisms are well-known for substrate words. Both θάλπ- and θαλύκ- can be explained as from *tal-uk^w-, while in θαλυκρός we have retention of k after u. See on ►θάλπω. The form ἀλυκρός is unclear; see ►ἀλέα 1 'warmth'.

θαλῦσια [n.pl.] 'offerings of first fruits' (I 534, Theoc. 7, 3). ◄IE *d^hh_2l- 'flourish, grow green'►

•DER θαλύσιος ἄρτος 'bread from the first corn' (Ath. 3, 114a; cf. on Θαργήλια), θαλυσιὰς ὁδός 'the road to the Th.' (Theoc. 7, 31); patronynicon Θαλυσιάδης (Δ 458).

•ETYM From θάλλω, etc., first from an adjective *θαλύς, -ύ (found only in θαλέων [gen.pl.] and θάλεια [f.], of δαῖς, ἑορτή), as was observed by Solmsen 1901: 37 and Solmsen Glotta 1 (1909): 80. On the formation, see Fraenkel 1912: 124 and Chantraine 1933: 41f. On the Thalysia see Nilsson 1941(1): 468.

θαμά [adv.] 'often' (Il.). ◄?►

•DER θαμάκις (: πολλάκις) 'id.' (Pi.). θαμινά 'id.' (Pi., Hp.), adjective θαμινός 'crowded, close-set' (Call.; cf. πυκινά, -ινός) with θαμινάκις (Hp.); also θαμεινός after αἰπεινός (h. Merc. 44). Next to θαμά stands the u-stem *θαμύς (τάχα : ταχύς) in θαμέες [pl.] 'close-set, crowded', θαμειαί [f.] (Hom.; on the accent Schwyzer: 385); cf. also Θαμυ-κλῆς PN (Bechtel 1917b: 197). Compar. θαμύντεραι· πυκνότεραι (H.), cf. ἰθύντατα. Here also θάμυρις (H.), probably after πανήγυρις, by which H. glosses it; also as a PN (B 595, inscr.); cf. Bechtel 1917a: 25f.; further ὁδοὺς θαμυρούς· τὰς λεωφόρους 'highways'; θαμυρίζει· ἀθροίζει, συνάγει 'brings together' (H.); also intr. (BCH 50, 401, Thespiae). Denominative of θαμά: θαμίζω [v.] 'to frequent' (Il.; cf. Schwyzer: 736).

•ETYM It was previously assumed that θαμ-ά was a reduced grade beside ►θημών, ►θωμός, but this is impossible, since the latter two derive from θη- in τί-θη-μι. This had a zero grade θε- < *d^hh_1-, as in ►θέμεθλα, ►θέμις. Therefore, the etymology remains unknown.

θάμβος [n.] 'amazement, fright' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►

•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἀ-θαμβής 'fearless, undaunted' (Ibyc., B.) with ἀθαμβία, -ίη 'fearlessness' (Democr. 215); back-formation ἄθαμβος 'undaunted' (Democr. 216), also as a PN (Delphi); cf. ἔκθαμβος below; see Schwyzer: 469.

•DER θαμβαλέος (Nonn.). Denominative verbs: 1. θαμβέω, -ῆσαι, also with prefixes like ἐκ-, 'be amazed, be frightened' (Il.), Hell. also trans. 'amaze, frighten' (LXX), together with θάμβ-ησις, -ημα (Aq.), ἔκθαμβος (Plb.). 2. θαμβαίνω intr. 'id.' (Pi.). 3. θαμβεύω trans. 'id.', together with -ευτής (Aq.).

•ETYM Beside θάμβος, Greek has an archaic-looking perfect ►τέθηπα 'I am perplexed' with the thematic root aorist ταφεῖν (ταφών, τάφε; Il.); from the latter derives τάφος [n.] = θάμβος (Od., Ibyc.). Secondary to τέθηπα are θήπω· ἐπιθυμῶ, θαυμάζω; also, ►θώψ. However, a nasal did not voice a following stop in Greek; Barton Glotta 71 (1993): 1-9 incorrectly assumes a complicated series of developments; ὀμφαλός disproves the rule ND < ND^h, and ἄνθρωπος is a Pre-Greek word; the rule has been rejected on several occasions. Moreover, there is no evidence for e-vocalism (viz. *d^hemb^h-), as we would expect if the word were of IE origin, so the whole approach thus far has been wrong: θάμβος and τέθηπα cannot be genetically related. The group is further isolated; Go. af-dobn [ipv.] 'become speechless' cannot be connected. Just as doubtful is the connection with a Germ. group for 'hit', e.g. ME dabben 'hit softly', MoHG tappen. The variation θαπ-/ ταφ-/ θαμβ- (with Pre-Greek prenasalization), to which *θαϝ- in θαῦμα, etc. also belong, cannot be IE. The rare form θωπ- is a variant of *θαυπ-. The whole group is of Pre-Greek origin; thus already Kuiper 1956: 225 and Fur. passim.

θάμιξ [?] · ἀλώπηξ 'fox' (H.). ◄?►

•ETYM Improbable hypothesis by von Blumenthal 1930: 36ff.; see WH s.v.

θάμνος [m.] 'bush, shrub' (Il.). ◄PG►

•VAR Also [f.], after other tree names.

•DER Diminutive θαμνίσκος [m.] (Dsc.), θαμνῖτις 'shrub-like' (Nic. Th. 883), θαμνώδης 'id.' (Thphr.), θαμνάς = ῥίζα (EM). Beside it θάμνη (-α) [f.] 'wine from pressed grapes (?)' (Herod. 6, 90, Gp.).

•ETYM The word θάμνος exists next to θαμινός and θαμά just as πυκνός next to πυκινός and πύκα; the barytonesis is caused by the substantivization (cf. Schulze 1933a: 124[1]). For the meaning, cf. the explanation in H.: θάμνοι· δασέα καὶ πυκνὰ δένδρα 'dense and thick trees'. Not, as per Alessio Studi etruschi 18 (1941): 414, related to Lat. tamnus; see WH s.v. With its ending in -αμν(ος), the word seems Pre-Greek; its meaning makes this quite possible.

θάνατος [m.] 'death' (Il.). ◄IE *$d^h(u)enh_2$- 'die'►

•COMP Compounds like ἀ-θάνατος 'immortal' (Il.), θανατη-φόρος 'death-bringing' (A.; -η- metrically and analogically conditioned, Schwyzer 438f.).

•DER Adjectives: θανάσιμος 'bringing death, going to die' (IA; on the formation Arbenz 1933: 17 and 70f.; rarely θανατήσιμος, op. cit. 78f.); also θανατώδης (Hp.), θανατόεις (S., E.), θανατήσιος (Afric.; after βιοτήσιος, βροτήσιος), θανατικός (D. S., Plu.), θανατηρός (Eust.); θανατούσια (sc. ἱερά) [pl.] 'festival for the dead' (Luc.; after γερούσιος). Denominative verbs: 1. θανατόω 'kill, bring to death, sentence to death' (IA) with θανάτωσις; 2. θανατάω 'like to die', also 'be dying' (Pl.); 3. θανατιάω 'id.' (Luc.). Old perfect τέθνηκα 'I am dead', plur. τέθνᾰμεν, ptc. τεθνηώς, τεθνεώς, Aeol. inf. τεθνάκην, with the thematic root aorist ἔθανον 'I died' (Il.), the fut. θανοῦμαι (Il.) and a present θνηισκω (inscr.), θνήσκω (mss.), Aeol. θναισκω (Hdn. Gr. 2, 79); in prose mostly ἀπο-θνήσκω; also with other prefixes, e.g. κατα-θνήσκω, -θανεῖν, -τέθνηκα (all Il.); on the function of the prefix see Schwyzer 1950: 268f. Verbal adjective θνητός 'mortal' (Il.). Thence θνήσιμος (only Arg. to S. OT 7) with θνησιμαῖον 'cadaver' (LXX); in the same meaning also θνᾱσίδιον, θνησ(ε)ίδιον (Lesbos, Ael.; Schwyzer: 270). Verbal subst. θνῆσις 'dying, mortality' (medic.), εὐθνήσιμος 'preparing a soft death' (A. Ag. 1294) from εὖ θνήσκειν; cf. εὐθάνατος, -τέω, -σία.

•ETYM The comparison with the Skt. aorist á-dhvanī-t 'he disappeared' and the ptc. dhvān-tá- 'dark' previously led to a reconstruction IE $d^hu̯enh_2$-, but this etymological connection is not certain. The Greek forms θαν-(εῖν) and θάνα-(τος), θνᾱ-(τός) point to a reconstruction $*d^hnh_2$-, $*d^hnh_2$-e- beside $*d^hnh_2$-C-. LIV^2 therefore combines them under a root $*d^henh_2$- 'sich in Lauf setzen, sich davonmachen', to which also belong Indo-Iranian forms like Ved. dhánvati 'flows', prá dhanvati (YV) 'dies', as well as ToA tsnāntär [subj.] 'flow'. Semantically, this is possible, but not wholly convincing.

θάπτα [f.] · μυῖα, Κρῆτες 'fly (Cretan)' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Fur.: 388, etc. compares λάττα < *λαπτα (glossed as μυῖα, Πολυρρήνιοι H.), δάπτης (Lyc.), and Lat. tabānus 'horse-fly'. However, see ► θάπτω on Latte.

θάπτω [v.] 'to bury' (Il.). ◂IE? $*d^hemb^h$- 'dig, bury'▸ •VAR Aor. θάψαι, pass. ταφῆναι, also -θῆναι, perf. pass. τέθαμμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, συν-, κατα-.
•DER τάφος [m.] 'burying, tomb' (Il.), ταφή 'id.' (IA); derived from this the hypostases ἐν-, ἐπι-τάφιος 'ptng. to a burial' together with ἐνταφιάζω, ἐνταφιαστής (LXX, pap.); ἐπιταφέω [v.] 'to attend a burial' (inscr.); ταφήϊος 'ptng. to a burial' (Od.), ταφεύς 'grave-digger' (S.), ταφ(ε)ών '(place) of a tomb' (inscr.), ταφικόν 'burial costs' (pap.). τάφρος [f.] (on the genus see Schwyzer 1950: 34[1]) 'ditch (for fortification, etc.)' (Il.) together with ταφρεύω 'make a ditch' (Att.), whence ταφρ-εία, τάφρ-ευμα, -ευσις, -ευτής; rare τάφρη 'id.' (Ion.); τράφος (Tabl. Heracl. I, 130). Uncertain θάπτ<ρ>α· μνῆμα (cod. μυῖα). Κρῆτες 'monument (Cret.)' (H.); see Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 196f.
•ETYM It has traditionally been compared with Arm. damb-an 'tomb', starting from IE $*d^h\mathring{m}b^h$-. Greek would also have generalized the zero grade θαπ-, ταφ- < *θαφ-, and the full grade $*d^hemb^h$- would have been eliminated in both languages. However, Clackson 1994: 120f. doubts that the words are old. Armenian and Greek could well be borrowings; IE origin is uncertain.

Θαργήλια [n.pl.] Ionic-Attic festival before the harvest, connected with the cult of Apollo (Hippon., Archil.), also Ταργήλια (Milete). ◂PG(V)▸
•DER Θαργηλιών (Ταργ-) month name (IA), Θαργήλιος (Ταργ-) PN (Ion.). Beside it θάργηλος, acc. to Crates apud Ath. 3, 114a name of a bread, which was otherwise called θαλύσιος (ἄρτος) (s. θαλύσια), also name of a pot (χύτρα) with cooked fruits, which was considered a symbol of fertility (Suid., H., EM 443, 19).
•ETYM Pre-Greek origin is demonstrated by the variant forms with T-.

θάρνυμαι ⇒ θορός and θρέομαι.

θάρσος [n.] 'confidence, courage, audacity' (Il.). ◂IE $*d^hers$- 'bold'▸ •VAR Att. θάρρος (partly a reshaping of Hom. θάρσος, etc. acc. to Leumann 1950: 115); Aeol. θέρσος.
•COMP E.g. εὐ-θαρσής 'of good courage' (A.), θερσι-επής 'talking courageously' (B.; on the first member Schwyzer: 448).
•DER θαρσαλέος, -ρρ- 'with confidence, courageous' (Il.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 253f.), Θερσίτης PN (Hom., etc.), θαρσήεις 'courageous' (Call., Nonn.; innovation, see Schwyzer: 527); denominative verb θαρσέω (-ρρ-), aor. θαρσῆσαι 'be courageous' (Il.; cf. Schwyzer: 724, Chantraine 1942: 349; hardly from εὐθαρσέω as per Leumann l.c.) together with θαρρητικός (Arist.). Beside θάρσος, θέρσος we have the adjective θρασύς 'audacious, courageous, bold' (since Il.), often as a first member, e.g. θρασυκάρδιος 'with audacious heart' (Il.), Rhod. Θαρσύ-βιος, Ther. Θhαρ(ρ)ύ-μαqhος (more forms in Schwyzer: 284); thence θρασύτης 'boldness' (IA), Θρασώ epithet of Athena (Lyc.), denominative verb θρασύνω, θαρσύνω, -ρρ- 'encourage' (Il.) with θάρσυνος 'with confidence' (Il.; deverbal; cf. Schwyzer 491); compar. θρασίων (Alcm.), θρασύτερος, superl. -ύτατος (Att.); see Seiler 1950: 55f. Cf. also ► ἀτάσθαλος.

•ETYM An exact correspondence to θρασύς would be Skt. dhṛṣú-, but the latter is only attested in grammarians; the typical form is dhṛṣṇú- 'bold' (RV), from dhṛṣṇóti [3sg.pres.] 'be audacious'. The s-stem θέρσος (for which secondarily θάρσος, θράσος by influence of θρασύς) has no parallel in Sanskrit. Greek has only the denominative verbs θαρσέω, θαρσύνω, while other IE languages have primary formations: Skt. dhṛṣ-ṇ-ó-ti, perf. da-dhárṣa, Go. ga-dars 'dare, τολμῶ', Lith. drį̃sti 'dare' (with infixed nasal, cf. OPr. dyrsos [adj.] 'courageous, skillful').

θάσσω 'sit'. •VAR θαάσσω. ⇒ θᾶκος.

θάσσων 'quicker'. •VAR Att. θάττων. ⇒ ταχύς.

θαῦμα [n.] 'wonder, astonishment' (Il.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Hdt. et al. θῶμα (mss. also θῶυμα; see below).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in θαυματο-ποιός 'wonder-worker = juggler' (Pl., D.).
•DER θαυματός 'wonderful' (Hes. Sc. 165, h. Hom., Pi.) with θαυμάσιος 'id.' (IA; Schwyzer: 466), from which θαυμασιότης (Hp.); θαυματόεις 'id.' (Man.); Θαύμας, -αντος (Hes.; Schwyzer: 526, Chantraine 1933: 269). Denominative verbs: 1. θαυμαίνω 'wonder, admire' (θ 108, h. Ven. 84) with Dor. Θωμάντας (Phleius); 2. θαυμάζω 'id.' (Il.; on the formation Schwyzer: 734) with θαυμαστής 'admirer' and θαυμαστικός (Arist.), θαυμασμός 'admiration' (Hell.), θαύμακτρον probably 'money paid to see a conjurer's tricks' (Sophr. 120; cf. Chantraine 1933: 332); 3. θαυματίζομαι· ἐκπλήττομαι 'I am astonished' (H.). PN Θώμων (Boeot.); cf. γνῶμα : γνώμων et al.; see Bechtel 1917b: 214.
•ETYM The word θαῦμα belongs to the group of θάμβος, τέθηπα, etc. with Pre-Greek labial/ ϝ (Fur.: 228-33). This also explains θῶμα with αυ/ω, beside which (with "etymological" notation) there is also θῶυμα in Hdt.; the variation cannot be explained in IE terms. Thus Kuiper 1956: 225 and Fur.: 236, 242. It is possible, though by no means certain, that θαῦμα, etc. are verbal nouns of a word for 'see, observe' in ► θέα 'looking at', θεάομαι 'behold', etc.

θάψος [f.] name of a plant, 'fustic, Rhus Cotinus', used for dyeing yellow (Theocr.). ◂LW ?▸
•VAR Also θαψία ῥίζα (Thphr.); θαψία [f.] 'deadly carrot, Thapsia garganica' (Arist., Thphr.).
•DER θάψινος 'yellow-colored' (Ar.).
•ETYM Identical with the name of the peninsula Thapsos (on the eastern coast of Sicily), or derived from it. See Strömberg 1940: 127.

θέα [f.] 'sight, aspect, spectacle' (IA). ◂PG▸ •VAR Ion. θέη (Syrac. θάα?; see Kaibel 1899-1901(1): 200).
•COMP As a first member in ►θεωρός 'spectator, envoy at a festival', s.v.
•DER PN Θᾶΐς [f.] (D. S.). Verb θεάομαι, Ion. θηέομαι, Dor. θαέομαι (with θάμεθα [Sophr.] and other contracted forms; see Bechtel 1921, 2: 191) 'to look at, behold' (Il.), also with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, κατα-, συν-. Several deverbal nouns: 1. θέαμα, θέημα 'sight, spectacle' (Semon., A.); 2. θέασις 'contemplation, insight' (Gal., Porph.); 3. θατύς (Dor. < *θαατύς)· ἴκριον (= 'bank in a theatre'), θεωρεῖον, ἐς θατύν· εἰς θεωρίαν H.; 4. θέατρον, θέητρον 'place for spectators, theatre' (IA) with several compounds and derivatives, e.g. ἀμφι-θέατρος [adj.] 'having place for spectators around' (e.g of ἱππόδρομος, στοά), substantivized -ον 'amphitheatre' (D. H., Str.), θεατρικός, θεατρίζω, θεατρισμός; 5. θεατής, θεητής 'spectator' (IA) with θεατικός (Arr.); 6. θηητήρ (φ 397), θατήρ (B. 9, 23) 'id.'; 7. θεήμων 'id.' (APl.).
•ETYM At the basis of θέα, etc. is *θᾱϝᾱ. In Ionic-Attic, *θᾱϝᾱ gave θέα, where one would expect contraction of two like vowels after loss of ϝ (see the discussion in Peters 1980a: 301f.). Other primary nouns are probably θῆβος (= θῆϝος)· θαῦμα and θήγεια (= θήϝεια)· θαυμαστά, ψευδῆ and θηταλά (= θηϝαλά)· θαυμαστά, ψεύδεσιν ὅμοια (all H.). The verbs θᾱ(ϝ)έομαι, θη(ϝ)έομαι (with αο > εο) and the development giving θεάομαι are discussed in Szemerényi SMEA 3 (1967): 71-72. They can be taken as denominatives, or alternatively as deverbatives (Schwyzer: 720) with θέη, θέα as back-formations (this direction seems to be indicated by the chronology of the attestations)? No IE cognates; the word is Pre-Greek, as is proven by the variations (see ►θαῦμα, ►θάμβος). Incorrectly, Szemerényi Glotta 33 (1954): 256, who traces *θᾱϝᾱ to IE *d^h*m̥su̯ā*.

θειλόπεδον ⇒ εἰλόπεδον.

θείνω [v.] 'to slay', also 'to kill' (Il.). ◂IE *g^{wh}en- 'strike, slay'▸ •VAR Reduplicated aor. πε-φν-εῖν (Il.), med. ἐπέφατο (cod. ἀπ-)· ἀπέθανεν 'he died' (H.); beside it also, probably as an innovation, the thematic root aor. θενεῖν (E., Ar.) and the ptc. θείνας of the s-aorist (Υ 481); fut. θενῶ (Ar.), 3sg. perf. pass. πέφαται, inf. πεφάσθαι (Il.), together with fut. pass. πεφήσεται (Ο 140, etc.).
•COMP The verbal adjective as a second member in compounds, e.g. ἀρηΐ-φατος (see also on ►διφάσιος).
•DER Beside it ►φόνος [m.] 'murder', s.v.; cf. also Ἀργεϊφόντης.
•ETYM From this root, Indo-European formed an athematic root present: 3sg. Skt. hánti = Av. jainti = Hitt. ku̯en-zi 'he slays, kills', IE *g^{wh}én-ti. This was replaced by a thematic root formation: YAv. janaiti 'kill', Lith. genù 'to drive (cattle), hunt', OCS ženǫ 'to drive, pursue', as well as perhaps Arm. ǰnem 'slay' (which may instead be denominative from ǰin 'stick'). Other formations are OIr. gonim 'to wound, kill' (iterative) and Lat. -fendō in dē-, of-fendō (with a suffixal -d-). The reduplicated aorist is also found outside Greek, e.g. in Indo-Iranian: Av. auua-jaynat̰ (if not an intensive) 'he struck' = πέφνε. The perfect formations also correspond: Skt. 3sg. ja-ghā́n-a < IE *g^{wh}*e-*g^{wh}on-; πέ-φα-ται and Skt. 3pl. ja-ghn-úḥ < *g^{wh}*e-*g^{wh}n-. Verbal adjectives: Skt hatá- = Av. jata- = -φατος, IE *g^{wh}n-to-. The full grade thematic yodpresent θείνω was connected (cf. Frisk) with Lith. geniù (inf. genė́ti) 'to prune branches' (< IE *g^{wh}en-i̯ō), beside OCS žьnjǫ (inf. žęti) 'to reap, mow'. However, as Derksen 2008 s.v. *žę̂ti II remarks, the Balto-Slavic words point to a root-final laryngeal. Arm. ǰnǰem 'to wipe off, clean' could belong here phonetically as well, but differs in meaning. Connection with Alb. gjan 'to hunt, follow' is very doubtful. On the meaning of the IE root, see recently García Ramón 1998: 139-154.

θεῖον [n.] 'brimstone' (Il., IA). ◂IE *d^h*ues-* 'smoke'▸ •VAR Epic θέειον, also θήϊον (χ 493).
•DER Diminutivum θε(ι)άφιον (H., Tz.; θέαφος Eust.), adjective θειώδης 'sulphuric' (Str., medic.); denominative verb θειόω, θεόω, epic θεειόω (also prefixed with δια-, ἐκ-, περι-) 'treat with sulphur' (Od., medic.); thence θεώματα· τὰ περικαθαρτήρια 'purificatory offerings' (H.).
•ETYM The basic form was θέειον, whence θεῖον by hyphaeresis and, by further loss of the ι, θεόω, θεάφιον. The hapax θήϊον arose by metrical lengthening and change of suffix. Perhaps Hom. θέειον derives from *θϝέhειον; it would be a substantivized adjective from a noun *θϝέhος [n.], properly 'smoke', formed from a verbal root *d^h*ues-* 'smoke, breathe' (cf. LIV² s.v.) in Lith. dvė̃sti 'breathe, blow'. Not connected to ►θεός. Cf. ►θύω 2.

θεῖος [m.] 'uncle, father's or mother's brother' (Att.). ◂ONOM▸ •DER Innovations are πρόθειος 'great-uncle' (Laodicea; after proavus) and θεία [f.] 'aunt' (pap.; for τηθίς acc. to Schwyzer 1950: 31).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic *θη, with a suffix -ειος? Cf. reduplicated τήθη. From θεῖος came Ital. zio 'id.'.

θέλγω [v.] 'to enchant, beguile, cheat' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. θέλξαι, pass. θελχθῆναι, fut. θέλξω (Od.); iterative ipf. θέλγεσκ' (γ 264).
•COMP Rarely with prefix (δια-, ἐπι-, κατα, παρα-). θέλξι- as a first member in governing compounds, e.g. θελξι-επής 'with enchanting words' (B.), θελξί-φρων 'enchanting the mind' (E. [lyr.]); see Schwyzer 443.
•DER θελκτήρ 'enchanter, etc.' (h. Hom. 16, 4) with θελκτήριον 'charm' (Il.), adj. θελκτήριος 'enchanting' (A., E.); θέλκτωρ 'id.' (A. Supp. 1040 [lyr.]); θέλκτρον = θελκτήριον (S. Tr. 585), θέλγητρον 'charm, spell' (E.); θέλγμα 'id.' (sch., H.); θέλκταρ (cod. θέρκαλ)· θέλγμα (H.), Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 29; (κατά-)θελξις 'charm' (Plu., Luc., Ael.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Several unconvincing hypotheses: that it is related to Lith. žvelgiù 'look at' (de Saussure MSL 8 (1894): 443, who connects it as 'enchanting by an evil look'); to Skt. hvárate 'go obliquely' < *$ǵ^h$uel- with Gr. enlargement -γ- (Ehrlich 1910: 29); to Gm. words like OE dolg, OHG tolc 'wound' (Havers IF 28 (1911): 190ff.; see also on ἀσελγής).

θελεμόν [adj.] epithet of πῶμα 'drink' (A. Supp. 1027 [lyr.]) of unknown meaning, glossed by H. as οἰκτρόν, ἥσυχον 'pitiable, quiet', connected with ►θέλω by Hdn. Gr. 1, 171. ◂PG?▸

•ETYM Unexplained. Cf. θελημ(ν)ά (τε καὶ στερεωπά) Emp. 21, 6; taken as "supporting, basic", on which see Solmsen 1909: 63. See discussion on ►-θελυμνος. Fur.: 317 thinks the word is Pre-Greek (due to suffix -εμος).

-θελυμνος [adj.] in προ-θέλυμνος, epithet of δένδρεα (I 541), of χαῖται (K 15), of σάκος (N 130); post-Hom. of various objects (δρῦς, καρήατα). ◂PG▸ •COMP Also in τετρα-θέλυμνος epithet of σάκος (O 479 = χ 122); cf. τριθέλυμνος = τρίπτυχος (Eust. 849, 5).
•DER The simplex is unknown, but Sturz read it in Emp. 21, 6 for traditional θελημ(ν)ά (Diels and others: θελεμνά).
•ETYM We may compare the prefix in προ-θέλυμνος with πρό-ρριζος 'of which the root is gone, uprooted', Lat. prŏ-fundus 'of which the bottom is removed, deep', Skt. pra-parṇa- 'whose leaves have fallen off, stripped of the leaves'. The second member of προ-θέλυμνος, which can be reconstructed as *θέλυμα as well as *θελυμνον (-ος), has been interpreted as 'base' since antiquity. Thus, προ-θέλυμνος would mean 'the base (bottom) of which is removed; without foundation', which might fit in all occurrences except N 130 (after this Nonn. D. 22, 183; 2, 374). Improbably, Wackernagel 1916: 237ff. (with criticism of older views), who recognizes in προ-θέλυμνος a variant of τετρα-θέλυμνος 'with four layers', with προ- as the Aeolic parallel of τρα- from *πτϝρα- (cf. τρά-πεζα). The glosses of H., ἀθέλιμνοι· κακοί; ἀθέλημον ἄκουσμα· κακόν are unclear, as is θέλεμνον· ὅλον ἐκ ῥιζῶν (Latte apud Mayrhofer KEWA 2: 94 fn.). Krahe Die Antike 15 (1939): 181 thinks the word is Pre-Greek. This is without a doubt correct, because of the suffix (-υμνος). Older attempts (e.g., Wackernagel above, or the comparison with Sanskrit dharúṇa- [n.] by Mayrhofer) should therefore be discarded.

θέλω ⇒ ἐθέλω.

θέμεθλα [n.pl.] 'fundaments, base', also metaph. (Il.). ◂IE *d^heh_1- 'put, make'▸ •DER Also θεμείλια [n.pl.] 'id.' (Il.), a metrically lengthened form of θεμέλια, adjective θεμέλιος 'belonging to the fundaments', as a substantive (sc. λίθος) 'foundation-stone' (Att.) with θεμελιόω 'lay the foundation' (X.), θεμελίωσις 'fundament' (LXX). A poetical-archaizing back-formation is θέμειλον (AP) with the same meaning, -α (verse inscr. Adana).
•ETYM Formations with θλο- and λο- from a nominal m-stem. Cf. θεμούς s.v. ►θεμόω. On the formation of θεμέλιος, see also Frisk Eranos 41 (1943): 51ff. Cf. also ►θεμέρη, ►θέμις. See also Rix 1994: 35-53.

θεμέρη [adj.] · βεβαία, σεμνή, εὐσταθής 'firm, revered, well-based'; θέμερον· σεμνόν. ἀφ' οὗ καὶ τὸ σεμνύνεσθαι θεμερύνεσθαι 'revered; hence, σ. 'to be revered' is also called θ.' (H.). ◂IE *d^heh_1- 'put, make'▸ •COMP As a first member in θεμερῶπις, epithet of Ἁρμονίη (Emp. 122, 2), of αἰδώς (A. Pr. 134 [lyr.]); θεμερόφρονας· συνετούς, σώφρονας 'understanding, wise' (H.).
•DER As a simplex only θεμέρᾳ ὀπί (v.l. Pi. N. 7, 83), θεμε[ρώτε]ρα (IG 14, 1018: 3 [IVp], if supplied correctly).

•ETYM Beside θέμερος (or θεμερός) 'solid, firm' stands *θέμιστος in Θεμιστο-κλῆς (cf. Ἀριστο-κλῆς), like κράτιστος from κρατερός (Frisk Eranos 48 (1950): 6). The basis would be nominal θεμ-, as found in θεμούς (s.v. ►θεμόω), ►θέμεθλα, θεμέλια. It is doubtful that we should assume a separate word θέμερος in the meaning σεμνός 'revered'. The IE etymology, too, is not without doubts.

θέμις [f., n.] 'justice, law, custom', also goddess of justice (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Different oblique forms: gen. θέμιστος (β 68; Thess. inscr.), dat. -ιστι (O 87; Thess. inscr.), acc. -ιστα (E 761, Y 4); θέμιδος (A. Pr. 18), θέμιτος (Pi. O. 13, 8); rarely also θέμιος (Hdt. 2, 50; v.l. -ιδος), θέμεως (inscr. Metropolis); acc. θέμιν (Hes.), voc. Θέμι (O 93). Plur. θέμιστες, acc. -ιστας, etc. 'statutes, (divine) laws, oracles' (Hom., Hes., Thgn., Pi.).
•DIAL Myc. te-mi, gen. ti-mi-to; cf. Ruipérez Minos 5 (1957): 176f., 181ff.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in θεμι-σκόπος 'guarding justice' (Pi.), θεμισ-κρέων 'ruling through justice' (Pi.), θεμιστο-πόλος 'protecting the laws, obeying the oracles' (h. Cer. 103, inscr. Delphi IIIa). As a second member e.g. in ἄ-θεμις 'lawless, unlawful' (Pi., E.), ἀ-θέμιτος 'id.' (Hdt.), ἀ-θέμιστος 'id.' (Il.), also ἀ-θεμίστιος (Od.; metrical variant).
•DER θεμιστός (A. Th. 694 [lyr.]; after ἀ-θέμιστος); θεμιτός in οὐ θεμιτόν = οὐ θέμις (IA); Θεμίστιος epithet of Zeus, 'Lord of the θέμιστες' (Plu.); also month name (Thessaly); θεμιστεῖος 'regarding the θ.' (Pi.); θεμιστοσύναι = θέμιστες (Orph. H. 79, 6). Denominative verbs: 1. θεμιστεύω 'to proclaim the laws, oracles' (Od.) with θεμιστεία 'oracle-giving' (Str.). 2. θεμιτεύω 'to behave lawfully' (E. Ba. 79 [lyr.]). 3. θεμιζέτω· μαστιγούτω, νομοθετείτω. Κρῆτες 'to flog, frame laws (Cret.)' (H.); to be changed in *θεμισσέτω (= Paus. Gr. Fr. 202) acc. to Bechtel 1921, 2: 786; aor. ptc. θεμισσάμενος (Pi.). Several PNs, e.g. Θεμιστο-κλῆς (see on ►θέμερος).
•ETYM In Av. dā-mi- [f.] 'creation', also 'creator' ([m.] and [f.]), we seem to have a formation corresponding to θέμις. Cf. the same difference between θέ-σις, -θε-τος as opposed to -dā-ti-, dā-ta- 'basis, justice, law' (= θέμις). The remarkable formations θέμιστες, θέμιστος, etc. are problematic; the explanation by Schulze as a compound of θεμι- and στᾱ- 'stand' leads to unsurmountable difficulties, acc. to Frisk s.v. However, C. J. Ruijgh suggested (pers. comm.) that interchange between i-stem forms and forms in -ι(σ)τ- seems to point to Pre-Greek origin. Acc. to Fraenkel, the occasional neuter forms originated from synonymous expressions like δέον, καλόν, προσῆκον; this is possible, but this may be an inheritance from Pre-Greek as well. On the meaning of θέμις, see Vos 1956.

θεμόω [v.] only aor. θέμωσε in (νῆα) … φέρε κῦμα (…), θέμωσε δὲ χέρσον ἱκέσθαι (ι 486, 542). ◂?▸
•DER Denominative verb to θεμός, which is only found in θεμούς· διαθέσεις, παραινέσεις 'dispositions, exhortations' (H.) and in the PNs Θέμ-ανδρος, Θεμό-θεος (Bechtel 1917b: 201f.).
•ETYM The usual rendering with 'to cause, enable' or simply 'drove ashore (landwards)' (LSJ) is too abstract; for a denominative verb, we would rather expect 'to provide with θεμός' vel sim. The etymology remains unknown.

θέναρ, -αρος [n.] 'palm of the hand' (also metaph.), 'sole of the foot' (Il.). ⋖IE *d^hen-r 'palm of the hand'⋗

•COMP Also as a second member, e.g. ὀπισθέναρ [n.] 'back of the hand' (Poll.) for *ὀπισθο-θέναρ, παραιθένατα· τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν μικρῶν δακτύλων παρὰ τὸ θέναρ, ἤγουν ἐπὶ τὸν καρπόν 'what [runs] from the small fingers along the palm, or rather up to the wrist' (H.).

•DER Denominative verbs: θεναρίζει· τύπτει 'strikes'; ἐνθεναρίζει· ἐγχειρεῖ 'undertakes, attacks' (H.).

•ETYM Old word for 'palm of the hand', also found in Gm.: OHG tenar [m.], tenra [f.] 'id.' (thematic derivations of the r-stem). Hypothetical further combinations in Pok. 249.

θεοκόλος [m.] 'servant of a god, priest' (Dyme II[a]). ⋖IE *k^wel- 'turn, move around'⋗ •VAR Also θεηκόλος (Schwyzer: 438).

•DER Denominative θεοκολέω [v.] (also θεη-); -ία, -εών (Hell.).

•ETYM Innovated on the model of βουκόλος 'cow-herd', but occasionally, the expected form θεο-πόλος, -έω is found (Pl. Lg. 909d, Phot., Suid.; cf. αἰ-πόλος).

θεοπρόπος [m.] 'fortune-teller, seer', also as an adjective 'prophetic'. ⋖IE *prep- 'appear'⋗ •DER θεοπροπέω (only ptc.) 'prophesy' and θεοπρόπιον, -ία 'prophecy, oracle' (Il.).

•ETYM From ►θεός 'god' and ►πρέπειν 'to catch the eye, be conspicuous'. Semantically analyzed by Bechtel 1914 s.v. as "the one who appears from god".

θεός [m., f.] 'god, goddess' (Il.). ⋖IE *$d^h(e)h_1s$- 'god'⋗

•COMP Myc. te-o /t^he^hos/. Very frequent in compounds, e.g. ἄ-θεος, θεο-ειδής; θεόσ-δοτος after Διόσ-δοτος; on the form θεσ- see ►θέσκελος, θέσπις.

•DER 1. θεά [f.] 'goddess' (epic; see Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 25; on θεά and θεός [f.] in Hom. see Humbach MSS 7 (1955): 46ff.). 2. θέαιναι [pl.] 'goddesses' (after τέκταιναι et al.; in Hom. as metrical filling; not an archaic form as per Chantraine REGr. 47: 287[1]). 3. θεῖος 'divine' (Il.; cf. below) with θειώδως [adv.] (pap.), θειότης 'godliness' (LXX, NT, Plu.), θειάζω 'prophesy, worship as a god' (Th.), also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-θειάζω 'swear by the gods' together with (ἐπι-)θειασμός (Th.) 4. θεϊκός 'id.' (late). 5. Denominative verb θεόω, -όομαι 'turn into a god, become a god' (Call.), mostly with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-θεόω 'id.' (pap., Plb., Plu.) together with ἀποθέωσις (Str.).

•ETYM The connection with Arm. di-k' [pl.] 'gods' < *d^heh_1s- seems to be generally accepted. The old etymology *θϝεσ-ός with Lith. dvasià 'spirit', MHG getwās 'ghost' has been abandoned, as there is no trace of the ϝ in Greek and since the Armenian word contradicts it. To *d^heh_1s- further belong Lat. fēriae 'festive days', fēstus 'feastly', fānum 'temple' < *fasnom < *d^hh_1s-nom; see Rix Kratylos 14 (1969 [1972]): 179f. and more recent literature in De Vaan 2008: s.vv. We must assume thematicizations of an old s-stem *d^hh_1-s- from the root *d^heh_1-, since Arm. and Lat. presuppose a full grade, while Greek requires a zero grade *d^hh_1s-. The -s- is preserved in θέσ-κελος et al. as well as in θεῖος < *θέσ-ι̯ος.

θεουδής [adj.] 'god-fearing, devout' (Od.). ⋖GR⋗

•DER θεούδεια [f.] 'fear of god' (A. R. 3, 586).

•ETYM Contracted Att. PN Θουδῆς, Θουδιάδου. The form stands for θεο-δϝής < *θεο-δϝειής, which is derived from *δϝεῖος > ►δέος 'fear'. The meaning 'like a god' (in late poets) arose from confusion with θεο-ειδής.

θέπτανος [adj.] · ἁπτόμενος 'touching, [here:] set on fire' (H.). ⋖IE *d^heg^{wh}- 'burn'⋗ •ETYM Compared with Lith. dègtinas 'what has to be burned', which is derived from degù, dègti 'to burn'. Cf. on ►τέφρα 'ashes'. However, acc. to Maas ByzZ 37 (1937): 381 and Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 198f., it is corrupt for θεπταίνων· ἁπτόμενος (Cyr.), which Latte corrects to θ(ε)ιγγάνων. On the origin of suffixal -τανος, Lith. -tinas (IE *-tn̥Ho-?), see Benveniste 1935: 107f.

θεράπων, -οντος [m.] 'attendant, servant; companion' (Il.). ⋖PG⋗

•VAR Aeol. (gramm.) gen. -ονος (see below); also θαραπ- (see Threatte 1980 (index) and Fur.: 352), probably recent.

•DER Diminutive θεραπόντιον (D. L.). θεράπαινα [f.] 'servant, maid' (IA), together with θεραπαινίς, -ίδιον (Pl., Men.); also θεράπνη 'id.' (h. Ap. 157; see below) together with θεραπνίς (AP); unclear is θεραποντίς, epithet of φερνή (A. Supp. 979). Also θέραψ, -απος [m.], mostly plur. 'id.' (E.) together with θεράπιον (Hyp.), -πίς (Pl. Mx. 244e). Denominative verb θεραπεύω 'serve, honour, care for, heal' (since ν 265) with several nouns: θεραπεία, Ion. -ηΐη, θεράπευμα 'serving, etc.' (IA), θεράπευσις 'id.' (Phld.); θεραπευτής 'servant' (IA) with θεραπευτικός (Pl., X., Arist.), also θεραπευτήρ (X., Aristox.; probably Doric, Fraenkel 1912: 54f.) together with θεραπευτρίς (Ph.), -εύτρια (EM); θεραπήϊος = θεραπευτικός (AP), -ηΐς [f.] (Orac. apud Jul. Ep. 88b).

•ETYM Except as 'servant', θεράπνη also occurs in Eur. and successors in the meaning 'dwelling, habitation' (θεράπναι· αὐλῶνες, σταθμοί H.), which is reminiscent of δοῦλος· ἡ οἰκία (H.); one might assume a meaning 'house', whence a collective 'servants'. We can hardly separate the Laconian TN Θεράπνα, -ναι from θεράπνη 'house' (cf. also τέραμνα with the same meaning); this points to Pre-Greek origin of the whole group. The form θεράπνη can be derived from an n-stem θεράπων; the nt-stem may be secondary (cf. θεράπαινα). Van Brock Rev. Hitt. As. 1959: 117-126 compares Hitt. tarpašša-.

θέρμος [m.] 'lupine, Lupinus albus' (middle com., Thphr.). ⋖IE *g^{wh}er-mo- 'warm'⋗

•DER θέρμιον 'id.' (pap.), θέρμινος 'from Lupine' (Luc., Dsc.).

•ETYM Identical with θερμός 'warm', with a regular shift of accent upon substantivization. See Strömberg 1940: 82. See ►θερμός.

θερμός [adj.] 'warm' (Il.). ⋖IE *g^{wh}er-mo- 'warm'⋗

•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. Θερμο-πύλαι (Hdt.; see Risch IF 59 (1949): 267). On ἄ-, ἔκ-, ἔν-θερμος, etc. see below on θέρμη and θερμαίνω.

•DER A. Substantives: 1. θέρμη, also -μᾰ (see Chantraine 1933: 102 and 148) [f.] 'warmth, heat, heat of fever' (IA) with ἄ-θερμος 'without warmth', ἔν-θερμος 'having warmth inside, warm' (Strömberg 1946: 95); θερμίζω [v.] 'to be feverish' (Euboea). 2.

θερμότης 'warmth, heat' (IA). 3. θερμωλή 'id.' (Hp.; Frisk Eranos 41 (1943): 52). 4. θερμέλη· ἡ θέρμη Suid. (Strömberg 1944: 79). 5. θέρμασσα = κάμινος 'oven' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 267; formation unclear, cf. Schwyzer: 525f.).
B. Adjectives: 1. θερμώδης 'lukewarm' (Aret.); HN Θερμώδων, -οντος (Boeotia, Pontos; see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 236; 3, 162). 2. θερμηρός epithet of ποτήριον (H. s.v. κελέβη; to θέρμη?).
C. Verbs: 1. θέρμετο ipf. 'became warm' (Il.), θέρμετε [ipv.] (θ 426; after it Ar. Ra. 1339); on the formation cf. Schwyzer 722f.; 2. θερμαίνω, aor. θερμῆναι 'warm up' (Il.), often with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-θερμαίνω 'heat up completely' (Hp., Arist.) with deverbal ἔκθερμος 'very hot' (Vett. Val.); from there θέρμανσις 'heating' (Arist.) with θερμαντικός 'suited to warm' (Pl., Arist.), θερμασία 'heating, warmth' (Hp., Arist.; cf. Schwyzer 469), θέρμασμα 'warming cuff' (medic.; see Chantraine 1933: 176), θερμάστρᾱ (see θερμάζω below); θερμαντήρ "warmer", 'kettle for boiling water' (Poll.) with θερμαντήριος 'warming' (Hp., inscr.). 3. θερμάζω 'id.' only aor.opt.med. θερμάσσαιο (Nic. Al. 587) together with θερμάστρα [f.] 'furnace' (Call.; also to θερμαίνω); also written θερμαύστρα, by confusion with θερμαυστρίς (θέρμ-), 'fire-tongs' (Arist., H.), cf. πυρ-αύστρα 'id.' (αὔειν 'scoop fire'); also metaph. as the name of a dance (Poll., Ath.) with θερμαυστρίζω (Critias, Luc.); from θερμάστρα: θερμαστρίς (θέρμ-) = θερμαντήρ (Eup., LXX); the forms in -αστρ-, -αυστρ- are not well distinguished, cf. Schulze 1933a: 189; by dissimilation θέρμαστις meaning unclear (Attica IV^a) with θερμάστιον (Aen. Tact.).
•ETYM Inherited adjective, identical with Arm. ǰerm 'warm', Thraco-Phr. germo- (in TNs, e.g. Γέρμη), IE g^{wh}er-mo-;* also, in substantivized function, Alb. zjarm, zjarr 'heat'. With o-vocalism, originally substantival, IE g^{wh}or-mo-* in Skt. gharmá- [m.] 'heat', OPr. gorme 'id.'; secondarily, also adjectival in Av. garəma-, Lat. formus, MoE warm. See ► θέρομαι, ► θέρος.

θέρομαι [v.] 'to become warm, warm oneself' (Il.). ◄IE g^{wh}er-* 'warm'► •VAR Rarely act. θέρω 'to warm' (A. R., Nic.), only present stem except aor. pass. subj. θερέω (ρ 23; for *θερή-ω), fut.ptc. θερσόμενος (τ 507).
•COMP As a second member e g. in εἰλη-θερής, but see on ► εἵλη.
•DER θέρος [n.] 'summer' (Il.), 'harvest' (IA). Thence θέρειος 'belonging to the summer', fem. θερεία, -η (scil. ὥρα) 'summer' (Pi., Hdt.), θερινός 'id.' (IA; after χειμερινός etc., Chantraine 1933: 201), θερόεις 'id.' (Nic. Al. 570; poetic formation, Schwyzer: 528), θεριακός 'fitting for the summer' (ἱμάτια θ. pap. VI^p; after ἡλιακός et al.); θερίδιον 'summer residence' (Jul.), θέρετρον 'id.' (Hp.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 332). Denominative verb θερίζω, aor. θερίσαι 'harvest, mow down' (IA), also intr. 'pass the summer' (X., Arist.), with θερισμός 'harvest' (Eup., X.), θεριστής 'harvester' (Att.) with -ιστικός (pap.), also -ιστήρ 'id.' (Lyc. 840), -ιστήριον 'sickle' (LXX); θέριστρον 'summer tunic' (LXX, pap.), -ίστριον 'id.' (Theoc.; Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 50); θέριστρα [pl.] 'reward for harvesting' (pap.).
•ETYM Formally, Skt. háras- [n.] 'heat' < IE g^{wh}éros-* corresponds exactly with θέρος, like Arm. ǰer 'id.'. The meaning 'summer' is a Greek innovation ('heat' = θέρμη, θάλπος). In the sense of 'harvest', θέρος may be from θερίζω *'to do summertime work'. The thematic root present θέρομαι agrees with OIr. fo-geir 'warms, heats'. The other languages have different formations : Arm. ǰeṙ-nu-m, aor. ǰeṙ-ay 'warm oneself' (Skt. ghr̥-ṇo-ti 'lights, burns' [gramm.]; cf. ghr̥-ṇá- [m.] 'glow, heat'), OCS grěti sę, 1sg. grějǫ sę 'to warm oneself' (gorjǫ, goręti 'burn'), etc.

θέσις [f.] 'situation, position, adoption, custom, etc.' (Alc., Pi.). ◄IE d^{h}eh$_1$-* 'set, make'► •COMP Very frequently as a derivative of prefixed verbs, e.g. διά-, σύν-, ὑπό-θεσις (from δια-τίθημι, etc.).
•DER -θέσιμος in παρα-, περι-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-θέσιμος (from παράθεσις, etc.; cf. Arbenz 1933: 91f.).
•ETYM Greek θέσις corresponds to a Skt. formation which is found only in derivatives and compounds: -(d)hiti-, e.g. ápihiti- = ἐπίθεσις (from api-dhā- = ἐπι-θη-), úpahiti- = ὑπόθεσις (from upa-dhā- = ὑπο-θη-); cf. apihi-ta- = ἐπίθε-τος, upahi-ta- = ὑπόθε-τος; with Av. tarōi-dī-ti- (-ī- secondary) 'putting aside, etc.' from tarō-dā- (= Skt. tiro-dhā- 'id.', ptc. tirohi-ta-); also, late Lat. con-diti-ō 'foundation' (after condi-tus, -tor from con-dō). Additionally, one finds various full grade forms (IE d^{h}eh$_1$-ti-* as opposed to d^{h}h$_1$-ti-*): Go. ga-deds 'putting, adoption' (du suniwe gadedai > 'εἰς υἱοθεσίαν' Eph. 1, 5), missadeþs 'crime', OHG tāt, Av. -δāiti in ni-δāi-ti- (from ni-dā- 'lay down'), etc., Lith. dė̃tis 'load', OCS blago-dětь 'benediction', and probably also Lat. fē-tis* 'settlement, treaty' in fēti-ālis 'war-messenger'. A verbal noun of ► τίθημι; cf. also ► θεσμός and other derivatives.

θέσκελος [adj.] 'marvelous, wonderful' (Il.). ◄IE d^{h}eh$_1$s-* 'god-, holy'► •ETYM Compounded from *θεσ- 'god' (see ► θεός) and ► κέλομαι 'drive', thus properly 'moved by a god'. On the e-vocalism of the second member, see Schwyzer: 449^3. Cf. ► θεσπέσιος, ► θέσφατος.

θεσμός [m.] 'settled agreement, law, custom' (ψ 196). ◄IE d^{h}h$_1$-d^{h}mo-*? 'agreement, custom'► •VAR Dor. τεθμός, Lacon. Arc. Locr. also θεθμός.
•COMP E.g. θεσμο-θέται, ἔνθεσμος.
•DER θέσμιος, τέθμιος, θέθμιος 'lawful, customary' (IA, Dor., etc.); θεσμοσύνη 'lawfulness' (AP).
•ETYM Synonymous Celtic words (OIr. deidmea, MW deddf [f.]) require a pre-form d^{h}ed^{h}mo-* (-ā-). Reduplicated d^{h}e-d^{h}h$_1$-m-o-* is impossible for Greek, because this would give τεθεμός vel sim. Rather, θε- could be the same form of the root as in θέ-σις et al., to which suffixes -θμ- or -σμ- were added within Greek. In θεθμός, the result of Grassmann's Law was removed by influence of θέσις.

θεσπέσιος [adj.] 'divine, superhuman, enormous, wonderful' (Il.). ◄IE d^{h}h$_1$s-* 'god' and sek^w-* 'speak'► •COMP As a first member, e.g. θεσπι-δαές (πῦρ, Il.; see on ► δαίω) and as a PN.
•DER Thence θεσπίζω, aor. θεσπίσαι, -ίξαι (Theoc.) 'prophesy, give an oracle' (Hdt., trag.) with θεσπίσματα [pl.] (rarely [sg.]) 'oracle' (trag.), θεσπιστής 'fortune-teller, prophet' (Man.). Also θέσπις, ιος, -ιν, -ιδα 'id.' (Od.). Here also Θεσπιαί [pl.] town in Boeotia and other TNs.

•ETYM Like e.g. ἀμβρόσιος from ἄμβροτος, θεσπέσιος derives from *θέσ-σπ-ετος, a compound of *θεσ- 'god' (see ►θεός) and the verb (ἐνι-)σπεῖν 'to proclaim' (see ►ἐν(ν)έπω), with a suffix -ετο- (cf. ἄ-σπ-ετος). Thus, it properly meant 'proclaimed by a god'. It is thought that θέσπις was from *θέσ-σπ-ις; however, Hamp MSS 43 (1984): 50f. explains that θεσπι- is the Caland form of θεσπεσιος, and therefore arose by decomposition.

Θεσσαλία [f.] 'Thessaly' (Hdt.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Att. Θετταλ-; Thess. Πετθαλ-, Boeot. Φεττ-.
•DER -ός (Hdt.), PN (B 79, son of Heracles, father of Pheidippos and Antiphos); -ειος (Gal.); fem. -ίς 'Thessalian' (S.); -ιῶτις (Hdt.); -ικός (Hp.). -ικέτης 'serf in T.' (Philocr. Hist.); -ίζω [v.] 'to imitate the Thessalians, speak Thessalian' (Ael.); •ETYM No doubt a Pre-Greek name, probably from *$K^{w}ett^{y}al$-. This explains all the variants, notably σσ/ ττ/ τθ. Connection with θεσσάσθαι 'to pray' is rejected by Chantraine s.v.

θέσσασθαι [v.aor.] 'pray, ask'. ◄IE *$g^{wh}ed^{h}$- 'pray'► •VAR Ptc. θεσσάμενος, 3pl.ind. θέσσαντο (Hes., Archil.); glosses θέσσεσθαι· αἰτεῖν, ἱκετεύειν 'to ask (for), supplicate'; θεσσόμενος· δεόμενος, ζητούμενος, ἱκετεύων 'wanted, sought for, supplicating' (H.).
•COMP As a second member in πολύ-θεστος et al., probably also in ►ἀπό-θεστος, PN Ἀγλω-θέστης (Fraenkel 1910: 14 n. 2).
•DER Θεστορίδης, Θεστόρειος; Θέστωρ "entreater", father of Kalchas, etc. (Il.).
•ETYM A sigmatic aorist beside ►ποθέω 'entreat'. Together with the Boeot. PN Θιόφειστος, this points to IE *$g^{wh}ed^{h}$- + -σασθαι. OIr. has a subjunctive in -s-, 1pl. -gessam (recalling θέσσασθαι), and an indicative guidiu 'pray' = ποθέω. Iranian has a yod-present in Av. jaiδiieimi = OP jadiyāmiy 'pray', which may be identical to the supposed present θέσσεσθαι (IE *$g^{wh}ed^{h}$-i̯-). Cf. also the EN ►Θεσσαλοί.

θέσφατος [adj.] 'decreed by a god, decided' (Il.), also 'enormous' (ἀήρ η 143; cf. ἀχλὺς θεσπεσίη η 42; different Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 10). ◄IE *$d^{h}h_{1}s$- 'god, holy'► •DER Also ἀ-θέσφατος (ὄμβρος, θάλασσα et al.; Il.), properly "what has not been decided by the gods", i.e. "what does not fit in a given order" (Fraenkel 1923: 281f.). Perhaps a pleonastic privative ἀ-, like in ἀ-βέλτερος, but cf. the analysis in Benveniste 1969(2): 140ff.
•ETYM Compound from θεσ- 'god' (see ►θεός) and the to-ptc. of φημί. Cf. ἄ-φατος, as well as διφάσιος, etc.

θέω 1 [v.] 'to run' (Il.). ◄IE *$d^{h}eu$- 'run'► •VAR Fut. θεύσομαι, ipf. θέεσκον (Hom.), later aor. θεῦσαι (Vett. Val.).
•DIAL Myc. pe-ri-to-wo /Peri-t^{h}owos/ (in Πειρίθοος, ει by metrical lengthening).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, παρα-.
•DER θεῦσις 'running' (Corn. ND 1), θοός 'quick' (Il.) with Θόας, -αντος PN, also HN (Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 236; 3, 162), Θόωσα [f.] PN (Od., Emp.); θοάζω 'bring in quick movement, move quickly' (E.) together with θόασμα 'dancing place' (Orph. H. 49, 6). On ►βοηθόος, -θέω, see s.v.

•ETYM The thematic root present θέ(ϝ)ω (cf. θεῦ· δεῦρο, τρέχε 'Over here!, Run!' [H.]) is identical with Skt. dhavate 'stream, flow', except for the diathesis. Skt. dhā́vati 'run, stream' with lengthened grade has no counterpart in Greek; epic θείη and θείειν have metrical lengthening, and the latter may stand for *θε(ϝ)έμεν (cf. Chantraine 1942: 102; 346; 492). The Germanic word for 'dew' remains uncertain: OHG tou [m.], ON dǫgg, gen. dǫggwar, PGm. dawwa*-, etc. < IE *d^{h}óu̯o-, -ā́ (would be Gr. *θό(ϝ)ος, *θο(ϝ)ή). The gloss ἄδδεε· ἐπείγου 'hurry!' (H.) is also unclear.

θέω 2 [v.] 'to glow', only in ὀδόντων λευκὰ θεόντων (Hes. Sc. 146); thence by imitation ὕλη χλωρὰ <θ>ούσῃ (Theoc. 25, 158) and ποίην ... χλωρὰ θέουσαν (Epigr. Gr. 1046, 83). ◄IE? *$d^{h}eu$- 'glow', GR► •VAR Cf. θοόν· λαμπρόν 'bright' (H.; also explained as ὀξύ, σκοτεινόν, ἰσχυρόν, ταχινόν 'bright, dark, strong, swift'); θοῶσαι· ὀξῦναι, λαμπρῦναι 'blaze, make brilliant' (H.).
•ETYM For λευκὰ θεόντων, Wackernagel 1955(2): 852ff. attractively reads one word λευκαθεόντων (from λευκαθέω for *λευκάθω = λευκαθίζω). If this is correct, θέω 'to glow' would cease to exist. The explanation of θοός, θοῶσαι as λαμπρός, λαμπρῦναι probably goes back on the same tradition. From *λευκάθω also comes the name of the goddess Λευκαθέα (Wackernagel 1955(2): 852ff.).

θεωρός [m.] 'spectator, envoy to a festival or to an oracle' (IA, post-Hom.), also name of an overseer (Mantinea, Thasos). ◄IE uer*- 'observe'► •VAR As a loan from Attic, adapted to the local dialect, Dor., etc. θεᾱρός, Arc. also θεαορός; Ion. also θεορός (Paros), θευρός (Thasos).
•COMP As a first member in θεαρο-δόκος 'who receives the θ.', together with -δοκέω, -δοκία (inscr.).
•DER 1. θεωρίς (sc. ναῦς) [f.] 'ship of the θ.' (IA); 2. Θεάριος epithet of Apollo as an oracle-god (Troezen), θεάριον 'meeting place of the θ.' (Pi.); 3. θεωρικός 'reserved for the spectators', τὸ θ. 'contrbution of the spectator' (Att.). 4. θεωρία, -ίη, θεαρία, Boeot. θιαωρία (hybrid form) 'perception, awareness; mission to a festival'. 5. θεωροσύνη 'id.' (Man.). 6. denominative verb: θεωρέω 'be θεωρός, observe, contemplate' (IA), together with θεωρητικός 'contemplative, etc.' (Arist.; θεωρητής Phld.), θεώρημα (Att., Arist.), -ησις (Pl.; Röttger 1937: 17f.), -ητήριον et al. On Θεάριστος Zucker Maia 11 (1959): 162.
•ETYM Properly "who watches a show", *θεᾱ-(ϝ)ορός, *θεη-(ϝ)ορός > θε(ε)ωρός with quantitative metathesis and hyphaeresis; also, θεορός > θευρός, probably after -ορος (as in ἔφορος). See Buck 1953: 443f. and Szemerényi Glotta 33 (1954): 250[2]. Koller Glotta 36 (1958): 273ff. connects θεωρός with θεός, which is implausible; see the objections in DELG. The meaning 'theory, theoretical, etc. is not found until after Aristotle, and developed from 'contemplation of a Form' (cf. Festugière 1936).

θήγω [v.] 'to sharpen, whet; to excite' (Il.). ◄IE *$d^{h}eh_{2}g$- 'whet, sharpen'► •VAR Also θηγάνω (A. Ag. 1535 after H.), aor. θῆξαι. With ō-vocalism: τέθωκται· τεθύμωται 'to be provoked'; τεθωγμένοι· τεθυμωμένοι 'who are provoked' (H.); less certain are θῶξαι (also θᾶξαι)· μεθύσαι, πληρῶσαι 'to make drunk, make full'; τεθωγμένοι (also τεθαγμένοι)· μεμεθυσμένοι 'drunken' et al., (H.).

•DIAL Dor. θᾱ́γω.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. παρα-, συν-, ὑπο-.
•DER θηγάνη 'whetstone' (A., S.; H. also θήγανον) with θηγανίτης λίθος 'id.' (IG 14, 317, Sicily); θηγαλέος 'sharp' (AP, Chantraine 1933: 253); in H. also θηγάνεον, θηγόν· ὀξύ, ἠκονημένον, ἀκονητόν 'sharp, sharpened', θῆξις· ῥοπή, στιγμή, τάχος 'decision [weight], point [of time], speed'.
•ETYM From IE d^heh_2g-oH, with the Arm. instrument noun daku, gen. pl. dakuaц 'axe', probably from an u-stem IE d^heh_2g-u- 'sharp'. See Lidén 1906: 55. LIV^2 (following Clackson 1994: 116ff.) calls this connection with Arm. uncertain.

θήκη [f.] 'case, chest; tomb' (IA). ◄IE d^heh_1- 'set, make'► •COMP Very frequently as a second member, both prefixed (δια-, ὑπο-, συν-, etc.) and with nominal first member (βιβλιο-, χαλκο-θήκη).
•DER Diminutive θηκίον (pap.) and θηκαῖος 'for the tomb' (Hdt.); thence again several derivatives.
•ETYM Often connected with Skt. dhāká- [m.] 'container, etc.' (gramm.), but perhaps independent formations; see ►τίθημι.

θηλέω [v.] 'to flourish'. ⇒θάλλω.

θηλή [f.] 'mother's breast, nipple' (IA). ◄IE d^heh_1- 'suck(le)'► •COMP As a second member e.g. in ἄ-, εὔ-, νεό-θηλος (-θηλής).
•DER θηλώ· τροφός, τήθη 'nurse, grandmother' (H., Plu.). Denominative verb θηλάζω 'to suckle, suck' (IA, Dor.) with θήλασμα, θηλασμός 'suck(l)ing' (Plu., pap.), θηλάστρια 'wet-nurse' (S., Com.); also θηλαμών 'id.' (Sophr., Thespis), probably to θηλά-σαι after τελά-σαι : τελα-μών et al.; here θηλαμινοῦ· νεογνοῦ 'new-born'; θήλαντο· ἐθήλασαν 'they suckled' (H.; correct?); cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 361. Uncertain θηλονή 'wet-nurse' (Plu. 2, 278d).
•ETYM A counterpart to θηλή is fēla* 'mother's breast' in Lat. fēlāre 'to suckle', IE d^heh_1-leh₂. From similar pre-forms stem Latv. dẽls 'son' < d^heh_1-lo-, properly "suckling", and U feliuf [acc.pl.m.] 'sues lactantes, i.e. 'sucklings' (Untermann 2000: 271f.); Lith. dėlė̃ 'leech'.
Various languages have forms with an i-extension, which comes from the present of the verbal root, d^hh_1-i-: Lat. fīlius 'id.' < $d^h(e)h_1i$-l-io, Latv. dīle 'sucking calf' (IE d^hh_1i-l-), MIr. del 'nipple', OHG tila [f.] 'female breast'. Unclear is Arm. dayl, dal 'Biestmilch'; Hübschmann 1897: 437, Pedersen KZ 39 (1906): 406. On Lat. fēlīx 'fertile', see the comments in De Vaan 2008 s.v. Cf. ►θῆλυς and ►θῆσθαι.

θῆλυς [adj.] 'female', also metaph. (Il.). ◄IE d^heh_1- 'suck(le)'► •VAR Fem. -εια, ntr. -υ; also a fem. subst., cf. Chantraine 1942: 252.
•COMP Compounds like θηλυ-γενής, μιξό-θηλυς.
•DER θηλυδρίας 'woman-like man' (Hdt., Arist.), from *θηλύδριον (Chantraine 1933: 72); θηλυκός 'womanly, womanish' (Arist., Hell.; cf. Chantraine 1956a: 165), θηλώδης 'womanish' (Ar.), θηλῶτις [f.] 'id.' (Prisc.); θηλύτης 'womanhood' (Arist.); denominative verb θηλύνω 'make womanish' (Ion., Hell.). On the comparative θηλύτερος see Benveniste 1948: 117f.

•ETYM A formal counterpart to θῆλυς < IE d^heh_1-lu-, except for the accent, is Skt. dhārú- 'suckling'. The Skt. form may directly derive from the verb 'suck' (see ►θῆσθαι) with a suffix -ru- or -lu-, while for the Greek form we may assume an intermediate nominal l-stem.

θῆμα •VAR θημών. ⇒τίθημι.

θην [pcl.] 'indeed, certainly, without a doubt', in ἤ θην, οὔ θην et al. (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unexplained.

θήρ, -ρός [m.] 'wild animal, beast of prey' (Il.). ◄IE $\acute{g}^hueh_1r$- 'wild animal► •DIAL Aeol. φήρ (Pi.).
•COMP E.g. θηρο-φόνος 'killing wild beasts' (Thgn.), Θηρε-φόνα (Paus. 5, 3, 3; on the compositional vowel -ε- see Schwyzer 438); ἔν-θηρος 'full of wild beasts' (trag.), ἄ-θηρος (Hdt., A.) 'without wild beasts', also 'without hunting' (from θήρα; Sommer 1948: 149f.).
•DER θηρίον 'wild animal, hunted animal' (Od.; Wackernagel 1916: 218; originally diminutive); post-Hom. also 'animal', with several derivatives: diminutive θηρίδιον (Thphr.), θηρᾱ́φιον (Damocr. apud Gal.; Wackernagel Glotta 4 (1913): 243f.); θήραφος 'spider' (Cyren. 62), probably a back-formation; θηριακός 'regarding the animals' (medic.), θηριώδης 'full of wild animals, animal-like' (IA); θηριότης 'animal being' (Arist); denominatives: 1. θηριόομαι, -όω 'to turn into an animal' (Pl., Eub.) with θηρίωσις (Luc.); beside it θηρίωμα 'malignant ulcer' (medic.) from θηρίον 'id.'; 2. θηριάζομαι 'id.' (Corp. Herm. 10, 20). θήρειος 'ptng. to wild animals' (IA). Denominative verbs: 1. θηράω 'to hunt' (A.), perf. ptc. πεφειράκοντες (Thess.); thence θηρατήρ, -άτωρ (-ρητ-) 'hunter' (Il.) with θηρατήριος (S.); also θηρατής 'id.' (Ar.) together with θηρατικός (X.); θήραμα 'hunting booty' (E.), θήρατρον 'hunting device, net' (X.); θηράσιμος 'worth hunting, worth trying' (A. Pr. 858). Here also belongs the back-formation θήρα 'hunt, booty' (Il.) together with θηροσύνη 'id.' (Opp., AP), θηρότις· θηρεύτρια (H.), after ἀγρότις. As a second member -θήρας, e.g. ὀρνιθο-θήρας 'bird-catcher' (Ar., Arist.). 2. θηρεύω 'to hunt' (τ 465) together with θηρευτής 'hunter' (Il.), θηρευτικός (Ar., X., Arist.), also θηρευτήρ (Opp.), fem. θηρεύτρια (pap.), θήρευμα 'catch' (S., E., Pl.), θήρευσις 'hunt' (Ph).
•ETYM Lat. fĕrus 'wild' underwent pretonic shortening from fēró-* (cf. Schrijver 1991: 343), which makes a reconstruction $\acute{g}^hueh_1r$- possible. The plural forms θῆρες, θηρῶν have exact counterparts in Eastern Lith. žvė̃res, žvėrų̃, < IE $\acute{g}^hueh_1r$-es, -om. Most BSl. forms were transferred into the i-stems: nom.sg. Lith. žvėrìs, OCS zvěrь 'id.'. Also related is ToB śerwe 'hunter' < $\acute{g}^hueh_1r$-uo-.

θής, θητός [m.] 'serf, bondsman; hired labourer' (Od.). ◄PG► •VAR Fem. θῆσσα, Att. θῆττα (E., Posidipp.). Also θᾶτας· θῆτας (θάτας· θύτας 'sacrificers' cod.), τοὺς δούλους. Κύπριοι 'slaves (Cypr.)' (H.).
•DER θητικός 'of a serf' (Lex. apud D., Arist.), θητεύω 'be a serf; work for wages' (Il.) with θητεία 'wage-earning' (S., Isoc.), θητεῖον 'wages' (Ath.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Argumentation against connection with θέω 'run' in Fraenkel 1910: 87^2). Acc. to Aßmann Glotta 9 (1918): 96, it is a loanword from West Semitic.

See E. Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 79f. on the meaning, etc. The original form was t^hāt-, thus it was probably Pre-Greek.

θησαυρός [m.] 'treasury, warehouse, receptacle, treasure' (Hes.). ◄PG► •COMP E.g. θησαυρο-φύλαξ 'guard of the treasury' (Hell.).
•DER θησαυρικός 'belonging to the treasury' (pap.), θησαυρώδης 'full of treasures' (Philostr.); θησαυρίζω 'save, collect' (IA) together with θησαύρισμα 'savings, store, treasure' (Democr., trag.), θησαυρισμός 'storage, preservation' (Arist., Thphr.), -ιστής 'who preserves' (Poll.) with -ιστικός (Arist.).
•ETYM No etymology, but probably a technical loanword, without a doubt from Pre-Greek. The appearance of the word could suggest a pre-form in -ar^w-o-. From Greek, Lat. thēsaurus, thēsaurizō.

θῆσθαι [v.inf.pres.] 'suck' (δ 89). ◄IE d^heh_1-i- 'suck, suckle'► •VAR Aor. 3sg. θήσατο (Ω 58, Call. Jov. 48), θησάμενος (h. Cer. 236); θήσατο 'suckled' (as opposed to 'sucked', h. Ap. 123); act. θῆσαι· θρέψαι, θηλάσαι 'to feed, suckle' (H.).
•ETYM IE has a root d^heh_1-, found in Greek θη- (θηλή, θῆλυς, τιθήνη, γαλαθηνός, θήνιον· γάλα H.) and in Sanskrit (inf. dhā́tave, dhātrī- 'wet-nurse', etc.). Correspondences to θῆ-σθαι have a yod-present: OHG tāen, 1sg. tāju; Latv. dêt, 1sg. dêju 'to suck'. Although it seems athematic, a yod-present *θή-ι̯ε-σθαι may be assumed for θῆσθαι as well; it is perhaps an innovation after the aor. θήσατο (Frisk). Beside these formations, there was an i-present d^hh_1-(e)i- in Skt. dháyati, which agrees with OCS dojǫ and with Go. daddjan, OSwed. dæggja 'suck' (with "Verschärfung" [gemination] of the yod). Further forms belonging to this present: Skt. dhītá- 'sucked', dhenú- 'milch cow', MHG dīen 'suckle'. See LIV² s.v. d^heh_1(i̯)- 'Muttermilch saugen'. Discussion of Anatolian forms like Lyc. tideimi 'child' in Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. tēta(n)-. Unrelated is ► τιθασός.

θῆτα [n.] the eighth letter of the Greek alphabet (Ar.). ◄LW Sem.► •VAR Gen. θήτατος (Democr. 20), Lat. tetates [pl.] from θήτατες; further uninflected.
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. ṭēth. See Schwyzer: 140.

θίασος [m.] 'Bacchic revel; religious guild' (IA). ◄PG►
•DER θιασώτης 'participant of a θ.' (IA), fem. -ῶτις (Opp.) together with -ωτικός; also θιασίτης 'id.' (Ion. and Hell. inscr.) together with -ιτικός; θιασώδης 'θ.-like, belonging to a θ.' (Nonn.); θιασῶνες· οἶκοι, ἐν οἷς συνιόντες δειπνοῦσιν οἱ θίασοι 'halls in which the companies took their meals communally' (H.). Denominative verbs: 1. θιασεύω 'introduce in a θ., participate in a θ.' (E., Str.) with θιασεία (Procl.); 2. back-formation θιάζω in ἐξεθίαζε· χορείας ἐπετέλει 'was performing dances'; ἐπεθίαζεν· ἐχόρευεν 'was dancing', aor. θιάσαι· χορεῦσαι (H.).
•ETYM Formation like θύρσος et al. An expression of the Dionysiac religion, and as such suspected of foreign origin: probably Anatolian (= Pre-Greek?), in spite of older interpretations in Indo-European terms (see Bq).

θῖβις [f.] 'basket of papyrus' (LXX). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Nom. also θίβις, θίβη; gen. -εως, also θίβωνος· κιβωτοῦ, Κύπριοι 'coffer (Cypr.)' (H.).

•ETYM A loan from Semitic, Hebr. tēbhāh, which itself is a loan from Egyptian db:t 'box'; see E. Masson 1967: 76.

θιβρός [adj.] meaning uncertain (only in Alexandrian poets); epithet of Κύπρις (Call. Fr. 267), of Σεμίραμις (Euph. 81), of ὤεα χελύνης (Nic. Al. 555), and of ὀφίων κῆρ 'snake-poison' (Nic. Th. 35). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also θιμβρός (Nic. Th. 35 v.l.).
•DER The Spartan name Θίβρων is often found as Θίμβρων in the mss. (Harp., Phot., Su.). Besides θίρρον· τὸ τρυφερόν (Theognost.).
•ETYM Explained gropingly by the ancients as 'hot, soft, etc.'; cf. H.: θιβρόν· τρυφερόν, καλόν, σεμνόν, ἁπαλόν 'delicate, beautiful, revered, soft'; θιβρήν· φιλόκοσμον, καλλυντικήν .... καὶ παρὰ μὲν Νικάνδρῳ τὴν ἔμπυρον καὶ καυστικήν, τινὲς δὲ χαλεπήν. Although the etymology is uncertain, the prenasalized form points to Pre-Greek origin. Therefore, not related to φοῖβος (as per Ehrlich 1910: 33, who derives it from IE $g^{wh}ig^w$-ro-, based on comparison with Slov. žigra 'tinder').

θιγγάνω [v.] 'to touch with the hand, occupy oneself with' (Ion. Dor. Arc.; not in Attic or in Hom.; see Wackernagel 1916: 222). ◄IE? d^heig^h- 'smear, knead'► •VAR Aor. θιγεῖν (Lacon. σιγῆν Ar. Lys. 1004), fut. med. προσ-θίξῃ (E. Heracl. 652; codd. -εις), τεθίξομαι (E. Hipp. 1086), aor. pass. θιχθῆναι (S., E.).
•COMP Also with prefix like προσ-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER θίξις 'touch' (Hp., Arist.), θίγμα 'id.' (Pergam.), θιγμάτων· μιασμάτων 'stains' (H.); uncertain θίγημα (AP 12, 209; cod. φιλήματα) and θιγάνα 'cover?' (Delph., Labyadae inscr. C 39).
•ETYM The form θιγγάνω has been analyzed as a nasal present of the IE root d^heig^h- (see ► τεῖχος), with supposed parallels in Lat. fingō 'to spread, knead, form, etc.', Arm. diz-anem 'to heap up' (for further forms, see LIV² s.v.). The -γ- would have spread from the present to the aorist θιγεῖν (for *τιχεῖν). This etymology presupposes, however, that original IE $\acute{g}^h$ became γ after nasal, but this is incorrect, as is shown by ► ὀμφαλός (see ► θάμβος).

θῖς, θινός [m., f.] 'heap (of sand), beach, dune, shore' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•DER ἀποθινόομαι 'silt up' (Plb.). As a second member in ἀκρο-θίνια (-να) [pl.] (rarely [sg.]) 'the upper part of a heap, offering of first fruits' (mostly post-Hom. poetry), a compound from ἄκρος θίς and a suffix -ιο- (differently, Risch IF 59 (1949): 289).
•ETYM Without explanation. Wackernagel 1916: 82 A. 2) compares Skt. dhíṣṇya- [adj.] 'put on a heap of earth', substantival 'heap of earth with sand', which would go back to an n-stem IE d^hisen-, d^hisn-. Thence he derives Gr. *θιων, *θιην, θῖν-, of which the nom. θίς would be an innovation. Improbable. Often compared with MoHG Düne and cognates, but this is formally impossible. There have been unsuccessful attempts to relate θίς to the root of ► τίθημι; the word is rather a loan (from Pre-Greek?).

θιώτης of ἄρτος (pap. II^p). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

θλάσπις [f.] 'shepherd's purse, Capsella bursa pastoris' (Hp.). ◂?▸
•VAR Gen. -ιος, -εως; θλάσπι [n.] (Dsc., Plin.).
•DER θλασπίδιον (Ps.-Dsc.).
•ETYM Unknown; folk-etymological derivation from θλάω by Dsc. 2, 156 (see Strömberg 1940: 155). A neuter in -ι is extremely rare in Greek.

θλάω [v.] 'to crush, bruise' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR (Arist., Herod.), aor. θλάσ(σ)αι (Il.), pass. θλασθῆναι, fut. θλάσω (Hp.), perf. τέθλασμαι (Alex., Theoc.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀμφι-, κατα-, συν-.
•DER θλάσις 'crushing' (Arist.), θλάσμα 'bruising, bruise' (Arist.), θλαστός (Com.); θλάστης 'crusher' = ἐμβρυοθλάστης (medic.), θλαστικός 'crushing' (Arist.); θλαδίας [m.] 'eunuch' (LXX, Ph.) with θλαδιάω (H.) = φλαδιάω; from *θλάδος, *θλαδεῖν, cf. φλαδεῖν.
•ETYM No certain connection. Cf. ► θλίβω and ► φλάω.

θλίβω [v.] 'to press, bruise' (ρ 221). ◂?▸ •VAR Aor. θλῖψαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, συν-, ἐν-, ἀπο-.
•DER θλῖψις 'pressure' (Arist.), also prefixed (ἔκ-, etc.); θλιμμός 'id.' (LXX, Aq.); ἀπόθλιμμα 'what is pressed out, sap' (Hp.), also with ἔκ-; (ἐκ-)θλιβή 'pressure' (LXX, Gal.) together with θλιβερός (Paul. Aeg.), θλιβώδης (Aq.); θλιβίας = θλαδίας (Str.).
•ETYM It has been proposed that it is cross between θλάω and φλίβω (also τρίβω?) (Walde IF 19 (1906): 105, Güntert 1914: 149).

θνήσκω 'die'. ⇒ θάνατος.

θοάζω 1 'sit'. ⇒ θᾱ́σσω.

θοάζω 2 'move quickly'. ⇒ θέω.

θοίνη [f.] 'meal, banquet, feast' (IA, Dor., Hes. Sc. 114). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Dor. θοίνα, Hell. θοῖνα.
•COMP θοινοδοτέω 'to host a banquet' (Crete I^a-I^p), θοιναρμόστρια [f.] 'mistress of the banquet' (inscr.).
•DER θοινᾱτικός (v.l. -νητ-) 'of a banquet' (X. Oik. 9, 7). Denominative verbs: 1. θοινάω, -άομαι 'to entertain, feast' (δ 36) together with θοίνᾱμα 'entertainment, banquet' (E. [lyr.], Posidon.), θοινατήρ 'host' (A. Ag. 1502) with θοινατήριον = θοίνη (E. Rh. 515), θοινάτωρ 'host' (E.), -ήτωρ (AP), θοινατάς 'id.' (Kallatis I^a); on Doric α see Fraenkel 1912: 16f., Björck 1950: 140ff. 2. θοινάζω 'to entertain' (X., Ael.). 3. θοινίσαι v.l. for θοινῆσαι (Hdt. 1, 129).
•ETYM Previously derived from *θωι-να, and connected with ► θῶσθαι · δαίνυσθαι, θοινᾶσθαι (A. Fr. 49), θῶται· εὐθηνεῖται, θοινᾶται (H., also θώσασθαι, θωθῆναι); θωσούμεθα (Epich. 139), θωστήρια· εὐωχητήρια (Alcm., H.); see Frisk. However, the verb has no etymology; Pre-Greek origin of the group (including ► θώς 'jackal'?) seems possible.

θόλος [f.] 'round building with conical roof, rotunda', 'round bath' (Od.). ◂PG▸

•VAR Hell. also [m.]; see Schwyzer 1950: 32[4], 34[2]. On σαλία, θαλιο- see below.
•DER Diminutive θολίδιον (Att.). θολία 'conical hat with broad brim' (Theoc. 15, 39), also 'chest with conical lid' (Poll.); cf. σαλία (σ- < θ-)· πλέγμα καλάθῳ ὅμοιον, ὅ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς φοροῦσιν αἱ Λάκαιναι. οἱ δὲ θολία 'something plaited, like a basket, which Laconian women wear on the head; others: θ.' (H.); see also H. θαλιοποιοί, which Latte corrects to *θαλλοκοποιοί. θολωτός 'provided with θ., with conical form' (Procop.), θολικός 'id.' (Suid.).
•ETYM A technical word without explanation. The comparison with a European word for 'valley, etc.', e.g. Go. dal(s) [m., n.] 'φάραγξ, βόθυνος', ON dalr 'valley, arch', OCS dolъ 'βάραθρον, λάκκος', Ru. dol 'valley, lower part', MW dol [f.] 'valley', should be discarded. The connection with θάλαμος (e.g. Maaß RhM 77 (1928): 1ff.) makes more sense; the variation α/ ο is typical of Pre-Greek.

θολός [m.] 'mud, dirt, ink of the cuttlefish' (Hp., Arist.; on the accent Schwyzer: 459), also adjectival 'troubled' (Ath.). ◂?▸
•DER θολερός 'troubled' (IA), θολώδης 'id.' (Hp., Arist.), θολόω 'make turbid, unclean' (IA) together with θόλωσις 'making turbid' (Arist., Gal.).
•ETYM The word has been connected, as *θϝολός, with some Gm. terms for turbidness of the mind: primary verb OS for-dwelan 'neglect, forsake', OHG gi-twelan 'be deafened, linger', with several verbal nouns (ON dvǫl [f.] 'lingering', OS dwalm, OHG twalm 'stupefaction', Go. dwals 'stupid'). These may or may not be connected with a Celtic word for 'blind', e.g. OIr. dall. There is no indication, however, that these IE forms (more in Pok. 265) are cognate. Fur.: 391 compares ὀλός 'the dark sap of the cuttlefish' (Hp.).

θοός 1 'quick'. ⇒ θέω.

θοός 2 [adj.] 'sharp', in νήσοισι ἐπιπροέηκε Θοῇσιν (ο 299); cf. Str. 8, 3, 26 Θοὰς δὲ εἴρηκε τὰς Ὀξείας κτλ. (Bechtel 1914 s.v.); said of γόμφοι, ὀδόντες, πελέκεις, ξίφος (Hell. and late: A. R., AP). ◂?▸
•DER Factitive aorist ἐθόωσα 'I made sharp' (ι 327), pass. perf. ptc. τεθοωμένος (Nic., Opp.).
•ETYM No certain connection; probably not related to Skt. dhā́rā 'cutting edge, blade (of a sword)' (compared by Schulze 1933a: 370).

θορός 'masculine seed'. ⇒ θρώσκω.

θόρυβος [m.] 'noise, crying, tumult, confusion' (Pi., IA). ◂PG▸
•DER θορυβώδης 'full (of) noise, etc.' (IA) and denominative θορυβέω (also prefixed with ἀνα-, ἐπι-) 'make noise, stir, confuse' (IA); θορυβητικός 'noisy' (Ar.) and θορύβηθρον plant name = λεοντοπέταλον (Ps.-Dsc.); on naming motive Strömberg 1940: 80, on the formation ibd. 146.
•ETYM Formation like ὄτοβος, κόναβος, φλοῖσβος, et al. (Chantraine 1933: 260). The reduplicated form τον-θορύ-ζω (see Tichy 1983: 215f.), τόνθρυς is comparable. Perhaps θρῦ-λέω, θρῦ-λος also belong here; see also ► θρέομαι. The variation θορυβ- (from *tarup-?), τον-θρυ-, θρυ(λ)- suggests a Pre-Greek word (cf. Fur.: 229, 381).

θοῦρος [adj.] 'rushing, impetuous, furious' (Il.). ◂IE *d^herh_3- 'jump, mount'▸ •DER θοῦρις, -ιδος [f.] (Hom., H.), θουράς (Nic., Lyc.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 354f.); extended in θούριος 'id.' (trag.); also θουραῖος, θουρήεις et al. (H.); denominative ptc. θουρῶσαι [nom.pl.f.] 'rushing towards' (Lyc. 85), from θουράω + accus.
•ETYM From *θόρ-ϝος, either directly from the aorist θορεῖν or as a transformation of an u-stem *θόρ-υ-ς (cf. μανός < *μαν-ϝ-ός, στενός < *στεν-ϝ-ός, etc.). Not related to ► ἀθύρω, as per Persson 1891: 59.

θρᾶνος [m.] 'bench, supporting beam' (Att. and Hell. inscr., Ar.). ◂PG?▸
•DIAL Myc. ta-ra-nu /t^hrānus/.
•DER Diminutive θρανίον 'id.' (Ar.) together with θρανίδιον (Ar.); θρανίτης 'rower of the upper of the three rows' (Th., Ar.), see Morrison Class. Quart. 41 (1947): 128ff.; fem. θρανῖτις (κώπη; Att.); θρανιτικός (Callix.); θρανίας [m.] (Marcell. Sid.), θρᾶνις or -ίς (Xenocr.) = ξιφίας 'swordfish', after the shape of the upper jaw, cf. Thompson 1947 s.v.
Denominative verb θρανεύω 'to stretch to the tanner's board' (Ar. Eq. 369), also θρανεύεται· συντρίβεται 'was rubbed together' (H.), ἀθράνευτον· ἄστρωτον 'bare' (H. = E. fr. 569); cf. συν-θρανόω and ► θρανύσσω.
θρῆνυς, -υος [m.] 'footstool' (Hom.), cf. Hermann Gött. Nachr. (1943): 8; Chantraine 1933: 118; Benveniste 1935: 56), also θρῆνυξ, -υκος (Euph.), θρᾶνυξ (Corinn.) with a secondary κ-enlargement; see Chantraine 1933: 383.
•ETYM If νο- or νυ- is a suffix, we can connect the aorist inf. θρήσασθαι, which is usually translated as 'to sit down' (only Philet. 14 [IV-III^a]: θρήσασθαι πλατάνῳ γ<ρ>αίῃ ὕπο).
This group of words is often connected with ► θρόνος, whence the assumption that θρᾶνος, θρῆνυς originally meant 'support'. Recently, De Lamberterie 2004: 236-253 has argued that θρόνος is a younger form of *θόρνος (Myc. to-no, Cypr. θόρναξ H.). He assumes a root *d^herh_2- 'support, hold', found in Skt. dhar-, assuming d^horh_2-no- for *θόρνος, with loss of laryngeal by the Saussure Effect. This would mean that θρᾶνος, θρῆνυς derive from the zero grade of the root. The fact that the Indo-Iranian root is aniṭ is problematic for this account, however. The existence of variants θόρν- and θρόν- could also be an indication of Pre-Greek origin. See ► θρησκεύω.

θρᾱνύσσω [v.] 'to crush'. ◂?▸
•VAR Only aor. ptc. θρανύξαντες (Lyc. 664); συν-θρᾶνόω 'id.', only perf. pass. συντεθράνωται (E. Ba. 633; = συμπέπτωκε 'has dashed together' H.).
•DER Cf. also θρανεύεται· συντρίβεται 'is rubbed together' (H.).
•ETYM Connection with a hypothetical noun *θραυσ-ανό-ς from θραύω 'shatter' inspires little confidence (cf. Sommer 1905: 64f.). Acc. to Frisk, more probable is connection with θρανεύω 'stretch on the tanner's bench', which H. glosses as συντρίβεται. One hypothesis posits the meaning change 'tan (torture)' > 'crush', together with formal adaptation, perhaps to ἀμύσσω, νύσσω, etc. (Sommer 1905: 64f.). Thus also DELG. See ► θρᾶνος.

θράσος •VAR θρασύς. ⇒ θάρσος.

θρᾱ́σσω [v.] 'to trouble, disturb' (Pi., Hp., Att.). ◂IE? *$d^hreh_2g^h$- 'irritate'▸ •VAR Att. θράττω; aor. θρᾶξαι (A., E.), pass. ἐθράχθη (S. Fr. 1055); perf. τέτρηχα intr. 'be troubled, agitated' (Il.).
•COMP Sometimes with prefixes ἐν-, ὑπο-, ἐπι-.
•ETYM The form θρᾱ́σσω is a primary yod-present from *θρᾱχ-ι̯ω, beside the old perfect *τέ-θρᾱχ-α. The rare aorists θρᾶξαι and ἐθράχθη could be innovations after the type πράσσω : πρᾶξαι for older ταράξαι (like δαμάσαι), from which the present ► ταράσσω was formed, which has the same disyllabic stem form as ταραχή and may be a denominative of it. The form ταραχή should not be explained as from d^hrh_2-eg^h-, since the verbal forms point to a full grade $d^hreh_2g^h$-. Therefore, the only possibility seems to be $d^h\acute{r}h_2g^h$-, with secondary accent (see Rix 1976: 73f.), in spite of earlier objections (cf. Dev. 206ff.). The form ► τραχύς 'raw, hard' is a primary nominal formation. The words for 'dregs, sediment' (e.g. ON dregg [f.], OLith. drãgės [pl.], Alb. drā, Lat. facēs [f.pl.]) should be kept separate from θρᾱ́σσω. The same holds true for the Baltic group of Lith. drãgės, dérgti 'soil, defile, etc.'; the acute accent does not point to a laryngeal (with unattractive $d^herh_2g^h$- next to *$d^hreh_2g^h$-), but rather to PIE $d^{(h)}erg$-, where the acute is a result of Winter's Law. A possible comparison is that with the Slavic group of OCS raz-dražiti 'incite, provoke', which (like Greek) could point to $d^hreh_2g^h$-. However, Derksen 2008 s.v. drāžìti objects that the Slavic accent does not point to a laryngeal. Lit.: Tichy 1983: 171f.

θρᾷττα [f.] name of a small sea-fish (middle com., Arist.). ◂?▸ •DER Diminutive θρᾳττίδιον (Anaxandr.).
•ETYM Acc. to Strömberg 1943: 86, properly "the Thracian"; see ► Θρᾷξ. Otherwise, it could be a deformation of θρίσσα (s.v. ► θρίξ).

θραυπαλος [f.] name of a plant, ephedra campulopoda (Thphr.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

θραυπίς, -ιδος [f.] name of a small bird (Arist. HA 592b). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

θραύω [v.] 'to break in pieces, shatter, enfeeble' (IA). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. θραῦσαι, pass. θραυσθῆναι, perf. pass. τέθραυσμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, περι-, συν-.
•DER (ἀπό-, σύν-)θραῦσις 'breaking, etc.' (Arist.), acc. to H. also = σφῦρα, ἡ τοὺς βώλους θραύουσα 'hammer breaking the earth', from which MoGr. dial. (Chios, Ikaros) θράψα (Kukules Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 27: 61ff.); θραῦμα (A., etc.), also θραῦσμα (Agatharch., Arist.) 'fragment, crushing, wound'; θραυσμός 'breaking' (LXX), θραυστήριος 'appropriate for breaking' (Aët.); θραυστός 'breakable, broken' (Ti. Locr., Thphr.); θραῦλον· κόλουρον 'truncated' (wrong von Blumenthal 1930: 38), θραῦρον· τραγανόν, θραυόμενον 'broken in pieces' (H.; see Schwyzer: 282).
•ETYM The α-vocalism is unexplained. Bechtel 1914 s.v. connects it with θρυλίζω, ► *θρυλίσσω (θρυλίχθη, θρυλίξαι), etc. See there and s.v. ► θρύπτω.

θρέομαι [v.] 'to cry aloud, shriek, proclaim' (A., E., always of women). ◂IE? *d^hreu-▸ •VAR Only present except θρεύετο (poet. inscr., Epid. IV^{a}), artificially formed after θρεῦμαι (A. Th. 78); on the imperfective aspect see Fournier 1946: 90 and 228.

•COMP Very frequently as a second member, e.g. ἀλλό-θροος 'with another man's voice, with foreign language' (Od.).
•DER θρόος, Att. θροῦς [m.] 'noise, murmur, rumour' (Δ 437, Pi. N. 7, 81, Th., X.). Iterative deverbative (or denominative) verb θροέω 'cry, proclaim, speak' (trag.), with aor. θροῆσαι; rarely with prefix δια-, προσ- et al.; pass. θροεῖσθαι, θροηθῆναι 'be drowned, confused, frightened' (LXX, NT); from there συνθρόησις 'confusion, shyness' (S. E. M. 9, 169).
•ETYM Beside the thematic root present θρέ(ϝ)ομαι, which points to IE *d^{h}reu-o-, Armenian has an athematic root present erdnum, aor. erdu-ay 'swear', from QIE *d^{h}ru-neu-mi (cf. OLat. deicō next to Gr. δείκνυμι). See Frisk 1944: 8ff., where relation with θάρνυται as 'speak' (δηλοῖ τὴν διὰ λόγων ἔντευξιν H.) is also considered. Non-IE words like θόρυβος, θρυλέω, θρῦλος must be kept separate. Pok. 255 contains much Greek material of non-IE origin. Cf. also ►θρῆνος and ►τονθορύζω.

θρῆνος [m.] 'dirge, lament, lamentation' (IA, Ω 721; on the meaning Diehl RhM N.F. 89 (1940): 90 and 112). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Compounds like θρην-ῳδός 'who sings a lament' (Alciphr.), together with θρην-ῳδέω, -ία (E., Plu.); ἔν-θρηνος 'full of lament' (pap.).
•DER θρηνώδης 'like a lament' (Pl.), θρήνωμα = θρῆνος (pap. I^{a}, cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.). Denominative verb θρηνέω, aor. θρηνῆσαι 'start a lament, lament, wail for' (Ω 722), also prefixed, e.g. ἐπι-, κατα-, with several derivatives: θρήνημα 'lament' (E.), θρηνη-τής, -ητήρ (A.) 'lamentation', also θρηνήτωρ (Man.); θρηνητικός (Arist.); ἐπιθρήν-ησις (Plu.).
•ETYM In the first place, θρῆνος should be connected within Greek with ablauting θρῶναξ· κηφήν. Λάκωνες 'drone (Lacon.)' (H.) and reduplicated τενθρήνη 'hornet' (cf. also on ἀνθρηδών; see Kuiper 1956: 221f.). In other languages, we find words denoting sounds of similar appearance: Skt. dhráṇati 'sounds' (gramm.) and the Gm. word for 'drone', e.g. OS dreno, and Go. drunjus 'sound'. These are rather independent onomatopoeic formations. We are probably dealing with a Pre-Greek word.

θρῆνυξ •VAR θρῆνυς, θρῆσασθαι. ⇒θρᾶνος.

θρησκεύω [v.] 'to perform or observe religious customs' (Hdt.), 'to worship' (LXX). ◂PG?▸
•DER θρησκεία, Ion. -ηΐη 'holy service, religious practice' (Ion.), also θρήσκευμα, -ευσις 'id.' (Hell.); θρησκευτής 'worshipper' (late); deverbal θρῆσκος 'fear of the gods' (Ep. Jac. 1, 26) with θρησκώδης 'id.' (Vett. Val.); θρήσκια [n.pl.] 'religious customs' (POxy. 1380, 245, II^{p}, OGI 210, 9, Nubia III^{p}).
On the history of θρησκεύω, -εία see van Herten 1934.
•ETYM As θρῆσκος is clearly deverbal, another starting point for θρησκεύω must be found. Another σκ-present is found in the glosses θρήσκω· νοῶ 'to think of' and θράσκειν· ἀναμιμνήσκειν 'to remember' (H.); θρησκεύω could be an enlargement of these. The glosses would point to Ionic origin for θρησκεύω.
Beside the present θρήσκω, we also find a gloss ἐνθρεῖν· φυλάσσειν 'to guard, observe' (H.). However, if we explain this as a zero grade thematic aorist, then θρήσκω, which must derive from *d^{h}rh$_{1}$-ske/o-, becomes unexplainable. Perhaps, then, the word is Pre-Greek.
The relevant nominal gloss ἀθερές· ἀνόητον, ἀνόσιον 'stupid, unholy' (H.) could point to a neuter *θέρος or an aorist *θερεῖν.
Further connection with ►θρόνος, ►θρᾶνος is improbable.

θριαί [f.pl.] Nymphs on the Parnassos who fed Apollo; also name of pebbles that served as lots of an oracle (Philoch. 196, Call. Ap. 45; uncertain conj. h. Merc. 552). See the texts in Amandry 1950: 27-29. ◂?▸
•VAR Also θρῖαι.
•COMP θριοβόλοι [pl.] 'who threw the θ.' (Epic. apud St. Byz. s.v. Θρῖα, Suid.).
•DER θριάζειν· ἐνθουσιᾶν, ἐνθουσιάζειν 'be inspired, be possessed by a god' (H.) from S. (Fr. 466) and E. (Fr. 478) together with θρίασις (Suid.); also θριᾶσθαι· μαντεύεσθαι 'to divine' (AB 265).
•ETYM Origin unknown. von Wilamowitz 1931: 379ff. thought it was originally identical with θρῖα 'leaves of the fig'. See Amandry 1950: 62, 133 and Fur.: 191 (uncertain). There seems little reason to connect it with θρίαμβος.

θρίαμβος [m.] name of hymns sung at festivals for Dionysus (Cratin. 36), also said of the god (Trag. Adesp. 140 et al.); also a Hell. rendering of Lat. triumphus (Plb., D. S.). ◂PG▸ •DER θριαμβικός = triumphālis, θριαμβεύειν = triumphāre.
•ETYM Formation like ►διθύραμβος, ►ἴαμβος and, like these, probably Pre-Greek. Since Sommer 1905: 58ff., it has often been connected with the numeral 'three' ("Dreischritt" vel sim.), which is impossible. Acc. to Sturtevant Class. Phil. 5 (1910): 323ff., it is from θριάζω, θρίασις, by influence of ἴαμβος. See also Theander Eranos 15 (1915): 126[1]. Fur.191 connects it with τριάζω 'to conquer'.

θριγκός [m.] 'topmost course of stones in a wall, cornice, frieze', also metaph. (Od.), 'fence' (E., Ar.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Mostly plur., late also τριγχός (SIG 1231, 6 [Nicomedia III-IV^{p}], H., sch.), θριγγός (v.l. Plu. 2, 85f.), θριγχός (v.l. Dsc. 4, 85).
•DER θριγκίον (Luc., App.), θριγκώδης 'like a coping' (H.) sub αἱμασιαί; θριγκόω [v.] 'to provide with a θ., crown, complete' (ξ 10 et al.) with θρίγκωμα = θριγκός (J., Plu.), see Chantraine 1933: 186f.
•ETYM A term of construction; see discussion on ►γεῖσον. The forms τριγχός and θριγγός may show old variation or more recent developments. The form στριγχός· τειχίον, στρικτόριον, στεφάνη δώματος 'little wall, crown of a building' (H.) may be a cross of τριγχός and στρικτόριον (= Lat. strictōrium). The word is without a doubt Pre-Greek.

θρίδαξ, -ακος [f.] 'lettuce' (Epich., Ion., Hell.). ◂PG(V)▸

•DER θριδακῖνη 'id.' (Att., Hell.; Chantraine 1933: 204) together with -ῖνίς [f.] (Stratt.), θριδακίσκα (Alcm. 20; Chantraine 1933: 407), θριδάκιον (Plu.); also θριδακίας = μανδραγόρας θῆλυς (Dsc., Chantraine 1933: 94) and the adjective θριδακ-ηΐς [f.] (Nic.), -ώδης (Dsc.) 'lettuce-like'. Several by-forms: θίδραξ (Arr., H.) together with θιδρακίνη (H.; metathesis of liquids, see Schwyzer: 258), θρύδαξ (pap.; after θρύον?), θρόδαξ (H.) together with θοδράκιον (Choerob.).
•ETYM Acc. to Nehring Glotta 14 (1925): 151, it is Pre-Greek. Because of the typical leaves, Strömberg 1940: 39 thinks of θρῖον 'fig-leaf, leaf in general' and compares οἶδαξ 'unripe figs'. By folk-etymological association with τρι- 'three' arose τετρακίνη = θριδακίνη (Hippon. 135). For the interchange ο/ ι, cf. τορνία· σταφυλή beside θρινία· ἄμπελος (Fur.: 392).

θρῖναξ, -ακος [f.] 'three-pronged fork, trident' (Ar., Tab. Heracl. 1, 5, Nic.). ◄PG(S, V)► •DER Thence Θρινακίη [f.] "fork-island", name of a mythical island (Od.), later identified with Sicily, and changed to Τρινακρία (τρία ἄκρα) by folk etymology; also Θρινακίς [f.] (Str.); adj. Θρινάκιος 'Sicilian' (Nic.).
•ETYM Technical word in -ᾰξ (Chantraine 1933: 377ff.). Mostly interpreted as a compound with τρι- 'three', but the attempts at finding an IE etymology have failed (see examples in Frisk). Fur.: 189 compares τρίναξ 'an instrument in agriculture', with τ/ θ; note also the suffix -ακ-, frequent in substrate words. Another comparison has been with θρῖον 'fig-leaf' (because of the form), with θρινία· ἄμπελος ἐν Κρήτῃ 'vine on Crete' (H.); very unlikely.

θρίξ [f.] 'hair', especially the bodily hair in opposition to κόμη, the well-groomed hair of the head (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Gen. τριχός.
•COMP E.g. τριχό-φυλλος 'with leaves like hair' (Thphr., of a pine forest), οὐλό-θριξ 'with curly hair' (Hdt., etc.).
•DER 1. θρίσσα, Att. θρίττα [f.] < *θρίχ-ι̯α 'Clupea alosa' (middle com., Arist.), a kind of anchovy called after its hairlike bones (Strömberg 1943: 47f.; also Thompson 1947 s.v.); diminutive θρισσίον (pap.); in the same meaning also τριχίς, -ίδος [f.] (Ar.), τριχίδιον (Alex.), τριχίας [m.] (Arist.). 2. Diminutive τρίχιον (Arist.). 3. τριχώδης 'full of hair, hairlike' (Hp., Arist.). 4. τριχωτός 'hairy' (Arist.; cf. τριχόομαι below). 5. τρίχῐνος 'of hair' (Pl., X.). 6. τριχῖτις, -ιδος [f.] sort of alum (after its fibrous structure; Dsc., Plin.). 7. τριχία 'knot' (pap.). 8. τριχισμός 'hairline split of a bone' (Paul. Aeg.), as if from *τριχίζω; cf. Chantraine 1933: 143ff. Denominative verbs: 1. τριχόομαι, -όω 'to (be) provide(d) with hair' (Arist.); thence τρίχωμα 'hair growth' (Hdt., E., X.) together with τριχωμάτιον (Arist.); τρίχωσις 'hair growth' (Arist.). 2. τριχιάω 'to suffer from a hair disease' (Hp., Arist.) together with τριχίασις, name of some hair diseases (medic.). 3. *τριχίζω cf. τριχισμός above.
•ETYM The words for 'hair' are different in most Indo-European languages. The comparison with MIr. gairb-driuch 'bristle' (from garb 'raw' and drigu-* or driku-*) is better abandoned. Lith. drikà 'threads hanging from the loom' (Fraenkel 1955 s.v. draĩkas) presupposes d*$^{(h)}$rik-, and therefore cannot be connected.

θρῖον [n.] 'fig leaf', secondarily also 'leaf' in general; mostly as the name of a dish from eggs, milk, and honey in fig leaves (Ar.). ◄?►
•COMP As a second member in λεπτό-θριος 'of fine leaves' (Nic.) with metrical shortening of -ῐ-.
•ETYM No etymology; a Mediterranean word (Frisk)? Cf. θρινία· ἄμπελος ἐν Κρήτῃ 'vine (Cret.)' (H.), and see also θρῖναξ and θρίδαξ.

θρίσαι [v.] 'to cut off' (Archil., E., Dsc.). ◄IE► •VAR Also ἀπο-θρίξαι, -ασθαι (v.l. E. Or. 128, Ael.), after θρίξ(?); aor. ἔθρισεν δόμον (A. Ag. 536), mostly derived from ἀπο-θερίσαι. Also συνέθρισε· συνέτεμε, λεπτὰ ἐποίησεν. ἀπὸ τοῦ θρίσαι, ὅ ἐστι τεμεῖν 'was cut down, made small; from θ., which means to cut' (H.).
•ETYM Mostly taken as a syncopated form of ἀπο-θερίσαι (LXX, Ael.), belonging to θερίζω 'to mow down' (s.v. ►θέρομαι); the syncope is supposed to be metrically licensed, but it was hardly influenced by θραύω, θρύπτω (as per Frisk). Cf. ►θρίψ.

θρίψ [m.] 'woodworm' (Thphr., Men.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Gen. θρῖπός.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in θριπ-ήδεστος 'eaten by woodworms' (Ar., Hyp., Att. inscr.), from ἐδεστός with compositional lengthening).
•DER θριπώδης 'full of woodworms' (Thphr. HP 3, 8, 5; v.l. θριπηδέστατος), together with θριπωδέστατος.
•ETYM Cf. ἴψ, κνίψ, σκνίψ. Güntert 1914: 134f. assumes a transformation of *θρύψ based on these words, which would belong to θρύπτω 'crumble, rub'; unlikely. See Gil Fernández 1959: 114f. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

θροέω 'call, proclaim, speak'. ⇒θρέομαι.

θρόμβος [m.] 'clump, clot, curd', especially of blood (IA). ◄PG?►
•DER θρομβίον (Dsc.), θρομβήϊον (Nic.), θρομβώδης 'full of clumps' (IA), θρομβόομαι 'form θ., congeal' together with θρόμβωσις 'curdling, thrombosis' (medic.).
•ETYM Compared with MoIc. drambr [m.] 'knag, knot' for the reconstruction IE d*^{h}rómb^{h}o-. However, deaspiration of stop after nasal (thus Schwyzer: 333) did not occur in Greek (see especially ►ἀμφί and ►ὀμφαλός; cf. on ►θάμβος), so a direct connection is impossible. The same holds for the comparison with the group of Lith. dramblỹs, dremblỹs 'fat belly', Latv. dram̃blis 'glutton'. Within Greek, θρόμβος is generally connected with ►τρέφω as 'make congeal', med. τρέφεσθαι, them.aor. τραφεῖν 'to congeal'; θρόμβος would then mean "curdled mass". The verb later received the specialized meaning 'make thick, feed', and had its proper development in Greek. Since τρέφω does not have a convincing IE etymology, the present word would be of Pre-Greek origin as well (Fur.: 274 takes no decision).

θρόνα [n.pl.] 'flowers', as a decoration in woven tissues and embroidery (Il.), as a medicine and charm (Hell. poets). Acc. to the sch. on Theoc. 2, 59, the Thessalians used θρόνα for colorful embroidered figures (πεποικιλμένα ζῷα), and the Cypriots for variegated clothes (ἄνθινα ἱμάτια); H. glosses θρόνα both as 'flowers' and as 'colorful embroideries' (θρόνα· ἄνθη, καὶ τὰ ἐκ χρωμάτων ποικίλματα); cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 448; Bowra JHS 54 (1934): 73. ◂PG(V)▸

•COMP ποικιλό-θρονος as an epithet of Aphrodite (Sapph. 1, 1), probably after θρόνα ποικίλα (X 441); likewise χρυσό-, ἀργυρό-θρονος et al., see Lawler Philological Quarterly 27 (1948): 80ff.
•ETYM Many desperate attempts at finding an etymology: for example, Lidén 1897: 67f., 95f. compared Alb. drë-ri, drê-ni [m.] 'deer' (PAlb. *drani- 'variegated'?, = Illyrian δρανίς [corrected for ἀρ-]· ἔλαφος 'deer' [H.]), from IE *d^{h}roni-. Solmsen KZ 35 (1897/98): 474f. compared θρόνα as 'herbs, flowers' with Ru. dërn 'lawn, grass', etc. (rejected by Vasmer 1953 s.v. dërn). Fur.: 189 compares τρόνα· ἀγάλματα, ἢ ῥάμματα ἄνθινα 'statues, colorful stitchings' (H.), which proves Pre-Greek origin.

θρόνος [m.] 'throne, seat', also 'chair of state, judge's seat'. ◂PG?▸
•DIAL Myc. to-no /t^{h}ornos/, to-ro-no-wo-ko /t^{h}orno-worgos/.
•COMP χρυσό-θρονος 'with golden throne' (Il.).
•DER Diminutives θρονίς [f.] (Them.), θρόνιον (EM, Ptol.); further θρονίτης (cod. -τις)· πρώτιστος 'principal' (H.); θρονιτικός 'throne-like' (Sidyma); denominative verb θρονίζομαι 'be placed on the throne' (LXX) together with θρονιστής 'enthroner' (liter. pap.), θρονισμός 'enthronisation' (D. Chr.); also θρόνωσις 'id.' (Pl. Euthd. 277d; as a rite of the Corybantes), as if from *θρονόομαι; cf. Chantraine 1933: 279.
•ETYM The formation has been compared with that of κλόνος, which would belong to κέλομαι; the root is assumed to be *d^{h}er- 'to hold, support', found in Skt. dhar-, perf. dādhā́ra. Within Greek, this root has been recognized in ἐνθρεῖν· φυλάσσειν 'to guard' (H.) (see ►θρησκεύω). The original meaning θρόνος would then be 'supporter, bearer'.
A number of formal problems persist, however. First, a suffix -ono- does not seem to have existed in Indo-European or in Greek: there is no certain instance of IE *CC-on-o- (as opposed to the normal thematic type *CoC-no-). Since Greek has only a few forms in nom. -ονος (next to the frequent types in -ων, gen. -ωνος and -ων, gen. -ονος; see Chantraine 1933: 159ff.), derivation from *d^{h}er- with such a suffix is improbable. No other words for 'chair' are derived from the root *d^{h}er-, nor does Greek have a certain derivative from this root (see Pok. 252f.).
Secondly, the connection with ►θρᾶνος 'bench' and θρῆνυς 'footstool' (see De Lamberterie 2004) is problematic, as there are no indications for a seṭ root *d^{h}erh$_2$- in PIE. Neither is there any indication that ►θρησκεύω has anything to do with θρόνος.
A related form within Greek is θόρναξ· ὑποπόδιον. Κύπριοι. ἢ ἱερὸν Ἀπόλλωνος ἐν τῇ Λακωνικῇ 'footstool (Cypr.) or a sanctuary of Apollo in Laconia' (H.), for which one assumes metathesis from *θρόναξ, which is perhaps derived from θρόνος.
Greek words in -ονος are suspected to be of Pre-Greek origin; cf. also χρόνος and Κρόνος with a typical consonantal variation. This may be the case for θρόνος as well.

θρόος 'call, voice'. •VAR Att. θροῦς. ⇒θρέομαι.

θρυαλλίς [f.] 'wick', also the plant name 'plantain, Plantago crassifolia' (Thphr., Nic.), the leaves of which were used to make wicks (hence it was also called λυχνῖτις, Strömberg 1940: 78 and 106). ◂PG(S)▸

•DER From θρυάλλις or from the diminutive θρυαλλίδιον (Luc.) as a back-formation θρύαλλον [n.] 'shower of smut?' (Vett. Val. 345, 22).
•ETYM Cf. φυσαλλίς, συκαλλίς; see Schwyzer: 484 and Chantraine 1933: 252 and 346. The suffix occurs mostly with plants or birds, so the word is probably Pre-Greek. Cf. ►θρύον.

θρυλίσσω [v.] 'to crush, smash'. ◂IE *d^{h}reus- 'crumble'▸ •VAR Or *θρῡλίζω? Only in θρυλίχθη δὲ μέτωπον (Ψ 396), θρυλίξας (Lyc. 487).
•DER θρύλιγμα 'fragment' (Lyc. 880).
•ETYM May be analyzed as a denominative verb from *θρῦλος 'fragment', which would belong to MW dryll 'fragment', Gallo-Rom. drullia [pl.] 'waste', and go back to IE *d^{h}rus-lo- vel sim. The primary verb is seen in Germanic, e.g. Go. driusan 'fall down', properly *'crumble (down)'; Lat. frustum 'morsel' is probably derived from this verb, like Latv. druska 'morsel, crumb' with velar suffix. It is doubtful whether θρυλ[λ]εῖ· ταράσσει,.ὀχλεῖ 'agitates' (H.) belongs here; it may also be an occasional use of θρυλεῖν 'brag, boast' (Frisk). Another hypothetical connection is with ►θραύω (Bechtel 1914 s.v.), but then its vowel would remain unexplained, as one would expect *d^{h}reh$_2$-u-; one might also compare ►θρύπτω.

θρῦλος [m.] 'murmer' (Batr., Orph., pap.). ◂IE? *d^{h}reu- 'murmur, drone, rumble' (or PG?).▸
•VAR Also θρύλλος.
•DER Further θρυλέω (-λλ-) [v.] 'to boast, brag' (Att.), also with δια- and other prefixes; πολυ-θρύλ(λ)η-τος 'much discussed' (Pl., Plb.), θρύλημα 'gossip, boast' (LXX); also θρυλίζω 'produce a false tone on the cithara' (h. Merc. 488; cod. θρυαλ- [would be metrically better] = θρυλλ- ?), together with θρυλισμός, -ιγμός (D. H.).
•ETYM While it seems most obvious to assume that θρυλέω was derived from θρῦλος, both the dates and the frequency refute this. Rather, θρυλέω was formed after the many (denominative, deverbative or primary) onomatopoeic verbs in -έω, e.g. κομπέω, κελαδέω, βομβέω, δουπέω, ῥοιβδέω (see Schwyzer: 726), from which the rare and late θρῦλος was a back-formation. It seems obvious that θρυλέω is connected with θρέομαι, θόρυβος, τονθορύζω. It has been suggested that it is a zero grade derivative of IE d^{h}reu- (Pok. 255), but this root is not well attested (though there is Gr. θρέομαι). As Frisk remarks, it is questionable whether one should analyze an onomatopoeic word in such a purely grammatical way. The frequent notation -λλ- may be an expressive gemination, but it may also point to Pre-Greek origin. Fur.: 237, 281 separates the word from the IE forms and connects it with θόρυβος, with variant *θρυϝ-.

θρύον [n.] 'reed, rush' (Il.). ◂PG(S,V)▸
•COMP As a first member in θρυο-πώλης 'seller of reed' (pap.).
•DER θρυόεις 'rich in reeds' (Nic.), fem. Θρυόεσσα place on the Alpheios (Λ 711), also called Θρύον (Β 592); θρυώδης 'id.' (Str.); θρυΐνος 'made of reeds', θρυῖτις 'grown with reeds' (of γῆ, pap.). Fur. 135 adduces θρύσιος (EM 456, 31) and θρύσις (sch. Φ 351). On ►θρυαλλίς, see s.v.

•ETYM Formally, one may compare βρύον, but further details are unclear. Sommer's connection (Sommer 1905: 60f.) with the Balto-Slavic group of OCS trъstь [f.] 'reed, cane', Lith. tr(i)ušis 'id.' (which presupposes IE truso-*) is impossible because of the anlaut. The variants with -σ- (see Fur. above) point to a Pre-Greek word, and this is not unexpected in the case of a plant name.

θρύπτω [v.] 'to break in pieces, crumble, enfeeble, weaken', med. 'to be effeminate or prudish, be enervated' (IA). ⊲EUR⊳ •VAR Aor. θρύψαι, pass. τρυφῆναι (Il.), later θρυφθῆναι (Arist.), θρυβῆναι (Dsc.), perf. med. τέθρυμμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐν-.
•DER 1. τρύφος [n.] 'fragment' (δ 508, Hdt., Pherecr. et al.). 2. τρυφή 'softness, luxuriousness, wantonness' (Att.); τρυφερός 'soft, wanton' (Att.; after θαλερός, γλυκερός et al.) together with τρυφερότης (Arist.); τρυφηλός 'id.' (AP); τρυφαλίς = τροφαλίς and transformations of it (Luc.); τρύφαξ 'wanton, debauchee' (Hippod.); denominative verb τρυφάω, also with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, with ἐντρυφής = τρυφερός (Man.), 'live softly, luxuriously, be wanton' (Att.) with τρύφημα 'wantonness, luxuries', also concrete (E., Ar.), τρυφητής 'voluptuary' (D. S.). 3. θρύμμα 'fragment' (Hp., Ar.) with θρυμματίς [f.] a kind of cake (middle com.), perhaps also θρυμίς· ἰχθῦς ποιός 'a kind of fish' (H.). 4. θρύψις 'tiring out, softness, debauchery' (X., Arist.) with θρύψιχος = τρυφερός 'dainty' (Theognost., H.), after μείλιχος (Chantraine 1933: 404). 5. From the present: θρυπτικός 'mellow, crumbling' (Gal., Dsc.), 'softness' (X., D. C.), θρύπτακον· κλάσμα ἄρτου. Κρῆτες 'morsel of bread (Cret.)' (H.).
•ETYM The word θρύπτω may continue a pre-form d^hrub^h-ie/o-*, and is compared to Northern European forms: Latv. drubaža 'piece, fragment', drubazas 'splinter', OS drūbōn, drūvōn 'to be sad', OIr. drucht 'drop' (PCl. drub-tu-*). Latvian also has forms in p, e.g. drup-u, drup-t 'crumble', and in Germanic we find variants too: ON drjúpa [v.] 'to drip' (dropi [m.] 'drop'). It is probable that ►δρύπτω was modelled on θρύπτω. We are probably dealing with a non-IE substrate word from Europe of the type discussed by Kuiper NOWELE 25 (1995): 68-72.

θρώσκω [v.] 'to spring, leap upon, rush, dart' (Il.). ⊲IE d^herh$_3$-* 'leap, mount'⊳ •VAR θρῴσκω (Schwyzer: 710, Chantraine 1942: 317), aor. θορεῖν, fut. θοροῦμαι (Il.), ἔθρωξα (Opp.), perf. ptc. fem. τεθορυίης (Antim. 65); after θορεῖν the pres. θόρνυμαι (Hdt. 3, 109, S. Fr. 1127, 9, Nic. Th. 130) for original θάρνυσθαι = κυΐσκεσθαι 'to conceive' in H.; there also thematic θαρνεύει· ὀχεύει 'covers'; see also on ►θρέομαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, ὑπερ-.
•DER 1. From θρω-: θρωσμός (θρῳσμός) 'springing, rising' (K 160, Λ 56 = Υ 3; A. R. 2, 823); θρῶσις 'cord, line' (Theognost., H.). 2. From the aorist: θορός [m.] (Hdt., Hp., Arist.), θορή [f.] (Hdt., Alcmaion) 'masculine seed', properly "spring, jump"; from there θορικός 'of seed' (Arist.), θοραῖος 'containing seed, etc.' (Nic., Lyc.), θορώδης 'id.' (Gal.), θορόεις 'consisting of seed' (Opp.); denominative verb θορίσκομαι 'to receive semen' (Ant. Lib.; cf. κυΐσκομαι). On ►θοῦρος, see s.v.

•ETYM The only plausible comparison is found in OIr. *-dair 'to leap upon', together with the nouns der 'young girl' (< PCl. derā*) and MW -derig 'rutty'. The ablaut pattern is identical to that of ►βλώσκω, μολεῖν, μολοῦμαι. The root was d^herh$_3$-, with d^hrh$_3$- giving θρω- before a consonant; θορή contains an o-grade d^horh$_3$-; the forms with θαρν(ευ)- go back to an old nasal present d^hr-n-(e)h$_3$- > *θαρνω-μι, which was regularly transferred into the class of νυ-presents. The form θόρνυμαι has analogical ορ for αρ after ἔθορον (cf. Harðarson 1993a: 218). The fut. θορέομαι may go back to θερο- < d^herh$_3$- with metathesis (Ruipérez Emerita 18 (1950): 386-407); the aorist may have its vocalism from here.

θύαρος [m.] 'darnell, Lolium temulentum' (Ps.-Dsc.). ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM Formation in -αρος like κόμαρος, κίσθαρος, et al. (Strömberg 1940: 58). Connected with ►θύω 'rage, seethe' by comparison with, e.g., Ru. durníca 'id.' from dur' [f.] 'stupidity'. However, the form in -αρος rather points to a Pre-Greek word (cf. the sequence -υ-αρ-), and connection with θύω is a mere guess.

θυάω 'be rutty'. ⇒θύω 1.

θυγάτηρ, -τρός [f.] 'daughter' (Il.). ⊲IE d^hugh$_2$-ter-* 'daughter'⊳ •DIAL Myc. tu-ka-te, tu-ka-te-re, tu-ka-ṭạ-ṣị /t^hugatēr, -eres, -arsi(?)/.
•COMP Rarely in compounds, late as a first member, e.g. θυγατρο-ποιία 'adoption of a daughter' (Cos, Rhodos).
•DER Diminutive θυγάτριον (Com., pap.); θυγατριδοῦς, Ion. -δέος [m.] 'daughter's son, grandson', θυγατριδῆ [f.] 'daugher's daughter, granddaughter' (IA), also θυγατερεῖς [f.] (Magnesia; after patronymics in -ίς); θυγατρίζω 'call daughter' (com.; cf. Schwyzer 731[1]).
•ETYM Old word for 'daughter', preseved in most IE languages: Skt. duhitár- (nom. duhitā́; on the accent, see below), OAv. dugədar-, Arm. dustr, Osc. futír, MoHG Tochter, Lith. duktė̃, OCS dъšti, ToB tkācer, ToA ckācar, all from IE d^hugh$_2$tér-*. New evidence has come from Anatolian: HLuw. tuwatra/i- 'id.', Lyc. kbatra- 'daughter'. According to Kloekhorst 2008, these forms point to an old full grade of the root, and he reconstructs du̯etr-* < du̯egtr-* < d^hueghetr$_2$-*. The ablaut pattern of Greek (barytone θυγάτηρ) would confirm this reconstruction; it is, then, unnecessary to explain θυγάτηρ as opposed to Skt. duhitā́ by analogy after the vocative θύγατερ.

θυεία [f.] 'mortar' (Com.), also 'oil-press' (pap.). ⊲IE? d^huH-* 'fly about, dash'?⊳
•VAR Also -είη (Nic. Th. 91); late also itacistic -ία, -ίη; also θυεῖον [n.] 'id.' (pap.).
•DIAL Myc. tu-we-ta /t^huestās/.
•DER Diminutive θυ(ε)ίδιον (Ar.); back-formation (?) θυΐς, -ίδος [f.] (Damocr. apud Gal.). Further θυέστης [m.] 'pestle' (Dionys. Trag.).
•ETYM Formation like ἐγχείη (to ἔγχος), etc., which points to *θυεσ-ίᾱ as a derivative in -ία from θύος 'burnt sacrifice' (Solmsen 1909: 250 fn.). We may compare other words in -ία for concreta, especially names of vases like ὑδρία, ἀντλία (Scheller 1951: 48ff.). The meanings 'mortar' and 'oil-press' are supposed to have developed from 'vase for pounding the incense', which is rather strange. The neuter θυεῖον is reminiscent of the vessel name ἀγγεῖον. On the formation of θυέσ-της, see Chantraine 1933: 312f.

θύελλα [f.] 'thunderstorm, hurricane' (Il., Arist.). ◂IE *d^heuh_2- 'storm, rage, dash'▸ •COMP θυελλό-πους (Nonn.) after ἀελλό-πο(υ)ς (Θ 409) et al.
•DER θυελλώδης (sch. S.) like ἀελλώδης (sch. Il.).
•ETYM From θύω 'storm, rage, dash', perhaps based on ►ἄελλα, in which the suffix in -l- was inherited.

θυηλή [f.] '(part of) a victim sacrificed in a burnt offering' (I 220). ◂IE? *d^heuh_2- 'storm, dash'▸ •DER Lengthened form (Chantraine 1933: 186f.) θυηλήματα [pl.] (Thphr. Char. 10, 13; beside στέμματα). Cf. further: 1. θυᾰλήματα [pl.] 'id.' (Milete V^a), lengthened from *θυάλη (type ἀγκάλη : ἄγκος) or after ἄλημα, παιπάλημα? 2. θυλήματα [pl.] 'sacrificial cake' (Com., Thphr.), from an λ-derivative to ►θύω. θυλέομαι (Porph.) is a back-formation from θυλήματα.
•ETYM Formation like ►γαμφηλαί (but this is not from ►γόμφος; s.v.), ἀκανθηλή (: ἄκανθα, Hdn.). Other comparanda are some barytones like ἀνθήλη (to ἄνθος, ἀνθέω), δείκηλον (from δείκνυμι), τράχηλος (from τρέχω, τροχός). The form θυηλή would then be derived from θύος or (less probably) directly from θύω 'to sacrifice'.

θύλακος [m.] 'sack, bag', mostly made of leather (IA). ◂PG▸ •VAR θυλλίς· θύλακος (H.), θυλίδες· οἱ θύλακοι (H.); also θῦλαξ (com.), perhaps a back-formation from θυλάκιον.
•COMP As a second member in παρσουλακίρ (= παραθυλακίς)· τὸν τρίβωνα, ὅταν γένηται ὡς θύλακος 'a threadbare garment, as it came to be like a sack' (H.; Lacon.).
•DER Diminutives: θυλάκιον (IA), θυλακίς [f.] (Ael.), θυλακίσκος [m.] (com., Dsc.). Other derivatives: θυλακή 'scrotum' (Hippiatr.), θυλακώδης (Thphr.), θυλακόεις (Nic.) 'like a sack'; θυλακῖτις in plant names (Dsc.): θ. μήκων (after the capsules of the seeds), θ. νάρδος (after the acorn-like stock of the root; Strömberg 1940: 36); θυλακίζειν· τὸ ἀπαιτεῖν τι ἑπόμενον μετὰ θυλάκου. Ταραντῖνοι (H.). Short form, possibly with hypocoristic gemination: θυλ(λ)ίς (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Like σάκκος, probably foreign. The suffix -ακ- points to Pre-Greek origin (Pre-Greek: Suffixes). A form *θῡλ(ο)-, obtained after removing a suffix -κ(ο)-, has been compared with Lith. dundùlis 'puffed, big-bellied', but this is only speculation.
The forms θαλλίς· μάρσιππος μακρός 'long bag' and θάλλικα· σάκκου εἶδος 'kind of bag' (H.), with different vocalism, are unexplained.

θύμαλλος [m.] name of a fish 'Thymallus vulgaris, Salmo thymallus' (Ael.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Formation in -αλλος (Chantraine 1933: 317 compares κορύδ-αλ(λ)ος et al.), which has been connected with θύμον 'thyme' because of the scent (Strömberg 1943: 60f.; doubts in Thompson 1947 s.v.).-- However, as the suffix is Pre-Greek, it is improbable that the basic word was of inner-Greek formation. Via Lat. thymallus, the word was borrowed as Ital. temolo, etc.

θυμάλωψ, -ωπος [m.] probably 'piece of firewood, charcoal' (Com., Luc. Lex. 24). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Formation like αἱμάλωψ 'mass of blood, blood clot' (Hp., pap.), νυκτάλωψ 'seeing in the night' = 'day-blind(ness)'; secondarily 'night-blind(ness)', based on which ἡμεράλωψ was created. Since the present word has nothing to do with 'seeing', we are probably dealing with a Pre-Greek suffix -λωψ. Cf. also ►ἀγχίλωψ, ►αἰγίλωψ, which no doubt derives from a Pre-Greek word as well.

θύμβρᾱ [f.] name of a sweet-scented plant, 'savory, Satureia Thymbra' (com., Thphr., Dsc.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also θύμβρον (Thphr.) and θυμβραία (Hp. apud Gal.; after other plant names in -αία). By metathesis (or adaptation to θρύ-πτω?): θρύμβη (Gp.).
•DER θυμβρώδης 'like θ.' (Thphr.), θυμβρίτης οἶνος 'wine spiced with θ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Hardly derived from θύμον, θύμος 'thyme' (Strömberg 1940: 149), in which case the -β- could be epenthetic between μ and ρ. Persson 1891: 56[4] proposed a derivation from τύφω in -ρ-, with nasalization and deaspiration. This is most improbable, unless the word is Pre-Greek (where prenasalization is common); there was no deaspiration after nasal (cf. ►ἀμφί). The proposal is rejected by DELG. Niedermann Glotta 19 (1931): 14 recalls Anatolian TNs like Θύμβρη, Θύμβριον, and on the other hand Τυφρηστός (southern spur of the Pindos, named after θύμβρα?). Clearly a non-IE Greek plant name, probably Pre-Greek; note the metathesized form. The ending -αια is remarkable. The Anatolian toponyms could stem from a language related to Pre-Greek.

θυμέλη 'hearth'. ⇒θύω 2.

θυμιάω [v.] 'to produce smoke, fumigate' (IA). ◂IE *d^heuH- 'smoke'▸ •VAR Aor. -ιᾶσαι, Ion. -ιῆσαι; lengthened forms: θυμι-άζω, -ατίζω (Gp.), -αίνω (gloss.), -ατεύω (sch.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER (Ionic forms unmarked): θυμίασις, mostly from the prefixed verbs (ἀνα-, ἐπι- et al.), 'fumigating' (IA); θυμίαμα, also from the prefixed verbs, 'incense' (IA); ἐπιθυμιατρός 'fumigator' (Ephesus), θυμίατρον 'vessel for fumigation' (Milete, Hell.), also θυμιατρίς (Dam.), mostly θυμιατήριον (IA); deverbal θυμίη = -ίημα (Aret.); θυμιατός 'fir for fumigation' (Hp., Arist.), -τικός 'id.' (Pl.).
•ETYM Formation in -ιάω (after κονι-άω, etc.; Schwyzer: 732) from ►θυμός in its old meaning 'smoke', which was lost in the Greek base form.

θύμον [n.] 'thyme' (IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Rarely -ος [m.].
•COMP As a first member in θυμ-ελαία [f.] name of a plant, perhaps 'Daphne Cnidium' (Dsc., Plin.; cf. on ἐλαία) together with -αΐτης (οἶνος) 'wine spiced with θ.' (Dsc.); θυμ-οξ-άλμη [f.] 'drink from thyme, vinegar and brine' (Dsc.).
•DER θύμιον = σμῖλαξ, also 'large wart' (Hp., Dsc.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 97), θυμίτης 'spiced with θ.' (Ar., Dsc.), θύμινον (μέλι) 'made of θ.' (Colum., Apul.), θυμόεις 'rich in θ.' (Choeril.), θυμώδης 'θ.-like' (Thphr.). Denominative verb θυμίζω 'taste θ.' (sp. medic.), θυμιχθείς· πικρανθείς 'bitter' (H.).

•ETYM Primary derivative in -μο- from ►θύω 2 'smoke', named after its scent (Strömberg 1940: 27)? This is doubtful. A variant of ►θῦμός with short *u seems impossible in IE terms. As a local plant name, the word is liable to be of Pre-Greek origin. Cf. further the fish name ►θύμαλλος.

θῦμός [m.] 'spirit, courage, anger, sense' (Il.); on meaning and use in Hom., etc. Marg 1938: 47ff.; also Magnien REGr. 40 (1927): 117ff. (criticism by Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 214f.). ◄IE *d^huH-mo- 'smoke'►
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. θυμο-βόρος 'eating the heart' (Il.), θυμ-ηγερέων 'gathering one's spirit, coming to oneself' (η 283; Leumann 1950: 116[83], Chantraine 1942: 349), θυμᾱρής, θυμήρης 'delighting the heart' (Il.; Bechtel 1914 s.v., Leumann: 66); πρό-θυμος 'prepared, willing' (IA) with προθυμία, -ίη 'willingness' (B 588) and -έομαι [v.] (IA).
•DER Diminutive θυμίδιον (Ar. V. 878); adjectives θυμικός and θυμώδης 'passionate, vehement' (Arist.); denominative verbs: 1. ►θυμιάω 'fumigate' together with θυμίη 'incense'; 2. θυμόομαι 'get angry' (IA), rarely -όω 'id.' (E. Supp. 581), together with θύμωμα 'anger' (A. Eu. 861, Epigr.), θύμωσις 'id.' (Cic. Tusc. 4, 9, 21); 3. θυμαίνω 'be angry' (Hes. Sc. 262, Ar., A. R.).
•ETYM Identical with Skt. dhūmá-, Lat. fūmus, Lith. dū̃mai [pl.], OCS dymъ 'smoke'; the meaning 'smoke' is preserved in ►θυμιάω. On the meaning of ►θῦμός, see Chantraine 1933: 134. OHG toum 'steam, vapor', with an IE diphthong *ou, has been cited. Cf. ►θύω 2. DELG compares ►θύω 1 'rush in, rage', because derivation from 'smoke' is judged to be difficult.

θύννος [m.] 'tunnyfish' (Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 62, A. Pers. 424, Arist.). ◄PG► •VAR Fem. θύννᾰ or *-η, gen. -ης (Hippon. 26, 2 W, see LSJ Supp.); also -ίς, -άς (com.).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in θυννο-σκόπος 'watcher for tunnies' (Arist.), -έω (Ar.) together with -ία, -εῖον (Str.).
•DER θύνναξ, -ᾱκος [m.] (com.; affective formation, see Björck 1950: 62); θυννίτης 'tunny fisher' (inscr. Varna), θύννειος, θυνναῖος 'of tunny' (Ar.), θυννώδης 'tunny-like' (Luc.), θυννεῖα [pl.n.] 'tunny-fishing' (Troezen), θυννευτικός 'belonging to tunny-fishing' (Luc.; as if from *θυννεύω, cf. also ἁλιευτικός et al.); denominative verbs θυννάζω 'catch tunny' (Ar.), also -ίζω (Suid.).
•ETYM Mediterranean word, often compared to Hebr. tannīn 'big water-animal, whale, shark' (Lewy 1895: 14f.), but this is rejected by DELG. See Strömberg 1943: 126f. and Thompson 1947 s.v., also on folk etymologies (from θύω, θύνω). Borrowed as Lat. thynnus, thunnus, whence the Romance forms are derived. The fem. in short -α could point to Pre-Greek origin (see Bq.).

θύνω 'rush in'. ⇒θύω 1.

θύον [n.] name of a tree, the wood of which was burned for its good fragrance: 'arborvitae' (ε 60, Hell.), 'Callitris quadrivalvis'. DELG also gives 'Juniperus foetidissimus' (s.v. θύω 2). ◄?►
•VAR Also θυία, θύα.
•DER θυῖον 'resin' (Thphr.).
•ETYM It has been suggested that it is a primary derivative of ►θύω 2. The relation of these forms is not clear; it does not seem very probable that two distinct trees had nearly identical names.

θύος [n.] 'burnt offering', mostly in plur. θύη (Il.). ◄IE *d^heuH- 'smoke'► •DIAL Myc. tu-we-a /t^hue^ha/ 'aromatic products'.
•COMP As a first member in ►θυοσκόος, θυο-δόκος 'accepting burnt offerings' (E.), θυη-πόλος 'making offerings, priest(ess)' (A., E.), together with -έω, -ία (θυη- after the plural?).
•DER θυόεις, θυήεις 'rich in incense, etc., fragrant' (Il.; θυῶεν· εὐῶδες 'fragrant' H.); θυώματα [pl.] 'incense, spices' (Ion.), lengthened from θύος (cf. Chantraine 1933: 187) rather than from a denominative *θυόομαι, -όω, though such a verb seems presupposed by the ptc. τεθυωμένος 'with odour' (I 172 et al.), to which also θυωθέν (Hedyl. apud Ath. 11, 486b); θυΐσκη (LXX, J.; v.l. -ος), also θύσκη, -ος [f.] (pap., Suid., EM) 'censer', after καδίσκος et al.; θυΐτης (λίθος) [m.] name of an Ethiopian stone (Dsc., Gal.).
•ETYM Primary derivative of ►θύω 2. Thence Lat. LW tūs, tūris [n.] '(frank)incense'. See further ►θυεία.

θυοσκόος [m., f.] name of a sacrificial priest, probably "observer of sacrifices" (Hom., E.), also as a translation of Lat. haruspices (D. H.); adjectival θυοσκόα ἱρά (IG 14, 1389: 12; verse inscr.). ◄IE *(s)keu- 'observe'► •DER θυοσκεῖν· ἱεροῖς παρέζεσθαι, ἢ θεοῖς 'to attend to a sacrifice' (H.); θυοσκεῖς [2sg.] (A. Ag. 87; -κινεῖς codd.); on the hyphaeresis from *θυοσκοεῖν cf. βοηθεῖν from βοηθόος.
•ETYM An analysis of θυο-σκόος as containing a second member *σκοϝός is attractive. This seems to be found as well in Go. un-skawai (for us-skawai*?) sijaima = νήφωμεν. The Gm. iterative OS skauwōn, OHG scouwōn 'see, perceive' is certainly connected, being parallel to the Greek iterative ►κοέω 'to note, perceive' with s-mobile (s.v. and LIV[2] s.v. (s)keu̯h₁- for further cognates). Cf. also ►ἀνακῶς.

θύρα [f.] 'door, doorleaf', mostly plur. 'gate' (Il.). ◄IE *d^huer- 'door'► •VAR Ion. θύρη.
•DIAL Myc. o-pi-tu-ra-jo /opi-t^huraiōi/ 'doorkeeper'
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. θυρᾰ-ωρός (X 69), θυρ-ωρός, -ουρός (Sapph.) 'doorkeeper' (cf. on ►ὁράω), as a second member with thematic enlargement, e.g. πρό-θυρ-ον 'place before the gate, forecourt' (Il.).
•DER Diminutive: θύριον (Att.) and θυρίδιον (Gp.), θυρίς [f.] 'window (opening)' (IA) with θυριδεύς 'window frame' (Delos III[a]; cf. the names in -εύς in Chantraine 1933: 128), θυριδόω 'provide with a window' (pap.) together with θυριδωτός (inscr.). Further θυρεός [m.] 'door-stone' (ι 240, 313), name of a long shield = Lat. scutum (Hell.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 51), together with θυρεόω 'cover with a shield' (Aq.); θύρετρα [pl.] '(frame of a) door' (epic), together with θυρετρικός (Chios); θύρωμα, often plur. -ώματα 'doorway' (IA; cf. Chantraine 1933: 187); θυρών, -ῶνος [m.] 'hall, antechamber' (S.). Adjective θυραῖος, Aeol. θύραος 'belonging to the door, standing before the door, outside, foreign' (trag., Hell.). Denominative verb θυρόω 'to provide with doors' (Att.) together with θύρωσις (Epid.), θυρωτός (Babr.). θυραυλέω [v.] 'to sleep before the door' is from a compound with αὐλή; *θυράγματα· ἀφοδεύματα 'excrements' (H.; in wrong position), as if from θυράζω.

•ETYM Starting from θύρ-δα· ἔξω. Ἀρκάδες 'outside (Arc.)' (H.), θύσθεν for *θύρ-σθεν = θύρα-θεν (Tegea), and from θύραζε 'outside, outdoors' < *θύρᾰς-δε, we can reconstruct a consonant stem IE *d^hur-, which is attested in many other languages: OHG turi = Tür (properly plur.) < IE *d^hur-es; Lith. dur-ìs [acc.pl.], dùr-ų̃ [gen.pl.], Skt. dúr-aḥ [acc.pl.] < IE *d^h*úr-n̥s* (on the anlauting d- instead of dh-, cf. Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. dvā́r-). This root noun is frequently replaced by suffixed formations, e.g. the i-stem in Lith. dùr-y-s [nom.pl.], dùr-i-ų̃ [gen.], the o-stem in Go. daur [n.] = MoHG Tor, etc., by an n-stem in Arm. dur̄-n, by a h_2-stem in Gr. θύραι, and also in Arm. dr-a-c' [gen.dat.acc.pl.], dr-a-w-k' [instr.].- - Beside the zero grade *d^hur-, we find the full-grades *d^huer-, *d^huor-, e.g. in Skt. nom.pl. dvā́r-aḥ, acc.pl. dúr-aḥ (see above), which were often generalized as in Lat. for-ēs, ToB twere. Enlargements: Skt. dvā́r-a- [n.], OCS dvor-ъ 'court', Lat. for-īs 'outside', for-ās '(towards) outside'. A zero grade *$d^hu̯r̥$- has been supposed in ►θαιρός 'pivot of a door', but its appurtenance is not certain. The thematic enlargement of πρό-θυρ-ον also occurs, e.g., in Skt. śatá-dur-a- 'with a hundred doors' (Sommer 1948: 131). Cf. Benveniste 1969:1: 311ff.

θύρσος [m.] 'the thyrsos-wand', wreathed in ivy and vine-leaves with a pine-cone at the top (E.). ◂LW Anat.▸ •COMP E.g. θυρσο-φόρος, ἄ-θυρσος (E.).
•DER Diminutive θυρσίον (Hero), θυρσάριον (Plu.); plant name θύρσιον (Ps.-Dsc.), θύρσις (Cyran.), θυρσ-ίνη and -ίτης (Dsc., see Strömberg 1940: 50; the last also name of a stone, Redard 1949: 55); θυρσίων name of a dolphin-like fish (Ath., Plin.; see WH s.v. tursiō). Denominative verbs: θυρσάζω 'flourish the θ.' (Ar. Lys. 1313; Lacon. ptc. θυρσαδδωᾶν = -αζουσῶν), θυρσόω 'use as a θ.' (D. S.). Does θυρξεύς, epithet of Apollo in Achaea (Paus. 7, 21, 13), also belong here? See Boßhardt 1942: 77.
•ETYM Loanword from Anatolia; cf. HLuw. tuwarsa- 'vine' (Laroche BSL 51 (1955): p. xxxiiif., Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 271f.). See Heubeck 1961: 80.

θυρωρός 'doorkeeper'. ⇒θύρα and ὁράω.

θύσᾰνος [m.] 'tassels, fringe' (Il.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Usually plur. -οι; on θυσσανόεις see below.
•DER θυσσανόεις (Il.; on -σσ- see below), θυσανωτός (Hdt., J.) 'framed with tassels', θυσανώδης 'tassel-like' (Thphr.), -ηδόν [adv.] 'id.' (Ael.).
•ETYM Technical word in -ανος (Chantraine 1933: 200). Acc. to Persson 1912(1): 45, it is from *θύσσα < *θύθ-ι̯α, which would be identical with Latv. duša 'bundle of straw, etc.' < IE *d^hud^h-*i*h_2. A primary yod-present is found in θύσσεται· τινάσσεται 'shakes'

(H.), but Latte states that the word is an invention of grammarians in order to explain θύσανος. Skt. dúdhi- 'tempestuous' and several Gm. words (Pok. 264f.) are unrelated because of their meaning; therefore a separate IE pre-form *d^hud^h- can hardly be reconstructed. The variation σ/σσ rather points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 387, who refers to e.g. Ὀδυσ(σ)εύς. This would be understandable for a word of this meaning.

θύσθλα [n.pl.] 'the sacred implements of Bacchic orgies' (Z 134), secondarily 'sacrifice' (Lyc.; influence of ►θύω 2). ◂PG▸ •ETYM The form θύσ-θλα has been derived from ►θύω 1 by means of a suffix -θλο- (Chantraine 1933: 375). This derivation does not seem adequate: it presupposes a much more general meaning than the very specific one of the present entry. It is rather be a loan, either from Anatolian or from Pre-Greek. Hardly related to θύρσος (as per Benveniste 1935: 203).

θῡ́ω 1 [v.] 'to rush in, storm, rage' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also θυίω (Hom., h. Merc. 560; cf. Chantraine 1942: 51 and 372), θῡ́νω (Il.), ipf. also ἐθύνεον (Hes.), aor. ἔθῡσα (Call. Fr. 82).
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ὑπερ-.
•DER θυ(ι)άς, -άδος [f.] "the storming one", 'thyiade, Bacchante' (A., Tim.), also θυῖα [f.] (Str. 10, 3, 10 [and S. Ant. 1151, lyr.?]; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 95); Θυῖα [n.] name of a festival of Dionysus in Elis (Paus. 6, 26, 1), Θυῖος name of a Thessalian and Boeotian month (inscr.); Θυώνη epithet of Semele (h. Hom., Sapph., Pi.); also θύστα· θυῖα and θυστάδες· νύμφαι τινές, αἱ ἔνθεοι, καὶ Βάκχαι 'maidens that are possessed, Bacchae' (H.); Θυστήριος epithet of Bacchus (EM); θῦνος· πόλεμος, ὁρμή, δρόμος 'war, assault, race' (H.; from θύνω; not = Skt. ptc. dhūna-); θῦσις (Pl. Cra. 419e as an explanation of θυμός). Deverbative: θυάω 'be rutty (of swines)' (Arist.; after βακχάω, μαργάω et al.; see Schwyzer: 726^2). Unclear θυωθείς· μανείς, ὁρμήσας 'frenzied, inspired' (H.). On ►θύελλα and ►θύσθλα, see s.vv. Here also θυάκται [m.pl.] (Troezen II^a), if = 'mystae sive thiasotae'; cf Fraenkel 1910: 174; DELG shares this under ►θύω 2.
•ETYM The form θῡ́νω has been analyzed as an old νῡ-present *θύ-νϝ-ω (with ἐθύνεον < *ἐ-θύ-νεϝ-ον), and identified with Skt. dhūnóti 'shake'. It is unclear, however, what 'to shake' has to do with the meaning of this verb. A stem θυσ- has been posited for θυστάδες, θύσθλα, and also for θυίω, if this derives from *θύσ-ι̯ω. It is uncertain, however, that this supposed *θυσ- has anything to do with our verb (Lat. furō is better left aside; see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). See also ►θύω 2. The hesitation between θύω 1 and θύω 2 shows how uncertain the interpretation is. One can hardly even rule out that *θυσ- is of foreign origin. Note rare forms or meanings, such as θύστα, θυτάδες, θυάω. Pok. 261ff. gives an enormous amount of forms and meanings, but no close parallel for the meaning of θύω 1. In the present situation, without further research, nothing can be said.

θύω 2 [v.] 'to offer by burning, sacrifice, slaughter' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Fut. θύσω, aor. θῦσαι (Il.), τυθῆναι (Hdt.), perf. τέθῠκα, τέθῠμαι (Att.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, κατα-, προ-, συν-.

•DER Derivations partly show the older meaning of 'smoke, incense' (see below): 1. θῦμα 'sacrifice' (IA, etc.); 2. ἔκ-, πρό-θυσις from ἐκ-, προ-θύω (late); 3. θυσία see below on θύτης; 4. ►θύος [n.] with ►θυέστης et al. 'incense'; 5. ►θύον 'life-tree'; 6. θυητά [n.pl.] 'incense' (Aret.; on the formation cf. s.v. ►θυηλη); 7. θυ(ε)ία [f.] 'strong-smelling cedar, thuja' with θυῖον [n.] 'resin' (Thphr.); to ►θύος? 8. θύτης [m.] 'sacrificer' (Hell.; ἐκ-θύτης from ἐκ-θύω E.); θύτας (Thess.), together with θυτεῖον 'place for the sacrifice' (Aeschin.), θυτικός 'belonging to the sacrifice' (Hell., directly from θύω), θυσία 'ceremonial offering' (h. Cer.); from there θυσιάζω 'sacrifice' with θυσίασμα, -αστήριος, -ον; 9. θυτήρ [m.] 'id.' (trag.) together with θυτήριον 'sacrificial animal' (E.), also 'altar', name of the constellation Ara (Arat.; Scherer 1953: 192); 10. θύστας· ὁ ἱερεὺς παρὰ Κρησί 'priest (Cret.)' (H.), fem. θυστάς, -άδος 'belonging to the sacrifice' (A., S.); 11. θύστρα [n.] = θύματα (Cos); 12. θυ<σ>τηρίοις· θυμιατηρίοις 'censer' (H.); 13. θυσμικός 'regarding the sacrifice' (ἔτος; Paros, Tenos). See also ►θυηλή, ►θυμός; not in ►θύμον, ►θυμάλωψ. Unclear θῦμέλη 'hearth, altar' (trag.), with θυμελικός.

•ETYM The verb was probably thematicized in Greek. We find a yod-present in Latin suf-fiō 'fumigate', explained as from *-d^huH-ie/o-. Ragot RPh. 75 (2001): 144 connects Hitt. tuḫḫae-^{zi} 'to sigh' from *d^huh_2-, which would be very far semantically. However, Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. tuḫḫae-^{zi} now asserts that the meaning is 'to produce smoke' in Hitt. as well (said of volcanoes). Tocharian has a verb twasastär [3sg.med.] 'to ignite', which Hackstein 1995: 354 connects with our root. It is often supposed that 1. θύω and 2. θύω were originally identical. A semantic core like 'rush, rage, whirl, make dust, smoke' vel sim. has been assumed, but this is far from compelling. The different languages show a mass of formations and meanings which can no longer be neatly interpreted; see Pok. 261-267 (and 268-271) for all material. See also ►τύφομαι. On the other hand, θάνατος, θολός and ἀθύρω, which were connected with our verb by Frisk and others, are unrelated.

θυωρός [m.] 'table for offerings, 'ἱερὰ τράπεζα' (Pherecyd. Syr., Call.). ◄IE uer-* 'observe'►

•VAR Also θυωρίς [f.] (Poll.).

•DER θυωρίτης· τραπεζίτης 'banker' (H.), metaph. in Lyc. 93; θυωρία 'ceremonial offering' (Didyma), θυωρεῖσθαι· εὐωχεῖσθαι 'to relish' (H.).

•ETYM From *θυο-ϝωρός (cf. θυωρόν· τράπεζαν τὴν τὰ θύη φυλάσσουσαν H.); see also ►θυρωρός (but θυο- is difficult). By association with θεός, θεωρία, etc., the spellings θεωρίς, θεωρία arose (Poll., Didyma, imperial period). Not from *θυε-ωρος < *θυ-ἄϝορος, as per DELG s.v., as this is semantically implausible.

θωή [f.] 'penalty' (N 669, β 192). ◄IE? *d^heh_1- 'put'?►

•VAR θωϊή, θωιή (Archil., Ion. inscr., Call.), θΟά (IG 1^2, 114: 42; Att.).

•COMP As a second member in ἀ-θῷος 'unpunished, innocent' (IA) with ἀθῳόω 'declare somebody innocent' (LXX).

•DER Denominative verbs: θΟάω (IG 1^2, 4: 7; 12), fut. θοάσει (IG 2^2, 1362: 14; Att.), θωέω (Delph.), θΟέω (Locr.) with ἀθώητος· ἀζημίωτος 'immune from penalties' (H.), θΟαίω (Cret.), θΟάζω (El.) 'fine, punish'; thence θωΐασις (Delph.).

•ETYM Formation in -ιά (cf. στωιά, στο(ι)ά, etc.), often derived from τίθημι as "the settled penalty" with o-grade of the root; a rather simplistic solution.

θῶκος ⇒ θᾶκος.

θῶμιγξ, -ιγγος [f.] 'cord, string; bow-string' (Hdt., trag., etc.). ◄PG(S)►

•DER Denominative θωμίσσει· νύσσει, δεσμεύει 'to pierce, fetter' (H.), θωμιχθείς (Anacr.).

•ETYM Formation in -ιγγ-, which proves Pre-Greek origin.

θωμός [m.] 'heap' (A., Ar., Thphr.). ◄IE *d^heh_1- 'set, lay'►

•DER Denominative θωμεῦσαι· συμμῖξαι, συναγαγεῖν 'mix together, gather together' (H.).

•ETYM Probably identical with a Gm. word for 'judgement, opinion, situation, etc.', Go. doms, ON dómr, OHG tuom. An old verbal noun of IE d^heh_1- 'set, lay' (see ►τίθημι), thus it properly means 'setting', etc.; cf. ►θέσις, ►θημών.

θώραξ [m.] 'cuirass' (Il.), 'trunk, chest' (Hp.). ◄PG►

•VAR Ion. θώρηξ, hyper-Aeol. plur. θόρρακες (Alc.).

•DIAL Myc. to-ra-ke [n.pl.].

•COMP E.g. θωρακο-φόρος 'wearing a cuirass', χαλκεο-θώρηξ 'with bronze cuirass'.

•DER θωρακεῖον (A., inscr.), θωράκιον (Plb.) 'breastwork, parapet'; θωρηκτής 'soldier with cuirass' (Il.; on the formation Trümpy [see below]), θωρακίτης 'id.' (Plb.); θωρακικός 'belonging to the trunk' (Aët.), θωρακαῖος 'with cuirass (?)' (Delos II^a). Denominative verbs: 1. θωρήσσομαι, -ω 'to put on a cuirass, armor oneself' (Il.), also metaph. 'to strengthen oneself (with wine, οἴνῳ, etc.)' (Hp., Thgn.) with θώρηξις 'drinking to intoxication' (medic.). 2. θωρακίζω 'to armor' (Th., X.) together with θωρακισμός (LXX).

•ETYM Technical word without etymology; probably a loan. Unrelated to Skt. dhāraka- 'container', but compared with Lat. lōrīca as a loanword. As a medical term, the meaning 'trunk, etc.' is probably secondary from 'cuirass, armour'. Ample treatment by Trümpy 1950: 10ff. See also Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 354. Most probably a Pre-Greek word; Fur.: 302[35] points to a v.l. θύραξ, which would prove Pre-Greek origin. Fur. gives more examples of ω/υ; Pre-Greek u* was often rendered by Greek ω. The suffix -ᾰκ- is very frequent in Pre-Greek.

θώς, θωός [m., f.] 'jackal, Camis aureus' (Il., Hdt., Arist.); on the meaning (also a ferret?) see Körner 1930: 17f. ◄PG?►

•COMP No compounds or derivatives.

•ETYM Several hypothetical explanations (see Frisk). Fraenkel IF 22 (1907-08): 396ff. interpreted it as "glutton", related to ►θῶσθαι, ►θοίνη. Probably a loanword; perhaps Pre-Greek.

θῶσθαι [v.] 'to eat'. ◄PG?►

•DER θωστήρια [pl.] = εὐωχητήρια 'offer-food' (Alcm., H.; cf. Kukula Phil. 66 (1907): 226ff., Bechtel 1921, 2: 374).

•ETYM Connected with ►θοίνη; Pre-Greek origin seems quite possible, however.

θώσσω [v.] 'to make drunk, intoxicate', in θῶξαι· μεθύσαι, πληρῶσαι 'to intoxicate, make full', θᾶξαι· μεθύσαι; τεθωγμένοι· ... μεμεθυσμένοι, τεθαγμένοι· μεμεθυσμένοι (all H.), θωχθείς (S. Fr. 173; contracted from θωρηχθείς? See Schwyzer: 16[1]), etc. ◂?▸ •ETYM The traditional connection with θήγω is doubted by WP 1, 823; instead, they connect it with θοί-νη (as *θο(ι)άκ-ι̯ω, *θο(ι)-αξ). DELG thinks the connection with θήγω is folk-etymological.

θωΰσσω [v.] 'to bark, bay, cry aloud, call aloud' (trag.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. θωΰξαι.
•COMP Also with prefix: ἀνα-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER Agent noun θωϋκτήρ (APl. 4, 91).
•ETYM Formation in -ύσσω; further details unknown. Perhaps derived from θώς *'cry like a jackal'?

θώψ, θωπός [m.] 'flatterer', secondarily also as an adjective (IA). ◂PG?▸
•DER θωπικός 'flattering' (Ar.), θωπεύω [v.] 'to flatter' together with θωπεία, θώπευμα 'flattery', diminutive θωπευμάτια [pl.], θωπευτικός (Att., etc.); θώπτω [v.] 'id.' (A.).
•ETYM Hardly a root noun of τέ-θηπ-α, ▸θάμβος, as per Saussure 1879: 156, since this is a Pre-Greek word. Cf. θώψ· κόλαξ, ὁ μετὰ θαυμασμοῦ ἐγκωμιαστής 'flatterer, praiser' (H.), which may be due to learned analysis.

I

-ί [pcl.] particle added to pronouns, mostly of demonstrative value. ◂IE *-iH 'demonstrative pcl.▸
•VAR Att. ὁδ-ί, οὑτοσ-ί, νυν-ί, etc.; also El. το-ΐ, Boeot. ταν-ί, etc., rarely -ίν.
•ETYM Comparable with the enclitics Skt. OAv. īm, ī, and -i in Hitt. aši, uni-, ini- 'that (one)'; perhaps also seen in Lat. utī. Gothic has a deictic element -ei.

ἵ [f.] 'she', anaphoric/reflexive pronoun (S. Fr. 471; also Ω 608?). ◂IE sih_2 'she'▸ •ETYM Identical with Go. si, OIr. sí, Skt. sī-m [acc.]. See Ruijgh 1996: 335-352.

ἴα [f.] 'one and the same', also '(the) one' as opposed to 'the other' (Il.); 'that one' (Gortyn). ◂IE i- pron. 'he, she'▸ •VAR Acc. ἴαν (Il., ξ 435). Incidental forms, partly doubtful, in Lesb., Thessal., Boeot. [Corinn.] and in Hp. (Morb. 4, 37), gen. ἰῆς, dat. ἰῇ (Il.); further dat. n. ἰῷ (Z 422), acc. m. ἰόν (IG 5(1), 1390: 126 [Messen. I[a]], after Z 422; not quite certain), dat. m. ἰῷ (Gortyn).
•ETYM An old pronoun without certain correspondences outside Greek, originally only feminine, and adapted to μία in inflexion (Frisk). It probably continues an inflected form of h_1i-, rather than a reflex of $smih_2$, gen. -ieh_2-s (the latter option was recently defended by J. Katz, lecture at the ECIEC 2007). Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 172 separates the Cretan pronoun ἰός 'ἐκεῖνος' and thinks that Homeric ἰῷ (only Z 422) is an artificial form.

ἰα [f.] 'cry, lament, voice' (Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 85, A., E. [lyr.]). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Ion. ἰή [f.].
•DER As an interjection, ἰαί (S., Ar.) and ἰή (A. [lyr.], Ar., Call.); ἰήιος, epithet of Apollo "who is invoked with ἰή (παιών)" (Pi., trag. [lyr.]); also 'lamenting, sad' (S., E. [lyr.]); denominative verb ἰάζω 'cry aloud' (Theognost.).
•ETYM Elementary formation like ἰώ, ἰού, etc.; the noun arose from the interjection. Cf. ▸ἰόμωροι, ▸ἰάλεμος, also ▸Ἴωνες and ▸ἰώ.

ἰαίνω [v.] 'to (make) warm, delight, heal' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ἰᾶναι (Ion. ἰῆναι), pass. ἰανθῆναι.
•DER On ἰηδονές· εὐφροσύνη, ἐπιθυμία, χαρά 'joy, desire' (H.) see Latte, who reads ἡδοναῖς.
•ETYM In Skt., we find a yod-present iṣaṇyáti 'to urge on, incite' that might correspond to ἰαίνω as Hisn̥-i̯e/o-. The etymology has been doubted because of the deviant meanings. If correct, ἰαίνω and iṣaṇyáti may be derivatives of an *r/n-stem

(cf. Ved. iṣáṇ-i, and perhaps also ἱερός), which was based on primary íṣ-yati, iṣ-ṇā́ti 'bring in quick movement' (with the root-noun íṣ- 'refreshment, comfort'). See van Brock 1961: 255ff. and Ramat Sprache 8 (1962): 4ff. Comprehensive suggestion by García Ramón; see on ► ἰάομαι. Cf. ► ἱερός.

ἰάλεμος [m.] 'lament, dirge' (trag. [lyr.], Theoc.), 'tedious, dull person', also adjectival 'slow' (Hell.; cf. below). ◄PG► •VAR ἰήλεμος (on the distribution Björck 1950: 16).
•DER ἰαλεμώδης 'pitiful' (H., Phot., Suid.), ἰαλεμέω, -ίζω (ἰη-) [v.] 'to lament' (Hdn., Call.) together with ἰηλεμίστρια [f.] 'wailing woman' (A. Cho. 424, lyr.).
•ETYM It is improbable that this expressive word derives from the interjection ► ἰή. The suffix is found only in ► κοάλεμος, which may have influenced the later meaning of ἰάλεμος. Zacher IF 18 Anz.: 86 assumes Thraco-Phrygian origin for ἰάλεμος. Since κοάλεμος is probably Pre-Greek, the same must hold for the present word (Fur.: 151, 317).

ἰάλλω [v.] 'to send forth, stretch out' (Il.; also Th. 5, 77, Dor.); intr. 'flee' (Hes. Th. 269). ◄IE? sel-* 'set in movement'► •VAR Aor. ἰῆλαι, Dor. (Sophr.) ἰᾶλαι, fut. ἰαλῶ (ἐπ- Ar. Nu. 1299).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπ- (ἐφ-, see below), προ-.
•DER Ἰάλμενος PN (Il.), see below.
•ETYM A reduplicated yod-present *ἰ-αλ-ι̯ω; the reduplication has spread to the non-presentic forms. If the aspiration in ἰάλλω (Hdn. Gr. 1, 539; also in φιαλεῖς [Ar. V. 1348] and φιαλοῦμεν [Ar. Pax 432] for (ἐ)πιαλ-) is original, ἰάλλω could belong to ► ἅλλομαι 'jump' (Leumann 1950: 80 n. 45). The connection with Skt. íyarti [pres.] 'to incite, set in motion' (Frisk) is impossible, as this continues h_3i-$h_3$er-ti*. Narten MSS 26 (1969): 77ff. connects it with Skt. sísarti 'stretch out, draw out', and separates sisrate [3pl.med.] 'to flow, run'. Within Sanskrit, this root is synchronically distinct from sar- 'to stretch out', but probably etymologically related. Further cognates of this root are ToB salāte [pret.med.] 'jumped', ToB salamo, ToA salat 'flying' (see LIV² s.v. 1.*sel- 'sich losschnellen, springen'). Connection of Lat. saliō 'jump' seems probable, but see the objections in De Vaan 2008 s.v.

ἴαμβος [m.] name of a metrical foot and a verse, 'iambus, mocking verse' (Archil., Hdt., Att.). ◄PG► •COMP E.g. ἰαμβο-ποιός (Arist.), χωλ-ίαμβος 'choliambus' (Demetr. Eloc.; cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 284f.).
•DER ἰαμβικός 'iambic, mocking' (Arist., D. H.), ἰαμβώδης 'mocking' (Philostr.), ἰαμβύλος 'mocking poet' (Hdn.), ἰαμβύκη name of an instrument (Eup., H.; cf. σαμβύκη), ἰαμβεῖος 'iambic', ἰαμβεῖον [n.] 'iambic verse' (Att.). Denominative verbs: ἰαμβίζω, -ιάζω 'speak, mock in iambi' (Gorg., Arist.) with ἰαμβιστής 'mocking poet' (Ath.).
•ETYM Like διθύραμβος and θρίαμβος, ἴαμβος is doubtless of Pre-Greek origin. See Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 354f. For the formation, cf. ► ἴθυμβος. See ► διθύραμβος.

ἴαμνοι 'lower land, humid meadow'. ⇒ εἰαμενή.

ἰάνθινος [adj.] 'violet-colored' (Str., Plin., Aq., Sm.). ◄GR► •DER Backformation ἴανθος [m.], -ον [n.] = ἴον (H., Theognost.).
•ETYM Properly 'violet-flowered', from ἄνθινος (see ► ἄνθος) and determinative first member ἴον 'violet'. Differently on ἴανθος, Deroy Glotta 35 (1956): 193.

ἰανογλέφαρος [adj.] 'with violet-blue eyes' (Alcm. 13, 69, of girls). ◄GR► •VAR Cf. ἰανοκρήδεμνος· ἴοις ὅμοιον τὸ ἐπικράνισμα 'head-dress that resembles a violet' (H.).
•ETYM Extended from ἰο-γλέφαρος (Pi.) after comparable compounds with κυανο- (e.g. -χαίτης, etc.). The word κυανοβλέφαρος first occurs in AP 5, 60; note also ἀγανο-βλέφαρος (Ibyc.). With different second member: ἰανόφρυς (PMich. 11, 13), modelled on κυανόφρυς. On ἰανογλέφαρος, see Taillardat RPh. 79 (1953): 131ff. and Treu 1955: 265 and 285. Not related to ἑανός.

ἰάομαι [v.] 'to heal' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἰάσασθαι, Ion. ἰήσασθαι (Il.), pass. ἰάθην, ἰήθην (IA), fut. ἰάσομαι, ἰήσομαι (Od.), perf. ἴαμαι (Ev. Marc. 5, 29).
•DIAL Myc. i-ja-te.
•COMP Rarely with prefix (ἐξ-, ἐπ-).
•DER 1. ἴαμα, Ion. ἴημα [n.] 'medicine, healing' (IA) together with ἰαματικός (Cyran.); 2. ἴασις 'healing' (IA) together with ἰάσιμος 'curable' (Arbenz 1933: 71f.), probably also ἰασιώνη plant-name, 'Convolvulus sepium (?)' (Thphr., Plin.); Strömberg 1940: 81 because of its medical use (though this is unknown); 3. Ἰασώ [f.] name of a healing goddess (Ar., Herod.), from ἴασις or from the aor., cf. Καλυψώ. 4. ἰατήρ 'physician' (Il., Cypr., with ἰήτειρα [adj., f.] 'healing' (Marc. Sid.), ἰατήριον 'medicine, healing' (medic., Q. S.); 5. ἰάτωρ 'id.' (Alcm., Thess. inscr.) with ἰατορία 'medical art' (B., S. [lyr.]); 6. ἰατής 'id.' (LXX) with ἰατικός (Str.) 7. ἰατρός 'id.' (Il.), with ἰατρικός, ἡ ἰατρική (τέχνη) 'art of healing' (IA), ἰάτρια [f.] 'midwife' (Alex.), ἰατρίνη 'id.' (imperial period), ἰατρεύω 'heal' (Hp.) together with ἰατρεία, -εῖον, ἰάτρευσις, -ευμα, -ευτικός; 8. ἴατρα [n.pl.] 'payment for healing' (Epidauros, Herod.). More on ἰατήρ, ἰάτωρ, ἰατρός in Fraenkel 1910-1912 (index); on the difference ἰατήρ : ἰάτωρ see Benveniste 1948: 46. Here also Ἰάσων?
•ETYM Schwyzer: 681 and 683 explains ἰάομαι as a transformation of earlier athematic ἴᾰ-μαι (seen in Ἰα-μενόν M 139, 193 and in Cypr. ἰjασθαι?). Doubts on the connection with ἰαίνω in Schulze 1892: 381f. On the quantity of the ἰ- (ῑ- in Hom., later also ῐ-), see Schulze l.c. and Sommer 1905: 9f. See also van Brock 1961: 9ff. García Ramón 1986: 497-515 derives the verb from the root $h_1$eis- (Pok. 509) 'move strongly, drive on, comfort'. The root may have the form h_1i(e)sh_2-. The root-final h_2 is apparent from ἰνάω and Skt. iṣṇā́ti, while he supposes that the long ī spread from the reduplicated athematic present h_1i-$h_1$ish_2-, which gives PGr. īhamai. He also connects ► ἰαίνω from $h_1$is(h_2)n-ie/o-*, like Skt. iṣanyáti.

Ἰάονες ⇒ Ἴωνες.

Ἰαπετός [m.] Iapetos (Il.). ◄PG(S)►
•VAR Ῑ- metrically lengthened.

•ETYM The name was connected with the biblical Japheth, see e.g. West 1978: 134. The idea seems most improbable for a god thrown into Tartaros by Zeus. Further, the name is often connected with ἰάπτω as "the one thrown off" (Θ 479, Hes.), with Ἰαπετιονίδης (Hes.).
The interpretation seems improbable to me (it is a mere guess). It seems obvious that the name, of a pre-Olympian god, is Pre-Greek. A suffix -ετος is found in Pre-Greek, Pre-Greek: Suffixes 42. Fur.: 155[2] mentions a demon Ἄσβετός (which he compares with Ἄσπετος· ὁ Ἀχιλλεὺς ἐν Ἠπείρῳ H.); it is also found in TNs, cf. Ταύγετον, Ταλετόν.

ἰάπτω [v.] 'to shoot, send on, hurt, wound' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ἰάψαι (Il.), pass. ἰάφθη (Theoc.), fut. ἰάψω (A.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. προ-.
•DER On ►Ἰαπετός, see s.v.
•ETYM For the range of meanings, see ►βάλλω. There is no reason (as per Schulze 1892: 168[3], Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἴπτομαι, LSJ) to assume two different words with the respective meanings 'shoot' and 'hurt' (this is still maintained in the Supplement to LSJ; the meanings given there are rather different from those in Frisk and DELG). The reduplication was generalized from the present to the other tenses. Etymology unclear. Often combined with ►*ἴπτομαι, ἴψασθαι 'squeeze, oppress', but this is semantically difficult. It is uncertain whether the original present of ἰάψαι is contained in ἰάσσειν (cod. -εῖν)· θυμοῦσθαι, δάκνειν 'to be angry, bite' (H.); one could assume *h_2i-h_2ek^w-, but again the meanings are difficult to combine.

ἰασιώνη plant name. ⇒ἰάομαι.

ἰάσμη [f.] 'jessamine, Jasminum officinale' (Aët.). ◄LW Iran.►
•DER ἰάσμινον [n.] 'oil of jasmine', also ἰασμ-έλαιον [n.] (Aët.).
•ETYM From Iranian; cf. MP yāsman, MoP yāsaman, yāsam, yāsamīn, etc.

ἴασπις, -ιδος [f.] 'jasper' (Pl., Thphr.), also the plant-name (Dsc.), probably from the color (Strömberg 1940: 26). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Acc. -ιν.
•COMP As a first member in ἰασπ-αχάτης 'jasper-like agate' (Aët., Plin.) et al.
•DER ἰασπίζω 'be like jasper' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Oriental LW. Cf. Hebr. jāšpe, Akk. jašpu name of a stone; originally Egyptian? See Lewy 1895: 56 and E. Masson 1967: 65f.

ἰαύω [v.] 'to sleep, rest, spend the night' (Il.). ◄IE *h_2eu-, h_2u-es- 'pass the night'► •VAR Rare aor. ἰαῦσαι (λ 261, Call.) and fut. ἰαύσω (Lyc.).
•COMP Also with ἐν-, παρ-, ἐπ-.
•DER ἰαυθμός 'sleeping-place, bed', μηλ-ιαυθμός 'sheep fold' (Lyc.), ἐνιαυθμός 'abode' (EM; uncertain Call. Fr. 127); doubtful ἴαυος· κοίτη 'bed' (H.).
•ETYM Reduplicated present (secondary ἰαῦσαι, ἰαύσω) of the root seen in αὖ-λις, αὐ-λή, and ἀέσκω, from *h_2i-h_2eus-ié/o-. Peters 1980a: 34ff. (followed by Hackstein 1995: 220f., LIV[2] 293 s.v. *$h_2u̯es$-) reconstructs *h_2us-i̯é/o-, and thinks that the reduplication is a secondary addition within Greek. This suggestion must be rejected, since the development of *h_2u- to Greek αὐ- is unacceptable. There is also unreduplicated αὔει (Nic. Th. 263, 283). Cf. the related aorist ►ἄεσα < *h_2u-es-. The glosses ἄιες and αἰέσκοντο in H. are unclear; see Latte. See ►αὐλή.

ἰάχω [v.] 'to cry aloud, shout, shriek, resound, roar' (Il.). ◄IE *$u(e)h_2g^h$- 'cry, sound'► •VAR Aor. ἰαχῆσαι (h. Cer. 20), pres. also ἰαχέω with fut. ἰαχήσω (trag.); perf. ptc. ἀμφιαχυῖα (B 316), to which ἀμφιάχω (Orph., Q. S.).
•COMP Also περι-, ἐπ-ιάχω (Hom.), ἀντ-ιαχέω (Theoc., A. R.).
•DER ἰαχή 'cry, noise' (Il.; cf. Porzig 1942: 228) with ►αὐίαχοι; ἰάχημα 'id.' (E. [lyr.], AP; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 186); see ►Ἴακχος.
•ETYM From reduplicated *ϝι-ϝάχ-ω (on the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 139f.). A thematic aorist *ϝαχεῖν, *ϝάχε is supposed for Homeric ἴαχε, which functions as an aorist (see Chantraine 1942: 393 and Schwyzer: 748). The present may derive from the aor. ἰαχῆσαι or (less probably) be denominative from ἰαχή. On the unreduplicated ptc. ἀμφι-(ϝ)αχυῖα, see Schwyzer: 767 and Chantraine 1933: 1, 421. The long scansion of the α, which occurs once in a while in the tragedians, may result from expressive gemination of the velar (cf. ►Ἴακχος), but influence of the present ἀχέω has also been assumed. See also ►ἠχή.

ἰβάνη [f.] 'water-bucket'. ◄?►
•VAR Also ἴβανον [n.]. LSJ does not give a form *ἴβανος (DELG s.v. ἰβάνη). ἴβδης 'cock, plug in a ship's bottom', •ETYM Usually connected with ►εἴβω; doubts in Bq. The word seems to live on in Tsakon. ἰμάνι 'bucket to scoop water'; see Kukules Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 27: 61ff., as well as on ἱμάς. See also Fur.: 220f. - The word ἴβδης can hardly be IE. Fur.: 307 compares Hitt. impa 'load'. Though it has to do with emptying a ship, it is not evident that it belongs to the word ἰβάνη.

ἴβηνοι [m.pl.] · [σοροί, θῆκαι, ὀστράκιναι, κιβωτοί] εὔθυμοι 'urns, cases, earthenware, box; cheerful' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR There is also ἴβηνος· πλησμονή 'satiety' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

ἰβηρίς, -ίδος [f.] plant-name, 'pepperwort, Lepidium' (Damocr. apud Gal., Aët. apud Ps.-Dsc.). ◄?► •ETYM Probably named after its native environment, Ἰβηρία (Strömberg 1940: 124f.). Alessio Studi etruschi 15 (1941): 205ff. thinks the name is Aegean, like ►ἰβίσκος, ἰβάνη, et al.

ἶβις [f.] 'ibis, Egyptian bird' (Hdt., Ar.). ◄LW Eg.►
•DER ἰβιών 'chapel where ibises live' (pap.).
•ETYM Eg. hb, hīb; see Roeder in PW s.v. Ibis 813.

ἰβίσκος [m.] a kind of mallow, 'marsh mallow = ἀλθαία' (see on ►ἀλθαίνω). ◄PG(V)► •VAR V.l. in Ps.-Dsc. 3, 146, Erot. Also ἐβίσκος (Gal., Aët.).
•ETYM Formed like other plant names, e.g. synonymous ἀλθίσκος (Chantraine 1933: 407). Further unclear; it seems to be identical with Lat. (h)ibiscum (also eb-, -us), which is attested earlier (since Verg.). Given the form of the suffix, it was perhaps taken from there, in which case Celtic origin is possible (WH s.v.). Cf. also on ►ἰβηρίς. Fur.: 355 thinks the word comes from Greek and is of Pre-Greek origin, where ε/ ι is frequent.

ἰβύ [pcl.] Interjection or adverb (H., Phot. from Telecl.). ◄ONOM; LW Anat.►
•DER ἰβύει· τύπτει, βοᾷ 'strikes; cries' with deverbal ἰβύς· εὐφημία, στιγμή 'auspiciousness; spot' (H.). A velar suffix is shown by the glosses in H.: ἴβυξ· ὀρνέου εἶδος, καὶ ἶβις 'kind of bird, also an ibis' (see Thompson 1895 s.v.), ἰβύκη· εὐφημία and ἰβυκτήρ 'singer of a march-song on Crete' (cod. ἰβηκ-). Perhaps also Ἴβυκος PN (Radermacher Glotta 16 (1928): 135f.). The gloss ἰβυκινῆσαι· ἐπευφημῆσαι, βοῆσαι 'sing praises to; cry' (H.; ἰβυκηνίσαι EM) is a cross with βυκινίζω, βυκανίζω (Eust.; see ►βυκάνη). Details in Kock ad Telecl. 58. With a dental suffix ἰβυδῆνας· τοὺς εὐφημοῦντας 'using auspicious words' (H.), cf. the sound-imitating nouns in -δος, like κέλαδος, etc.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic word; Lydian (►ἰβύ) or Ionic (ἰβυκινήσαντες), acc. to H. It was also used as a cry of surprise, which explains why it is glossed with τὸ πολὺ καὶ μέγα by H. It is unclear how the meanings τύπτειν and στιγμή should be understood. Cf. ►βύζω and ►ἰύζω.

ἴγδις, -εως [f.] 'mortar' (Sol., Com., AP). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also ἴγδη [f.] (Hdn. Gr., Hp.).
•DER Diminutive ἰγδίον (Gp., Paul. Aeg.), verbal noun ἴγδισμα (as if from *ἰγδίζω 'to pound the mortar') name of a dance (EM, Suid.; cf. Lawler ClassJourn 43 (1948): 34).
•ETYM The form is reminiscent of λίγδος 'mortar' (Güntert 1914: 158). As a technical term, it is most probably a loan. It can hardly belong to ►ἴκταρ, ►ἴξ, nor to ►αἰχμη. Fur.: 351 believes it is of Pre-Greek origin (note -γδ-); on the variation λ-/zero, see Fur.: 392, 7.

ἴγκρος [m.] · ἐγκέφαλος 'brain' (H.); also Hdn. ◄GR► •ETYM For *ἔγκρος with ι < ε before nasal (see Schwyzer: 275), a hypostasis of ἐν and the zero grade of κάρā, κάρη 'head'; cf. ἔγκαρος and ἀκαρός. See Nussbaum 1986: index.

ἴγνητες [pl.] 'αὐθιγενεῖς, native' (A. D., H.), also as a name of the old inhabitants of Rhodes (Simmias 11, H.). ◄IE *$genh_1$- 'procreate'► •ETYM From *ἔν-γνη-τες, a compound of ἐν and the root *$ǵenh_1$- in ►γίγνομαι (cf. γνήσιος from *γνη-τό- < *$ǵnh_1$-tó-) with a suffix -τ-.

ἰγνύη [f.] 'hollow of the knee, ham' (Il.). ◄IE *genu- 'knee'► •VAR ἰγνύα (Arist.), also forms pointing to *ἰγνύς (ἰγνύσι h. Merc. 152, ἰγνύων, -ύν Arist.).
•ETYM A hypostasis *ἐν-γνύ-η 'place in the knee'. The stem ἰγνύς was formed after ἰξύς, ὀσφύς and other body-parts in -ύς. See Solmsen 1909: 214f. See ►γόνυ.

ἰγνύς 'dust'. ⇒ἰκνύς.

ἰδανός [adj.] 'fair, good-looking' (Call. Fr. 535, H.). ◄IE *uid- 'see'► •COMP ἰδανό-χροος 'with beautiful colors' (Ep. Alex.).
•ETYM Primary derivative of ►ἰδεῖν; cf. πιθανός, ἱκανός et al. (Chantraine 1933: 196f.).

Ἰδάρνας [m.] · ὁ ἐκτομίας, οἱ δὲ βάρβαρον· οἱ δὲ μάντεως ὄνομα· οἱ δὲ πόλιν τῆς Καρίας εἶναι Ἰδάρνην, καὶ ἀπὸ ταύτης τοὺς μάντεις λέγεσθαι 'eunuch; barbarian; name of a diviner; name of a city of Karikos, whence the name of the diviners' (H.). ◄LW Anat.►
•ETYM From the Carian town Ἰδάρνη; further details in Maaß RhM 74 (1925): 432ff.

ἰδέ [conj.] 'and' (Il.), '(and) then' (Cypr.). ◄IE *$h_1(e)i$- 'he, that'► •ETYM Perhaps from the deictic pronoun *h_1i- and δέ 'and, but'. Details in Schwyzer 1950: 566f. Cf. ►ἠδέ.

ἰδέα [f.] 'appearance, form', whence in philosophical terminology 'idea, prototype, category' (IA). ◄IE *u(e)id- 'see'► •VAR Ion. -έη.
•ETYM Verbal abstract from ►ἰδεῖν. For the formation, cf. ►ἀλέα 'warmth of the sun' et al. in Chantraine 1933: 91. On the meaning, see Brommer 1940, Wersdörfer 1940: 43ff., Gillespie Class. Quart. 6 (1912): 179ff., and Baldry Class. Quart. 31 (1937): 141ff.

ἰδεῖν [v.aor.] 'behold, recognize' (Il.). ◄IE *ueid- 'see, know'► •VAR Ind. εἶδον (ἴδον).
•COMP Often with prefix, ἀπ-, εἰσ-, κατ-, συν-, etc.
•DER On ►ἰδέα, ►ἰδανός, see s.vv. Also ἰδανικὸς κόσμος 'realm of ideas' (Ti. Locr. 97d). Note that ἰλλός = ὀφθαλμός (H., e.g. s.v. ἔπιλλος) does not derive from IE *u̯id-lo- (von Blumenthal 1930: 36), but was created from ἔπιλλος· παράστραβος, ἰλλώπτειν· στραβίζειν et al. Cf. on ►ἰλλός.
•ETYM Old thematic root aorist, formally identical with Arm. egit and Skt. ávidat 'he found', IE *h_1e-uid-e-t. Cf. also Lat. videō. The perfect was ►οἶδα 'I know'. As a present, Greek used suppletive ►ὁράω; cf. Kölligan 2007: 274-285. See also ►ἰνδάλλομαι, ►εἴδομαι, ►εἶδος.

ἴδη [f.] 'wood, wooded hill' (Hdt., Theoc.). ◄PG► •VAR Dor. (Theoc.) ἴδα.
•DER As a TN Ἴδη wooded hill in western Mysia (Il.) and on Crete (D. P., Paus.); thence Ἴδηθεν, Ἰδαῖος (Il.).
•ETYM Pre-Greek word without further etymology.

ἴδιος [adj.] 'own, private' (Od.). ◄IE *sue- reflexive pronoun► •VAR Dor. ϝίδιος, Arg. *h*ίδιος.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. ἰδιο-γενής 'of one's own kind' (Pl. Plt. 265e; opposite κοινο-γενής), Hell.
•DER 1. ἰδιώτης [m.] 'private, layman, uneducated man' (IA; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 311) with the fem. ἰδιῶτις (Hell.); thence ἰδιωτικός 'belonging to an ἰδιώτης, common, ordinary, vulgar, vile, uneducated' (IA; Chantraine 1956a: 120 and 123) and ἰδιωτεύω 'act or live on one's own, be uneducated or without esteem' with ἰδιωτεία 'private life, uneducatedness' (Att.); also ἰδιωτίζω 'pronounce in a special way' (Eust.). 2. ἰδιότης, -ητος [f.] 'specific character, peculiarity' (Pl., X.). 3. ἰδικός = ἴδιος (late). 4. ἰδιόομαι [v.] 'to make one's own, appropriate' (Pl.) with ἰδίωμα 'specific character, pecularity' (Hell.), ἰδίωσις 'isolation, appropriation' (Pl., Plu.). 5. ἰδιάζω 'be peculiar, live on one's own' (Arist.) with ἰδιαστής, ἰδιασμός (late).

•ETYM As is shown by Arg. ϝhεδιεστας = ἰδιώτης (cf. κηδεσ-τής, El. τελεσ-τα), ἴδιος goes back to original *ϝhεδιος, derived from the reflexive ϝhε = ἕ (IE *sue) (on ε > ι, see Schwyzer: 256). A different etymology connects it with Skt. ví 'separate', in which case Arg. *hí*διος would have its aspiration after ἑαυτοῦ, ἕκαστος, etc. However, an equivalent of Skt. ví is not found elsewhere in Greek.

ἰ̇δίω [v.] 'to sweat' (υ 204, Hp., com.). ⊲IE sueid-* 'sweat'⊳

•VAR Aor. ἰ̇δῖσαι (Arist., Thphr.).

•COMP Rarely with prefixes ἐξ-, ἀν-.

•DER ἶδος [n.] 'sweat' (Hp. Coac. 105), 'heat' (Hes. Sc. 397, Emp.) with ἰδάλιμος 'causing sweat' (Hes. Op. 415; after εἶδος : εἰδάλιμος, Arbenz 1933: 29); ἀν-ιδ-ιτί 'without sweat' (Pl. Lg. 718e).

•ETYM The glosses εἶδος· καῦμα and ἠεῖδος· πνῖγος (H.) point to an s-stem ϝεῖδος from IE sueid-os-, beside suoido-* [m.] in Skt. svéda-, OHG sweiz 'sweat'. The form ἶδος shows Ionic psilosis and itacistic notation (favored by ►ἱδρώς). The verb ἰ̇δίω = εἰδίω (after κηκίω etc.) represents older *εἴδω = Skt. svédate 'sweats', IE sueid-*. Cf. Rix 1985: 339-43. Other derivations are Skt. svídyati = OHG swizzit 'id.' < IE suid-ie-ti*, and a ske/o-present in Latvian and Iranian (Leumann IF 58 (1941): 120).

ἴδμων 'knowing'. ⇒οἶδα.

ἰδνόομαι [v.] 'to bend oneself, double oneself up' (Hp.). ⊲?⊳

•VAR Aor. ἰδνωθῆναι (Hom.), act. ἰδνόω (Hdn. Gr. 1, 451).

•ETYM From a verbal adjective *[ϝ]ιδ-νός 'curved'? The comparison with Skt. vedá- [m.] 'bundle of grass' is uncertain; see Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 581. WH s.v. compares Lat. vīdulus 'twined basket'; doubtful. The lemma ueid-* (Pok. 1124) should be dismantled. Cf. ►ἴτυς, ►εἰμάδες; also ►ἶρις and ►οἶνος.

ἴδρις 'expert'. ⇒οἶδα.

ἱδρύω [v.] 'to make sit down, settle, establish, found' (Il.). ⊲IE? sed-* 'sit'⊳ •VAR Aor. ἱδρῦσαι, pass. ἱδρυνθῆναι (Γ 78, Η 56), perf. pass. ἵδρῦμαι (A.), Act. ἵδρυκα (Arist.).

•COMP Often with prefix, especially καθ- (whence again ἐγ-καθιδρύω et al.).

•DER ἵδρυμα 'what has been established or founded: statue, temple' (IA), ἵδρυσις 'founding, settlement' (Hp., Pl., Str., Plu.).

•ETYM Frisk followed Schwyzer in positing a noun *ἱδρυ-, which would ultimately reflect a derivative in -r- (comparing ἕδρα) of the root sed-* in ►ἕζομαι, ►ἵζω. The ἱ- was explained as from ἵζω or as a reduced grade of ε, but the latter is impossible. See now Manessy-Guitton 1970, who departs from s°d- with reduced grade; Meier-Brügger 2000: 90f. posits s°d-wr̥-y-*.

ἱδρώς, -ῶτος [m., f.] 'sweat', also metaph. of other moisture (Il.). ⊲IE sueid-* 'sweat'⊳

•VAR Epic dat. -ῷ, acc. -ῶ (cf. below).

•COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. ἱδρωτο-ποιέω (Arist.), δυσ-ίδρως 'with bad sweat, having difficulty sweating' (Thphr.), also with transition to a thematic stem, e.g. κάθ-ιδρος 'covered with sweat' (LXX).

•DER Diminutive ἱδρώτιον (Hp.); ἱδρώεις 'sweaty' (B.), ἱδρώδης 'accompanied by sweating' (Hp.), ἱδρωτικός 'sudorific' (Hp., Thphr.); ἱδρῶα (?) pl. 'smallpox' (Hp. Aph. 3, 21; reading uncertain) together with ἱδρω-τάρια, -τίδες 'id.' (medic.; cf. Strömberg 1944: 102); ἱδρώιον 'sweat-towel' (pap.); ἱδροσύναι [pl.] 'efforts that cause sweat' (poet. inscr. Phrygia, imperial period). Denominative verbs: ἱδρώω 'sweat' (Il.) together with ἵδρωσις 'sweating' (late) and ἱδρωτήρια [pl.] 'sudorifics' (Paul. Aeg.); ἱδρώττω 'id.' (Gal.).

•ETYM Gr. ἱδρώς corresponds to Arm. k'irtn 'sweat', which goes back to an r-stem suid-r-*. This formation is also found in Latv. sviêdri [pl.], Alb. dirsë 'sweat'. This r-stem was combined in Greek with a stem in -ōs-, which is found in Lat. sūdor, if from su̯oidōs*. Like γέλως, ἔρως, et al., ἱδρώς was later transformed into a stem in -τ-. The old s-stem is still seen in epic ἱδρῶ [acc.] (perhaps to be read as -όα; Chantraine 1942: 54), perhaps also in ἱδρῷ [dat.], if for -οῖ (doubtful; see Chantraine 1942: 211), and in several derivatives: ἱδρώ-ω, ἱδρώεις (-os-uent-*; see Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 173), ἱδρώιον. On the absence of the digamma in Hom., cf. ►ἐμέω (other explanations are no better; Chantraine 1942: 156). Cf. ►ἰ̇δίω.

ἰδυῖοι [m.pl.] ἰδῦοι 'witnesses' (μάρτυρες, συνίστορες, Lex Solon. apud Ar. Fr. 222, Paus. Gr. fr. 151, H.), also οἱ τὰς φονικὰς δίκας κρίνοντες 'who are in charge of murder trials' (H.). ⊲IE ueid-* 'know'⊳ •ETYM For *ϝιδυῖοι = Lacon., etc. ►βιδυ(ι)οι; see also Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 91f.

ἵεμαι [v.] 'to move forward, hasten, be eager, desire' (Il.). ⊲IE uei(H)-* 'move towards, go for, desire'⊳

•VAR Aor. (ἐ)είσατο, fut. ►εἴσομαι.

•ETYM The form *ϝίεμαι (on the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 142), as a middle of ἵημι, was taken at an early stage as an old athematic formation (e.g., Chantraine 1942: 293). The word belongs to the widespread group of Skt. véti, 3pl. vyánti 'to pursue, drive', Lith. výti, 1sg. vejù 'hunt, pursue', and perhaps also Lat. vīs 'you want' (Meiser 1998: 224), in-vī-tus 'unwilling'. Cf. Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 170f. Harðarson 1993b: 159ff, assumes a reduplicated u̯i-u̯ih₁-entoi*, which was contracted to u̯īi̯entoi*, from which a stem u̯īi̯e-* was abstracted. The aspiration was taken from ἵημι. Cf. further ►ἰωκή (unclear -κ-), as well as ►ἱέραξ (appurtenance unclear), ►ἴς (possible), ►οἶμος (certainly) and ►ἰότης (unclear).

ἱέρᾱξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'hawk, falcon' (Alcm. 28, E., Ar., Arist.); also a name of a fish (Epich. 68; Strömberg 1943: 113f.). ⊲IE? ueiH-* 'pursue' or PG?⊳

•VAR Also ἴρηξ, -ηκος (epic Ion. since Il.).

•COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. ἱερακο-βοσκός 'falconer' (pap.).

•DER Diminutive ἱερακίσκος (Ar.); ἱερακίδιον, -άδιον 'statuette of a hawk' (Delos II[a]; on the mg. Chantraine 1933: 70), ἱερακεῖον 'hawk-temple' (pap. II[a]), ἱερακιδεύς 'young hawk' (Eust.; like ἀετ-ιδεύς et al.; Boßhardt 1942: 78f.); ἱερακάριος 'falconer' (Cod. Cat. Astr.); ἱερακίτης name of a stone, after its color (Plin., Gal.), ἱεράκιον, also -ία, -ιάς, -ῖτις plant-name, 'hawk-weed, Hieracium' (Ps.-Dsc.; on the unclear naming motive Strömberg 1940: 118). ἱεράκ-ειος, -ώδης 'hawk-like' (late).

•ETYM Though ἵρηξ in Hom. shows no digamma (Chantraine 1942: 156), the glosses βείρακες· ἱέρακες and βειράκη· ἡ ἁρπακτική (H.) point to an original *ϝῑρᾱξ, with -ᾱκ- as in several other animal names. Ebel KZ 4 (1855): 164f. started from an adjective (or noun) *ϝῖρος, which he connected with (ϝ)ἵεμαι. The secondary form ἱέραξ would then be folk-etymological based on ἱερός. Possible but uncertain; alternatively, the suffix -ᾱκ- could point to Pre-Greek origin.

ἱερός [adj.] "holy", 'dedicated to a god, divine', also used in a glorifying way: 'glorious, excellent, strong, quick, etc.' (Il.). ◂IE *ish$_1$ro- 'holy'▸ •VAR Dor. and NWGr. ἱαρός, Ion. poet. ἰρός, Aeol. ἶρος. Substantivized: ἱερόν [n.] 'consecrated area, temple' (post-Hom.), ἱερά [n.pl.], rarely sing. 'votive offering, (animal) sacrifice' (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. i-je-ro, i-je-re-u, i-je-re-ja, i-je-ro-wo-ko /$^{(h)}$iero-worgos/.
•COMP As a first member in many compounds, not mentioned here.
•DER Dialectal forms are often not mentioned separately: 1. ἱερεύς (Il.), Arc. Cypr. ἱερής, Ion. also ἱέρεως (hardly taken from ἀρχιέρεως, Sommer 1948: 129) [m.] 'who performs sacrifices (τὰ ἱερά), sacrificer, priest' (on mg. and spread Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 81f.). From ἱερεύς: a) several feminines (cf. on βασιλεύς): ἱέρεια (Il.), Cypr. ἱερήϝιjα, Ion. ἱερέη, -ῆ; ἱερηῖς (Megar.), ἱέρισσα (pap. II^a); b) the nouns ἱερεία 'priestly office' (Thyateira; cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 311), ἱερεῖον, -ήϊον 'sacrificial animal' (Il.), ἱερ(ε)ωσύνη 'priestly office' (IA) with ἱερ(ε)ώσυνος 'priestly' (Hell.); c) the adjective ἱερευτικός 'priestly' (pap.); d) the denominatives ἱερεύω [v.] 'to offer, consecrate' (Il.) with ἱέρευσις (sch.) and ἱερεύσιμος (Plu. 2, 729d, besides θύσιμος; Arbenz 1933: 94), or from ἱερός, ἱερά; ἱερεώομαι, ἱερεώσασθαι [v.] 'to be priest' (Hell.). 2. ἱερόλας = ἱερεύς (S. Fr. 57; uncertain; on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 238). 3. ἱερῖτιν· καθαρμοῦ δεομένην, ἱκέτιν (H.: A. Fr. 93). 4. ἱερατικός 'priestly, hieratic' (Pl. Plt. 290d, Arist.; cf. also ἱερατεύω, ἱερατεία below). 5. Ἵερυς PN (Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 220). 6. Several denominative verbs: a) ἱερεύω; b) ἱεράομαι 'to care for the victims (ἱερά)' (Hdt., Th.); c) ἱεράζω 'id.' (Ion. islands), Boeot. ἱαρειάδδω, probably from ἱαρεία; d) ἱερόω 'to consecrate' (Att., Locr., etc.) togehter with ἱέρωμα 'consecration' (Cret., Epid., etc.), ἱερωτός (Thess.); e) ἱερίζω = καθαίρω 'cleanse' (H.) (see ἁγνίτης) with ἱεριστής 'who cares for the ἱερα' and ἱερισμός 'holy service' (Hell.); f) ἱερατεύω 'be priest' with ἱερατεία, ἱεράτευμα, ἱερατεῖον; ἱεριτεύω 'id.'; ἱερωτεύω 'id.' with ἱερωτεία; all dialectical, Hell.; on the formation Schwyzer: 732, Solmsen Glotta 1 (1909): 80.
•ETYM The different meanings and the formal variation induced many scholars to split ἱερός into two or even in three words. Thus, a separate ϝῑερός 'rapid, quick' (whence ἱέραξ 'hawk', s.v.) was assumed because of the long anlaut in ῑ̔ερὸν ἰχθύν Π 407, ἱαρὸς ὄρνις (Alcm. Fr. 26), and ἱερὸς ὄρνις (AP 7, 171). This length can easily be explained as metrical lengthening. In the meaning 'strong, forceful', however, ἱερός would be identical with Skt. iṣirá- 'strong, active'. A third ἱερός 'holy' would have connections with Italic and Germanic words like Osc. aisusis 'sacrifiis', Palign. aisis, U erus 'dis', OHG ēra 'honor'. Duchesne-Guillemin 1937: 333ff. supported the old comparison with Skt. iṣirá- by pointing to the agreement between ἱερὸν μένος and Skt. iṣiréṇa mánasā [ins.]. See R. Schmitt 1967: 111-114 on this correspondence. Further literature: Wülfing von Martitz Glotta 38 (1960): 272-307 and Wülfing von Martitz Glotta 39 (1961): 24-43; Locher 1963. Formally, the Greek dialects show three different forms: ἱερός, ἱαρός, ἰρός. Ramat Sprache 8 (1962): 4-28 connects it with Skt. iṣṇāti 'set in movement', which means that the root contained a laryngeal. García Ramón 1992b: 183-205 assumed a pre-form $h_1$ish$_2$-ro- because of the connection with ►ἰνάω. He also assumed that the laryngeal was lost between *s and r. Lesbian ἶρος, then, continues the regular pre-form isro-, while Dor. ἱαρός and Att. (etc.) ἱερός replaced the suffix with -αρο- or -ερο-. On the meaning (against ἅγιος, ἁγνός), see Nilsson 1941(1): 61ff.; also, Bolkestein 1936, Palmer Eranos 53 (1955): 4ff., and Defradas RPh. 81 (1955): 208ff.

ἵζω 'sit down'. ⇒ἕζομαι.

ἰή ⇒ἰήιος.

ἰηθενέουσα [adj.] · ἐκπεπληγμένη, καὶ ἀποροῦσα; ἰαθενεῖ· διαπορεῖ ἐπί τινι κακῷ. Κῷοι 'driven away, looked away from; be in difficulty in some harm (Cos)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unexplained. DELG suggests that the glosses may be corrupt. Fraenkel KZ 77 (1961): 188 proposes to change ἰη-, ἰα- into the privative particles νη-, νᾱ-, based on comparison with ►εὐθενέω 'be strong'.

ἰήϊος [adj.] epithet of Apollo, who is invoked by the call ἰή (παιών) or ἰήϊε παιάν. Also said of βοά, γόος, κάματοι, 'accompanied by laments' (Pi., trag. [lyr.], A. R.). ◂ONOM▸ •DER Here also ἰάζω 'cry' (Theognost.).
•ETYM From the interjection ἰή (A., Ar., Call.), to which ἰῆτε (Pi. P. 6, 120) was taken to be a plural (Wackernagel Phil. 95 (1943): 184), but the latter is rather a form of ἵημι. The same holds for ἱή (Call., H.Ap. 103); see Strunk Glotta 38 (1960): 79-82.
ἰήϊος has been incorrectly derived from ἵημι by the ancients ("ἀπὸ τῆς ἀφέσεως καὶ τοξείας" H.). Cf. ►ἤϊε and ►Εὔιος.

ἵημι [v.] 'to send (away), let go, throw, hurl, etc.' (Il.); details on the inflexion in Schwyzer: 686f., 741, 770, 775. ◂IE *(H)ieh$_1$- 'throw'▸ •VAR Aor. ἕηκα, ἧκα, inf. ἕμεναι, εἶναι, med. εἵμην (ἡκάμην), inf. ἕσθαι, pass. εἵθην, ἑθῆναι, fut. ἥσω (Il.); perf. med. εἷμαι, act. εἷκα (Att.), ἕωκα (Hell.).
•DIAL Myc. (jo-)i-je-si /(hō) ^{h}ī-en-si/; i-je-to /^{h}ietoi/•COMP Mostly (in some forms exclusively) prefixed, e.g. ἀν-, ἀφ-, ἐφ-, καθ-, προ-, συν-, ὑφ-, etc., in several mgs.
•DER Many derivatives, almost only from the prefixed forms: 1. ἧμα 'throwing, throw (of a javelin)' (Ψ 891), ἥμων 'throwing (a javelin)' (Ψ 886); κάθημα, Hell. -εμα (Schwyzer: 523) 'collar' (Antiph., LXX); μεθήμων 'negligent' with -μοσύνη (Hom.), συνήμων 'companion' (A. R.) with -μοσύνη 'treaty, companionship' (Il.). 2. ►ἑσμός 'swarm (of bees)'. 3. ἄν-, ἄφ-, ἔξ-, ἔφ-, κάθ-εσις, etc. (IA; ἕσις only Pl. Cra. 411d, 420a as an artificial formation, EM 469, 49) together with ἀφέσιμος et al. (Arist.); 4. ἐννεσίαι 'advice' (Il.), ἐξεσίη 'sending out' (Hom.), ἀνεσία 'leaving off' (Cratin.); on the formation see ► ἐννεσίαι. 5. ἐνετή 'clasp, needle' (Il.). 6. ἐν-, ἀφ-, καθ-ετήρ (Hp., Hell.) together with -ετήριος, etc.; καθετηρίζω, -ισμός (medic.). 7. ► ἐφέται, ► ἐφετμή; ἀφέτης 'sender, hurler' (Plb.). 8. συνετός 'sensible' (Pi., IA, beside σύνεσις 'comprehension'), ἄν-, ἄφ-, κάθ-ετος, etc.; ἀν-, προ-ετικός (: ἄν-, πρό-εσις; X., Arist., Hell.).

•ETYM The pairs ἔθηκα : Lat. fēcī and ἧκα : Lat. iēcī point to an archaic formation with k-extension. On the original distribution of these forms, see Untermann 1993: 461-8. Latin innovated the present iaciō 'to throw', whereas Greek kept the old reduplicated athematic present. Further cognates are found in Anatolian: Old Hitt. pe-i̯ezzi 'sends away', u-i̯ezzi 'sends hither' contain prefixes and preserve the old meaning. It has also been connected with Hitt. i̯e/a- 'to do, make' (LIV[2] s.v. Hi̯eh$_1$-*), but see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. i̯e/a- for objections to this view. For the initial laryngeal, cf. Peters Die Sprache 22 (1976): 157-161, who shows that Aristophanes consistently has ἵημι < Hi-Hieh$_1$-mi*. Kortlandt thinks that PIE h$_1$* originated from an Indo-Uralic velar phoneme, and that the k* alternating with h$_1$* in ἔθηκα (and perhaps ἧκα) might be a remnant of the old situation.

ἰθαγενής [adj.] 'born here, born in lawful matrimony' (ξ 203, Ion., A., Arist.). ◄IE id^{h}h$_2$e* 'here'►

•VAR Secondary ἰθαιγενής (Schwyzer: 448).

•ETYM Formation like αὐθι-γενής: a bahuvrīhi of γένος, possibly with an inherited adverbial first member ἰθα- = Skt. ihá, Prākr. idha, Av. iδa 'here', as well as Lat. ibī 'there'. The same pronominal stem h$_1$i-* is found in Cypr. ► ἰν, and the same suffix in ἔν-θα.

ἰθαρός [adj.] 'cheerful, bright'. •VAR ἰθαίνω = εὐφρονῶ (Hsch.). ⇒ αἰθήρ.

ἴθματα [n.pl.] 'steps'. ⇒ εἶμι.

ἰθουλίς [?] name of a fish (BCH 60, 28; Boeot., II[a]). ◄PG?►

•ETYM Thought to be a mistake for ἰουλίς (see ► ἴουλος), but adding a θ by mistake is not very probable. Fur. 391 argues for a 'regular' variation in Pre-Greek words.

ἴθρις ⇒ ἔθρις.

ἴθυμβος [m.] name of a bacchic song with dance; one who performs this dance (Poll. 4, 104, H., Phot.). ◄PG►

•ETYM Formation like ἴαμβος, διθύραμβος, etc., and like these probably a loanword from the substrate.

ἰθυπτίων [adj.] 'flying straight (of a lance)' (Φ 169, verse-final). ◄IE pet-* 'fly, fall' or pieh$_2$-*►

•VAR Only accus. μελίην ἰθυπτίωνα.

•ETYM Analyzed as a compound of ἰθύς and the zero grade of πέτομαι, with ending after the nouns in -ων, -ίων (καταπύγων, οὐρανίων, κυλλοποδίων), for older *ἰθύ-πτ-ιος (type ὁμόγνιος). Hackstein Glotta 70 (1992): 154-167 proposed a meaning 'striking straight' with zero grade pih$_2$-* and analogical πτ-; see ► πτήσσω.

ἰθύς [adj.] 'straight, just' (Il.). ◄?►

•VAR Also adverbial 'straightforward' (Il.), beside rare ἰθύ, ἰθέως; cf. on ► εὐθύς. Superl. ἰθύντατα (Hom.), perhaps after ἰθύνω.

•COMP Often as a first member (see Strömberg 1946: 156), e.g. ἰθυ-ωρίη, for which see ► εὐθυωρία; also ἰθυ-βέλεια epithet of Artemis 'whose arrows go straight' (ZPE 88, 1991, 70 l. 11, I[a]).

•DER 1. ἰθῦς [f.] 'straight direction, course, enterprise', only accus. ἀν' ἰθύν, πᾶσαν ἐπ' ἰθύν, etc. (Hom.); explanation in Schwyzer: 463, Frisk Eranos 43 (1945): 221; 2. ἰθύτης [f.] 'id.' (Aret.). Denominative verbs: 1. ἰθύω, aor. ἰθῦσαι (also with ἐπι-) 'go straight, strive, aim (for)' (Il.); 2. ἰθύνω, aor. ἰθῦναι, pass. ἰθυνθῆναι (also with prefixes δι-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-ιθύνω, etc.) 'straighten, direct, steer, lead' (Il.) together with ἰθυντήρ 'who steers, leader' (Theoc., A. R.), fem. ἰθύντειρα (Orph. A. 352), adj. -τήριος 'steering, leading' (S. Ichn. 73); also ἰθύντωρ (Orph.), ἰθύντης (H.) 'id.'; deverbal ἴθυνα = εὔθυνα (Chios V-IV[a]).

•ETYM The comparison with Skt. sādhú- 'straight, just', sā́dhati, sādhnoti 'reach the goal' is obsolete, as the zero grade in sídhyati 'id.' and ptc. siddhá- is due to the vocalization of a laryngeal, viz. seHd^h-* beside sHd^h-*. Therefore, earlier reconstructions with a long diphthong can now be forgotten. A Cret. fem. ειθεῖα confirms the existence of a form *εἰθύς (De Lamberterie 1990: 287f.). Willi KZ 114 (2001): 117-146 proposes connection of both ἰθύς and εὐθύς with Hieud^h-, for which root he assumes a basic meaning 'make right' (Hieu-d^h-?). Cf. further ► εἶθαρ.

ἱκανός 'enough'. ⇒ ἵκω.

ἴκελος [adj.] 'comparable, resembling' (Il.). ◄IE ueik-* 'resemble'►

•VAR Also εἴκελος (after εἰκών, εἰκάζω, etc.; originally perhaps for metrically lengthened ἴκελος, Leumann 1950: 306 A. 76)

•COMP As a second member in θεο-(ε)ίκελος 'god-like' (Il.) et al., and in ἐπι-, προσ-(ε)ίκελος 'resembling' (Hom., Hdt.) from ἐπι-, προσ-έοικα; cf. also on ἐπιεικής.

•DER ἰκελόω 'make identical' (AP).

•ETYM Old formation on the basis of the zero grade of the root of ► ἔοικα, with a suffix -λο- (Chantraine 1933: 243). Cf. ἀ-ϊκής beside ἀ-εικής.

ἱκέτης [m.] 'suppliant', also attributive 'seeking refuge' (Il.). ◄IE seik-* 'reach, grasp the hand'►

•VAR Fem. ἱκέτις, -ιδος (Hdt.).

•DER 1. ἱκέσιος 'of the ἱκέτης, etc.', epithet of Zeus as a protector of suppliants (trag., etc.); 2. ἱκεσία 'request for protection, supplication' (E., Aeschin.); 3. ἱκετήσιος = ἱκέσιος (ν 213), after φιλοτήσιος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 41f.; Fraenkel 1912: 151f.); beside this ἱκτήριος from ἱκτήρ (see ► ἵκω); a cross is ἱκετηρία (scil. ῥάβδος), properly 'the twig (of laurel or olive) of the suppliants', 'request' (IA), ἱκετῆρες = ἱκέται (S. OT 185; lyr.), ἱκετηρίς [f.] (Orph. H.); reversed ἵκτης (Lyc. 763); 4. ἱκετικός = ἱκέσιος (Ph., Aq.). 5. Ἱκέτυλλος PN (Att. inscr.; Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 219 and 225[1]). Denominative ἱκετεύω [v.] 'to be a suppliant' (Il.) together with ἱκετεία (Att.), also ἱκέτευμα (Th.), ἱκέτευσις (Suid.) = ἱκεσία; ἱκετευτικός (sch.).

•ETYM From ►ἵκω, ἱκέσθαι. Several details on the formation in Fraenkel 1910-1912 (see index); on the meaning, see van Herten 1934.

ἰκμαμένος ⇒ αἰχμή.

ἰκμάς, -άδος [f.] 'wetness, moisture, secretion' (P 392, Hdt.). ◄IE *seik- 'pour out' (not from *seik^w-)► •COMP As a second member (transformed to an o-stem) ἄν-, ἔν-, δύσ-ικμος (Hp., Arist.), as a first member in ἰκμό-βωλον [n.] 'moist clump of earth' (Dsc.; on the ntr. gender cf. on ► διόσπυρον).
•DER ἰκμαδώδης (H. s.v. ἴκμενος), ἰκματώδης (Ach. Tat.; after αἱματώδης) 'moist'; also ἰκμαῖος (A. R.), ἴκμιος (Call.), ἰκμώδης (sch.), ἰκμαλέος (Hp., Opp.); ἰκμαίνω 'moisten' (A. R.). ἴκμαρ· νοτίς 'moisture' (H.). Here also the back-formation ἴκμη 'duckweed, Lemna minor' (Thphr.; different on the formation Strömberg 1940:113); also Ἰκμάλιος τ 57? Speculations by Lacroix Collection Latomus 28 (1957): 309ff.
•ETYM Formation in -άδ- like νιφάς et al. (Schwyzer: 507f., Chantraine 1933: 349ff.) from an μ-stem. A primary aorist was perhaps retained in ἶξαι· διηθῆσαι 'filter' (H.). Outside Greek, there are several relatives, e.g. Skt. siñcáti 'pour out' (nasal present), OHG sīhan 'strain, filter', OCS sьčati 'urinate' (iterative). The reconstruction *seik^w- in Pokorny and LIV^2 does not work for Greek, nor for Germanic. The root is *seik-, with a pure velar.

ἰκμάω 'winnow'. ⇒ λικμάω.

ἴκμενος [adj.] epithet of οὖρος 'wind' (A 479, Od.). ◄IE? *seik- 'reach, grasp'► •ETYM Old athem. ptc. like ἄρμενος, ἄσμενος, etc. (Schwyzer: 524, Chantraine 1942: 384), probably derived from ἵκω, ἱκέσθαι 'arrive', but the proper meaning is unclear. Perhaps "mit dem man gut vorwärts kommt" (Schwyzer), thus "with which one advances well", i.e. 'favorable'. Others (Schulze 1892: 493, Bechtel 1914, et al.) suggest that the word meant 'desired' (comparing Lat. flātus optati), and connect it with προ-ΐκτης, ἱκετεύω, etc. They derive this group from a verb 'ask' (Go. aihtron; also, αἰκάζει· καλεῖ H.) instead of from ἵκω 'come'. Casevits Eos 83 (1995): 27-32 proposes that the word belongs to ἔοικα 'resemble', *ϝίκμενος meaning 'qui convient, adapté à', but I find the assumed development of meaning unconvincing.

ἱκνέομαι 'come'. ⇒ ἵκω.

ἰκνύς, -ύος [f.] 'dust, ashes' (Cyrene). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Cf. ἴκνυον· κονίαν, σμῆμα 'dust, soap' (H.) and ἰγνύς 'id.' (Hp. Nat. Mul. 88).
•ETYM Like previous authors, Fur.: 118 compares λιγνύς 'smoke, soot', but without referring to his p. 391 on the alternation λ/zero. The variation (also κ/γ) proves a Pre-Greek word. Fur. further compares λιγνύς with ἀλισγέω 'pollute' (298), which is formally difficult.

ἴκρια [n.pl.] 'half deck' (Hom., B.), 'platform, stage, benches' (Hdt., com., inscr., etc., cf. Beare *Class. Rev.*53 (1939): 54f.); sing. 'mast' (Eust. 1533, 31 [?]). ◄?►

•VAR Probably ῑ- (Ar. Th. 395, Cratin. 323).
•COMP ἰκριο-ποιέω [v.] 'to build a platform' (Hell. inscr.); ἐπ-ίκριον [n.] 'yard-arm' (ε 254, 318, A. R.), properly a hypostasis 'what is on the ἴκρια'; as an adjective perhaps in Nic. Th. 198.
•DER Denominative verb ἰκριόω 'to provide with ἴκρια, construct a platform' (Att. inscr., D. C.), whence ἰκρίωμα 'support, framework' and ἰκριωτῆρες [pl.] 'uprights, flooring of a deck' (Att. inscr.; often written hικ-).
•ETYM Technical term without etymology. On the meaning, see also Martin RPh. 83 (1957): 72-81.

ἰκταίνω ⇒ ἴκταρ 1.

ἴκταρ 1 [adv., prep.] 'near, near by' (Hes., Alcm., A.), with gen. or dat. ◄PG?(V)► •VAR ἴκαρ· ἐγγύς, καὶ παρ' ὀλίγον τοῦ ἐφικνεῖσθαι 'near; to reach at' (H.).
•ETYM Acc. to Schwyzer: 630f., the same formation is found in ► ἄφαρ, ► εἶθαρ, etc. Like these, ἴκταρ could be a verbal noun in -(τ)αρ. It has been connected with Lat. īcō 'to strike', comparing the Skt. adverbs ghanám and taḍítas 'near', from han- 'beat' and taḍ- 'strike', for the semantics. The expression ὑπερικταίνοντο πόδες (ψ 3) is unclear in meaning; Aristarchus interpreted it as ἄγαν ἐπάλλοντο; this is often connected with ἴκταρ. A v.l. ὑποακταίνοντο is glossed with ἔτρεμον by (H.); see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἰκταίνω. If the variant in H. is reliable, the word is Pre-Greek (κτ/ κ). See ► ἴγδις, ► αἰχμή.

ἴκταρ 2 [n.] 'genital parts of a woman' (Hp. Mul. 2, 174). ◄PG?► •ETYM Correction for ἧπαρ, acc. to Erot. and Gal. 19, 105. Most probably a Pre-Greek word; see Fur.: 134[75].

ἴκταρ 3 [m.] name of a small worthless fish (Call. Fr. 38, Eust.). ◄PG► •VAR ἰκτάρα (H.), also κτάρα· ἰχθῦς βραχύτερος πάντων 'shortest fish of all' (H.), ἀκτάρα (sch. Opp. H. 1, 762).
•ETYM See Thompson 1947 s.v. Given the variants, the word is clearly Pre-Greek (Fur.: 376f.).

ἴκτερος [m.] 'jaundice' (Hp.), often plur.; also name of a bird, Lat. galgulus (Plin.), named after its color. ◄PG?►
•DER ἰκτερικός, ἰκτερώδης 'jaundiced, regarding jaundice' (medic.), also ἰκτεριώδης 'id.' (Hp., Dsc.; after ἰκτεριάω) and ἰκτερόεις 'id.' (Nic.); ἰκτερῖτις [f.] 'rosemary' (Ps.-Dsc.; used as a remedy, see Strömberg 1944: 29), -ίτης 'id.' (gloss.); ἰκτερίας name of a yellow stone (Plin.; like καπνίας et al., Chantraine 1933: 94). Denominative verbs ἰκτερόομαι (Hp., Gal.), ἰκτεριάω (M. Ant., S. E.) [v.] 'to suffer from jaundice'.
•ETYM The formation is reminiscent of ὕδερος, χολέρα (Chantraine 1933: 228), but further details are unknown. The connection with ἴκτις, ἰκτῖνος is defended by Grošelj Živa Ant. 6 (1956): 236f., who assumes a color root ἰκ- 'yellow, green', and compares ἰκμαλέον· χλωρόν, ὑγρόν 'green, moist' (H.). This remains speculative. Acc. to Fur.: 321, the group -κτ- points to Pre-Greek origin.

ἰκτῖνος [m.] 'kite' (IA). ◄IE *tḱiH-in- 'kite'►

•VAR Also (secondary?) ἰκτίν (-ίς), gen. -ῖνος (com., Paus.), after δελφίς acc. to Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM For the formation, ἐχῖνος has been compared (Chantraine 1933: 204), but ἰκτῖνος is probably inherited and identical with Arm. c'in 'id.'. Skt. śyená- [m.] 'eagle, falcon', Av. saēna- name of a big bird of prey are rather deviant. For the reconstruction tk̑iH-in-*, see Beekes in Kortlandt 2003: 200. See ►ἴκτερος.

ἴκτις, -ιδος [f.] 'marten' (Ar., Arist.). ◄?►
•VAR Also ἰκτίς, gen. -ίδος.
•DER κτίδεος (ἰκτίδεος Suid.) in κτιδέη κυνέη 'helmet of marten skin' (K 335, 458), with apocope of the first vowel; artificial back-formation κτίς in H. s.v. κτιδέα.
•ETYM No etymology; see on ►ἴκτερος.

ἵκω [v.] 'to come, reach' (Hom., Pi. Dor. Arc.). ◄IE seik-* 'reach, grasp (with the hand)'► •VAR ἱκάνω (epic), ἱκνέομαι (Od., almost only prefixed, see below), with aor. ἱκέσθαι, fut. ἵξομαι (Il.); epic aor. ἷξε, ἷξον (Chantraine 1942: 418f., Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 213), perf. ἷγμαι (Od.).
•COMP Often with prefix (in prose almost exclusively), especially ἀφ-, ἀπ- (whence εἰσ-, συν-αφ-ικνέομαι, etc.), also ἐξ-, ἐφ-, καθ-, etc. (see Fraenkel Glotta 35 (1956): 88ff.).
•DER 1. ἵξις (ἷξις) 'passage, direction' (Hp.); from ἀφικνέομαι, etc. ἄφιξις 'arrival' (IA), rarely ἔφ-, κάθ-, δί-ιξις; 2. ἵκτωρ, ἱκτήρ = ἱκέτης, ἱκέσιος, also προσ-, ἀφ-ίκτωρ 'id.' (trag.) together with ἱκτήριος (S.); 3. ►ἱκέτης together with ἱκετεύω, etc.; beside it (προσ-)ἵκτης (Hell. poetry); 4. πόθ-ικ-ες [pl.] 'προσήκοντες, relatives' (Tegea V[a]); 5. ἱκανός 'enough' (IA prose), cf. πιθανός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 196f.); see also ►ἴκμενος, ►προίξ.
•ETYM The verb ►ἥκω has been compared, but the point of the comparison is unclear. The forms in long vowel (ἵκω, ἷγμαι) may be secondary morphological creations of Greek. All other forms have short vocalism, including ἱκανός and other nominal formations. The full grade was thought to occur in ►ἐνεῖκαι 'carry off', but this is now connected with ►ἐνεγκεῖν; in any case, it was semantically deviant from ἵκω.
An acceptable connection is provided by Lith. siékiu, siékti 'reach with the hand, swear', at-siékiu 'reach with the hand', ToB pres. siknaṃ, subj. saikaṃ 'set foot', for which IE seik-* is reconstructed. See LIV[2] s.v. sei̯k-* 'erreichen', where the form U pru-sikurent 'confirm' is also adduced, but this is uncertain. The Lithuanian acute accent is unexplained under this reconstruction, however.

ἱλάειρα, ἵλαος, ἱλαρός, ἵλεως ⇒ ἱλάσκομαι.

ἱλάσκομαι [v.] 'to propitiate, appease, reconcile', intr. perf. and aor. pass. 'to be merciful' (Il.). ◄IE $selh_2$-* 'reconcile'► •VAR Rarely ἵλαμαι (h. Hom. 19, 48; 21, 5; inf. ἵλασθαι Orph. A. 944; on the quantity of the anlaut see below), ἱλάονται (B 550, ἱλάεσθαι A. R. 2, 847); aor. ἱλάσ(σ)ασθαι (Il.), ἱλάξασθαι (Delph., A. R.), pass. ἱλασθῆναι (LXX); fut. ἱλάσ(σ)ομαι (Pl., Orac. apud Paus. 8, 42, 6), ἱλάξομαι (A. R.); Aeol. perf. ipv. ἔλλᾱθι (gramm., B. 10, 8), plur. ἔλλατε (Call. Fr. 121); besides ἵλᾰθι, ἵλᾰτε (Theoc., A. R.), ἵληθι (γ 380, π 184), cf. below; subj. ἱλήκησι (φ 365), opt. ἱλήκοι, etc. (h. Ap. 165, AP, Alciphr.).

•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐξ-.
•DER ἐξίλασις, (ἐξ-)ἱλασμός (LXX), ἱλασία (inscr. imperial period), (ἐξ-)ἵλασμα 'appeasement, expiatory sacrifice' (LXX), ἱλάσιμος 'appeasing' (M. Ant.; after ἰάσιμος, etc., Arbenz 1933: 93), ἱλαστήριος 'appeasing', -ιον 'propitiatory gift' (LXX, pap.), also analogical ἱλατήριον (Chron. Lind.), ἱλαστής 'appeaser' (Aq., Thd.) with ἐξιλαστικός (Corn.).
Older formations: 1. ἵλαος (epic, Arc.; on the quantity of the α see below), ἵλεως (Att., also Ion.), ἵλεος (Cret. since III[a], also Hdt.), hιλᾱϝõι [dat.] (Lacon., IG 5(1), 1562 [VI-V[a]]), ἵλλαος (Aeol., gramm.) 'merciful, benevolent'; Arc. 'appeased'; denominative verb ἱλαόομαι (MAMA 1, 230), ἱλεῶμαι, ἱλεόομαι (A. Supp. 117 [lyr.], Pl.) 'to appease', together with ἱλέωσις (Plu.), ἱλεωτήριον (Phot., Suid.). 2. ἱλαρός 'cheerful, glad', also = ἵλεως (Ar., X.) together with ἱλαρότης, ἱλαρία, ἱλαρόω, -ρύνω, -ρεύομαι (Hell.); Lat. loan hilarus, -is. 3. ἱλλάεις, -εντος (Alc.), ἱλᾶς, -ᾶντος (Hdn. Gr., H.), lengthened from ἵλλαος, ἵλαος (cf. Schwyzer: 527). 4. ἱλάειρα [f.], said of φλόξ and σελήνη (Emp.; on the varying quantity cf. below), also ἐλάειρα (sch., Steph. Byz.) and ΕΛΕΡΑ (Kretschmer 1894: 208; see also Schulze 1933a: 716), innovated after πίειρα, κτεάτειρα, Δάειρα, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 104, Schwyzer: 543.
•ETYM The Aeol. imperative ἔλλαθι, ἔλλατε is decisive for the interpretation of these forms, from older he-hla-t^hi, -te*. They may therefore be analyzed as old perfect forms, cf. τέτλαθι, ἕσταθι, δείδιθι. The length of the α in ἔλλᾱθι (B. 10, 8) must be secondary; perhaps the Attic form was seen in εἴληθι· ἵλεως γίνου 'be merciful' (H.), which was remodelled after φάνηθι, etc., presumably because the reduplication was no longer recognizable.
Another source of innovations was the reduplicated present ἱλάσκομαι < si-slh_2-ske/o-*, with short -ᾰ- perhaps analogical after the s-aorist. The anlauting long vowel was introduced into other forms: into the perf. subj. and opt. ἱλήκησι, ἱλήκοι instead of expected *εἰλ-; perhaps also into ἵλᾰθι, -τε and Hom. ἵληθι (cf. εἴληθι H.).
The ῑ- was further introduced into the aorist and future: ἱλάσ(σ)ασθαι, ἱλάξασθαι, ἱλάσσομαι, ἱλάξομαι; beside these, there is a short vowel in ἱλάσσεαι (A 147), ἱλασσάμενοι (A 100), ἵλαμαι (h. Hom.; but ἵλασθαι Orph.), ἱλάομαι, as well as in ἱλαρός and ἱλάειρα (Emp. 85). Because the short ῐ- cannot be understood in terms of ablaut, it may replace an older e-grade (in ἐλάειρα, *ἔλαμαι, ἐλαρός). The forms ἵληϝος, ἵλεως (secondary ἵλᾱος) are from reduplicated si-slh_2-u̯o-.
The discussion by Klingenschmitt MSS 28 (1970): 75-88 is fundamental, showing that Arm. ałač'em 'to pray' < slh_2-ske/o-* is the closest cognate. The Greek form goes back to si-slh_2-ske/o-; the aorist would have been $selh_2$-s-, but the beginning has taken over the i-vocalism from the present. This explains the forms with short ῐ-. LIV[2] s.v. $selh_2$-* and Clackson 1994: 173-4 are somewhat sceptical about this proposal. Lat. sōlārī 'to comfort' is related too, but has an obscure lengthened grade sōlH- (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.).

ἴλη [f.] 'band, troop', especially a division of the Spartan youth; troop of horses = Lat. turma (Pi., S., X.). ◂IE? uel-* 'turn, wind'▸ •DIAL Dor. ἴλα.
•COMP As a first member in ἰλ-άρχης, also -αρχος (Hell.) together with ἰλαρχέω, -ία, Boeot. ϝιλαρχίω. H. has βειλάρχας as an explanation of βειλαρμοστάς (Tarent.).
•DER ἰλαδόν 'in squadron' (B 93, Hes. Op. 287, Hdt.), which was metrically easier than *ἰληδόν.
•ETYM The gloss ἴλλαι· τάξεις, συστροφαί (H.) could point to original ϝίϝλαι, and be derived from ἴλλω 'press together' < u̯i-u̯l-e/o- (see ►εἰλέω). If this is correct, ἴλη would show an unexpected reduction of the geminate with compositional lengthening. Solmsen 1901: 227[1] departs from *ϝίλ-νᾱ, comparing πίλναμαι for the vocalism. However, in the latter form, the ι is explained as an analogical schwa secundum.

ἴλια [n.pl.] · μόρια (δῶρα cod.) γυναικεῖα; ἴλιον· τὸ τῆς γυναικὸς ἐφήβαιον δηλοῖ. καὶ κόσμον γυναικεῖον παρὰ Κῴοις 'female private parts; the female pubes; a woman's ornament (Kos)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM In the last meaning, ἴλια has been connected with ►εἰλέω 2 'turn, wind', with ι for ει like perhaps in ἴλη. The Greek gloss may also be a loan from Lat. īlia, -ium [n.pl.] 'the soft, the lower part of the body, intestines, womb' (cf. on ►ἰξύς).

ἴλιγγος •VAR ἴλιγξ. ⇒εἴλιγγος, εἴλιγξ.

Ἴλιος [f.] 'Ilios, the city of Troy' (Il.); -ιον only O 71, always in tragedy (E.). ◂LW Anat.▸ •ETYM In a treaty between the Hittite king Muwattali II (1290-72) and Alaksandu (which must be Homer's Alexander) of Wilusa, Wilusiya, a small state in the far north West of Anatolia. First considered by Kretschmer Glotta 13 (1924): 205-13, it has in recent years been generally accepted that this refers to Schliemann's ruins. See e.g. Latacz 2001: 98-119. There is no agreement on the interpretations of the Greek form ϝίλιος (as the -s- would normally have been preserved; so this form must come from a variant without -s-). The ϝ- is ascertained by Homer. On Troy see ►Τροίη (which originally only denoted the land).

ἰλλάς ⇒εἰλέω 2.

ἰλλός [adj.] 'squinting' (Ar., Sophr.). ◂IE? uel-* 'turn, wind', PG?▸
•VAR Fem. ἰλλίς· στρεβλή, διεστραμμένη 'twisted, distorted' (H.). Note ἰλλός = ὀφθαλμός (Poll. 2, 54).
•DER ἰλλώδης 'id.' and ἰλλαίνω (Hp.), ἰλλώπτω (com.), ἰλλίζω (Suid.) [v.] 'to squint, look askance', also ἴλλωσις 'squinting' (Hp.) as if from *ἰλλόω. PN Ἰλλεύς (see Boßhardt 1942: 132).
•ETYM From ἴλλω 'turn, wind'? Or from Pre-Greek? See ►εἰλέω 2.

ἴλλω 1 'press together'. ⇒εἰλέω 1.

ἴλλω 2 'turn'. ⇒εἰλέω 2.

ϝίλσις 'distress'. ⇒εἰλέω 1.

ἰλῦς, -ύος [f.] 'mud, slime, dregs, impurity' (Ion., Il., Arist.). ◂IE (H)iHlu-* 'mud, dark'▸ •VAR The ἰ- is long; on the length of the υ see LSJ.
•DER ἰλυώδης (Hp., Hell.), ἰλυόεις 'muddy' (A. R., Nic.); ἰλύωμαι· ἐρρύπωμαι (H.). Further ἰλύματα (Gal. 13, 45) as a cross with λύματα. Adjective ἰλύ (cod. εἰλύ)· μέλαν 'black, dirty' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like ἀχλῦς, etc. (see Schwyzer: 495), and identical with a Slavic word for 'mud', e.g. OCS ilъ, gen. ila (old u-stem); also in Latv. īls 'very dark'.

ἱμαλιά [f.] 'heap of flour, abundance', glossed by H. with τὸ ἐπίμετρον τῶν ἀλεύρων. ἐπιγέννημα ἀλετρίδος. καὶ ὁ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀχύρων χνοῦς. καὶ περιουσία 'the excess of wheat-meal; surplus of a grinding woman; dust from the chaff; abundance'. ◂?▸
•DER ἱμαλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'yield (of flour), etc.', in H. = νόστος, δύναμις, ἐπικαρπία, ἡδονή, ἀπαρχὴ τῶν γινομένων 'yield, quality, profit, enjoyment, first-fruits of that which is produced'; thus Trypho apud Ath. 14, 618d (Doric word); also 'song of the mill, ἐπιμύλιος ᾠδή' (H., Poll.) and as an epithet of Demeter in Syracuse (Polem. Hist. 39).
Adjective ἱμάλιος, in H. = πολύς, ἱκανός, νόστιμος 'much, sufficient, abundant', etc., also a month name in Hierapytna (SGDI 5040, 4).
•ETYM Popular terms of agriculture that rarely occur in literature. For the ending of ἱμαλιά, we should first compare ἁρμαλιά 'distributed food, portion', ἀχυρμιά 'heap of chaff', φυταλιά 'plants in the garden', etc. On the other hand, ἱμαλίς is reminiscent of τροφαλίς 'fresh cheese' and μολυβδίς 'clump of lead' (Chantraine 1933: 342ff.).
Frisk assumes a derivation in -μαλ- from the root seen in ►ἠθέω 'sieve'; extremely doubtful, because ablaut sēi- / sī-* does not exist. See on ►ἁρμαλιά. On Lat. simila 'finest flour of wheat', see ►σεμίδαλις.

ἱμανήθρη [f.] 'well-rope' (Herod. 5, 11). ◂?▸ •ETYM Formation like κολυμβήθρα (related to κολυμβάω), ἀλινδήθρα (to ἀλινδέω, ἀλίνδω), et al. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 373f.), which would presuppose a verb *ἱμανάω (Bechtel 1921(3): 304) or *ἱμαίνω; see on ►ἱμάς (especially ἱμονιά).

ἱμάς, -άντος [m.] 'leather strap', for drawing, lashing, etc., 'thong' of a sandal, of a door, etc.; as a term of construction, 'beam' (Il.; Delebecque 1951: 63, 187f.). ◂IE seh₂i-m(n)-* 'rope'▸ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἱμαντ-ελίκται [pl.] "pricker of tapes", name of the Sophists in Democr. 150; ἱμαντελιγμός, name of a game (Poll. 9, 118); compounds of ἱμάντας ἑλίσσειν, cf. Fraenkel 1910: 244.
•DER Diminutive ἱμάντιον (Hp.), ἱμαντ-άριον (Delos II[a], etc.), -ίδιον (EM), -ίσκος (Herod.); adjective ἱμάντινος 'of ropes' (Hdt., Hp.), ἱμαντώδης 'rope-like' (Pl., Dsc., Gal.); denominative verbs: 1. ἱμάσσω, aor. ἱμάσαι a) 'lash' (Il.) together with ἱμάσθλη 'lash, whip' (Il.); also μάσθλης (perhaps cross with μάστιξ, cf. on ►μαίομαι); b) 'provide with ἱμάντες, i.e. beams' only in ἱμασσια 'beams?' (IG 4, 823: 26 [Troezen IV[a]]; see Fraenkel 1910: 149, Bechtel 1921, 2: 510). 2. ἱμάσκω 'thrash, wallop' (also 'to fetter' in Del.[3] 409, 7? Cf. Brugmann IF 29 (1911-1912): 214). 3. ἱμαντόω 'provide with ἱμάντες, i.e. bed-straps' in ἱμαντωμένην κλίνην (H. s.v. πυξ<ίνην>); thence ἱμάντωσις (LXX, Poll.), ἱμάντωμα 'hawser' (H.). Independent of ἱμάς, but cognate with it: 1. ἱμαῖος (sc. ᾠδή), ἱμαῖον (μέλος, ᾆσμα) 'song while scooping water' (Call., Tryphon, Suid.) with ἱμαοιδός (haplological for ἱμαιο-αοιδός) 'who sings an ἱμαῖον' (Poll., H.); 2. ἱμάω 'to draw (water) with a rope (from a well)', also metaph. (Arist., Ath.), usually ἀν-, καθ-ιμάω (Ar., X.) together with ἱμητήρ (κάδος, Delos II[a]), ἱμητήριος (H., see ἰβανατρίς), ἀν-, καθ-ίμησις (Plu.); 3. ἱμονιά 'well-rope' (com., Ph., Luc. et al.; Scheller 1951: 75f.); 4. ► ἱμανήθρη 'id.'.

•ETYM As a secondary formation in -ντ-, ἱμάς presupposes a noun *ἱμᾱ or *ἱμα 'rope', which is also continued in ἱμάω, ἱμαῖος. An n-stem is continued by ἱμονιά and by καθ-, κατ-ιμονεύει· καθίησι, καθιεῖ 'lets go' (H.), which probably derive from *ἱμων. Likewise, ► ἱμανήθρη may go back to *ἱμάνη (via *ἱμανάω, or perhaps *ἱμαίνω; cf. πλεκτάνη, ἀρτάνη), or to *ἶμα.

Note the variable quantity of the anlauting vowel: long in ἱμονιά, ἱμανήθρη, καθιμάω, but short in ἱμαῖος, and most of the time also in ἱμάς (except Φ 544, Κ 475 etc.; see Schulze 1892: 181, 466[1]) and its compounds and derivatives. This variation cannot go back to old ablaut (as Frisk stated), but rather continues sh$_2$i-, which gives a long vowel after metathesis to sih$_2$m-, and a short vowel without it; regarding the conditioning, see Schrijver 1991: 519ff., who supposes that stressed Hi* resulted in the long vowel.

The form *ῑμων reconstructed above exactly matches a Germanic word for 'rope': ON sími, OS sīmo [m.], and also Skt. sīmán- [m., f.] 'skull, boundary' (although this has a slightly deviant meaning), all from IE sh$_2$i-mon-, sh$_2$i-men- (note that for Gm., seh$_1$i-m- is possible too). A suffix -m- is also found in Irish sim 'chain'.

The primary verb meaning 'to bind' is still found in Indo-Iranian, Baltic and Hittite, e.g. Skt. syati < sh$_2$-ie/o-, sināti < si-neh$_2$-ti, ptc. sita- < sh$_2$-to-, Lith. siẽti, 1sg. sienù < sh$_2$ei-, Hitt. išḫai-[i].

García Ramón Minos 29-30 (1994-1995): 335-346 connects Myc. a-ja-me-no- /ai[(h)]aimeno-/ 'inlaid', with a semantic specialization from 'put on' < 'attach, bind'.

ἱμάτιον [n.] 'outer garment, dress, cloth', often plur. -ια (Att.). ◂IE *ues- 'clothe'▸ •VAR Ion. εἱμάτιον (εματιοις inscr. Ceos), Dor. ἡμάτιον (Cyrene IV[a]).

•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἱματιο-πώλης 'cloth-seller' (Critias, pap.).

•DER Diminutive ἱματίδιον, -ιδάριον (Ar.) and denominative ἱματίζω [v.] 'to clothe' (pap., NT), whence ἱματισμός (εἱμ-) 'clothing, wardrobe' (Thphr., Plb., inscr.).

•ETYM An informal diminutive of εἷμα, Cret. ϝῆμα (see ► ἕννυμι), with early transition of ει = /ẹ̄/ to ῑ. See Wackernagel IF 25 (1909): 330.

ἱμάω 'to draw with a rope'. ⇒ ἱμάς.

ἴμβηρις [?] · ἔγχελυς. Μηθυμναῖοι 'eel (Methymna)' (H.). ◂PG?▸

•ETYM The ending is reminiscent of λεβηρίς 'snake-skin' (Muller 1926: 30). Do we therefore have to read ἰμβηρίς?

The word resembles some Balto-Slavic words for 'eel', e.g. Lith. ungurỹs, Ru. úgor'. A pre-form IE Heng^w- has been reconstructed, with ε > ι before nasal (but this is not a general rule in Greek) and Aeolic development of the labiovelar. No IE proto-form can be reconstructed for these words. The ending, which is also seen in λεβηρίς, rather points to a Pre-Greek word. On -ηρ-, see Pre-Greek: Suffixes. If one assumes interchange initial λ-/zero as well as prenasalization, the words could be identical. Note that ε/ ι is frequent in Pre-Greek. The relation to ► ἔγχελυς, Lat. anguilla, etc. is unclear.

(ϝ)ίμβω? [v.] 'to yoke, harness (horses)'? ◂?, PG?▸

•VAR Aor. ἴμψας· ζεύξας. Θετταλοί 'having yoked (Thess.)' (H.).

•DER Ἴμψιος· Ποσειδῶν ὁ Ζύγιος 'Poseidon the Yoke'; γιμβάναι (= ϝ-)· ζεύγανα (H.). Bechtel 1921, 1: 206 adduces the Boeot. PN ϝιμπτίδας.

•ETYM Two hypotheses have been advanced: that the word is related to Lat. vinciō 'to wind around', vicia 'vetch' with labiovelar auslaut (followed by LIV[2] s.v. u̯i̯ek^w-); or to Go. bi-waibjan 'to wind around', etc. In both cases, the semantic connection does not seem to be very strong. There seems no reason to connect the two glosses ἰψών· δεσμωτήριον 'prison' (but see also on ► ἶπος) and ἰψόν· τὸν κισσόν. Θ<ο>ύριοι. 'ivy' (H.). Note that the gloss Ἴμψιος has -μψ-, although it is not an aorist. This could be a Pre-Greek variant. See Latte on γιμβάναι.

ἵμερος [m.] 'longing, yearning, love' (Il.). ◂IE? seh$_2$i-mr, sh$_2$i-men- 'bond'▸

•COMP ἐφ-ίμερος 'filled with yearning, lovely' (Hes., Archil., A.), ἱμερό-γυιος 'with lovely limbs' (B.).

•DER ἱμερόεις 'longing, lovely' (Il.), ἱμερώδης 'id.' (Callistr.); ἱμείρω, -ομαι [v.] (also with ἐφ-) 'yearn, desire' (Il.), together with ἱμερτός 'longed for, lovely' (since B 751).

•ETYM The old connection with Skt. iṣmá- 'spring, (god of) love' (lex.), which belongs to iccháti (< h$_2$is-ské-ti) 'to wish', may be semantically possible, but it leaves the formation of the Greek word (secondary suffix -ero-?) unexplained. Another proposal by Bally MSL 12 (1903): 321 assumed a reconstruction si-smer-o-, and a yod-present si-smer-ie/o-, by comparison of Av. hi-šmarənt- 'well-conducted' to Skt. smárati 'to remember' (< smér-e-ti). As remarked by Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 47ff., the problem with these proposals is that they lead us to expect Aeolic *ἴμμερος, while we consistently find ἴμερος, ἰμέρρω in Sappho and Alcaeus. Weiss convincingly derives ἵμερος from sh$_2$i- 'to bind' instead, as found in Skt. °syáti, Hitt. išḫai-[i]: he reconstructs a heteroclitic seh$_2$i-mr, sh$_2$i-men-, with a suffix -mer/n- also found in τέκμαρ and ἦμαρ (Weiss ibid.: 54 points to ἡμέρα as a formal parallel for ἵμερος); he also compares ► αἵμων. This means that ἵμερος may originally have been a bond or spell. See ► αἵμονα.

ἱμονιά 'well-rope'. ⇒ ἱμάς.

ιμπαταον ⇒ παπταίνω.

ἴν [pron.] · αὐτήν, αὐτόν. Κύπριοι 'her, him (Cypr.)' (H.). ◂IE h$_1$i- 'he'▸ •ETYM Identical with OLat. im 'eum', from the IE demonstrative h$_1$i- seen in Lat. and Go. is, etc. See also ► ἵνα, and on ► μιν, ► νιν.

ἵνα [adv., conj.] 'where, to where' (Hom., also IA); as a final conjunction 'that, in order that, etc.' (Il.). ◁IE *h_1i- 'he', etc.▷ •ETYM Origin unclear. For the ending, we may compare Skt. instrumentals like yéna, téna 'by which, by that', OHG hina (< *-nā), OIr. cen 'on this side' (from IE ḱi- in ἐ-κεῖ), etc. The stem ἱ- is perhaps cognate with the IE relative Hi̯o- (see ►ὅς), or was formed after interrogative *τίνα. On the use, see Schwyzer 1950: 672ff. and Gonda 1956: 92, 126f., 141. See also Monteil 1963: 376-384 and Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971): 171.

ἰνάω [v.] 'to empty, purify', also προϊεσθαι 'to be sent forth' acc. to H. s.v. ἰνᾶσθαι. ◁IE? *$Hish_2$-, *His-neh_2-▷ •VAR -άομαι (also -έω, -όω gramm.), fut. med. ἰνήσομαι (Hp.).
•COMP With prefix ὑπερ-ινάω 'empty excessively, vehemently' (Hp. apud Erot.) together with ὑπερίνησις (Hp. Loc. Hom.) and ὑπέρινος 'excessively emptied, exhausted' (Hp. Epid. 6, 5, 15, Arist., Thphr.).
•DER ἰνηθμός 'emptying, cleaning' (Hp. Loc. Hom.), ἴνησις 'id.' (ibid., Pherecyd. Hist. VI[a]). Uncertain ἐπινάω (comm. Arist. VI[p]); on ►περίναιος (-εος), etc. s.v.
•ETYM Assuming that 'send forth' was the original meaning and that the ἱ- was long, ἰνάω was compared by Meister KZ 32 (1893): 136ff. (cf Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:3, 301 and Bechtel 1921(3): 304f.) with Skt. iṣṇā́ti 'to bring in quick movement', also 'to spurt out' (cf. on ►ἰαίνω). This is followed by García Ramón 1986: 497-514, see on ►ἰάομαι. The reconstruction is taken over by LIV[2] s.v. *h_1eish_2-.

ἰνδάλλομαι [v.] 'to appear, seem' (Il., Att.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Only present stem except ἰνδάλθην (Lyc., Max.).
•DER ἰνδαλμός 'appearance, image' (Hp.), ἴνδαλμα 'id.' (LXX).
•ETYM For the formation, one hypothesis has compared ἀγάλλομαι and posited a noun *ἴνδαλον vel sim. Frisk states that it must eventually belong to ►ἰδεῖν, ►εἶδος, comparing ►εἴδωλον for the λ-stem, and citing Chantraine 1942: 142 on the digamma. The nasal is supposed to have spread from a nasal present, and is also recognized in Skt. vindáti 'find' and in several Celtic forms, e.g. OIr. ro-finnadar 'finds out', and nouns like OIr. find 'white', Gaul. Vindo-(magus, -bona) < PCl. *u̯indo-. However, note that these supposed cognates have a different meaning. The conclusion of Indo-European origin is drawn too quickly. The formation in -αλ- (and -αλμος) is non-IE: for ►σχινδαλμός and ►ὀφθαλμός, this becomes evident from their variants with σχ-/ σκ-, -ινδ-/ -ιδ-, and -αλ(α)μος. Therefore, the word is rather Pre-Greek. The apparent agreement in form and meaning with *ueid- is just like that between ►ὀφθαλμός and *h_3ek^w-: such coincidences may be expected to occur every now and then.

ἴνδουρος [m.] · ἀσπάλαξ 'mole' (H.). ◁PG▷ •ETYM The similarity with Skt. undura- 'rat' is rather accidental; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. (not mentioned in Mayrhofer EWAia 3: 34f.). For the ending, we may compare ►σκίουρος 'squirrel', which must be a loan, perhaps from Pre-Greek.

ἶνις [m., f.] 'son, daughter' (A., E. [lyr.], Lyc., Call., also Cypr. inscr.; cf. Leumann 1950: 274[21]). ◁ONOM?▷

•VAR Accus. -ιν.
•ETYM Acc. to Walde Glotta 13 (1924): 127ff., it is from *ἔν-γν-ις with Cypr. ιν < εν and assimilation to the nasal with compensatory lengthening like in γῑ́νομαι. This would confirm the Achaean character of the word. OIr. ingen, Ogam inigena 'daughter' have also been compared, as well as νεο-γν-ός 'newly born'. Alternatively, we may compare the expressive forms ἴννος (ἴννην· κόρην μικράν, ἴννους· παῖδας H.), Byz. and MoGr. νινί 'child, pupil' (older litt. in Frisk). See now Masson REGr. 88 (1975): 1-5.

ἴννος 1 'child' (H.). •ETYM See on ►ἶνις 'son, daughter'.

ἴννος 2 [m.] '(young) mule', = γίννος (Arist.); more on the mg. in H. s.v. and Meister KZ 32 (1893): 143ff., with a wrong etymology. ◁?▷ •COMP As a second member probably in ►ὄνιννος name of an animal.
•ETYM A foreign word without explanation, like γίννος. Borrowed as Lat. hinnus, with h- after hinnīre. Cf. on ►ὄνος.

ἴντυβος ⇒ ἔντυβον.

ἴξ [m.] name of a worm that damages the vine (Alcm. 43). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Gen. ἰκός.
•ETYM See Gil Fernández 1959: 115f. Probably related to ►ἴψ as a substrate element.

ἴξαλος [m.] '(castrated) he-goat' (Δ 105, AP; on the mg. see Maaß RhM 74 (1925): 464f.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Cf. ἰσχαλωμέναι· δεδερματωμέναι 'skinned?' (H.), and ἴσκλαι· αἱ αἴγειαι μηλωταί 'goatskins' (H.).
•DER ἰξαλῆ [f.] 'goatskin' (Hp. Fract. 29) with several orthographic variants: ἰσάλη (sch. Ar. Nu. 72), ἰτθέλη (Poll.), ἰττέλη (Poll.), ἰσσέλη (Theogn.), ἰσσέλα, ἰσθλῆ, ἰτθέλα (H.), etc.
•ETYM Older scholars like Solmsen and Bechtel considered the variations as evidence for Anatolian origin. The word is Pre-Greek, acc. to Fur.: 129, 286, 349, 379, 393. The form with ἴσκλ- shows syncope of the α/ε; that with ἰσχαλ-, metathesis. The variation α/ε is well known in Pre-Greek words. I suggest that the word had *ikt^yal- with a palatalized t^y as its second consonant. See Pre-Greek: 5.5, also Heubeck 1961: 66 and 80.

ἰξός [m.] 'mistletoe, the birdlime prepared from it', metaph. of all kinds of sticky substances (Hp., E., Ar., Arist., Thphr.). ◁EUR▷ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰξο-βόρος name of thrush, 'Turdus viscivorus' (Arist.).
•DER ἰξία 'misteltoe' (perhaps derived from ἰξός in the mg. 'birdlime', cf. Strömberg 1937: 114), also name of a thistle, 'χαμαιλέων λευκός, Atractylis gummifera' (in this mg. also ἰξίνη [Thphr., Strömberg 1937: 86]), name of a disease: 'varicose vein' (Arist., Thphr.), cf. Scheller 1951: 42; ἰξίας [m.] a thistle, 'χαμαιλέων μέλας, Cardopatium corymbiferum' (Dsc.), ἰξιόεις 'made of ἰξίας' (Nic.); ἰξίον 'leaf of the χαμαιλέων λευκός' (Gal.); ἰξώδης 'sticky' (Hp., Luc.). Denominative: 1. ἰξεύω 'catch with birdlime' (Artem., Poll.); from there ἰξευτής 'birdcatcher' (LXX, Bion) together with ἰξευτικός, also ἰξευτήρ (Man.), fem. -εύτρια (Plu.; Τύχη ἰξεύτρια = Fortuna viscata); 2. ἰξόομαι 'be smeared with birdlime' (Thphr.).

•ETYM An old cultural word, identical with synonymous Lat. viscum (viscus). It has been compared with Germanic and Slavic names for the cherry (also used for preparing birdlime), e.g. OHG wīhsela 'morello', Ru. víšnja 'cherry'. DELG wonders whether the word is IE, but given the structure, it is rather a European loanword.

ἰξῦς, -ῦος [f.] 'waist, loins' (ε 231 = κ 544, Hp., Hell. poetry). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER Adverb ἰξυόθεν (Arat.); also ἰξύα, -η (EM).
•ETYM Formation like ὀσφύς, νηδύς, δελφύς, etc.; ἰξύα was created after δελφύα, ἰγνύη, et al. (Schwyzer: 463). Etymological relation with Lat. īlia [pl.] 'side of the body' is improbable. Fur.: 393 proposed to connect ►ἰσχίον 'hip'; if correct, the word is Pre-Greek because of the variation.

ἰόμωροι [pl.] epithet of the Ἀργεῖοι (Δ 242, Ξ 479). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM The explanation by the scholia as 'famous for their arrows' is incorrect, because the ἰ- is short (see ►ἰός 2). The epithet ἀπειλάων ἀκόρητοι in the second part of the verse suggests connection with ἰά, ἰή 'crying', as do the expressions βοὴν ἀγαθός and ὑλακό-μωροι (κύνες ξ 29, π 4). The sense of the second member has also been unknown since antiquity; cf. Leumann 1950: 37 and 272[18]. On the second member, which derives from *moh$_1$-ro- 'great', see ►ἐγχεσίμωρος.

ἴον [n.] 'violet' (Hom., Thphr.). ⊲LW Medit.⊳
•COMP Determinative compound λευκό-ϊον = ἴον λευκόν 'stock, gillyflower' (Thphr.; Risch IF 59 (1949): 257); often as a first member, e.g. ἰο-ειδής 'violet-colored' (Il.; of πόντος), ἰο-στέφανος 'crowned with violets' (h. Hom. 6, 18, Pi., Thgn.), ἰό-κολπος 'with violet bossom' (Sapph.; Treu 1955: 171); on ἰο-δνεφής see ►δνόφος; on ►ἰάνθινος s.v.
•DER ἰόεις 'violet-colored' = 'deep blue' (σίδηρος Ψ 850, θάλασσα Nic.); ἰωνιά 'violet-bed', also a plant name (Thphr.), after ῥοδων-ιά, θημων-ιά (Scheller 1951: 70f.); ἰοντῖτις [f.] plant name = ἀριστολόχεια (Dsc.; after κληματῖτις?, Redard 1949: 72).
•ETYM The gloss γία (for ϝία)· ἄνθη 'flowers' (H.) and the epic metrics confirm the initial ϝ- and the connection with Lat. viola. Both probably come from a Mediterranean language; see WH s.v.

ἴονθος [m.] 'young, downy hair', usually 'eruption on the face which accompanies the first growth of the beard' (Hp., Arist., Phld.). ⊲IE? *ui-uond^h-o- 'facial hair'⊳ •DER ἰονθώδης 'like ἴ.' (Thphr., Gal.) and ἰονθάς [f.] 'hairy, beard-like', of αἴξ 'goat' (ξ 50; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 354).
•ETYM May belong to a word for 'hair', etc., which appears in Celtic, Germanic and Balto-Slavic: MIr. find 'hair', OHG wint-brāwa 'eyelash' < IE *uend^h-o-; with a different formation, MIr. fēs 'hair', OPr. wanso [f.] 'the first beard', CS ǫsъ 'moustache' (IE *uend^h-s-o- or *uond^h-s-o-). The Greek word would have to represent a reduplicated formation *ϝί-ϝονθος. The words have been interpreted as verbal nouns of IE *uend^h- 'to wind'. For the meaning, cf. ►ἴουλος within Greek.

ἴορκος 'roe, gazelle'. ⇒δορκάς.

ἰός 1 'one and the same'. ⇒ἴα.

ἰός 2 [m.] 'arrow' (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 67. ⊲IE *(H)isu- 'arrow'⊳ •VAR Plur. ἰοί, also ἰά (Υ 68).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰο-δόκος 'receiving arrows', of φαρέτρη (Hom.), -η [f.] 'quiver' (A. R.); on ►ἰοχέαιρα s.v.
•ETYM Compared with Skt. íṣu- [f., m.], Av. išu- 'arrow' < *(H)isu-; Greek ἰός < *ihwo- must be a thematization of this word. Meier-Brügger MSS 49 (1988): 75-77 thinks that ἰά is the ntr.pl. of PGr. *ihu, and that ἰός is a secondarily thematicized singular derived from it.

ἰός 3 [m.] 'poison' (Pi., trag., Plu.). ⊲IE *uiso- 'fluidity, slime, poison'⊳ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰο-βόρος 'eating poison' (Nic., Opp.).
•DER ἰώδης 'poisonous' (imperial period).
•ETYM Old word for 'poison', replaced in many languages by other (and in most cases euphemistic) expressions, like Gr. φάρμακον, Lat. venēnum, German gift, French poison, etc. Besides Greek, the word is still present in Tocharian, Indo-Iranian and Italo-Celtic: ToA wäs, ToB wase 'poison, venom' < *uisó-, Skt. viṣá- [n.], Av. vīša-, Lat. vīrus [n.], MIr. fí < IE *uīso-. Tocharian and Skt. clearly point to a reconstruction *uiso-; the length in Latin, Irish and Greek should then be explained as secondary. Matasović 2008 s.v. *wisu- assumes an old root noun nom. *ueis, gen. *uis-os, which was levelled in various ways in the daughter languages. This could explain the occurrence of athematic forms like Av. viš- 'id.'. Szemerényi 1989: 91 argues that ἰός underwent secondary lengthening in hiatus, whereas De Vaan apud Matasović 2008 suggests a secondary formation *u̯is-i̯o-. Forms with deviating meaning are perhaps found in Skt. viṣ- 'faeces', Lat. vīrus in the meaning 'viscous liquid, slime, sap', W gwyar 'blood'. For this reason, the present entry has been identified with ►ἰός 4.

ἰός 4 [m.] 'rust' on iron, 'verdigris' on copper, bronze (Thgn., Hp., Pl., Theoc., SIG 284, 15 [Chios IV[a]]). ⊲?⊳ •DER ἰώδης 'rust-colored' (Hp., Thphr.).
•ETYM Given the varying meaning of IE *uis(o)- (see on ►ἰός 3), the present word has been identified with it. It could be due to different technical uses.

ἰότης [f.] 'will, decision' vel sim. (Hom), in θεῶν ἰότητι, etc. On the use in Homer see Krarup Class. et Med. 10 (1949): 13. ⊲IE? *$h_2$eis- 'wish'⊳ •VAR Only dat. ἰότητι (Hom., A. R.); ἰότατι (Alc. ᾱ 309 LP, A. Pr. 558 [lyr.]), except for ἰότητα Ο 41.
•ETYM Etymology uncertain. There are two hypotheses: 1) related to Skt. iṣ- 'to wish' (pres. iccháti), either from *$h_2$iso-teh$_2$t- or *$h_2$isto-teh$_2$t- from the ptc. *$h_2$istó- = Skt. iṣṭá- 'wished' (Chantraine 1933: 294); 2) to ἵεμαι 'to hasten, desire', in which case we would have to posit *ϝιό-της (or, with haplological shortening, *ϝιοτό-της from *ϝίοτος 'wishing' = Lat. (in-)vītus, for which see on ►ἵεμαι). However, ἵεμαι has a long ῑ-. Improbable suggestion by Leumann 1950: 127ff., who explains ἰότητι as from a false split of δηιοτῆτι (-τος) 'enmity' into δὴ ἰότητι, -τος. The Boeot. PN Θειο-ϝίοτος strongly speaks in favor of original *ϝιότητι.

ἴουλος [m.] 'down, first growth of the beard, etc.; corn sheaf; catkin'; also name of a centipede-like worm (λ 319, A. Th. 534, Arist., Thphr.). ◂IE uel-* 'turn, wind'▸ •COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰουλό-πεζος "with feet like an ἴουλος", also of a ship, i.e. 'with many rowers' (Lyc. 23).
•DER ἰουλίς [f.] fishname 'Coris iulis' (Arist.), because it resembles a centipede (Strömberg 1943: 125; also Thompson 1947 s.v.), also called ἴουλος (Eratosth.); Ἰουλώ [f.] "goddess of the corn sheaf", i.e. Demeter (Semus 19); thence the back-formation ἴουλος 'song for Demeter' (ibid., Eratosth.), also καλλίουλος (for καλλι-ίουλος, Semus); ἰουλώδης 'like a centipede' (Arist.); denominative verb ἰουλίζω 'get down' (Tryph.).
•ETYM From reduplicated *ϝί-ϝολνος (cf. ►ἴονθος), related to οὖλος 'woolly, fuzzy' and ►εἰλέω 2 (< *ϝελνέω) 'turn, wind'.

ἰοχέαιρα [adj.] epithet of Artemis, also used as a substantive (Hom.; Pi. P. 2, 9 [with shortening of the ι-], poet. inscr.), also of the φαρέτρα (AP 6, 9); also name of the viper (Nic. Fr. 33). ◂IE Hisu-* 'arrow' and ǵʰesr-* 'hand'▸ •ETYM Since antiquity, this epithet has often been explained as 'shaking out arrows, she who shoots arrows', from ἰός 'arrow' and χέω 'to pour', by comparison with δούρατ' ἔχευαν E 618. However, Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 7 (1956): 275ff. more convincingly derived it from ἰός and χείρ as 'who has arrows in her hand'; this is supported by Skt. formations like íṣu-hasta- 'who holds an arrow in the hand', śūla-hasta- 'holding a lance in the hand'. See also R. Schmitt 1967: 177ff., Hagen Glotta 76 (1998): 53-58, and especially Peters 1980a: 223-228 with an extensive discussion.

ἴπνη [f.] name of a bird (Boios apud Ant. Lib. 21, 6). ◂?▸
•DER Also ἴππα (or rather * ἴπτα, with Vossius, because of the alphabetical order), ἴττα· δρυοκόλαψ, ἐθνικῶς 'woodpecker (dialectal)' (H.).
•ETYM The form ἴττα recalls ►σίττη; further unclear. Cf. Solmsen 1909: 173².

ἰπνόν [n.] = ἵππουρις (Thphr. HP 4, 10, 1), a plant. ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ἰπνός [m.] 'furnace', also 'kitchen' and 'lantern' (IA). ◂IE? sp-nó-, sep- 'boil, bake'▸ •DIAL Myc. i-po-no.
•COMP ἰπνο-πλάθος 'oven-maker' (Pl.), Ἔφ-ιπνος· Ζεὺς ἐν Χίῳ 'Zeus in Chios' (H.).
•DER Diminutive ἰπνίον (medic.); ἰπνών (Delos IIIᵃ), ἰπνιών (Gortyn) 'kitchen'; ἰπνίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread baked in an oven' (Hp.); ἴπνιος 'belonging to an oven', ἴπνια· τὰ καθάρματα τοῦ ἰπνοῦ 'the offscourings from an oven' (H.) (Call. Fr. 216); ἰπνεύω [v.] 'to bake in an oven' (H.; hιπνε[ύεσθαι] IG 1², 4: 15) together with ἰπνευτής· furnarius (gloss.).
•ETYM The form ἰπνός may have developed from *ἱπνός (cf. Ἔφ-ιπνος and hιπνε[ύεσθαι] IG 1², 4: 15). It has been compared with a synonymous West Germanic word: OE ofen, OHG ovan 'oven', also ON ofn, from PGm. ofna-* < úfna-*. However, these words cannot be combined because of the vocalism (and the Greek aspiration). The same holds true for the forms with velar: Go. auhns, OSw. oghn, from PGm. oχna-, oʒna- < úχna-, uʒná-. Neither is there any possibility to connect it with Skt. ukhá- [m.], ukhā́ [f.] 'pot, cooking-pot'. A new proposal, which seems the most promising to date, has been advanced by Vine 1999a: 5-30: derivation from the root sep-* of ἕψω as s°p-no-*, with a secondary zero-grade yielding -ι-. The formation, an adjective in -nó- with active sense, must be old.

ἶπος [f., n.] 'press', of a fuller, or for medical purposes; 'weight (in a mouse-trap, etc.)' (Pi., Archil., Hp., Ar.). ◂?▸
•VAR The primary aorist ἴψασθαι, with fut. ἴψεται (A 454 = Π 237, B 193), rather means 'to squeeze, oppress' than 'to damage' (φθεῖραι, βλάψαι H.); pres. ἴπτω = βλάπτω only EM 481, 3.
•DER Denominative verb ἰπόω 'to press' (Hdt., Hp., A.), also with ἀπ-, ἐξ-; ἴπωσις 'pressing, pressure' (Hp.), ἰπωτήριον 'oil-press, wine-press' (pap.), 'bougie' (medic.), ἰπωτρίς 'pressing' (σπάθη, medic.), ἐξιπωτικός 'pressing out' (Gal.).
•ETYM Unexplained. One could compare ἰψών· δεσμωτήριον 'prison' (H.).

ἵππος [m., f.] 'horse, mare' (Il.), collective fem. 'cavalry' (IA). ◂IE h₁eḱuo-* 'horse'▸ •DIAL Myc. i-qo /hikkʷos/, i-qi-ja /hikkʷia/ 'chariot'.
•COMP Very frequent in compounds: bahuvrīhis (λεύκ-ιππος), governing compounds (ἱππό-δαμ-ος, ἱππ-ηλά-της), determinative compounds (ἱππο-τοξότης), compounds with transformed second member (ἱππο-πόταμος, ἵππ-αγρος for ἵππος ποτάμιος, ἄγριος, see Risch IF 59 (1949): 287; on ἱππο-κορυστής see ►κόρυς); with metrically conditioned ἱππιο- for ἱππο- in ἱππιο-χαίτης, -χάρμης (epic). As a first member also augmentative, especially in plant-names (ἱππο-λάπαθον et al., Strömberg 1940: 30).
•DER A. Substantives: diminutive ἱππάριον (X.), ἱππίσκος '(small) statue of a horse' (Samos IVᵃ), etc., ἱππίδιον as a fishname (Epich.; Strömberg 1943: 100). ἱππότης [m.] 'horseman, chariot driver' (Il.; in Homer always ἱππότă), fem. ἱππότις (Nonn.); ἱππεύς 'chariot fighter' (Il.), 'horseman' (Sapph., A., Hdt.), 'knight' as a social class (Hdt., Ar., Arist.); thence ἱππεύω, see below; also as a name of a comet like ἱππίας (Plin., Apul.; Scherer 1953: 107); ἱππών 'stable' (Att. inscr., X.); ἱππάκη 'cheese of mare-milk' (Hp.), also a plant name (Strömberg 1940: 136; formation like ἐριθάκη, ἀλωνάκη et al.); ἵππερος "horse-fever" (Ar., like ἴκτερος, ὕδερος); ἱπποσύνη 'art of driving, cavalry' (Il.).
B. Adjectives: ἱππάς [f.] 'belonging to a horse, status and census of the knights in Athens' (Hp., Arist.); ἵππειος 'belonging to a horse' (Il.); ἵππιος 'id.' (Alc., Pi., trag.), often as an epithet of gods (Poseidon, Athena, etc.); thence Ἱππιών as a month name (Eretria); ἱππικός 'id.' (IA; Chantraine 1956a: 141); ἱππώδης 'horse-like' (X.).
C. Verbs: 1. ἱππάζομαι (also with ἀφ-, ἐφ-, καθ-, etc.) 'drive horses, serve as a riding-horse' (Il.) together with ἱππασία, ἱππάσιμος, ἱππαστήρ, -άστρια, ἱππαστής, -αστικός, ἵππασμα, ἱππασμός. 2. ἱππεύω 'id.' (IA), originally from ἱππεύς, but also referring to ἵππος; also with prefix, e.g. ἀφ-, καθ-, παρ-, συν-; thence ἱππευτήρ, -τής, ἱππεία, ἵππευσις, ἵππευμα; details in Boßhardt 1942: 34f. Countless proper names, both full and short names (Ἱππόλυτος, Ἱππίας, Ἵππη, etc., etc.). See Delebecque 1951.

•ETYM Derives from the inherited word for 'horse', represented in Skt. áśva-, Av. aspa-, Lat. equus, Venet. ekvon [acc.], OIr. ech, OE eoh, OLith. ešva 'mare', ToB yakwe, as well as perhaps the Thracian PN Βετεσπιος and Arm. ēš 'donkey'. All these forms derive from IE h_1eḱuo-. According to Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ekku-*, the Anatolian evidence (Hitt. phonetic complements in -us, -un, HLuw. aśu-, Lyc. esb-) points to an athematic stem h_1eḱu-. This form must have been thematicized in PIE to h_1eḱuo- after the separation of Anatolian. From this form, we expect an outcome Gr. *ἔππος, so one problem is the vocalism ἰ-, for which Mycenaean origin has been suggested. A second problem is the initial aspiration. Connection with ὠκύς cannot be demonstrated. A form with geminate velar is found in ἴκκος (EM 474, 12), Ἴκκος PN (Tarent., Epid.); see Lejeune 1972: 83[1]. A recent discussion of the origin of the type ἱππεύς is found in De Vaan JIES 37 (2009).

ἵπταμαι 'fly'. ⇒πέτομαι.

ἴπτομαι 'press'. ⇒ἶπος.

ἱρήν •VAR ἱρήν. ⇒εἰρήν.

ἶρις, -ιδος [f.] 'rainbow' (Il.), also of the halo of the moon, etc. (Arist., Thphr., Gal.), as a plant name 'purple Iris', etc. (Arist., Thphr.), see Strömberg 1940: 49; also name of a stone (Plin.). As a PN Ἶρις, -ιδος, -ιν daughter of Thaumas and Elektra, messenger of the gods (Il., Hes.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Acc. -ιδα, -ιν.
•DER ἴρινος (com., Thphr., Plb.), -εος (Nic.) 'made of the Iris'; ἰρώδης 'like a rainbow' (Arist.), ἰρῖτις [f.] name of a stone (Plin.), see Redard 1949: 55; denominative ἰρίζω [v.] 'to be iridescent' (PHolm. 7, 6).
•ETYM Evidence for the original form ϝῖρις comes both from an inscription from Corinth and from the epic metrics (see Chantraine 1942: 152).
The name of the goddess is no doubt identical with the appellative. This appellative has been derived from the root ueh₁i-* 'bend', which is also seen in ►ἰτέα and ►ἴτυς; a suffix -r- is also seen in the Germanic group of OE wīr, ON vírr 'metallic wire, twisted ornament' (Kretschmer Glotta 2 (1910): 354).
Fur.: 356 compares ἔριδας· τὰς ἐν οὐρανῷ ἴριδας (H.), and concludes to Pre-Greek origin; does Εἶρις (formerly explained as Ἐ-ϝῖρις with prothetic vowel, which is impossible for an IE word) point to the same? Against the traditional etymology, it must be said that a pre-form PIE uh₁i-r-i-* is hard to motivate.

ἴς 1 [f.] 'power, strength' (Hom., Hes.). ◂IE uiH-* 'strength'▸ •VAR Accus. ἶν(α) (3 times, only before vowel, see below), instr. ἶφι.
•DER ἴφι-ος 'strong' (ἴφια μῆλα Hom., D. P.) with PNs like ϝιφιάδας, ϝίφιτος (Boeot., Cor.), Ἶφις (I 667, etc.; pet name); ►ἴφθιμος does not belong here.
•ETYM The gloss γίς (= ϝίς)· ... ἰσχύς (H.) confirms the identity of (ϝ)ίς 'strength' with Lat. vīs 'id.'; the expected accus. (ϝ)ῖν = Lat. vim can be restored from ἶν', which is always antevocalic.

ἴς [f.] 'sinew, tendon' (Hom., Hp., Archil., Ar.), 'tendon of the neck' (P 522), 'muscle fibres, fibrin, fibre of plants, ribs of leaves' (Pl., Arist., Thphr.); details on the botanical usage in Strömberg 1937: 129ff. ◂IE? uiH-* 'tensile force'▸ •VAR Gen. ἰνός; mostly plur. ἶνες, dat. ἴνεσι, late ἰσίν, ἴναις.
•COMP ἄ-, πολύ-ϊνος 'without, with many ἶνες', etc. (Thphr.).
•DER ἰνίον [n.] 'the tendons at the back of the head, the neck' (Il., Hp., Arist.), cf. κρανίον, and see Chantraine 1933: 59; ἰνώδης 'sinewy, fibrous' (X., Arist., Thphr.); probably also ἰναία· δύναμις 'power, capacity' (H., uncertain conj. Peripl. M. Rubr. 46); denominative verbs: ἰνόω 'to provide with ἶνες, stengthen' (Hdn.), ἐξ-ινόω 'remove the ἶνες, make powerless' (Lyc.), also ἐξ-ινίζω, -ινιάζω (Gal., Peripl. M. Rubr. et al.).
•ETYM It is debatable whether ἴς 'sinew' (which seems to have had initial ϝ-) is a concretization of ἴς 'strength', or if it was originally a separate word. We may compare the meaning 'tensile force' in Skt. váyas-, which also means 'power, etc.'. It is mostly assumed that the n-stem inflexion ἶνα, ἶνες, etc. arose from an accus. (ϝ)ῖνα, with -α added like in Ζῆν-α. This is quite possible. Scheftelowitz IF 33 (1913/1914): 158f. assumed an independent word (ϝ)ΐς, (ϝ)ῑνός 'sinew' (cf. γίς· ἱμάς 'strap' H.) from a verb 'bow, bend', seen in ►ἴτυς, ►Ἶρις.

ἴσᾱμι [v.] 'I know'. ◂GR▸ •VAR Inf. ϝισάμην (Gortyn).
•ETYM A Doric innovation (Theoc., Cret., etc.) starting from the 3pl. ἴσαντι = Att. ἴσασι, based on ἵσταντι : ἵστᾱμι. Rejected by Floyd KZ 90 (1976): 166-177.

ἰσάτις [f.] name of a blue-coloring plant, 'woad, Isatis tinctoria' (Hp., Thphr., Samos IV[a]). ◂?▸ •VAR Gen. -ιδος, -ιος, -εως.
•DER ἰσατώδης 'woad-like' (Hp., Aret.).
•ETYM Lat. vitrum 'id.' and OHG weit, OE wād 'woad' have been adduced, as well as MLat. waisda (Prellwitz 1905 s.v.); these seem too far off, but perhaps all these words are loans from a common source. The plant was probably named for its glass-like color (see De Vaan 2008 s.v. vitrum).

ἰσθμός [m.] 'small entry, spit of land, strait of earth or sea, neck', especially as a TN of the strait of Corinth (IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also fem., after ἡ ὁδός, etc. (cf. Schwyzer 1950: 34[2]).
•COMP As a second member with a suffix -ιο- in the hypostasis παρ-ίσθμια [n.pl., sg.] 'fauces, tonsils' (Hp., Arist.).
•DER ἴσθμιος 'belonging to the Isthmos' (Pi., trag.), τὸ ἴσθμιον 'collar' (σ 300), τὰ ἴσθμια 'fauces' (Hp.); ἴσθμιον also metaph. from the neck of a flask (Cypr. word in Pamphil. apud Ath. 11, 472e; different Leumann 1950: 271); τὰ Ἴσθμια name of the Corinthian games (Pi., Simon., Ar.) together with Ἰσθμιο-νίκης, -νικος 'winner at these games' (B.), Ἰσθμιασταί 'spectators of the games' (title of a play of A.; like Ἀπολλωνιασταί, etc., Chantraine 1933: 317); ἰσθμιάζω (Suid., H.), also Ἰσθμιᾶται (Delos II[a]); ἰσθμικός, -ιακός 'belonging to the Isthmos, the Isthmian games' (Ar., Str.), ἰσθμώδης 'isthmos-like' (Th.). Denominative ἰσθμιαίνω = ἀσθμαίνω, with ἴσθμα = ἆσθμα 'panting' (H.), arose as a cross of ἰσθμός with ἀσθμαίνω.

•ETYM Derivation from εἶμι 'go' with a suffix -θμο- has been assumed, by comparison with the by-forms Ἰθμός, Ἰθμιο-νίκα (inscr.) and ἴ-θμα, εἰσ-ί-θμη. In derivatives of this root, the meaning 'strait' is also found in ON eið [n.] 'strait of land', from IE Hoi-d^ho-* (or Hoi-to-). However, the -σ- is unexplained, and as a basic form Hid^h-d^hmo- cannot be accounted for. Chantraine 1933: 137 therefore assumes adaptation of a local loan; likewise, Fur.: 294[9].

ἰσίκιον [n.] 'a dish of mince-meat' (Ath. 376 b, pap.). ◄LW Lat.►
•DER ἴσικος 'id.' (Alex. Aphr., Pr. 1, 22), ἰσικιάριος and ἰσικιομάγειρος 'butcher'.
•ETYM From Lat. insicium

ἴσκαι [f.pl.] 'fungus growing on oaks and walnut-trees (Aet. 7, 91, Paul. Aeg. 6, 49). ◄PG(V)► •VAR ὕσκαι, uncertain reading Aet. 7, 91.
•ETYM Unknown. If the variant is reliable (Fur.: 367), it would point to a Pre-Greek word.

ἴσκλαι 'sheep-skin'. ⇒ἴξαλος.

ἴσκω [v.] 'to make like, imitate, think like, interchange' (Hom.), also 'to imitate, feign' (τ 203 with λέγων; cf. Lat. simulāre), 'to suppose by mistake' (χ 31, after τ 203); thence 'to suppose' (Simon. 130). In Alexandrian poets (where also 1sg. ἴσκον, ptc. ἴσκων) 'to speak, say' (Theoc., A. R., Lyc.). ◄IE ueik-* 'resemble'► •VAR Only 3sg. ipf. ἴσκε(ν) and ptc. ἴσκοντες, ἴσκουσα.
•ETYM Probably from *ϝίκ-σκ-ω; see on ►ἔοικα, as well as Bechtel 1914 s.v. and Chantraine 1942: 317.

ἴσος [adj.] 'equal' in number, strength, size, status, etc. (Il.). ◄IE? ueid-* 'see, know'► •VAR Epic ἶσος, fem. ἐΐση (see below), Arc. Cret. Boeot. ϝίσϝος (H. γίσγον· ἴσον).
•COMP Very frequent as a first member, e.g. ἰσό-θεος 'god-like' (Il.), hypostasis of ἴσος θεῷ or a bahuvrīhi 'having gods as equals' (Risch 1937: 186; cf. Sommer IF 55 (1937): 195[2]), ἰσό-πεδον 'plain' (Il.), ἰσό-πεδος 'of the same level, as high as' (Hdt., Hp.; cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 15), ἰσ-ηγορίη, -ία 'equal right to speak, political equality' (IA; a compound of ἴσον ἀγοράσθαι); on ►ἰσοφαρίζω s.v. As a second member e.g. in ἄ(ν)-ισος 'unequal, unfair' (IA).
•DER ἰσότης 'equality' (Pl., Arist.), ἰσάκις 'as often' (Pl.), ἰσαχῶς 'in as many ways' (Arist.); denominative verbs: ἰσάζω 'make, be equal' (Il.) with ἰσασμός (Epicur.) and ἰσαστικός (Eust.); ἰσόομαι, -όω 'to become (make) equal' (since η 212); ἰσαίομαι 'to be (made) equal' (Nic., Arat.).
•ETYM Formally, ϝίσϝος > epic ἶσος (on the digamma, cf. Chantraine 1942: 144; the apparent prothetic vowel in ἐ-(ϝ)ίση is artificial; Beekes 1969: 65f.), Att. ἴσος. The development corresponds to that in *μόνϝος > epic μοῦνος, Att. μόνος, and *ὅλϝος > epic οὖλος, Att. ὅλος, etc.
As IE -su̯-* was not retained in Greek, the comparison with Skt. viṣu- 'to several sides' must be given up. Phonetically, a basic form u̯it^su̯o-* would do, but the morphological connection to a zero grade *ϝιδσ- from εἶδος 'shape' (thus Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 205) is hypothetical. An ingenious but probably incorrect analysis as δύω 'two' + thematization of a suffix -τυ- by Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 12f. Extensive discussion by Ruijgh Minos 20-22 (1987): 533-544.

ἰσοφαρίζω [v.] 'to match oneself against, measure oneself with' (Il., Hes., Simon., Theoc.); 'to make equal' (Nic. Th. 572). ◄GR►
•VAR Only present.
•ETYM With comparable meaning, there is also ἀντιφερίζω 'to oppose somebody' (Il.), after ἀντι-φέρω. The word αὐτοφαρίζειν· αὐτοματεῖν 'to act spontaneously' (H.) arose after the example of ἰσοφαρίζω. This probably stands for *ἰσοφορίζω = ἴσα φέρειν, from hypothetical *ἰσο-φόρος, but the α-vocalism is unclear. Perhaps after an unknown example (type ἰσοβαρής)? However, note that the α is also found in φαρέτρα.

ἴσσασθαι · κληροῦσθαι 'to be appointed by lot' (H.).
•ETYM See Bechtel 1921, 1: 120 and Luther 1935: 70. See ►αἶσα.

ἱστάνω [v.] 'to arise, acquire'. ◄GR►
•VAR Hell. present for ἵστημι (Plb., pap., inscr.), formed to the inf. ἱστάναι.
•ETYM A parallel case is that of Cret. στανύω 'install' (πόλιν στανυέσθων SGDI 5040, 66), which has been compared with Av. fra-stanuuanti 'they gain an advantage'. In reality, the Cypr. form is rather a thematic enlargement of a primary present of the type αἴνυμαι, probably after τανύω et al. See Schwyzer: 696f., 698f.

ἵστημι [v.] 'to make stand, set up, take position, bring to a standstill, etc.' (Il.). ◄IE steh₂-* 'stand, set'► •VAR Med. ἵσταμαι 'to stand up, etc.', aor. στῆσαι, στήσασθαι, fut. στήσω, aor. pass. σταθῆναι (Od.), fut. σταθήσομαι (Att.); intr. aor. στῆναι with fut. στήσομαι 'take a stand, arise', perf. ἕστηκα 'to stand'.
•DIAL Dor. ἵστᾱμι
•COMP Very often with prefix, ἀνα-, κατα-, ἀπο-, ἐξ-, μετα-, etc.
•DER Several (partly inherited) derivations are ►ἱστός, ►σταθμός, ►σταμῖνες, ►στάσις, ►στατήρ, ►στήλη, ►στήμων, ►στοά, etc. See also ►στάμινος, ►σταυρός.
•ETYM The intr. athem. root aorist ἔστην neatly corresponds to Skt. ásthām < PIE h₁é-steh₂-m*. Beside this, Greek innovated (already in Hom.) a transitive s-aorist ἔστησα, like ἔφῡσα beside ἔφῡν, etc. The intr. future στήσομαι was originally built from ἔστην, but became associated with the s-aorist later. Also, the trans. reduplicated athematic present ἵστημι is limited to Greek; one may compare τίθημι, ἵημι, βίβημι. Both Indo-Iranian and Italo-Celtic have thematic formations: Skt. tíṣṭhati 'stands', Lat. sistit (both < -sth₂-e-ti*). The intr. perf. ἕστηκα, plur. ἕστᾰμεν is old (leaving aside the enlargment in -κ-), and together with Skt. tasthāu, plur. tasthimá, Lat. stetimus it continues an IE perfect formation. The verbal adjective στατός (Il.), also in Skt. sthitá- 'standing', Lat. status, ON staðr, etc. < PIE sth₂-to-* is old as well. For more different IE formations, see LIV² s.v. steh₂-*. See also ►ἱστάνω.

ἱστία 'hearth'. •VAR Ion. -ίη. ⇒ἑστία.

ἱστός [m.] 'beam (of a loom), loom, tissue; mast' (Il.). ◄IE *steh$_2$- 'stand, set'► •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. ἱστο-δόκη 'support of the mast' for the mast when let down (A 434), ἱστο-πέδη 'hole in the keel for stepping the mast' (μ 51 = 162, Alc. Z 2, 6); cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 26; ἱστο-βοεύς 'pole, thill' (Hes. Op. 431, 435, A. R. 3, 1318 and Orac. apud Paus. 9, 37, 4), metrical enlargement of *ἱστό-βοος = ἱστὸς βόειος, βοῶν (cf. ἱππο-πόταμος) after the instrument names in -ευς; also ἱστο-βόη (AP 6, 104, after -δόκη, etc.).

•DER ἱστίον, mostly plur. -ία 'sail' (Il.), also 'curtain' (LXX), 'piece' as a measure (pap.).

•ETYM Formation like φορτίον 'load, wares' et al. (Chantraine 1933: 59). Belongs to ἵσταμαι (or a lost present of the type Lat. si-st-ō) as "stand"; originally used for the (standing) beam of the loom; cf. Chantraine 1928: 14 and Hermann Gött. Nachr. (1943): 7. See also ►ἵστημι, ►στήμων.

ἵστωρ, -ορος [m.] 'knowing, expert' (h. Hom. 32, 2, Heraclit., B., S.), 'witness' (Hp., Boeot. inscr., Att. oath for ephebes in Poll. 8, 106), in unclear mg. Σ 501, Ψ 486 ('witness' or 'arbiter'?), also Hes. Op. 702. ◄IE *ueid- 'see, know', *uid-tor-►

•DIAL Boeot. ϝίστωρ.

•COMP With prefix in συν-ίστωρ 'witness, conscious' (to σύν-οιδα; trag., Th., Plb.) with συνιστορέω 'to be conscious of a matter' (Hell.); ἐπι-ίστωρ 'knowing something, familiar with' (φ 26, A. R., AP et al.), ὑπερ-ίσ-τωρ 'knowing all too well' (S. El. 850 [lyr.], momentary formation); ἀ-ΐστωρ 'unknowing' (Pl. Lg. 845b, E. Andr. 682), πολυ-ΐστωρ 'polyhistor' (D. H., Str.), φιλ-ίστωρ 'who loves knowledge' together with φιλιστορέω (Str., Vett. Val.).

•DER ἱστόριον 'testimony' (Hp.), ἱστορία (see below). Denominative verb ἱστορέω (also with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, ἐξ-) 'be witness or expert, give testimony, recount, get testimony, find out, search' (Ion., trag., Arist., Hell.) together with ἱστόρημα 'account' (D. H.); usually ἱστορία, -ίη 'knowledge, account, (historical) account, history, search, investigation' (IA, Hell.), which formally derives from ἵστωρ, but was functionally associated with ἱστορέω. Adjective ἱστορικός 'regarding ἱστορία or ἱστορεῖν, historical' (Pl., Arist., Hell.; cf. Chantraine 1956a: 134-136).

•ETYM From u̯id-tōr, an agent noun of οἶδα, ἴσμεν. The word itself, but especially the derivations ἱστορέω, ἱστορίη that arose in Ionic, have spread over the Hellenic and Hellenistic world together with Ionic science and philosophy. The aspiration is probably not original; explanation in Schwyzer: 226 and 306. Unsuccessful attempt by Floyd Glotta 68 (1990): 157-166 to derive the word from ἵζω 'sit, seat' as 'convenor'. On the history of the concepts ἵστωρ, ἱστορέω, ἱστορίη, see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 93f., Fraenkel 1910: 218f., Snell 1924: 59ff., Keuck 1934, Frenkian REIE 1 (1938): 468ff., Leumann 1950: 277f., Muller Mnem. 54 (1926): 235ff., and Louis RPh. 81 (1955): 39ff. See ►οἶδα.

ἰσχίον [n.] 'hip-joint, haunches' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►

•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἐξ-ίσχιος 'standing out from the haunch' (Hp.), εὐ-ίσχιος 'with beautiful hips' (Hell. poetry).

•DER Diminutive ἰσχάριον (Hero); ἰσχιακός 'belonging to the hip' (Thphr.); ἰσχιάς, -άδος [f.] (scil. νόσος) 'pain in the hip' (Hp.) with ἰσχιαδικός (medic.), as a plant-name = λευκάκανθα (Dsc., as a remedy against ἰσχιάς, Strömberg 1937: 194); ἰσχίᾱσις = ἰσχιάς (medic.; as if from *ἰσχιάω, see Schwyzer: 505 and 732); denominative verb ἰσχιάζω (ἰσχιάδδειν H.; Lacon.) 'bend the hip-joint' (Procop., Suid., Phot., H.; uncertain Gal. 18 [1] 786).

•ETYM No etymology. If ἴσχι· ὀσφύς 'loins' (H.) is correct, the formation corresponds to that of ἄλφι and μέλι. Skt. names for body parts like sákthi 'thigh-bone' (which is unrelated to ἰσχίον) and ásthi 'bone' seem to have a similar formation, but these probably have -i < *-H. Latte thinks that ἴσχι is simply a mistake for ἰσχίον. Fur.: 393 connects it with ἰξῦς, which seems quite possible if one assumes consonant metathesis in ἰσχίον. One might assume a Pre-Greek pre-form ikt^y-; cf. on ►ἴξαλος. Pre-Greek had several words ending in -ι, which is very rare in inherited Greek (Pre-Greek: 3.1b).

ἰσχνός [adj.] 'dry, arid, languishing, lean' (IA). ◄?►

•COMP E.g. ἰσχνό-φωνος 'with dry (weak) voice' (Hdt., Hp., Arist.), often connected with ἴσχω (v.l. ἰσχό-φωνος; cf. below on ἰσχναίνω) and understood as 'having an impediment in one's speech'; ἔν-ισχνος 'a little dry' (Nic. Al. 147; cf. Strömberg 1946: 128).

•DER ἰσχνότης 'dryness, etc.' (Hp., Arist.); denominative verbs: 1. ἰσχναίνω (also with prefixes like κατ-, ἀπ-) 'dry up, make lean' (IA) with ἰσχνασία, -ίη 'dried up state, leanness' (Hp., Arist.), ἰσχνασμός (Hp.), ἴσχνανσις (Paul. Aeg.) 'emaciation', ἰσχναντικός 'fit for reducing' (Arist.); 2. ἰσχνόομαι 'to get dry', -όω 'to make dry', also with ἀπ-, ἐξ-, etc. (Hp., Arist.), together with ἴσχνωσις, -ωτικός (medic., etc.). Further ἰσχαλέος 'dry, barren' (τ 233, Man.) and ἰσχάς, -άδος [f.] 'dried fig' (com., Arist.) with derivatives ἰσχαδο-πώλης, ἰσχάδιον, etc. (com.).

•ETYM The pair ἰσχνός, ἰσχαλέος does not show an old interchange ν : λ (which is no IE category, though it does have a parallel in σμερδνός : σμερδαλέος). One might have expected a verb ἰσχαίνω (cf. κερδαλέος : κερδαίνω), which incidentally is often found as a v.l., but this may also be a cross with ἰσχάνω 'to hold back'. A cognate u-stem has been assumed in Av. hišku-, MIr. sesc 'dry', IE si-sk-u-(o-). These are derived from a root sek- 'wither' (see Pok. 894). For ἰσχνός, an ad hoc base form si-sk-sno- has been assumed (Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 475). The derivational basis for ἰσχάς is unclear; given οἰνάς, κοτινάς, φυτάς, μυρτάς, etc., one would expect a noun.

ἰσχῦς, -ύος [f.] 'power, strength, might' (Hes.). ◄PG?►

•COMP Compound ἄν-ισχυς 'powerless' (LXX). As a first member e.g. ἰσχυρο-ποιέω 'strengthen, fortify' (Plb.), as a second member in ἀν-ίσχυρος 'powerless' (Hp., Str.), ὑπερ-ίσχυρος 'extremely strong' (X., Arist.).

•DER Denominative verb ἰσχύω, aor. ἰσχῦσαι (also with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, ἐξ-, κατ-, ὑπερ-) 'have power, be strong' (Pi., Hp., Att.) together with ἴσχυσις (LXX). Adjective ἰσχῡρός 'powerful, strong, mighty, vehement' (IA); thence ἰσχυρικός 'strong' (Pl. Tht. 169b), see Chantraine 1956a: 147, with denominatives: 1. ἰσχυρίζομαι 'to prove one's strength, exert oneself, proclaim emphatically, etc.' (Heraclit., Att.), also with prefixes like δι-, ἀπ-, ἀντ-, together with the desiderative ἰσχυρι-είω 'to venture to affirm' (Hp.); 2. κατ-ισχυρεύομαι 'to be violent' (Aq.).

PN Ἰσχύλος (inscr.).
•ETYM The glosses (Lacon.) βίσχυν, γισχύν· ἰσχύν (H., also Hdn. Gr. 1, 509) point to PGr. *ϝισχῦς, which was connected with Skt. vi-ṣah- 'to have in one's power' by Brugmann IF 16 (1904): 493f. and Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 209. The latter word belongs to the root *seǵ^h- (s.v. σχεῖν, ►ἔχω) with a prefix *ui- 'apart, asunder', but this prefix does not exist in Greek, so the etymology fails. However, Myc. i-su-ku-wo-do-to has no digamma, which means that the ϝ- in the glosses may be secondary after *ϝίς 'power' (thus Meillet BSL 27 (1927): 129ff., though with false explanation of the ἰ- as "prothetic"). The connection with ἔχειν seems rather improbable. On the ū-stem (like πληθῦς, νηδῦς, etc.), see Schwyzer: 463f. and Meid IF 63 (1958): 19, who assumes an abstract formation from an adjective *ϝι-σχ-ύς 'resisting' (-υ- like in ἐχυ-ρός), which is not very convincing. Chantraine Emerita 19 (1951): 134ff. considers connection with ἰξύς, ἰσχίον. Pre-Greek origin seems quite possible.

ἰταμός [adj.] 'headlong, hasty, eager, bold, reckless' (Att.). ◂?▸
•DER Also ἴτης, -ου [m.] 'id.' (Ar., Pl.), and ἰτητικός = ἰταμός (Arist.); from ἰτάω? See ►εἶμι. Further ἰταμότης (Pl., Plb.), ἰταμία (LXX) 'vigour, effrontery', ἰταμεύομαι 'be ἰτ.' (Jul. Or. 7, 210c; interpolated).
•ETYM Mostly, ἴ-της is derived from ἰέναι 'to go' (Chantraine 1933: 318) as "Draufgänger" (thus already in antiquity, e.g. Pl. Prt. 349e, 359c), though most other oxytones in -αμός are substantives (ποταμός, etc.). Probably a word from the Attic popular language (incorrectly, Fraenkel 1912: 58f.).

ἰτέα [f.] 'willow' (Φ 350), also 'shield made of willow' (E., Ar.; cf. Trümpy 1950: 73). ◂IE *ueh$_1$i- 'bend', *uh$_1$i-tu-▸ •VAR Epic Ion. ἰτέη (-εί- A. R. 4, 1428, with metrical lengthening?).
•COMP Compound ἰτεό-φυλλος 'adorned with willow-leaves' (Halic. III^a).
•DER ἰτέϊνος 'of willow' (Hdt., Thphr., pap.), ἰτεών 'willow forest' (Gp.).
•ETYM Formation like πτελέα and other tree names (Chantraine 1933: 92). From a noun parallel to (ϝ)ἴτυς, which derives from *ueh$_1$-i- 'bend'; cf. γιτέα (= ϝιτέα)· ἰτέα (H.). See on ►ἴτυς for further etymology. Itacistic writing has been assumed for the initial ἰ- on account of the Att. deme name Εἰτέα (cf. on οἶσος).

ἶτον [n.] Thracian name for a kind of mushroom (Thphr. fr. 167, Plin. H.N. 19, 36). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR οὐιτόν· τὸ ὑπ' ἐνίων οἰτόν (H.).
•ETYM Probably ϝιτόν (thus DELG). Fur.: 110, 184 connects it with ►ὕδνον, ὕτνον 'truffle' which has variants οἴδνον, οἶτνον. Furnée is mistaken to assumes a prothetic ὀ-, since ὀ- and οὐ- just indicate ϝ-, a bilabial [w]. So we have *wit- and *wid-n-, with a suffix beginning with n-, and voicing before the nasal (cf. Fur.: 110 on σπίκανος, σπιγνός; on the suffixes with a nasal added after a consonant, see Pre-Greek: Suffixes, -ν-). Moreover, in ὕτνον, the ι became υ after the w, which itself disappeared before the υ (so wit- > wut- > ut-).

ἴτριον [n.] name of a cake (IA), made from sesame and honey acc. to Ath. 14, 646d. ◂?▸
•VAR Usually plur.; long initial syllable in Ar. Ach. 1092.
•COMP ἰτριο-πώλης (Poll.) 'seller of ἴτριον'.
•DER ἰτρίνεος 'like ἴτριον' (AP).
•ETYM Unknown; probably a loanword.

ἴττον [n.] · ἕν. Κρῆτες 'one (Cret.)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM See Latte 1953, who notes that Solmsen BB 17 (1891): 135 reads δίττον.

ἴτυς, -υος [f.] 'felloe, rim of a shield', also metaph. 'shield' (Il.). ◂IE *ueh$_1$i- 'bend', *uh$_1$i-tu-▸ •ETYM Aeol. ϝίτυς (gramm.; cf. also Chantraine 1942: 144) proves that the connection with ἰτέα, οἶσος, ἶρις is correct. It therefore properly means 'bend, curve' (whence first 'willow'?), a derivative in -τυ- from a verb 'bend, twist', seen in Lat. vieō 'to bind, twist', Skt. vyáyati 'wind, wrap, envelop', ptc. vītá-, Lith. výti, 1sg. vejù, ptc. výtas, Ru. vit', 1sg. vju 'to turn, wind'. Greek ϝίτυς corresponds exactly to Lat. vitus 'felloe' (also vitūtus 'provided with a felloe', concluded from βιτωτός Ed. Diocl.), but the latter is rather a loan (WH s.v.). Elsewhere, there are also traces of tu-derivatives, both in Greek and in Balto-Slavic: ἰτέα, οἶσος next to OPr. witwan 'willow', OCS větvь, Ru. vítvina 'twig, rod'.

ἰυγή •VAR ἴυγμα, ἰυγμός. ➝ἰύζω.

ἴυγξ, -γγος [f.] name of a bird, 'Iynx torquilla' (Arist., Ael.), which was bound to a turning wheel during incantations to win back a lost love; thence the meaning 'spell, charm' (Pi., Ar., X. [cf. Gow JHS 54 (1934): 1ff.] and Theocr. 2, 41 [cf. Kretschmer Glotta 26 (1938): 63]); also (mostly in plur.) name of certain Chaldaic gods (Procl., Dam.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER Ἰύγγιος month name in Thessaly (IG 9(2), 258: 5); to Ἰυγγίης· ὁ Διόνυσος (H.)? Cf. on ἰύζω; ἰυγγικός 'belonging to the ἴυγγες' (Dam.).
•ETYM Formation like πῶυγξ, στρίγξ, σύριγξ, and other names of birds and musical instruments (Chantraine 1933: 3 and 398). It has been connected with ἰύζω, after the crying of the bird (e.g. Osthoff MU 4 (1881): 185^2). However, it was without a doubt originally a loanword that was adapted to ►ἰύζω by folk etymology.

ἰύζω [v.] 'to cry aloud, howl' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Aor. ἰύξαι (Pi. P. 4, 237). Also ἀν-ιύζω (Q. S.). Cf. ἀβιυκτον (cod. -ηκτον)· ἐφ' οὗ οὐκ ἐγένετο βοὴ ἀπολλυμένου (H.), and ἐκβιούζει· θρηνεῖ μετὰ κραυγῆς 'bewails with crying' (H.); DELG explains the ϝ as analogical after ἰάχω, but this seems unnecessarily complicated; see below.
•DER ἰυγή (Orac. apud Hdt. 9, 43, S., Nic.), ἰυγμός (Σ 572, A., E.) 'crying', also ἰύγματα [pl.] 'id.' (A. Dict. in PSI 11, 1209, 17); ἰύκτης [m.] 'howler, flutist', only in ἰύκτα (Theoc. 8, 30; after ἠπύτα, ἠχέτα, Fraenkel 1910: 223).

With prenasalization ἰυγκτόν· τορόν 'piercing' and ἰυγγοδρομεῖν· ἐκβοηθεῖν. Βοιωτοί 'to march out to aid (Boeot.)' (H.), after βοηδρομεῖν; perhaps a mistake for ἰυγο-? Also Ἰυγγίης· Διόνυσος (H.), with the Thessalian month name Ἰύγγιος; details in Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 98.

•ETYM A verbalized interjection, cf. ἰῦ (Hdn. Gr. 1, 506); or is the latter a back-formation from ἰύζω? We also find ἰού, ἰώ, ἰαῦ, but these may have had another initial. From the interjection also Ἴυος, epithet of Dionysus (Lycaonia; cf. Robinson AJA 31 (1927): 26ff., Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 161). See further ►ἴυγξ.

The forms ἀβίυκτον (cod. -ηκτον)· ἐφ' οὗ οὐκ ἐγένετο βοὴ ἀπολλυμένου (cf. Latte ad loc.) and ἐκβιούζει· θρηνεῖ μετὰ κραυγῆς (H.) point to *ϝιύζω (cf. Fur.: 277). With its prenasalization, the word is typically Pre-Greek; note the vocalism of -βιουζει.

ἴφθιμος [adj.] 'powerful, strong, vigilant' (Hom., Theoc., D. P.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Uncertain etymology, as the meaning itself is uncertain. The absence of a digamma (Chantraine 1942: 143) makes connection with ἴς, ἶφι impossible. Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 289ff. and Kuiper ZII 8 (1930): 249f.) connected it with φθάνω and Skt. kṣáyati 'possess, dominate'; doubts in Schwyzer: 326[1]. Athanassakis Glotta 49 (1971): 1-21 explains the word as from *ἰφι-τιμ-ος (with τιμ- 'honor'), but syncope does not occur on a regular basis in Greek, so this must be wrong. The word is non-IE and therefore probably Pre-Greek, just as Fur.: 318 assumes (following Ruijgh 1957: 155[3]).

ἴφιος ⇒ἴς 1.

ἴφυον [n.] kind of lavender, 'Lavandula Spica' (Ar., Epich., Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸

•ETYM Fur.: 391 connects τίφιον [n.] 'Scilla autumnalis' (Thphr.), (see Strömberg 1940: 155f.) with ἴφυον as a variant without τ- (for which there are only few examples, however). Nevertheless, a Pre-Greek word is probable a priori.

ἰχανάω [v.] 'to desire, try, crave' (Hom., Babr., Herod.). ◂IE *$h_2eh_2\acute{g}^h$-, h_2i-$h_2\acute{g}^h$- 'desire'▸

•VAR Often med. -άομαι.

•DER Also ἰχαίνω 'id.' (Call. Aet. 1, 1, 22).

•ETYM Probably an innovation after ὑφανάω : ὑφαίνω et al. (see Schwyzer: 700). More details on the formation in Risch 1937 (par. 112e) and Chantraine 1942: 360. An alternating r-stem may be seen in ἶχαρ 'desire' (A. Supp. 850 [lyr.]). For the connection with Skt. īhate 'desires', Av. iziieiti 'longs for', see ►ἀχήν.

ἰχθῦς, -ύος [m.] 'fish' (Il.). ◂IE *$d\acute{g}^huH$- 'fish'▸

•COMP Often as a first member, mostly with added ο, e.g. ἰχθυο-πώλης 'fish seller' (com.) beside ἰχθυ-βόλος (A., AP; -βολεύς Nic., Call.). As a second member in ἄν-, εὔ-, πολύ-ϊχθυς (Str.), also πολυ-ΐχθυος (h. Ap. 417; metrically convenient).

•DER Diminutive ἰχθύδιον (com., pap.), probably from -υ-ΐδιον > -ῠδιον; later -ῡ- (Schwyzer: 199 and Fraenkel 1912: 177f.; different Chantraine 1933: 70).

Other substantives: ἰχθυᾶ, Ion. -ύη 'dried fish(skin), fishery' (medic., pap.); ἰχθυήματα [pl.] (rarely sing.) 'fish-scales' (Hp.); ἰχθυΐα 'fishery' (Procl.); ἰχθυεῖον 'fish market' (Nesos; uncertain); ἰχθυόνερ· ἰχθυαγωγοί H.; cf. Schwyzer: 487.

Adjectives: ἰχθυόεις 'rich in fish, consisting of fish' (Hom.); ἰχθυώδης 'rich in fish, fish-like' (Hdt.); ἰχθυηρός 'consisting of fish, scaly, polluted' (Ar., Ph.), ἰχθυηρά [f.] 'fish-taxes' (pap.); ἰχθυϊκός 'regarding fish, fish-like' (LXX), -ικη 'fish toll' (Magnesia, Ephesus); ἰχθυακός 'id.' (Aq., Sm., Thd.); ἰχθύϊνος 'id.' (Ael.).

Verbs: ἰχθυάω 'fish', also intr. 'behave like a fish' (Od.), also ἰχθυάζομαι 'fish' (AP). Cf. the derivatives of ἅλς (ἁλι-εύς, -εύω, -εία, etc.), which compete with the group of ἰχθῦς.

•ETYM On the accent, see Schwyzer: 377f. and Berger MSS 3 (1953): 7. An old word for 'fish' in general, also found in Armenian and Baltic: Arm. jukn (acc. to Kortlandt, -k- is a reflex of the laryngeal, like in mu-kn < muH-n-* beside μῦς), Lith. žuvìs, žuvų̃ [gen.pl.], Latv. zuvs. For the "prothetic" vowel ἰ-, cf. on ►ἰκτῖνος and ►χθές. The word is now reconstructed *$d\acute{g}^huH$-, the long vowel in the nom. being caused by a laryngeal. The western languages (Latin, Celtic, Germanic) had a different word for 'fish': Lat. piscis, OIr. íasc, MoHG Fisch.

ἴχλα [f.] name of a sea-fish. ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR κίχλα, κίχλη (BCH 60, 28 [Boeotia II[a]], H.); cf. ἰχάλη = ἐσκευασμένος ἰχθῦς. ἢ κίχλη τὸ ὄρνεον 'a prepared fish; thrush', and ἴχλα· κίχλα (H.), also ἴσλαι = κίχλαι 'thrushes' (H.). Nasalized κίγκλος.

•ETYM See Lacroix 1938: 52f. The variants show that the word is Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 130, 297f., 379. On the initial κ-, see Fur.: 391.

ἴχνος [n.] 'footstep, trace, track, sole of the foot' (ρ 317). ◂?▸

•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰχνο-σκοπέω 'look at the track (or traces)' (A., S., Plu.).

•DER ἴχνιον 'id.' (Il.), with ὑπ-ίχνιος 'what is under the sole' (Q. S.). Denominative verb ἰχνεύω 'to trace' (X 192), also with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, ἐξ-, δι-; thence ἰχνευτής 'bloodhound, Ichneumon' (Hdt., S.), also ἰχνευτήρ 'id.' (Opp., Nonn.; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 134f.) and ἰχνεύτειρα (Corcyra); ἰχνεύμων, -ονος [m.] "tracer", name of an Egyptian kind of weasel, 'Ichneumon', also metaph. of a kind of wasp (Arist., Eub.); ἴχνευμα 'trace' (Poll.); ἰχνευτικός 'good at tracing' (Ph., Arr.). Also ἐξ-ιχνιάζω 'to trace' with ἐξιχνιασμός (LXX, Aq.), from ἴχνος after the verbs in -ιάζω (cf. Schwyzer: 735) rather than from ἴχνιον. Ἰχναίη epithet of Θέμις (h. Ap. 94) derives from the TN Ἴχναι in southern Thessalia.

•ETYM Formation in *-nos- like ἔρνος, κτῆνος, etc., but of unclear origin. Perhaps related to ►οἴχομαι, which is doubted by DELG s.v. Different explanations by Wood Class. Phil. 16 (1921): 65 and Wood Class. Phil. 21 (1926): 72. Perhaps the form ἴχματα· ἴχνια (H.) stands for ἴθματα (related to ►εἶμι). West Glotta 77 (1999): 123f. reads ἴχματα in N 71.

ἰχώρ, -ῶρος [m.] 'juicy, watery part of blood' (Hp., Arist.; from the poetic language, see Leumann 1950: 310), 'blood of the gods' (E 340, 416), secondarily of the blood of the Giants (Str. 6, 3,5), blood in general (A. Ag. 1480 [anap.]). ◂?▸

•VAR Acc.sg. ἰχῶ (E 416).

•COMP As a first member e.g. in ἰχω(ρο)-ρροέω [v.] 'to run with serous matter' (Hp.).

•DER ἰχωρώδης 'serous' (Hp.).
•ETYM Without an exact morphological parallel (cf. Schwyzer: 519 and 569, Chantraine 1942: 212), and probably a foreign word. Several unconvincing explanations have been proposed: a loan from Hitt. ešḫar (which is related to ►ἔαρ), e.g. Heubeck 1961: 81 and Neumann 1961: 18; comparison with ἰκμάς (Pisani RILomb. 73 (1939-40): 492ff.); or with ἶχαρ, ἰχανάω (Bolling Lang. 21 (1945): 49ff.), etc. All of these and other previous proposals are rejected by DELG, which continues by stating that the word is probably Indo-European; this is far from certain, of course. Acc. to Jouanna and Demont REA 83 (1981): 197-209, we should start from the technical, medical conception, and not from the poetic one.

ἴψ, ἰπός [m.] name of a worm that eats horn and wood, notably vines (φ 395, Thphr., Str.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •COMP Ἰπο-κτόνος name of a god in Erythrai (Str. 13, 1, 64).
•ETYM Rhyming with θρίψ, κνίψ, σκνίψ; Frisk suggests a cross of one of these with ►ἴξ. Traditionally connected with ἴψασθαι (see ►ἶπος). See also Gil Fernández 1959: 116. Rather, ἴξ and ἴψ reflect one and the same Pre-Greek word *ik^w-, which was adapted in two different ways.

ἴψος [m.] a tree, 'cork-oak, Quercus Suber (?)' (Thphr. HP 3, 4, 2). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also ἰψός; ἰψόν· τὸν κισσόν. Θ<ο>ύριοι 'ivy (Thurii)' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Some compare *(ϝ)ίμβω.

ἰώ [exclam.] 'alas!' (A.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •DER ἰωή 'cry, noise (Il.), ἰωά (A.). ⇒ἰή, ἰήϊος.

ἰωγή ⇒ ἐπιωγαί.

ἰωκή [f.] 'rout, pursuit' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Acc.sg. ἰῶκα (Λ 601); see Chantraine 1942: 231, Egli 1954: 12f.
•DER ἰωχμός 'id.' (Il., Hes., Theoc.; cf. Trümpy 1950: 160), ἴωξις· δίωξις 'pursuit' (H.), παλίωξις 'pursuit in turn' (Il., App.), whence προίωξις (Hes. Sc. 154).
•ETYM Primary formations from ϝιώκει 'pursues' (Cor.), so for (ϝ)ιωκή, παλι-(ϝ)ίωξις, etc. On traces of the digamma, see Chantraine 1942: 143; ἰωχμός (with metrically lengthned ῑ-) is from *ἰωκ-σμό-. For the relation between ϝιώκει (only inscr. Corinth, see LSJ) and ϝίεμαι, see ►διώκω. The verb may be Pre-Greek.

Ἴωνες [m.pl.] 'Ionian', one of the four Greek main tribes (since N 685 Ἰάονες ἑλκεχίτωνες). ⊲?⊳
•VAR In epic poet. mostly plur. Ἰάονες, rarely sing. Ἴων, Ἰάων.
•DIAL Myc. I-ja-wo-ne.
•COMP As a second member in Παν-ίωνες (Eust. 1414, 36), a back-formation after Παν-έλληνες from Πανιώνιον [n.] 'temple of all Ionians', -ια [pl.] name of the festival (Hdt.), Πανιώνιος [m.] epithet of Apollo and others (inscr.).
•DER 1. Ἰάς, -άδος [f.] 'Ionian woman, Ionic' (Hdt., Th.), Ἰακός (Plb.), formed to Ἴωνες after Ἕλληνες: Ἑλλάς. 2. Ἰαόνιος 'Ionic, Greek' (A. [lyr.]), Ἰαονίς [f.] (Nic.); late Ἰώνιος 'id.' (Philostr.), Ἰωνίς [f.] (Call., Paus.), Ἰωνιάς [f.] (Nic., Str.); here Ἰωνία 'Ionia' (A. Pers. 771), Ἰαονίη-θε (Nic. fr. 74, 2). 3. Ἰωνικός 'Ionic' (Hdt., Th.). 4. ὁ Ἰόνιος (κόλπος) [m.] 'the Ionic Sea' (between Epirus and Italy). 5. Ἰάνειος patronymic (Thess.). 6. ἰωνίσκος [m.] Ephesian name of the fish χρυσόφρυς 'gilt-head' (Archestr.), cf. Strömberg 1943: 86.
Denominative verb ἰωνίζω [v.] 'to speak Ionic' (A. D.).
Uncertain is the appurtenance of Ἰαωλκός, Ἰωλκός town in Magnesia on the Pagasaic gulf (since Hes. Th. 997), which could properly mean 'port of Ionians' if it derives from *Ἰαϝο-ολκός.
•ETYM The foreign adaptations of the tribal name, Eg. jwn(n)', Hebr. jāwān, OP yauna, etc., point to a pre-form *Ἰᾱ́ϝονες, but a further analysis of this form is uncertain. A shorter form *Ἴον-ες is supposed in Ἰόνιος (Jacobsohn KZ 57 (1930): 76ff.), if it is not a reshaping after χθόνιος (Beaumont JHS 56 (1936): 204 connects Ἰόνιος with Ἰώ). In any case, Ἰάς and Ἰαωλκός can be explained from Ἰάονες, Ἴωνες. Unclear Ἰάνων (anapestic in A. Pers. 949f. [lyr.]). Acc. to Vendryes BSL 25 (1924): 49, the accent in Ἴωνες shows the Attic shift as in ἔγωγε.
As the proper meaning is unknown, the name remains without a clear etymology. An interesting attempt was recently made by Nikolaev 2006, who suggests an original meaning 'die Kräftigen', starting either from *uiH- 'force' or from *h_1ish_2-, to which a suffix *-ā́won- was added.
See also Ruijgh Minos 9 (1968): 109-155 and Heubeck MSS 48 (1987): 139-148.

ἰωρός [m.] mg. uncertain (A.D.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Acc. to A. D. Pron. 55, 26 Att., = ὁ αὐτῆς τῆς πόλεως φύλαξ, wrongly connecting the pronoun ἵ. Cf. Hdn. 1, 200: ὁ γνήσιος φύλαξ; Suid. gives ἰωρός· θυρωρός, φύλαξ· καὶ παροιμία· οὐδ᾽ ἐντὸς ἰωροῦ· καὶ ὁ νόμος ὁ παρ᾽ Ἀθηναίοις ἐκτὸς ἰωροῦ ἐκέλευεν ειναῖ τοὺς ἀνδροφόνους. (App. Prov. 4, 39), so a ban (ἐντὸς, ἐκτὸς ἰωροῦ) on a killer, taken as 'house' by H.; cf. also ἰωρός· τὸ ὀρ<ε>ινὸν χωρίον, καὶ τὸ ὄρος. καὶ οἶκος, καὶ ὁ τούτου φύλαξ (H.). Boisacq posited *ϝι-ϝωρό-ς, related to ὁράω, ὥρα, Hom. οὖρος 'guardian'; this is purely hypothetical.

ἰῶτα [n.] the ninth letter of the alphabet (Pl. Cra. 418b). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•VAR Indeclinable.
•DER ἰωτακισμός 'repetition of the iota' (Quint.), after σολοικισμός, ἀττικισμός, etc.
•ETYM From Semitic, cf. Hebr. jōdh; see Schwyzer: 140 and 313.

ἴωψ, -ωπος [m.] name of a small fish (Nic., Call. in Ath., Ael., Hdn. Gr. 1, 247). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR Boeot. ϝίωψ (BCH 60, 28, II[a]).
•ETYM Thompson 1947 s.v. No doubt a local word for small useless fishes, i.e. a Pre-Greek word (cf. on ►ἴκταρ 3). I therefore think that it started with *w^y-, like e.g. ἰύζω.

K

κα [pcl.] ⇒κε.

καβαθα ⇒γάβαθον.

κάβαισος [m.] 'gluttonous fellow' (Cratin. 103), also PN (IG 5(2), 271: 9 [Mantinea IV^a]). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also κάβασος (Poll. 6, 43 v.l.).
•ETYM In antiquity, the word was analyzed as a compound of κάβος and αἶσα, which is of course nonsense. For the ending, cf. Ἀγόραισος (SGDI 3269, 12; 3386, 36; Schulze 1933a: 665). The meaning and structure of the word point to Pre-Greek origin. Fur.: 214 points to the v.l. κάβασος. If we combine these variants, we arrive at a Pre-Greek form kamas^y-*. He further connects καμασός· βάραθρον 'abyss', which is possible but uncertain; the comparison with καμασήν 'fish' is even more uncertain.

καβάλλης, -ου [m.] 'workhorse, nag, ἐργάτης ἵππος' (Plu., AP, H.). ⊲LW Anat.⊳
•DER καβάλλ(ε)ιον [n.] 'id.' (inscr. Callatis, H.), also metaph. = ἡ πρώτη τοῦ τρικλίνου κλίνη· διὰ τὸ ἀνάκλιτον 'the first couch in a dining-room with three couches' (H.). Further καβαλλάτιον (< Lat. caballatium*) plant name, = κυνόγλωσσον (Ps.-Dsc.; cf. the plant names in ἱππο-, Strömberg 1940: 30); καβαλλάριος (Teucros Astrol.) = Lat. caballārius 'groom' (gloss.), καβαλλαρικός (μύλος, τάπης Edict. Diocl.).
•ETYM The PN Καβαλλᾶς (IV^a, Rev. Arch. 1925, I 259) shows that the word is old in Greek. Like Lat. caballus, W PN Caballos, καβάλλης (with technical and popular -ης; Chantraine 1933: 30f.) is an Asiatic loan or a Wanderwort, perhaps originally an ethnicon like Wallach et al. It has been compared with Turk. käväl epithet of at 'horse', MoP kaval 'second class horse of mixed blood', and further with Ru. kobýla 'mare'. Connection with the Anat. EN Καβαλεῖς (Καβηλέες Hdt.) is uncertain, as is the appurtenance of κάβηλος, κάληβος· ἀπεσκολυμμένος τὸ αἰδοῖον (H.), cf. on βάκηλος.

καββαλικός [adj.] 'good at throwing somebody to the ground', said of a fighter (Gal. Thras. 45). ⊲GR⊳ •DER Compar. καββαλικότερος (Plu. Mor. 236e, M. Ant. 7, 52).
•ETYM Laconian for καταβλητικός.

Κάβαρνοι [m.pl.] name of the priests of Demeter on Paros (IG 12(5), 292 [III^p], H.).
•DER Κάβαρνις, poetic name of Paros (St. Byz.).

•ETYM See Κάβειροι

-καβδαλος ⇒ αὐτοκάβδαλος.

κάβειος [adj.] · νέος. Πάφιοι 'young (Paph.)' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM The word has been corrected to *κάβειρος, which is possible but uncertain. It has been suggested that it refers to the fact that the Kabeiroi are often children. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

Κάβειροι [m.pl.] name of chthonic gods, especially on Samothrace and Lemnos, as well as in Boeotia (Pi., Hdt., inscr.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Κάβειροι· καρκίνοι 'crab, pair of pincers' (H.); whether there is any relation with the gods, is unknown.
•DER Καβειρίδες (νύμφαι); Καβειρώ mother of the C.; Καβείριον sanctuary of the C.
•ETYM Not related to Skt. Kúbera- (Wackernagel KZ 41 (1907): 316ff.), see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. The root of the name is clearly the same as that in Κάβαρνοι. This root must have been Pre-Greek *$kabar^y$-. The palatalized consonant explains both a > ε and the ι; before the ν, the palatal character was neglected. See Beekes Mnem. 57 (2004): 465-477. See Hemberg 1950.

κάβος [m.] measure of grain: 4 ξέσται (LXX). ◂LW Orient.▸ •ETYM From Hebr. qab. Cf. also Eg. ḳb, see Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 247. See ▸γάβαθον, ▸καβαθα.

κάβουρος [m.] 'crab' (Eust.), see Rohlfs 1930: 94f.[834]. ◂PG▸ •DER καβουρᾶς 'crab-fisher' (Inscr. Ephes. 4282).
•ETYM MoGr. has κάβουρος 'crab'. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek; cf. on ▸σκίουρος.

κάγκαμον [n.] name of the 'resin of an oriental tree' (Dsc.). ◂LW Orient.▸ •ETYM Related to Arab. kamkām, but not to the word for 'saffron', Arab. kurkum, Hebr. karkōm, Akk. kurkānu. Cf. on ▸κρόκος. Lat. cancamum was borrowed from κάγκαμον (since Plin.).

κάγκανος [adj.] 'arid, barren' (Il.). ◂PG▸
•DER καγκάνεος 'id.' (Man.). Denominative καγκαίνει· θάλπει, ξηραίνει 'heats, dries'; also καγκαλέα· κατακεκαυμένα 'what has been burnt up' (H.), which is probably an innovation after the many adjectives in -αλέος meaning 'arid, dry' (ἀζαλέος, αὐαλέος, etc.). Without a suffix: καγκομένης· ξηρᾶς τῷ φόβῳ (H.) and πολυ-καγκής epithet of δίψα 'thirst' (Λ 642), perhaps formed to a present *κάγκομαι.
•ETYM Words for 'hunger, pain' are traditionally connected with the group of κάγκανος: the full grade primary verbs κέγκει· πεινᾷ 'is hungry' (Phot.); from other IE languages: Lith. keñkti, 1sg. keñkia 'to ache' (*'burns, withers'), secondary ON há 'to tease, pain' < PGm. hanhōn, and the verbal nouns Lith. kankà 'pain', Go. huhrus 'hunger', denominative huggrjan 'to hunger'.
If this comparison is correct and if we reconstruct a root kenk-, the ablaut of κάγκανος, etc. must be secondary. Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 269f. connects the glosses κακιθής· ἄτροφος ἄμπελος 'untended vine', κακιθές· χαλεπόν, λιμηρές 'harsh, hungry', κακιθά· λιμηρά (H.), the second member of which would belong to ▸αἴθω, ἰθαίνω; but if so, the first member could also be κακός, as DELG s.v. notes.
Because of the root structure (nasal and a-vocalism), the word is suspect of Pre-Greek origin. The words compared mean 'hunger, pain', and not primarily 'arid, dry'.

κάγκελ(λ)οι [m.pl.] 'railings, barrier, starting gate' (pap., inscr., imperial period; sch.), also as a measure (μέτρῳ τῷ καγκέλλῳ, etc.) in pap. ◂LW Lat.▸
•VAR Sometimes sing. -ος, ntr. -ον.
•DER καγκελ(λ)ωτή 'provided with lattice', of διαβάθρα, θύρα (pap., sch.).
•ETYM From Lat. cancellī [pl.] 'id.' (Cic.); likewise, καγκελλάριος (Lyd. Mag., pap. VI^p) = Lat. cancellārius (since IV^p).

καγκύλας [acc.pl.] · κηκίδας. Αἰολεῖς 'mussels (Aeol.)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Cf. κογχύλαι· κηκῖδες (H.) and κογχύλια· τὰ ὄστρεα. καὶ πορφυραι. Oettinger General Linguistics 40 (2003): 71ff. concludes that καγκ- is just a mistake for κογκ-. However, the variation α/ ο is typical for Pre-Greek, as is κ/ χ. Therefore, there seems no reason to reject the attested form. Of course, the word has nothing to do with MoHG Hengst, etc.

καγρᾶ(ς) [m.] · καταφαγᾶς, Σαλαμίνιοι 'gluttonous (Salaminian)' (H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From κατα- and γράω (Bechtel 1921, 1:, 421).

καγχαλάω [v.] 'to rejoice, exult' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Only pres. and ipf. καγχαλάασκε (A. R., Q. S.).
•COMP Also with prefix: ἐπι-, περι-.
•DER καγχαλίζεται· χαίρει, ἱλαρύνει 'rejoices' (H.).
•ETYM Expressive verb of onomatopoeic character. If one compares κακχάζω and καγχάζω, -αλάω may be considered as a lengthening, comparing ἀσχαλάω, βαυκαλάω (see ▸παμφαλάω). However, Apollonius and Bechtel 1914 reject the derivation from καγχάζω, and connect it with χαλάω 'to relax, let go', assuming intensive reduplication. Further arguments in favor of the former view are given by Tichy 1983: 222f.

κάδαμος [adj.] · τυφλός. Σαλαμίνιοι 'blind (Salamis)' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM If reliable (see Schmidt ad loc. and van Herwerden 1910 s.v.), it may belong to Hom. κεκαδών, κεκαδήσει 'to rob'. Not related to Lat. cadamitās (which is secondary for calamitās; see WH s.v.). One gets the impression of a Pre-Greek word (a-vocalism), and it is preferable to abandon attempts at an inner-Greek or Indo-European etymology.

Καδμῖλος [m.] one of the ▸Κάβειροι, son of Kabeiro and Hephaistos; he is the younger man, beside an older one and the Mother Goddess. ◂PG▸ •VAR Also Κάσμιλος, Κάμιλλος; on the forms of the name see Beekes Mnem. 57 (2004): 466ff.
•ETYM The suffix of this name has been compared with Muršili and Troilos, and Morinail (of the Lemnos inscription). As a whole, it may be identical with that of Hasammil(i/as), a Hattic god. Was it originally Hat^{s}mil^y? It is probably a derivation of Kadmos, though there is no tradition that confirms this.

Κάδμος [m.] name of a hero, the founder of Thebes (Od.) ◄PG(S)► •VAR Κασσμος (vase Rhegium).
•DER Καδμεῖος, Καδμήιος [adj.] (Hes.); Καδμεία 'the hill of Thebes' (X.); Καδμειῶνες 'the inhabitants of Thebes' (Il.); καδμεία (γῆ) 'cadmia, calamine' (Dsc.).
•ETYM The connection with ►κέκασμαι is certainly wrong. The name is found for a river in Thesprotia and for a mountain and a river in Caria. Therefore, the word is without a doubt Pre-Greek, and of unknown meaning (Beekes Mnem. 57 (2004): 465ff. and Beekes Kadmos 43 (2004): 172f. This is confirmed by the name Καδμῖλος which has a suffix -ιλ-, which is well known in Anatolia. The structure of the name agrees with that of Πάτμος, Λάτμος, Λάκμος. There is no further support for the gloss κάδμος· δόρυ, λόφος, ἀσπίς (H.). Cf. on ►Καδμῖλος.

κάδος [m.] 'vessel for wine and other fluids'; also a measure (IA). ◄LW Sem.?, PG?►
•DER Diminutive κάδιον (LXX, Delos III[a], Cyrene II-III[p]), καδίσκος, also 'voting urn' (Att.); with hypocoristic gemination and familiar suffix -χ- (Chantraine 1933: 404) κάδδιχος, as a measure 'half a ἑκτεύς' (Lac., H.), together with κεκαδδίσθαι (-ίχθαι?) 'to be rejected by a vote' (Lac., Plu. Lyc. 12); also κάδδιξ (Heracl.), probably after χοῖνιξ and ἄδδιξ (Ar. Fr. 709); hypercorrect καταδίχιον (Tauromenion) for *καδδίχιον as if from κατά and δίχα. See Wackernagel 1907: 11f., Bechtel 1921, 2: 374f., Fraenkel Phil. 97 (1948): 163.
•ETYM Generally considered to be a loanword, probably from Semitic, cf. Hebr. kad 'bucket' (Schwyzer: 64 and152 and E. Masson 1967: 42-44). From κάδος, Lat. cadus and Arab. ḳādūs were borrowed (Lokotsch 1927: N° 988). Fur.: 130 compares ἄδδιξ, with interchange κ/ zero, and suggests that the words are Pre-Greek.

κάδουσα [f.] · εἶδος σταφυλῆς 'a kind of vine' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM The word is most probably Pre-Greek (Fur.: 173[55]).

κάδυρος [m.] · κάπρος ἄνορχις 'boar without testicles' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 39 connected it with Hom. κεκαδών, κεκαδήσει 'to rob'. Cf. Perpillou 1996: 112-124. The connection seems improbable; the element -υρ- rather points to Pre-Greek origin.

καθαπτή [f.] name of a vessel (PSI 4, 420, 26 [III[a]]). ◄GR► •ETYM Named after the strap through its handles (Bonner AmJPh. 62 (1941): 453ff.); as an adjective, καθαπτός means 'connected with' (E. Fr. 752).

καθαρός [adj.] 'clean, spotless, pure, unmixed, white (of bread, linen)' (Il.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Dor. κοθαρός (Heracl. et al.), Aeol. κόθαρος (Alc.).
•DER καθάρειος (-ιος) 'pure, elegant' (Arist., Men., Plb.), adverb καθαρείως (X.), after ἀστεῖος; on καθάρυλλος (of ἄρτος, etc., com.) cf. Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 219[3]. καθαρότης 'purity' (Hp., Pl.), καθαρ(ε)ιότης 'purity, refinement' (Hdt.).
Denominative verbs: 1. καθαίρω (κοθ- Heracl.) 'to purify' (Il.), aor. καθῆραι (-ᾶραι), often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, περι-; thence κάθαρσις (IA; κόθ- El.) 'purification', καθαρμός 'atonement' (Hdt., trag.), κάθαρμα (often plur.) 'purification, refuse' (Att.); καθαρτής 'purifyer, conciliator' (Hp., S.), -τήρ 'id.' (Man., Plu.), -τήριος (D. H.); καθάρσιος (to καθαρτής, κάθαρσις, καθαρτός) 'purifying' (Hdt., trag.), καθαρτικός 'id.' (Hp., Pl.). 2. καθαρίζω 'to purify' (LXX), also with prefixes ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, περι-, with καθαρισμός (LXX), καθάρισις (pap.), etc. 3. καθαρεύω 'to be pure' (Ar., Pl.) with καθάρευσις (H., EM); also καθαρι-εύω (Paus., gramm.). 4. καθαρι-όω 'to purify' (LXX).
•ETYM No etymology, see Frisk and DELG for unsuccessful older attempts. The variation α/ο points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 391 even connects it with ἀθαρής, but this is doubtful). Alternatively, Peters 1993b: 95ff. takes up the old connection with Skt. śithirá- 'loose', reconstructing ḱr̥th$_2$-ro-*, but this etymology needs too many ad hoc assumptions: independent dissimilatory loss of the first r in both branches, doubtful laryngeal aspiration tH* > θ (πλατύς is a strong counterexample, and cannot be explained away by πλαταμών), and too complicated semantics.

καθειστόν [n.] · εἶδος φιλήματος 'kind of kiss' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Mistake for κλειστόν? Latte suggests καθελκτόν.

κάθιδοι [m.] · ὑδρίαι. Ἀρκάδες 'vessels (Arc.)' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Hoffmann 1891: 103 considers reading κάθυδροι 'those filled with water' or κάθυδοι 'id.' (from ὕδος; cf. ὑδαλέος). For -ι- instead of -υ-, Thurneysen Glotta 12 (1922): 146 compares Μετίδριον = Μεθύδριον. See ►κηθίς.

καί [conj.] 'also, even; and' (Il.). ◄IE ḱm̥t-* 'along with, downwards'► •DIAL Arc. Cypr. κας (secondarily κα).
•ETYM From *κατι (cf. Hitt. katti) > *κασι > κάς, καί (Ruijgh 1967a: §293). Also found in ►κασίγνητος. Acc. to Klingenschmitt MSS 33 (1975), καί, Arc. Cypr. κας 'also, even; and' and -κάς in ἀνδρα-κάς may all derive from ḱN̥s(-i)*.

καιάδᾱς [m.] 'pit or cavern at Sparta, into which people sentenced to death (or their bodies) were thrown' (Th. 1, 134, Paus. 4, 18,4, D. Chr. 80, 9). ◄PG► •VAR Gen. -ου, Dor. -ᾱ.
•DER Also καιάτας, -έτας 'id.' (Eust. 1478, 45); καιετός 'fissure produced by an earthquake' (Str. 8, 5, 7), καίατα· ὀρύγματα· ἢ τὰ ὑπὸ σεισμῶν καταρραγέντα χωρία 'pits; places split by earthquakes' (H.).
•ETYM The connection with Skt. kévaṭa- [m.] 'pit' must be rejected (Kuiper 1991: 27), and we cannot reconstruct PIE kaiu̯r̥-t-*; cf. Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. The form καιετός may be a reshaping after ὀχετός, (σ)κάπετος, etc., and καιάδας does not necessarily contain an old variant with -δ-, since glosses like γαιάδας· ὁ δῆμος ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'people (Lacon.)', γαυσάδας· ψευδής 'false' (H.) show that Laconian extended the use of the suffix -δᾱ-. The forms καιάτας, -έτας are secondary.
It seems clear that the word is Pre-Greek. A pre-form kaw^{y}at-* would probably give *καιϝα/ετ-, where the ε is from a after a palatalized consonant; the δ can also be interpreted as a normal variant of τ. See Fur.: 180, 349 and on ►κητώεσσαν.

καιέτα [f.] · καλαμίνθη. Βοιωτοί 'mint' (H.). ◄PG►

•VAR καιετας (without accentuation, Apollon. Lex. s.v. κητώεσσαν), καιατῶν [gen.pl.] (Anon. Lond. 36, 57). Also καίατα(ς).
•ETYM Has been connected with καίω, because of the burning taste (Fraenkel 1910: 62 A. 2, Bechtel 1921, 1: 306). The word is rather Pre-Greek, though a direct connection with ► καιάδᾱς is not evident.

καικίας, -ου [m.] 'northeast wind' (Ar., Arist.). ◄?► •ETYM For the formation, cf. ἀπαρκτίας, Ὀλυμπίας, and other wind names (Chantraine 1933: 95); basis uncertain. Already Ach. Tat. Intr. Arat. 33 (cf. von Wilamowitz 1931: 265[2]) explained it as "(the wind) coming from the Κάϊκος", a river in Aeolis, comparing the similar names Ὀλυμπίας, Ἑλλησποντίας, etc. Others (Pisani KZ 61 (1934): 187, Huisman KZ 71 (1954): 99) take it as "the blind one" = "the dark, obscuring one" from the word for 'blind, one-eyed': Lat. caecus 'blind', OIr. caech 'one-eyed', Go. haihs 'id.', Skt. kekara- 'squinting'. Lat. aquilō 'north wind', from aquilus 'dark', has also been compared. Not very probable.

καινός [adj.] 'new, newly found, unexpected' (IA). ◄IE ken-* 'new, fresh'► •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. in καινο-τομέω (: καινὰ τέμνειν), properly an expression of mining: 'cut out a new (type of) stone', metaph. 'introduce innovations (in the state)' (Att.), together with -τομία, -τόμος; καινο-ποιέω 'introduce innovations, renovate' (S., Plb.) together with -ποιΐα, -ποιητής (see Fraenkel 1912: 90f.).
•DER Abstract καινότης 'innovation' (Att.). Denominative verbs: 1. καινίζω 'to innovate, inaugurate' (trag.), also with prefix, especially ἀνα- (Isoc., Str., Plu.), ἐγ- (LXX, NT); thence (ἐγ-)καίνισις, -ισμός (LXX); deverbal ἐγκαίνια [pl.] 'consecration of a temple' (LXX, NT). 2. καινόω 'to innovate, inaugurate' (Hdt., Th.), ἀνα- (NT, etc.), whence (ἀνα-)καίνωσις (J., NT). PNs Καινίας, Καίνιος, etc. (Bechtel 1917b: 229), Καινεύς together with Καινεΐδης (Boßhardt 1942: 128, Debrunner 1923: 32).
•ETYM Comparisons have been made with YAv. nom.sg. kaine 'girl', acc. kainīnəm, Skt. gen.pl. kanī̆nām 'id.', full grade kanyā̆ 'girl' (reinterpreted as an ā-stem), and the adj. kanī̆na- 'young'; grades of comparison kánīyas-, kániṣṭha-. Another cognate is Lat. recēns 'fresh, new, young', which must derive from re-cen-t(i)-, from a verb 'to rise, begin' seen in OIr. cinim 'to originate', OCS -čęti, 1sg. -čьnǫ 'begin' < IE ken-*. The appurtenance of OW cein 'beautiful' is doubtful (cf. Matasović 2008 s.v. kani-. See Pok. 563f. and LIV[2] s.v. ken-.

καίνυμαι [v.] 'to overcome, surpass, excel' (Od.). ◄GR?►
•VAR In ἐκαίνυτο (γ 282, Hes. Sc. 4), ἀπε- (θ 127, 219; A. R. 2, 783), περι-καίνυται (Nic. Th. 38), act. ipv. καινύτω (Emp. 23, 9).
•ETYM Perhaps analogical from ► κέκασμαι, ► κέκασται after δαίνυμαι, ἐδαίνυτο, which were connected with δέδασμαι, δέδασται (Brugmann 1886-1900 2: 1012, Brugmann 1913: 339; also Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 373).

καίνω [v.] 'to kill' (trag., Timocr. 1, 9, Theoc. 24, 92). ◄GR► •VAR Aor. κανεῖν (κανῆν Theoc. l.c.), fut. κανῶ, perf. κέκονα (S. Fr. 1058).
•COMP Also with κατα- 'id.' (X.).

•DER κοναί· φόνοι 'murders' (H.).
•ETYM By-form of ► κτείνω with the same simplification of the anlaut as in χαμαί beside χθών (Schwyzer: 326). It was supposed that καίνω, κανεῖν arose from κατα-κανεῖν by dissimilation from κατα-κτανεῖν (Kieckers *IF*36 (1916): 233ff., Chantraine Sprache 1 (1949): 142[3]), but it is difficult to connect this with the chronology of the attestations.

καίπετος [m.] · ἀξίνη 'axe-head' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Stands at an alphabetically wrong place in Hesychius. Specht KZ 52 (1925): 90 compared CS cěpiti 'split'. It is rather a Pre-Greek word (in which -ετο- exists as a suffix).

καιρός [m.] 'right measure, (right, decisive) point of time, (favorable) opportunity, time of the year, time' (Hes.; cf. καίριος below). ◄?►
•COMP καιρο-φυλακέω [v.] 'to guard (at the right time)' (D., Arist.), ἄ-, εὔ-καιρος with ἀ-, εὐ-καιρία, -έω, etc.
•DER καίριος 'finding its mark, decisive, deadly' (Il.); 'coming at the right time, convenient'; καιρικός 'at the right time, belonging to certain times', καίριμος 'deadly' (Macho apud Ath. 13, 581b; not quite certain), 'matured', of wine (PFlor. 143, 2; III[p]), after ὥριμος (Arbenz Die Adj. auf -ιμος: 55 and 59).
•ETYM Uncertain. Several proposals: related to κείρω as 'decisive moment' or '(a certain) time', for which compare Lat. discrīmen (Persson 1891: 107, Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 52 (1900): 410[1]); to κεράννυμι 'mix' (Brugmann IF 17 (1904-1905): 363f.; morphologically complicated; similarly, Benveniste 1940a: 11ff., who asserts that it is properly "atmospherical mix"); to κύρω 'meet, meet accidentally' (Bq, phonetically difficult); to Skt. kālá- 'time' (Güntert 1923: 232; phonetically impossible, on which see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v.). On the meaning of καιρός, see Wersdörfer 1940: 54ff. and Pfister 1938: 131ff.

καῖρος [m.] 'row of thrumbs (on the loom), to which the threads of the warp are attached' (Ael. Dion. Fr. 440, Phot. 304, EM); the exact construction remains unknown. ◄?►
•DER καίρωσις (Poll. 7, 33, H.), acc. to H. = τοῦ στήμονος οἱ σύνδεσμοι 'the fastenings of a warp', a collective abstract from *καιρόω 'to provide with καῖροι'; καίρωμα = καῖρος (Ael. Dion. l.c., see Chantraine 1933: 187), also 'texture' (Call. fr. 295); καιρωτίδες (-ωστ(ρ)ίδες) 'female weavers' (Call. fr. 356, H., Suid.). Note καιροσέων, epithet of ὀθονέων (η 107) for καιρουσσέων (on the explanation Wackernagel 1916: 84f. against Kretschmer Glotta 13 (1924): 249 who sticks to his interpretation), gen.pl. of καιρόεσσα, fem. to καιρόεις which properly means 'provided with καῖροι'; exact meaning uncartain. Cf. καιρία, mostly ► κειρία (-η-, -ι-).
•ETYM A technical expression of unclear meaning, and therefore etymologically difficult. According to H. Petersson (see Pok. 577f.), it is related to Arm. sarikʿ [pl.], gen. sareacʿ 'sling, rope', as well as to sard, instr. sardi-w 'spider'. Clackson 1994:139-140 pleads for a different origin of the Armenian sari-kʿ, which rather means 'chain, fetter', also 'band'. Cimochowski Ling. Posn. 5 (1955): 194 connected it with Albanian thur 'twine, weave'.

καίω [v.] 'to kindle', med.-pass. 'to burn' (Il.). ◁IE? keh_2u- 'burn'▷

•VAR Att. κάω, aor. καῦσαι, epic (also Att. inscr. IG 1², 374: 96; 261) κῆαι, pass. καῆναι (epic Ion.), καυθῆναι, fut. καύσω, perf. κέκαυκα, κέκαυ(σ)μαι (IA).

•DIAL Myc. a-pu-ke-ka-u-me-no, pu-ka-wo /pur-kawos/ (vel sim.).

•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, ὑπο-. Among the compounds, note ἔγκαυ-μα, -σις, -(σ)τής, -στήριον, -στον (> Lat. encaustum; the red purple with which the Roman emperors signed, from where Fr. encre); also ὑπόκαυ-σις, -στης, -στήριον, -στρᾱ, etc.

•DER 1. καῦμα 'fire, heat, glow' (Il.) with καυματ-ώδης (Hp., Arist.), -ηρός (Str.), -ίας (Thphr.; of the sun) 'burning, glowing', καυματίζω 'burn, singe' (NT, Plu., Arr.). 2. καῦσις (ἔγκαυσις, etc.) 'burning' (IA) together with (ἐγ-, κατα-)καύσιμος 'inflamable' (Pl., X.). 3. καῦσος [m.] 'causus, bilious remittent fever, etc.' (Hp., Arist.), from καῦσαι, or rather with a suffix -σο- (Strömberg 1944: 87f.)? Thence καυσία 'Macedonian hat against the sun', καύσων 'id.', also 'heat, hot wind, etc.' (LXX, NT, medic.), καυσώδης 'burning, hot' (Hp., Thphr.), καυσόομαι, -όω 'to have causus, burn; to heaten' (medic., NT, pap.) together with καύσωμα 'heating' (Gal.). 4. καυ(σ)τήρ [m.] 'burner, burning iron' (Pi., Hp.), fem. gen. καυστειρῆς, epithet of μάχης (Il.) or καμίνου (Nic.), from *καύστειρα (Schwyzer: 474, Chantraine 1942: 192; note the switch of accent); καυτήριον 'branding iron, brand(mark)' (LXX, D. S., Str.), diminutive καυτηρίδιον (Gal.), denominative verb καυτηριάζω 'to brand' (Str., NT). 5. καύστης [m.] 'heater, etc.' (pap.). 6. καύστρᾱ [f.] 'place where corpses were burnt' (Str., inscr.). 7. καυστικός, rare καυτ- 'burning, inflamable' (Arist.). 8. καυθμός 'scorching (of trees), firewood' (Thphr., pap.). Beside these formations there are older ones whose connection with καίω became less clear due to phonetic developments: ►κᾶλον 'wood', ►κηλέος 'burning, blazing', ►κηώδης, ►κηώεις 'smelling', κηυα mg. uncertain; πυρκαιᾱ́, πυρκαίη, adj. -ιός.

•ETYM All forms go back to a root καυ-, καϝ-: καίω (whence Att. κᾱ́ω) derives from a yod-present *κάϝ-ι̯ω, while the once enigmatic form ἔ-κη-α is now explained from eka^hwa < *$h_1e$-keh_2u-s-m by Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 627-8. This form is often incorrectly written with -ει-, as in κείαντο, etc. (see Chantraine 1942: 9), and in Att. κέαντος with quantitative metathesis. The full grade also occurs in epic κηλέος, κηώδης, and in Delph. κηυα, which shows a PGr. κηϝ- beside κᾰϝ-.

For an etymology, we have to rely on Baltic material: Lith. kū̃lės 'Brandpilze, Flugbrand, Staubbrand des Getreides', kūlė́ti 'brandig werden', Latv. kūla 'old, dry, grass of last year' (cf. Fraenkel 1955 s.v.). These would represent a zero grade kū- < kHu-*, beside a full grade *$keh_2us$- continued in Greek ἔκηϝα, and zero grade *$kh_2u̯$- in *κάϝ-ι̯ω, καῦ-μα.

κάκαλα [n.pl.] · τείχη. Αἰσχύλος Νιόβῃ (Fr. 166) 'walls' (H.). ◁?▷

•ETYM Uncertain hypothesis by Solmsen 1909: 215: related to ποδο-κάκκη 'piece of wood in which the feet of prisoners were tied' (Leges apud Lys. et D., Pl. Com. 249, sch. [not in LSJ]), also written -κάκη (perhaps after κακός). Chantraine comments: "rapprochement en l'air".

κακιθής [adj.] · ἄτροφος ἄμπελος 'a withering grapevine' (H.). ◁?▷

•VAR Also κακιθές, κακιθά (H.), κακιθή (Theognost. Can. 109).

•ETYM Acc. to Collinder Eranos 67 (1969): 210, it is itacistic for κακ[ο-]ήθης. See ►κάγκανος.

κακκάβη 1 [f.] 'three-legged pot' (com.), acc. to Ath. 4, 169c = χύτρα. ◁PG?▷

•VAR Also κακάβη, κάκαβος (Gal., Alex. Trall.), κάκκαβος [m.] (Nicoch., Antiph.)

•DER Diminutive κακ(κ)άβι(ο)ν (Eub., pap.).

•ETYM Technical LW of unknown origin. Semitic origin proposed by Lewy Glotta 16 (1928): 137 and Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 19 (who compares Akk. kukubu); rejected by E. Masson 1967: 83-83, but defended again by Szemerényi IF 73 (1968): 194f. In the meaning 'kettle', it could be a metaphor of 'partridge', acc. to Hemmerdinger Glotta 48 (1970): 53. Lat. cac(c)abus, diminutive cac(c)abulus (= κακουβαλουμ in Ps.-Dsc.; André Latomus 14 (1955): 518) are borrowed from the Greek. Cf. WH s.v. cac(c)abus. Given the variations and the variant in Lat. cascabus 'cacabus grandis' (gloss.), cited by Fur.: 298, the word is likely to be Pre-Greek.

κακκάβη 2 [f.] 'partridge' (Ath. 9, 390a). ◁LW Anat.▷

•VAR κακκαβίς [f.] (Alcm. 25).

•DER κακκαβίζω 'to quack', of a partridge (Arist., Thphr.), of owls (Ar. Lys. 761; v.l. -βάζω; cf. κικκαβάζω); also κακκάζω, of hens (H.).

•ETYM For the ending, Chantraine 1933: 260 compared ὄτοβος, κόναβος, θόρυβος; further onomatopoeic. Lat. cacabāre 'quack' was borrowed from Greek. One may compare Lat. cacillāre 'id.', MoHG gackern, MoDu. kakelen, Ru. kokotát', etc., all onomatopoeic for 'to quack'. On the other hand, Hitt. kakkapa-, Akk. kakkabānu 'partridge' have also been compared (Benveniste 1962: 7); see also Szemerényi IF 73 (1968): 94 and Cardona Orbis 16 (1967): 161-164. Neumann 1961: 60 suggests Lydian origin.

κακκάω [v.] 'to shit' (Ar. Nub. 1384, 1390), κάκκη 'human ordure' (Ar. Pax 162). ◁ONOM▷

•ETYM Lallwort from the language of children with expressive gemination, like Lat. cacāre, MIr. caccaim 'to shit', cacc 'ordure', Du. kakken, Ru. kákat', Arm. k'akor 'dung', etc.

κακ(κ)αλία name of several plants (Dsc., Plin.).

•VAR κακαλίς· νάρκισσος 'narcissus' (H.). ⇒ἀκακαλίς.

κακός [adj.] 'bad, awful, worthless' (Il.). ◁IE? knḱ-* 'slight', PG?▷

•VAR Grades of comparison: κακώτερος (Il.), κακίων, κάκιστος (Il.), after ἄριστος acc. to Seiler 1950: 100f., but see now DELG Supp.

•DIAL Myc. ka-zo-e /kazohes/.

•COMP Often as a first member (in opposition to εὖ); also as a second member, e.g. bahuvrīhi ἄ-κακος 'who does not know what is bad, unguilty' (Sapph., A.); also ἀ-κάκᾱς (Dor.), epithet of Hades (Megara), of Darius (A. Pers. 855 [lyr.]), cf. Chantraine 1933: 28.

•DER Abstracts: 1. κακότης 'badness' (Il.); 2. κακία 'id.' (Thgn., Att.; on κακότης : κακία see Porzig 1942: 212); 3. κάκη 'bad character, cowardice' (A., E.); after πάθη, βλάβη, cf. Frisk Eranos 43 (1945): 221; as a second member in στομα-κάκη a disease of mouth and teeth (Str., Plin.).

Denominative verbs: 1. κακίζω 'to revile', -ίζομαι 'to behave badly, be a coward' (Il.), with κακισμός (Phld., Str.), κάκισις (Vett. Val.) 'scorn'; 2. κακόω 'to revile, damage, ruin' (Il.) together with κάκωσις 'maltreatment, damage' (IA), κακωτής 'damager', κακωτικός 'damaging, harmful' (Ph., Vett. Val.); 3. κακύνομαι 'to prove to be bad or cowardly', -ύνω 'to damage' (E., Pl.).

•ETYM No clear etymology. Neo-Phrygian κακο(υ)ν is a loan from Greek, acc. to Solmsen KZ 34 (1897): 52[4] and others. De Lamberterie (see DELG Supp.) compares OAv. kasu- 'small, slight', with grades of comparison kasiiah-, kasišta- 'smallest'. However, if this is accepted, his reconstruction of a PIE root kak̂-* may be altered to knk̂-*. Another option is comparison with the root of Lith. keñkti 'to ache' < kenk-*, and the Germanic group of Go. huhrus 'hunger'. Alternatively, the word could be Pre-Greek.

κάκτος [f.] 'a kind of thistle, cardoon, cactus' (Epich., Theophr., Theoc.). ◂PG?▸

•ETYM Foreign word of unknown origin (cf. Strömberg 1937: 102). See André 1956 s.v. cactus. Lat. cactus was borrowed from the Greek. Fur.: 321, 371 thinks the -κτ- points to Pre-Greek and compares ἀκακία.

κακχαδίαι · ἰσχνόφωνοι 'wth weak voices' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM Schmidt corrects it to κισχαῦδαι, which would be contracted from καὶ ἰσχαῦδαι; cf. σχαῦδαι (= ἰσχαῦδαι)· ἰσχνόφωνοι (H.).

καλαβοῦτοι [?] · ἐν τῷ τῆς Δερεάτιδος ἱερῷ Ἀρτέμιδος ᾀδόμενοι ὕμνοι 'songs sung of Artemis in the sanctuary of D.' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM On a suggestion by Laum, see Wahrmann Glotta 17 (1929): 242f. M. Schmidt suggests reading *καλαβοίδια; see ►καλαοίδια. Latte reads -βῶται.

καλαβύστας ⇒ἀσκάλαβος.

καλαβώτης ⇒ἀσκάλαβος.

καλαδία [f.] · ῥυκάνη 'plane-tree' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 39, it belongs to κλαδαρός, κλάδος (?).

καλάζει [v.] · ὀγκοῦται. Ἀχαιοι 'is elated (Achaian)' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM Unknown.

κάλαθος [m.] 'basket' (Ar., Arist.), also metaph. of various objects, e.g. 'capital of a pillar' (Callix.), 'reservoir of an oil-lamp' (Hero). ◂PG?▸

•COMP As a first member e.g. in καλαθη-φόρος [f.] 'bearer of a κ.' (Ephesus III^{p}), Καλαθηφόροι title of a comedy by Euboulos. On -η- see Schwyzer 438f.

•DER καλαθίσκος (Ar., Lys.), -ον [n.] (Delos II^{a}); καλάθιον (Poll. Orib.); also καλάθωσις 'coffering of a ceiled roof' (gloss.).

•ETYM For the formation, cf. ►γυργαθός (γύργαθος), ►κύαθος, ὁρμαθός, etc. Connected with ►κλώθω by de Saussure 1879: 267, which is formally impossible. Probably Pre-Greek.

καλάϊνος [adj.] 'blue-green, bluish', of stones, earthenware, etc. (PSI 4, 396, 9 [III^{a}], Peripl. M. Rubr. 39 [cod. καλλεανός], AP, Dsc.). ◂?▸

•VAR Also καλλ-.

•ETYM An adjective in -ινος, seemingly derived from κάλλαις 'blue-green stone, turquoise' (Plin. NH 37, 151), but this could also be a back-formation. Comparison with ►κάλλαιον 'cock's comb, the feathers of a cock' and ►καλαΐς 'hen' is improbable.

καλαΐς [f.] 'hen', msc. 'cock' (IG 4^2(1), 40: 5, 41: 6 Epid. [V^{a}]). ◂?▸

•VAR Only acc. -ιδα.

•ETYM No etymology. Mostly taken from ►καλέω. Bechtel 1921, 2: 510f. posits *καλαϝίς, a fem. of *καλαϝός, which would properly mean "the calling one", by comparison with Skt. uṣā-kala- 'cock', "who calls early" (see ►ἠΐκανός). However, we cannot obtain *καλα- from ►καλέω, as the root ended in -h_1. Pagliaro Arch. glott. ital. 39 (1954): 145ff. identifies καλαΐς 'hen' with κάλλαϊς 'turquoise' (and with κάλαϊς· τὸ ἱστίον H.), καλάϊνος, and perhaps with κάλλαιον. Fur.: 125 fn. connects it with Lat. gallus.

καλαμίνθη [f.] name of an odoriferous plant (Hp., Ar., Arist.). ◂PG(S)▸

•VAR Also -μινθα (Philum. Ven., Phot.), -μινθος (Nic. Th. 60).

•DER καλαμινθίνη 'id.' (medic.; after ῥητίνη, etc., Chantraine 1933: 204), καλαμινθίτης (Dsc., of οἶνος), καλαμινθώδης 'full of κ.' (Str., Apollon. Lex.). Καλαμίνθιος name of a frog (Ar. Batr. 224).

•ETYM Unknown. The formal agreement with κάλαμος and μίνθη does not permit a conclusion. The assumption of a pre-form *καλαμο-μίνθη with dissimilation is unconvincing. A derivation καλάμ-ινθος from κάλαμος (Schwyzer: 526) and the assumption of a foreign word, with popular adaptation to κάλαμος and μίνθη, remain hypothetical as well. Cf. Chantraine 1933: 370. A Pre-Greek word is most probable because of the suffix and the meaning.

καλαμίνδαρ [?] · πλάτανος ἠδονιεῖς (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM Unknown.

κάλαμος [m.] 'reed, grass-stalk', often metaph. of objects made of reed, 'flute of reed, fishing rod, reed pen', etc. (h. Merc. 47 [cf. Zumbach 1955: 5], Pi., IA); on the botanical mg. see Strömberg 1937: 100f. ◂IE k̂olh$_2$-m-*, k̂lh$_2$-em- 'reed, straw'▸

•VAR καλάμη [f.] 'stalk or straw' (Hom., Hdt., X., Arist.).

•COMP Especially in botanical terminology (Strömberg 1937: 112), e.g. μονο-κάλαμος 'with a single stalk' (Thphr.), καλαμη-φόρος 'with reed' (X. HG 2, 1, 2; v.l. -ο-, cf. Schwyzer: 526), καλαμη-τόμος 'cutting off stalks' (A. R.).

•DER Diminutives καλαμίσκος (Ar., medic.), καλάμιον (pap.); καλαμίς [f.] name of several objects made of reed (Hell.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 342f.); collective καλαμία (-εία) 'reed' (pap.); καλαμών 'id.' (lit. pap.); καλαμάριον 'reed-case' (pap.).

καλαμεύς 'fisher' (Pancrat. apud Ath.); also καλαμευτής 'id.' (AP; as if from *καλαμεύω, cf. Chantraine 1933: 318); καλαμίτης 'provided with κάλαμος, etc.' (D.).

καλάμινος 'made of reed' (IA), καλαμόεις 'of reed' (E. [lyr.]), καλαμώδης 'full of reed, reed-like' (Arist., Thphr.), καλαμικός 'id.' (pap.).
καλαμόω [v.] 'to provide with reed, splint (a bone) with reed' (Gal.) together with καλαμωτή 'fence of reed' (Eust., H.); καλαμίζω 'blow a reed flute' (Ath.).
From καλάμη : καλαμαία [f.] 'kind of grasshopper' (Theoc. 10, 18), καλαμαῖον [n.] 'kind of cicade' (Paus. Gr., H.), cf. Gil Emerita 25 (1957): 315f. and Georgacas Glotta 31 (1951): 216), καλαμάομαι 'collect grain-stalks, gather ears (of corn)' (Cratin., LXX, Plu.) with καλάμημα (Thd.).
•ETYM An old word for 'reed, straw', with cognate forms in Latin culmus, Germanic (e.g. OHG halm), Balto-Slavic (e.g. OPr. salme 'straw', Latv. salms, Ru. solóma, SCr. slȁma). Except for κάλαμος, -μη, all these forms can go back to IE *ḱolh$_2$-mo-, ḱolh$_2$-meh$_2$-. Therefore, κάλαμος has been explained as from *κόλαμος (comparing ποταμός, πλόκαμος) by vowel assimilation, but this unsatisfactory solution is unnecessary, as the proto-language may have had a paradigm *ḱolh$_2$-m, *ḱlh$_2$-em-, i.e. an m-stem, which was thematicized in the separate branches. From κάλαμος, Lat. calamus and Skt. kaláma- 'writing reed', Arab. qalam > Osman. kalém > MoGr. καλέμι were borrowed (Maidhof Glotta 10 (1920): 11).

κάλανδρος [m.] 'kind of lark' (Dionys. Av. 3, 15). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Ending like τάρανδ(ρ)ος, Μαίανδρος; origin unknown. Thence Ital. calandro 'lark' (Meyer-Lübke 1911-1920: N° 1486). See also WH s.v. caliandrum. No doubt either Pre-Greek, or a loan from Anatolia.

καλαοίδια [f.] · ἀγὼν ἐπιτελούμενος Ἀρτέμιδι παρὰ Λάκωσιν 'contest in honour of Artemis (Laconian)' (H.). ◂GR?▸ •ETYM Acc. to Fraenkel Glotta 4 (1913): 35, a univerbation of καλεῖν and ἀείδειν. Acc. to Frisk, it is rather a derivation in -ιο- from καλαὶ ἀοιδαί.

καλάπους [m.] 'shoemaker's last', καλαρῖνες· ὀχετοί. Λάκωνες 'water-pipes (Laconian)'; καλαρρυγαί· τάφροι 'ditches' (H.). ⇒κᾶλον.

καλάρις [m.] a small bird (Arist. HA 609a). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

καλάσιρις, -ιος [f.] an Egyptian garment with tassels or fringes at the bottom (Hdt. 2, 81, Cratin. 30; a Persian garment in Democr. Eph. 1), also worn at the Mysteries in Andania (Messenia) (IG 5(1), 1390: 17; written -σηρις); Καλασίριες [m.pl.] name of a kind of Egyptian soldier (Hdt. 2, 164; after the garment or vice versa?). ◂LW Eg.▸
•VAR Also -σηρις.
•COMP As a second member in τρυφο-καλάσιρις name of a women's garment (Ar. Fr. 320, 6; cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 269).
•ETYM Egyptian word without certain etymology; cf. Spiegelberg Zs. f. ägypt. Spr. 43 (1905): 87ff. On the notation, see Schwyzer Glotta 11 (1921): 75f. Further discussion in Drioton-Vandier 1962: 572f.

καλαῦροψ, -οπος [f.] name of a herdsman's staff, which was thrown to drive back the cattle to the herd (Ψ 845, Antim., A. R.). ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR Also κολλόροβον (Hipparch. Ptol.; written κολλώροβον in BGU 59.13), = κορύνη 'staff' (H., who has κολλορόβον), see Fur.: 145f.
•DER καλαυρόπιον (Artem.). Unclear is καλαυρόφις· βακτηριοφόρος 'staff-bearer' (H.), at an alphabetically wrong position; Fur.: 146[18] suggests that it is a mistake for *καλαυροπο-φορίς.
•ETYM Explained as an Aeolic compound καλα-ϝροψ by Schwyzer: 224 and Chantraine 1942: 158, but with unexplained second member. The comparison of the first member with Skt. śalá- 'stick' (cf. on ►κῆλα) or with ►κλάω, κλάσαι must be forgotten.
It is a typical Pre-Greek word, containing a labialized phoneme r^w, from a pre-form *kalar^w-ap-, where the labial element was anticipated in καλαυροπ-, and colored the following *a into o. In κολλορ-, the preceding *a was colored to o as well, and the first *a was assimilated to the following o or ω (which may have been contracted from αυ). Compare ►ἄλοξ for the phenomena described here, which are typical of Pre-Greek loans.

καλέω [v.] 'to call, call by name, name' (Il.). ◂IE *klh$_1$- 'call'▸ •VAR Epic also κικλήσκω, Aeol. κάλημι, Cypr. καλήζω, aor. καλέσ(σ)αι (Il.), pass. κληθῆναι (Archil.), fut. καλέω (IA since Γ 383), καλῶ (Att.), καλέσω (young Att., Hell.), perf. med. κέκλημαι with fut. κεκλήσομαι (Il.), act. κέκληκα (Ar.).
•COMP Very frequently with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐν-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, παρα-, προ-, προσ-, συν-. As a first member in καλεσσί-χορος 'calling to the dance' (Orph. L. 718; Schwyzer: 443f.); cf. ►ὁμοκλή (also ὀμ-), ὁμο-κλέω, -άω.
•DER With a disyllabic stem: 1. καλήτωρ 'Caller', epithet of κῆρυξ (Ω 577), also as a PN (Ο 419), with Καλητορίδης (Ν 541); καλη- as in καλή-μεναι (Κ 125; athem. Aeol. formation?) 2. Καλήσιος (Ζ 18); 3. κάλεσις = κλῆσις 'nominative' (gramm.).
With a monosyllabic stem: 4. κλῆσις 'call, invitation, summon, etc.' (Att. Hell.), often to prefixed verbs, e.g. ἐπίκλη-σις 'surname' (Il.); 5. -κλημα, e.g. ἔγκλη-μα 'reproach, accusation' (Att.) with ἐγκλήμων, -ματικός, -ματίζω, etc. 6. κλητήρ, -ῆρος 'herald, witness' (A., Att.); ὁμοκλη-τήρ 'who calls' (Il.) from ►ὁμοκλή, -έω; ἀνακλητήρια [n.pl.] 'festival when a king is nominated' (Plb.); 7. κλήτωρ, -ορος 'witness', also PN (Hell.), after κλητήρ (Fraenkel 1910: 17f.; on καλήτωρ : κλητήρ see Benveniste 1948: 29, 40, 46). 8. κλητός 'called, invited, welcome' (Hom.; Ammann 1956: 14 and 21) with κλητεύω 'call to justice, etc.' (Att.), (ἀνα-, etc.)-κλη-τικός; often from the prefixed verbs, e.g. ἔκκλη-τος 'called in' (IA, Dor.) with the collective abstract ἐκκλησία '(called) meeting' (IA), 'community, church' (LXX, NT); with ἐκκλησι-άζω and -αστής, -ασμός, etc.; with nominal first member in πολύ-κλη-τος 'often called', i.e. 'called on from many sides' (Δ 438, Κ 420). 9. κλή-δην 'by name' (Ι 11; cf. ἐξονομακλήδην); 10. ἐπίκλη-ν 'with (sur)name' (Pl.; Schwyzer: 425). Deverbative formation καλιστρέω = καλέω (D. 47, 60 from Harp., Call.; probably first from a noun, cf. ἐλαστρέω, Schwyzer: 706). On κληΐζω, κληδών (κλεη-, κληη-) see ►κλέος.
•ETYM The disyllabic verbal stem in καλέσαι (analogical καλέσσαι), beside κλη- in κέκλημαι, κικλήσκω, κλητός, points to a root *klh$_1$- (καλε- going back to *klh$_1$-e-). Latin has clā- (clāmare, clārus) beside calā-re, both from a zero grade root. The present καλέω may be an innovation after καλέσαι; differently, Harðarson 1993a: 82[98].

Cognate verbal forms include Lat. calāre 'to announce, summon', U kařetu < kalē-tōd*; further, OHG hellan 'to resound' and OS halōn 'to call, fetch' (= calāre), OE hlōwan 'to low', Hitt. kalliš-[zi] / kališš- 'to call, summon'. Noticeable among the nominal forms are Skt. uṣā-kal-a- 'cock' (see on ►ἠΐκανός) and Lat. clārus 'sonorous, bright' < klh₁-ro-*, MoHG hell 'id.'. κέλαδος 'noise' is not cognate.

κάλη 'tumour'. ⇒κήλη.

κάληβος · ἀπεσκολυμμένος τὸ αἰδοῖον 'with cut off private parts' (H.). ⇒βάκηλος, as well as καβάλλης.

καλῑά [f.] 'hut, barn, granary, nest' (Hes.). ◁?▷
•VAR Ion. -ιή; καλιός [m.] 'hut, scale' (Epich., Cratin.).
•DER Diminutive καλῑ́διον (Eup.); καλιάς, -άδος [f.] 'hut, nest, chapel' (Attica IV[a], D. H., Plu.) with καλιάδιον (Delos II[a]).
•ETYM The word καλιά differs from other oxytone words in -ιά by its ῑ, which is long almost everywhere (but short in Theoc. 29, 12). Etymological connection with ►καλύπτω, etc. is extremely doubtful.

καλίδια [n.pl.]? · ἔντερα. Κύπριοι 'entrails (Cypr.)' (H.). ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM Lidén KZ 61 (1934): 23ff. connected it with Arm. k'ałird 'intestines (of animals)', with -rd after leard 'liver', and Lith. skìl̃vis 'stomach'. Fur.116 compares γάλλια· ἔντερα (H.) and considers the word to be Pre-Greek.

καλινδέομαι [v.] 'to roll about, wallow' (IA). ◁PG▷
•VAR Only present stem.
•COMP Also with ἐν-, προ-, προσ-, συν-.
•DER καλινδήθρα 'place for horses to roll' (Ael.), καλίνδησις 'name of a throw of the dice' (Alciphr.).
•ETYM Perhaps (but not quite certainly) the aorist δια-καλῖσαι 'transport by rolling' (*SIG*² 587, 158) belongs here, together with διακάλισις (Hermione); also, ἐσ- and παρ-κάλισις (Epid.); however, cf. on ►κᾶλον. For the formation, cf. ἀλινδέομαι and κυλινδέομαι (Güntert 1914: 131f.); DELG thinks it is a cross of these two. Fur.: 391 reminds of the alternation κ-/ zero in Pre-Greek words.

καλιστρέω ⇒καλέω.

καλλαβίς, -ίδος [f.] name of a lascivious dance (Eup. 163, Phot.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Also καλαβίς (H.) = τὸ περισπᾶν τὰ ἰσχία, ἢ γένος ὀρχήσεως ἀσχημόνως τῶν ἰσχίων κυρτουμένων.
•ETYM The word seems to be derived from *κάλλαβος; it would belong to the group of popular, lower class words in -βος (cf. Chantraine 1933: 260ff.). Acc. to Bechtel 1921, 2: 375, it derives from *καταλαβίς, but this is semantically unexplained. Fur.: 343 compares κόλαβρος, a song that accompanies the κολαβρισμός.

κάλλαιον [n.] 'wattles' (Ar., Ael., Paus.), 'cock's crest' (Arist.), 'cock's tail feathers' (Ael. Dion.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Usually plur. -α.
•ETYM Unknown. The connection with καλαΐς 'cock' was rejected by WP 1, 444. Probably Pre-Greek. See ►καλάϊνος, ►καλαΐς.

κάλλαϊς, -ιδος [f.] 'blue-green stone, turquoise' (Plin.). ⇒καλάϊνος.

καλλαρίας [m.] a kind of cod-fish (Archestr., Opp., H. s.v. λαζίνης). ◁PG▷ •VAR γαλ(λ)αρίας· ἰχθύς, ὁ ὀνίσκος 'cod-fish' (H.), γαλλερίας, γελαρίης (Dorion) and χελλαρίης = ὀνίσκος (Dorio apud Ath. 3, 118c).
•ETYM Acc. to Frisk, formed from κάλλος with a suffix -ίας (Chantraine 1933: 94). The synonymous γαλ(λ)αρίας is sometimes connected with γαλεός 'dog-fish' (?); see Strömberg 1943: 130f., as well as Thompson 1947: 97. The variants clearly point to a Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 140); the two variants with ε's and the geminate -λλ- suggest a pre-form kalʸar-*.

καλλίᾱς [m.] 'monkey' (Din., Herod., H.). ◁GR▷ •VAR Ion. -ίης, Dor. -ίαρ (H.).
•DER PN Καλλίας.
•ETYM Perhaps a euphemistic usage of the PN (cf. Gal. 18 : 2, 236 and 611), which has been connected with κάλλος. Cf. Kretschmer KZ 33 (1895): 560 and Kretschmer 1909: 122. A semantic parallel from Indic is given by Schulze KZ 56 (1929): 124: MInd. su-mukha "nice face", as a way of addressing an ape. Cf. also Spitzer KZ 57 (1930): 63.

καλλιβάντες [?] · ὅμοια σμιλίοις καὶ ψαλίσιν, ἐν αἷς τὰς ὀφρῦς κοσμοῦσιν αἱ γυναῖκες. [ἄνθη.] [ἢ γένος ὀρχήσεως ἀσχημόνως τῶν ἰσχίων κρατουμένων] (H.). ◁PG?(S)▷ •ETYM Unknown. Words with the suffix -(ιβ)αντ- are mostly Pre-Greek.

καλλιερέω [v.] 'to bring καλὰ ἱερά', i.e. 'to sacrifice favorably' (IA); intr. impersonal (of a sacrifice) 'to be καλὰ ἱερά, work out well' (Hdt.). ◁GR▷ •VAR Aor. καλλιερῆσαι (IA), perf. κεκαλλιέρηκα (X.).
•DER καλλιέρησις (Attica), -ημα (H., EM); Dor. καλλιαρία (Cos; from *καλλιαρέω).
•ETYM Compounded from καλὰ ἱερά (cf. Schwyzer: 726), with adaptation of the first member to nominal compounds with καλλι-. See ►καλός.

Καλλικύριοι ⇒Κιλλικύριοι.

καλλονή •VAR κάλλος, καλλύνω. ⇒καλός.

κᾶλον [n.] 'wood, logs (for burning), timber' (h. Merc. 112, Hes. Op. 427, Ion. trag., Call., Cyrene), also 'wood for ships' = 'ship' (Lacon. in Ar. Lys. 1253, X. HG 1, 1,23, Plu. Alc. 28.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Mostly plur. -α.
•COMP As a first member in καλοτύπος· ὁ δρυοκολάπτης 'woodcutter' (H.), καλο-πέδιλα [n.pl.] "wooden shoes", fetters for the feet of a cow (Theoc. 25, 103); καλό-πους, -ποδος [m.] "wooden foot", i.e. 'shoemaker's last' (v.l. in Pl. Smp. 191a and Poll. 2, 195; Edict. Diocl.), also καλά-πους (Pl. l.c., Poll. 10, 141; after τετρά-πους?), with the diminutive καλοπόδιον (Gal. 6, 364 [v.l. -απ-], Suid.); as technical expressions, καλόπους and καλοπόδιον entered into Eastern languages, e.g. Arab. qālib, whence Osman. kalyp 'form, model' > MoGr. τό καλούπι 'id.', MP kalapaδ, MoP kālbud (Maidhof Glotta 10 (1920): 11; Bailey TPS 1933: 49). Of doubtful appurtenance is καλαρ<ρ>ύα 'canal, water conduit' (Ambracian acc. to sch. Gen. Φ 259), καλαρρυϝαί (cod. -γαί)· τάφροι. Ἀμερίας 'ditches' (H.), acc. to Schwyzer: 438[4] properly "wooden water conduit"; similarly καλαρῖνες· ὀχετοί. Λάκωνες 'water-pipe (Lacon.)' (H.); cf. ῥινοῦχος 'canal', etc., see Kretschmer Glotta 4 (1913): 335.

•DER κάλινος 'of wood' (Epich., Lyc., A. R., Cyrene); diminutive (?) κάλιον (-ίον?)· ξυλάριον, βακτηρίδιον 'small piece of wood; small staff'; καλύριον (-ύφιον?)· ξυλήφιον 'piece of wood' (H.).

•ETYM The word has been connected with ►καίω, καῦσαι as 'firewood', by comparison with the synonymous δᾱλός 'fire-brand' < δαϝ-ελός (to ►δαίω), under the assumption that κᾶλον would represent *κάϝ-ελον. However, since Dor. κᾶλον cannot be derived from it, it was necessary to assume *κάϝ-αλον (Schwyzer: 248, Lejeune 1972: 263). Nevertheless, in the case of a pre-form *καϝ-αλ-, Pre-Greek origin is much more likely. The connection with ►καίω is not certain at all. From the plur. κᾶλα, Latin borrowed cāla [f.] 'dry wood, firewood'. See ►κῆλα.

καλός [adj.] 'beautiful, noble, good' (Il.); on the mg. Smothers Traditio 5 (1947): 1-57, also Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 261. ◄?►

•VAR Primary compar. καλλίων (Alc. ntr. κάλιον [see below], El. καλίτερος [graphic?], rarely καλώτερος, καλλιώτερος), sup. κάλλιστος; Dor. adv. (Alcm. 98) καλλά; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 87f.

•DIAL Epic Ion. κᾱλός, Boeot. καλϝος (Del.[3] 538 [VI[a]]).

•COMP Rare as a first member (for καλλι-, εὐ-), e.g. καλό-φυλλος 'with beautiful leaves' (Thphr.; after μακρό-, λειό-φυλλος, etc.); as a second member e.g. ἀπειρό-καλος 'not knowing what is beautiful' (Pl.; from τὸ καλόν). Note especially καλοκἀγαθία (orators, X.), univerbating abstract of καλὸς κ(αὶ) ἀγαθός (IA; see Berlage Mnem. 60 (2007): 20ff.).

•DER καλότης 'beauty' (Chrysipp. Stoic. 3, 60). With geminate: 1. κάλλος [n.] 'beauty' (Il.), as a second member e.g. in περι-καλλής 'very beautiful' (Il., bahuvrīhi); thence κάλλιμος 'beautiful' (Od., h. Hom.; after κύδιμος, see Arbenz 1933: 10ff.), καλλύνω 'give beauty, make beautiful, sweep' (S., Pl., Arist.) with καλλυντής 'sweeper' (pap. II[a]), κάλλυντρον 'broom', also name of a shrub (Arist.), κάλλυνθρον 'duster' (LXX, pap.), καλλυντήρια [n.pl.] name of a purificatory festival (Phot., EM), καλλύσματα [pl.] 'dust' (Ceos). Fom κάλλος also καλλονή 'id.' (cf. ἡδονή), καλλοσύνη 'id.' (E.). 2. compar. καλλίων, κάλλιστος (Il.); thence καλλιόομαι 'be made more beautiful' (LXX), καλλιστεύω, -ομαι 'be the most beautiful' (Ion.) with καλλιστεῖον, καλλίστευμα 'sacrifice of the most beautiful, price of beauty, price of honour' (S., E., inscr.). 3. καλλι- as a first member (Il.); e.g. καλλι-γύναικ-α, -ος, -ι 'with beautiful women' (cf. Sommer 1948: 62), also in PNs, whence short names like Καλλίας, etc.

•ETYM Att. κᾰλός and Ion. κᾱλός both derive from καλϝός; the noun κάλλος, the compar. forms καλλίων, κάλλιστος and the first member καλλι- differ from these by their geminate -λλ-, an explanation of which is still wanting. One proposal has been a basis *κάλ-νος or *κάλ-ι̯ος for κάλλος (and καλλίων, κάλλιστος, while καλλι- may be analogical?), but this does not inspire confidence, as κάλλος seems to be a Greek innovation (cf. Chantraine 1933: 416f.), and there is no good explanation for καλλι- either. The assumption of expressive gemination (Chantraine l.c.) is an ad hoc hypothesis and not a solution. Beside καλ-ϝός (with an old suffix *-wo-), one would expect καλι- as a first member (is it retained in Alc. κάλιον?), which Wackernagel KZ 61 (1934): 191ff. recognized in Skt. kaly-ā́ṇa- 'beautiful'. Pinault BSL 98 (2003) assumes that the original Skt. form was fem. kalyāṇī́- 'with beautiful hips', the second part of the compound being Skt. āṇí- 'axle-pin, linch-pin'; 'part of the leg above the knee'. Schwyzer: 447[6] derives καλλ- from antevocalic *καλι̯-, whence καλλι- and (as a back-formation) κάλλος, etc. Differently, Risch 1937 (par. 62a): -λλ- is from a compar. *κάλλων < *καλι̯ων, whence κάλλιστος, etc. Similarly, Seiler 1950: 68ff.: a neuter comparative *κάλλον < *κάλι̯ον was interpreted as a positive, and resulted in a new comparative κάλλιον, καλλίων (whence κάλλιστος, etc.).

κάλπη [f.] 'trot' (Paus., Plu., Hippiatr.). ◄PG(V)►

•DER καλπάζω 'to trot' (A. Fr. 145A, Aq., Suid.) with καλπασμός (Philum. apud Orib.).

•ETYM Technical term of horse riding without etymology, perhaps originally onomatopoeic ("clapper"). Brugmann (e.g. Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 1: 260, 572) connected it with OPr. po-quelbton 'kneeling', Lith. klùpti 'to kneel, stumble', Germanic (e.g. Go. hlaupan 'walk'), but these forms cannot explain the Greek -α-. The same holds for the comparison with κέλης, κολυφρόν· ἐλαφρόν 'nimble' (H.). Fur.: 379 compares σκαλπάζειν· ῥεμβωδῶς βαδίζειν 'to walk around at random' (H.), σκαλαπάζει· ῥέμβεται 'id.' (H.) with prothetic σ-, which suggests that the word is Pre-Greek.

κάλπις, -ιδος [f.] 'pitcher' (η 20; on the mg. Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 358 and 365). ◄PG?►

•VAR Acc. -ιν, -ιδα.

•COMP καλπο-φόρος 'carrying a pitcher' (epigr.).

•DER κάλπη (κάλπην v.l. for -πιν Plu., Hdn.) name of a constellation (Vett. Val.; Scherer 1953: 173 and 190); κάλπος· ποτηρίου εἶδος 'kind of drinking vessel' (H.). Diminutive κάλπιον (Pamphil. apud Ath. 11, 475c).

•ETYM Without a certain explanation, like many other vessel names. Most often connected with a Celtic word for 'urn, bucket', e.g. OIr. cilornn (< kelpurno-*), but this does not explain the -α-. Acc. to others, it is connected with Assyr. karpu 'vase, pot' or with OHG hal(a)p 'handle'. Lat. calpar (formation unclear) was borrowed from κάλπη. Fur.: 146 connects it with κελέβη, for which there seems no reason. Still, κάλπις is possibly Pre-Greek.

κάλτιος [m.] 'shoe' (Rhinth., Plu., Edict. Diocl.). ◄LW Lat.►

•VAR Also κάλτοι (for κάλτ<ι>οι?)· ὑποδήματα κοῖλα, ἐν οἷς ἱππεύουσι 'hollow sandals, in which horsemen rode' (H.).

•ETYM A Sicilian loanword from Lat. calceus (καλίκιοι Plb. 30, 18, 3).

καλύβη [f.] 'hut, cabin' (Hdt.); 'bridal bower' (A. R.); 'sleeping-tent' (PFlor. 335, 2). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also καλυβός (Epigr. Gr. 260, Cyrene), κολυβός· ἔπαυλις 'farmstead' (H.).
•DER καλυβίτης 'living in a hut'; καλυβο-ποιέομαι [v.] 'to make oneself a cabin' (Str.).
•ETYM The variant κολυβός, adduced by Fur.: 343, shows that the word is Pre-Greek. Pre-Greek has a rule α - υ > ο - υ; see Fur.: 340.

κάλυγες [?] · τὰ ἔμβρυα 'embryos' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM The structure of the word (καλ-υγ-) is typically Pre-Greek.

καλυδίλα [?] · γέφυρα 'bridge' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word.

καλύδριον [n.] 'a small cable' (BCH 29, 543, Delos II[a]). ◄PG?► •ETYM Unknown. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

κάλυξ, -ῠκος [f.] 'cup, calyx of a flower, husk, shell, pod, rosebud', also metaph. for the ornament of a woman (Σ 401). ◄PG(S)► •COMP As a first member e.g. in καλυκοστέφανος 'crowned with buds' (B.).
•DER Diminutive καλύκιον (Dsc., H.); καλυκώδης 'κ.-like' (Thphr.), καλύκειος λίθος name of a stone found in the fish called σάλπη (H.); also κάλυξις· κόσμος τις ἐκ ῥόδων 'an ornament made of roses', καλύξεις· ῥόδων καλύκια 'rosebuds' (H.), καλύκωσις 'rosebud?' (Aq.), as if from *καλύσσω, or *καλυκόω; cf. the formations in Chantraine 1933: 288 and καλυκίζειν· ἀνθεῖν 'to blossom' (H.).
•ETYM On the ending -υξ, cf. Chantraine 1933: 383. The word resembles Skt. (class.) kalikā- 'bud', but must probably be kept separate; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. Cf. ►κύλιξ and ►σκαλλίον. Both root and suffix look Pre-Greek (καλ-υκ-).

καλύπτω [v.] 'to cover, hide' (Il., IA). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Aor. καλύψαι, perf. med. κεκάλυμμαι, etc.
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀμφι-, κατα-, περι-, συν-, also with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ- in the mg. 'to open up, reveal'.
•DER 1. See ►καλύβη; 2. καλυφή 'submerged land' with ἀποκάλυφος (αἰγιαλός, ἄρουρα) 'land that can be cultivated after inundation' (pap.), περικαλυφή 'envelopment' (Pl. Lg. 942d); on -βη and -φη beside καλύ-πτω Schwyzer: 332f. 3. (προ-, παρα-, etc.) κάλυμμα 'cover, veil, etc.' (Il.) with καλυμμάτιον (Ar.). 4. συγκαλυμμός 'cover' (Ar. Av. 1496). 5. ἐγ-, κατα-, ἀπο-κάλυψις 'cover, etc.' (Hell.); here, probably as an endearing name Καλυψώ [f.] "one who covers" (Od.), properly a goddess of death acc. to Güntert 1919, see also Bérard *REGr.*67 (1954): 503f. 6. καλυπτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'cover, tile' (Hp., Arist., Att.), καλυπτηρίζω 'cover with tiles' (inscr.), fem. καλύπτειρα 'veil' (AP); ἐπι-, ἐγ-, ἀνακαλυπτήριον, -ια 'concealing; ceremony of unveiling' (Arist.). 7. καλύπτρα, -ρη [f.] 'veil, cover' (Il.). 8. ἐκ-καλυπτικός 'revealing' (Stoic., S. E.).
•ETYM The word has been compared to κρύπτω for the formation. In Western European languages, a full grade thematic root present kel-e/o-* is found, e.g. in OIr. celim, Lat. celō, -ere* (in occulere), OHG helan 'to hold back, hide'. Further, with a lengthened grade, deverbative Lat. cēlāre, 'to hide', and a zero grade yod-present in Germanic, e.g. Go. huljan 'to veil, conceal'. Cf. ►κέλυφος.
However, in this way neither the Greek a-vocalism nor the element υ + labial can be accounted for. In view of the variants, the root καλυβ/π/φ- is clearly Pre-Greek. Cf. on ►καλύβη, which proves Pre-Greek origin in a different way.

κάλχη [f.] 'murex, purple flower, Chrysanthemum coronarium' (Alcm., Nic., Str.), metaph. as a term of construction 'rosette of a capital' (Att., Hell., inscr.). ◄PG?►
•VAR With metathesis of aspiration χάλκη (Meisterhans 1900: 103f.), also χάλχη.
•DER Denominative verb καλχαίνω 'to be purple' (Nic. Th. 641), originally medial, metaphorically trans. 'to ponder deeply' (ἔπος, S. Ant. 20), intr. 'to be unquiet, excited' (E. Heracl. 40), 'to long for' (Lyc. 1457).
•ETYM A loan of unknown origin. The poetic meaning 'to ponder, be excited' may have arisen after ►πορφύρα : ►πορφύρω, which were secondarily connected with each other. It cannot be decided whether the name of the seer Κάλχας belongs here as well.

κάλως [m.] 'reefing rope, cable, rope in general' (ε 260). ◄PG?►
•VAR Acc. -ω, -ων; κάλος (ε 260 and Hdt.), Hell. plur. -ωες, -ωας, -ωσι •COMP καλω-στρόφος 'rope-twister' (Plu. Per. 12).
•DER Diminutive καλῴδιον, also καλοίδιον (com., Th., inscr., pap.).
•ETYM No etymology; probably a technical loan. The IE etymologies that have been proposed (see Frisk) are untenable.

καμάν [f.] · τὸν ἀγρόν. Κρῆτες 'field (Cretan)' (H.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. ka-ma a plot of land, ka-ma-e-u 'tenant of a ka-ma' (see below).
•ETYM Unknown. An interpretation /kamas/ has been proposed; see Lejeune RPh. 42 (1968): 233f. and Ruijgh Lingua 58 (1982): 208.

κάμαξ, -ακος [f., m.] 'pole to support the vine, bar, shaft of a spear' (Σ 563). ◄PG(S)► •DER καμάκιον (sch.), καμάκινος 'made of one bar' (X.), καμακίας σῖτος 'corn with a stalk that is too long' (Thphr.; cf. Strömberg 1937: 91).
•ETYM Formation like δόναξ, πῖναξ, κλῖμαξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 377ff.). Several languages have similar words for 'bar, wood, stick, etc.', but they are all different: Skt. śámyā 'stock, nail', Av. simā 'part of the harnass of the wagon for horses', Arm. sami-k' [pl.] 'wood of the yoke', Gm., e.g. MHG hamel 'bar, bobbin'. Fur.: 221 compares ἀμάκιον· κάμαξ (H.), with alternation κ/zero (see ibid. 391). The suffix -ακ- is highly frequent in Pre-Greek. See ►καμασήν.

καμάρα [f.] 'vault, vaulted room, wagon and bark with vaulted roof' (Hdt., LXX, Str.). ◄LW?►
•DIAL Ion. -ρη.
•DER καμάριον (inscr.), καμαρία· κοιτὼν καμάρας ἔχων 'having a vaulted chamber of beds' (H.), καμαρικός 'vaulted' (Ath. Mech.).
Denominative verbs: 1. καμαρόω 'to provide with a vault' with καμάρωσις 'vault' (Hell.), καμάρ-ωμα 'vault' (Str., Gal.), -ωτός 'vaulted' (Str.), -ωτικός 'used in vaulting' (pap.); 2. καμαρεύω [v.] 'to accumulate, exert oneself' (H.). Further καμάρης· δέσμης 'package, bundle', καμάραι· ζῶναι στρατιωτικαί 'belts for soldiers', καμαρίς· κοσμάριον γυναικεῖον 'women's ornament' (H.); cf. below.

•ETYM The form καμάρα recalls Av. kamarā 'girdle', with a different meaning that is, however, found in the glosses καμάρη, καμαρίς (H.). Lat. camurus, -a, -um 'curved (of horns), vaulted' has also been adduced. Comparisons with other languages remain uncertain: e.g. Skt. kmárati 'to be curved' (gramm.; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v.), Gr. ►κμέλεθρον if from *κμέρεθρον (?), the Gm. word for 'heaven', e.g. Go. himins. It is rather a loan, perhaps from an eastern language (from Carian, acc. to sch. Orib. 46, 21, 7). From the Greek word, Lat. camera was borrowed; thence it was borrowed into Germanic and Balto-Slavic. See ► κάμινος.

κάμαρος 1 [m.] name of a poisonous plant, kind of Aconitum (?), also = δελφίνιον, 'larkspur' (Hp., Stratt., Nic., Dsc.). ◄EUR► •VAR Also κάμμαρος.
•ETYM It has been compared with the Germanic and Slavic word for 'hellebore': OHG hemera, Ru. čemerica (from CS čemerъ 'poison', properly 'hellebore'), and Lith. kēmeras 'hemp agrimony (Eupatorium cannabium), burr marigold'. The notation κάμμορον (Dsc., Erot.) can be folk-etymological after κάμμορος 'unhappy'. Given the distribution, the word seems to be a loan from a European subtrate language (see Beekes 2000: 28). From κάμμαρος: kammári 'spurge' in Lower Italy; see Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 53, Rohlfs 1930: N° 877, and Dawkins JHS 56 (1936): 4.

κάμαρος 2 [adj.] = ἀσφαλής (Apollon. apud sch. Orib. 46, 21, 7). ◄?► •ETYM The word would be Carian. Further unknown. See ► καμάρα.

καμασήν, -ῆνος [m.] name of an unknown fish (Emp., AP, Hdn. Gr., H.). ◄EUR► •ETYM Given the fish name ἠλακατήν (from ἠλακάτη), one would posit a basic form *κάμασος for καμασήν, with suffixal -ασος like in πέτασος, κόμπασος (Chantraine 1933: 435; unclear). It has been connected with Balto-Slavic words for the 'sheatfish': Lith. šãmas, Latv. sams, Ru. som, etc. Further, connected with ► κάμαξ 'pole, bar' by Solmsen 1909: 122f.; on the naming motive, see Strömberg 1943: 36. Probably a loan from the European substrate. Fur.: 214 connects it with κάβα(ι)σος, καμασός, but without evidence.

κάμηλος [m., f.] 'camel' (Hdt., A., Ar.). ◄LW Sem.►
•COMP As a first member e.g. in καμηλο-πάρδαλις [f.] 'giraffe' (Agatharch., LXX; Strömberg 1944: 12); also in καμηλάτης for *καμηλ-ελάτης 'camel-driver' with καμηλ-άσιον 'camel-driver's wages' (pap.), -ασία 'camel-driving' (Dig.).
•DER Diminutive καμήλιον; adjectives καμήλειος, καμηλικός 'belonging to a camel', καμηλώδης 'like a camel' (Gal.); nouns καμηλίτης (Arist.), καμηλάριος 'camel-driver'; καμηλών 'camel stable'; verb καμηλίζω 'to resemble a camel' (Hld.).
•ETYM From Semitic (originally Babylonian?; Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 17); cf. Hebr. gāmāl (= γαμάλ· ἡ κάμηλος παρὰ Χαλδαίοις H.), with (Ionic?) development of ᾱ to η in -ηλος; cf. Γαυγάμηλα = καμήλου οἶκος Str. 16, 1, 3 (Kretschmer KZ 31 (1892): 287). From κάμηλος come Skt. kramela- (after krámate 'stride'), Lat. camēlus, and the European forms.

κάμιλος [m.] 'rope, cable' (sch. Ar. V. 1035, Suid.). ◄LW Sem.► •ETYM From Semitic, acc. to Lewy 1895: 154, who compares Arab. ǧamal 'id.'. Others argue that it arose from the v.l. κάμιλος for κάμηλος Ev. Matt. 19, 24, Marc. 10, 25, Luc. 18, 25 (κάμηλον διὰ τρήματος ῥαφίδος διελθεῖν 'a camel going through the eye of a needle'), as 'rope' would fit better.

κάμῑνος [f.] 'furnace for smelting, baking, burning, etc.' (Hom. Epigr. 14, Hdt., A.). ◄PG?(S)► •VAR Also -η (pap. VI[p]).
•DER Diminutive καμίνιον (Gp., Olymp. Alch.). Other substantives: καμινὼ γρηῦς 'furnace woman' (σ 27; Chantraine 1933: 116); καμινεύς name of an artisan working at a furnace, e.g. 'smith' or 'potter' (D. S.; Boßhardt 1942: 76); καμινίων 'id.' (Tegea II[p]); καμινίτης ἄρτος (Philistion apud Ath.).
Adjectives: καμίνιος 'belonging to the furnace' (Thphr.); καμιναῖος 'id.' (Ezek.) with καμιναία = κάμινος (LXX; cf. Chantraine 1933: 86); καμινώδης 'like a furnace' (Str.).
Verb καμινεύω 'to burn or smelt in a furnace' (Arist., Thphr., Str.) with καμινευτής = καμινεύς (pap. III[a], Luc.), καμινευτήρ (αὐλός) 'pair of bellows in a smithy' (AP), fem. -εύτρια (Aristarch.), καμινεία (-ία) 'burning, smelting' (Thphr., Gal.). All derivatives are rare, most of them late.
•ETYM On the gender, see Schwyzer 1950: 34[2]. A technical loan of unknown origin. The comparison with καμάρα has little value; that with OCS kamy 'stone' is possible. Is it a loan from the north or from the east? From κάμινος, Lat. camīnus, to which MHG kamin, etc. are related. Note that -ῑν- is a Pre-Greek suffix.

κάμμαρος 1 [m.] 'kind of crab' (Epich., Sophr., Rhinth., H.), on the mg. cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. ◄PG(V)► •VAR καμμαρίς 'id.' (Gal.); κομμάραι ἢ κομάραι· καρίδες. Μακεδόνες 'shrimps (Maced.)' (H.).
•ETYM Has been compared with ON humarr, LG and MoHG Hummer. However, the variation α/ο points to a Pre-Greek word (which may in turn be a loan from elsewhere). Skt. kamáṭha- [m.] 'turtle' is unrelated in any case. From κάμμαρος, Lat. cammarus was borrowed.

κάμμαρος 2 ⇒κάμαρος.

καμμονίη [f.] 'perseverance, successful defense' (X 257, Ψ 661, APl.), on the mg. see Trümpy 1950: 201f. ◄GR► •ETYM For *καταμονίη, with Aeolic treatment of the preposition, either as an abstract of κατάμονος (Hell.), or with a metrically conditioned change of the suffix for *καμμονή = καταμονή (Hell.), belonging to καταμένειν. See ► κάμμορος.

κάμμορος [adj.] 'unhappy' (Od., A. R.). ◄GR► •ETYM Aeolic for metrically unfit *κατά-μορος (via *κάτ-μορος), a hypostasis for κατὰ μόρον (μόρου) 'who is subject to μόρος, fate'. Beside it exists the older form κάσμορος· δύστηνος 'unhappy' (H.), = *κάσσμορος < *κάτ-σμορος.

κάμνω [v.] 'to toil, labor, build; to get tired, die, be in danger, be in need' (Il.); the euphemistic meaning 'to die' almost only in epic οἱ καμόντες, Att. οἱ κεκμηκότες. ⋖IE *$\acute{k}emh_2$- 'exert oneself, get tired'⋗

•VAR Aor. καμεῖν, fut. καμοῦμαι, perf. κέκμηκα, Dor. (Theoc.) κέκμᾱκα, epic ptc. κεκμηώς.

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, συγ-. As a second member in compounds: ἀ-κάματος 'without fatigue' (Il.). ἀ-κάμας, -αντος 'indefatigable' (Il.); more usual -κμη-τ- (-κμᾱ-τ-), -κμη-το- (-κμᾱ-το-), e.g. ἀ-κμής, -ῆτος 'id.', ἄ-κμητος 'id.', πολύ-κμητος 'prepared with much labor'.

•DER Verbal noun κάματος [m.] 'labor, much demanding labor, fatigue, pain' (Il.); καματώδης 'tiring' (Hes., Pi.), καματηρός 'tiring, tired' (Ion., h. Ven. 246), after ἀνιηρός, etc.; καματηδόν 'with fatigue' (Man.); also the verbal forms καματῶν· κοπιῶν 'weary', ἐκαμάτευσε· μετὰ κακοπαθείας εἰργάσατο 'he labors with perseverance' (H.), to καματάω, -τεύω.

•ETYM Beside the thematic nasal present κάμνω, which is a Greek innovation, Sanskrit has an athematic nasal present: e.g. med. śamnīte 'to exert onself, labor'. The disyllabic root *$\acute{k}emh_2$- is also seen in the ipv. śamīṣva and in the agent noun śamitár- 'who prepares'; Gr. κάματος < *$\acute{k}mh_2$-eto- is a different formation (on the type, see Vine 1998. The thematic aorist ἔκαμον, ἔκαμε is parallelled by Skt. aśamat, both from zero grade *$\acute{k}\dot{m}h_2$-e/o-; the full grade sigmatic aor. áśamiṣṭa (RV) points to an older athematic root aorist *(h_1e-)$\acute{k}emh_2$-t. The Greek zero grade is κμη-, PGr. κμᾱ- < *$\acute{k}mh_2$-C- (in κέκμη-κα, ἄκμητος), which gave Skt. śān-tá- [ptc.]; see Rix 1976: 73. Traces of the root in other languages have not been found with certainty; perhaps in some Celtic nouns, like MIr. cuma 'trouble', cumal 'female slave'. See ►κομέω, ►κομίζω.

κάμπανος [m.] 'weighing-machine, steelyard' (pap. VI[p]). ⋖LW Lat.⋗

•ETYM From Lat. campana.

κάμπη 1 [f.] 'caterpillar, silkworm' (Hp., com., Arist., Thphr.). ⋖?⋗

•COMP πιτυο-κάμπη 'caterpillar of the pine woods, Gnethocampa processionea' (Dsc.; also αἱ πιτΰιναι κάμπαι).

•ETYM Related to κάμπτω, in the sense of 'curve'? However, note Skt. kapanā́ 'caterpillar', Latv. kâpe, kâpars 'larva of an insect, caterpillar'; if cognate with kapanā́, κάμπη was adapted to καμπή, κάμπτω by folk etymology (Frisk). The explanation in Strömberg 1944: 9 is unclear. See Gil Fernández 1959: 147 (who refers to Arist. IA 706b and 709a). The etymology seems doubtful.

κάμπη 2 [f.] 'sea monster' (Epich. apud H., D. S., Nonn.). ⋖PG(V)⋗

•VAR Also κάμπος [n.] in Libya (Lyc.; H.), after κῆτος 'id.'?

•ETYM It has been compared with ἱππο-καμπος. Fur.: 119 mentions κέμμορ· μέγα κῆτος (< *κεμπορ?) and γεμπός· κοῖτος, γεμπύλους τοὺς ἰχθῦς, τὰς πηλαμύδας 'tunnies' (H.); this would show that the word is Pre-Greek.

κάμπτω [v.] 'to bend, curve, turn' (Il., IA). ⋖PG?(V), EUR?⋗

•VAR Fut. κάμψω, aor. κάμψαι, pass. καμφθῆναι (A., Th.; v.l. I 158), perf. pass. κεκάμφθαι (Hp.).

•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐπι-, περι-, συν-; as a first member e.g. in καμψί-πους epithet of Ἐρινύς (A. Th. 791 [lyr.]), mg. uncertain.

•DER Substantives: 1. (ἀνα-, ἐπι-, περι-, συγ-)καμπή 'curve, curvature' (IA) with κάμπιμος 'bent' (E. IT 81, at verse end; after πομπή : πόμπιμος, see Arbenz 1933: 81); ἐπικάμπ-ιος 'forming an ἐπικαμπή, bow, bend', military and architectonical expression (Ph. Bel., Plb.). 2. (ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐπι-, συγ-, etc.)κάμψις 'bow, curving' (IA); 3. καμπτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] "bender, curver", as a military and sports term, 'curve, turning-point of the racecourse' (X., Arist., Herod.) with καμπτήριος (sch.). 4. περικάμπτης 'tergiversator' (gloss.).

Adjectives: 5. καμπύλος 'bent, curved' (Il.; after ἀγκύλος, Chantraine 1933: 250) with καμπύλη [f.] 'crook, crozier' (Ar., Plu.), καμπουλίρ (= καμπυλίς)· ἐλαίας εἶδος. Λάκωνες 'kind of olive tree' (H.), καμπυλότης 'curvedness' (Hp., Arist.), καμπύλλω 'curve' [v.] (Hp.), also καμπυλεύομαι, καμπυλόομαι (medic.), καμπυλιάζω (Phot., Suid.); poetical lengthening καμπυλόεις (AP; Schwyzer 527). 6. ἐπι-, περι-καμπής 'curved', from ἐπι-, περι-κάμπτω. 7. καμπτικός 'flexible' (Arist., Poll.). 8. καμψόν· καμπύλον 'bent, curved' (H.); after γαμψός? (cf. Stang Symb. Oslo. 23 (1944): 46ff.).

•ETYM A non-ablauting verbal stem καμπ-, with primary formations καμπή (and καμπύλος?), and a yod-present κάμπτω. In other languages, we find scattered nominal formations, partly in metaphorical meanings (so that the comparison is often uncertain: Latv. kampis 'curved wood, hook for a kettle', Lith. kam̃pas 'corner, side, hidden place', also 'curved wood at the collar (of a horse)', which remind of Lat. campus 'field' (properly 'curve, depression'?), OCS kǫtъ [m.] 'corner' and a Germanic adj. 'mutilated, lame', e.g. Go. hamfs. Baltic has several words for 'curved, etc.' with u-vocalism: Lith. kum̃pas 'curved', Latv. kùmpt 'become bent', etc.

Lat. campsāre 'to sail around, bend off' was perhaps borrowed from κάμψαι; and from καμπή were borrowed Lat.-Rom. camba, gamba and Alb. këmbë 'leg, foot'; from καμπύλος, Osman. kambur 'hump, humpy' > MoGr. καβούρης. Amantos (apud Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 179) assumes a noun *γάμμα, *κάμμα in Byz. γαμματίζω = κάμπτω, -ομαι.

Most parts of Frisk's discussion have been maintained here, as it nicely illustrates how unreliable the material is: the words adduced with their alternations are rather from a substrate language. Add to this the fact that an IE reconstruction would require a form *kh_2mp-, a root structure that is suspicious. The conclusion can only be that καμπ- is of Pre-Greek or European substrate origin. Cf. on ►γαμψός and ►γνάμπτω, for which the same conclusion is reached.

κάναβος [m.] 'wooden framework around which artists molded wax or clay; block-figure; mannikin; lean person' (Stratt., Arist., Poll., H.). ⋖PG(V)⋗

•VAR Also κάνναβος; κίνναβος (Suid.) [f.l. acc. to LSJ 953], κιναβεύματα· πανουργήματα 'crimes' (H., Phot.; uncertain Ar. Fr. 699).

•DER κανάβιος, -ινος 'belonging to a κ., like a κ.' (AP, H.).

•ETYM On the formation, cf. words in -βος like κάκκαβος, κόλλαβος, σίττυβος (Chantraine 1933: 262); perhaps from ►κάννα 'reed', if properly a 'reed frame'.

However, given the variation ν/νν, the word would be Pre-Greek; note Lat. canaba, cannaba.

κάναδοι [m.] · σιαγόνες, γνάθοι 'cheeks, jaws' (H.). ⊲EUR?, PG?⊳ •ETYM See on γνάθος s.v. ► γναθμός.

καναχή [f.] 'noise, sharp sound' (Il.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •DIAL Dor. -ά.
•COMP As a first member in καναχή-πους, Dor. -χά- 'with noisy feet' (Alcm.).
•DER καναχέω, aor. -ῆσαι (τ 469, Cratin., A. R.), lengthened καναχίζω (M 36, κ 399 v.l., Hes. Sc. 373) [v.] 'to ring, clash' (cf. Schwyzer: 736, Porzig 1942: 231); aor. δια-, ἐγ-, ἐκ-κανάξαι of gurging and gulping sounds (E. Cyc. 152 and 157, Ar., Eup.), κανάξαι acc. to Poll. 10, 85 = τὸ ἐκκενῶσαι ἢ ἐκπιεῖν 'to empty, drink up'; κανάξας· ἐγχέας 'pouring' (H.); καναχηδά 'with noise' (Hes. Th. 367 et al.), -ηδόν 'id.' (D. P., Aret.) and the hapax καναχής (A. Ch. 152 [lyr.], of δάκρυ), καναχός (Nic. Th. 620; of βάτραχοι 'frogs'), both first from καναχέω; καναχισμός (Orac. Chald.) from καναχίζω.
•ETYM Explained as an expressive formation like στοναχή (related to στενάχω; cf. Chantraine 1933: 403), derived from a verb 'to sing, etc.' seen in Lat. canō = OIr. canim, whence names for 'cock' like Gr. ► ἠϊκανός, Go. hana, etc. are derived. Fur.: 343 compares κόναβος and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek.

κάνδαρος [m.?] · ἄνθραξ 'charcoal, coal' (H.). ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM Generally connected with Skt. candrá- 'glowing, light', Lat. candor 'white glow', candeō 'to glow'. This etymology must be wrong: how could a stem form κανδ- ever arise? Fur. 391 connects κάνδαρος with ἄνθραξ (with alternation κ-/ zero), which is not evident. Still, Pre-Greek origin seems certain.

κάνδαυλος [m.] a Lydian meal or sauce (com., Men.). ⊲LW Lydia⊳ •VAR Also κάνδῦλος.
•ETYM Loan from Lydia?

κάνδυς, -υος [m.] a mantle with sleeves, worn by the Persians (X.). ⊲LW Orient.⊳ •ETYM From OP kantu-*: see Szemerényi 1991: 2034f.; also, Happ IF 68 (1963): 99.

κανδύτᾶνες [?] 'chest where precious clothes are kept' ⊲LW Iran.⊳
•VAR κανδυτάναι, κανδύλαι.
•ETYM From OP kandu-dāna-*. See de Lamberterie in DELG Supp. (also RPh. 70), who cites Szemerényi connecting the first member of the Persian word with a root kam-* 'to cover'. Extensive discussion, with various explanations for the second member, in Brust 2005: 290ff.

κάνθαρος [m.] 'kind of (dung-)beetle, Scarabaeus pilularius', also metaph. of a drinking cup, canoe, fish (Strömberg 1943: 123f.), and a women's ornament (IA). ⊲PG, LW Sem.⊳
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἡλιο-, κυκνο-κάνθαρος (com.).
•DER κανθάριον name of a cup (Att. inscr., Plu.); κανθαρίς a beetle, also name of a fish and a plant (Hp., Arist.); κανθάρεως name of a vine (Thphr.; -εως like in ἐρινεώς; see on ► ἐρινεός), κανθαρίτης οἶνος (Plin.), both of the Κανθάριος ἄκρα on Samos (Str.), (also called Ἄμπελος, Redard 1949: 97); κανθαρίας name of a precious stone (Plin.); κανθαρώδης 'like a κ.' (sch.).

•ETYM Not well explained. Connected with the name of the ass (κάνθων, κανθήλιος) by Strömberg 1944: 10f., with the same suffix as in χίμαρος, κίσσαρος, et al. (Chantraine 1933: 226f.). Hardly probable. On the plant name κανθαρίς, ἀντικάνθαρον, see Strömberg 1940: 140. DELG s.v. points out that there are anthroponyms (Bechtel 1917b: 582 and 589) as well as toponyms like Κάνθαρος, a port of Piraeus, and concludes from this that the term may be from Pre-Greek, with is likely. As an Akkadian word kanda/uru- 'cup' exists, it would be a loan in this meaning; see Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 672.

κανθήλια [n.pl.] 'panniers on both sides of the pack-saddle' (Ar., Artem.), also 'curved pieces of wood at the back of a ship', which were used when a tent was drawn up' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also -ιον [acc.sg.] 'rafters' in architecture (IG 2², 463: 73); ὄνος κανθήλιος 'pack-ass' (Pl., com., X.).
•DER κανθηλικός 'belonging to the pack-basket or pack-ass' (pap.). Also κανθίαι· σπυρίδες 'creels' (H.), κάνθων = ὄνος κανθήλιος (Ar., AP), κανθίς· ὀνίς 'dung of an ass' (H.).
•ETYM The relations of these words among each other and to other similar formations are unclear, due to their specialized technical meanings. Formally, we may compare κανθήλια with κειμήλια, γαμήλιος; also note τράχηλος, γαμφηλαί, and other words with a suffix -ηλ-. The form κανθίαι could be another derivation without λ. The form (ὄνος) κανθήλιος 'ass' is secondary to κανθήλια 'pack-baskets' (Debrunner IF 54 (1936): 55); κάνθων and κανθίς could be short forms (like Lat. cabō to caballus). Lat. cant(h)ērius 'castrated stallion', also 'rafters', which has a different suffix, cannot be separated from κανθήλια, -ιος. However, there is no Indo-European etymology; acc. to Deroy Glotta 35 (1956): 190f., it is a Mediterranean word. Fur.: 130 connects it with ἀνθήλιον (Charax), with alternation κ-/ zero, and assumes Pre-Greek origin; he further connects it with κανθίαι· σπυρίδες and with κάθος· σπυρίς (Fur.: 290). See ► κάνθαρος, ► κανθός, ► κανθύλη.

κανθός [m.] 'corner of the eye' (Arist., Nic., Gal.); poet. 'eye' (Hell.); acc. to H. also 'opening in the roof for the smoke, funnel, καπνοδόκη' and 'pot, kettle, χυτρόπους' (Sicilian). ⊲PG⊳ •COMP Hence the hypostasis ἐγκάνθιος 'which is in the κανθός' (Dsc., Gal.) with ἐγκανθίς [f.] 'tumor in the inner angle of the eye' (Cels., Gal.), acc. to Poll. 2, 71 = 'inner corner of the eye'; also ἐπικανθίς 'id.' (Hippiatr., v.l. in Poll. l.c.).
•DER κανθώδης 'rounded' (Call. Fr. 504 conj. Hemsterhuys; codd. καθν-, κυκν-).
•ETYM Not well explained. κανθώδης in Callimachos does not allow us to assume an original meaning 'curve'. It has been compared with Celtic words like W cant 'iron band, brim', Gallo-Rom. cantos*, and a Slavic word for 'corner (of a farm), etc.', e.g. Ru. kut. However, this comparison is problematic, since Gr. -θ- remains unexplained, and because the Slavic words are suspect of western European origin.

The material accumulated by Belardi Rend. Acc. Linc. 8: 9 (1954): 610ff. and Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 209 needs to be sifted. Since there is no IE etymology, and since an IE pre-form is impossible (*$kh_2nd^h$- would have given *καθ-), the conclusion must be that the word is Pre-Greek.

κανθύλη [f.] 'swelling, tumor', only in κανθύλας· τὰς ἀνοιδήσεις. Αἰσχύλος Σαλαμινίαις (Fr. 220) 'swellings' (H., at an alphabetically incorrect place). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also κονθηλαί· αἱ ἀνοιδήσεις (H.).
•ETYM The comparison with a Germanic word for 'ulcer, pus', e.g. OHG gund, Go. gunds 'γάγγραινα', would require that κονθ- is original, or that κανθ- is secondary for *καθ- (which is highly unlikely). Strömberg 1944: 94 derives κανθύλη from the name of the ass (κάνθων, κανθήλιος), which is semantically unconvincing. The variation α/ ο is clearly Pre-Greek, as is the suffixation (Fur.: 201[14]).

κάννα [f.] 'reed, Arundo donax, reed-fence, -mat' (Com., inscr., Plb.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Often plur. Further forms see below.
•DIAL Myc. ko-no-ni-pi /konōni-pʰi/. Ion. κάννη.
•COMP As a first member in κανη-φόρος [f.] 'female carrying a basket' (Ar.), κανηφορ-έω, -ία, -ικός.
•DER 1. κάνης, -ητος [m.] 'reed mat' (Solon. Law in Plu. Sol. 21, Crates Com., D. H.) with καννητο-ποιός (Hippon. 116). 2. κάννηκες· πλέγματα ταρσῶν 'windings of wickerwork' (H.). 3. κανοῦν, Ion. κάνεον, epic also -ειον [n.] 'reed basket, dish' (Il.; substantivized adjective). Diminutive κανίσκος, -ίσκιον (Ar.), κανίδιον (pap.); further κάναστρον (Hom. Epigr., Nicophon, Attica, Crete; cf. on ζύγαστρον), also -αυστρον (like θερμα(ύ)στρα; see ►θερμός), -ιστρον, -υστρον (inscr., pap., Poll.; Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 283) = Lat. canistrum; thence καναστραῖα· κοῖλά τινα ἀγγεῖα 'any hollow vessels' (Suid.); κάνασθον (Naucratis). Cf. also ►κάναβος, ►κάνναθρον, ►κανών.
•ETYM From Babylonian-Assyrian qanū 'reed', which may come from Sumerian-Akkadian gin 'id.', Ugar. qn, Punic qn'. See E. Masson 1967: 47. The word κάννα was borrowed as Lat. canna 'reed, etc.'; see WH s.v. Fur.: 303 points out that κάναθρον, etc. are clearly Pre-Greek formations, so the word may have been of Anatolian origin; note further the Mycenaean form pointing to variantion α/ο, which is also a sign of Pre-Greek origin.

κάνναβις [f.] 'hemp, Cannabis sativa' (Hdt., S., Dsc., Gal.). ◂LW Orient.▸
•VAR Gen. -ιος, -εως. Also κάνναβος (Poll. 10, 176).
•DER καννάβιον 'id.' (Ps.-Dsc., Gp.), κανναβίς, -ίδος [f.] 'dress of hemp', plur. 'hemp seeds burnt and used at a steam-bath' (Hdt., Ephipp. Com.); thence κανναβισθῆναι· πρὸς τὴν κάνναβιν ἐξιδρῶσαι καὶ πυριασθῆναι (H.); κανναβίσκα [n.pl.] 'hemp shoes' (Herod. 7, 58); καννάβινος 'from hemp, hemp-like' (AP); κανναβάριος member of a professional organization = stupparius (Ephesus, gloss.; Wahrmann Glotta 22 (1934): 42f.).
•ETYM Loan of unknown eastern origin, perhaps Scythian or Thracian (Hdt. 4, 74f.); cf. also Sumer. kunibu 'hemp'. From κάνναβις comes Lat. cannabis; the word reached Germanic (OE hænep, OHG hanaf, etc.) before Grimm's law. Fur.: 343 connects it with κόμβος, on insufficient grounds.

κάνναθρον [n.] 'cane or wicker carriage' (X. Ages. 8, 7, Plut. Ages. 19, H., Eust.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κάναθρον.
•ETYM Perhaps from κάννα 'reed' with a suffix -θρο- (cf. Chantraine 1933: 373f.). Lidén 1924: 227ff. assumes a compound from κάννα and a word for 'wagon box' in ►ἄθρας· ἅρμα. Ῥόδιοι (H.), which is highly improbable. The gloss is considered to be corrupt by Latte. On the suffix, see Fur.: 303[39].

κανών, -όνος [m.] 'straight rod, bar, stave or grip to handle the shield, directive, rule, model, etc.' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DIAL Myc. ko-no-ni-pi /konōni-pʰi/.
•DER Diminutive κανόνιον (Ph. Bel., Hero); κανονίς 'ruler, frame, etc.' (Arist., Ph. Bel.); κανονίης [m.] 'straight man, like a rod' (Hp. Aër. 24); κανονικός 'belonging to the κανών' (Hell.); κανονωτός 'provided with κανόνες' (pap.). Denominative verb κανονίζω 'to measure, decide' (Arist.) with κανονισμοί [pl.] (Man.), κανόνισμα (AP), κανονιστικός (Choerob.).
•ETYM Most often connected with κάννα as *'stave of reed'. The variation α/ ο shows that it is a Pre-Greek word. The Semitic etymology by Lewy 1895: 133 (Hebr. qānoeh 'measuring reed, balance') is not to be preferred.

κανωπικόν 1 [n.]? = πιτοῦσσα or πιτύουσα, 'spurge' (Dsc. 4. 165). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κανωπικόν 2 [n.]? 'kind of cake' (pap.). ◂LW Eg.▸ •ETYM Probably derived from the TN Κάνωπος in Lower Egypt. See ►Κάνωπος.

κάνωπον [n.]? 'elderflower, elder bark' (Alex. Trall. 12). ◂?▸ •ETYM No etymology. See André 1956 s.v. canopus.

καπᾶνα [f.] Thessalian word for 'wagon' = ἀπήνη (Xenarch. 11, H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also -η 'crossbar of the wagon (?)' (Poll. 1, 142), καπᾶναι (καπαλαί cod.)· φάτναι 'mangers' (H.).
•DER καπάναξ 'side-piece of the wagon box' (Poll. ibid.; cf. δίφραξ from δίφρος); καπανικώτερα epithet of Θετταλικά (δεῖπνα) in Ar. Fr. 492, in Ath. 9, 418d = ἁμαξιαῖα 'filling a wagon', acc. to H. as an alternative = χορταστικώτερα, ἀπὸ τῆς φάτνης 'more foodful, more plenteous (after φ. = manger)', from καπάνη = κάπη. Unclear καπάνη· τριχίνη κυνῆ 'helmet of hair', καπάνια· ἁρπεδόνες 'cords', καπαλίζει· ζευγηλατεῖ 'drives a yoke' (H.). Perhaps also Καπανεύς PN (Boßhardt 1942: 121)?
•ETYM Assuming an original meaning 'chest, box', a formation in -ᾱνᾱ from ►κάπη, ►κάπτω has been assumed (Chantraine 1933: 206), especially comparing ἀπήνη. However, Kuiper 1956: 213[9] compared ἀπήνη in the light of the alternation κ-/ zero, which would mean that the word is Pre-Greek. This seems most probable. Fur. 224[96] further compares γάπος· ὄχημα. Τυρρηνοί 'wagon (Etruscan)' (H.). καπάνα is further reminiscent of Gallo-Romance capanna (Alessio Studi etruschi 19 (1946-1947): 175[34]).

κάπανοι [m.] · ἀλφίτων εἶδος 'barley-groats' (Phot.). ◁?▷
•DER One connects the PN Καπανᾶς, L. Robert 1963: 171[4].
•ETYM Unknown.

καπέτις, -ιος [f.] a Persian measure, 1/48th of an ἀρτάβη (Polyaen. 4, 3, 32) = χοῖνιξ (H.). ◁LW Iran.▷
•DER Also καπίθη [f.] a Persian measure = 2 χοίνικες (X. An. 1, 5, 6) = 2 Att. κοτύλαι (H.).
•ETYM Persian words, so a connection with κάπτω is improbable. They are certainly not from a Persian cognate of κάπτω, as DELG assumes. Others reference Skt. kapaṭī [f.] 'two handfuls (?)' (lex.), on which see Mayrhofer EWAia 3 s.v. and Lagarde 1866: 198. Frisk (Supp.) refers to MoP qafiz (also Arab.), a measure.

κάπετος ⇒ σκάπετος.

κάπη ⇒ κάπτω.

κάπηλος [m.] 'merchant, innkeeper' (IA; on the mg. cf. on ἔμπορος). ◁PG?(S)▷ •DER Secondarily as an adjective = καπηλικός (A., Com. Adesp., D. H.). Fem. καπηλίς 'female merchant or innkeeper' (com., pap.), καπήλισσα (sch.); καπηλεῖον 'shop, tavern' (Att.); καπηλικός 'belonging to a κάπηλος' (Pl., Arist.); καπηλεύω [v.] 'to be a retail trader' (IA) with καπηλεία 'retail trade' (Pl., Arist.) and καπηλευτικός = καπηλικός (Ph Lg. 842d).
•ETYM Derivation from κάπη 'crib, manger' has been considered, assuming that the word could mean 'chest' ("who sells from a chest"); highly improbable. As loanwords, Lat. caupō 'innkeeper', etc. have been compared (WH s.v.). Fur.: 257 considers Hitt. ḫappar 'purchase, price' as a comparandum. As there is no etymology, the word could be Pre-Greek (the suffix does occurs in Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 115).

καπνός [m.] 'smoke, steam' (Il.). ◁PG?, EUR?▷
•DIAL Myc. ka-pi-ni-ja.
•COMP καπνο-δόκη 'flue (of a chimney)' (IA), δύσ-καπνος 'with an unpleasant smoke' (A., Thphr.).
•DER Substantives: 1. κάπνη (com.), short form of καπνοδόκη; also = καπνιαῖος λίθος (PHolm.; see below); 2. καπνία for κάπνη (Moer. 292, gloss.; cf. Scheller 1951: 56); 3. καπνίας [m.] (a) a wine that got its special taste by fumigation (com.), (b) a kind of jasper (= καπνίτης), after its color (Dsc., Plin.), (c) of the poet Ekphantides (Ar. V. 151), διὰ τὸ μηδὲν λαμπρὸν γράφειν 'because he wrote nothing clearly' (H.). 4. καπνίτης [m.] name of a stone, after the color (Alex. Trall.; Redard 1949: 55), καπνῖτις [f.] plant name, 'fumitory, Fumaria officinalis', after its smoke-colored leaves (Ps.-Dsc.), also called κάπνιος and καπνός (Strömberg 1940: 27).
Adjectives: 5. κάπνε(ι)ος (scil. ἄμπελος) [f.] 'vine with smoke-colored grapes' (Arist., Thphr., pap.); 6. καπνώδης 'smokey, smoke-colored' (Arist., Thphr., Plb.); 7. καπνηλός 'like smoke' (Nic. Th. 54); 8. καπνιαῖος λίθος 'smoke-colored quartz' (PHolm.).
Denominative verbs: 1. καπνίζω 'to smoke, produce smoke, be smoke-colored' (Il.), aor. καπνίσ(σ)αι (also with prefix ἀπο-, περι-, ὑπο-), κάπνισις 'exposure to smoke' (Arist.), κάπνισμα 'incense' (AP), καπνιστήριον perhaps 'steam-bath' (inscr. Priene); 2. καπνόομαι 'to vanish into smoke' (Pi., E.); 3. καπνιάω 'to smoke a bee-hive' (A. R. 2, 131), after θυμιάω; 4. καπνείω 'to make vanish into smoke, burn' (Nic. Th. 36). Beside καπνός, there is an aorist ἀπὸ (δὲ ψυχὴν) ἐκάπυσσεν 'he breathed forth' (X 467; κάπυσσεν Q. S. 6, 523), with a present καπύσσων· ἐκπνέων 'breathing out' (H.); the supposed base form seems preserved in κάπυς· πνεῦμα 'breath, spirit', also κάπος· ψυχή, πνεῦμα (H.). Uncertain is the gloss καπυκτά· πνέοντα 'breathing' (H., at an alphabetically wrong place); is it connected with καπύσσων? Cf. ►ἀλύω beside ἀλύσσω. The stem with -υ- also in ►καπυρός 'dry, etc.'; uncertain is the appurtenance of ►κέκηφε · τέθνηκε 'is dead' (H.), ►κεκαφηότα (Hom.).
•ETYM A pre-form kwap-nó- has been assumed in view of the comparison with Lith. kvãpas 'breath, smell', kvẽpti, 1sg. kvėpiù 'to gasp, breathe', Latv. kvêpt, 1sg. kvêpstu 'to smoke, smell'. This group is close to Go. af-hvapjan 'to suffocate, extinguish', af-hvapnan 'to extinguish', but this has root-final -p instead of expected -f or -b. It is unclear whether Lat. vapor 'vapor, smoke' is cognate with these words, with its v- instead of expected qu-. Schrijver 1991: 260f. assumed a laryngeal in view of the Latvian word and posited $*kuh_2ep$-, but it is improbable that such a form would result in Gr. *κϝαπ-. Frisk remarks: "Man hat somit in den verschiedenen Sprachen mit zahlreichen, nicht unerwarteten Entgleisungen zu rechnen". At any rate, Mycenaean does not have a -w-. This has been explained as a dissimilation PGr. $*k^w - p > *k - p$, cf. Schwyzer: 302 for more examples, but most etymologies adduced there are doubtful.
Indo-European origin is improbable. kap- is unprobelematic for Pre-Greek; an u-stem (κάπυς) is frequent in Pre-Greek (see Heubeck 1961: 31-39), as is a suffix -n- after consonant (Pre-Greek: Suffixes). However, in view of the similarity of the Balto-Slavic material and of Lat. vapor, it may be best to assume a European substrate word.

κάππα [n.indecl.] the tenth letter of the Greek alphabet (Callias apud Ath. 10, 453d). ◁LW Orient.▷ •ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. kaph. See Schwyzer: 140.

κάππαρις [f.] 'caper plant, Capparis spinosa' (Hp., Arist.). ◁LW Orient.▷
•VAR Gen. -εως, -ιος.
•DER Diminutive καπ(π)άριον (pap.). κάππαρος [m.] a fish (PCair. Zen. 83, III[a]), after the way of preparation, see Strömberg 1943: 88.
•ETYM Berger MSS 9 (1956): 13ff. connected the word with MoP kabar 'id' and Burušaski čopuri, čopəri.

κάπρος [m.] '(wild) boar', also epithet of σῦς (Il.); as a fish name = 'Capros aper' (Arist.; after the sound, Thompson 1947 s.v., Strömberg 1943: 101). ◁?▷

•DER Diminutive καπρίδιον, -ίσκος (com.); fem. κάπραινα of a lewd woman (com.); καπρία [f.] 'the ovary of a rutting sow' (Arist.); καπρών 'pigsty' (Delos III^{a}); (σῦς) κάπριος = (σῦς) κάπρος (Il., A. R.); κάπριος 'having the form of a boar' (Hdt. 3, 59), κάπρειος 'belonging to a boar' (Nonn.).
Denominative verbs: καπράω 'to go to the boar', of a rutting sow (Arist.), also καπριάω (Arist. v.l., Ar. Byz.), on the formation see Schwyzer: 731f.; καπρίζω 'id.' (Arist.); καπρῴζομαι 'to rut', of the boar (Sciras Com.).
•ETYM Agrees with a Italo-Germanic word for 'he-goat', Lat. caper, U cabru 'caprum', and in Germanic e.g. ON hafr. An uncertain trace of the word in Celtic is supposed in Gallo-Rom. cabrostos* 'honeysuckle, privet'. The newly created Greek name of the he-goat, τράγος, made another use possible for kapro-*. The word was probably first used appositively with σῦς, as in Homer. Lat. aper 'boar' took the vowel of caper, but is further unrelated.
Briand 1997: 91-115 analyzes the attested forms as continuing an old adjective 'devouring (greedily)' from the root kap-* 'to take' (Lat. capiō 'id.', G happen 'to swallow, snatch'). The root was used for a snatching way of eating (Hom. κάπη 'crib', κάπτω 'to gulp down', cf. τράγος 'goat' beside τρώγω), and the adjective lexicalized in the separate languages, where it came to denote different male animals. See DELG Supp. If the root was Indo-European, it must have been kh$_2$p-, not kap-; alternatively, it was borrowed from the European substrate. See ►κάπτω.

κάπτω [v.] 'to gulp down' (Hdt., Herod., com., Arist.). ◄IE keh$_2$p-* 'seize' (?)► •VAR Fut. κάψω, perf. -κέκαφα, -κέκαπται.
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, ἐγ-, ὑπο-.
•DER (ἀνά-)καψις 'swallowing' (Arist.); κάμματα [pl.] 'what is supped up, sacrificial cake' with καμματίδες [pl.] 'laurel leaves, for supping up' (Nicocl. 2); ἔγκαφος 'what you have in your mouth' (Eup. 330). Further κάπη [f.] 'crib' (Θ 434, δ 40, S. Ichn. 8, Lyc. 95), κάπηθεν (Suid.).
•ETYM The present κάπτω might be identical with Lat. capiō 'to take' and the Gm. verb Go. hafjan 'to raise'. In use and meaning, however, it corresponds much better to popular MoLG (= MoHG) happen 'to swallow', MoDu. happen 'to snap'. These belong to IE keh$_2$p-* 'to seize, etc.', which has several variants. The form κάπη 'crib' is rather an old formation than a direct derivation from κάπτω (cf. κώπη).

καπυρός [adj.] 'dry, brittle, crackly, clear-sounding' (Hp., Epich., Antiph., Arist., Theoc.). ◄PG?, EUR?►
•DER καπύρια, -ίδια [pl.] 'kind of cake' (pap.); καπυρόομαι 'to be dried, singed, crackly' (Str., Orib.), καπυρίζω 'make noise, drink' with καπυριστής 'drinker' (Str.).
•ETYM Derived from the u-stem in *καπύω (κάπυς), so properly 'giving smoke, burnt'; on the meaning, see Legrand REGr. 20 (1907): 10ff. and Bogiatzides Ἀθηνᾶ 26 (1914): 109ff. See ►καπνός.

καπύσσαι ⇒ καπνός.

κάρ [n.] indecl. 'head', only in ἐπὶ κάρ 'on its head, topsy-turvy' (Π 392) and ἀνὰ κάρ 'upwards' (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 79). ⇒ κάρᾱ.

κάρᾱ [n.] 'head' (trag., Cratin., Eup.). ◄IE ḱrh$_2$-(e)s-n-* 'head'► •VAR κάρη (epic).
•DIAL Myc. ka-ra-a-pi [instr.pl.] /krā^{h}at-p^{h}i/.
•DER As a first member in καρᾱ-τομέω 'to behead' (E., J.) with καράτομος 'beheaded' (S., E.), apparent basis καρατόμος 'beheading' (Lyc.), cf. on δειροτομέω s.v. ►δέρη; καρηβαρέω (-άω) 'to feel heavy in the head, be sleepy, have a headache' with καρηβαρία, -ίη, etc. (Hp., Arist.); from there Lat. caribaria > Fr. charivari, (WH 1, 854); on ►καραδοκέω s.v. Cf. ►κράσπεδον, ►κρησφύγετον, ►κρήδεμνον.
Other forms: A. recent analogical formations to κάρᾱ, κάρη: dat. τῷ κάρᾳ (A., S.), κάρῃ (Thgn.); κάρης, -ην (Call., Nic.), κάρᾱν (Anacreont.).
B. Older disyllabic forms: epic καρή-ατος, -ατι, plur. -ατα; also κάρη-τος, -τι; a new nom.sg. κάρηαρ (Antim.) was made to καρήατα.
C. monosyllabic forms: κρᾱ́-ατος, -ατι, pl. -ατα; usually contracted (also trag.) κρᾱτός, -τί, plur. κρᾱτα (Pi. Fr. 8); further isolated forms: κράτεσφι (Κ 156; probably sg.), κρᾱ́των (χ 309), κρᾱσίν (Κ 152), κρᾱτας (E.); κρᾱτα accus.sg. (θ 92, trag.), nom.sg. (S. Ph. 1457); new nom.sg. κράς (Simm. 4).
D. κάρᾱ (antevoc.) as a nom.pl. (h. Cer. 12), κάρᾱ [pl.] (?, Sannyr. 3). On ►κάρηνα see s.v. and below.
•ETYM The origin of the Greek forms has to be judged by the Skt. word for 'head'. The oblique forms are, e.g., śīrṣṇ-ás [gen.sg.], adverbial abl. śīrṣa-tás, which represent a zero grade root śīrṣ-n- < ḱr̥h$_2$-s-n-*, i.e. an s-stem enlarged with -n-. The disyllabic nom.-acc. śíras- (also Av. sarah-) derives from ḱr̥h$_2$-os*. Therefore, it appears that Gr. κρᾱ́ατος represents earlier krāhatos* (which may also be found in Myc. ka-ra-a-pi) < ḱr̥h$_2$s-n̥t-os*, which by contraction gave κρᾱτός (κρητός, acc. to Zenodotus). The antevocalic form krāsn-* is continued in ►κρᾱνίον. The explanation of the Greek disyllabic forms has to start from the plur. κάρηνα < karasna* < ḱrh$_2$-es-n-h$_2$, which formed the basis for the creation of the singular forms καρήατος, -ατι (for earlier karahatos, -ti), if these were not innovated from the sg. κάρη. This nom.-acc.sg. may go back to analogical *κάρασ-α (like ὄνομα); from κάρη, the forms κάρη-τος, -τι were constructed.
Beside the old s-stem, there are isolated forms without -s-: ἐπὶ κάρ 'on its head', ἔγκαρος, ἴγκρος· ἐγκέφαλος 'situated in the head' and κατὰ (ἀπὸ) κρῆθεν 'from the head down' (Hom., Hes.), ►κρήδεμνον 'head-band'. The explanation is debated: κατὰ κρῆθεν (whence ἀπὸ κρῆθεν) may stand for κατ' ἄκρηθεν (see especially Leumann 1950: 56ff.), but this seems unncessary; ἔγκαρος has been interpreted as a learned innovation of κάρη after κεφαλή : ἐγκέφαλος; on ►κρήδεμνον, see s.v. An s-less form κάρ is supported by Arm. sar 'hight, top' < ḱr̥h$_2$r-o-*. Very extensive treatment by Nussbaum 1986 (review by Beekes Kratylos 34 (1989): 55-59). Perpillou KZ 88 (1974): 230-234 analyzes the form krh$_2$-s-r/n-* 'head' and discusses the possibility of a suffix -u̯er, -u̯en-. See ►καρόω 1, ►καρώ, ►καρωτόν, ►κέρας, ►κράνος, ►κριός.

κάρα · αἴξ ἥμερος Πολυρρήνιοι· ὑπὸ Γορτυνίων...ἄλλοι δὲ ἡ συκῆ. Ἴωνες τὰ πρόβατα, καὶ τὴν κεφαλήν 'tame goat (Polyrrenian); others: fig-tree (Gortynian); cattle, head (Ionian)' (H.). ◄?►

•ETYM The gloss is partly corrupt; see Latte. The meaning αἴξ seems to be confirmed by καρανώ; see on ► κάρηνα.

κᾱ́ραβος [m.] 1. 'a prickly crustacean' (Epich., Ar., Arist.; cf. Thompson 1947 s.v.), metaph. a light canoe (EM); 2. 'a horned beetle' (Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR σκορόβυλος· κάνθαρος 'kind of beetle' (H.).
•DER καραβίς 'kind of sea-crab' (Gal., Sch.), καράβιον = ἐφόλκιον 'small boat towed after a ship' (H. s.v. ► ἐφόλκια, sch.); probably also καραβαία· δίκρουν ξύλον 'forked timber' (H.). Further κηραφίς = καραβίς (Nic. Al. 394), secondary after the names in -φ(ο)-, and η an epic imitation for α?
•ETYM Cohen BSL 27 (1927): 100 gives several similar Arabic words. Boisacq s.v. suggests that -βος is Macedonian for Gr. -φος < IE *-b^ho-.
Fur. (index) connects it with several other words: καρβάρεοι· κάραβοι (H.), additional prenasalized forms καράμβιος (Ar. Byz. Epit. 9, 11; v.l. Arist. HA 551b 17), ► κεράμβυξ (Nic. Fr. 39, H.; s.v.), and κεράμβηλον (H.); the suffix -ηλο- is well-known in Pre-Greek. These forms cannot be derived from κέρας, as assumed by Frisk. Fur. further posits *σκαραβαῖος on the basis of Lat. scarabaeus, which seems unavoidable. The form σκορόβυλος perhaps continues *σκαραβ-υλ-, where both α's turned to -ο- before the -υ- in the following syllable (Fur. 340 discusses the phenomenon, but did not see that it operated here); thus, we have evidence for σκαραβ-. Then there is ► γραψαῖος (Diph. Siph. apud Ath. 3, 106d) = κάραβος, which Fur. assumes to stand for *γαρψαῖος (doubtful). The word ► σκορπίος does not seem to belong here.
In conclusion, it is clear that we are dealing with a Pre-Greek word *(s)karab- with several of its usual variants. From κάραβος came Lat. cārabus 'crab', also 'small boat' (also Romance, e.g. MoFr. caravelle) and a Slavic word for 'ship', e.g. Ru. korábl'.

κάραγος [m.] · ὁ τραχὺς ψόφος, οἷον πριών 'raw sound, like a saw' (H.). ◂GR?▸ •ETYM Related to κέκρᾱγα, like τάραχος (-χή) to τέτρηχα. See ► κράζω. Alternatively, is it Pre-Greek?

καρᾱδοκέω [v.] 'to await the outcome of something (μάχη, πόλεμος, etc.), wait for something, take care' (Hdt., E., Ar., X., Plb.); in Hdt. perhaps an Atticism; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 3^{1}. ◂GR▸ •COMP Also with ἀπο-, δια-.
•DER (ἀπο-)καραδοκία 'eager expectation' (Aq., Ep. Rom., Ep. Phil.).
•ETYM On the use of καραδοκέω, cf. Aly Glotta 15 (1927): 104f. Acc. to the traditional assumption, properly 'expect something with the hand strechted out', which is neither factually nor formally very convincing. Given δωρο-, ξενο-δοκέω, etc. (ὁδοι-δοκέω after ὁδοι-πορέω), one would expect καρᾱ- to be the object of δοκέω. DELG remarks that κάρᾱ 'head' may have been used in the sense of 'end, outcome' here, for which we may compare κραίαινω 'to accomplish'.

καράκαλλον [n.] 'cap' (AP, Edict. Diocl.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER καρακάλλιον (pap. V-VI^{p}).
•ETYM From Lat. caracalla. Probably originally Gaulish; see WH s.v.

κάραννος •VAR κάρανος, etc. ⇒ κάρηνα.

καρβᾶν [?] 'outlandish, foreign'. ◂LW Orient.▸
•VAR Acc. -ᾶνα (A. Supp. 129 [lyr.], H.), κάρβᾱνος (A., Lyc.).
•DER καρβάζειν, καρβαΐζειν, καρβανίζειν = βαρβαρίζειν 'to behave like a foreigner' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Acc. to Kretschmer Glotta 31 (1951): 250, it is from the toponym Qarbana (= Herakleion) in Egypt, whence the captive Danaeans escaped to the Peloponnese. Acc. to Hommel Phil. 98: 132ff., καρβάν is identical with Hebr. κορβάν (NT), properly 'sacrificial gift', which became an epithet for Phoenician merchants, but this is hardly convincing; see E. Masson 1967: 107. Perhaps there is a relation with the name of the east wind in Cyrene, Κάρβας. Arist. (Vent. 973b) has ἀπὸ τῶν Καρβανῶν τῶν κατὰ Φοινίκην. Phoenician, acc. to Thphr. Vent. 62. Acc. to Neumann 1961: 92f., it is from Hitt. kureu̯ana- 'foreign state that is not a vassal' (on the meaning, see Puhvel s.v.).

καρβάτινος [adj.] 'made of skins' (Ph. Bel.). ◂EUR▸ •VAR καρβάτιναι [f.pl.] 'shoes of unprepared leather' (X., Arist.); also καρπάτινον· ἀγρο<ι>κικὸν ὑπόδημα μονόδερμον 'one-layer farmer's sandal' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like δερμάτινος, etc.; it has been compared with words for 'shoe, etc.' in Balto-Slavic, Germanic, and Celtic, e.g. Lith. kùrpė 'shoe', Cz. krpě 'id.', ON hriflingr, OE hrifeling 'id.', OIr. cairem 'shoemaker', but the formations differ among each other. Further, Lat. carpisc(u)lum 'kind of shoe' (IV^{p}), which is considered to be a loanword because of its late attestation. In yet other respects, these words seem to be technical loans; cf. Beekes 2000: 28. From καρβάτινος came Lat. carpatinus 'of raw leather'. See ► κρηπίς.

κάρβις [?] · μαστροπός 'pimp' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown. DELG notes: cf. Lat carissa?

κάρδαμον [n.] 'nose-smart', 'Lepidium sativum' (X., Ar.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR Also παρδαμάλη (Phot.).
•COMP As a first member in καρδάμωμον, haplological for καρδαμ-άμωμον [n.] 'cardamom' (Thphr., Dsc.; on the formation Schwyzer: 263).
•DER καρδαμίς = κάρδαμον (Nic., Plu.), after κεδρίς, etc. acc. to Chantraine 1933: 343; καρδαμίνη 'id.', also = σισύμβριον, etc. (Dsc.; Chantraine 1933: 204); καρδαμάλη 'Persian cake from κάρδαμον' (Trypho apud Ath.; as ἀμυγδάλη, etc.); καρδαμίζω "to talk cress", i.e. 'to talk nonsense' (Nic. Th. 617). By-form καρδάνη 'id.' (gloss.), after βοτάνη?
•ETYM Among the plant names in -αμον (Schwyzer: 494, Chantraine 1933: 133), there are several clear loanwords, and the same holds for κάρδαμον. Doubtful suggestion in Strömberg 1944: 38: from *κάρδος = κράδος 'twig' in καρδίδιον, ἀνα-, κατακάρδιον. The solution of Grošelj Razprave 2: 41 is no better: related to ► σκόροδον. The suffix -αμον is known from Pre-Greek (Fur.: 64^{269}). The word has been connected with Hitt. karšani 'an alcalic plant' (Fur.: 252).

καρδία [f.] 'heart', metaph. 'soul, spirit' (Il.), also 'cardiac orifice of the stomach' (Hp., Th.), 'heart of wood' (Thphr., pap.; Strömberg 1937: 125ff.). ⊲IE ḱēr(d), gen. ḱrd-(i)os 'heart'⊳ •VAR Ion. -ίη, epic mostly κραδίη.
•COMP As a first member, e.g. καρδι-αλγέω 'to suffer from heartburn', together with -ής, -ία, -ικός (Hp.); very often as a second member, e.g. θρασυ-κάρδιος 'with daring spirit' (Il.).
•DER κάρδιον [n.] 'heart-shaped ornament' (Delos III[a]), καρδικός 'belonging to the heart' (pap.), καρδιᾶτις [f.] Pythagoraean name of the number of five (Theol. Ar.); καρδιώσσω, Att. -ώττω = καρδιαλγέω (Epich., Hp., Ar., Arist.) with καρδιωγμός (Hp.), also καρδιάω (καρδιόωντα Nic. Al. 581); καρδιόω 'to revive' (LXX). Beside it κῆρ (epic), κέαρ [n.] (Pi., B., trag.), κῆρι [dat.], κηρόθι [adv.] 'in the heart', together with κηραίνω [v.] 'to be afraid' (E., Max., Ph.).
•ETYM The word καρδία may be compared with other body parts in -ία, like κοιλία, ἀρτηρία, λαυκανίη. The starting point is a monosyllabic neuter κῆρ < IE ḱēr(d)* with ablaut: cf. Lat. cordis < IE ḱr̥dés*, which would have resulted in Gr. *καρδός or *κραδός. We often find an i-stem, which is probably old, in the genitive: Hitt. kardiaš [gen.] next to nom. ke-ir /kēr/. The i-stem also appears in Lith. širdìs (but this is expected for an old root noun), Arm. srt-iw [instr.] beside sirt [nom.] < IE ḱērd*, and in Skt. the -i is found in the nom.-acc. hā́rdi, while the gen. is hr̥dás, like Lat. cordis.
Disyllabic κέαρ was created by poets as a false archaism of κῆρι, based on ἔαρ (ἦρ) : ἦρι 'spring'. On the accent of κῆρ, see Schwyzer: 377 and Berger MSS 3 (1953): 3. Further, e.g., OIr. cride < ḱr̥d-i̯o-, OCS srъdь-ce beside OCS srěda 'middle' < PSlav. serdà*, Go. hairto, gen. hairtins (transformed into an n-stem like augo 'eye', auso 'ear', etc.), Skt. hŕ̥d-aya- [n.] = Av. zərəd-aē- [n.]. The Indo-Iranian word shows a secondary ǰ^h-* instead of ć-* < IE ḱ-, probably by contamination with another word, while the original ć- is preserved in śraddhā́- 'to trust'. See now the collection of different formations in Wodtko et al. 2008: 417ff. Cf. also on ► κραδάω.

κάρδοπος [f.] 'kneading-trough' (com., Pl., Hom. Epigr., Nic.; for the fem. gender, cf. the instances in Schwyzer 1950: 34[2]; on καρδόπη [Ar. Nu. 678] see ibid. 28[1]). ⊲PG⊳ •DER Diminutive καρδόπιον (Delos II[a]); καρδοπεῖον 'cover of a trough' (H.; cod. -ιον), also 'muzzle' (Ar. Fr. 301); also κάρποδος (H.), with metathesis?
•ETYM No clear etymology. Fur.: 257[38] suggests Hitt. ḫarduppi with uncertain meaning. No doubt a Pre-Greek word.

κάρηνα [n.pl.] 'heads, tops, mountain tops' (Il.). ⊲IE ḱerh$_2$-* 'head, horn', ḱrh$_2$-es-n-h$_2$*⊳ •VAR Secondary sing. κάρηνον (h. Hom.), κάρᾱνον (A. Cho. 396 [lyr.], Mosch. 1, 12).
•DER Hence κάραννος· κεκρύφαλος, κρήδεμνον 'headband', Aeol.; καρανώ· τὴν αἶγα. Κρῆτες 'goat (Cretan)' (H.); Lacon. κάρᾱνος 'chief' (X. HG 1, 4, 3) is a Persian loanword from kārana-* 'leader of the kāra-', acc. to Testen Glotta 69 (1991): 173f.; unclear is Κόραννος· βασιλεὺς Μακεδονίας probably an appellative. Denominative verbs: καρανόω 'to crown, complete' (A.); *καρανίζω 'to behead' in καρανιστῆρες ... δίκαι σφαγαί τε (A. Eu. 186), καρανιστὴς μόρος (E. Rh. 817).
•ETYM From karahna* < ḱrh$_2$-es-n-h$_2$*, which is also continued in Skt. śīrṣā́. OHG hirn(i), MDu. hersene 'brain' (from ḱerh$_2$snio-*) also belong here. The alternating r-stem is found in καράρα· κεφαλή 'head' (H.) < karasra*, and probably also in Lat. cerebrum 'brain' < keras-ro-* < ḱerh$_2$-(e)s-ro-* (but see also Nussbaum 1986: 243). Further relatives are ► κάρᾱ, ► κρανίον, ► κραίνω; see also ► κέρας.

καρθμοί · κινήσεις 'movements' (H.). ⇒ σκαίρω.

κᾱρίς [f.] name of small crustaceans; see Thompson 1947 s.v. ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Gen. -ίδος (Anan., old com.), -ῖδος (middle com.); also κουρίς, κωρίς (Epich., Sophr.).
•DER καρίδιον (Arist.), καριδάριον (Anaxandr.); καριδόω (τὸ σῶμα) 'to move (the body) like a καρίς; to wriggle, twist about like a shrimp' (Anaxandr.).
•ETYM Ath. 3, 106b says ἀπὸ τοῦ κάρα· τὸ πλεῖστον γὰρ μέρος τοῦ σώματος ἡ κεφαλὴ ἀπηνέγκατο, which is clearly folk-etymological. Ehrlich KZ 39 (1906): 556f. derived κᾱρίς from *καρσίς and κουρίς, κωρίς from *κορσίς, but there is no evidence for such a form (cf. on ► κόρση). Acc. to Frisk, it rather belongs to κάραβος as a popular short form. κουρίς and κωρίς are unexplained; Chantraine (see DELG) pleads for association with κώρα, κούρα 'girl', but this is hardly understandable. The variation may well point to a Pre-Greek word. Cf. Ačaṙyan 1937: 4, who considers καρίς together with Arm. karič 'scorpion' as an Asiatic loan.

καρκάδων, -ωνος [?] 'the price paid to Charon by the dead for their passage' (Phot., Suid.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

καρκαίρω [v.] only in Υ 157 κάρκαιρε δὲ γαῖα πόδεσσιν ὀρνυμένων, explained in antiquity as ἐκραδαίνετο, σείετο 'trembled', or as ἐψόφει 'roared' (details in Fraenkel 1910: 132[1], though with a wrong explanation). ⊲IE kerH-* 'praise (loudly)'⊳ •VAR ἐκάρκαιρον· ψόφον τινὰ ἀπετέλουν 'produced a noise' (H.).
•ETYM A yod-present with intensive reduplication (Schwyzer: 647), of onomatopoeic origin. Sanskrit has an athematic reduplicated form car-kar-ti 'to mention with praise'. Not related to ► κῆρυξ.

κάρκαροι [adj.] · τραχεῖς 'coarse, rough' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Seems to agree with Skt. karkara- 'hard', but this is a late form; cf. Mayrhofer EWAia 3 s.v. On the other hand, cf. ► κάρχαρος and ► καρκίνος. Fur.: 130 adduces ► κέρχνος 'raw voice, hoarseness' and 'raw surface', which would be a Pre-Greek variant, with the interchanges α/ ε and κ/ χ.

κάρκαρον [n.] 'prison' (Sophr. 147). ⊲LW Lat.⊳
•VAR Also -ος (D. S. 31, 9), -ον or -ος (Vett. Val. 68, 26); κάρκαροι· δεσμοί 'fetters' (H.), also κάρκαρα, explained i.a. with μάνδραι 'enclosed space', but the gloss is corrupt.
•ETYM From Lat. carcer; see WH s.v.

καρκαρίς [?] · ξύλων ἢ φρυγάνων φορτίον 'timber; a load of firewood' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM DELG supposes it is a mistake for καγκανίς; see ► κάγκανος.

καρκίνος [m.] 'crab' (Epich., IA), metaph. 'ulcer, pair of pincers, kind of shoe, etc.', also name of a constellation (Scherer 1953: 167f.). On the mg. also Thompson 1947 s.v. ◂PG(V)▸ •DER Diminutive καρκίνιον (Arist., Hp.), also 'kind of slipper' (Herod.), καρκινάς, -άδος [f.] (Gal., Ael.); καρκινίας [m.] name of a precious stone (Plin.; after the color; like καπνίας, etc., Chantraine 1933: 94); καρκινευτής 'crab-catcher' (Artem. 2, 14; after ἁλιευτής, ὀρνιθευτής et al.); καρκινώδης 'crab-like' (Arist., medic.). Denominative verb καρκινόω 'bend, crook one's fingers' (Antiph., Thphr.; cf. Strömberg 1937: 65), -όομαι 'become cancerous, suffer from cancer' (Hp.) with καρκίνωμα 'cancer' (medic.), καρκίνωσις 'formation of dangerous growth' (Aët.); καρκίνωθρον (codd. -αθρον, -ηθρον) plant name, 'Polygonum aviculare' (Dsc. 4, 4; after Strömberg 1940: 147 properly "Krebsmittel", but rather after the roots spreading like a crab.
•ETYM Clearly connected with Lat. cancer 'crab', Skt. karkaṭa- 'id.', but not all morphological details are clear. Like Lat. cancer from car-cro-*, καρκίνος may also have undergone a dissimilation of r-sounds, and later added the suffix -ινο-. The etymological connection with Skt. karkaṭa- is doubted in Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 64 and by Fur.: 129. A loan from καρκίνος is Skt. karki(n)- 'the crab in the zodiac' (perhaps karka- 'crab' [lex.] is a back-formation).
Connection with the adjective for 'hard' (see ► κάρκαρος, κράτος) was deemed possible by Frisk, but this is a substrate word, like the present entry. Fur. connects it with κάρχαι· καρκίνοι, καὶ <κ>όχλοι. Σικελοί (H.), not mentioned in Frisk or DELG, which is completely self-evident. The interchange κ/ χ proves Pre-Greek origin. Fur. doubts the appurtenance of Lat. cancer < karkro-*, and prefers to connect it with γάγγραινα, γάγγλιον. For καρκίνος, he also adduces (op.cit. 130) the PN Κερκίνος and the HN Κερκινεύς (Thessaly), with *κερκιν-. The suffix -ινο- can also be Pre-Greek (Fur.: 129[54]; Pre-Greek: Suffixes).

κάρνη [f.] · ζημία 'punishment' (H.). ◂?▸ •VAR αὐτόκαρνος· αὐτοζήμιος 'self-punished' (H.).
•ETYM It has traditionally been compared with Lat. carināre 'insult, ridicule' (Enn., gramm.) and (without an n-suffix) several Celtic, Germanic and Balto-Slavic words: OIr. caire 'blame', OHG harawēn 'mock', Latv. karinât 'tease', Ru. kor 'insult, scoff'; perhaps also ToAB kärn^{ä}- probably 'to strike, afflict'. Note that καρν- can hardly be explained in IE terms (*r̥ would give ρα), which means that the word may be Pre-Greek. The word κάραννος hardly belongs here, although glossed as ζημία by H. (cf. DELG), or *καρανίζειν 'to behead' in καρανιστήρ, -τής, which is derived from κάρᾱνον (see ► κάρηνα). See ► κερτομέω.

κάρνος [?] · φθείρ, βόσκημα, πρόβατον 'louse, beast, cattle' (H.). ◂PG?; GR?▸ •ETYM In the meaning φθείρ, it is related to κόρις, etc. (see also ► κάρον 1 and καρός); in the sense 'βόσκημα, πρόβατον' perhaps with the group of ► κέρας? Fur.: 371, however, connects it with ἀκαρί 'mite'. On Κάρνειος [m.] epithet of Apollo on the Peloponnesus, see Nilsson 1941(1): 532f. and Robert REGr. 80 (1967): 31ff.

κάροινον [n.] name of a sweet wine (Edict. Diocl.: καροίνου Μεονίου; Hippiatr., gloss.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 19 assumes a loan from Semitic: Akk. khurunnu 'sesame wine' (first from Hitt.); this is doubtful. Note οἶνος καρύϊνος (Gal.; from Maeonia); also, ἀβόλλης, χιτὼν καρόϊνος (pap.), perhaps for καρύϊνος 'nut-brown'?

κάρον 1 [n.] plant name 'cumin, Carum carvi' (Theb. Ostr. 135 [I^{p}], v.l. Dsc. 3, 57). ◂?▸
•VAR Also καρώ [f.] (Dsc. l.c., Orib., uncertain Ath. 9, 371e; popular formation acc. to Chantraine 1933: 116).
•ETYM Perhaps from κάρ· φθείρ (H.), because a corn of cumin would resemble a louse.

κάρον 2 [n.] · μεγάλη ἀκρίς 'big locust' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κάρνος (see Fur.: 371).
•ETYM See Gil Fernández 1959: 148. Fur.: 341 compares ἀκορνός = ὀκορνός (H.), and further πάρνος. Thus, it is clearly a Pre-Greek word.

καρός [gen.] only in τίω δέ μιν ἐν καρὸς αἴσῃ (I 378), indicating something useless. ◂?▸
•ETYM The word καριμοίρους also perhaps belongs here, explained by H. in two ways: τοὺς ἐν μηδεμιᾷ μοίρᾳ, ἢ μισθοφόρους 'serving for wages'. Most often interpreted as "(cut off) piece, futile" and connected with κείρω, but perhaps rather from κάρ 'louse' (H.), which acc. to Frisk would be more visual and expressive. Moreover, we cannot obtain καρ- from the root of κείρω, which did not have a laryngeal.

καρόω 1, -όομαι [v.] 'to plunge into a deep sleep, stupefy, anasthesize' (Hp., Antipho Soph., Arist.), med. 'to be stupefied'. ◂?▸
•COMP Also with ὑπο-.
•DER κάρωσις 'heaviness in the head, drowsiness' (Hp.), καρωτικός 'stupefying' (Arist., Gal.), καρώδης 'id., drowsy, soporific' (Hp.; on the formation cf. ὑπνώδης and the verbal derivations in -ώδης in Chantraine 1933: 431); καρωτίδες (ἀρτηρίαι) [pl.] 'carotid arteries' (medic.), also sg.; deverbal κάρος [n.] 'torpor, drowsiness' (Arist., Phld., A. R.), cf. καρός· κωφός, οἱ δὲ σκοτόδινος 'deaf, numb; dizzy' (H.).
•ETYM The word is often taken as a denominative of κάρα, κάρη 'head': "to have a heavy head", like καρηβαρέω. This is doubtful. The verb was originally intransitive, and later joined the class of factitives in -όω. Cf. καρωθείς· τὴν κεφαλὴν σεισθείς, μεθυσθεὶς ἢ βαρηθείς 'shaken in the head, drunk or heavy' (H.).

καρόω 2 [v.] 'to estimate'. ◂?▸
•VAR Only ptc. aor. καρούσαντες (IG 9(2), 1229: 25 [Thessal. II^{a}]) and καροῦσθαι· ὠνεῖσθαι 'to buy', καρούμενος· ὠνησάμενος 'bought' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 206f.

καρπαία [f.] name of a mimetic dance in arms of the Thessalians (X. An. 6, 1, 7, Ath. 1, 15f.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR Also καπρία· εἶδος ὀρχήσεως 'kind of dance' and κάρπεα· ὄρχησις Μακεδονική 'Macedonian dance' (H.).
•ETYM The description of the dance in Ath. l.c. (and in Max. Tyr. 28, 4 without mention of the name) does not allow a comparison with καρπός 'fruit' or with καρπός 'root of the hand'. The variation -αια / -εα / -ια points to substrate origin; see Pre-Greek: Suffixes: -αι- / -ε(ι)-.

καρπάλιμος [adj.] 'swift, eager' (Il., h. Merc. 225, Ar. Th. 957 [lyr.], A. R.), epithet of πόδες, of γένυες (Pi. P. 12, 20). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Adv. καρπαλίμως (Il.).
•ETYM On the formation, see Arbenz 1933: 28f. The etymology is unknown. Schrader KZ 30 (1890): 473 connected it with καρπός 'root of the hand' as "handy", with further connection to OHG hwerban 'turn', etc.; see ►καρπός 2. Solmsen KZ 30 (1890): 602 does not connect it with καρπός and starts directly from the meaning 'to turn'. Others recognize the base form in κάλπη 'trot' (with dissimilation of λ - λ to ρ - λ). A first syllable καρπ- can hardly be of IE origin.

κάρπασον [n.] name of a plant with poisonous sap: 'white hellebore, Veratrum album' (med., Orph.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DIAL Myc. women's names Ka-pa-si-ja, Ka-pa-ti-ja.
•COMP ὀπο-κάρπασον (Dsc.; Lat. opocarpathon) = ὀπὸς καρπάσου 'sap of the κ.' (= Lat. sucus carpathi, Plin.), after ὀπο-βάλσαμον; ξυλο-κάρπασον (Gal.) after ξυλο-βάλσαμον (Risch IF 59 (1949): 287).
•ETYM Lat. carpathum with th instead of -σ- points to foreign (Mediterranean) origin. Both forms already existed in Mycenaean. A form with dental is found also in the name of the island Κάρπαθος, which was named after the plant (Bogiatzides Ἀθηνᾶ 29 (1917): 72ff.); the TN Καρπασία (Cyprus) also belongs here. The s-form also entered Latin (carpasum, carbasa). Derivation from καρπός (Brugmann Sächs. Ber. 51 (1899): 185) is not feasible. The variation θ/σ is typical for Pre-Greek and points to a palatalized phoneme -t^y-.

κάρπασος [f.] 'a kind of fine flax' (D. H. 2, 68, sch. Ar. Lys. 736), 'cotton' (Peripl. M. Rubri 41). ⊲LW Ind.⊳
•VAR Also -α [n.pl.] 'sails from linen' (AP 9, 415, 6; after ἱστία). Also κάλπασος (pap.).
•COMP ψευδο-κάρπασος [m.] = ►κάχρυ (Ps.-Dsc.; s.v.).
•DER καρπάσιον 'Spanish flax' (pap. III^p), καρπάσινος 'made of κ.' (LXX, Str., D. H.) = Lat. carbasinus. λίνον Καρπάσιον 'from K. on Cyprus' (Paus. 1, 26, 7).
•ETYM Reminiscent of Skt. karpā́sa- [m.] 'cotton bush', but the exact relation is unknown. The word κάρπασος is usually thought to be a loan from Indic (cf. also Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.), but acc. to Porzig ZII 5 (1927): 272ff., the origin is a Mediterranean or Anatolian language. Lat. carbasus, -a was borrowed from κάρπασος, -α (either directly or indirectly); see WH and Fohalle 1925: 172-175. There is no connection with the plant κάρπασον. On 'cotton', see also ►βαμβάκιος.

καρπήσιον [n.] name of an aromatic plant from Anatolia, 'Valeriana Dioscoridis' (Gal., Alex. Trall.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR καρπησία = κάρπασος (Paul. Aeg.; not -ον as given by Frisk).
•ETYM On the meaning, see Thiselton-Dyer Journal of Phil. 34 (1915): 310f.; on the ending -ήσιος, see Chantraine 1933: 41f. The etymology is unknown. Fur.: 349 compares κέρπαθος (Uran. 12), a kind of incense. The word can hardly be IE; thus, probably Pre-Greek.

καρπός 1 [m.] 'fruit, fruits of the earth, corn, yields' (Il.). ⊲EUR⊳ •DIAL Myc. ka-po /karpos/.
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. καρπο-φόρος, ἄ-καρπος.
•DER Diminutive καρπίον (Thphr., pap.); adjectives: κάρπιμος 'giving fruit' (trag., com., Hell.; cf. Arbenz 1933: 45 and 47), καρπώδης 'rich in fruits' (imperial period). Denominative verbs: 1. καρπόομαι 'to reap fruits, exploit' (IA), -όω 'to offer, produce fruit' = 'to bring (burnt) sacrifices' (A., LXX) together with κάρπωμα 'fruit, sacrifice' and κάρπωσις 'use, profit, sacrifice', καρπώσιμος (Hermipp. Hist.); cf. Bechtel 1921(1): 449 and 1921(2): 550. 2. καρπίζομαι (-ίζω Paros; Hell. inscr.) 'to reap fruits' (E., Hell.), -ίζω 'to fertilize' (E. [lyr.]); καρπισμός 'yields' (Arist., Thphr.). 3. καρπεύω, -εύομαι 'to reap fruits' (Hyp., Hell.) with καρπεία 'profit, income', καρπεῖον 'id.', also = καρπός.
•ETYM Commonly compared with the root kerp-* of Lat. carpō 'to pluck (off)', Lith. kerpù 'to cut with scissors', Hitt. karp(i̯e)-^{zi} 'to take away, lift, pluck', which would imply that καρπός originally meant 'what is plucked or reaped'. Another comparandum is the Germanic word for 'autumn', e.g. OHG herbist (karp-isto-* "best time to pluck"). However, the assumption is that the α in καρπός may represent vocalic r̥. Yet, in classical Greek, r̥ would normally have given -ρα-, and the Mycenaean form proves that there was no r̥* in Proto-Greek, as its normal reflex between two stops is Myc. /-or-/ (see García Ramón Minos 19 (1985): 195-226). This has led to the assumption that PGr. karp-* is a secondary zero grade, but this seems unlikely. DELG posits an "a populaire", which means that the word is a loan, perhaps from a European substrate? The connection with ►κρώπιον is probably wrong (the word is Pre-Greek).

καρπός 2 [m.] 'wrist' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•COMP As a first member in καρπό-δεσμον, -δεσμος, -δέσμιον 'bracelet' (pap., Luc.), hypostasis ὑπο-κάρπιος 'under the wrist' (Aristaenet.).
•DER καρπωτός 'reaching to the wrist' (LXX); καρπίζομαι [v.] 'to be taken by the hand', i.a. as a sign of manumission, ἐπὶ ἐλευθερίᾳ = 'adseror in libertatem' (gloss.); καρπιστής 'emancipator' (Arr.), καρπισμός, -ιστία 'vindiciae' (gloss.).
•ETYM Has been connected with a Germanic verb for 'turn, etc.', e.g. Go. ƕairban, OHG hwerban, hwerfan 'to turn (intr.), whirl' (see on ►καρπάλιμος). In this case, the basic form would be kʷr̥po-, from an IE root kʷerp- 'to turn' (cf. Schwyzer: 302 for the dissimilation kʷ - p > k - p*). However, the fact that the verb is limited to Germanic makes the connection uncertain. Michler Herm. 94 (1966): 314-319 assumes that it is the same word as καρπός 'fruit'; see the remarks in Frisk Supp. s.v.

κάρρον [n.] 'wagon with four wheels, car' (LXX, pap., Edict. Diocl.). ◄LW Lat.►
•VAR Also -ος (Ed. Diocl.).
•COMP As a first member in καρρο-πηγός, -ποιός (gloss.).
•DER Diminutive καρρίον (gloss.) and καρρικὸς γόμος 'load of a wagon' (Palmyra II^{p}).
•ETYM From Lat. carrus (the Greek gender is after ἅρμα; late Lat. also -um), which itself comes from Celtic. Further details in WH s.v. carrus.

κάρσιον [adj.] · πλάγιον 'sideways' (H.). ◄GR► •VAR Also -ίως (Suid.).
•ETYM Taken from ἐγ-, ►ἐπικάρσιος.

κάρτα [adv.] 'strongly, very' (Ion., trag.). ◄GR► •ETYM From *καρτύς = κρατύς (cf. καρτερός, κάρτιστος); see on ►κράτος. On the ending -α, see Schwyzer: 622f.; on the ablaut type, see Ruijgh 1980: 189-198.

καρτάζωνος [m.] Indian word for the rhinoceros (Ael, N.A. 16, 20). ◄LW Iran.► •ETYM To be corrected to *καργάζωνος; cf. MoP karyadān. See Benveniste 1929: 371-376.

καρταῖπος [n.] 'larger cattle, beasts' (Gortyn). ◄GR► •VAR Plur. καρταί-ποδα (Gortyn) like τετρά-ποδα (sing. τετράπος Gortyn).
•ETYM Innovation of msc. *καρταί-πως for καρταί-πους (Pi.) = κραταί-πους 'with strong feet' (Hom. Epigr.). It also bears a short form, κάρτην (for -ταν)· τὴν βοῦν. Κρῆτες (H.); see Bechtel 1921, 2: 787, Fraenkel Glotta 35 (1956): 86ff., and Fraenkel 1956a: 101; however, the gloss is probably corrupt (see Latte s.v. and p. 815).

κάρταλλος [m.] 'basket with pointed bottom' (LXX, Hell., Ph., H.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Rarely -αλος.
•DER Diminutive καρτάλλιον (Hell.).
•ETYM Technical or popular word in -αλλος (cf. Chantraine 1933: 245ff.), which was formerly connected with a root k(e)rt- 'turn' (Pok. 584), "aber im einzelnen dunkel" (Frisk). It was also supposed in ►κύρτος. However, the variant with single -λ- rather points to a Pre-Greek word, and this would not be surprising, given the meaning. DELG and Fur.: 352 suggest to connect καρταλάμιον and κερτύλλιον.

καρτός [adj.] 'cut', epithet of πράσον 'onion', κρόμμυον 'garlic'; τὸ καρτόν 'chive' (Dsc., Gal., Gp.); also of clothes, perhaps '(finely) cut' (IG 2^2, 1514: 39f.; of χλανίς, χλανίσκιον). ◄GR► •VAR καρτοί· κεκουρευμένοι 'who have had the hair cut' (H.).
•ETYM Zero grad verbal adjective of ►κείρω. For the connection with onion, cf. MoHG Schnittlauch 'chive' from schneiden 'to cut', and Knoblauch 'garlic', from OHG klobo-louh, related to OE clufu 'onion' and OHG klioban 'to split'; cf. also Lat. sectīle porrum 'chive'. The vocalization καρτ- is analogical after the full grade κερ-.

κᾰρῡ́κη [f.] name of a Lydian 'soup of blood and spices' (Pherecr., Ath., Plu., Hdn.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -ύκκη.

•COMP As a first member in καρυκο-ειδής (Hp.), -ποιέω (Ar.).
•DER καρύκινος 'κ.-colored', i.e. 'dark red' (X.); denominative verbs: 1. καρυκεύω 'to provide with κ., prepare' (Alex., Men.), also 'to mix, confound' (Erot., H.), with καρυκεία (Ath.), καρύκευμα (Poll., comm. Arist.); 2. καρυκάζειν· ταράττειν 'to agitate' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Frisk suggested Lydian origin; but the variation points to a Pre-Greek (= Pre-Antolian) word; see Fur.150[38]. The structure καρ-υκ- fits the picture of Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek: Suffixes).

κάρυον [n.] 'nut' (Epich., Ar., Thphr.). ◄PG(V)►
•COMP καρυο-ναύτης 'who sails in a nut' (Lyc.); καρυό-φυλλον 'dried flower-bud of the clove, Eugenia caryophyllata' (medic.), acc. to Maidhof Glotta 10 (1920): 11 folk-etymological adaptation of a loan (Skt. kaṭuka-phala-).
•DER 1. καρύα [f.] 'walnut-tree', especially 'hazel, Corylus avellana' (S., LXX, Thphr., etc.; on the gender Schwyzer 1950: 30). 2. Diminutives: καρύδιον (Philyll. 19) with καρυδόω 'castrate', καρύδωσις (Hippiatr.); καρυΐσκος (LXX). 3. Adjectives: καρύϊνος 'of nuts, nut-brown, etc.', -ώδης, -ηρός 'nut-like' (Hell.); καρυωτός 'with nut-like hump or fruit' (= 'date-tree'), καρυῶτις [f.] 'kind of date' (Hell.); substantive καρυΐτης 'kind of Euphorbia' (Dsc.; Strömberg 1940: 53, Redard 1949: 72). 4. Adverb: καρυηδόν 'like nuts' (medic.). 5. Verb: καρυατίζω 'play with nuts' (Ph.; after the verbs in -ατίζω). A lengthened plural form in καρυήματα· κάρυα. Λάκωνες 'nut (Lacon.)' (H.; after τραγήματα et al.; Chantraine 1933: 178).
•ETYM Several words have been compared, but they all differ from κάρυον and from one another: Lat. carīna 'ship's keel' (since Enn. and Plaut.), 'shell of a nut' (Plin.); Skt. karaka- [m.] '(shell of the) coconut' (lex.), 'jar for water'. For Lat. carīna, a Greek loan (from καρύϊνος = *'like a nut-shell' > 'ship's keel'?) has been supposed (WH s.v.); for karaka-, the priority of the meaning 'coconut' beside 'water-jar' is doubted by Mayrhofer EWAia 3: 59 (later form).
Beside κάρυον, we find ἄρυα· τὰ Ἡρακλεωτικὰ κάρυα (H.), which points to a Pre-Greek word (interchange κ-/ zero; Fur.: 391). The connection with a group kar- 'hard' (Pok. 531f.) is completely hypothetical.

κάρφω [v.] 'to dry up, wither, wrinkle' (Od.). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR Aor. κάρψαι, fut. κάρψω.
•COMP Also with κατα-, ὑπο-.
•DER 1. κάρφος [n.] 'arid stalk, twig, halm, hay' (IA); diminutive καρφίον (Dsc.), καρφηρός 'consisting of arid stalks' (E. Ion 172; cf. αὐχμηρός, αὐστηρός et al., Chantraine 1933: 232f.), καρφίτης 'id.' (AP), καρφώδης 'full of κ.' (gloss.), καρφεῖα [n.pl.] = κάρφη [pl.] (Nic. Al. 118); καρφόομαι (AP) = καρφύνεσθαι· ξηραίνεσθαι, φθείρεσθαι 'to dry up, perish' (H.); see Fraenkel 1906: 294. 2. κάρφη [f.] 'hay' (X., Arr.). 3. καρφαλέος 'arid' (Il.), like αὐαλέος; perhaps from κάρφος, cf. Chantraine 1933: 253f. 4. κατακαρφής 'withered' (Nic. Fr. 70, 9).
•ETYM There is no correspondence in the other IE languages to a zero grade thematic root present κάρφω (does κάρφος stand for older *κέρφος?). A widespread group in Balto-Slavic and Germanic has been adduced, e.g. Ru. koróbit' 'to curve, bend', refl.

'to writhe', beside which (with anlauting s-) skórbnut' 'to writhe', Lith. skrèbti, 1sg. skrembù 'to get a thin crust, get stiff', MoIc. herpa-st 'to draw together convulsively', ON skorpna 'writhe, wither', etc., from a root IE (s)kerb^h-, (s)kreb^h- (Pok. 948f.). Within Greek, we also find the glosses κορφῶς· ἐλαφρῶς 'light, small' and κέρβαλα· ἀσθενῆ 'weak' (H.). The problem with this Indo-European etymology is the consistent α-vocalism of the Greek words. The comments by Frisk are illustrative ("Die expressive Wortgruppe hat offenbar lautliche Entgleisungen und Verschränkungen erlitten"), as are those of DELG ("Les rapprochements proposés par les étymologistes ne donnent satisfaction ni pour la forme ni pour le sens"). It seems, then, that the word is non-IE and it may well be Pre-Greek. In this context, note the vocalism of κορφῶς.

καρχαλέος [adj.] 'arid, scorching, biting, sharp' (Φ 541 [v.l. καρφ-], Nic. Th. 691 [v.l. καρφ-], A. R.). ◂?▸
•ETYM A cross of κάρχαρος and καρφαλέος? DELG remarks that the oldest sources attest to the sense 'arid', which could mean that the readings with -φ- are to be preferred. See ►κάρφω, ►κάρχαρος.

κάρχαρος [adj.] 'biting, sharp, raw' (Alcm. 140, Lyc., Opp.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR With reshaped ending καρχαρέος (EM).
•COMP καρχαρόδων (-ους), -οντος 'with sharp teeth' (Il., Hes., Ar., Arist., Thphr.; cf. Sommer 1948: 93).
•DER καρχαρίας [m.] 'kind of shark' (Pl. Com., Sophr.; cf. Thompson 1947 s.v., Strömberg 1943: 45).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic reduplicated formation (Schwyzer: 423; cf. Tichy 1983: 174[20]), which has been compared with Skt. khara- 'hard, raw, sharp', MoP xār(ā) 'rock, thorn'; however, Skt. kh- does not correspond to Gr. -χ-. Acc. to Leumann 1950: 156, κάρχαρος was taken from Hom. καρχαρόδοντες. An unaspirated form appears in ►κάρκαροι· τραχεῖς καὶ δέσμοι (H.).
Blanc REGr. 107 (1994): 686-693 thinks that the word is connected with χάραξ 'pointed pole' and χαράσσω 'to sharpen, engrave, etc.'. Fur.: 130 rejects the IE comparison (see Mayrhofer EWAia 3: 139). The comparison with κάρκαροι rather points to Pre-Greek origin; Fur. refers to Urart. ḫarḫar 'heap of stones', Arm. karkar̄ 'slippery rock'.

καρχήσιον [n.] 'a drinking vessel which is narrower in the middle', metaph. 'masthead, top', also 'cage or chamber in a torsion engine' (Sapph., Pi., IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR -άσιον (Pi.).
•DER καρχήσιος [m.] 'halliard of a ship, rope in general' (Gal.).
•ETYM Foreign word of unknown origin; cf. Schwyzer: 470, Chantraine 1928: 3, and Hermann Gött. Nachr. (1943): 1f. Borrowed as Lat. carchēsium (see Friedmann 1937: 20ff.), whence Sp. carquesia, Ital. calcese > MoFr. calcet. The word could be Pre-Greek.

καρώ [f.] 'cumin, Carum carvi' (Dsc., Gal., Orib.). ◂PG?▸
•DER καρωτόν [n.] 'carrot' (Ath. 9, 371e? Uncertain); Lat. carota (Apic.).

•ETYM A form of the word κάρον. Derived from κάρη 'head', like κεφαλωτόν 'kind of onion' from κεφαλή, by Frisk. However, the form in -ώ seems Pre-Greek.

-κάς adverbial suffix. ⇒ἑκάς.

κασαλβάς, -άδος [f.] 'strumpet' (Ar.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR κασσαβάς (EM).
•DER κασάλβιον 'brothel' (sch. Ar. Eq. 1825 v.l.), κασαλβάζω (Ar., Hermipp. Com.). Also κασωρίς with κασωρεύω (Lyc.) and κασωρῖτις 'id.' (Hippon., Antiph.), κασώριον (Ar. Eq. 1285) = κασωρικὸς δόμος (uncertain conj. in Hippon. 74); κασαύρα· κασωρίς, πόρνη 'strumpet, prostitute', also κασαυράς, with κασαυρεῖα [pl.] (H.). Short form κάσσα (Lyc.).
•ETYM Vulgar words. There seems no reason whatsoever to connect it with κασᾶς 'blanket'. The form κασ-ωρ- continues κασ-αυρ- (a well known development in Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 301[32]). In turn, the form κασαυρ- may continue κασαβ-, with β varying with υ, ϝ. The relation between κασαλβ- and κασαβ- is unclear; Fur.: 305f. thinks that the λ is secondary, but he gives only little evidence. I am inclined to think that the λ is old, and suggest that κασαλβ- originates from kasal^w-*, with a labialized phoneme l^w that may easily have become w > b.

κασᾶς [m.] 'horse-cloth' (Agatharch., X. Cyr.). ◂LW Orient.▸
•VAR Acc. -ᾶν, acc.du. -ᾶ. Also κασῆς (PTeb.), also κάσσος (Hdn. 1, 208), acc. to H. ἱμάτιον παχὺ καὶ τραχύ, περιβόλαιον 'thick and coarse cloth, covering cloth', and κάς· ... δέρμα 'skin' (H., PLond. 2, 402 V 5).
•COMP As a first member in κασ(σ)ο-ποιός (pap., Ostr.).
•DER κασωτός epithet of ἐσθής (Diog. Oen.).
•ETYM An oriental loanword; cf. Hebr. kissē' and k^{e}sūṯ, properly 'cover, over-garment' (Cuny MSL 19 (1915-16): 193f. and Nyberg in Björck 1950: 295). Borrowed from Greek as Lat. casula; see Kramer AfP 45 (1999): 192-204 and Kramer AfP 46 (2000): 62-64.

κασία [f.] 'cassia, Cinnamomum iners', a kind of cinnamon (Sapph., Melanipp., Hdt., Thphr.). ◂LW Orient.▸
•VAR Ion. -ίη (rarely -σσ-).
•DER κασσίζω 'to smell or taste cassia' (Dsc.).
•ETYM An oriental loanword; cf. Hebr. q^{e}ṣī'āh, Assyr. kasîa. Originally Austro-Asiatic (Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 250 after Gonda). Cf. E. Masson 1967: 48f. and Welles 1934: 342.

κασίγνητος [m.] 'brother (of the same mother)' (Il.). ◂IE kmt-i-* + ǵnh$_1$-to-* 'born together'▸ •VAR κασιγνήτη [f.] 'sister, cousin' also Corc., Cypr., Lesb. (cf. Bowra JHS 54 (1934): 65), Thess. κατίγνειτος [m.].
•COMP αὐτο-κασίγνητος (Il.), -ήτη (κ 137), πατρο-κασίγνητος, -ήτη 'uncle, aunt' (Hom.), ματρο-κασιγνῆται [pl.] 'uterine sister' (A. Eu. 962); συγ-κασιγνήτη '(own) sister' (E. IT 800).

•DER Short form (see below) κάσις, -ιος [m., f.] 'id.' (trag., Call., Nic.), σύγ-κασις '(own) sister' (E. Alc. 410 [lyr.]). Also κάσιοι (for -ιες?)· οἱ ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ἀγέλης ἀδελφοί τε καὶ ἀνεψιοί. καὶ ἐπὶ θηλειῶν οὕτως ἔλεγον Λάκωνες 'brothers and cousins who are from the same band; the Laconians also say it in the case of females' (H.); cf. Leumann 1950: 307, where κάσις, κασίγνητος are questionably taken from poetical language. Unclear are κασεν (Lacon. Knabeninschr.; see Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 270ff., Schwyzer: 625[5] [for καθ' ἕν?]) and καινίτα· ἀδελφή, καινίτας· ἀδελφοὺς καὶ ἀδελφάς (H.), perhaps Cyprian < κασιγνητ- (with itacism)? See von Blumenthal 1930: 22.
•ETYM From kmti-ǵnh$_1$-to-*, so 'born together', i.e. from the same mother. On κασι- < *κατι-, see on ► καί. See Ruijgh 1957: 137f and Beekes 1969: 219f.

κασκάνδιξ [?] · ἡ γηθυλλίς 'kind of onion' (H.). ◁PG(S)▷ •ETYM It has been connected with σκάνδιξ, -ῑκος 'chervil', σκάνδυξ, -ῡκος (v.l. Dsc. 2, 138), assuming reduplication and dissimilation of σκ - σκ (Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 1: 856, Schwyzer: 260). The word is Pre-Greek, in view of the a-vocalism and the suffixation.

κασκός [m.] · ὁ μικρὸς δάκτυλος 'small finger' (H.). ◁?▷
•VAR Also κακκός 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

κάσμορος · δύστηνος 'unhappy' (H.). ⇒ κάμμορος.

Κασσάνδρα [f.] daughter of Priamos (Il.). ◁IE (s)kend-* 'raise', ḱeNs-* 'order'▷ •DIAL Ion. -η. Also Κασάνδρα (first syllable always long), Κεσάνδρα (Cor., Tarent. vases.), Κατάνδρα (Att. amphora). On the forms Sommer 1948: 189f. Cf. also Myc. ke-sa-do-ro /Kessandros/, ke-sa-da-ra /Kessandra/.
•ETYM Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 8 (1957): 272-274 suggested derivation from a root κασ- in κέκασμαι. DELG Supp. suggests to connect the Myc. PN ke-sa-me-no and the root ḱeNs-*.
García Ramón 1992a follows Heubeck in connecting κέκασμαι, but reconstructs a root (s)kend-* for this form. The name would be a Motionsbildung to Kassandros, which is then a τερψίμβροτος compound, i.e. kn̥d-ti-*, which we find in Καστι-άνειρα and Κασσ-ᾱ́νωρ, the group -ti̯- yielding -σσ-. The Myc. PNs in /Kess-/, on the contrary, would be derived from the root keNs-*, and are not cognate.

κασσίτερος [m.] 'tin' (Il.). ◁PG▷
•VAR Att. καττίτερος.
•COMP As a first member in κασσιτερο-ποιός 'tinner' (Ptol.).
•DER κασσιτέρινος (καττι-) 'made of tin' (Att. inscr., Arist.); Κασσιτερίδες νῆσοι "the tin-islands", probably South-West of Britain (Hdt. 3, 115, Str.); κασσιτερᾶς [m.] 'tinner' (pap.); κασσιτερόω 'tin' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Elamitie origin has been suggested, from kassi-ti-ra* "coming from the land of the Kassi" (whence Κασσίτιρα island in the Indian Ocean [Dion. apud St. Byz.]?). Further, Celtic names like Cassi-velaunus were also connected, with the Κασσιτερίδες νῆσοι giving their name to the metal (cf. e.g. Κύπρος: copper), or vice versa. More recently, Freeman Glotta 75 (1997): 222-225 pleaded for Near Eastern origin, referring to Κασσίτερα in Steph. Byz.
The Greek word spread widely: Lat. cassiterum (after ferrum, aurum et al.), OCS kositerъ, Skt. kastīra-, Arab. qazdir, etc. The group σσ / ττ is typically Pre-Greek, so the word would have come from Greece or Western Anatolia, like the word for 'lead', ► μόλυβδος.

κασσύω [v.] 'to stitch, sew together like a shoemaker' (Nic. Fr. 85, 6). ◁PG▷ •DIAL Att. καττύω (com., Pl.).
•COMP Also with ἐν-, ἐπι-, παρα-, συν-.
•DER κάσσυμα (Hp.), κάττυμα (com.) 'sole of a shoe', καττύς [f.] 'piece of leather' (Ar. Fr. 285).
•ETYM The form καττύς is not the basis (as per Kretschmer Glotta 1 (1909): 52f.), but rather a back-formation from καττύω. The "foreign phoneme" σσ / ττ, in combination with the a-vocalism, shows Pre-Greek origin.

κάστανα [n.pl.] 'sweet chestnuts' (Mnesith. apud Ath. 2, 54b, Gal. Dsc. v.l.). ◁PG?(S), LW Anat.?▷ •VAR Also κάστανοι (Gal.); sing. κάστανον (Gp.), -ος (H. s.v. καρύαι), καστανίαι (Dsc.).
•COMP As a second member in βαλανο-κάστανον = βάλανος καστανικός (thus Gal.) and βολβο-κάστανον 'earth-nut' (Alex. Trall.).
•DER καστάναια, -εια [pl.] = κάστανα (Att. inscr.), καστανέη 'chestnut tree', καστανεών 'chestnut forest' (Gp.), καστανικός (Gal.; see above), καστανάϊκὸν κάρυον (Thphr.); Καστανὶς αἶα land in Anatolia (Nic. Al. 271; cf. Καστανέα = πόλις Μαγνησίας EM).
•ETYM The η in καστηνοῦ (gen.) 'chestnut-tree' (Nic. Al. 269) is unclear. An Anatolian word? Except for the TN mentioned, cf. Arm. kask 'chestnut', kaskeni 'chestnut-tree'. From κάστανον, -άνεια comes Lat. castanea (cf. e. g. picea), whence OHG chestinna, and, via new borrowing, MoHG Kastan(i)e. Further, see WH s.v. castanea. Fur.: 389 has a variation κ / τ, but there is no Pre-Greek material for this (the k in Armenian may be due to assimilation). The variation -αια / -εια may, however, be a Pre-Greek feature (Pre-Greek: Suffixes 6. -αι-/-ε(ι)-).

κάστον [n.]? · ξύλον. Ἀθαμᾶνες 'timber (Athamanian)' (H.). ◁PG?▷
•ETYM Fur.: 164 compares ἄκαστον· ἡ σφενδαμνος 'maple', noting that the hard wood of this tree is excellent for building; he further compares κόστον 'wooden part of a carrier' (343). Several other proposals can be found in Frisk.

κάστωρ, -ορος [m.] 'beaver' (Hdt., Hp., Arist.). ◁?▷
•DER καστόρ(ε)ιος 'belonging to the beaver' (Pi., X., Dsc.), καστόρ(ε)ιον [n.] 'castor (= Bibergeil)' (pap., Plu.); καστορίδες [f.pl.] 'Laconian race of dogs, initially elevated by Castor' (AP, Poll.), 'beaver' (Opp., Ael.); καστορίζω 'to be like castor' (Dsc., Vett. Val.).
•ETYM Since Kretschmer 1909:121-3, it has been assumed that the name Κάστωρ, who was known as σωτήρ of women, was transferred to the beaver, presumably because of the medicinal effect of castor for women's diseases. This idea has been uncritically taken over, and in fact Kretschmer gives no specific argument. Gantz 1993: 323-328, who discusses the Dioskouroi rather extensively, mentions nothing about a relation with the beaver, so Kretschmer's idea should be abandoned.

Schrader-Nehring 1917: 138 point out that the animal no longer existed in Greece; the word would be foreign. It is first mentioned in Hdt. 4, 109 in the North Pontic area, which is close to the supposed homeland of the Indo-Europeans, so the word could in principle be inherited. A Pre-Greek word for 'beaver' may have been λάταξ. κάστωρ was borrowed by Latin, and thence it spread to the other European languages. From καστόρ(ε)ιον comes Skt. kastūrī [f.] 'musk'.

κασύτας [?] · Συριακὸν βοτάνιον 'Syriac plant' (H.). ◂LW Sem.?▸
•VAR Also καδύτας (Thphr. CP 2, 17, 3) 'Cassyta filiformis'.
•ETYM From Arab. kašūth; cf. Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 19. Fur.: 256 remarks that the assibilation to -συ- does not prove anything, and that the plant probably came from Anatolia.

κασωρίς ⇒ κασαλβάς.

κάτα [adv., prep.] 'down(wards), against, along, through, over, across, concerning' (Il.). ◂IE kmt-* 'down, with, along'▸ •VAR As a prep. with gen. and acc.
•DER Also καται- in καται-βαταί (ν 110), καται-βάτης epithet of Zeus, etc. (Thera, Melos, Thasos, trag.); cf. ► καταῖτυξ.
•ETYM Identical with Hitt. kattan [adv.] 'below, underneath', katta [postpos.] 'along with' (for further distinction in Old Hittite, see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.); the old Celtic word for 'with', e.g. OW cant, OIr. cét-, may belong here, too. The IE base form is then kṃt-, possibly with further connection to IE kom in Lat. cum, etc. (see ► κοινός). The by-forms καται- and Arc. κατύ are best explained as analogical after παραί and ἀπύ.

καταδίχιον [n.] name of a vase (IG 14, 427: I, 15, Tauromenion). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Hypercorrect form of *καδδίχιον. See ► κάδος.

καταῖτυξ, -υγος [f.] name of a leather helmet without φάλος or λόφος (K 258). ◂?▸ •ETYM Formally reminiscent of ► ἄντυξ. The explanation by the sch. παρὰ τὸ κάτω τετύχθαι· λόφον γὰρ οὐκ ἔχει is useless, as it is clearly constructed from the text; see Trümpy 1950: 45. A loan, acc. to Bechtel 1914 s.v.; Semitic connection proposed by Lewy KZ 55 (1928): 29f., unconvincing according to Frisk.

κατ' ἄκρας •VAR Ion. κατ' ἄκρης.
•ETYM See ► ἄκρος; on κατ' ἄκρηθεν, see ► κάρᾱ.

καταρράκτης [m.] 'down-swooping, sheer, waterfall, portcullis, movable bridge, sluice'; also name of a bird, 'cormorant' (Hdt., S., Ar.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Ion. -ρρήκτης.
•ETYM From κατα-ρράττω, -ρρήσσω; see on ► ῥᾱ́σσω.

κατασκενε [v.subj.] 'he kills' (SGDI 4998: 1, 14f., Gortyn). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Equivalent to Att. κατα-κτείνῃ, with a special phonetic development of the consonant group κτ- (Schwyzer: 325f., Strunk 1967: 99).

κατενῶπα •VAR κατένωπα. ⇒ ἐνῶπα.

κατῆλιψ, -ιφος [f.] mg. unknown, perhaps 'ladder, roof-beam, upper story' (Ar. Ra. 566); = ἰκρίωμα 'scaffold' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM For the formation, αἰγίλιψ, ἄλιψ have been compared; further unexplained.

κατηφής [adj.] 'with downcast eyes, ashamed, sad' (ω 432, Hp., E.). ◂GR?▸
•DER κατήφεια, epic Ion. -είη 'being downcast, etc.' (Il., Th.). κατηφέω (E., Arist.), aor. -ῆσαι 'to be downcast, be ashamed, etc.' (Il.); is κατηφής a back-formation? By-forms: κατηφόνες = κατηφέες (Ω 253; see Schwyzer: 487, Chantraine 1933: 160); κατηφιάω = κατηφέω (A. R., AP, Plu.), after the verbs in -ιάω.
•ETYM Uncertain. Acc. to Schwyzer 1908: 247ff., it is from ἀφή, ἅπτω as 'having the view downwards'; to the contrary, Kretschmer Glotta 5 (1914): 309. Blanc 1988: 33-48 (see DELG Supp.) connects the group of θάμβος, etc., and assumes *κατα-τηφής 'completely stupefied'; one would rather expect *-θηπης, however.

κατιάς, -άδος 'surgical lancet' (Heliod. apud Orib. 44, 14, 4). ◂GR▸ •DER κατιάδιον (Aret., C. D. 1, 2).
•ETYM Probably from καθίημι 'to let down (into)'; the psilosis does not surprise in Ionic.

κατούλᾱ [f.] juridical term of unclear mg. ◂?▸
•DER κατουλέω.
•ETYM Cf. ἐξουλή (Schwyzer: 668).

κατουλάς, -άδος [adj.] epithet of the night (S. fr. 433, A. R. 4, 1695). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From κατειλέω. Connected with ὀλοή by A. R. (folk etymology).

κατρεύς, -έως [m.] name of an Indian peacock (Clitarch., Nonn.). ◂LW Ind.?▸ •ETYM Unknown, probably Indian; for the formation, cf. ἐριθεύς, χλωρεύς, etc. (Boßhardt 1942: 20). It hardly belongs to the Cretan town name Κατρεύς, Κάτρη, as per Boßhardt op. cit. 74. Cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.

κάττα word for 'cat', which replaced αἴλουρος (Ar. Pl. 693). ◂?▸
•VAR κάττος (sch. Call., H. Dem. 110a, p. 79 Pf.).
•ETYM Origin unknown, but the word is found in Latin and most other languages of Europe.

κατώτιον [n.] 'lifeboat' (pap.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

καυαλός · μωρολόγος 'speaking foolishly' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Perhaps related to ► κόβαλος.

καύαξ · λάρος (H.), name of a sea-bird, perhaps 'seamew, tern' (see Thompson 1895 s.v.). ◂PG(S)▸

•VAR καύηξ, -ηκος [m.] (Antim., Hell.), also κήξ [f.] (ο 479) and κῆϋξ [m.] (Babr., Dionys. Av.).
•ETYM Ending like in ἱέραξ, ἴρηξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 380). Has been compared with bird-names like MW cuan 'screech-owl' and other Celtic words, whence Lat. cavannus 'id.', OHG (with regular sound shift) hūwo 'owl'. Within Greek, one also finds forms with internal velar: καυκαλίας· ὄρνις ποιός 'kind of bird', καυκιάλης· ... ὄρνις H., with which are compared Lith. kaukỹs [m.] name of a crying bird and primary verbs like Skt. káuti 'cry', Lith. kaũkti 'to howl, moan', etc.; cf. on ►κωκύω. Is καύαξ· πανοῦργος 'criminal' (Suid.) a term of abuse from comedy? See Kretschmer KZ 31 (1892): 354. The word with -ακ- is probably Pre-Greek (the second velar does not belong to the root). Cf. on ►κῶβαξ.

καύης [m.] name of a priest(ess) in Sardes (Hippon. 2). ◂LW Lyd.▸ •VAR Acc. -ην [f.] (IG Rom. 4, 1755 et al.; written -ειν).
•ETYM A Lydian word; cf. Latte Phil. 97 (1948): 43. From Lyd. kaveś, acc. to Masson Jb. f. kleinas. Forsch. 1 (1950-51): 182-188 and O. Masson 1962: 107f.

καυκαλίς, -ίδος [f.] an umbelliferous plant, 'Tordylium apulum' (Thphr., Nic., Dsc., Gp.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also καῦκον (Ps.-Dsc. 2, 139) and καυκιάλης· βοτάνη τις, ὁμοία κορίῳ (cod. κωρ-) 'a plant like coriander' (H.).
•ETYM On the suffix -αλίς, see Chantraine 1933: 251f. The plant was also called δαῦκος ἄγριος (Dsc. 2, 139); see Strömberg 1940: 153. Further hypotheses in Nencioni Riv. degli stud. or. 19 (1940): 101f. Is it Pre-Greek?

καῦκος [m.] 'cup' (gloss.). ◂?▸
•DER Diminutive καυκίον (pap. VI^p, AP 9, 749 in lemm., Just.). Also καυκάλιον 'id.' (Alex. Aphr. Pr. 1, 94; after βαυκάλιον).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. caucum [n.] 'id.' (Script. hist. Aug.), but further unknown; cf. WH s.v. Schrijver 1997: 295 compares OIr. cuach 'cup'.

καυλός [m.] 'shaft, stalk, quill of a feather' (Il.); on the botanical and anatomical mg. Strömberg 1937: 95ff. and 49. ◂IE keh$_2$ulo-* 'shaft'▸ •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. μονό-καυλος (Thphr.; Strömberg 1937: 104f.), rarely as a first member, e.g. in καυλο-κινάρα 'the shaft of the artichoke' (Gp.); see Strömberg 1944: 7.
•DER Diminutives: καυλίον (Arist.), καυλίσκος (J., D. S., Dsc.); further καυλεῖον = καυλός (Nic.; after ἀγγεῖον et al.); καυλίας 'sap of the shaft' (Thphr.), like ῥιζίας 'root-sap', cf. Strömberg 1937: 91, Chantraine 1933: 94f.; καυλίνης fish name = χλωρὸς κωβιός (Diph. Siph. apud Ath. 8, 355c), after the color, acc. to Strömberg 1943: 26; formation like Αἰσχίνης; further καυλικός, καυλώδης 'like a stalk' (Thphr.), καύλινος 'consisting of a shaft' (Luc.), καυλωτός 'with a stalk' (Eudem. Phil. IV^a; like αὐλωτός, etc.); καυληδόν 'stalk by stalk' (Opp.).
Denominative verb καυλίζομαι 'to have a shaft' (Ar. Fr. 404); δικαυλέω 'to have two shafts', ἐκκαυλέω 'to grow out in one shaft' (whence ἐκκαύλησις, -ημα) and ἐκκαυλίζω 'to remove the shaft' (Thphr.) derive from virtual *δι-καυλος, *ἔκ-καυλος, etc. (καυλέω only Suid.).
•ETYM Old inherited word, also found in Latin and in Baltic: Lat. caulis [m.] 'shaft' (secondary i-stem); Lith. káulas 'bone, cube', Latv. kaũls 'id.', also 'shaft', OPr. caulan 'bone'; OIr. cúal 'faggot, bundle of sticks' < kaulā*. Not related to Skt. kulyā́- 'ditch, canal' and the Gm. word for 'hollow', ON holr, Go. us-hulon 'to hollow out'.

καυνάκης ⇒ γαυνάκης.

καυνός [m.] · κακός, σκληρός, κλῆρος 'bad, hard, lot' (H.); in the last mg. also Cratin. 194 and Ar. Fr. 660 (see Kock ad loc.). ◂?▸
•DER διακαυνιάσαι = διακληρῶσαι 'to assign by lot' (Ar. Pax 1081).
•ETYM In the meaning κακός, καυνός has been compared with a Balto-Germanic word for 'humble, shame, etc.', e.g. Go. hauns 'lowly, humble', MoHG Hohn, Latv. kàuns 'shame, contumely'. However, the text of Hesychius is very uncertain; the form σκληρός (in this meaning taken as related to καίω by Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 270) looks like a dittography (with σ- from κακός) of the following κλῆρος. DELG splits the word in two, but this too is unclear. See Fur. 237

καῦρος [adj.] = κακός (S. Fr. 1059, Phot., H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Güntert 1914: 131 assumes a cross of παῦρος and καυνός = κακός. Frisk thinks that a cross of κακός and παῦρος is possible. There is no support for these suggestions.

καυσία [f.] name of a royal felt hat among the Macedonians (Hell.; see Hoffmann 1906: 55ff.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unexplained; a suggestion was made by Sapir AmJPh. 60 (1939): 464. DELG connects it with καίω. Fur.: 119 refers to γαύσαπος and γαυσάπης; also, Lat. gloss on gausape.

καυχάομαι [v.] 'to boast, be proud' (Pi., Sapph.). ◂?▸ •VAR Aor. καυχήσασθαι (καυχάσ[α]ιτο Sapph. Supp. 4, 21), fut. καυχήσομαι, perf. κεκαύχημαι (2 Ep. Cor. 7, 14).
•COMP Also with ἐκ-, ἐν-, κατα-.
•DER καύχα [f.] 'ostentation' (Pi. Nem. 9, 6; back-formation), καῦχος [n.] 'object of boasting' (Syria V^p; back-formation); καύχημα, -ᾶμα 'id.' (Pi.) with καυχηματίας 'boaster' (Ptol., sch.) and καυχηματικός (sch.), καύχησις 'boasting' (Hell.); καυχήμων 'boasting' (Babr.); καυχητής 'boaster' with καυχητικός, καυχητιάω (sch., EM).
•ETYM There is no direct parallel in the other languages; the connections with Arm. xausim 'to speak' and Lith. šaũkti, 1sg. šaukiù 'to cry, call loudly' cannot be substantiated. The -au- remains unexplained.

καφώρη ⇒ σκαφώρη.

καχάζω [v.] 'to laugh loudly' (IA, Theoc.). ◂IE kha kha* 'ha ha'▸ •VAR Also κακχάζω, καγχάζω (on the gemination and nasalization see Schwyzer: 315 and 647), aor. καχάσαι, fut. καχαξῶ (Theoc.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-.

•DER καχασμοί [pl.] (Ar. Nu. 1073, v. l.), κακχαδίαι· ἰσχνόφωνοι 'thin-voiced' (H.).
•ETYM Reduplicated sound word with comparable forms in several languages: Skt. (gramm.) kákhati, OCS xoxotati, OHG kachazzen 'id.', Arm. xaxan-k' [pl.], Lat. cachinnus 'resounding laughter', with cachinnō, -āre. Genetic relation of these forms remains uncertain. See also ►*κηκάζω.

καχεξία [f.] 'bad condition of body or mind' (IA). ◂GR▸
•DER back-formation καχέκτης [m.] 'in bad condition, ill, ill-disposed', whence καχεκτικός, -τέω, -τεύομαι (Hell.), also καχεξής (Phld. Rh. 1, 36 S.; uncertain). Opposite εὐεξία with -έκτης, etc.
•ETYM A compound of κακῶς ἔχειν.

καχεταιρίη [f.] 'bad company' (Thgn. 1169). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From κακοὶ ἑταῖροι 'bad companions'. Cf. Porzig 1942: 212f.

καχλάζω [v.] 'to splash, bubble', of water (Pi., A.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Almost only present and imperfect.
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ὑπερ-.
•DER καχλασμός (Zos. Alch., gloss.), ἀνακάχλασις (sch.). Rare by-form κοχλάζω (PHolm. 3, 1; conj. in Plu. 2, 590f.) with κόχλασμα (H. s.v. ἀπόβρασμα, πομφόλυξ).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic word with intensive reduplication (Tichy 1983: 252f.); cf. ►παφλάζω. It has been compared with ►κάχληξ. There is no IE etymology, but the variation α/ ο (κόχλασμα) is typical of Pre-Greek.

κάχληξ, -ηκος [m.] 'small stones, gravel in a river-bed', also collective (Th., Str., J.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κόχλαξ, -ᾱκος (LXX); ἄχλαξ· κάχληξ (Suid.), cf. Fur. 391.
•ETYM Formation in -ηξ, like τράπηξ, νάρθηξ, et al. (cf. Björck 1950: 261f.). The word has been connected with the Germanic word for 'hail', OHG hagal [m.], ON hagl [n.], etc. However, the alternations α/ ο and κ-/ zero rather point to a Pre-Greek word. Güntert 1932: 28[1] and Porzig ZII 5 (1927): 269f. are also in favor of foreign origin.

κάχρυς [f.] 'parched barley' (IA), 'winter-bud' (Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Gen. -υος, in Dieuch. apud Orib. also -υδος; acc. -υδα. Also κάχρυ [n.] 'fruit of the frankincense-tree, also the tree itself' (Hp., Thphr., Dsc.).
•COMP As a first member καχρυο-φόρος 'with winter-buds' (Thphr.), καχρυ-φόρος 'bearing κάχρυ' (Nic.; epithet of λιβανωτίς).
•DER καχρυώδης 'like winter-buds' (Thphr.), καχρυόεις = καχρυφόρος (Nic.); καχρύδια [pl.] 'chaff of the κάχρυς' (Arist.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 70), καχρυδίας [m.] 'κάχρυς-like' (πυρός, Thphr.), 'made of κάχρυς' (ἄρτος, Poll.); καχρυδιάζομαι 'bud in winter' (Cat. Cod. Astr.).
•ETYM Connected with κέγχρος 'millet' since Persson 1891: 103 and 124), but the meaning of the present etymon rather points towards 'parched, dry', which suggests connection with ►κάγκανος 'arid, barren'. Genetic connection is prohibited by the -χ- of κάχρυς, but we may think of a substrate element ka(n)k-. Fur.: 277 points to the variant κάγχρυς (also -ύδιον, -υδίας) found in the mss. This would point to kaⁿkru- (with prenasalization); he also connects ►κέγχρος, but see s.v and the objection above.

κάψα [f.]? · κίστη, θήκη 'basket, chest' (Suid., cf. Phot.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR κάμψα· θήκη, γλωσσοκομεῖον 'chest, casket' (H.).
•DER καψάριος (inscr.), καμψίον (pap.), κα(μ)ψάκης (LXX), καψάκιον (pap.), καψάκιον· γλωσσόκομον 'case' (H.), καψικός (pap.).
•ETYM DELG comments that it is a borrowing from Lat. capsa 'box'; however, as the latter has no etymology, it is rather a loan from Greek, where the prenasalization points to a Pre-Greek word. For the structure of the word, cf. δίψα (note the short -α).

καψοί [?] · οἱ τοῖχοι 'walls' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM No etymology.

κάω 'burn'. ⇒καίω.

κε [pcl.] modal particle (Aeol. Cypr.), equivalent of IA, Arc. ἄν. ◂IE ken, kn* modal pcl.▸
•VAR κεν (Hom.); κα (Dor.; poetic κᾱ).
•ETYM Gr. κα is reminiscent of Ru. -ko (after the dative of personal pronouns and after the imperative), also -ka (like κᾱ). Further, the pair κα : κε is compared with γα : γε. In this line, the final nasal in κεν has be explained as an Ionic ν ἐφελκυστικόν. Alternatively, connection with the Skt. particle kám and the Slav. preposition kъ (both from IE kom*) may be envisaged; note the comparison nú kam : νύ κεν. The form κεν has been connected as a full grade, beside the zero grade κα < kn̥* before consonant, and in Arcadian καν before vowel; κε has, in this view, been reshaped after κα (Palmer 1962: 90-92). The phrase οὐ κάν may have been changed to οὐκ ἄν. See Forbes Glotta 37 (1958): 179-182 and Lee AmJPh. 88 (1967): 45-56.

κεάζω [v.] 'to split, pound, rub to pieces' (Il.). ◂IE ḱes-* 'cut'▸ •VAR Aor. κεάσ(σ)αι, pass. κεασθῆναι, perf. ptc. pass. κεκεασμένος.
•DIAL Acc. to Palmer 1963: 186-8, Myc. ke-ke-me-na (ko-to-na) is also related in the sense of 'divided (land)' (cf. also on ►κεῖμαι).
•COMP Also with ἀμφι-, δια-.
•DER εὐκέατος 'easy to split' (ε 60, Theoc. 25, 248), κέαρνα· σίδηρα τεκτονικά 'carpenter's axe' (after σκέπαρνον); uncertain Κεάδαο [gen.] (Β 847).
•ETYM The disyllabic aorist κεάσ(σ)αι (with facultative analogical -σσ-) is formed like ἐλάσ(σ)αι, πετάσ(σ)αι, etc., and has been taken to derive from a root PGr. kesa-* < PIE ḱesh₂-; the other forms (e.g. κεάζω) are then recent creations. This supposed PGr. kesa- has been compared with Skt. śasi-ṣyati 'he will cut', but the value of this form is doubtful, as the root śas- 'to cut' is aniṭ. An alternative assumption would be that the άζω-present is a Greek invention, and that the other forms are based on it (thus LIV² s.v. ḱes-*). Another present formation is perhaps seen in κείων (ξ 425, verse-final), if for κεῶν < *κεάων (Schulze 1892: 434).

Gr. κεσ- and Skt. śas- show a full grade ḱes-*, as opposed to a zero grade in Lat. castrō, -āre 'cut', where a is explained as an anaptyctic vowel in a sequence of four consonants (Schrijver 1991: 496).

κεβλή [f.] 'head' (Call. Fr. 140, EM). ◄IE g^{h}eb^{h}-l-* 'head'► •VAR Also κεβαλή (H., EM), Macedonian for κεφαλή.
•COMP As a first member in κεβλή-γονος 'born from the head', epithet of Ἀτρυτώνη (Euph. 108) and of the moon (Nic. Al. 433).
•DER κεβλήνη· ἡ ὀρίγανος 'organy' (H.), from the three buds close to each other of the Origanums (Grošelj Razprave 2: 42); κέβλος· κυνοκέφαλος, κῆπος 'kind of monkey' (H.).
•ETYM On κεβ(α)λή, see Pisani Rev. Int. ét. balk. 3 (1937): 14ff., and especially Kretschmer Glotta 21 (1933): 162 and Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 100ff.; also, Krahe IF 60 (1952): 297, who assumes Illyrian origin. Acc. to Mayer Glotta 31 (1951): 114ff. and Mayer Glotta 32 (1953): 72) the Illyrian TN Cibalae is to be included here as well. See also Chantraine BSL 61 (1966): 158 and 153. See on ►κεφαλή.

κεβλήπυρις name of an unknown bird (Ar. Av. 303); also used as a nickname of Themistocles (Hermipp. Com. V^{a}). ◄?► •ETYM Connection with ►κεβλή and πῦρ (redpoll, 'Hänfling') is not comprehensible; cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.

κέγχρος [m., f.] mostly plural, 'millet, grain of millet', metaph. 'spawn of fish, small ball, speck in the eye, etc.' (Hes. Sc. 398, Sapph. 5, 13 [?], Hecat., Hdt., Arist.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member e.g. in κεγχρο-φόρος (Str.). With metathesis or dissimilation (cf. below) κέρχνος (Anaxandr., Gal., H.); also the TN Κερχνεία?
•DER 1. κεγχρίς [f.] = κέγχρος (Hp.), also name of a bird fattened with millet, Lat. miliarius (Ael.; cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.) 2. κεγχρίας [m.] 'millet-like protuberances' (ἕρπης, Gal.) with -ιδίας 'id.' (Dsc.). 3. κεγχρίνης [m.] 'snake with millet-like spots' (Nic., Lyc.); cf. κέγχρινος below. 4. κεγχρίτης 'id.' (Aët.), -ῖτις ἰσχάς 'dried fig' (AP). 5. κεγχραμίς [f.] 'kernel of a fig' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.), after καλαμίς, σησαμίς et al.; not a foreign suffix as per Schwyzer: 494; also -ιδώδης. 6. κεγχρώματα [pl.] 'small openings on a shield, used as visors' (E. Ph. 1386, cf. Chantraine 1933: 186; see also on κέρχνος). 7. κεγχρεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'place where iron is granulated' (Docum. apud D. 37, 26). 8. κεγχρ-ιαῖος 'of the size of a millet corn' (Luc., Dsc.; Chantraine 1933: 49). 9. κέγχρινος 'made of millet' (Dsc., Gal.). 10. κεγχρώδης 'millet-like', of eruptions (Hp.), of plants (Thphr.). 11. κεγχρωτός 'with corns, drips' (pap.). 12. Κεγχρεαί [pl.] TN.
•ETYM Mostly derived from reduplicated IE g^{h}er-g^{h}r-o-* "pulverized", with old dissimilation r - r > n - r (or r - n), and further connected with χέρμα, χεράς 'pebble, gravel', etc. The word κάχρυς has also been adduced, to which MHG grūz 'corn of sand or grain', Lith. grùdas 'corn', etc. can be connected. Niedermann 1927-1928: 111ff. assumes κέρχνος (with metathesis) < kerk-sno-, connecting it to OHG hirso 'millet' < hirhso*; this is improbable. The etymology remains unclear. See on ►κάχρυς, which is argued to be Pre-Greek. However, if κέγχρος is Pre-Greek as well, one would also expect forms without prenasalization (*κεχρ-ος), and these do not occur.

κέγχρων, -ωνος [m.] 'name of a wind on the river Phasis, which is described as βίαιος καὶ χαλεπὴ καὶ θερμή 'violent, troublesome, warm' (Hp. Aër. 15). ◄?► •ETYM Acc. to Pisani RILomb. 73 (1939-40): 496 (with von Wilamowitz), it is from κέρχνος 'hoarseness', with metathesis. Schwyzer: 487 considers foreign origin.

κεδάσσαι ⇒σκεδάννυμι.

κέδματα [n.pl.] (Hp.); acc. to Gal., Erot. and H. = αἱ χρονιώτεραι διαθέσεις νοσώδεις περὶ τὰ ἄρθρα 'chronical limb-diseases'. ◄?►
•DER κεδματώδης (Hp. apud Erot.; uncertain).
•ETYM Connected with κεδάσ(σ)αι 'to tear apart' by Prellwitz, but one would expect -κεδάσματα. The explanation is neither formally nor semantically satisfactory (DELG).

κεδνός [adj.] 'careful, trusty, cared for, noble, cherished, dear' (Il.). ◄IE? keh$_{2}$d-no-* 'cared for'► •DER κεδνοσύνη (IG 3, 1370; metrical inscr., imperial times; cf. Wyss 1954: 64).
•ETYM A connection with κήδομαι, Dor. κᾶδος, epic κεκᾰδών < k(e)h$_{2}$d-* has been considered impossible because of the -ε-, but De Lamberterie 1996 tries to revive this proposal in the light of Lubotsky's Law for Indo-Iranian: loss of a laryngeal before a glottalized PIE stop (d, g, ǵ, g^{w}) plus a consonant. If this is true, a pre-form keh$_{2}$d-nó- lost its laryngeal before it colored the neighboring vowel to a*. Fur.: 195 compares σκεθρός.

κέδρος [f.] 'cedar-tree' (ε 60). ◄?►
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. κεδρ-έλαιον 'cedar oil' (Aët.), ὀξύ-κεδρος [f.] 'prickly cedar' (Thphr.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 35).
•DER κεδρίς [f.] 'juniper-berry' (Hp., Ar.); κέδρον [n.] 'id.' (inscr., EM, H.); κεδρία 'cedar oil' (Hdt., D. S.), also κεδρέα (pap., medic.; after μηλέα, συκέα, etc.). κεδρίτης (οἶνος) 'wine with juniper flavouring'; κέδρινος 'of cedar-wood' (Hp., E., Arist.), also κεδρίνεος 'id.' (Nic.; metrical reshaping), κεδρωτός 'made of cedar-wood' (E. [lyr.]), Κεδρεᾶτις, -ιδος [f.] name of Artemis in Arcadian Orchomenos (Paus. 8, 13, 2; after Τεγεᾶτις, etc.). κέδρωστις, -εως [f.] 'bryony' (Dsc. 4, 182; after ἄγρωστις, s.v.). Denominative verb κεδρόω 'to lay in cedar resin, embalm' (Posidon., Str.).
•ETYM Unknown. The similarity with Baltic names of the juniper (e.g. Lith. kadagỹs) is limited to the first syllable; connection with Ru. čad 'vapor', OCS kaditi 'smoke' is also quite hypothetical. Borrowed as Lat. cedrus. Acc. to Fohalle 1925: 157ff., a Mediterranean word for 'cedar', Lat. citrus 'Thuia articulata', and Gr. κέδρος would have been adapted to each other; doubtful. See also ►κίτρον, -κίτριον.

κεῖμαι [v.] 'to lie, be somewhere, happen, etc.' (Il.). ◄IE kei-* 'lie, rest'► •VAR 3sg. κεῖται, 3pl. κέαται (Att. κεῖνται), inf. κεῖσθαι, etc. (further forms in Schwyzer: 679).
•DIAL The interpretation of Myc. ke-ke-me-na is highly uncertain.

•COMP Very frequently with prefix in different mgs., ἀνά-, κατά-, παρά-, ἔγ-, ἔκ-, ἐπί-, σύγ-κειμαι, etc.
•DER 1. κοῖτος [m.] 'layer, bed, sleep' (Od.), κοίτη [f.] 'id., matrimonial bed, nest, parcel, lot' (Od.); often in compounds, e.g. ἀπό-, σύγ-, ἡμερό-κοιτος, ἀ-, παρα-κοίτης (cf. on ἀκοίτης). From κοῖτος, κοίτη: κοιτίς [f.] 'box' (Men., J.; cf. Schwyzer: 127) with κοιτίδιον 'id.' (sch.); κοιτάριον 'bed' (sch.); κοιτών [m.] 'sleeping room' (Ar. Fr. 6, Hell.) with κοιτώνιον, -ωνίσκος, -ωνίτης, -ωνικός ; κοιτατήριον 'id.' (Cyrene; cf. ἑστιατήριον s.v. ►ἑστία); κοιταῖος 'lying on the layer' (Decr. apud D. 18, 37, Plb.), κοιτάριος 'belonging to the bed' (Edict. Diocl.). Denominative verb κοιτάζομαι 'lay down, nest' (Pi., Hell.), -άζω 'bring to rest, lay down', also 'partition the land' (from κοίτη 'parcel'), Hell. Hence κοιτασία 'living together' (LXX), κοιτασμός 'folding the cattle' (pap.). 2. *κοίμη or *κοῖμος, whence denominative κοιμάω 'to lay to rest, put to bed', κοιμάομαι 'to go to bed' (Il.); thence κοίμησις 'lying down, sleep (of death)' (Pl., LXX, NT), κοίμημα 'sleep, sleeping with' (S.), κοιμητήριον 'sleeping room, place of rest or burial' (inscr.); also κοιμίζω = κοιμάω with κοίμισις, -ισμός, -ιστής, -ιστικός; rather reshaped from κοιμάω. 3. κειμήλιον [n.] 'valuable, precious thing' (Il.), secondary -ιοι [m.pl.] (Pl. Lg. 931a; apposition of πατέρες ἢ μητέρες); derivation in -ηλ- from a neuter *κεῖμα (Frisk Eranos 38 (1940): 42 and Frisk Eranos 41 (1943): 52). In the same mg. κεμήλιον (Alc. G 1, 8)? Specht KZ 68 (1943): 145 (after *θεμήλιον, θέμηλα); but see on ►κεμάς. Cf. also ►κῶμα and ►κώμη. Verbal derivatives: iterative (παρε)-κέσκετο (ξ 521, φ 41); desiderative or future forms κείω, κειέμεν, κείοντες, etc.; late lengthening κατεκείαθεν· κατεκοιμήθη 'went to sleep' (H.), after Hom. μετεκίαθεν.
•ETYM The full grade middle athematic present κεῖται, pl. κέαται may be compared with Skt. 3sg. śaye, 3pl. śere, which goes back to an old stative paradigm sing. ḱei-o*, plur. ḱei-ro*. Beside the stative, there was a regular middle, as evidenced by Skt. śéte (Av. saēte 'lies') and Anatolian, where we find Hitt. 3sg. kitta < ḱei-to*, next to Lyc. sijẽni, sijeni 'id.' << ḱei-o*.
The nominal formations in -t- and -m- are also found outside Greek: Bret. argud 'light sleep' < are-ḱoi-to-*, Go. haims 'village, home' < ḱoi-mo-*, Latv. sàime 'family', Lith. šeimýna 'id.', OCS sěmьja 'id.', OIr. cóim 'dear'. Other derivatives of the verb are seen in Lat. cīvis, Go. heiwa-frauja 'lord of the house', Skt. śéva- 'trusty, friendly, dear', and in Arm. sēr 'love' with denominative sirem 'love'.

κειμήλιον ⇒κεῖμαι.

κειρία [f.] 'girth of a bedstead, bandage (for wounds, dead), tapeworms' (Ar. Av. 816, LXX, pap., medic., Ev. Jo. 11, 44). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Often plur. Also κιρία, κηρία, καιρία.
•ETYM Connection with καῖρος 'string, snare' or the like seems obvious, but then the most common notations, κ(ε)ιρ-, κηρ-, remain incomprehensible. Cf. Scheller 1951: 57f. The variation is probably Pre-Greek: α before a palatalized consonant is realized as αι, which becomes ει and/or η (cf. λαίθαργος, λήθαργος). See Fur.: 235, 352 (who had not yet seen the mechanism).

κείρω [v.] 'to cut (off), shave', especially of hair; 'to mow off, cut down, ravage' (Il.). ◄IE (s)ker-* 'cut'► •VAR Aor. κεῖραι, epic also κέρσαι, pass. καρῆναι (καρθέντες with v.l. κερθέντες Pi. P. 4, 82), fut. κερέω, κερῶ, perf. pass. κέκαρμαι, new act. κέκαρκα (Hell.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, δια-, περι-. Compound ἀ-κερσε-κόμης 'with uncut hair' (Υ 39), also ἀ-κειρε-κόμᾱς, -ης (Pi.); on the form Schwyzer: 442, on the mg. Fink Phil. 93 (1938): 404ff.
•DER 1. κέρμα [n.] 'cut-off piece, especially a small piece of money, change' (Emp. 101, 1 [not quite certain], com., Hell.) with κερμάτιον (Hell.) and κερματίζω 'to change in small money' (Att., Arist.); from it κερματιστής 'money-changer' (Ev. Jo. 2. 14), κερματισμός 'cut into little bits' (Olymp.); κερματόομαι = -ίζομαι (Procl.). 2. κορμός [m.] 'cut-off piece, bobbin, trunk' (ψ 196) with κορμίον (Hell.), κορμηδόν 'in pieces' (Hld.), κορμάζω 'saw into pieces' (D. H.). 3. ►κουρα. 4. ►καρτός. Cf. also ►κόρση, ►κόρις, ►κερτομέω, ►κέλωρ 2.
•ETYM κείρω < *κερ-ι̯ω belongs to a widespread IE group of words, but there are no exact correspondences to the Greek verbal forms. The nearest are Arm. k'erem 'to scratch, shave', Alb. sh-qerr 'tear apart' (pret. sh-kora < IE kēr-*); further, Hitt. karš-zi 'to cut off' (with s-enlargement like in ►κουρά). Forms with initial sk-* are frequent: OHG sceran 'to shave', Lith. skìrti, 1sg. skiriù 'to separate', OIr. scar(a)im 'id.'. Skt. kr̥ntáti 'separates' shows an enlarged root kert-* (infixed nasal present; perfect ca-kart-a); such a reconstruction would be possible for the aorist ἔκερσα (Risch 1937: 249).
The number of nominal derivatives in the separate languages is enormous; most of them are independent innovations. Thus, formal agreement exists between κέρμα and Skt. cárman-, Av. carəman- [n.] 'skin, hide', OPr. kērmens [m.] 'body' (IE kér-men-*); and only difference in ablaut grade between κορμός and OCS krъma [f.] 'steering oar, back part of the ship', Ru. kormá 'puppis'.

κείω 1 desiderative or future forms of ►κεῖμαι.
•VAR κειέμεν, κείων, κείοντες, etc. ⇒κεῖμαι.

κείων 2 'splitting' (ξ 425). ⇒κεάζω.

κεκαδών [ptc.aor.act.] 'robbing' (Λ 334). ◄?►
•VAR κεκαδήσει [fut.] 'he will rob' (φ 153 = 170), κεκαδῆσαι· βλάψαι, κακῶσαι, φείσασθαι, στερῆσαι 'to damage, maltreat, spare, rob' (H.); further med. ὑπὸ ... κεκάδοντο 'they receded' (Δ 497 = Ο 574) and the intr. plpf. ἐκεκήδει· ὑπε<κε>χωρήκει 'had withdrawn' (H.).
•ETYM The difference of meaning between the active-transitive and the middle-intransitive forms may perhaps be explained from the diathesis. The glosses κάδυρος· κάπρος ἄνορχις (suffix -υρ-) and κάδαμος· τυφλός. Σαλαμίνιοι (H.) rather seem Pre-Greek.
Connection with κήδω 'to care for, etc.' is possible (see LIV² s.v. ḱeh₂d-*), but semantically not evident; ὑπὸ ... κεκάδοντο is sometimes connected with Lat. cadō, in which case the intransitive middle 'to recede' < 'to fall back' would be primary, the active meaning 'to rob' going back to a factitive 'to make fall' (LIV² s.v. ḱad-*, where we would prefer a root reconstruction ḱ$h_2$ed-). The connection with ► χάζομαι is phonetically impossible.

κέκασμαι [v.] 'to surpass, excel' (Il.). ◄IE? ḱend- 'excel'► •VAR (ἐ)κέκαστο, κεκαδμένος (Pi. O. 1, 27).
•DER κάδμος· δόρυ, λόφος, ἀσπίς. Κρῆτες 'stem, crest, shield (Cretan)' (H.), i.e. 'equipment' (see Bechtel 1921, 2: 787)? Cf. also ► Κάδμος.
•ETYM A synonymous active perfect is found in Skt. śāśadúḥ 'excel', ptc. śā́śadāna- (though note that Kümmel 2000b: 512-4 argues that the Skt. meaning is different). Quite uncertain is the connection with MIr. cá(i)d 'holy', Gaul. caddos 'sanctus'. Within Greek, a present ► καίνυμαι was created analogically from κέκασμαι after δαίνυμαι : δέδασται. The root καδ- could be from ḱend-*, seen in Sanskrit chand- 'to appear' (see García Ramón 1992a: 239-255). Heubeck BNF 8 (1957): 274-277 had argued earlier that κασ- is from ḱn̥s-* (root ḱeNs-* 'proclaim, honor', LIV² s.v.). The gloss on κάδμος seems unreliable; the proper names are also quite unclear.

κεκαφηότα [ptc.perf.act. acc.sg.m.] with θυμόν (E 698, ε 468); the mg. 'exhausted, tired' is certain in later authors, and is also found in Homer; cf. Nehring Class. Phil. 42 (1947): 113ff. ◄IE keh_2b^h-* 'get tired, be exhausted, die'► •VAR In later epic (Opp., Nonn.) constructed with γυῖα, δέμας or absolute; also -ηότας (Nonn.) and -ηότι (of θυμῷ, ταρσῷ; Opp., AP).
•ETYM The indicative is attested in κέκηφε· τέθνηκεν 'is dead' (H.); on the ptc. in -ηώς, see Schwyzer: 770 and Chantraine 1942: 428. Further connections are hypothetical: relation to ἐκάπυσσεν (ψυχήν X 467), ἐγκάπτει· ἐκπνεῖ 'exhales' (H.), etc. (see on ► καπνός); or to κηφήν, κωφός 'deaf' (Solmsen 1909: 123, Bechtel 1914 s.v.).

κεκῆνας [?] · λαγωούς. Κρῆτες 'hares (Cret.)' (H.). ◄IE ḱ(e)h_1-s-* 'grey'► •ETYM Uncertain. For the n-stem, cf. λειχήν, κωλήν, et al. (Chantraine 1933: 167f., Schwyzer: 487). Skt. śaśá- 'hare' cannot be separated from the widespread name of the hare (in Germanic, e.g. OHG haso, also OPr. sasins, W cein-ach < ḱasni*). Lubotsky 1989: 56f reconstructed ḱeh_1-s-, ḱh_1-s-* for this word, with ḱh_1s-no-* > Lat. cānus 'grey'. A dialectal assimilation of *ḱ - s > *ḱ - ḱ has been assumed for Indo-Iranian (Skt. śaś-) and Greek (κεκ-), but no trace of such a development is found in Modern Iranian and Pamir forms (e.g. Pashto sōe, Wakhi süi; see Morgenstierne 1927: 66). This means that it is difficult to relate the Greek word.

